Comme du tout indigne, & de ſa ville, & d'elle.

Fulgoſius, Lib. V. Cap. 8. gives it in Latin thus:

Hunc timidum Mater Damatrio ipſa peremit,
Indignum Matre hac, atque Lacedemone.

DAMME, a ſmall Town, but of conſiderable Strength, in Royal Pomerania. It ſtands upon the Eaſtern Bank of the Oder, within the Dutchy of Stetin, and about two Leagues from the Town Stetin. * Maty, Diction.

DAMOAN, a Mountain in Armenia. The top riſes in a Pyramidal Form, and exceeds the height of the reſt of Mount Taurus. 'Tis ſaid the Caſpian Sea, though a hundred and ſixty Engliſh Miles diſtant, may be ſeen upon't. The Earth on the top is all Sulphur, which makes it look in the Night as if it were on Fire, like Mount Ætna. All Caldea and Perſia come hither to furniſh themſelves with Brimſtone; there are likewiſe hot Baths on the back of this Mountain, ſome of which are kept for Perſons of Quality. * Herbert's Travels.

DAMON, born at Chœronea in Greece, was a Deſcendent of the Augur Peripoltas; who going along with King Opholtas and his Subjects into Bæotia, left a Family which flouriſhed there a great while after, moſt of them ſettling at Chœronea, which was their firſt Conqueſt upon the Barbarians. Thoſe of Peripoltas's Family being generally Men of Reſolution, hazarded themſelves with ſo much Bravery, both againſt the Perſians and the Gauls, that almoſt all of them were cut off. Damon it ſeems, who was an Orphan, was the only Remainder; he was Surnamed Peripoltas, upon the ſcore of his Anceſtor the Figure ſlinger. He was remarkably handſome and couragious, but extremely rough and unmanageable. A Roman Captain of Foot, and part of the Garriſon of Chœronea, had a criminal Paſſion for Damon, then in the Bloom of his Youth: And this brutal Officer, not prevailing by Intreaty, ſeem'd to threaten Violence. Damon was reſolved to take a Revenge for this Affront; he got fifteen young Fellows together for this purpoſe, and that they might be the better undiſcovered, they ſmutted their Faces with Soot, and about break of Day ſet upon this Captain, who was Sacrificing in a Square, and killed him, with a great many of his Men. Upon this they ran out of the Town; the Burghers were extremely alarmed at this Murder, for fear the Romans ſhould revenge it upon them. To prevent this Conſequence they called a Court, and immediately condemned Damon and his Accomplices: But the ſame Evening, whilſt the Bench who paſſed the Sentence ſupped together, according to Cuſtom, Damon and his Conſorts poured unexpectedly upon them, knocked them all down, and then quitted the Town. Lucius Lucullus, who was going upon ſome Expedition, marched his Army thro' this Town, to inform himſelf of the Matter of Fact; and finding the Burghers not at all to blame, held on his Route, and carry'd the Garriſon along with him. Damon in the mean time roved at Diſcretion, and plundered the Country. Inſomuch, that the Burghers were glad to ſend Commiſſioners to treat with him, and to invite him into the Town by advantagious Propoſals. Upon his Return they choſe him Gymnaſiark, or Maſter of the Military and Olympick Exerciſes; and ſoon after, when he was in a Tub, and rubbing with Oil, they treacherouſly ſtabbed him. The Deſcendents of this Damon were called Asbolomenoi, as much as to ſay Crocked with Soot; becauſe Damon and his Companions diſguiſed themſelves in this manner when they attack'd the Roman Captain. * Plutarch, in vit. Cimon.

DAMON, Pericles's Præceptor, was baniſhed Athens for having too large a ſhare of Underſtanding, as Plutarch reports in the beginning of Ariſtides's Life. 'Tis true he ſpeaks ſomewhat differently in Pericles's Life: Here he relates that Damon was an able Stateſman, that he concealed his Capacity by pretending to nothing but Muſick; that he made uſe of his Harp, to keep his Deſign out of ſight, and open his way to Buſineſs; that he was baniſhed Athens by the Oſtraciſm, becauſe he dipt too much into Publick Affairs, and countenanced arbitrary Power.

DANEMARK, (new) a Country under the Artick Circle in America. It lies upon the Weſtern Shore to the North of the Country called the Frozen Sea, in the common Maps; but which Father Hennepin, in his new Diſcoveries, aſſures us is firm Land.

DANET, (Peter) Abbot of St. Nicholas at Verdune, publiſhed a Latin and French Dictionary, and afterwards a French and Latin Dictionary, for the uſe of the Dauphin, and the Princes his Sons. He afterwards corrected theſe two Dictionaries, and publiſhed them with conſiderable Enlargements. His Latin Dictionary is more exact than his French. In 1698, he publiſhed a French Dictionary in Quarto, upon the Roman and Greek Antiquities, for the uſe of the Dauphin: What ſhare he had in the Claſſick Authors, in uſum Delphini, has been already mentioned. This Author died at Paris in 1709. * Memoirs du Tems. See Criticks Dauphin.

* DANIEL, one of the four great Prophets of the Tribe of Judah, and deſcended, as 'tis ſuppoſed, from the Royal Family; he was very young when Jeruſalem was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, and carry'd Captive to Babylon with King Jehoiakim, and the moſt conſiderable Nobility. He was afterwards pitched upon, with ſome other young Jews of Quality, to ſerve in Nebuchadnezzar's Court. The Eunuch Aſhpenaz having received the King's Order to furniſh them with Maſters for the Chaldean Language and Learning, with an Allowance of Meat and Wine from Nebuchadnezzar's

Table: Daniel, together with Shadrach, Meſheck, and Abednego, refuſed the Entertainment, becauſe part of it had been ſacrificed to Idols; and deſired the Eunuch that they might be excuſed, and have nothing but Pulſe. This was granted them for ten Days tryal, and when after the Experiment they looked more freſh and florid than thoſe who were furniſhed from the King's Table, they were left to their own Diet of Pulſe: Daniel's Conduct and Improvement recommended him to the King's Favour; who gave him large inſtances of Bounty, and made him Governor of the Province of Babylon. This Promotion was occaſioned by his explaining Nebuchadnezzar's Dream, where the four great Monarchies are deſcribed by the ſeveral Parts of the Image. Some Years after, this Prince elated by his Conqueſts, and ambitious to ſhew his Magnificence, ſet up a Golden Statue ſixty Cubits high, and commanded all his Subjects to worſhip it. Daniel's three Companions, who refuſed Compliance, were thrown into a fiery Furnace, and came out untouched. Some time after Nebuchadnezzar had another Dream of a Tree, whoſe top touched the Sky, covered the Earth with its Arms, gave ſhelter to the Beaſts and Birds, and was at laſt cut down in a Moment. Daniel expounded this Dream upon the King's Perſon and Fortune, acquainted him how his Pride would be puniſhed, and to what a mean unfurniſhed Condition he would be reduced. He likewiſe Interpreted the Writing upon the Wall to Belſhazzer, which predicted the Loſs of his Kingdom. The Averſion the great Men had to him in the Reign of Cyaxares II[d], or Darius the Mede, occaſioned his being thrown into the Lions Den; but theſe fierce Creatures had their Nature laid aſleep, and did him no harm. This Diſgrace, as ſome will have it, happened to him by the Proſecution of the Prieſts of Bel; but this is but Conjecture, for neither the Hiſtory of Bel and the Dragon, nor that of Suſannah, is in the Hebrew or Chaldee Text, but only in the Verſion of Theodoſion, and the Vulgate. Daniel propheſied to Cyrus's time, and died, as 'tis ſuppoſed, towards the end of this Prince's Reign, about eighty eight Years of Age. The Jews don't range him among the Prophets, poſſibly becauſe he lived at Court, and not in the manner of other Prophets, and poſſibly for other Reaſons: But our bleſſed Saviour calls him a Prophet, neither is there any Reaſon to queſtion his Book's being a Propheſy, even in the Opinion of the Jews themſelves. His Propheſies are written with ſuch particularity, and point ſo plainly upon Matter of Fact, that the Enemies of Chriſtianity have objected, that what he has written were Events prior to his own time, and rather Reports than Predictions. Theodoret obſerves, that when Cyrus return'd the Jews to their Country, after ſeventy Years Captivity, Daniel ſhew'd that Prince his Name in Iſaiah, together with the Prediction of his reſtoring the Jews. The two laſt Chapters of Daniel, as they ſtand in the Vulgate, and contain the Hiſtory of Suſannah, and Bel and the Dragon, are not of the ſame Authority with the reſt: Julius Africanus, Euſebius, and Apollinaris, make no account of this Hiſtory; and 'tis plain St. Jerom was of the ſame Opinion, as appears by the Preface to his Commentaries on Daniel. Origen maintains the Truth of the Story, but does not raiſe it to any Canonical Authority. Theodoret, in his Expoſition upon Daniel, has nothing upon Suſannah, Bel and the Dragon, and Nicephorus reckons Suſannah amongſt the Apocrypha. The firſt and ſecond Chapter of Daniel to the fourth Verſe are written in Hebrew, thoſe following to the eighth Chapter are Chaldee, excepting the Song of the three Children in the fiery Furnace, which is only in Greek; the Original of the Remainder is Hebrew; as for the thirteenth and fourteenth Chapters which relate the Hiſtory of Suſannah, Bel and the Dragon, they are no part of the Jews Canon, and extant only in Greek. Some Apocryphal Writers pretend Daniel was buried at Babylon, and that his Tomb was to be ſeen there, but this Prophet had been a great while abſent from Babylon at his Death; for Darius Medus had him conveyed to Ecbatane, the Capitol of Media; and by his own Book 'tis plain, that towards the end of his Life he dwelt at a Town upon the Tygris, where he received his laſt Viſions: The Greeks and the Muſcovites ſet his Feſtival to the 17[th] of December. In ſome Martyrologies it ſtands upon the 10[th] of April, in others at the 21[ſt] of July, and in a great many at the 11[th] of December. * Ezekiel XIV. & 2. 1 Maccab. II. Hieron. Præf. Com. in Dan. Torniel & Salian, Ann. 3426. ad Ann. 3535. Bellarmin. de Script. Eccleſ. Pererius, Comment. in Dan. Petav. Lib. XII. de Doct. Temp. Cap. 32. & deinc. M. du Pin, Diſſert. Prelim. on the Bible, &c.

DANIEL, (Gabriel) born at Roan in 1649, and entered in the Jeſuits Society in 1667. He read upon the Belles Lettres upon Philoſophy and Divinity in ſeveral Places; afterwards giving over theſe learned Exerciſes, he publiſhed ſeveral Pieces upon different Subjects: For Inſtance, An Eſſay of the Hiſtory of France, in Quarto, taking in the Reign of Clovis and his Children, with Diſſertations and Notes. A Voyage to Des Cartes's World. This Book was tranſlated into Engliſh, and into Italian, by Dominico di Georgio. New Difficulties concerning the Conſciouſneſs, or Perception of Brutes. This Tract was inſerted in the Voyage to Des Cartes's World, in a new Edition, printed in 1703. An Anſwer to the Provincial Letters, entituled, Entretiens de Cleandre & d'Eudoxe. This Book in leſs than two Years, run through twelve Editions; 'twas tranſlated into Latin by Father Jouvenci, and afterwards into Italian, Engliſh, and Spaniſh. Two Letters of M. Abbot. * to* Eudoxus, by way of Remarks upon the new Apology for the Provincial Letters. Ten Letters to P. R. Alexander, where he draws a Parallel between the Doctrine of the Thomiſts, and the Jeſuits, upon the Subject of Probability and Grace; they are tranſlated by Father Jouvenci, and printed at Ausbourg. The Syſtem of Lewis de Leon, concerning our bleſſed Saviour's laſt Paſſover, with a Diſſertation and Notes upon the Sentiments and Practice of the Quarto-Decimans. A Defence of St. Auguſtin againſt a Book ſuppoſed to be written by Lanoy. Four Letters; one to R. P. Cloche de Dominicains; or the Dominicans Bell; and three to R. P. Serry, upon the Argument of the Book, Entituled, A Defence of St. Auguſtin. A Theological Tract, touching the Efficacy of Grace, in two Volumes. In the ſecond Volume he Anſwers P. Serry's Book, entituled, Schola Thomiſtica Vindicata, A Remonſtrance to the Lord Archbiſhop of Rheims, occaſioned by his Order, publiſhed July the 15[th], 1697. This Book has gone a great many times through the Preſs; 'tis likewiſe tranſlated into Latin, and publiſhed by Father Jouvenci. Diſſertatio de Judiciis Criticorum, & nupera Interpretis Gallici ſuper locos Sancti Chryſoſtomi Homiliæ III. ad Epiſtolam ad Hebreas. Laſtly, Father Daniel has lately publiſhed, The Hiſtory of France, in three Volumes, Folio. He has been ſome time Superior de la Maiſon, Profeſſe of the Jeſuits at Paris.

DANSE, or Dance, (A) Movements adjuſted to time and Muſick: According to Mythology, the Goddeſs Rhea was the firſt who took a fancy for Dancing, and taught it her Prieſts both in Crete and Phrygia. This Invention proved very ſerviceable; for by jumping and entertaining themſelves this way, it ſeems they ſaved Jupiter's Life, and preſerved him from being eaten up by his Father Saturn.

The Lacedemonians having learned this Art from Caſtor and Pollux, were ſo much ſmitten with it, that they never charged the Enemy without dancing to the Flute, to ſtir their Spirits, and awaken their Courage. Their Youth learned theſe Movements together with their military Exerciſes: A Flute ſtood in the middle of them, led the Dance with Muſick and Motion, and the reſt followed in Order, with great variety of military Poſtures. This Practice was cuſtomary in the Dance called Hormus; the Company were Maids and young Fellows: here the Man ſtruck up with Maſculine and Soldiery Movements, and the Girl followed with ſmoother and more reſerved This Compoſition gave, as it were, a Repreſentation of Vigor and Modeſty. They had likewiſe another Dance practiſed bare-foot, not to mention that which Homer deſcribes in Achilles's Shield, which Dedalus teaches Ariadne. The Theſſalians had ſuch an Eſteem for Dancing, that their chief Magiſtrates ſeem'd Ambitious to borrow the Name, and ſtiled themſelves Πρωοχισῆρες, as much as to ſay, thoſe that lead up the Dance. This Inſcription is to be ſeen upon their Statues; to which we may add this reſembling one, To the Honour of ſuch an one, for Dancing handſomely at the Charge; that is, for behaving themſelves honourably in the Fight; at Delos they never ſacrificed without Dancing, and upon Medals there are a Company of Youths repreſented where thoſe of the beſt Condition lead the Dance at the Muſick of the Flute and Harp. The Indians Dance when they worſhip the Sun, and have no other Rites at their Religious Solemnities. This is conſtantly done at Sun riſing and Sun ſetting. The Æthiopians, like the Lacedemonians, practiſe this Exerciſe when they engage; for before they ſhoot their Arrows, which are ſtuck about their Head like Rays, they dance and caper to fright the Enemy. In Ægypt the Fable of Proteus is the Emblem of a fine Dancer, who could turn himſelf into a thouſand different Poſtures, and by the Command of his Limbs, and the Strength of his Ingenuity, throw himſelf into all Shapes and Tempers. "I ſhall omit the mention, ſays Lucian, in his Dia- "logue upon this Exerciſe, of moſt of the Kinds of "Dances, with their Names and Inventors, my Deſign "being only to ſhew the Uſefulneſs and Entertain- "ment of this Diverſion, eſpecially ſince the Age of "Auguſtus: I have ſaid nothing of the Phrygian Dance, "practis'd at intemperate Revels, where the Country- "men hobble to the Flute". Farther, Dancing, tho' valu'd by ſome People, has been diſeſteem'd by others: Socrates, the grave Philoſopher, learned to dance of Aſpacia. The Spartans and Cretans made Dancing part of Breeding and Buſineſs. On the other ſide, Tully reproaches Gabinius, a Perſon of Conſular Quality for Dancing. Tiberius expelled the Dancing Maſters Rome; and Domitian degraded ſeveral Senators from the Houſe of Lords, for practiſing this Diverſion. The Ancients had three Sorts of Dances, one of them Solemn, another Galliardizing, and a third compounded of both. Neoptolemus, or Pyrrhus, Achilles's Son, taught the Cretans the Pyrrich Dance, where they tript under their Arms, and ſtruck their Swords upon their Shields. Numa likewiſe taught a Dance for the Salii, or Prieſts of Mars, who ſerved in the Field: Out of this Dance, and that of the Curetes in Crete, that Buffooning one was made where the Dancers are armed with little Corſlets, gilt Head Pieces, Bells about their Legs, with their Sword and Shield in their Hands. Lucian has a Diſcourſe, and Julius Pollux a Chapter upon this Exerciſe. 'Tis likewiſe mentioned in Athenæus, Cœlius Rhodiginus, and by Scaliger. Some make Minerva the firſt in this Diverſion, and that the Pleaſure ſhe received at the Defeat of the Titans, threw this Exerciſe into her Limbs; others aſſign this Invention to Caſtor and Pollux. Some Years ſince there has been printed two Tracts in French, entituled, Orcheſographie, where the Steps, Meaſure, and Cadences of this Art are deſcribed.

the

DANTE, (Peter Vincent) born at Perugia in Italy, and of the Family of the Rainaldi. He was a very Ingenious Perſon, underſtood the Belles Lettres, Mathematicks, and Architecture. He wrote a handſome Performance in Verſe, in Imitation of the famous Poet Dante, and ſeemed to revive the Sublime manner of that great Genius. For this Imitation they gave him the Sirname of Dante, which was ſo acceptable to his Family, that his Poſterity left off their Name of Rainaldi, and took that of Dante. This Peter invented ſeveral Machines, admired by the Learned, and wrote an Italian Commentary upon John di Sacro Boſco on the Globe. Dante died very old in 1512.

DANTE, (Julius) Son of Peter Vincent Dante, was a good Architect and Mathematician: He wrote a Book de Alluvione Tyberis, and Notes in Ornamenta Architecturæ. He died A. D. 1575. * Athenæum Auguſtum. Auguſtin Aldoini, a Jeſuit.

DANTE, (Theodora) Peter Vincent's Daughter, was ſo well inſtructed in the Mathematicks by her Father, that ſhe may fairly be ranged in the firſt Claſs of Mathematicians in that Age. She wrote Books in this Science, and taught it her Nephew Ignatius to a great Proficiency. Athenæum Auguſtum. Auguſtin Aldoini.

DANTE, (Vincent) Julius's Son, Peter Vincent's Grandſon, and Nephew to the learned Theodora abovementioned, applied himſelf to the Study of his Family, and was a good Architect and Mathematician; and beſides this, he was a famous Statuary and Graver: He made a Statue of Julius the III^d at Perugia. King Philip the II^d of Spain would have employ'd him to ornament the Eſcurial, and offered him a large Penſion; but Dante's Health would not ſerve him to take that Voyage. He ſpent his time at home in Poetry and Mathematicks, wrote ſeveral Tracts, and amongſt the reſt the Lives of the moſt celebrated Statuaries. He died at Perugia, A. D. 1576, at 46 Years of Age. * Athenæum Auguſtum. Auguſtin Aldoini.

DANTECOURT, (John Baptiſt) a Canon Regular of St. Auguſtin's, in the Congregation of St. Genevieve, formerly Chancellor of the Univerſity of Paris, and famous for his Elocution and Learning. He wrote a Book of Controverſy in French, entituled, A Defence of the Church, againſt Monſieur Claud's Book, call'd, A Defence of the Reformation. Printed at Paris A. D. 1689. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* DAPHIDAS, for Attalus King of Aſia, in Morery, Volume firſt, read King of Pergamos in Aſia the Leſs.

* DAPHNE; for during the Reign of Conſtance, in Morery, Vol. firſt, read Conſtantius; and for Gallus made Emperor, read made Cæſar.

DARABEGERD, a Town within the Dominions of the Sophi of Perſia. It lies in the Province of Kherman, towards the Frontier of Farſiſtant, twenty Leagues from Lar to the South-Eaſt. Some Geographers take this Town for the old Paſſagarda, built by Cyrus King of Perſia, who was bury'd there; but other Authors take the old Paſſagarda for Chaboukara, a Town of the ſame Province, about thirty Leagues from Darabegerd to the Weſt. * Baudrand.

DARON, Darona, formerly Anthedon and Agrippiada, a Town of Paleſtine upon the Mediterranean, three Leagues from Gaza to the South. Herod the Great called it Agrippiada, in Honour of Agrippa. 'Twas a conſiderable Town, and a Biſhop's See after Chriſtianity.

DARTIS, (John) Profeſſor of Canon Law in the Royal College of France, was born at Cahours, A. D. 1572. The latter part of his Life was ſpent in writing Books; he died in 1651. M. Doujat his Succeſſor in the Profeſſors Chairs (for he was likewiſe King's Profeſſor in the Civil Law) collected all his Works in a Folio, and printed them at Paris in 1656.

Dartis had ſtudied hard, read a great deal, and made large common Places. His Books were drawn moſtly from theſe Collections; for they are little more than Citations from the Canons and Decretals, from the Fathers and Canoniſts. He likewiſe borrows from the Civil Law and Claſſick Authors. He ſometimes makes curious Obſervations, but for the moſt part he affords nothing but what is common and generally known; he is not always happy and judicious in his Conjectures, and his Teſtimonies often fall ſhort of proving their Point. However, his Works, take them altogether, are not unſerviceable. His Style is plain and unornamented, but proper, and very intelligible. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

DATHEMAN, a Fortreſs of Gilead, belonging to the Tribe of Gad, upon the Frontiers of Arabia, famous for holding out againſt Timotheus's Army. This General underſtanding that Judas Maccabeus had paſſed the River Jordan to countermarch to Jeruſalem, reſolved to do ſomething in his Abſence. He made Incurſions upon the Frontiers of Gilead, ravaged the Country in a frightful manner, and forced the Jews to retire into the Fortreſs of Datheman; and here being ſomewhat reſcued from preſent Danger, they wrote to Judas, letting him know that though they wanted neither Courage nor Fidelity, yet unleſs he came ſpeedily up to their Relief, they ſhould be in no Condition to hold out againſt the Enemy. Upon this Advice, Judas and his Brother Jonathan paſſed the Jourdan with a Detachment of 8000 Men, and marched up ſtrait to the Beſiegers, who were making themſelves ready to ſcale the Fort; and without giving them time to form themſelves, and ſtop his March, he divided his Army into three Bodies, ſounded a Charge, and attacked the Enemy with ſuch Vigor, that they gave over the Aſſault. A great many of their Men, who had got to the top of the Ladders, threw themſelves down, and ſcoured off; but were ſo cloſely purſued, that beſides a great Number of Priſoners, 8000 were killed upon the ſpot. This Defeat hapned in the Year of the World 3892, and 159 Years before the Incarnation. * 1 Maccab. V. v. 9. Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. XII. Cap 11, 12.

DATI, (Carlo) born at Florence, and Humanity Profeſſor there, was a celebrated Author. He was a Member of the Academy della Cruſca. He wrote a Panegyrick in Italian upon Lewis the XIV^th^, King of France, and printed it at Florence in the Year 1669; 'twas tranſlated into French, and printed at Rome the Year after; ſome time before this he publiſhed ſome Italian Poems in Commendation of this Prince. * Leti, Italia Regnante.

DAUBRAUCA, Daughter to Boliſlaüs, King of Bohemia, married Mieczilaüs, Son of Zemoiſſus, Prince of Poland, upon Condition of his turning Chriſtian, which Article he made good accordingly, A. D. 965. His Subjects follow'd his Example, and came off from Heatheniſm. * Cromer, Hiſt. Polon. Lib. III.

* DAVID, King of Æthiopia; for Pope Clement the Seventh, in Vol. firſt, read Pope Leo the Tenth.

DAVID AWDRAHAM, a Spaniard, one of Rabbi Ben Haroſch's Scholars, lived at Seville about the Year 1340. He wrote an Expoſition upon the Prayers, as they come up every Day in the Jewiſh Service. This Book was printed at Conſtantinople in 1514, and at Venice in 1570; he likewiſe wrote a Tract of the Intercalated Year, Aſtronomical Tables, and a Diſcourſe upon the Solſtices and Equinoxes. * Bartolocci, Biblioth. Rabin. M. du Pin.

DAVID D'ISRAELLE, in the Kingdom of Navarre, wrote a Book, entituled, David's Tower. He likewiſe wrote a Tract called, The Town of the Book, where he endeavours to confute thoſe who aſſert all the Judicial and Ceremonial Part of the Jewiſh Law founded upon Reaſon; he won't allow it to be reſolved into any thing but God Almighty's Pleaſure, and in this he differs from Maimonides. * Bartolocci, Biblioth. Rabin. M. Baſnage, Hiſtory of the Jews from our Saviour to this preſent time.

DAVID el David, a Counterfeit Meſſiah of the Jews, who revolted againſt the King of Perſia. This Prince having ſeized him, demanded a Miracle for juſtifying his Pretenſions; David made anſwer, that if his Majeſty would order his Head to be cut off, he would ſet it on, and come to Life again; but this was only a Trick of the Impoſtor to eſcape a tormenting Death. This Account is given in a Letter entituled Rambam, publiſhed by Vorſtius in Rabbi Ganza's Chronology. This Impoſtor brought a great deal of hard Uſage upon the Jews in Perſia, and occaſioned their being harraſſed with extraordinary Taxes. * Baſnage, Hiſtory of the Jews, &c.

DAUMA, or Duama, a Town in the Eaſt Indies. It ſtands upon the Northern Coaſt of the Iſland Java: There is the Convenience of a good Haven. It ſtands about eight Leagues diſtant from the Town Japara to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

DAVOS, called likewiſe Tafaas, a Town of the Grizons, about five or ſix Leagues from Coire. 'Tis one of the principal Towns of the Grizons Country, and General Aſſemblies or Diets are frequently held there. * Maty, Diction.

* DEACONS. To what has been inſerted under this Article in Morery's Supplement may be ſubjoined; that according to Primitive Cuſtom, a Deacon was to be ordained by the Biſhop alone. In St. Jerom's time the Deacons at Rome topt upon the Prieſts, which occaſioned St. Jerom's Epiſtle to Evagrius. The fourteenth Canon of the Council of Nice, forbids Deacons adminiſtring the Euchariſt to Prieſts, or receiving it before them. Juſtin Martyr's Apology informs us, that they uſe to diſtribute the conſecrated Elements. Some of them were afterwards ſo hardy as to offer the Euchariſtick Sacrifice; but they were prohibited this Practice by the Council of Arles, and the fourth of Carthage; 'twas lawful however to baptize with the Biſhop's Permiſſion, and in Caſes of Neceſſity Penitents were ſometimes reconciled by them. Deacons were prohibited preaching 'till the ſixth Century, when they began to be allowed this Privilege in Gaul; but here the Apoſtolical Age muſt be excepted. This Order aſſiſted at Councils, not only as Biſhop's Proxies, but in virtue of their own Character, but then they were to keep ſtanding behind the Prieſt's Bench. In the VII^th^ Century this Privilege was recalled, and they were not allowed to make part of the Synodical Aſſemblies. By the firſt and ſecond Council of Carthage, and by that of Tribur in Germany, there was to be three Biſhops for depoſing a Deacon; formerly the Stewards in Monaſteries were called Deacons, though not ordained to that Character. * Morin. de Sacris Ordinationibus. Thomaſſin, Diſciplin. Eccleſ. Rabanus Maurus de Inſtitutione Cleri. Lib. I. Cap. 2. Durandus, de Divin. Offic. Lib. II^d^. Cap. 2, &c.

DECAPOLIS, a Town in Paleſtine, part of Galilee near Jordan, and the Sea of Tiberias. 'Twas ſo called upon the ſcore of its having ten conſiderable Towns within the Precinct, viz. 1. Scythopolis, which was the Capitol, and the largeſt. 2. Tarichea. 3. Tyberiades. 4. Jotapat. 5. Bethſaida. 6. Capernäum. 7. Coraiſin. 8. Gamala. 9. Geroſa, or Gaddor. 10. Lippo. Thus they are called by Father Simon in his Dictionary of the Bible; but the Abbot Baudrand gives moſt of them other Names, they are theſe, viz. 1. Ceſarea Philippi. 2. Aſor. 3. Cadiſh Napthali. 4. Sepher. 5. Coraiſin. 6. Capernäum. 7. Bethſäida. 8. Jotapat. 9. Tyberiades, 10. Bethſham, which is the ſame with Sithopolis. All theſe Towns were large and well fortified, and in a manner ſurround the Sea of Galilee.

DECAPOLIS, a Country in Aſia minor, and part of Cilicia and Iſauria; ſo called from ten of the chief Towns formerly there, viz. 1. Germanicopolis. 2. Tiſiopolis. 3. Domitioplis. 4. Zenopolis. 5. Neapolis. 6. Claudiopolis. 7. Irenopolis. 8. Dioceſarea. 9. Lauſada. 10. Daliſanda. * L'Abbé Baudrand who cites Conſtantine Porphyrogenitus for his Authority.

DECEMBER, the tenth Month of Romulus's Year, and conſecrated to Saturn. In the Reign of the Emperor Commodus this Month was called Amazonius, out of Reſpect to a Wench this Prince was deſperately in Love with, and which he ordered to be painted in the Habit of an Amazon; but this Name laſted no longer than this Emperor's Life. On the Kalends, or firſt Day of this Month, there was a Sacrifice to Fortuna Muliebris; becauſe the Women were ſo lucky as to prevail with Coriolanus to countermarch the Volſcian Army, and not ſit down before Rome. Upon the Nones they kept Faunus's Feſtival, called Faunalia; 'twas a ſort of Wake kept in the Country. Upon the 11^th^, or the 3^d^ before the Ides, they ſolemnized the Agonalia. On the 13^th^, or the Ides, they had their Septimontium Holiday; 'twas Inſtituted in Memory of the ſeventh Mountain, being incloſed within the Walls of Rome. On the 17^th^, or the 16^th^ of the Kalends of February, the Saturnalia were kept. On the 22^d^ they had their Feſtival called Lararia, in Honour of the Dii Lares or the Houſhold Gods. On the 23^d^ they kept the Laurentinalia, in Memory of Acca Laurentia, the Shepherd Fauſtulus's Wife. The laſt Day of the Month was ſet apart for the Sports called Juvenilia, and in the Country the Peaſants gave their Goddeſs Vacuna a Holiday; the Sowing of their Land, and the Buſineſs of the Year being now over. * Danet.

DECHALES, (Claud Francis Milliet) born at Chamberry, Capitol of Savoy, and extracted from a Family which has produced ſeveral Perſons creditably diſtinguiſhed in the Church, the long Robe, and the Field. He was a great Maſter in all the Parts of Mathematicks, and printed ſeveral Books in that Faculty very well receiv'd. His principal Performances are Euclid's Elements, where he has ſtruck out the unſerviceable Propoſitions, and annexed the Uſe to each Propoſition. A Diſcourſe of Fortification, and another of Navigation. Theſe three Performances, with ſome others, are collected into three Volumes Folio, under the Title of Mundus Mathematicus; being really a compleat Courſe of all the Mathematicks. The firſt Tome takes in the firſt ſix Books of Euclid, with the eleventh and the twelfth; an Arithmetical Tract; Theodoſius's Sphærica; Trigonometry; practical Geometry; Mechanicks; Staticks; univerſal Geography; a Diſcourſe of the Load-Stone; Civil Architecture; the Carpenters Art. The ſecond Tome furniſhes Directions for Stone-cutting; Military Architecture; Hydroſtaticks; a Diſcourſe of Fountains and Rivers; Hydraulick Machines, or Contrivances for Water Works; Navigation; Opticks; Perſpective; Catoptricks and Dioptricks. Laſtly, his third Volume gives a Diſcourſe of Muſick; Pyrotechnia, or the Operations of Fire and Furnace; a Diſcourſe of the Uſe of the Aſtrolabe; Gnomonicks, or the Art of Dialling; Aſtronomy, a Tract upon the Kalendar; Aſtrology; Algebra; the Method of Indiviſible and Conique Sections: The beſt Edition is that at Lyons in 1690: 'Tis more correct than the firſt, has conſiderable Enlargements, and makes four Volumes Folio. P. Dechales, though not going far in Invention, has made good Uſe of other Mens Productions, and drawn the ſeveral Parts of this Science together with great Diſtinction and Judgment. The Writer of the Journal des Scavans, reports that his Probity was no leſs than his Learning: "That both theſe Qualities made him "generally admired and beloved at Paris: where for "four Years together, he read publick Mathematick "Lectures at the College of Clermont: And that they "did not part with him without great Regret, when he "was called off to the Academy at Turin." He died in this Town in 1678. His Funeral Oration was delivered in the Jeſuits College, and printed the ſame Year. * Journal des Scavans, Tom. VI. pag. 251. Edit. d'Holland. Memoirs du Tems. There is a ſmall Article upon Dechales in Morery Vol. firſt at the word Chales.

DECIMATION, in Latin Decimatio, a Puniſhment undergone by the Roman Soldiers, who quitted their Poſt, raiſed a Mutiny in the Camp, or behav'd themſelves cowardly in the Field. 'Twas executed thus. The General muſter'd the Army, then the Tribune brought the Criminals before him, and reproached them with their Cowardiſe and Treachery, in the hearing of the Army. Afterwards putting their Names into an Urn or an Helmet, he drew out five, ten, or twenty, according to their Number; and thus the fifth, the tenth, or the twentieth was executed, and the reſt diſcharged. * Danet.

DECIMES, or Tenths, ſo the Money is called which the French King levies upon the Eccleſiaſticks in his Dominions. They are different from the Tenths taken by Eccleſiaſticks upon Corn, Graſs, Timber, and ſometimes upon Cattel and Fowl. From the beginning of the Monarchy the Kings of France have levied Money upon the Clergy. For Gregory of Tours, Lib. III. relates that Theodebert Son of Theodorick King of Auſtraſia, and Clovis's Grandſon, diſcharged the Churches of Auvergne of all the cuſtomary Payments to the Crown. The ſame Gregory of Tours informs us that Thierri King of Mets, and Clotair the Firſt's Grandſon, exonerated the Clergy of Tours of all ſort of Taxes. But in his XII^th^ Book, he tells us that Clotair King of Soiſſons, and Son to Clovis, deſigned to levy the third of the Churches Revenue within his Dominions; and that Injurioſus Biſhop of Tours, prevailed with him to drop that Reſolution. In the VIII^th^ Century, Charles Martel ſeized part of the Churches Eſtates, particularly thoſe of Royal Foundation, and granted them to his Soldiers: Under the ſecond Race, or Carolovinian Line of France, there was but one extraordinary Levy upon the Clergy A. D. 877. Then Charles the Bald, King of France and Emperor, reſolving to aſſiſt Pope John the VIII^th^ againſt the Sarazens, who ravaged up to the Precincts of Rome, laid a Tax upon the Eccleſiaſticks. But then we are to obſerve, the French Clergy paid an annual Aid to the Crown, which was commonly made by way of Preſent at a meeting of the Eſtates.

This Practice is pretty near the Cuſtom under the two firſt Families of the Kings of France. The ordinary or extraordinary Impoſitions the Kings put upon the Clergy during this Period, were neither called Deixms, nor Decimes or Tenths. Theſe Words with this Signification were only uſed under the third Line in the Reign of Philip the Auguſt, and after the Holy War began.

King Lewis the younger put a Tax upon the Clergy in 1147, for furniſhing the Charge of the Croiſade: But this Tax was not called a Tenth. In 1188, King Philip the Auguſt convened the Eſtates at Paris, where an Ordinance paſs'd for levying a Tenth upon the Churchmens annual Revenue; and the Laity, who did not go in the Expedition, were likewiſe to pay a Tenth of their Eſtates. This Tax was called La Dixieme Saladine, from Saladin Souldan of Egypt, who had driven the Chriſtians out of Jeruſalem, and made himſelf Maſter of almoſt all the Holy Land. After this time, all the Payments levied upon the Clergy were called Tenths; though they fell ſhort of the tenth part of their Revenue. Du Haillan relates, that in the Year 1204, there was a military Preparation for beyond Sea, and a Tax for paying the twentieth part of all the Revenues of the Clergy. But in the Reign of St. Lewis there was thirteen Tenths paid in twenty Years; and in the Reign of Philip the Fair, there was one and twenty Tenths levied in twenty eight Years. Theſe Taxes were almoſt all along continued, through all the Reigns after Philip the Auguſt: And ſince Croiſades were undertaken not only againſt Infidels, but againſt Hereticks or other excommunicated Perſons; Matters ſtanding thus, Tenths were levied for ſupporting theſe Croiſades. Thus in the Year 1226 Pope Honorius III. granted a Tenth to Lewis VIII. for carrying on a War againſt the Albigenſes. Urban IV. granted the ſame Levy to Charles of Anjou, to manage the War againſt Mainfroc; and after the Sicilian Veſpers Martin IV. gave Leave for raiſing the ſame Proportion of a Tax, for fighting Peter of Arragon. The Kings of France, by reciprocal Courteſy, gave the Popes Leave to levy Money upon the French Clergy to furniſh them in their Quarrels againſt the Enemies of the Church. Thus Philip the Auguſt granted an Aid to Innocent III. to put him in a Condition to ſuſtain the War againſt the Emperor Otho IV. And Philip the Fair gave his Conſent, that Pope John XXII. might raiſe two Tenths for carrying on the War againſt Lewis of Bavaria. Farther; The Exigencies of the Government were likewiſe a ſufficient Reaſon for levying a Tenth. 'Twas upon this Score that Pope Clement VI. granted two of theſe Payments to Philip de Valois, A. D. 1348. Afterwards in 1516, Leo X. gave Francis I. his Conſent for levying a Tenth upon the French Clergy, to be expended in an Expedition againſt the Turk. Upon this occaſion a Tax was levied upon every Benefice beyond the tenth part of their Revenue. And this Aſſeſſment for the Year 1516, has been continued to the preſent time. After this Period there has been a great many Taxes levied upon the French Clergy without conſulting the Pope; and in 1527 the Clergy furniſh'd 1300000 Livres for the Ranſom of Francis I. In 1534 the Revenue of the Eccleſiaſticks were divided between the Crown and the Clergy. In 1551 the Clergy made a Preſent of a conſiderable Sum. In 1557 the Receivers of the Tenths had the Denomination of a diſtinct Office, and for paying their Sallaries, the Tenths were augmented one Sols par Livre; from whence we may infer that Tenths were a cuſtomary and ſettled Payment. After the Agreement made at Poiſſy, A. D. 1561. Taxes upon the Clergy for the Service of the Crown, have been all along continued. By this Contract or Agreement the Clergy engaged to pay the King 1300000 Livres, for ſix Years together, and over and above to clear his Demeſn Lands, his Aids and Gabells, mortgaged to the City Chamber for 630000 Livres Intereſt, amounting to Seven Millions five Hundred ſixty Thouſand Livres Principal, which he promiſed to redeem in ten Years. In 1580, the Clergy met at Melun, bound themſelves in a legal Form to furniſh the King Thirteen Hundred Thouſand Livres per Annum for ſix Years. This is called Décime Ordinaire, or the Cuſtomary Tax. The Knights of St. John at Jeruſalem were included in the Tenth of 1516, under the Denomination of the Rhodians, becauſe at that time their Grand Maître, or Governor, reſided at Rhodes. They were likewiſe within the Contract of Poiſſy in 1561, and other following Engagements: And in regard they pretended an Exemption in virtue of their Privileges; There has been a long Suit depending at the Council-Board between the Clergy and theſe Knights. This Diſpute continued till the Year 1606, when the Rhodians came too, and entred into an Obligation to contribute towards the Payment of the Tenths, their Tax being ſettled at 28000 Livres. To proceed; the Jeſuits have been obliged to theſe Payments for the Benefices annexed to their Colleges. Since the Contract at Melun, A. D. 1580, the Tenth being ſettled as a cuſtomary and ſtated Payment, and the King not being in a Condition to lodge it in the Exchequer, becauſe it was to be employ'd in paying the Intereſt due to the City Chamber; the Crown Revenue being thus embarraſſed, the King demanded farther Aids of the Clergy: Theſe go under the Name of Extraordinary Subventions, or Subſidies, and were not granted at firſt unleſs upon great Occaſions. In 1621, when the Hugonots were up in Arms, the Clergy conſented to a new Creation of Offices, where the Money to be paid by thoſe promoted was to go to the King's Uſe. In 1628, the King procured a Brief of Pope Urban VIII. to exhort the Clergy to enable him to deffray the Charge of the Siege of Rochelle; and here the Clergy granted three Millions of Livres. Theſe Subſidies, or Benevolences, are now at laſt become cuſtomary, and granted at all the Aſſemblies of the Clergy from five Years to five Years, or thereabouts, and for Sums great or leſs, according to the Neceſſities of the Government. * Fauchet. Lib. X. Patru, Traité de Decime. Paſquier, Recherches Lib. III. Fleuri, Inſtitution au Droit Eccleſiaſtique.

* DECURIO, an Officer in the Roman Armies who had the Command of ten Horſe. Romulus having at firſt divided the People into three Tribes, placed a Collonel at the Head of each Tribe, and then ſubdivided each Tribe into ten Troops; and here he gave a Commiſſion to a Centurion or Captain for commanding an hundred Men, and under him there was a Decurio who commanded ten. * Antiquit. Rom.

* DECURIONES (Municipales) was a Court or Bench, which repreſented the Roman Senate in Country Corporations. They were called Decuriones, becauſe when Roman Colonies were ſent off to conquered Cities, they elected ten Perſons for a Senate, and a Bench of Aſſiſtance, almoſt like the Baillages and Preſidial Courts of France: They called them Civitatum Patres Curiales; Honorati Municipiorum Senatores; and the Court went by the Name of Curia Decurionum, & Minor Senatus. They were choſen much after the ſame manner the Election of the Senators at Rome was manag'd. The Perſons elected were not to be under five and twenty Years of Age, nor to have leſs than a Thouſand Crowns a Year. The firſt of March was the Day for the Election. For this purpoſe the Duumvir, or Country Corporation Conſul, convened the Court of the Decuriones with the Intendent de Juſtice, or Chief Juſtice of the Province; and here the Competitors were elected by a Majority. The Decurio elected was to pay his Foy to the Society, either in Money or a Preſent, which was more or leſs according to the Cuſtom of the place, as we are informed, by the Emperor Trajan's Letter to Pliny the younger, who conſulted him upon this Payment. The Emperor's Anſwer is, That there was no general Rule for ſettling this matter, but that the Buſineſs was to be governed by local Cuſtom. The Money, according to Ulpian, was divided amongſt all the Decuriones in equal Portions: Their Buſineſs, like the Court of Aldermen, was to take Care of the Intereſt of the Town, and the publick Revenues, part of which was ſpent in repairing the Walls, and other publick Buildings; and partly for Sallaries to ſubſiſt and encourage Men of Letters. The Judgments and Orders given and paſt by them, were called Decreta Decurionum. And at the Head of the Inſtruments, theſe two Capitals were prefix'd. D. D. * Antiquit. Rom.

DEGRADATION. The removing from Rank and Condition. Geliot and La Colombiére relate ſeveral remarkable Ceremonies at the degrading Gentlemen. They give an Inſtance of them in the Year 1523, upon Captain Franget, a Gaſcogne Gentleman, who had cowardly ſurrendred Fontarabia at the firſt Attack of the Spaniards. Theſe Authors report that twenty or thirty Knights of unblemiſhed Reputation were ſummon'd, before whom the Criminal Gentleman was proſecuted for Treachery or not doing his Duty, by a King at Arms. Here two Scaffolds were ſet up, one of Heralds and Purſivants for Aſſeſſors to the Kings at Arms, and another for the Criminal caſt: who being armed Cap a pie, had his Shield reverſed ſet upon a Stake before him; at his ſide there were twelve Prieſts in Surplices who ſung the Vigils for the Dead; at the end of each Pſalm they made a Pauſe, during which Intermiſſion the Heralds diſarmed the Gentleman by degrees, taking his Headpiece off firſt, and going on with theſe mortifying Circumſtances, till he was ſtript of all his military Figure; after which, they took a Hammer and broke his Shield in three pieces: Then the King at Arms poured a Baſon of hot Water upon his Head. For the next mortifying Ceremony the Court put on Mourning, and went to Church, the Perſon degraded, dragged from the Scaffold by a Halter tied under his Arm-pits, was put in a Barrow, and covered with a Pall, the Prieſt ſtill ſinging at Church ſome Offices for the Dead: After this, the Malefactor was delivered to the Sheriff, and from him to the Executioner. As for Franget, after he had been degraded at Lyons much in this manner, he was not allowed the Benefit of the Gallows, but puniſhed with Life to make him more infamous. As for Prieſts, when they are degraded, 'tis commonly without paſſing through the Formalities: For their running through all the ſolemn Circumſtances might occaſion Difficulties, and delay the Penalty too long. Beſides; Degrading Eccleſiaſticks, as the French Supplementer goes on, is nothing but pure Formality; becauſe the Character remains undeleted after this Cenſure. * Du Bois, Hiſtory of France, Memoirs Hiſtoriques. Mezeray, in the Reign of Francis I.

DEIPHONTES General of the Dorians, coaſting near a Hill where he cou'd not be diſcovered, ſent a Spy to give falſe Intelligence to the Argives. 'Twas to aſſure them the Dorians had diſembarked to plunder the Country: Upon this News the Argives drew out of their Camp to fight the Dorians, who they expected to have found ſcattered, and without Diſcipline in the Field. But Deiphontes coming aſhore with his Troops, ſeized the Enemy's Camp, which was left unguarded. And now the Argives ſaw their Wives, Children and Fathers made Priſoners: And for ranſoming theſe Relations, and preſerving the Country, were forced to yield ſeveral Towns to the Dorians. * Polyæn. Lib. II.

* DELOS; for the Deluge of Ogyges before that of Noah, in Morery, Vol. firſt, read after that of Noah.

DELRIO (Martin Anthony) a Jeſuit. He died at Louvain in October 1608, and in the fifty eighth Year of his Age. He began to be an Author betimes, for at twenty Years old he publiſhed Solinus, corrected by Lipſius's Manuſcripts with Notes, printed at Antwerp in 1572. He afterwards performed farther in the Belles Lettres: For inſtance, his Notes upon Claudian and Seneca's Tragedies, printed at Antwerp in 1576, and ſome Tracts in the Civil Law, publiſhed at Lyons in 1606. But that which made him moſt talked of, was his Magical Diſquiſitions in three Tomes. Printed firſt at Louvain, and afterwards at Mentz and Lyons. The Subject being matter of Curioſity, the Book had a great Run, notwithſtanding 'tis ſtuffed with abundance of romantick Relations. He cites a vaſt Number of Authorities, but moſt of the Authors are obſcure and unknown: Farther, Delrio made thirteen Panegyricks upon the Bleſſed Virgin, entitled, Florida Mariana. Printed at Antwerp in 1598. And in 1607 they were reprinted at Lyons with additional Tracts, under the Title of Opus Marianum, They take in the following Diſcourſes. The Mirror of the Virgin, The Mirror of the Charity and Patience of Jeſus and Mary, The Polemicks and Panegyricks of Mary. Delrio's Performances upon the Scriture are more ſolid and valuable. He wrote a Commentary upon Geneſis, entitled, The Tower of Sacred Wiſdom, printed at Lyons in 1608. Commentaries upon the Canticles, printed at Ingoldſtad, and upon the Lamentations, printed at Lyons in 1608. Sacred Adages of the Old Teſtament, and three Tomes upon the moſt difficult and uſeful Paſſages in the holy Scripture. Delrio wrote two Diſcourſes againſt Scaliger, one entitled, Vindiciæ Areopagiticæ, printed in 1607. And another called Peniculus foriarum Elenchi Scaligerani pro Societate Jeſu. Theſe Tracts go moſtly upon the Books reckoned to Dionyſius the Areopagite: The Enquiry is, whether thoſe Books belong to the Perſon converted by St. Paul; Delrio maintains the affirmative, and Scaliger the negative; and the Queſtion on both ſides is managed with Heat enough. There is another Book of Delrio's printed at Madrid in 1610, and at Cologne in 1611. It goes under a Counterfeit Name, and runs thus, Commentarius rerum in Belgio geſtarum à Petro Henniquez Comite Fontano, addito Tractatu de Tumultibus Belgicis, Auctore Rolando Miriteo Onatino; which is the Anagram of Antonio Martin Delrio. This Author had read a great deal, but was very credulous and prepoſſeſt. He writes with Affectation, and yet without Ornament. The Reader muſt diſtinguiſh this Author from John Delrio of Bruges, and Dean of Antwerp, who publiſhed a Commentary upon the hundred and nineteenth, and ſeven Penitential Pſalms. This Delrio died in 1624. * Miræus in Elog. Belg. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. Alegamb, de Script. Soc. Jeſu, &c.

DELUGE: In the Year of the World 1656, and 2348 before the Incarnation, Noah, his Wife, his three Sons

Sons Shem, Ham, and Japhet, and their Wives went into the Ark, and took in living Creatures of all kinds, to preſerve the Species. Soon after this the Scripture informs us the Fountains of the great Deep were broke up, and the Windows of Heaven were opened, and it rained for forty Days and Nights together. By the Fountains of the great Deep, the beſt Expoſitors underſtand the Repoſitories of Water under Ground, and in the Cavities of the Mountains; and by the Windows of Heaven an extraordinary Heap of Clouds, which diſſolving into Rain, tumbled down the Air which the Scripture calls the Heaven, and like the Cataracts of Nile, and other great Rivers which fall from Precipices, made a terrible Noiſe. This Rain, and the breaking out of ſubterranean Waters, was the effect of ſupernatural Power; it not being otherwiſe poſſible the Waters ſhould riſe fifteen Cubits above the higheſt Mountains. The Flood laſted 150 Days, which makes five ſolar Months; ſome reckon them from Noah's going into the Ark, and others from the ceaſing of the Rain, which laſted forty Days. The whole Duration of the Flood was a Lunar Year and ten Days which makes almoſt a Solar Year; for it began in the 600th Year of Noah, the 17th Day of the ſecond Month, and ended in the 601 of this Patriarch the 27th Day of the ſecond Month.

The Ante Diluvians were People of great Stature and Strength, and yet as ſome Authors pretend, they fed upon nothing but Fruit and Pulſe; However others will have it, that tho' Seth's Deſcendants contented themſelves with this Diet, Cain's Poſterity made no Scruple to eat Fiſh, and Fleſh. Afterwards theſe two Families intermarrying, they all took the ſame Liberty. Some are of Opinion the Rainbow never appeared before the Flood, becauſe the Text tells us, God ſet it in the Clouds for a Sign, that a general Deluge ſhould never happen, but unleſs there was never any Rain before the Flood, there muſt be no leſs than a Miracle to prevent the Phænomenon of a Rainbow. The Paſſage therefore muſt mean that the Rainbow during the Ante Diluvian Period was only a common Effect; But afterwards it commenced a Sign of Promiſe and providential Favour. The Queſtion is ſometimes put, whether Noah had any Children after the Flood, or whether all Men draw their Deſcent from Shem, Ham, and Japhet. Now God having bleſſed Noah, and bid him increaſe and multiply, ſome Expoſitors are of Opinion, this Patriarch helped to repeople the Earth, through the three hundred and fifty Years of the Poſt Diluvian Part of his Life. Cajetan is in this Sentiment, but Pererius and others hold the Contrary, becauſe the Scripture mentions none but Shem, Ham, and Japhet. The Rabbins have a whimſical Fancy upon this Subject reſembling the Fable of Cœlus and Saturn. They venture to ſay Ham, while his Father was aſleep, made uſe of magical Applications to prevent his having any more Children. The Chaldeans furniſh Noah with a Son they call Junithun; But this Junithun, alias Hermes, was it ſeems no more than Noah's Grandſon.

'Tis reaſonable to believe that the Surface of the Earth was conſiderably altered by the Flood; but to what Degree theſe Alterations went, can be carried no farther than Conjecture. 'Tis probable a great deal of ſpungy low Ground was never cleared of the Inundation, but ſettled into Lakes, or made new Sea; and that in other Places of different Texture and Situation, the Land gained upon the Water, that by the rapid Current of the Waters, Peninſulas had their Iſthmus broken, and were parted from the Terra Firma; and that in ſeveral other Places, Floats of broken Earth and Sand crowded together, and joined Iſlands to the Continent; and that the Waters wearing broad Channels in ſeveral Countries, ſplit them into Iſlands. Alterations of this kind have happened upon the Progreſs of time ſince the Flood: The Sea having parted a great many Countries, and ſplit them into Iſlands, which were formerly Parcels of the ſame Continent. 'Tis ſomewhat hard at the firſt Thought to underſtand how Cattel and wild Beaſts removed into different parts of the World after the Flood, but Aſia 'tis poſſible continued for ſome time, and it may be is ſtill, joined to America; the Frontiers of Tartary, and the Land of Jeſſo affording a Communication between theſe two great Diviſions of the Earth. Farther, Aſia is joined to Africa, by the Iſthmus of Suez, and to Europe by Muſcovy. As for Europe and Africk, they might probably have been ſet together, at the Streights of Gibraltar. Plato, and the Athenian Annals inform us, that there was formerly a vaſt Country called the Atlantick, lying to the Weſt of Europe. And who knows but this may be the ſame with America? As for Land Animals, they might get into the Iſlands, either by ſwimming or by the Iſthmuſes, which the Force of the Waves have ſince battered and carried off. 'Tis likewiſe poſſible they might be exported in Ships, as they are now from Europe and Africk into America. A modern Author, whoſe Book was cenſured at Rome in 1650, is ſo hardy as to aſſert the Deluge was not univerſal; and that the Waters overflowing none but the higheſt Mountains of Judæa, the Beaſts and Cattle were in a Condition to preſerve themſelves in the Mountains of other Countries.

'Tis the common Opinion that Adam's Paradiſe was deſtroyed by the Flood. But then, 'tis pretty clear, that thoſe who aſſert Paradiſe lifted above the Water by the Cherubims who had the Cuſtody of it, have no good Reaſon for their Opinion. The holy Scripture does no where inform us that either Enoch or Elias were tranſlated into the terreſtrial Paradiſe, it being only ſaid, that God took Enoch: It can't therefore be ſolidly inferred that this delightful Seat is ſtill in being to entertain the Patriarchs.

Almoſt all Authors, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabick, and Coptick aſſure us, that there were Books written upon Arts and Sciences before the Deluge; that Adam was the firſt Author, as well as the firſt Man; that Seth and Enoch and the Deſcendants of Cain, wrote Books likewiſe; that Noah lodged thoſe that were good in the Ark, and that his Son Ham, very much given to Curioſities and Myſtery, hid thoſe there which treated of Magick.

☞ Mythology and profane Hiſtory mention two remarkable Cataclyſms. The Deluge in the Reign of Ogyges, laid Attica and Greece under Water, in the 2292d Year of the World, 1712 Years before the Incarnation, and 636 after the univerſal Deluge. The Deluge in the time of Deucalion happened in the 2540th Year of the World, 1460 before the Incarnation, 884 after Noah's Flood, and 248 after that of Ogyges. Some learned Authors have aſſerted with ſufficient Proof that the Ancients confounded Deucalion's Flood with that of Noah, of which they had ſome Knowledge either by Tradition, or by conſulting the holy Scriptures. * Kircher Arca Noê Lib. IId.

DEMAS of Theſſalonica in Macedonia turned Chriſtian, and at firſt appeared very zealous for propagating the Goſpel; He kept cloſe to the Apoſtle Saint Paul, was impriſoned with him and ſuffered a great deal. But at laſt Intereſt, Pride and Pleaſure got the aſcendant. He quitted Saint Paul, and went home. 'Tis ſaid that he afterwards fell into the Hereſies of Simon Magus, of Nicholas Phigellus and Hermogenes, and carried his Defection ſo far as to offer Incenſe to Idols. * 2 Tim. iv. 9. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

DEMER a River in the low Countries. It riſes near Bilſen to the Weſt of Maeſtrict, in the Country of Liége, where it waſhes Haſſelt; afterwards entring Spaniſh Brabant, it runs by Dieſt, Siechen, Arſchot, and Malines, and having received the Rivers Geete, the Dyle, the Senne, and the Neith, goes by the Name of Ruppell, and falls into the Scheld over againſt the Town of Rupplemond. * Maty, Diction.

* DEMETRIUS, the Name of ſeveral Impoſtors in Muſcovy.

The firſt made no Shew, and was nothing but a Phantom; Georgi Schacopski Keeper of the great Seal of Muſcovy, ſeeing all in Combuſtion after the Murder of his Maſter, and that Search was made after thoſe that were firm to this Prince, thought it beſt to retire and get off. He left Moſcow attended with two Polanders in Ruſſian Habits, and took the Road to Putiwol, a Town which always had been loyal to the Great Duke deceas'd: As he travelled along he ſpread a Report that the Czar Demetrius had made his Eſcape, and ſhewing one of the Polanders in his Company, led them to ſomewhat of a Belief that he was that Prince. His Bounty gave a Face of Probability to his Diſcourſe. At his coming to Putiwol, he aſſured the Burghers that Demetrius had got ſafe into Poland to ſolicit his Allies for Succours, and that he had ſent this George hither, to let them know he was living and in Circumſtances of Security. Upon this this Intelligence his loyal Subjects declared they were ready to ſacrifice their Lives and Fortunes for their Sovereign. Fleſhed with this early Succeſs, he ſent to the Tartars, and ordered them to rendezvous at Putiwol. The Coſſacks marched thither from all Quarters, and fourteen Caſtles declared for the pretended Demetrius. Iſhoma, a Ruſſian Nobleman of the firſt Rank, reinforced Schacopski with a conſiderable Body of Troops. The Great Duke Zuiski alarmed with this News, drew an Army together immediately, and marched to fight the Enemy, but he was routed at the firſt Shock and got off with Difficulty to Moſcow: Iſhoma purſued him, and blocked up the Town; but while this was doing, John Polutnich came up from Poland with a Reinforcement of 12000 Coſſacks, together with a Commiſſion from the counterfeit Demetrius, with Orders to Iſhoma to reſign the Command of the Army to him. This Nobleman reſenting the Affront put upon him, went over to Zuiski with 9000 Coſſacks, and aſſured him there was no ſuch Man as Demetrius at Putiwol, and 4000 more following his Example, Schacopski and Polutnich were forced to break up the Blockade, and retire into Thula, where Zuiski beſieged them. The Town for want of Proviſions was quickly reduced to the laſt Extremity. The Burghers being forced to feed upon the moſt diſguſting Diet, menaced theſe two Generals to make them ſurrender to Zuiski. Polutnich endeavoured to put them in heart, by proteſting he had ſeen a young Man in Poland about eight and twenty or thirty Years of Age, who went for the Great Duke of Muſcovy; That he could not ſay poſitively it was Demetrius, becauſe he had never ſeen him: But if they would furniſh him with a Perſon who knew this Prince, he would ſend him into Poland to examine the Truth, and that after his Return they might take what Reſolution they pleaſed; they conſented to this Propoſal; but the pretended Demetrius did not think it proper to ſhew himſelf. He was a young Poliſh Gentleman, who having recollected what they had put him upon, choſe rather to live privately in his own, than run the Hazard, which the Quality he had taken upon him would expoſe him to.

And now a ſecond Demetrius ſtarted up in his Place: Michavetski, a Poliſh Nobleman, produced this ſham Duke, and conveyed him to Putiwol, where he was received with all imaginable Regard. After having ſpent ſome time to draw his Troops together, he took the Field, where he was met by a Commiſſioner from the Burghers of Thula abovementioned. This Gentleman, who knew the true Demetrius, was ſurpriſed with the Confidence of the Counterfeit. The Impoſtor being apprehenſive the Commiſſioner would declare his Knowledge, kept him with him, and marched ſtrait to Thula; but the Opportunity was paſſed, the Town had juſt ſurrendred, and Zuiski contrary to his Promiſe, had hanged Fredrowitz, a Perſon of Quality and Worth, and loaded Schacopski and Polutnich with Irons, who died in the Priſon with Hunger and other hard Uſage. Zuiski being Maſter of Thula, the Coſſacks in the Garriſon took Service under him, and were detached for the Siege of Catuga, the main Shelter of thoſe who held for Demetrius. But as they were upon the Route, Zuiski's Soldiers being tampered with by thoſe who lately came over to them, broke out in a Mutiny. The Diſorder reached his Camp, his Troops ran off, throwing down their Arms and their Baggage, and the Coſſacks carried the Great Duke's Cannon and Proviſions in Triumph to Catuga. Demetrius reinforced with this Succour, and with a great many Poles and Muſcovites, marched up to the Enemy, killed them 8000 Men, and took their General Miſnoveski Priſoner. A great many Towns ſubmitted to him, and he received a Recruit of 8000 Coſſacks. The Duke of Wieſnowiski and many other Perſons of Quality, joined him with their Troops: Zuiski, who had drawn together a Body of 17000 undiſciplined Men, ventured to try his Fortune a ſecond time, which turned to no better Account than the firſt. In ſhort; he was routed, and had much ado to bring off 5000 Men into Boſcow where ſome few Days after they were forced to ſurrender and take Service in the conquering Army: all the Forts and Towns thereabouts opened their Gates to Demetrius: And now ſeeing himſelf Maſter of the Field, he made long marches to Moſcow, which had immediately declared for him had not 5000 of his Men deſerted and thrown themſelves into the Town. The Burghers offered a Capitulation, but the Enemy would hearken to no Conditions, unleſs they put Zuiski in Demetrius's Hands. In the mean time News being brought that Baſilius Zuiski, a Kinſman of the Great Duke, had raiſed an Army, and entrenched himſelf about a League from Moſcow; the Duke Roman-Reniski, a Polander, the Beſieger's General, drew out to force the Enemies Retrenchments, killed them a great many Men, and took Baſileus Zuiski Priſoner. The Great Duke rallying, the Debris of his Army came up again, and attacked Demetrius, but this Attempt proved very unfortunate; his Troops were broken and retired in Diſorder; and the Moſcovites weaken'd and diſcouraged by ſo many Loſſes, began to think of taking new Meaſures. To this purpoſe the Poliſh Ambaſſadors, the Palatine of Sendomir, and the Great Dutcheſs's Daughter, Widow to Demetrius Griska, were ſet at Liberty, upon Condition that they ſhould uſe their Intereſt with King Sigiſmond to recal his Troops. Demetrius receiving Advice of this matter, and being ſenſible of what Conſequence it was to have theſe Perſons in his Power, detached 2000 Horſe to intercept them, and had them brought into his Camp. At their firſt coming thither 'twas eaſy to perceive, how much they were ſurprized at the Sight of the Counterfeit Demetrius; and the Reports they afterwards made that he was none of the Great Dutcheſs's Husband, occaſioned ſome whiſpering Diſcontents, which the Counterfeit Demetrius took Care to ſmother. In the mean time the Palatine of Sendomir conſulted with his Friends whether his Daughter ſhould own Demetrius for her Husband; they were divided upon the Point: But Marina (that was this Princeſs's Name) fancying this Match would prove more lucky than the firſt, ſcattered all their Scruples, and reſolving to comply with the Juncture, and maintain her preſent Grandeur, met Demetrius as her Huſband before the whole Army; and taking him about the Waſte, diſcovered the ſtrongeſt Signs of Tenderneſs and Satisfaction; ſhe pretended her being indiſpoſed had hindred her Journey ten Days, which was the time ſince her coming into the Camp. This Turn faſtned abundance of People in Demetrius's Intereſt; and all Moſcovy, excepting the Provinces of Novogrod and Smolensko, declared for him; and without doubt he had governed the Country without Diſturbance, if Poland had ſupplied him with Recruits; and if King Sigiſmond taking Advantage of the Commotions in Moſcovy had not formed a Deſign of getting it for himſelf: Demetrius's Army therefore diminiſhed by the Deſertion of the Polanders, and his Troops grew ungovernable: And on the other ſide the Moſcovites, tir'd with Zuiski's Adminiſtration, reckoning all their Misfortunes to his Miſmanagement, threw him out of his Poſt and Character, and elected Ladiſlaus, the King of Poland's Son, for their Great Duke. Demetrius now retired to Catuga, which was always firm to him: And having received ſome Reinforcement was reſolved to take the Field: But before this Reſolution could be executed he was aſſaſſinated at an Entertainment. At the end of the Year 1610, he was diſpatched by the Tartars, in Revenge of the Death of their Prince Kaſimowski, whom he had drown'd. No body queſtion'd this Demetrius's being an Impoſtor, a great many People ſaid he was a Schoolmaſter at Socola a Town in White Ruſſia, from whence the Polanders had fetched him to carry on their Deſigns; and others averred he had been a Jew. His Son however, was elected Great Duke by the Burghers of Catuga. Duke Zarveki, General of the Coſſacks, declared for him, and prevailed with the Ruſſians to own him for their lawful Sovereign, upon Condition to aſſiſt them in expelling the Poles. 'Twas believed, and not without Reaſon, that this was a ſpurious Child, and Michael Federowich being elected Great Duke by the Moſcovites, bribed the Coſſacks at Catuga, who put Zerveki, the Great Dutcheſs Marina, and her reputed Son, into his Hands. This firſt was impaled, and the two other thrown into the River under the Ice and drowned.

This Event did not take off the Moſcovites Fancy for a Demetrius: And 'twas not long before a third took the Name and appeared. This Man who was a Writing Maſter got a Report ſpread that he made his Eſcape from Engleze, Moſcow, and Catuga. This new Demetrius was a bold enterprizing Fellow, and wanted neither Mettle nor Conduct. At firſt he got about 100

Ruſſians

Ruſſians together who had ſerved in the late Wars; and theſe being joined by a great many People of mean Rank, encreaſed his Party to a conſiderable Number. Upon this, he takes the Field, publiſhes a Manifeſto, exhorts his loyal Subjects to declare for him, and marches to Novogrod, where he was owned by the Populace. The Burghers of Jama and Iwanogrod followed this Example: When he found himſelf Maſter of theſe Places, he diſpatched an Envoy to the King of Sweden to requeſt his Aſſiſtance againſt Federowich's Uſurpation. The King was ſurprized at this Embaſſy: He wondred how this Demetrius grew Immortal, and appeared alive again after he had been killed over and over. However, he thought it adviſable to ſend a Swediſh Gentleman to Iwanogrod, to learn who this Demetrius was, and to promiſe him Aſſiſtance in caſe it was the ſame Perſon, who was crowned at Moſcow in 1605. But this Impoſtor being conſcious the Swediſh Envoy knew the Perſon counterfeited by him, pretended an Indiſpoſition, and ſent ſome of his Council to treat with him. But this Trick would not do, for the Swede ſent him word he had private Inſtructions, which he could not communicate to any but himſelf; he was put off from Day to Day: And theſe Delays being ſufficient Evidence of foul Play, the Gentleman returned to Sweden. As for the Impoſtor, he went on with his Buſineſs, advanced to Pleſcow and ſummoned the Town. This conſiderable Place was ready to ſurrender when Federowich's Army appearing the new Demetrius run off, and left the Great Duke his Canon and Baggage. This Prince's Officers, imagining the Mob of Demetrius's Party had been quite ſcattered, drew off the Army: But they were no ſooner returned, but the Burghers of Pleſcow recalled Demetrius and recognized him for their Sovereign. But his Miſmanagement made this Advantage ſignify little. For by Rapes and Debauching of Women, he provoked his Party to that Degree that they expelled him the Town. In ſhort, the Muſcovites and Coſſacks left him, and at laſt he was apprehended, and carried, bound Hand and Foot, to the Great Duke, who ordered him to be hanged upon an Oak at one of the Gates of Moſcow. * De Recoles, les Impoſteurs inſignes. Relation de la Ruſſie. Ruſſiæ Deſcriptio Topographica.

DEMETRIOFF a Town in Muſcovy within the Province of Ouſtioug, upon the Dwina. 'Tis plainly the ſame with that called Diomitre Navoloſt in the Maps. 'Tis about eighteen Leagues above the Town Ouſtioug. It has its Name from Demetrius the Great Duke of Muſcovy who built it. * Sanſon. Baudran. Maty, Diction.

DEMMIN, a German Town in hither Pomerania upon the River Peene in the Dutchy of Stetin, on the Frontiers of the Dutchy of Mecklenbourg. 'Tis a Place of conſiderable Strength, and was yielded to the King of Sweden by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. 'Twas taken in 1676 by the Elector of Brandenbourgh, who returned it the Swedes in 1679, at the Inſtance of the French King, and in Execution of the Treaty concluded at St. Germains en Laye near Paris. It ſtands ſix German Miles from Stralſund to the South.

* DEMOSTHENES, a famous Orator. Tully ſpeaks frequently of him with Admiration. But in his Book de Oratore, he drops ſomething by Way of Abatement. We have ſo nice and ſqueamiſh a Taſte, ſays he, that Demoſthenes does not always pleaſe us. Uſque adeo difficiles & moroſi ſumus, ut nobis non ſatisfaciat ipſe Demoſthenes, qui quanquam unus eminet inter omnes in omni genere dicendi, tamen non ſemper implet aures meas. Juvenal obſerves that Elocution was the Death of the two greateſt Orators in the World, Tully and Demoſthenes. As to a Compariſon between them, Quinctilian makes no Scruple to pronounce Tully every jot as conſiderable as the other. After Demoſthenes's Death the Athenians erected him a braſs Statue with this Inſcription:

Εἰ τῇ ἴσῃ γνώμῃ ῥώμην, Δημόσθενες, εἶχες.
Οὐ ποτ' ἂν Ἑλλήνων ἦρξεν Ἄρης Μακέδων.

In Latin thus.

Si tibi par menti robur, vir magne, fuiſſet,
Græcia non Macedæ ſuccubuiſſet hero.

There is now at Athens a little marble Tower ſupported by ſix marble Pillars, called Demoſthenes's Lanthorn, where the Capuchins are lodged. 'Tis a common Tradition, that this Orator ſhut himſelf up here ſome time, having firſt ſhaved himſelf only on one Side, that being thus in no Condition to appear publickly, he might apply himſelf wholly to his Study. But 'tis more likely, this Tower was built, in Honour of ſome Conqueſt at the Olympick Games. This is M. Spon's Conjecture, which he draws from ſome Figures cut upon it. There is an exact Deſcription of this Tower, in this Gentleman's Voyage de la Grece Part 2d. pag. 172. * Plutarch, in Vit. Demoſth. Juvenal, Sat. X.

DENDERMOND, Dermonde, and Tendermond; a Town in the low Countries within Imperial Flanders, at the Mouth of the Dender where it falls into the Scheld, between Antwerp and Ghent, and about five Leagues from each. 'Tis a ſtrong Place, and Capital of a large Dependency. * Maty, Diction.

DENIA a Town upon the Borders of the Kingdom of Valencia in Spain: It ſtands between the Town Valencia and Alicant; fifteen Leagues from the firſt, and twelve from the latter, and was formerly an Epiſcopal See. There is a ſmall Iſland of the ſame Name near Denia called Planaſia by the Antients. * Baudrant.

* DENYS, or Dionyſius the Areopagite, that is to ſay, one of the Judges of the Areopagus or Court of Juſtice at Athens. After his Converſion by St. Paul, as we learn from the Acts of the Apoſtles, he was made Biſhop of Athens, and died a Martyr in this Town.

The Books de Hierarchia, which have paſſed a great while under Dionyſius the Areopagite's Name, are now plainly proved none of his. 'Tis certain theſe Books, unmentioned by early Antiquity, were firſt cited by the Severian Hereticks at a Conference with the Catholick Biſhops at Conſtantinople in the Emperor Juſtinian's Palace, A. D. 532. Neither Euſebius nor St. Jerom take any Notice of theſe Books, and all the Ancients who ſpeak of Dionyſius the Areopagite, as Dionyſius the Biſhop of Corinth, St. Ambroſe, St. Chryſoſtome, and St. Auguſtin, &c. are wholly ſilent about them; farther, I ſhall give the Reader part of the Catholicks Anſwer to the Severians. How do you prove, ſay they, the Authentickneſs of the Authorities you pretend drawn from Dionyſius the Areopagite? If theſe Teſtimonies had belonged to him, they would not have been unknown to Cyril of happy Memory? But why ſhould we mention none but St. Cyril? If St. Athanaſius had believed theſe Books written by this Dionyſius, would he not have quoted them at the Council of Nice, to prove the Conſubſtantiality of the Trinity againſt the Blaſphemies of Arius? But ſince none of theſe Fathers have quoted him, which Way can you prove them the Productions of Dionyſius? A ſecond Argument to prove the Books de Hierarchia ſpurious, is drawn from the Style and Method altogether foreign from the Manner of the firſt and ſecond Centuries, and that 'tis probable, this Work was the Compoſition of ſome florid Philoſopher. 'Tis obſerved farther, that this Author in his Divinis Nominibus cites St. Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Romans written by this Biſhop a little before his Martyrdom; now, as it happens, Dionyſius the Areopagite was dead when St. Ignatius wrote this Epiſtle. The ſame Author affirms that he was preſent at the Death of the bleſſed Virgin: This is another unlucky Paſſage; for when the bleſſed Virgin died, Dionyſius was not converted: For 'tis generally believed ſhe died in the fifteenth Year after our Saviour's Paſſion; and that St. Paul who made a Proſelyte of Dionyſius, did not come to Athens 'till ſeventeen Years after our bleſſed Saviour's Death. There is farther Proof that the Author of the Books reckoned to Denys the Areopagite, wrote after the fourth Century. 1st, Becauſe he mentions the Myſtery of the Trinity and Incarnation, in Terms not made uſe of 'till after that Period. For Inſtance that of Hypoſtaſis. 2dly, In his Book de Hierarchia Celeſti, he has this Paſſage. We affirm, ſays he, upon this Point what our Biſhops have taught us from antient Tradition: Theſe Words antient Tradition, are ſufficient Evidence that the Author is none of Dionyſius the Areopagite. Farther, he cites Clemens Alexandrinus by the Name of Clement the Philoſopher. And here the Paſſage quoted is taken from the eighth Book of the Stromata, from whence 'tis plain he means the ſame Clement that flouriſhed in the third Century. There are ſeveral other Arguments to prove that the Books attributed to Dionyſius the Areopagite were counterfeited in the fifth Century: However, 'Tis generally owned that from the Beginning of the ſixth Century they grew up into Credit and Authority. For the Purpoſe: St. Ephraim cites them in his Defence of the Council of Chalcedon. The Monk Jobius, Andreas Cæſarienſis, Anaſtaſius Sinaita, Suidas, Nicephorus, and ſeveral other Greeks make honourable mention of them: Laſtly, Johannes Scythopolitanus, Maximus, and Pachymeres wrote Commentaries upon this Author. Amongſt the Latins Gregory the Great cites him with Commendation; Johannes Scotus Erigena tranſlated him into Latin; and Anaſtaſius Bibliothecarius ſent this Verſion to Charles the Bald King of France, with the Addition of a Preface and Notes. All the Tracts reckoned to Dionyſius the Areopagite make two Volumes Greek and Latin, collected by P. Balthaſar Corde. They were printed at Antwerp 1634. The firſt takes in the Prefaces of Maximus and Georgius Pachymeres; the Book de Hierarchia Celeſti in fifteen Chapters; that de Hierarchia Eccleſiaſtica in ſeven, and that de Nominibus divinis in 13 Chapters: The ſecond Volume furniſhes his myſtique Theology in five Chapters; and ten Epiſtles, four of which are directed to Caius a Monk, the other to Dorotheus, to Soſipater, to Polycarp Biſhop of Smyrna, to Demophilus, a Monk, to Biſhop Titus, St. Paul's Diſciple, and to St. John the Evangeliſt. * Sirmond. Launoy, de duobus Dionyſiis. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library.

* DENYS, or Dionyſius, Biſhop of Corinth, lived in the 2d Century, he flouriſhed in the Reign of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, and to the Beginning of that of Commodus; Euſebius mentions ſeveral of his Epiſtles, and amongſt the reſt thoſe written to the Churches of Lacedemon, Nicomedia, Pontus, Crete and Rome; and a Letter written to his Siſter Chriſtophora. Cedrenus and Glycas pretend he ſuffered Martyrdom, and an Office in the Service of the Greek Church abetts their Sentiment. But neither Euſebius, nor St. Jerom, mention his Martyrdom: The Roman Martyrology gives him only the Honour of a Confeſſor. There are ſeveral remarkable Paſſages, in this Dionyſius's Letters reported by Euſebius. Here we are informed, that St. Peter ſuffered Martyrdom at Rome; that Denys the Areopagite was Biſhop of Athens, and that the Church of Rome gave her Aſſiſtance to other Churches, &c. There are likewiſe very ſerviceable Inſtructions relating to Diſcipline and Morality. For the Purpoſe: In his Letter to the Gnoſſians, he adviſed Pynitus, Biſhop of that Church, not to put the Clergy under any particular Reſtraints relating to Marriage. In his Letter to the Romans he mentions St. Clement's Epiſtle to the Corinthians; and takes Notice that they read it on Sundays in his Church. He likewiſe takes Notice that the Hereticks had interpolated and maimed ſome of his Letters. The Greeks keep his Feaſt upon the 29th of November, and the Latins upon the 8th of April. * Martyrolog. Roman. Hieron. de ſcript. Eccleſ. Cap. 27. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. IV. Cap. 23. Baron Annal. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library.

* DENYS, or Dionyſius, Biſhop of Alexandria, deſcended from a conſiderable Family, and bred a Pagan: He was converted by reading St. Paul's Epiſtles. And in the Year 248 ſucceeded Heraclas in the See of Alexandria. And was likewiſe his Succeſſor in the Catechiſt's Employment ſoon after his Election. He gave remarkable Proof of his Courage and charitable Diſpoſition: The Juncture afforded great Opportunities for exerting theſe good Qualities. The Chriſtians being then perſecuted by the Emperors Philip and Decius; in the Year 250 he was apprehended and conveyed to the Frontiers of Ægypt; but making his Eſcape from his Perſecutors, he withdrew to a Deſert in Lybia, from whence he wrote Letters to his Dioceſs to ſupport the People under the Calamity. At his Return home the next Year he endeavoured to cloſe the Novatian Schiſm againſt Cornelius. In the Year 253 he wrote to Pope Stephen upon the Subject of rebaptizing thoſe who had been baptized by Hereticks. After the Death of Stephen, which happened in the Year 257, he wrote upon the ſame Argument to Sixtus his Succeſſor, deſiring him to conſider the Conſequence of this Diſpute, and not to manage it with the ſame Heat it had been carried on by his Predeceſſor. He likewiſe wrote to Dionyſius and Philemon, Prieſts of the Church of Rome, and ſent a ſecond Letter to Sixtus, where he mentions a Heretick which he durſt not baptize, though formerly only ſprinkled, or baptized with a profane Form: His Reaſon was, becauſe this Perſon had been long admitted to full Communion, and received the Euchariſtick Elements: During the Perſecution under the Emperor Valerian, A. D. 257 or 258, the Governor Emilian forbid him keeping any Church Aſſemblies, and upon his Refuſal to obey this Order, he was baniſhed with his Prieſts to a Village near Cephro in Lybia: From hence he wrote ſeveral Paſtoral Letters: Soon after his coming back to Alexandria the Mob roſe and forced him to quit the Town. This Misfortune was quickly followed by a Mortality, which occaſioned his conſolatory Letters to thoſe under his Care. About this time he wrote againſt Nepos an Ægyptian Biſhop, who interpreting the Promiſes of Happineſs mentioned in the new Teſtament, in too literal and carnal a Senſe, (at leaſt in Dionyſius's his Opinion) maintained a thouſand Years Reign of our Saviour upon Earth, in a Book entitled, A Confutation of the Allegoriſts. Dionyſius having this Book put into his Hands at Arſinoe confuted it, as Euſebius thinks, in a Conference; and afterwards wrote a Book upon the Argument, entitled, De Promiſſionibus Divinis. In which he ſpeaks doubtfully of the canonical Authority of the Revelations, and aſſigns it to one John, different from St. John the Evangeliſt. Soon after he attacked Sabellius's Doctrine, who deſtroyed the Hypoſtaſes of the holy Trinity, and made them only three Names for the ſame Perſon. This Hereſy ſpreading in Pentapolis, he wrote three Letters to confute it. But ſometimes made uſe of Terms which ſeem to favour the oppoſite Heterodoxy. Some Catholicks complaining of this Miſmanagement, Dionyſius wrote a Tract in his Juſtification: 'Tis called, A Refutation and Apology. St. Athanaſius cites ſeveral Paſſages from this Diſcourſe, where he proves clearly againſt the Arians, who make uſe of this Biſhop's Authority, that his Notion of the Trinity was perfectly conformable to the Deciſion of the Council of Nice, notwithſtanding he does not approve the uſing of the Word Conſubſtantial: St. Baſil in his Epiſtles charges him with laying the Foundation of the Arian Hereſy, though he grants this was not done with any ill Deſign, but only by his bending too much to the contrary Extremity from Sabellius. In the Year 264, he was invited to the Synod at Antioch convened againſt Paulus Samoſatenus; but his Age not giving him Leave to take this Journey, he wrote an excellent Letter to the Biſhops aſſembled, in which he confutes Paulus's Tenents. St. Jerom commends his Performance. Dionyſius having governed the Church of Alexandria ſeventeen Years, departed this Life A. D. 267. The Epiſtle againſt Paulus Samoſatenus publiſhed by Turrianus, and reckoned to Dionyſius Alexandrinus, is a ſpurious Piece. We have a great many Pieces of this Biſhop's Letters in Euſebius, and one entire, in Zonaras, Balſamon, and in the Councils. Anaſtaſius of Nice in handling a Queſtion upon the 9th of Geneſis, cites a Paſſage out of a Book of Dionyſius Alexandrinus againſt Origen: But 'tis not at all probable this Diſcourſe ſhould belong to Dionyſius Alexandrinus, who was Origen's Scholar, and ſo far from being his Adverſary, that he defended him. This Author's Style is raiſed and ornamented; his Deſcriptions are entertaining, and his Exhortations pathetick: In his polemick Diſcourſes he bears hard upon thoſe he undertakes: He was well skilled in the doctrinal and moral Parts of Religion, and was thoroughly acquainted with the Diſcipline. His Judgment was generally good, and he wrote commonly with Temper and Reſerve. In ſhort, the Loſs of his Works is extreamly to be regretted. And here the Reader may take Notice that this Dionyſius of Alexandria, is not the ſame with him, who wrote Commentaries upon Dionyſius the Areopagite. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. VI. & VII. Cap. 9. Athanaſ. Baſil, Lib. de Spiritu Sancto, Cap 29. ad Amphiloc. & Ep. 41. Hieron, in Catal. Cap. 69. & Comment. in Iſaiah. Lib. IId, contra Ruffin. & Epiſt. ad Pamach. Gennadius. Cap. 5. de Eecleſ. Dogm. Valeſius Annot. in Hiſt. Euſeb. M. du Pin. New Eccleſ. Library Cent. IIId.

* DENYS, or Dionyſius Pope, when only a Prieſt wrote a Letter to Dionyſius Alexandrinus concerning the Baptiſm of Hereticks. He ſucceeded Sixtus, who ſuffered Martyrdom Auguſt the 6th, A. D. 258. The See of Rome, as 'tis generally ſuppoſed, was vacant near a Year, and that Dionyſius's Pontificate, began no ſooner than the 22d of July 259. He ſat ten Years and ſix Months, and died A. D. 269 or 270. He held a Synod at Rome A. D. 261, where Sabellius's Hereſy was condemned. He wrote a Synodical Letter to Dionyſius Alexandrinus, part of which is reported by St. Athanaſius. St. Baſil mentions another Letter of this Pope's written to the Church of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, which had been harraſſed by the Incurſions of barbarous Nations; and here St. Baſil takes Notice of the Contributions Dionyſius had raiſed, to ranſom the Cappadocian Chriſtians in the Enemy's Hands. 'Tis a Miſtake to make him the Author of ſome Tracts againſt Sabellius and Paulus Samoſatenus, which without doubt belonged to another Dionyſius. The Letter to Urban, and another to Severus, which go under his Name, can't be reckoned to this Pope with any Certainty. The Pontifical of Damaſus reports that at two Ordinations in December, he made twelve Prieſts, ſix Deacons, and ſeven Biſhops; amongſt which Zama the firſt Biſhop of Bologna, was one: But this Authority is too ſlender to be relied on. This Pope was ſucceeded by Felix the firſt. * Baſil. Epiſt. CCXX. Athanaſ. Adverſ. Arian. & de ſent. Dion adverſ. Arian. Baron. Annal. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. III.

* DENYS, or Dionyſius called Exiguus, from his ſhort Stature, was a Monk and an Abbot, and flouriſh'd to the Year 540. He underſtood Greek and Latin very well, and had taken a great deal of Pains to good purpoſe in ſtudying the Scripture. At the Inſtance of Stephen Biſhop of Salona, he drew up a Collection of the Canons, comprehending (beſides thoſe which were in the Code of the univerſal Church) the firſt fifty of thoſe called the Apoſtles Canons, thoſe of the Council of Sardica, and a hundred and thirty eight Canons of the Councils of Africk. This Collection has been receiv'd by the Church of Rome, according to Caſſiodorus; and by the Gallican and other Weſtern Churches, as Hincmar informs us: 'Twas printed by Juſtellus, A. D. 1628, with St. Cyril's and the Council of Alexandria's Letter againſt Neſtorius, tranſlated into Latin by Dionyſius Exiguus. His next Performance was a Collection of the Pope's Decretals: He begins with thoſe of Siricius, and ends with Anaſtaſius. There was afterwards the Decretals of Hillary, of Simplicius, Felix, and other Popes down to St. Gregory the Great. Juſtellus has inſerted this ſecond Collection in his Bibliotheca Juris Canonici. He likewiſe wrote two Letters upon the Feſtival of Eaſter, A. D. 525 and 526, publiſhed by Petavius and Bucherius; to which may be added his Cycle of 95 Years. Mabillon likewiſe publiſhed a Letter of this Author's written to Eugippius, concerning the Tranſlation he made of St. Gregory Nyſſen's Book Of Man's Creation.

Caſſiodorus relates that he underſtood Greek and Latin ſo perfectly well, that he could tranſlate from either Language extempore; and being thus well furniſh'd, 'tis moſt likely his Verſions from the Greek are well done. * Caſſiodorus, cap. 25. Div. Inſt. Bede, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. V. cap. 22. & de Rat. Temp. cap. 25. Marianus Scotus, A. C. 532. Baronius, A. C. 527. N. 67. & deinc. Petav. Lib. VI. de Doct. Temp. cap. 5. & deinc. Riccioli, Chron. Reform. T. I. Lib. I. cap. 27. Lib. VIII. cap. 1. Mabillon, p. 2. Analect. p. 1.

DENYS, or Dionyſius, wrote Geography in Greek Verſe: Voſſius ſays, the Emperor Auguſtus ſent him to travel through the Eaſtern Provinces, and to write a Journal of the Condition of thoſe Countries: That Caius Cæſar, who was to be ſent thither, might make uſe of it. By this Account he muſt live to Tiberius's Reign, that is, to the beginning of the firſt Century. This Dionyſius was a Burgher of Carax, called likewiſe Alexandria and Antioch upon the Confines of Arabia the Happy. Pliny makes him the laſt Geographer. Scaliger and Salmaſius aſſert, and not without Probability, that this Geographical Performance belongs to one Dionyſius who lived as low as the Reign of Septimius Severus, or at leaſt under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. Suidas aſſigns the Geographical Deſcriptions of the World to three different Dionyſius's, one of Corinth, another of Miletum, and a third of Rhodes or Samos. * Voſſius, de Poet. Græc. cap. 9. Salmaſ. in Solin. Scaliger, in Euſeb. Chronic. Suidas.

DES CHAMPS, (Stephen) was born at Bourges, A. D. 1613, and entred himſelf a Jeſuit at ſeventeen Years of Age. At firſt he ſtudied the Belles Lettres, and made ſuch a Proficiency, that Cardinal Richelieu had a Latin Tragedy of his making acted in his Palace. He was firſt Philoſophy Lecturer in the College of Paris, and afterwards being promoted to the Divinity Chair, the Prince of Conti Armand de Bourbon, whom the Prince of Conde his Father deſigned for a Churchman, was one of his Audience. This young Prince, not then ſeventeen Years of Age, maintain'd a Theſis at the Sorbon, notwithſtanding he had ſtudied with the Jeſuits. This Academical Exerciſe was performed January the 10th 1646. This Prince, though he changed his Opinion upon the Subject of Grace, ſtill continued his former Eſteem for the Profeſſor his Maſter. And of this the Letters which paſſed between them upon this Head A. D. 1664, are ſufficient Evidence. Father des Champs's firſt Latin Tract, was entitled, De Libero Arbitrio; 'twas publiſhed A. D. 1646, under the Name of Antoninus Richardus. Some few Years after 'twas reprinted with the Addition of the Prince of Conte's Theſes: This Performance in 1648, was ſeconded with a Latin Anſwer to the Theriacum, written by Libert Froidmont, Dean and Profeſſor at Louvain, and publiſhed under the Name of Vincentius Lenis, againſt Ricardus's Liberum Arbitrium, and a French Book printed in 1651, with the Title of Le Secret du Janſeniſme decouvert. Theſe three Tracts were a ſort of Preliminary Skirmiſhes to his Book De Hæreſi Janſeniana, dedicated to Pope Innocent X. A. D. 1654. He likewiſe wrote two little Diſcourſes, one A. D. 1659, entitled, Queſtion de Fait; where he diſcuſſes the Queſtion whether the Jeſuits were the only Perſons who held the Doctrine of Probability. The other Printed in 1682, and entitled, Sentiments de St. Auguſtin ſur la Grace. Oppoſés à ceux de Janſenius. Father des Champs was much regarded, roſe up to the higheſt Poſts in his Order, and was thrice Provincial. His Behaviour was both religious and genteel, which made Perſons of the firſt Quality have a great Value for him. The Prince of Conde had ſuch an Eſteem for him, that in the laſt Years of his Life he gave him the Direction of his Conſcience. To conclude; Pere des Champs being diſabled with Age, retired to la Fleche, and died July 1701, eighty eight Years of Age.

DES GABETZ, extracted from a Gentleman's Family at Dugni in the Dioceſs of Verdune, entred himſelf into the Congregation of St. Vannes and St. Hidulphus, and was profeſſed in the Abbey of Haut-Viller in the Dioceſs of Rheims, A. D. 1636. He was a very exemplary Perſon, lived up to the Rules of the Inſtitution, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his learned Performances. Des Cartes's Philoſophy, which made a great Noiſe at that time, and the New Experiments, were his chief Study: He made an Acquaintance with the moſt eminent Philoſophers at Paris, whither his Society had ſent him as their Agent or Repreſentative. There was nothing conſiderable either in Philoſophy, Divinity, or Controverſy, without being thoroughly examined by him. He invented the Tranſfuſion of the Blood, and diſcovered it to one of his Friends at Paris: But the Buſineſs being then neglected, ſome Years after the Engliſh publiſhed it as a Diſcovery of their own. Pere Des Gabets wrote a great deal upon the Holy Euchariſt, and ſeems ſomewhat buſy in explaining this Myſtery by the Principles of the new Philoſophy: His Superiors being apprehenſive he might give a Blow to the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, he explained his Sentiments to them, and gave them the Satisfaction of his reſigning to the receiv'd Belief. He died at Breuil near Commercy in March 1678. He wrote a great many Tracts, of which but few of them are printed; the reſt being lodged in the Abby of St. Michael in Lorrain. The Reader ſhall have ſome few of them, viz. Remarques ſur l'Art de Penſer. Critique de la Critique de la Recherche de la verité. Guide de la Raiſon Naturelle. Lettre non Imprimée de M. Deſcartes au Pere Melan Jeſuite. Lettre à M. Clerſelier touchant les nouveaux raiſonnemens pour les atômes & le vuide, contenus dans le Livre du Diſcernemens du Corps & de l'Ame. Remarques ſur les Eclairciſſemens du Pere Poiſſon touchant le Mechanique & la Muſique de M. Deſcartes. Réponſe du Pere Des Gabets au R. P. Poiſſon. Lettre au R. P. Malbranche par le Pere Des Gabets. Principe fondamental. Indefectibilité des Creatures. Indefectibilité de Mouvement.

Mouvement. Réponſe à la Lettre d'un Philoſophe à un Carteſien par D. Robert des Gabets. (La Lettre eſt du P. Rapin Jeſuite, & la Réponſe eſt de D. Robert) De l'Union de l'Ame & du Corps. Les fondemens de la Philoſophie & de la Mathematique Chrétienne. Lettre écrite touchant les defauts de la Methode de M. Deſcartes. Les defauts de la Methode de M. Deſcartes Supplement de la Philoſophie de M. Deſcartes. Lettres aux Religieux de la Congregation de Saint Vannes & de Saint Hidulph, pour les exhorter à l'étude. Lettre d'un Carteſien à un des ſes amis touchant le premier Supplement à la Philoſophie de M. Deſcartes. * Memoirs du Tems.

DESIGNATORES were a ſort of petty Maſters of the Ceremonies amongſt the Romans, who aſſigned every body their Place in the Theatres. They had Officers of this kind at all their ſolemn Spectacles for directing Proceſſions, and Precedency. The Shews at Funerals for Perſons of Quality were likewiſe marſhalled by theſe ſort of Officers. The Deſignator was one of the Goddeſs Libitina's principal Servants: when he went to raiſe the Corpſe he was attended with a Train of Funeral Officers, which Seneca calls Libitinarios, ſubdivided into Pollinctores, Veſpillones, Uſtores, Sandapilarii, Præficæ, &c. All theſe People habited in black, walked before this Deſignator as Mace Bearers do before Magiſtrates. * Roſin. Antiq. Rom. Dacier, ſur Horace, Lib. I. Epiſt. 7. Deſignatorem decorat Lictoribus Aſtris, the third Edit. à Paris 1710.

DESMARES (Touſſaint) was born at Vire in Lower Normandy at the end of the ſixteenth Century. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his preaching, and by the Share he had in the Diſpute between the Janſeniſts and the Jeſuits; being one of the chief of Janſenius's Party. He was one of the Deputies or Commiſſioners ſent to Rome to defend this Biſhop's Doctrine, which was in Danger of being cenſured by Pope Innocent X. He had the Honour to make an eloquent Harangue before this Pope; the Buſineſs of the Speech was to ſhew, that Efficacious Grace, which gives the Power to Will and to Do, is neceſſary to the Production of every good Action: And all other Grace ſhort of this is Pelagian Grace, and not the Grace of the Goſpel. Notwithſtanding he ſpoke an Hour and a half, he wanted time to finiſh what he had prepared upon this laſt Point: For Night coming on prevented his reading all his Quotations, and obliged the Pope to put an end to the Seſſion. He had his firſt Education at Caen, and was admitted very young into the new Congregation of the Oratory at Paris; where Pere de Berulle, afterwards Cardinal, took particular Care for his Improvement. He made the Scripture, St. Auguſtin, and Thomas Aquinas his main Study. His Zeal for Janſenius's Doctrine gave him a great deal of Trouble, ſeveral Monks preached publickly againſt him, and Father Cattillon a Jeſuit and a celebrated Preacher was forbid the Pulpit for intemperately declaiming againſt Deſmares. However, his Enemies following their Blow, made ſuch an Intereſt againſt him, that an Order of Court was ſent to apprehend him, and carry him to the Baſtile. But he made his Eſcape, and lived retired at a Farmer's Houſe, 'till a Diſpatch under the Signet was ſent to baniſh him. But neither this had any Effect becauſe 'twas not deliver'd to him. He lived privately, and gave no Offence the Remainder of his Life. He wrote a Sum of Divinity drawn wholly from St. Auguſtin's Works; but this lies probably unprinted. The Harangue he made at Rome before the Pope is inſerted in Saint Amour's Journal. He wrote ſeveral other Tracts, which are publiſhed, but not with his Name. The Duke and Dutcheſs of Liencourt gave him Shelter and Support, during all his Traverſes of Fortune, and when he died had him buried in their own Vault. * Hiſtoire des Cinq Propoſitions de Janſenius. Journal de St. Amour. Memoirs du Tems.

DESULTORES Μεταβάται. So thoſe were anciently called who leapt from one Horſe to another, with extraordinary Dexterity. This Exerciſe was firſt practiſed by barbarous Nations, who uſed to change their Horſes in the Field. 'Twas commonly done among the Indians, Scythians, and Numidians. The Cuſtom ſpread from them to the Romans at their Races in the Circus, where there were not only Chariot Racing, but theſe Deſultores run a Match with a ſingle Horſe, which they would quit in a Moment, and mount another freſh one. Hygynus makes a Deſcription of this Dexterity, and ſo does Iſidore Hiſpalenſis: The Sarmatæ were great Maſters at this Exerciſe, and the Huſſars have ſtill a Touch of it. * Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. XXII. Herodot. Lib. VII. Strabo. Livy, Lib. XXIII. cap. 29. Varro, de Re Ruſtica, Lib. II. cap. 7. Cicero, Orat. pro Muræna, &c.

DEVANO, a Town in the Iſle of Niphon belonging to Japan. This Town, Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, ſtands in the Weſtern Quarter of the Country of Ochio. * Maty, Diction.

DEUCINGIUS (Anthony) of Meurs, was Phyſick Profeſſor at Groningen: He was a great Maſter in the Arabick, Perſian, and Turkiſh Languages, as appears by his Notes on Erpenius's Arabick Grammar. He likewiſe tranſlated the Pentateuch from Hebrew into Latin, and publiſhed the following Books. Geneſis Microcoſmi: Univerſale Naturæ Theatrum: A Tract De Motu Cordis & Sanguinis. Idea de Fabrica Corporis Humani. And in 1660, his Faſciculus 14 Selectarum Diſſertationum was printed. * See the Author of the Lives of the Profeſſors of Groningen.

* DEUTERONOMY, the fifth Book of Moſes, called in Hebrew Ellé Hhabdebarim, becauſe it begins with thoſe Words in the Original. The Rabbins ſome time call it Miſna, that is to ſay, a Repitition of the Law. The Greek Name Deuteronomy ſignifies a ſecond Law; becauſe it contains an abridged Repitition of the three Books which go before it. Beſides this, it takes in the principal Circumſtances of what happened to the Iſraelites in the Deſert, recapitulated by Moſes in the firſt Chapters; and likewiſe the Hiſtory of Occurences from the beginning of the eleventh Month of the fortieth Year from their coming out of Ægypt, to the ſeventh Day of the twelfth Month. Some ſceptical Writers have queſtioned Moſes being the Author of this Book; becauſe 'tis ſaid in the beginning of Deuteronomy, Theſe are the Words which Moſes ſpake unto all Iſrael on the other ſide Jordan. This the Objectors pretend could not be ſaid by Moſes; becauſe he never was on the other ſide Jordan. To this 'tis anſwered, that the Original admits of a double Conſtruction, and may be rendred (as it is in the Engliſh Tranſlation) on this ſide, as well as beyond Jordan. And that the Word which the Objectors tranſlate beyond, muſt elſewhere neceſſarily ſignify on this ſide. For Inſtance: Numbers, Chap. xxxii. ℣ 32. Where the Gadites and Reubenites promiſe, that they would paſs over armed before the Lord, into the Land of Canaan, that the Poſſeſſion and Inheritance on this ſide Jordan might be theirs: Here the Word on this ſide is the ſame in the Original with that in the Place objected. And ſo it is Numb. Chap. xxxv. ℣. 14. Ye ſhall give three Cities on this ſide Jordan, and three Cities ſhall ye give in the Land of Canaan, which ſhall be the Cities of Refuge. And again, Deut. Chap. iii. ℣. 8. And we took at that time, out of the Hand of the two Kings of the Amorites, the Land that was on this ſide Jordan. Indeed there was no other Word in the Hebrew to expreſs, on this ſide, but this Particle Beheber, which ſignifies alſo, beyond. This Argument, if need was, might be farther reinforced, from 1 Sam. Chap. xiv. ℣. 40. and 1 King. Chap. iv. ℣. 24. in which laſt Place the original Word muſt be rendred on this ſide: becauſe if it was tranſlated beyond, the Propoſition would not be true. As for the Seventy's tranſlating Beheber, by the Word πέρων, beyond, there is nothing ſhocking in This: Becauſe the Country in which the Law was given lay on the other ſide of the River, with reſpect to Canaan or Judea, which then was, and had been for a long time, the Country of the People whoſe Hiſtory they were tranſlating, and that at the time they made their Tranſlation. Joſephus ſpeaking to this Particular, expreſſes himſelf by ἐπὶ, near to, or upon Jordan, oppoſing it preſently after to πέρων, or beyond Jordan. Another Objection is formed from Deuteronomy, Chap. xxxi. ℣. 9. And Moſes wrote this Law, and delivered it unto the Prieſts the Sons of Levi. From hence 'tis inferred that Moſes could not be writing the Law, and at the ſame time own it already written and delivered to the Prieſts; and that therefore the Book of the Law was afterwards written by ſomebody elſe.

To this the Anſwer is obvious, that by the Law in this Place, is meant the Deuteronomy, or ſecond Law, which ends at the 29th Chapter of this Book; And that this had been delivered by Moſes to the Prieſts, and made part of the Pentateuch, before the writing this latter part of the Book of Deuteronomy, in which Moſes tells us he had delivered it to the Prieſts.

To proceed: There is another Objection raiſed from Deuteronomy, Chap. iii. ℣. 11. The Words are, For only Og King of Baſan remained, of the Remnant of the Giants; behold the Bedſtead was a Bedſtead of Iron. Is it not in Rabbath of the Children of Ammon? Nine Cubits was the Length thereof; and four Cubits was the Breadth thereof, after the Cubit of a Man: From this Text 'tis pretended the Pentateuch is not ſo old as Moſes: For ſay the Objectors, what Neceſſity had Moſes to ſend the Iſraelites to Rabbath of the Ammonites, for Proof of Og's gygantick Stature, when they had an Opportunity of viewing his Perſon in the Battel, and might ſee him lie dead in the Field? Beſides, they repreſent it ſomewhat ſtrange that this famous Bed ſhould be removed ſo eaſily to a City of the Ammonites, and not be kept in the Country of Baſan.

To diſentangle this ſeeming Difficulty we are to obſerve, that many of the Iſraelites, conſidering their great Numbers, the Women, the Children, the Sick and the abſent, might either have neglected, or wanted the Opportunity of ſeeing this King alive or dead in the Place of Action: But over and above, the preſent Generation were not the only Perſons concerned in ſeeing the Remains of ſo memorable a Victory. Poſterity were likewiſe intereſted in having the Proof of this providential Favour conveyed to them. Now 'tis uſual with Hiſtorians, when they have related any remarkable Event, eſpecially when it lies within the Compaſs of their own time, to appeal for the Truth of their Narrative to ſuch viſible Monuments, as are likely to be tranſmitted to future Ages, and continue a ſtanding Evidence. As to the Bed's being at Rabbath, and not in Baſan where Og was ſlain; this might happen, either becauſe the Bed might be removed thither before the Fight, for Fear of its falling into the Iſraelites Hands; or Moſes, being Maſter of the Field and Plunder, might ſell it to the Ammonites. It has alſo been objected, that this Bed was not found 'till David's Reign, when Joab took Rabbath by Storm. 2 Sam. Chap. xii. ℣. 30. But this is pure unſupported Conjecture, for the Text does not ſo much as hint any ſuch thing.

'Tis objected farther, that the Country taken by Jair, the Son of Manaſſes, was called after his own Name, Baſhan-havoth-Jair unto this Day, Deut. Chap. iii. ℣. 14. From which laſt Words, ſome would have it that this Paſſage, and for the ſame Reaſon the whole Book, was written long after the Death of Moſes.

To this 'tis anſwered, that this Verſe might be an explanatory Note or Stricture of Eſdras's, to make the Text more comprehenſive and intelligible: For 'tis not denied, but that ſuch little Notes, either by Eſdras, (when he reviſed the ſacred Books) or by others, might be ſometimes thrown in, where the Text was ſomewhat obſcure, to remove a ſeeming Difficulty: And that this might be done either by Interlineation, or in the Margin, and from thence in time been tranſcribed into the Text: And ſo might ſome leſſer Slips and Miſtakes of Tranſcribers in ſuch vaſt Numbers of Copies as were taken Age after Age of a Book of this great and univerſal Concernment. Little Additions and Inſertions of this kind, which are incident to all Books in length of time, were never in other Inſtances thought a ſufficient Ground to deſtroy an Author's Claim, or defeat his Title to his own Books.

And though ſuch Variations as thoſe abovementioned are found alſo in the Samaritan Copies, and there 'tis very unlikely they ſhould be made by Eſdras: But this Obſervation, inſtead of weakning, does farther confirm the Antiquity of the Reading; for if they are none of Eſdras's ſupplemental Inſertions, it neceſſarily follows, they belonged to the Copies prior to Eſdras's Time, and ſo conſequently muſt have been made by ſome of the former Prophets who had the Inſpection and Guard of the Pentateuch, ſuppoſing them Additions to the Hiſtory of Moſes. Not but that Moſes himſelf, may without any Abſurdity be allowed to have written theſe Words; for he did not write them, or at leaſt there is no reaſon to ſuppoſe he did, 'till ſome time after the Diviſion of the Dominions of the King of Og and Sihon, and the ſame Expreſſion, therefore may have fairly been allowed to have been Moſes's own, in other places of his Writings, where the like Space of Time between the matter of Fact he ſpeaks of, and the Time of his Writing may be ſuppoſed without Abſurdity: Nay a very ſhort and inconſiderable Interval will afford Room for this Expreſſion. For the Purpoſe: The Lord hath deſtroyed the Ægyptians unto this Day, Deut. Chap. xi. ℣. 4. is what Moſes might have ſaid much ſooner than he did, after their Deſtruction. The learned Voſſius cuts this Objection ſhort, (Reſp. ad Tertiam Simonii Object.) by obſerving that the Expreſſion, This Day, both in the old and new Teſtament, ſignifies frequently not in the proper or uſual Meaning of a particular Day, or preſent Portion of Time, but rather indefinitely, or Time more at large, comprehending paſt, and to come, as well as preſent. Thus we are to underſtand the Expreſſion in the Places following. Heb. Chap. iii. ℣. 13. While it is called to Day. Luke, Chap. xxiii. ℣. 43. To Day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. The ſame Expreſſion muſt be likewiſe expounded to a ſhort Interval in St. Matthew, Chap. xxvii. ℣. 8. Wherefore that Field was called the Field of Blood unto this Day; And Chap. xxviii. ℣. 15. This Saying is commonly reported among the Jews unto this Day.

The Objectors go on, and alledge that the Author of the Pentateuch ſpeaks of Moſes as a different Perſon from himſelf; he flouriſhes upon his good Qualities and Actions, and diſcovers his Failings: whereas in Deuteronomy, where the Hiſtory brings in Moſes ſpeaking to the People, he delivers his Diſcourſe, and gives an Account of ſeveral Paſſages of his Life and Conduct, as in his own Perſon.

To this 'tis replied, that this Objection is overloaden, and by proving too much, proves nothing at all: For by this reaſoning it may be inferred, that Julius Cæſar did not write his Commentaries, nor Joſephus his Books of the Jewiſh Wars, nor Procopius his Hiſtory, nor St. Matthew and St. John their Goſpels, nor Jeremy, Ezekiel and Daniel their Propheſies, becauſe theſe Writers ſpeak of themſelves in the third Perſon; and not only theſe, but Hiſtorians in general, antient and modern, when they have Occaſion to ſpeak of the Part or Concern they had in ſuch and ſuch an Affair and Tranſaction, mention themſelves in the ſame remote Manner. And then as for his addreſſing himſelf in the Book of Deuteronomy to the People, in the firſt Perſon, 'tis no wonder he ſhould introduce himſelf in the Figure of a Proſopopeia (as 'tis called). For a Writer, if he pleaſes, may make himſelf appear as acting in the third Perſon: But if he brings in himſelf ſpeaking, 'tis more natural he ſhould do it in the firſt. Neither is there any Abſurdity in his recording his own Merit, and the peculiar Honour God was pleaſed to diſtinguiſh him with; much leſs can any thing be objected to his confeſſing his own Miſcarriage. His publiſhing the divine Favour and Preference conferred upon him, was no more than neceſſary to ſtrengthen his Commiſſion, and recommend his Authority. And after all, there is but one Inſtance, where he ſeems to ſpeak to his own Advantage, and that is Numbers xii. ℣. 3. Where he relates himſelf remarkably Meek: But here it is obſerved the Word Meek may be turned Afflicted. But granting the Original is more properly tranſlated Meekneſs; Moſes had a juſtifiable Occaſion for reporting this Quality of himſelf. For moſt of the Congregation, and even Aaron and Miriam, had charged him with Mal-adminiſtration, with ſtraining his Character too hard upon them, and bringing them under the Judgments, and Calamity conſequent to their Diſobedience. Things ſtanding thus, he was obliged to clear himſelf from the Imputation, by putting them in mind of his Lenity. In ſhort, a holy Perſon may ſometimes ſee Occaſion to magnify his Office, without incurring the Cenſure of Vanity or Arrogance.

'Tis objected farther, that the Children of Iſrael are ſaid to have expelled the Horims from Seir, which Iſrael did unto the Land of his Poſſeſſion, which the Lord gave unto them, Deut. Chap. ii. ℣. 12. Now the Iſraelites did not enter the promiſed Land, the Land of Canaan, nor take Poſſeſſion of it, 'till after the Death of Moſes.

To this 'tis anſwered, the Iſraelites had taken Poſſeſſion of ſo much of the Land which God had aſſigned them; (the two Tribes of Reuben and Gad, and part of the Tribe of Manaſſes being now Maſters of the Country of the Amorites and Baſhanites) that what is ſaid in this Place of their taking Poſſeſſion may very fairly be underſtood, derſtood of their Conqueſts before they paſſed the River Jordan.

The laſt Objection I ſhall mention is the Relation of Moſes's Death, his Burial, the Mourning of the Hebrews for him, &c. This certainly, ſay the Objectors, could not be his own Writing.

Whether this Narrative was written by Moſes or not, the Truth and Authentickneſs of the Hiſtory is not affected with it; but that it could not be written by Moſes, is more than has been yet made good: For the thing is not ſo impoſſible, nor ſo incredible neither, as ſome may fancy: For why might not Moſes, who had ſuch a diſtant Proſpect into Futurity; who predicted the Revolutions in the Iſraelitiſh State, the Calamities conſequent upon their Revolt and Idolatry; why might not ſuch a Perſon foreſee the Time and manner of his Death, and the Circumſtances of his Funeral; and then either write the Narrative himſelf, or give order what ſhould be written, which in Effect is the ſame thing? And that this Suppoſition is not without Ground, ſo neither is it deſtitute of Authority: For Joſephus and Philo ſuppoſe theſe Paſſages were penned by Moſes Proleptically; that 'twas done by prophetick Foreſight, and ſupernatural Intelligence. Neither is this only the Opinion of Joſephus and Philo, but the Generality of the Jewiſh Writers ſeem to concur with them. However, there is no Neceſſity to reſt upon this Argument: This Relation may ſafely be granted poſterior to the Death of Moſes. It may be owned a ſupplemental Narrative by another Hand, either by Joſhua, or Eleazer, or Samuel, or ſome other Prophets, or laſtly by Eſdras, who after the Babyloniſh Captivity reviewed the Canon of the old Teſtament; whom the Jews allow the Character of a Prophet as well as of an Hiſtorian: And thus taking the Matter any of theſe Ways, the divine Authority of theſe Books ſtands firm and unqueſtionable. * Hieron. Prolog. Galeat. Auguſtin de Mir. Script. Tourniel & Salian Annal. Huet. Dem. Evang. R. Simon Critical Hiſtory of the old Teſtament. M. du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible. Auguſtin Calmet, Comment. upon Deuteronomy.

DEZNA, Deſna, and Diſna, a River which riſes in Moſcovy, and runs by Novogrod, Sewierski and Czernickow; afterwards it croſſes part of the Palatinate of Kiovia in Poland, and runs into the Nieper a little above the Town Kiovia. * Maty, Diction.

DHAFAR, or Tacſeb, formerly Sabe, a Town of Arabia the Happy. It ſtands upon the River Nangeran, about twelve Leagues from the Coaſt, between the Towns Zibit and Zidden, eighty Leagues from the firſt, and ninety from the ſecond. Some Geographers make it the Capital of the Kingdom of Tehama, others of the Principality of Dhafar, which lies between the Precincts of Mecca to the North; of Tehama to the Eaſt; of Moca to the South; and of the Red Sea to the Weſt. This Principality ſtretches about two hundred Leagues upon the Coaſt. But the Breadth, take it at a middle meaſure, does not exceed thirty Leagues. Beſides the Town of Dhafar thoſe of Zibid and Zidden are reckoned conſiderable. * Maty, Diction.

* DIAGORAS, a famous Prize Player at Rhodes, deſcended by the Mother's Side from Ariſtomanes, the greateſt Hero in all the Rhodian Liſt. The Reputation Diagoras gained by his having the Better at the publick Spectacles of Greece, was ſtill increaſed by the Succeſſes of his Sons and Grandchildren at theſe Exerciſes: He carried two of his Sons once to try their Fortune at theſe Solemnities, they both of them happening to gain the Olympick Crown, took their Father upon their Shoulders, carried him croſs the Crowd, who ſtrewed handfuls of Flowers upon him, and congratulated the old Gentleman's Happineſs in his Sons: And if Aulus Gellius may be believed, the Father was ſo tranſported with Satisfaction, that it proved mortal to him upon the Spot. But this Account ſeems ſomewhat fabulous, for ſeveral antient Authors who diſcourſe largely of Diagoras, and particularly Pauſanias, ſay nothing on't. This Athleta lived in the lxxx. Olympiad 460 Years before the Incarnation. Pindar has an Ode in Honour of this Combatant. Here we are informed, that he had gained the Prize twice at the Rhodian Shews, four times at the Iſthmian Solemnities, and twice at the Nemean: That he had come off Conqueror at the Spectacles at Athens, at thoſe at Argos, at the ſame Exerciſes in Arcadia, at Thebes, at Beotia, at Palene, and Megara. This Ode was made upon his gaining the wreſtling Prize at the Olympick Exerciſes in the lxxix. Olympiad. Neither his Father Dagametes, nor Tlepolemus, Founder of the Rhodian State, and Head of the Family, were forgotten by the Poet. Pindar's Digreſſions upon Tlepolemus's Adventures is ſomewhat long. However, this Ode was written in Gold Letters in Minerva's Temple. * Plutarch, in Vit. Pelop. Pauſan. Lib. VI. Eliac. Gellius, Lib. III. cap. 15. Cicer. Lib. I. Queſt. Tuſc. Pindar Ode. 7. Olymp.

DIALLING, See Gnomonicks.

DIAMOND, the hardieſt, beſt ſparkling, and moſt valuable of pretious Stones. The Ground where Diamonds are digged is of a ſandy Nature. There are ſeveral Rocks with Veins of about a Finger's Breadth, from whence the Miners pull the Sand with iron Hooks, and find Diamonds among it when it is well waſhed. The beſt Diamond is in Raolconda in the Mogol's Dominions. 'Tis ſaid the Diamond Mine was accidentaly found by a Shepherd, who ſtriking his Foot againſt a Stone that ſeemed to ſhine, took a Piece of it with him and ſold it ignorantly for a little Rice. This Mine, called the old Rock, is a hundred and eight Miles from Maſulipatan. Thirty thouſand Men are commonly at work upon it, and almoſt twice as many come from all Parts of the World to trade in that Commodity. The King farms it out for 300000 Pagods per Annum, with a Reſervation of all the Diamonds which exceed ten Carrats. There are but four Mines and two Rivers in all the Eaſt Indies, for getting Diamonds; and theſe are the only Places in the World where they are found. The Mines are in the Kingdom of Golconda and Viſapour, which formerly belonged to the Great Mogol. The Rivers are within the Kingdom of Bengale, and the Iſland Borneo. 'Tis confidently affirmed, which looks almoſt incredible, that the Diamond grows, and reaches its outmoſt Perfection in two Years. The fineſt Diamond in the World is the Great Mogol's; 'tis half as big as a Hen's Egg and Weighs 279,$\frac{9}{5}$ Carrats, and is worth eleven Millions ſeven hundred twenty three thouſand two hundred ſeventy eight Livres. The Great Duke of Tuſcany has a Diamond which weighs 139$\frac{1}{2}$ Carrats, and is worth two millions ſix hundred eight thouſand three hundred thirty five Livres, according to Tavernier's Calculation of the Value of Diamonds. The French King Lewis the XIV. has a finer Diamond than this, unpoliſhed: He paid Tavernier two millions of Livres for it in 1670. Sanci's Diamond ſo much talked of formerly weighed 100 Carrats. 'Twas about the Bigneſs of an Almond, and cut in Faucets. There are three Qualities which raiſe the Value of a Diamond. Its Luſtre called the Water, the Weight or Bigneſs, and the Solidity; the beſt Colour is white. 'Tis a vulgar Miſtake to believe that a Diamond grows ſoft by being rubbed or infuſed in the Blood of a He-Goat; or, that as the antients fancied, it can't be broken by a Hammer. But as for Fire it ſuffers nothing by it. Lewis de Berquen was the firſt that found out the cutting and poliſhing of a Diamond, with Diamond Powder. This Invention is no older than 1476, before which time they wore them rough. Diamond Powder has the Force of Poiſon, as appears by its eating through the Bowels. Pliny and Solinus are the firſt Pagan Authors who take notice of Diamonds. * Plin. Lib. xxxvii. Cap. 4. Salmaſius's Notes upon Solinus. Tavernier's Travels, &c.

* DIANA. Tully ſeems to go a little out of Mythology, and talk ſomewhat like an Hiſtorian, where he diſtinguiſhes this pretended Goddeſs into three Perſons. One Daughter to Jupiter and Proſerpine Mother to Cupid, who is repreſented with Wings; another better known who had the ſame Father, and Latona for her Mother; and a third whoſe Father was Ulpis and Glauca her Mother, whom the Greeks call Upis. Now theſe were no other than the Dianas of the Grecians which took their Names from the Ægyptian Diana. For Diana was a Goddeſs in Ægypt when Typhoeus made War upon the Ægyptian Deities: And that when an Action happened ſhe transformed herſelf into a Cat; for which Reaſon the Ægyptians called her Bubaſtis. Herodotus reports, that the Town Bubaſtis in Ægypt, had a Temple for Bubaſtis, called Diana by the Greeks. And a little after he relates, that the Ægyptians ſuppoſed her and Apollo the Iſſue of Bacchus and Iſis. Sanchoniathon gives Saturn and Aſtarte ſeven Daughters or ſeven Dianas.

nas. Diodorus Siculus aſſerts that the Cretans, who imported their Religion from Phœnicia and Ægypt, believed Diana had the Charge of Children after they were born, but that Lucina took Care about their coming into the World. She was called Diana upon the Score of being Jupiter's Daughter as the Name ſignifies. She was likewiſe called Delia; becauſe the Iſland Delos was the Place of her Birth. She was reputed the Goddeſs of the Woods, and had the Superintendency of Hunting. She was a Goddeſs that vowed ſingle Life, and had always Nymphs for her Companions; but when they married they took Leave of her, and to prevent her Diſpleaſure, carried Baskets of Flowers and Fruit to her Temple. Upon her Feſtival, which ſtood at the Ides of Auguſt, it was not lawful to hunt: For then they fancied Diana let her Dogs reſt and lie in the Kennel: At this Solemnity, the Dogs had a Garland put about them; a great many Torches were lighted up in the Foreſt, and Diana had an Ox, a Boar, and a white Hind ſacrificed to her. She was likewiſe preſented with the firſt ripe Fruit, Oneus King of Etolia forgot to pay his Homage to her, when he offered the firſt Fruits to the Gods of the Groves and Fields. This Omiſſion, it ſeems, was ſo much reſented by her, that ſhe let looſe the Caledonian Boar, which did great Miſchief in his Dominions. The Scythians, as Lucian reports, ſacrificed Men upon her Altar. Diana had a Temple at Rome upon Mount Aventin in the Reign of Servius Tullus. 'Twas built at the joint Expence of the Romans and Latins, where they met every Year to ſacrifice in Memory of their Confederacy. The Temple was hung with Cow's Horns, Plutarch and Livy give the Reaſon of this ornamental Furniture: They relate, that one Autro Corarins a Sabine, having a very fine Cow, was adviſed by an Augur to ſacrifice her to Diana at Mount Aventine, promiſing as a Reward of this Devotion that he ſhould never want any thing, and that the Town where he fixed as a Burgher ſhould conquer all the Cities of Italy. Autro came to Rome, to make his Fortune upon this Prediction; but his Deſign was diſcovered by one of his Slaves, to King Servius, and thus whilſt Autro waſhed in the Tyber, to purify himſelf for approaching the Goddeſs, and offering the Sacrifice; whilſt this Preparation was going forward, Servius ſeized the Cow, cut her Throat as a Victim to Diana, and nailed up her Horns in the Temple. Diana is commonly repreſented with her Hair diſhevelled, in a ſhag purple Gown tied up to the Knee. She held a Bow in her Hand, and had a Quiver full of Arrows at her Back. She is ſometimes repreſented in Painting and Sculpture ſitting on a golden Chariot drawn by Hinds. Albericus in his Images of the Gods reports Diana repreſented with a Bow and Arrows, and a Creſcent upon her Forehead, with a Train of Dryades, Näiades, Nereïdes, and Choirs of Nymphs of the Woods, the Mountains, the Springs, and the Seas, not without the Attendance of Satyrs, or Guardians of the Fields. * Ovid. Metam Lib. III. Heſiod, in Theog. Plin. Lib. VII. Cap. 38. Lib. XVI. Cap. 40. Diodor. Sicul. Lib. XVI. Gellius Noct. Attic. Lib. II^d. Cap. 6. Solin. Plutarch. Pauſanias. Strabo. &c.

DIARBECK, or Dier-Bechir, a Province of Aſia bounded on the Weſt by Euphrates, and by the Tygris on the Eaſt. 'Tis the antient Meſopotamia. The eaſtern Geographers divide it into four Quarters. The firſt Diviſion goes by the Name of Diarbeck, and lies upon the weſtern Bank of the Tygris. The Capital is Caraemit. The ſecond Diviſion takes in the Country called Diar-Modzar, and lies almoſt all in the Plain confining upon the eaſtern Bank of Euphrates: the Capital is Bakka. The third Diviſion is Diar-Rabœa: 'Tis ſituated between the Towns of Moſul, Chabour, and Raſolin. Niſſibis is the Capital. The fourth is Diar-algiezira, and comprehends the Remainder of Meſopotamia. The Capital is new Nineveth or Moſul. All this Country belongs to the Turks. * L'Abbé. Baudrand. See Meſopotamia.

DIBRA, Dibres and Dibrii, a ſmall Town in Macedonia ſituate upon the Confines of Albania, eight Leagues from Ocrida to the North Eaſt. When the Turks beſieged this Place in 1442. They got a dead Dog thrown into a Ciſtern which ſupplied the whole Town with Water, and the Burghers out of Superſtition or Nicety choſe rather to ſurrender, than drink it. * Barilet Hiſtory of Scanderberg. Lib. II^d.

* A Chronological Series of the Roman Dictators.

T. Laertius firſt Dictator, in the 256th Year after the Building of Rome; Sp. Caſſius was his General of the Horſe.

An. Poſthumius, in the 257th Year after the Building of Rome, and T. Ebutius was General of the Horſe.

M. Valerius, Son of Voleſus, in the 260th Year after the Building of Rome.

L. Q. Cincinnatus, ab Urbe Condita, or from the Building of Rome 294. L. Tarquinius General of the Horſe.

L. Q. Cincinnatus, ab U. C. 316. and C. Servilius Hala General of the Horſe.

Mamercus Æmilius, ab U. C. 318. L. Q. Cincinnatus General of the Horſe.

An. Servilius Priſcus, or Structus, ab U. C. 319. and A. Poſthumius Ebutius Helinus was General of the Horſe.

Mamercus Æmilius was ſecond time Dictator, ab U. C. 321. Poſthumius Tubero General of the Horſe.

A. Poſthumius Tubertus, ab Urbe Condita 324. and Julius General of the Horſe.

Marcus Æmilius was third time Dictator, ab U. C. 329. A. Cornelius General of the Horſe.

Q. Servilius Priſcus, whoſe Son C. S. Hala was General of the Horſe.

P. Cornelius ab U. C. 342. C. S. Hala was General of the Horſe.

M. Furius Camillus was Dictator, U. C. 358. Cornelius Scipio was General of the Horſe.

M. Furius Camillus was ſecond time Dictator, U. C. 365. L. Valerius General of the Horſe.

M. Furius Camillus was third time Dictator, U. C. 366. and Servilius Hala General of the Horſe.

A. Cornelius Coſſus Dictator U. C. 370. T. Q. Capitolinus General of the Horſe.

T. Quintus Cincinnatus Dictator, U. C. 375. A. Sempronius Atracinus General of the Horſe.

M. Furius Camillus a fourth time Dictator, U. C. 386. L. Æmilius General of the Horſe.

P. Manlius immediately after Camillus, and C. Licinius General of the Horſe.

M. Furius Camillus was a fifth time Dictator, U. C. 387. T. Quintius Poenus General of the Horſe.

L. Manlius Imperioſus choſen Dictator for driving a Nail in the Temple to prevent a Plague, U. C. 391. L. Pinarius General of the Horſe.

Appius Claudius was made Dictator a little time after.

Q. Quintius Poenus Dictator U. C. 393. Sergius Cornelius Malugilenſis was General of the Horſe.

Q. Servilius Hala Dictator, U. C. 396. T. Quintius General of the Horſe.

C. Sulpitius Dictator, U. C. 397. Marcus Valerius General of the Horſe.

Cn. Marcus Rutilius, the firſt Dictator choſen out of the Commons, U. C 398. C. Plautius General of the Horſe, choſen alſo out of the Commons.

T. Manlius Dictator, Son of L. Manlius, U. C. 401. A. Cornelius Coſſus General of the Horſe.

C. Julius Dictator, U. C. 402. L. Æmilius General of the Horſe.

M. Fabius Ambuſtus Dictator, U. C. 403. Quintus Servilius General of the Horſe.

L. Furius Camillus Dictator, U. C. 404. P. Cornelius Scipio General of the Horſe.

M. Manlius Torquatus Dictator, U. C. 405. A. Cornelius Coſſus General of the Horſe.

L. Furius Camillus, ſecond time Dictator, U. C. 409. Cn. Manlius Capitolinus General of the Horſe.

P. Valerius Publicola Dictator for the Holy Days, U. C. 410. Q. Fabius Ambuſtus General of the Horſe.

M. Valerius Corvinus Dictator, ab U. C. 412. L. Æmilius Mamercus General of the Horſe.

L. Papyrius Craſſus Dictator, U. C. 414. L. Papyrius Curſor General of the Horſe.

P. Philo Dictator, U. C. 415. Junius Brutus General of the Horſe.

Claudius Regillenſis Dictator, U. C. 417. C. Claudius Hortator General of the Horſe, his Election was exceptionable.

M. Pa-

M. Papyrius Craſſus Dictator, U. C. 421. P. Valerius Publicola General of the Horſe.

Cn. Q. Cincinnatus Dictator, U. C. 422. elected for the Ceremony of Faſtning the Nail. L. Valerius General of the Horſe.

M. Claudius Marcellus Dictator, U. C. 426. his Election was illegal. Spur. Poſthumius was General of the Horſe.

L. Papyrius Curſor Dictator, U. C. 428. Q. Fabius Maxim. Rutilianus General of the Horſe.

Q. Cornelius Arvina Dictator, U. C. 430. M. Fabius Ambuſtus General of the Horſe.

Q. Fabius Ambuſtus Dictator, U. C. 431. Q. Æmilius Poetus General of the Horſe. His Election was illegal.

M. Æmilius Papus Dictator, U. C. 433. L. Valerius Flaccus General of the Horſe.

L. Æmilius Dictator, U. C. 436. L. Fulvius General of the Horſe.

Q. Fabius Dictator. A. Cæretanus General of the Horſe; this latter dying in the Field, M. Fabius ſucceeded him in that Poſt.

G. Menenius Dictator, U. C. 438. choſen for proſecuting and giving Judgment upon Crimes. M. Fabius General of the Horſe.

C. Petilius Dictator, U. C. 439.

L. Papyrius Curſor, ſecond time Dictator, U. C. 442. C. Junius Bubulcus General of the Horſe.

P. Cornelius Scipio Dictator, U. C. 445. P. Decius Mus General of the Horſe.

C. Junius Bubulcus Dictator, U. C. 449. M. Titinius General of the Horſe.

M. Valerius Maximus Dictator, U. C. 452. M. Æmilius Paulus General of the Horſe.

L. Cornelius Sylla perpetual Dictator, U. C. 669.

C. Julius Cæſar created Dictator the firſt time, U. C. 703. the ſecond time, U. C. 705. and then perpetual. After him the Emperor Auguſtus refus'd the Dictatorſhip when offer'd him by the People. * Livy. Florus. Polybius. Dion. Hallicarnaſſ. &c.

DICTINIUS a Prieſt living in the fourth Century, charged with Priſcillianiſm, and condemned in the Council of Langres. St. Ambroſe wrote a Letter in Favour of him, that he might remain in the Exerciſe of his Function; but upon Condition he ſhould retract his Heterodoxy. Dictinius refuſed to perform this Article, went on in his falſe Doctrines, and got himſelf conſecrated Biſhop of Aſtorga. He was ſummoned to appear at the firſt Council of Toledo, A. D. 390, with Symphoſius who ordained him. They refuſed to make their Appearance; but afterwards they came to a Synod held A. D. 400. Where Symphoſius confeſſing the People forced him to conſecrate Dictinius, and this latter making a ſolemn Retractation of his Heterodoxy, they were both abſolved. Pope Leo the Great mentions Dictinius in an Epiſtle to Turribius; where he takes notice of his writing ſeveral Tracts in Defence of Priſcillianiſm, and at the ſame time he acquaints Turribius with his dying a Catholick, and that his Memory deſerved Regard. * M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. IV.

* DIDYMUS of Alexandria flouriſhed in the IV^th^ Century. He loſt his Sight at five Years old: But this Misfortune did not hinder his making a great Proficiency in Claſſical and Eccleſiaſtical Learning; and more than this, dipt pretty far in the Mathematicks, where Sight ſeemed to be a neceſſary Requiſite. He applied himſelf chiefly to the Study of Divinity, and was pitched upon as the beſt qualified for the Catechiſt's Chair in the Church of Alexandria: His Reputation running high brought him a great many Pupils, of which the moſt eminent were St. Jerom, Ruffinus, Palladius, and Iſidore. He wrote a great many conſiderable Diſcourſes; but there is none of them remaining excepting his Tract of the Holy Ghoſt tranſlated into Latin by St. Jerom, and inſerted in that Father's Works; and a Tranſlation of the Commentary upon the Canonical Epiſtles publiſhed by Caniſius. Antiq. Lect. and printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum. Edit. An. 1624 To which may be added a conſiderable Fragment of a Book againſt the Manichæans. Printed in the V^th^ Tom. of Caniſius Antiq. Lect. and by Father Poſſevin in his Apparatus, publiſhed in Greek by Combefis in his Actuarium to the Bibliotheca Patrum. To conclude, Didymus was a pious no leſs than a learned Perſon. He was living when St. Jerom wrote his Catalogue of Eccleſiaſtical Writers, that is, in the Year 392. He died according to Palladius A. D. 398. fourſcore and five Years of Age. His Eſteem for Origen's Opinions (having commented upon his Book of Principles) was the Occaſion of his being condemned by the V^th^ general Council; and this Cenſure paſſed notwithſtanding he died in the Communion of the Church, and all the Antients, not excepting St. Jerom, had given him the Character of a very Orthodox Divine. St. Athanaſius in St. Anthony's Life, mentions a Conference between Dydimus and this Hermit. * Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. C. 109. in Chron, A. C. 376. Epiſt. 33. 51. 65. Pallad Hiſt. Lauſ. Cap. 38. Ruffin. Lib. II^d^. Hiſt. Cap. 7. Socrat. Lib. I. Cap. 3. Theodoret Lib. IV. Cap. 27. Sozomen. Lib. VII. Cap. 14. &c.

DIESBACK, a noble Swiſs Family; Nicholas de Diesback was ſent Ambaſſador from eight Cantons to Lewis XI. King of France, and concluded the firſt Alliance between this Prince and the Helvetick Body A. D. 1474; and diſcovered the ſame Year Charles the Hardy, Duke of Burgundy's Deſigns for invading Switzerland. He was ſent with a publick Character to this Prince to diſſuade him from coming to a Rupture with the Helvetick Body; but not ſuceeding in his Negotiation, retired to Bern, where the Cantons making him General of their Army, he marched directly into Burgundy againſt Charles the Hardy, inveſted Blamont, and at the beginning of the Siege was ſtruck with a Horſe, of which Blow he died ſix Weeks after. * Chroniq. de Steteler.

DIESBACK (Imber de) was Collonel of King Henry the IV^th^ of France's Swiſs Guards, A. D. 1591. He fought a Duel before his Majeſty and all his Court, with a Spaniſh Nobleman, who challenged all the Nobleſs of the French Court. Imber received a Wound in his Hand, but returned it with Intereſt, and ſplit his Adverſary's Head; the King made him a Preſent with a Chain of Gold and his Picture, weighing twelve hundred Piſtoles, which he left to his Family with Order not to have it divided. Chroniq. de Steteler.

WILLIAM DE DIESBECK, went unfortunately in queſt of the Philoſopher's Stone, which proved very unſerviceable to his Eſtate; for he ſold the Lordſhips of Burgderf, Crulinge, and Petterkinge, and the Bailiwick of Landſhuet to their Excellencies of Bern to furniſh his Laboratoty, and keep his Furneſſes going. The Emperor Maximilian, who had a great Eſteem for him, wrote to him A. D. 1510 to diſſuade him from that ruining Curioſity. He had a joint Commiſſion with Peter de Waberin for commanding the Swiſs Forces, with which they conquered the County of Romond in the Country of the Vaudoiſe: He marched over Mount Gottard with Adrian de Buebenberg at the Head of 3000 Men for the Expedition of Beleuze in Italy; he was likewiſe ſent to the Emperor at the Conference at Coſtniz, and behaved himſelf very honourably in the War in Swabia. He maintained an hundred poor Scholars at Berne, made a noble Figure there, and received Strangers of Quality with great Frankneſs and Regard. * Chroniq. de Steteler.

DIESSENHOVEN, a Town in Thurgo in Swiſſerland. It ſtands upon the Rhyne between Stein and Schaffouſe two Leagues from each. 'Tis governed in a manner like a free Town, having a Senate, and Juriſdiction over the neighbouring Villages, which are obliged to fight under the Standard of the Town. * Maty, Diction.

DIETRICUS, a noble and valiant Friezlander, who for his Service had a Grant from Charles the Simple, King of France, of Part of Friezland and Holland, almoſt quite deſerted by the Incurſions of the Normans. This Fief granted A. D. 900, was upon Condition he ſhould defend the Country. The Country of Friezland and Weſt Friezland kept the Name of a County 'till Dietricus the V^th^: Theſe Counts, beſides Friezland, were Lords of Holland, Zealand, the Territory of Treves, and other Precincts as far as Nimegen, which was the antient Boundary of the Realm of Friezland. Afterwards theſe Earls took the Diſtinction of Counts of Holland. * Georgius Hornius, Orb. Imp. Hoffman Lexicon Univerſal.

DIETZ, a ſmall Town in Germany ſituated in the Territories of Naſſau in Weteravia upon the River Lohn, between ſix and ſeven Leagues from Coblentz.

Dietz has a very fine Caſtle, and is the Capital of an antient Earldom, now raiſed to the Title of a Principality. It lies between the Baronies of Idſtein and Visbaden, the lower Country of Catzenellebogen, and the Archbiſhoprick of Treves. * Baudrand.

DIGESTS, a Body of the Civil Laws drawn up by the Emperor Juſtinian's Order, and called Digeſta & Pandecta. For this Purpoſe he gave a Commiſſion to his Chancellor Tribonianus, who called in ſixteen eminent Lawyers to aſſiſt him in the Work. They extracted the beſt ruled Caſes, which lay diſperſed in two thouſand Volumes of antient Law Books, and threw them into one Body or Collection, publiſhed in the Year 553, and called the Digeſts. The Emperor gave the Authority of Law to this Collection, by a Letter or Declaration prefixed to this Work, and which ſerves for a Preface. The Digeſts are ſubdivided into fifty Books, which make the firſt Part of the Roman or Civil Law. They were tranſlated into Greek in the Reign of Juſtinian. The Digeſts are cited in Abbreviation by ff, which Manner was taken from the Greeks who called them Pandects and abbreviated them by ππ.

DILECTIO. The uſe of this Word comes from the Style the Emperors ſaluted ſeveral Princes with. 'Twas the Cuſtom to write to them under the Title of Dilectus, Beloved, from which the word Dilectio was formed, which the Emperor gives to the Electors and Princes of the Empire. He likewiſe complements the Cardinals with it, who are Princes of the Empire. And when he writes to Kings, he ſpeaks in the Language of Dilectio Regalis, or Royal Dilection. The Elector of Mentz writing to the Cardinal of Heſſe ſalutes him with Dilection. When the Pope writes to the Emperor, to Kings, and to the Doge of Venice, he ſuperſcribes Chariſſimo Filio; and when he writes to Monſigneur the Dauphin, to Monſieur the Duke of Orleance, and to all ſovereign Princes who are not crowned Heads, the Style is Dilecto Filio. There are only theſe two Diſtinctions in the Roman Chancery. * Memoirs Curieux.

DIMOTUC, a ſmall Town, formerly an Archiepiſcopal See in Romania: It ſtands upon a Hill the Bottom of which is waſhed by the River Mareſa. This Town is famous for the Birth and Retreat of the Turkiſh Emperor Bajazet II. who died there in 1512, poiſoned as 'tis ſaid by his Son Selim, who forced him to reſign the Government. * Maty, Diction.

* DIODORUS, Prieſt in the Church of Antioch, and afterwards Biſhop of Tarſus the Metropolis of Cilicia, lived in the fourth Century. He was Scholar to Sylvanus of Tarſus, and St. Chryſoſtome's and Theodorus of Mopſueſtia's Maſter: During Meletius's Baniſhment in Valens's Reign, he took care of the People of Antioch, preſerved the Catholick Faith, and introduced the Cuſtom of ſinging the Pſalms alternately. Meletius at his Return ordained Diodorus Biſhop of Tarſus A. D. 375. He aſſiſted afterwards at the Council of Conſtantinople, and was one of thoſe who were pitched upon to have an Eye upon the Eaſtern Dioceſſes, for preventing Hetrodoxy. After his Death he was charged with leading the Way to the Neſtorian Hereſy. St. Cyril of Alexandria in his Epiſtle to Succeſſus makes him diſtinguiſh the Word born of God, from the Son of Mary; and in another Letter to John of Antioch, and to Acaſius of Meletina, he calls him an Enemy to the Glory of Jeſus Chriſt. On the contrary, St. Athanaſius, St. Bazil, and St. Chryſoſtome, who had been his Pupils, give him the Character of a moſt holy Biſhop, and a noble Champion for the Catholick Faith. The firſt Council at Conſtantinople mentions him with great Commendation, and expreſs a great Reliance upon his Sentiments. This Diodorus underſtood the Scriptures particularly well, and wrote an Expoſition upon almoſt all the Canonical Books. He is one of the firſt Commentators, who confined himſelf to the literal Senſe, without any conjectural Amuſements drawn from Allegories. He likewiſe wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt Hereticks, and one Diſcourſe upon Deſtiny. Photius cites a conſiderable part of it in his Bibliotheca. There are a great many of Diodorus's Epiſtles in Facundus. * St. Baſil Ep. 167. St. Greg. Nazianz. St. Athan. St. Epiphan. St. Hier. Theod. Hiſt. Lib. IV. Cap. 23. 24. 25. Lib. V. Cap. Ult. Philoſtorg. Cap. 2. & 8. Socrat. Lib. VI. Cap. 3. Sozomen. Lib. VIII. Cap. 2. Facundus, Lib. IV. Cap. 2. Leontius, Lib. III. de Hæreſ. Photius Biblioth. Cod. 18. 85. 102. 223. Baronius, A. C. 370. 392. 428. 435. Godeau, Hiſt. Eccleſ. V. Cent. Lib. I. n. 81. p. 174. &c. Hermant, Vie de Saint Chryſoſtome. Tillemont, Mem. de l'Hiſt. Eccl. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. IV.

DIODORUS, General to Demetrius firſt King of Syria in the CXXII. Olympiad and 292 Years before the Incarnation, ſeized the Town of Sicyon for his Maſter. He was afterwards made Governor of Epheſus, and was in a Practice to deliver that City to Lyſimachus: But before he could make his Treaſon bear, he was diſcovered and executed by Demetrius's Order. * Polyæn. Lib. IV. in Demetrio.

DIOGNETUS VII. was Archon or ſupreme Magiſtrate of Athens. He ſucceeded Megacles, during whoſe Government the Poet Homer lived, in the ſix hundred ſeventy ſixth Year of the Attick Computation: Three hundred and two Years after the Deſtruction of Troy, twenty three Years before the Olympiads, in the Reign of Amaſiah King of Judah, and of Rhamſes King of Ægypt: As Sir John Marſham proves in his Canon Chronicus.

DIONYSIADES, three ſmall Iſlands in the Mediterranean, they lie ten Leagues from Candia between the Iſlands Lovo, Stamphalia, and Scarpanto. They are almoſt uninhabited upon the Score of their being expoſed to Pyrates. * Maty, Diction.

DIOPHANTUS, Secretary to Herod the Great King of Judæa, he had an extraordinary Talent for counterfeiting Hands; being bribed by Antipater, he wrote a Letter in Alexander's Name againſt his Father; and here the Imitation was ſo exact that the Cheat could not be diſcovered. Upon this foul Practice Alexander and his Brother Ariſtobulus were put to the Torture. But Diophantus was afterwards found out, and puniſhed for Forgery. * Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. XVI. Cap. 16.

DISENTIS, a famous Abby in the Griſons Country. It lies within the Diviſion of the Grey League near the Head of the upper Rhyne. The Abby of Diſentis has the Privilege to coin Money, and was one of the firſt in concerting the Griſons League. * Maty, Diction.

DISPENSING, (The Power of) That the Kings of England, by Virtue of their Prerogative, have the Privilege of Diſpenſing with ſome Acts of Parliament, to particular Perſons, may be proved by the following Authorities. But before this Proof is produced, it may not be improper to give a Definition of this Diſpenſing Power, as it ſtands in Coke's XI^th^ Report in Caſe of Monopoly. Diſpenſatio mali prohibiti eſt de jure Domino Regi conceſſa propter Impoſſibilitatem prævidendi de omnibus particularibus; & Diſpenſatio eſt mali prohibiti provida Relaxatio, utilitate ceu neceſſitate penſatâ. And as the Book goes on, " For as much as an Act of " Parliament which generally prohibits any thing upon " a Penalty, that is popular, or only given to the King, " may be inconvenient to divers particular Perſons; in " Reſpect of Perſon, Time, or Place: For this Purpoſe " the Law gives a Power to the King to diſpenſe with " particular Perſons:" And in the VII^th^ Report fol. 63. In the Caſe of Penal Statutes 2 Jacob. I. where there is a Recital of the Opinion of all the Judges of England. 'Tis here reſolved that the King may diſpenſe with any particular Perſon, ſo far as to ſhelter him from incurring the Penalty of the Statute, though it be an Act made pro Bono publico: And that this Right of relaxing is a Truſt and Confidence inſeparably annexed to the Royal Perſon of the King. And here we are to obſerve, that Diſpenſations are of a particular Nature, and granted to particular Perſons by Name; and under this reſtrained Senſe, the King's diſpenſing Power is deſcribed and warranted in the Year Book of Hen. VII. fol. 11. & H. VII. fol. 12. The Words are theſe. " There is a Diverſity " between Malum prohibitum, and Malum in ſe; as a " Statute forbids any Man to coin Money, and if he does " he ſhall be hanged; this is Malum prohibitum: For be- " fore the Statute, coining Money was lawful; but " now 'tis not ſo, therefore the King can diſpenſe with " it. So if a Man ſhip Wool in any Place but Calice, " it is Malum prohibitum, becauſe it's prohibited by Act " of Parliament, and the King can diſpenſe with it, " and ſo in like Caſes: But that which is Malum in ſe, the " King, nor no other Perſon can diſpenſe with; as if " the King would give a Man Power to kill another, " or licenſe one to make a Nuſance in the High-way,

" this were void; and yet the King can pardon theſe " things when they are done. To this we may add ſomewhat of the Chief Juſtice Vaughan's Diſcourſe upon this Argument in the Caſe of Thomas and Sorrel (Vaughan's Reports fol. 333.) Here this learned Judge ſhews firſt, the Difference between a Diſpenſation and a Pardon. A Diſpenſation does Jus dare, and makes the thing prohibited (to all others) lawful to be done by him that has it: And therefore the King cannot diſpenſe with Mala in ſe, becauſe they never were, nor never can be made lawful. But even theſe, ſays the Year Book, may be pardoned when they are done.

The next great Caſe is the Reſolution of all the Judges of England 2 Hen. VII. in the Exchequer Chamber. 'Twas upon the Queſtion of the King's Power of diſpenſing with the Statute of 23 Hen. VI. Cap. 8. That no Man might be Sheriff for above one Year. The Purview enacts, 1ſt, That no Man ſhall be Sheriff for above a Year. 2dly, That all Letters Patents made for Years or Lives ſhall be void. 3dly, That no Non Obſtante ſhall make them good. By the way, this barring a Non Obſtante ſhews that the Parliament thought the King could otherwiſe have diſpenſed with this Act by a Non Obſtante. 4thly, Whoever acts by Colour of ſuch Letters Patents, ſhall forfeit two hundred Pounds. 5thly, He ſhall be utterly diſabled from bearing the Office of Sheriff in any County of England. 6thly, That every Pardon for ſuch Offence ſhall be void.

But notwithſtanding all this Fencing and Precaution, 'twas adjudged by all the Judges in the Exchequer Chamber, that the King's Diſpenſation with that Statute was good. And to ſhew that the Judges did not ſtrain the Laws for the King's Prerogative, it may be remarked firſt, that this Caſe has been cited for Law in ſeveral Books of great Authority. 2dly, That ſuch Diſpenſations have been the conſtant Practice in all the Reigns, ſince the Reſolution laſt mentioned.

As to the firſt, though there's Choice enough, three or four of the beſt Authorities may ſerve turn: The firſt ſhall be taken from Fitzherbert in his Abridgment of this very Caſe: (Tit. Grant. 33.) This Chief Juſtice lived near the Reign of King Henry VI. and could not eaſily be miſtaken in the Senſe of the Year Book: Now ſpeaking of the Patent abovemention'd, it was, ſays he, adjudged good by all the Juſtices: but the Statute ſays expreſly it ſhall be void. Therefore it is only made good by the King's diſpenſing.

II*d*. The next Inſtance ſhall be in Plowden, a Man eminent for Learning and Judgment. This celebrated Lawyer in his Report of the Caſe between Greendon and the Biſhop of Lincoln, (Plowden's Commentaries fol. 502.) after citing the Caſe in Queſtion, out of the Year Book, and Fitzherbert's Abridgment, has theſe Words; where the Statute, ſays he, was, That the King's Grant to any Man to be a Sheriff of any County for longer time than a Year ſhall be void; notwithſtanding any Clauſe of Non Obſtante to be put into the Patent, there it is held, that the King's Grant to the Earl of Northumberland, to be Sheriff during Life, muſt have a Clauſe of Non Obſtante, becauſe of the preciſe Words of the Statute before mentioned, and with ſuch a Clauſe of Non Obſtante, the Patent to the Earl was good.

Sir Edward Coke is another Authority: 'Tis in his twelfth Report, fol. 18. the Paſſage is this: No Act can bind the King from any Prerogative which is ſole and Inſeparable to his Perſon, but that he may diſpenſe with it by a Non Obſtante, as a ſovereign Power to command any of his Subjects to ſerve him for the publick Weal; and this ſolely and inſeparably is annexed to his Perſon: And this Royal Power cannot be reſtrained by any Act of Parliament, neither in Theſi nor in Hypotheſi, but that the King by his Royal Prerogative may diſpenſe with it. For upon the Commandment of the King, and Obedience of the Subject, does his Government conſiſt. As it is provided by the Statute of 23 Hen. VI. Cap. 8. That all Patents made or to be made of any Office of a Sheriff, &c. For Term of Years, for Life in Fee ſimple or intail, are void and of none Effect, any Clauſe or Paroll de non Obſtante, put or to be put into ſuch Patents to be made notwithſtanding: And farther, whoſoever ſhall take upon him or them, to accept or occupy ſuch Office of Sheriff, by Vertue of ſuch Grants or Patents ſhall ſtand perpetually diſabled to be, or bear the Office of Sheriff within any County of England; and notwithſtanding that by this Act, firſt, the Patent is firſt made void. Secondly, the King is reſtrained to grant non Obſtante. Thirdly, The Grantee diſabled to take the Office, yet the King by his Royal Sovereign Power of commanding, may command any Man by his Patent (for ſuch Cauſes as, he in his Wiſdom doth think meet and profitable for himſelf and the Common-wealth, of which he himſelf is ſolely Judge) to ſerve him and the Weal publick, as Sheriff of ſuch a County, for Years, or for Life, &c. And ſo it was reſolved by all the Juſtices of England in the Exchequer Chamber, 2 H. VII.

This learned Reporter, after ſome other Caſes in Proof of this Point, obſerves farther from 4 Hen. IV. Cap. 34. Where 'tis enacted that no Welſhman be Juſtice, Chamberlain, Treaſurer, Sheriff, Steward, Conſtable of a Caſtle, Eſcheator, Coroner, or Chief Foreſter, or any other Officer whatſoever, nor Keeper of Records, &c. in any part of Wales, notwithſtanding any Patent made to the contrary, with Clauſe of Non Obſtante licet ſit Wallicus natus: And yet without Queſtion, continues the Year Book, the King may grant with a non Obſtante.

And if it ſhould be objected, Sir Edward Coke's twelfth Report is not of the ſame unconteſted Authority with the reſt. The Reader may conſult the Year Book from whence the Argument is drawn; and beſides to reinforce the Preſident, the point is reſolved the ſame way, by all the Judges of England, (Coke Report 7. Calvin's Caſe, fol. 14.) In the Reign of King James I. The Words ſtand thus. Every Subject is by his natural Allegiance bound to ſerve and obey his Sovereign, &c. It is enacted by the Parliament of 23 Hen. VI. that no Man ſhould ſerve the King as Sheriff of any County above one Year, and that notwithſtanding any Clauſe of Non Obſtante to the contrary; that is to ſay, notwithſtanding that the King ſhould expreſly diſpenſe with the ſaid Act; howbeit it is agreed 2 Hen. VII. that againſt the expreſs Purview of that Act, the King may by a ſpecial Non Obſtante diſpenſe with that Act; for that the Act could not bar the King of the Service of his Subject, which the Law of Nature did give unto him. This was the Senſe of all the Judges of England in the Exchequer Chamber.

To what has been urged may be added, 8 R. II. Cap. 2. THAT NO MAN SHOULD GO JUDGE OF ASSIZE INTO HIS OWN COUNTY. 10 Ed. III. Cap. 3. THAT WHOEVER HAS A PARDON OF FELONY SHALL FIND SURETIES FOR HIS GOOD BEHAVIOUR, OR HIS PARDON SHALL BE VOID: And yet theſe Statutes have been all along diſpenſed with.

And not to cite all the Caſes of Diſpenſations, I ſhall only mention two Authorities of the greateſt Weight. They are the Conceſſions of the Commons of England in Parliament acknowledging this Power of diipenſing lodged in the King; and to give ſtill more Force to what is offered, we are to obſerve that when the Commons owned this Extent of the Prerogative, they were not in a ſubmiſſive complying Temper, but in high Debate with the Crown, in Defence of Liberty and Property.

The firſt Inſtance ſtands upon the Parliament Rolls, Rot. Parl. 1 Hen. V. n. 15. 'Tis printed in Rolls. Second Abridgment. Tit. Prerogative. 180. The Words of the Record are theſe; The Commons pray that the Statutes for voiding of Aliens out of the Kingdom may be kept and executed: To which the King agrees, ſaving his Prerogative, that he may diſpenſe with whom he pleaſes; and upon this the Commons anſwered, that their Intent was no other, nor never ſhall be by the Grace of God.

And afterwards in the ſame Parliament (Rot. Parl. 1 Hen. V. n. 22.) when the Commons pray that the Statutes of Proviſors, made for ſtopping the Incroachments of the Court of Rome, may be put in Execution, remembring the King's Anſwer in the former Caſe, they inſert the ſaving of the Prerogative in their Application or Prayer, upon which the King agrees to it.

But the fulleſt Conceſſion of the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament was that of 3 Car. I. occaſioned by the Debate of both Houſes upon the Petition of Right. 'Tis in Ruſhworth's Collections (Part I.) as 'twas delivered by Mr. Glanvill, at a full Committee of both Houſes (the 23d of May 1628.) in the Painted Chamber. And here the Reader is not to take it for the ſingle Opinion of this learned Gentleman, but for the Senſe of all the Commons: He addreſſes the Lords thus. Having reduced to your Lordſhips Memory the Effects of your own Reaſons; I will now, with your Lordſhips Favour, come to the Points of our Reply, wherein I moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhips, to weigh the Reaſons which I ſhall preſent, not as the Senſe of my ſelf, the weakeſt Member of our Houſe, but as the genuine and true Senſe of the whole Houſe of Commons, conceived in a Buſineſs debated there with the greateſt Gravity and Solemnity, with the greateſt concurrence of Opinions and Unanimity, that ever was in any Buſineſs maturely agitated in that Houſe.

Then coming to ſpeak of the Point in Queſtion he delivers the Senſe of the Commons in theſe Words.

There is a Truſt inſeparably repoſed in the Perſons of the Kings of England, but that Truſt is regulated by Law; for Example, when Statutes are made to prohibit things not Mala in ſe, but only Mala quia prohibita, under certain Forfeitures and Penalties to accrue to the King, and to the Informers that ſhall ſue for the Breach of them: The Commons muſt and ever will acknowledge a Regal and Sovereign Prerogative in the King touching ſuch Statutes, that it is in his Majeſty's abſolute and undoubted Power to grant Diſpenſations to particular Perſons, with the Clauſes of non Obſtante, to do as they might have done before thoſe Statutes, wherein his Majeſty conferring Grace and Favour upon ſome, doth not do wrong to others; but there is a Difference between thoſe Statutes and the Laws and Statutes whereon the Petition is grounded: By thoſe Statutes the Subject has no Intereſt in the Penalties, which are all the Fruit ſuch Statutes can produce (that is, to ſuch Informer) until by Suit or Information commenced, he become entitled to the particular Forfeitures; whereas the Laws and Statutes mentioned in our Petition are of another Nature; there ſhall your Lordſhips find us to rely upon the good old Statute called Magna Charta, which declareth and confirmeth the antient common Laws of the Liberties of England. There ſhall your Lordſhips alſo find us to inſiſt upon divers other moſt material Statutes, made in the time of King Edward III. and King Edward IV. and other famous Kings, for Explanation and Ratification of the lawful Rights and Privileges belonging to the Subjects of this Realm: Laws not inflicting Penalties upon Offenders in malis prohibitis, but Laws declarative or poſitive, conferring or confirming ipſo facto, an inherent Right and Intereſt of Liberty and Freedom in the Subjects of this Realm, as their Birthrights and Inheritances deſcendible to their Heirs and Poſterity: Statutes incorporate into the Body of the Common Law, over which (with Reverence be it ſpoken) there is no Truſt in the King's Sovereign Power or Prerogative Royal to enable him to diſpenſe with them, or to take from his Subjects that Birthright or Inheritance which they have in their Liberties, by virtue of the Common Law and of theſe Statutes.

From hence 'tis plain firſt, that the Commons here in Parliament expreſſly acknowledge that the King has an undoubted Power of diſpenſing with Laws prohibiting things not mala in ſe, but only mala quia prohibita, Laws that are made, as the Chief Juſtice Vaughan words it, pro bono populi complicati. 2^dly, Notwithſtanding this Conceſſion, the Commons plainly deny the King's having any Right for diſpenſing with Magna Charta, or any other Laws, by which the Lives, Liberties, and Intereſts of the Subject are ſecured: For theſe Laws being made pro bono ſingulorum populi, are beyond the Compaſs of the Prerogative.

The Learned Sir Edward Herbert, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, mentions ſeveral Objections againſt the King's diſpenſing Power, and returns ſufficient Anſwers to them: But theſe being too long to inſert, I ſhall refer the Reader to his Defence of the Judgment given by him in Sir Edward Hale's Caſe. Printed London 1688.

DITMAINING, or Dictmaining, a Town with a Citadel. 'Tis in the Circle of Bavaria, and ſtands upon the River Saltz within the Archbiſhoprick of Saltzbourg, between Saltzbourg and Bruckhauſen, ſeven Leagues from the firſt, and two from the latter. * Baudrand.

DIVITIACUS, a Nobleman of the firſt Rank of the Ædui in Gaul, was a firm and active Ally of the Romans. Julius Cæſar had a great Regard for him, and when his Brother Dumnorix engaged in the Revolt of the Helvetii, he got his Pardon for Diviaticus's ſake. Cæſar, de Bello Gallico.*

* DIVORCE, a Separation between Man and Wife. To what has been obſerved upon this Article in my Engliſh Supplement to Morery, I ſhall add ſomething farther upon the Argument: 'Tis certain our Bleſſed Saviour forbids Divorce upon any Pretence excepting in the Caſe of Adultery; from whence a Queſtion has riſen, whether in the Caſe of Adultery on either ſide, a full Divorce is warrantable. And here both Practice and Opinion is plain, that a Separation as to living together is allowable, not only in this Caſe, but in ſome others. The Difficulty is in reſolving the Point, whether when a Husband has parted with his Wife upon the Score of Adultery, 'tis lawful for her to marry again. St. Auguſtin confeſſes, this Queſtion is not clearly determined in the Goſpels. The antient and modern Expoſitors are not agreed in the Explanation of our Saviour's Words, and the Practice of the antient Church has been different. The preſent Greek Church purſuant to antient Cuſtom allows the Marriage diſſolved in more Caſes beſides that of Adultery: This Latitude has likewiſe been granted by the Laws of Chriſtian Emperors, neither did the Council of Florence ſcruple this Indulgence ſo far as to think it a ſufficient Reaſon to hinder the Coalition of the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches. To give the Reader ſomething upon this Subject from the Theodoſian Code: The Emperor Conſtantine the Great in his Conſtitution of the warrantable Cauſes of Divorce, and the Penalties of thoſe made upon inſufficient Motives, ſpeaks thus. " Our Pleaſure " is, that it ſhall not be lawful for any Woman to part " with her Husband out of Levity, and ſlender Pre- " tence, that is, when ſhe has nothing to alledge, but his " being given to drinking, gaming, and Intrigues: " Neither ſhall it be lawful for Men to diſmiſs their " Wives for every petty Diſlike: But to make the Wo- " man's Bill of Divorce good, one of theſe things " muſt be proved againſt her Husband, either that he has " been guilty of Murder, Magic, or breaking up " Graves. In caſe of the Proof of any of theſe Arti- " cles ſhe ſhall be commended for her Proſecution and " have her Dowry returned. But if ſhe ſends her Hus- " band an Inſtrument of Separation, upon any other " Head than thoſe three abovementioned, her Portion " and Equipage are all forfeited to her Husband, and " over and above ſhe ſhall be baniſhed for her Confi- " dence. As for the Men, when they have a mind to " be divorced from their Wives they muſt prove one " of theſe three Crimes upon them, either that they are " Strumpets, Witches, or Procureſſes: For if a Man " parts with his Wife, who is no Slave, for any other " Reaſon than the Crimes laſt mentioned, he ſhall reſtore " her all her Fortune, and be barred marrying another. " And if he happens to engage in farther Marriage, it " ſhall be lawful for his firſt Wife to ſeize the Hus- " band's Eſtate, and his ſecond Wife's Fortune, by way " of Reparation."

The Conſtitution of the Emperor Honorius, has ſomething farther upon the Buſineſs of Divorce. " This Conſtitution is much the ſame with that of Con- " ſtantine the Great, as to inſufficient Motives for Se- " paration. But in Caſe the Crimes are heinous on the " Man's Side, the Woman has her Portion returned " together with what her Husband preſented her with, " and ſettled upon her; ſhe has likewiſe the Liberty of " marrying again after five Years, reckoning from the " Date of the Divorce. If the firſt Husband alledges " great Crimes in Juſtification of his Divorce, and pro- " ſecutes his Wife, upon the Articles mentioned in " Conſtantine's Conſtitution: In this Caſe if Judgment " is given for him, he ſhall keep the Portion and Pre- " ſents, and have the Liberty of marrying another at " his Pleaſure. But if he can prove nothing but Miſ- " behaviour in Humour and Management; it ſhall be " lawful for him to take what he preſented, and marry " again at the End of two Years, but then he muſt return " his firſt Wife her Dowry. But if the Husband has " no Crimes nor Weight of Charge to object, and parts " only out of Freak and croſs Temper, he is then to " loſe his Wife's Fortune, and what he preſented her " with at the Contract, and over and above to be for " ever confined to ſingle Life, as a Penalty for his " Injuſtice; the Woman being allowed to marry again, " at the Expiration of one Year." From hence we may obſerve there was ſome Conſideration of Advantage given to the Man. For, firſt, when the Husband was divorced by his Wife without any reaſonable Motive, the Man had the Liberty of marrying again immediately; diately; whereas when the Woman received the ſame ill Uſage ſhe was obliged to ſtay a Year unmarried. Secondly; When a Woman parted with her Husband, for ill Behaviour, or even for Licentiouſneſs, ſhe was for ever barred marrying any other Perſon; whereas when the Man parted with his Wife for no greater Reaſons, he was obliged to live ſingle only two Years. Thirdly; when the Woman got divorced from her Husband for the great Crimes abovementioned, ſhe was barred marrying for five Years; whereas the Man might have another Wife, in the ſame Caſe, as ſoon as he had a mind to it. But then, laſtly, when either of them parted to a Divorce for no Reaſon, the Penalty was equal in this Circumſtance; for both of them were for ever barred marrying again.

In the latter Centuries, the Latin Church has not allowed Divorce ſo far as to give the Woman or the Man Leave to marry again during the Life of each other. * Cod. Theod. Tom. I. Tit. 16. de Repudiis, pag. 310. 313. 315.

DOARO, a Town upon the Coaſt of Ajan in Æthiopia. 'Tis five and twenty Leagues from the Town Adel to the South, and the Capital of one of the Provinces which the Galls conquered from the Abyſſins. * Maty, Diction.

DOBAS, a Province of Abyſſinia in Africk. 'Tis ſituated between the Kingdoms of Dangali and Fatigara, and here modern Geographers place the Town Dobas upon the River Magadoxo. * Baudrand.

DOGADO, a Province belonging to the Republick of Venice in Italy. 'Tis bounded on the South by the Poleſine; on the Weſt by the Paduan; on the North by the Territories of Treveſa, and on the Eaſt by the Gulph of Venice. This Province lies moſtly upon the Coaſt, and ſtretches not far into the Country; There are a great many little Iſlands belonging to it near the Shore, which are called the Lagunes of Venice. This Diviſion has beſides the Capital Venice, the following Cities, viz. Loredo, Chioſa, Murano, Meſtre, Marghera, and Torcello. Baudrand and ſome other Geographers throw in Caorlo, Marano, Grado, and the neighbouring Iſles called the Lagunes de Marano; and thus they ſtretch the Dogado to the Mouth of the River Liſonſo.

DOLCE, Rio Dolce, a River within the Audience of Guatimala in Northern America. It riſes near the Town Vera Pax, croſſes the whole Province of the ſame Name, where it makes two Lakes called Lago Dolce, and falls into the Golph Dolce which is the South Part of the Golph Guanajos. * Maty, Diction.

* DOMINICANS, a Religious Order founded by St. Dominic, and approved by Pope Innocent III. in the Council of Lateran, A. D. 1212 and confirmed the Year after by his Succeſſor Honorius III; it ſtands upon St. Auguſtin's Rule, with ſome ſupplemental Conſtitutions. This Order has furniſhed ſome Popes, ſeveral Cardinals, and a great Number of Biſhops and eminent Writers, as the Reader may ſee by the following Liſt. After St. Dominic, Jordain, Thomas Aquinas, Albertus Magnus, St. Raymond of Pennafort, St. Vincent Ferrier, St. Hyacinth, St. Antoninus, St. Peter Martyr, &c. Hugo de St. Chier, Cardinal Cajetan, Lewis of Granada, Dominicus Soto, &c. may be reckoned the moſt eminent both for their Learning and Piety. This Order has furniſhed the Church of Rome with three Popes, forty eight Cardinals, three and twenty Patriarchs, fifteen hundred Biſhops, ſix hundred Archbiſhops, forty three Nuntio's or Legates, ſixty nine Maſters of the ſacred Palace, eighty four Confeſſors to the Kings of Spain, Caſtile or Arragon, fifteen Confeſſors to the Kings of Portugal, ſixteen to the Kings of France, ſix to the Kings of England, and one and twenty to the Kings of Poland. The Celebrated Doctors and Writers of this Order amounts to a very great Number. The Nuns of St. Catherine's of Sienna live by the Dominican Rule. There is likewiſe a third Order of Dominicans of both Sexes ſettled into ſeveral Congregations or Communities, and living under preſcribed Regulations; the Dominicans are called Jacobins in France, becauſe their firſt Convent at Paris was built in St. James's Street. Father John Michael attempted the Reformation of this Order in the Beginning of the ſeventeenth Century, a great many Monaſteries received his Improvement, and Pope Paul V. confirmed it, A. D. 1608. at the Inſtance of King Henry IV. * Ferdinand of Caſtile, Antonio Flaminio &c.

DOMINICAL. (The Letter) A Letter of the Alphabet made Uſe of to mark the Sundays for the whole Year. There are ſeven of them, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and to find the Order of theſe Letters, the Cycle of the Sun was invented, which makes part of the Church Computation, and takes in twenty eight Years; for at the End of this Period, the Dominical Letters return into the ſame Order they had at the Beginning. The Antient Chriſtians put them in their Calendars in the Room of the eight Nundinal Letters, which ſtood in that of the Pagan Romans. The ſeven Dominical Letters, follow each other, and come up to ſhew the Sunday in a retrograde Order: For Inſtance, if A is the Dominical Letter this Year, the next Year G, which is the laſt of the Set, will be the Dominical Letter: The Year after F, and ſo always running up backwards 'till you return to A. The Reaſon of this retrograde Order ſtands thus: Becauſe the Year conſiſting of 365 Days, amounting to 52 Weeks and one Day, it follows that if the Letter A ſtands upon the firſt Day of the Year which happens to be a Sunday, the ſame Letter A will likewiſe ſtand upon the firſt Day of the three and fiftieth Week which falls upon the laſt of December, and is likewiſe a Sunday. Thus the Monday which is the firſt of January being likewiſe marked with the Letter A, the following Sunday which is the ſeventh of January, comes under the Letter G, which ſtands for the Dominical Letter of this ſecond Year. But then the Biſſextile or Leap-Year changes the Order of this Dominical Circle which would otherwiſe come round in ſeven Years. For the Letter F, which falls to the Day immediately preceding the Biſſextile, this Letter being once repeated or coming up two Days together, 'twill follow that the Letter E, which ſhould have been the Dominical Letter of this Year, being ſhoved off from Sunday. By this breaking off of the Dominical Circle the Letter D becomes the Dominical Letter for the ſame Leap-Year. By Conſequence there muſt be two Dominical Letters for the intercalary Year; one of them laſting to the Biſſextile, that is to the twenty fourth of February, and the other for the reſt of the Year. Now this Break, made by the Biſſextile, is the Reaſon why the Dominical Letters can't return back and finiſh their Circle 'till the Period of eight and twenty Years is finiſhed; and this is the Uſe and Original of the Cycle of the Sun. By Pope Gregory XIII.'s Reformation of the Kalendar, the Order of the Dominical Letters were diſturbed for the Year 1582, which in the beginning had G for the Dominical Letter; when ten Days were ſtruck out, which docking took Place upon the fourth of October, this Year the Letter C took Place where G ſtood before. Thus the Dominical Letter of the old, or Julian Kalendar, ſtands four Seats or Letters before the Gregorian. For Inſtance, the Letter A of the old anſwers to the Letter D of the new, and for this Reaſon 'twas found neceſſary to make a new Table of the Dominical Letters by the Syſtem of the old Kalendar, in order to aſſign them a proper Place in the new.

DOMINICK of Jeruſalem: Born at Jeruſalem A. D. 1550. Was bred in the School of Sapheth, where he commenced a Rabby and taught the Talmud; afterwards he practiſed Phyſick, and was ſent for by the Grand Seignior to Conſtantinople. At the Age of fifty Years he came off from Judaiſm, and travelling to Rome he was received into the Novice's College, where he taught Hebrew, and tranſlated all the New Teſtament into that Language. * Bartolocci, Bibliotheca Rabin. Baſnage Hiſtoire des Juifs, &c.

* DOMITILLA Flavia, the Emperor Domitian's Niece was married to Flavius Clemens Conſul for the Year 95. Her Husband and her ſelf were Converts to Chriſtianity, and both proſecuted upon that Score. Clemens was executed by the Emperor's Order in the Year 95, immediately after his Conſulſhip was out. Domitilla being thus made a Widow, the Emperor propoſed another Match to her, but not prevailing to gain her Conſent, he baniſhed her to the Iſland Pandataria, now called Sancta Maria, lying in the Bay of Puteoli. Hiſtory furniſhes nothing farther about this Lady; for the Relation extant in the Acts which go under her Name, and forged by the Manichæans, importing that ſhe returned to Rome in the Reign of Nerva, and was afterwards baniſhed again for her Religion to Terracina, when Trajan was Emperor, and that ſhe ſuffered at the Stake with Euphroſine and Theodora her Foſter Siſters; this Report, I ſay, ſtands upon no good Authority. Domitilla had a Daughter of her own Name married to Flavius Oneſſimus. What remains of the Hiſtory of Flavius Clemens and Domitilla is taken from Dion Caſſius, Suetonius, and St. Jerome.

Euſebius mentions one Flavia Domitilla a ſingle Lady, Siſter to the Conſul Flavius Clemens; and that ſhe was baniſhed by Domitian into the Iſland Pontia A. D. 95. Some Authors make this Lady the ſame with that above mentioned; but 'tis more probable they were two Perſons, and that the laſt was baniſhed about the ſame time with the firſt to a neighbouring Iſland: And that according to St. Jerome, ſhe paſſed her time ill there a great while, and at laſt, as 'tis ſuppoſed, ſhe received the Crown of Martyrdom. * Euſeb. Eccl. Hiſt. Lib. III. cap. 18. Hier. Epiſt. XXVI. Baillet Vies des Saints Mois de Maie.

DOMITIUS SABINUS, a military Tribune or Commander of a Legion, was one of the braveſt Officers in Veſpaſian's Army. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf frequently in the War againſt the Jews, and was put to Death by the Emperor Vitellius, becauſe he ſeized the Capitol which was Jupiter's Temple, in Favour of his Brother Veſpaſian. * Joſephus de Bell. Judaic. Lib. III. Cap. 28. Lib. V. Cap. 24.

DOMME, a Town of Perigord in France. It ſtands upon the Dordogne about two Leagues from Sarlat to the South. * Maty, Diction.

DOMNUS Firſt of this Name, Biſhop of Antioch, lived in the third Century: A Council of Biſhops met a ſecond time at Antioch, A. D. 270. elected him in the room of Paulus Samoſatenus, who drew a Blemiſh upon his Character by his Heterodoxy and irregular Life. Domnus was the Son of Demetrianus who had governed that Church immediately before Paul laſt mentioned: Notwithſtanding he was elected Biſhop of Antioch in the Year 270, he had not the Poſſeſſion of this See till after the Emperor Aurelian had recover'd Antioch from Xenobia A. D. 272. The not obſerving this Circumſtance brought Cardinal Baronius into a Miſtake. For this Annaliſt ſets Domnus's Election to the Year 272. He likewiſe places his Death at the Year 277. though 'tis not certainly known when it happen'd. Timeus, and afterwards Cyrillus ſucceeded him before the end of the Century. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Lib. VII. Cap. 23. & in Chron. Baron. A. C. 277. N. 47. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. III.

DOMNUS IIᵈ. Patriarch of Antioch, ſucceeded his Uncle John A. D. 436. He had engaged himſelf to the Life of a Recluſe in the Monaſtery of Euthymius; from whence he was dragged out, and placed in the Epiſcopal Chair of Antioch: Euthymius foretold his Misfortune, that Knaves would make Advantage of the Eaſineſs of his Temper, and get him depoſed; which Prediction was juſtified by the Event. Maximus was put in his Place, and Pope Leo the Firſt is ſaid to interpoſe ſo far as to confirm the Election. The tenth Seſſion of the Council of Chalcedon informs us that this Maximus requeſted the Synod that ſome part of the Revenues of his Patriarchate might be aſſigned for Domnus's Subſiſtence. This was granted, aud the Proportion left to his Diſcretion. Domnus had been depoſed by Dioſcorus, and Maximus put in his Place. Pope Leo took this laſt Prelate by the Hand, ſo that Domnus was the only Biſhop amongſt thoſe who had been depoſed by Dioſcorus at the pretended Council of Epheſus, who continued unreſtored to his See. The Author of St. Euthymius's Life reports, that Domnus after his being depoſed returned to his Monaſtery much troubled for quitting it, and ſpent the reſt of his Time in Diſcipline and Tears. Father Queſnel pretends he was dead when the Council of Chalcedon was held, and that the Buſineſs ſuppoſed to be done in this Council where Domnus is mentioned, which the Antients place at the End of the VIIth, and the Moderns at the End of the IXth Action, is a counterfeit Record. Indeed, there is only a Latin Tranſlation of this Tranſlation, and that not to be met with, but in the ſingle Manuſcript of M. Joly: Old Writers ſay nothing about it. 'Tis not fixed to a certain Place in the Council: Juſtinian and the Vth general Council aſſure us Domnus was condemned after his Death. Eutychius reports Domnus died the Year after the pretended Council of Epheſus. Theſe are the Reaſons Father Queſnel makes uſe of to deſtroy the Credit of this Account: Where he likewiſe obſerves, the Style does not agree with the Age it pretends to. On the other hand Baluzius ſtands up for the Truth of the Relation; argues 'twas owned for matter of Fact by the Deacon Ruſticus in the Vth Century; that M. Joly's Manuſcript was tranſcribed from another antient one, and that there are a great many other Manuſcripts which report the ſame thing, &c. * Queſnel in Diſſertationibus ad S. Leonem. Baluz. Nova Collectio Concilior. Liberatus Breviar, Cap. 12. Concil. Chalcedon. Seſſ. 1, 2, & 9.

DOMNIN, or Donnin (St.) a famous Italian Martyr living in the beginning of the Fourth Century. He left his Name upon the Town Borgo-San-Domnino, now an Epiſcopal See. He was, as 'tis ſaid, a White Staff Officer in Maximinianus Herculeus's Court. This Prince coming to Milan, publiſhed a perſecuting Edict there, and had a mind to ſee it executed himſelf. Domnin made his Eſcape, and endeavoured to get to Rome: But the Soldiers overtook him in his Journey, cut off his Head, and returned to their Quarters. His Body was buried where he was killed, that is, between the Towns of Parma and Placentia. Afterwards a Church was built over his Tomb, and a Town, as has been obſerved, carries his Name. * Acta Sancta Domnin apud Surium. De Tillemont au Cinq. Tome de les Memoires.

DONALD VII. King of Scotland, for his uſurping the Crown of Scotland, A. D. 1091. in Morery Vol. firſt, read One thouſand thirty eight. And expunge the Articles of Donald, Firſt, Second, Third, in Morery. Vol. firſt.

* DONATUS Biſhop of Caſæ Nigræ in Numidia, was one of the chief Abettors of Majorinus. He aſſiſted A. D. 311. at a Council of ſeventy Biſhops of Numidia who depoſed Cecilian, and was the main Informer againſt that Prelate in the Council of Rome, where he was depoſed and excommunicated for his falſe Evidence. After this Cenſure and Diſgrace he returned to Carthage, and renewed the Schiſm. * See Article Donatiſts.

* DONATUS a ſchiſmatical Biſhop of Carthage, different from him mentioned in the foregoing Article: However, he was of the ſame Faction, and Head of the Party after the Death of Majorinus, to whom he ſucceeded in the Year 316. This Donatus was a Perſon of Capacity, Learning, and Elocution, and of a regular Life; but withal of ſo haughty a Temper, that he deſpiſed all other People, and thought every body beneath him. He had ſo much Credit with thoſe of his own Sentiment, that they took their Denomination from him. He ſtrengthned the Schiſm in Africk, both by his Character and his Writings. St. Jerome takes notice that he wrote a great many Tracts in Defenſe of his Sect, together with a Diſcourſe de Spiritu Sancto, wherein he agrees with the Doctrine of the Arians. St. Auguſtin likewiſe obſerves him hetrodox in the Article of the Trinity, and that tho' he believed the three Perſons of the ſame Subſtance, he notwithſtanding maintained the Son inferior to the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt to the Son. He was baniſhed in the Reign of Conſtans, for which Reaſon Petilian in the Conference at Carthage calls him Sanctæ Memoriæ Martirialis Gloriæ Virum. He died in this Exile before the Reign of Julian, about the Year 355. * Optat. Auguſtin Collatio Carthaginenſis. Hieron. de Scriptor. Eccleſiaſt.

* DONATISTS, Schiſmaticks in Africk ſo called from Donatus Head of the Party. This Schiſm began in the Year 311. The Occaſion was this; Menſurius, Biſhop of Carthage, dying in his Return from Court in the Year 310, Cecilian was choſen in his room by general Conſent, and conſecrated by Felix Biſhop of Aptunge. Lucilla, a wealthy high ſpirited Lady, living then at Carthage, was diſpleaſed with his Promotion, ſhe had taken a Diſguſt at Cecilian, becauſe when he was Arch-Deacon he had reprimanded her for kiſſing the Bones of a pretended Martyr, before ſhe received the holy Euchariſt. Beſides, he had two Rivals, Botrus, and Celeſtius, who graſping at Menſurius's See, had drawn the neighbouring Biſhops together who ordained Cecilian. Farther, Menſurius being called to Court by the Emperor's Order, left the Church Plate and Ornaments in the Hands of ſome Perſons of Conſideration, having firſt made an Inventory of them which he gave an old Woman to keep. The Deſign was, that this holy Furniture ſhould be delivered to the Perſon who ſucceeded Menſurius. This Note was accordingly given Cecilian, who ſummoned thoſe who were truſted with the Contents. Theſe Men who had no Scruple about Sacrilege, but were diſpoſed to keep what they had, joined Botrus, Celeſtius and Lucilla, and worked up a Schiſm to ſtrengthen their Intereſt. And to this Purpoſe they invited Secundus and the Biſhops of Numidia to Carthage. Theſe Prelates, to the Number of ſeventy, appeared there, and were well received by Cecilian's Enemies. They met in a private Houſe, and cited Cecilian. This Biſhop refuſing to appear before them, they pronounced a Sentence of Depoſition and Excommunication againſt him, and conſecrated Majorinus, Lucilla's Chaplain, Biſhop of Carthage; who was no more than a Reader when Cecilian was Arch-Deacon. To ſupport their Practice they wrote a circular Letter to all the African Churches, wherein they charge the Biſhops who conſecrated Cecilian with being Traditors, that is, that they had delivered the Bible and the holy Furniture up to the Heathens to avoid Perſecution, and that by this criminal Cowardice they had forfeited their Character. From whence they argued Cecilian's Ordination void, acquainting the Biſhops with this Nullity, that they might refuſe him Communion, and own Majorinus for Biſhop of Carthage. A great many African Biſhops giving Credit to theſe Letters, drew off to a Schiſm; part of this Order in Africk ſtanding for Cecilian, and part for Majorinus: But then Cecilian had the Friendſhip of the tranſmarine Churches, who took him by the hand, and refuſed to communicate with Majorinus. The Emperor Conſtantine owned Cecilian for the lawful Biſhop A. D. 313, and publiſhed Recripts in Diſcountenance of the Schiſmaticks. Annulinus Proconſul of Africk acquainting both Parties with the Emperor's Pleaſure, and exhorting to a Coalition, Cecilian's Adverſaries preſented two Petitions, one ſealed with this Superſcription, The Petition of the Catholick Church containing Cecilian's Crimes given in by Majorinus's Party. The other Petition was open, in which they deſired the Emperor to aſſign them ſome Biſhops of Gaul, to try the Cauſe. Annulinus ſent theſe Petitions to Conſtantine, who aſſigned them Judges: Theſe were Maternus Biſhop of Cologne, Reticius of Autun, and Marinus of Arles, who, with Miltiades Biſhop of Rome, were to determine this Controverſy. The Emperor at the ſame time diſpatched an Order to Annulinus to convey Cecilian to Rome with ten Biſhops of his Party, together with the ſame Number of his Adverſary's. Both Sides obeyed this Order, and came to Rome in October. Donatus Biſhop of Caſæ Nigræ appeared at the Head of Majorinus's Party. The four Biſhops for trying the Cauſe above mentioned, met likewiſe at Rome, with fifteen Italians of the ſame Character. They acquitted Cecilian, and depoſed Donatus, allowing the other Biſhops of Majorinus's Party the Liberty of cloſing with the Catholicks; in which Caſe their Characters ſhould remain entire: and where there happened to be two Biſhops for the ſame See, one ordained by Majorinus, and the other by Cecilian, the ſenior Biſhop ſhould continue upon the Place, and the other be provided with a new See. The Emperor gave Donatus leave to return into Africk, on Condition that he ſhould not go to Carthage; and as for Cecilian, his Majeſty, at the Inſtance of Philuminus, kept him at Breſcia, under Pretence of conſulting the Repoſe of the Church: There were two Biſhops diſpatched into Africk, to put the Decrees of the Council at Rome in Execution; but the ſeditious Behaviour of Donatus's Party embarraſſed the Buſineſs; ſoon after Donatus himſelf came to Carthage, which News being brought to Cecilian, he likewiſe ſailed thither himſelf; and thus they came to a new Rupture. The Donatiſts went to Court, and brought in a freſh Charge againſt Cecilian; ſetting forth that the Biſhops in the Council at Rome, had been ſhort in their Enquiry, and not thoroughly examined all the Articles of the Impeachment. The Emperor being willing to give them Satisfaction, ordered the Proconſul Ælianus to examine the Charge they had brought againſt Felix Biſhop of Aptunge, and convened a more numerous Council at Arles. This Synod was held A. D. 314. and here Cecilian was likewiſe acquitted; the main Evidence againſt him and the Promoters of the Schiſm were condemned, and the ſame Temper for reconciling both Communions, decreed at the Council at Rome, was ſettled here. The Donatiſts appealed from this Synod to the Emperor, who at firſt rejected their Addreſs with great Diſlike; but at laſt tired with their Importunity, and deſirous to put an End to the Diſpute, undertook the Cognizance of this Affair: Here Cecilian was pronounced innocent, and his Adverſaries guilty of notorious Calumnies. This Judgment was given by his Majeſty in November, A. D. 316. In the mean time Majorinus departed this Life, and was ſucceeded by one Donatus different from Donatus of Caſæ Nigræ. This Biſhop was a Man of Parts and regular Life, but of a haughty Temper. However, by the Strength of his Character, and the Vigour of his Conduct, he kept up his Party, and reinforced the Schiſm in Africk. The Donatiſts had a great Number of Biſhops and Laity in their Intereſt; ſome of which diſtinguiſhed themſelves unhappily in outraging the Catholicks; but perceiving all the reſt of Chriſtendom adhered to Cecilian's Communion, they ſtarted this Paradox, That the true Church was every where ſunk and extinguiſhed, excepting in the ſmall Remainder among themſelves in Africk. They likewiſe revived the old Doctrine of the African Biſhops, that Baptiſm, and the other Sacraments adminiſtred out of the Church were null, and to no Purpoſe. Thus they rebaptized all thoſe, who deſerted from the Catholick Church to their Party: They abhorred the Euchariſtick Sacrifice of the Catholicks, and trampled upon the conſecrated Elements. They believed, or at leaſt they pretended ſo, that the Chriſm, Unctions and Ordinations of the Catholicks were of none Effect. Thus they defaced and burnt their Altars, broke their Chalices, waſhed the Walls and Pavement of their Churches, and had no regard to the Conſecrations of Biſhops performed in the Catholick Church: This Practice obliged the Champions of the Church, (having firſt wiped off the Imputations thrown upon Felix and Cecilian) to prove againſt the Donatiſts, that Baptiſm adminiſtred by Schiſmaticks was valid, and that they had made themſelves deeply guilty, by rebaptizing thoſe baptized by the Catholicks. The Donatiſts fancying the Church was no where but amongſt themſelves, endeavoured to form a Party at Rome, to which Purpoſe they ſent an African Biſhop thither, who drew a little Congregation into a Cave, which occaſioned their being called Montenſes, Campitæ, Rupitæ; and this Biſhop had his Succeſſion continued for ſome time by others of the ſame Perſuaſion, who called themſelves Biſhops of Rome; they likewiſe ſent off more of the ſame Character into Spain and other Places: But they were little followed, their Sect growing to no conſiderable Numbers, excepting in Africk. The Emperor, willing to put a Stop to their Violence, publiſhed Laws againſt them, and ſent Perſons with Commiſſion into Africk to menace them to a Coalition, and oblige them to return to the Church. The Emperor Conſtans diſpatched Paulus and Macarius thither for this Purpoſe, who patched up a Union for ſome time: But Julian the Apoſtate giving Liberty of Conſcience, the Schiſm recommenced and continued: Theſe Donatiſts not only divided from the Church, but ſplit into Parties amongſt themſelves. The moſt remarkable Subdiviſions were thoſe of the Rogatiſts and Maximinianiſts. St. Auguſtin appeared powerfully againſt the Donatiſts in ſeveral of his Tracts. In the Year 410, the Emperor Honorius ordered the famous Conference at Carthage; 'twas held before Count Marcellinus, where a great many Biſhops of each Party appeared; there were ſeven on both Sides pitched upon to manage the Diſpute. After the Charge was examined, and the Controverſy gone through, Marcellinus gave Sentence in Favour of the Catholicks, ordered their Churches ſhall be reſtored, and forbad the Donatiſts Meetings. This Award was confirmed by the Emperor Honorius, who fined thoſe who refuſed to communicate with the Catholick Church. This Reſtraint made the Donatiſts more turbulent than before. However, the Inſtructions the People received from the Catholick Biſhops, the Amerciaments, Baniſhment, and Impracticableneſs of keeping up their Meetings, made the Schiſm dwindle and decreaſe very much. Thoſe who remained when the Vandals ſeized Africk, had their Share of ſuffering with the Catholicks, and were almoſt all expelled Africk. However, there was ſome of them in that Country in Gregory the Great's Time, that is in the ſixth and ſeventh Centuries. * Optatus tatus Milevit. de Schiſmate Donatiſtarum. St. Auguſtin's Works againſt the Donatiſts contained in the IX Tome. Collatio Carthaginenſis. Monumenta omnia ad Donatiſtarum hiſtoriam pertinentia. Collected by M. Du Pin. in his Edition of Optatus in fol. Baronius; Henrici Valeſii Diſſertatio de Schiſmate Donatiſtarum. De Tillemont. Memoires Eccleſiaſtiques.

DOROTHEA (St.) a Virgin and Confeſſor of Alexandria, mentioned by Euſebius and Ruffinus; ſhe declared herſelf a Chriſtian, in the Perſecution under Maximinus: She was a Perſon of Genius and Learning, and when brought before the Emperor and menaced, maintained her Conſcience; ſhe was not condemned to Death, but only ſtriped of her Eſtate and baniſhed. This happened, as near as can be conjectured, in 311. * Euſeb. Eccleſ. Hiſt. Lib. VIII. cap. 14.

DOROTHEUS, Chamberlain to the Emperor Diocletian, ſuffered Martyrdom with Gorgonius, Peter, and ſome other Officers belonging to this Prince. * Euſeb. Lib. VIII. Cap. 1. & 6. Lactantius, de Mortibus Perſecutorum. Cap. 15. Ruffin, Lib VIII. Cap. 6.

DOROTHEUS, an Abbot, Author of the XXIV Precepts, &c. 'Tis certain this Dorotheus Abbot in Paleſtine, was the Diſciple of the famous John the Monk called the Prophet. He lived in the VII. Century: For his Maſter John was a Diſciple of Barſanufius an Ægyptian Monk, and a Recluſe at Gaza; who according to Evagrius flouriſhed in the Year 550. Neither this Dorotheus, nor Barſanufius, are to paſs for two other Monks of the ſame Name, and of the Sect of the Severians or Acephali, as is obſerved by the Author of the Preface to Dorotheus's Book, conſiſting of XXIV. Inſtructions for the Monks. They are written in a familiar and unornamented Style, but full of pious affecting Thoughts. He gives a Narrative of the Conduct and Manners of the ſeveral Religious that lived before him; not forgetting the Hiſtory of his own Life. This Work in Greek and Latin is inſerted in the Auctuarium Bibliothecæ Patrum, publiſhed A. D. 1624. There are likewiſe ſome ſhort Letters of Dorotheus. * M. Du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible: And new Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. VII. Poſſevin. Appar. Sac. &c.

DOROTHEUS, Biſhop of Marcianople in Moeſia, was one of the principal Abettors of Neſtorius: He publickly maintained his Error at Conſtantinople, and excommunicated thoſe who affirmed Mary the Mother of God. He was one of the Neſtorian Biſhops that appeared at the Council of Epheſus: He was depoſed in this Synod, and baniſhed by the Emperor to Cæſarea in Cappadocia. There are ſome of this Biſhop's Letters in the Collection publiſhed by Chriſtianus Lupus. * Cyril, Alexandr. Epiſt. ad Acaſium.

DOSITHEUS, a Monk of the Monaſtery of Gaza in Paleſtine, and a Diſciple of the famous Dorotheus, lived in the VIth Century. He who writes his Life reports, that having a Curioſity to go to Jeruſalem, being then a Heathen, he was converted by a Picture which repreſented a ſtrong Image of Hell; being thoroughly affected with this Figure, he retired into Abbot Seridon's Monaſtery, who put him under Dorotheus's Government: And here having practiſed Obedience, and other Monaſtick Virtues, excepting the Auſterities of the Cell, for which he had a Diſpenſation; having behaved himſelf to Advantage in this Manner, he died after five Years in the Monaſtery. St. Dorotheus makes uſe of this Inſtance to ſhew, that a Man may be a Saint without going through the ſeveral parts of Diſcipline. This Doſitheus ſtands in the Martyrology, ſince the XVIth Century, at the 23^{d} of February. * Dorotheus Lib. Inſtitutionum de Abnegatione ſui. Ballet, Vies des Sainct Fevrier.

DOSITHEUS, Son of Bacenor, was a Perſon of extraordinary Bravery. He did great Service to the Jews in the time of Judas Maccabeus. He and Soſipater defeated Timotheus at the Head of 30000 Men. They took this General Priſoner, but releaſed him, in Favour of ſeveral of their Relations then in the Enemy's Hands. Another time he took Gorgias in the Field, after having routed his whole Army: But as he was carrying him off, a Trooper belonging to the Enemy fell upon him to diſengage his General, and lopped his Shoulder with his Sabre at one Blow. Doſitheus ſome Days after died of this Wound, having been ſufficiently battered before in ſeveral Fights. This happened in the Year of the World 3891. One hundred and ſixty Years before the Incarnation. * 2 Maccab. xii. ỿ. 19. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

DOSITHEANS: St. Epiphanius is the firſt who mentions the Doſitheans as a Sect of Samaritans, Juſtin Martyr and Hegiſippus make them a Sect of the Jews. At preſent there is no certain Account to be given of Doſitheus, or this Sect. * Theodoret. Hær. Fab. Epiphan. in Panario, Lib. I. Cap. 13.

DRACONTIUS, a Spaniſh Prieſt and Poet. Flouriſhed A. D. 440. in the Reign of Theodoſius the Younger, to whom he addreſſed an Elegy. He wrote a Poem entitled Hexameron; that is to ſay, the Work of the ſix Days of the Creation, which Eugenius the Second, Biſhop of Toledo, corrected and enlarged at the Inſtance of Chindiſwinde, King of the Viſigoths in Spain. And for this we have the Authority of St. Illdefonſus and Iſidore of Seville. His Poem upon the Hexameron is inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and has been printed by it ſelf, by Father Sirmond, with Dracontius's Elegy to Theodoſius. * Illdefonſ. de Vir. Illuſt. Cap. 14. Iſidor. Cap. 24. Bellarmine de Script. Eccleſ.

DRAGON (A) a Serpent, which after a conſiderable Length of Life ſtretches to a prodigious Bulk. Antient Naturaliſts have taken the Pains to deſcribe this Monſter under different Figures. They have given him Wings, a Creſt, Feet and Head of different Shapes. Aldrovandus mentions a Dragon deſcended from an Eagle and a Wolf, with long Wings, a Serpent's Tail, and Wolf's Feet. But then this Author is the firſt who agrees with the moderns, that a Dragon is a Chymerical Animal, if they mean any more by it than an old Serpent. Some Writers relate there are flying Dragons in Africk, which are ſtrong enough to carry off a Man and Horſe, and oftentimes ſouſe upon a Cow, and truſs her as a Hawk does a Pidgeon. Albertus Magnus mentions a Sea Dragon like a Serpent, with ſhort Wings, ſwift Motion, and ſo venomous, that his Bite proves mortal. The Ægyptians made Gods of Dragons: And Æſculapius was repreſented under the Figure of a Dragon by the Greeks. The Indians, Aſſyrians, Perſians, and other Eaſtern People, worſhiped Dragons, conſecrated to ſeveral pretended Deities. For Inſtance, to Belus, to Bacchus, and Minerva. The Perſians, Parthians, and Indians, had Dragons in their Standards; in which Cuſtom they have been imitated by the latter Roman Emperors and Saxons. Thoſe who carried theſe Standards, were called Draconarii. In the latter Ages it has been cuſtomary to carry painted Dragons in Proceſſions, to repreſent the Victory over Hereſy and Devils. The Ægyptians and Phœnicians had tame Dragons which lay with them, which poſſibly gave Occaſion to the Fables of ſome Men's having Dragons for their Sires, which was reported of Alexander, Scipio, and Auguſtus. * See the Hiſtory of the famous Knight Gozon, and the Combat he had with the Dragon in the Iſle of Malta.

DRUSUS (Marcus Livius) Son of him who was Collegue with Caius Grachus, and who merited the honourable Addition of Protector of the Senate: He followed his Father's Inclination in Abetting the Patricians or Nobility; but then his Manner of doing it occaſioned terrible Diſorders. He was a Perſon of more than ordinary Abilities: For Inſtance, he had a great deal of Wit, Rhetorick, and Reſolution: But his exceſſive Ambition, made him the worſe for theſe good Qualities. The Factions which then diſturbed the Commonwealth, were occaſioned by a Miſunderſtanding between the Senate and the Commons. Theſe laſt, beſides the Privilege they pretended to in raiſing Taxes, had all the Poſts of Juſtice, which were formerly filled by none but the Nobility: This was a great Advantage, and enabled them as it were to ſet their Feet upon the Neck of the Senate. Druſus perceiving his Rival Cæpio endeavoured to improve the Intereſt of the Commons or Gentlemen, made it his Buſineſs to revive the Power, and raiſe the Reputation of the Senate; and to furniſh himſelf with Aſſiſtance for this Purpoſe, he projected the reviving the Law of the Grachii for diſtributing Lands to the lower Commonality, and promiſed the Privilege of a Roman Burgher to the Latins. His outraging the Conſul Philip who oppoſed this Bill deſerves to be deeply cenſured: He got this Nobleman griped by the Throat 'till the Blood flew out of his Eyes and Mouth, and ſome ſay, Druſus was the Man that outraged raged him in this Manner. His Promiſe of Privilege to the Latins brought on a very calamitous War, and which had almoſt proved fatal to the Roman Republick. He fell into a Swoon at a publick Aſſembly, which whether it was a Feint, or in Earneſt, did him great Service. Notwithſtanding his Intereſt was great, he found himſelf much embarraſſed, by his enterprizing Motions; Inſomuch that when he was aſſaſſinated in the Court before his Houſe, his Death was not at all regretted; no body diſcovered the Murderer, or informed againſt him; and Tully is the only Writer that tells us his Name was Varius. Cornelia, Druſus's Mother, behaved herſelf with great Reſolution under this Accident. Her Siſter Livia was Cato Uticenſis's Mother. * Paterculus. Seneca, de Brevitate Vitæ. Cicero, Lib. III. de Natura Deorum.

DUPUY, (Chriſtopher) eldeſt Brother of the Gentlemen of that Name. He attended the Cardinal Joyeuſe to Rome in Quality of his chief Secretary, and did Thuanus Service there: For had it not been for Dupuy's Intereſt, the firſt part of Thuanus's Hiſtory had been cenſured by the Congregation for the Index Expurgatorius, and marked for an Heretical Performance. Dupuy at his Return into France entred himſelf a Carthuſian at Bourg Fontaine, where he lived retired 'till Cardinal Barbarini prevailed with him to go to Rome, and take upon him the Office of Solicitor General for his Order, and of Prior in the Town. Pope Urban VIII. would have given him Marks of his Eſteem, had not his Brother Dupuy had a Share in publiſhing a new Edition of the Gallican Liberties. This Gentleman publiſhed the Perroniana from a Copy of his own. * De Vigneul. Marvile, Mêlange d'Hiſtoire pag. 208.

DURAND, (William) Nephew to the famous Canoniſt Durand Biſhop of Mende, was his Uncle's Archdeacon, ſucceeded to his See, A. D. 1296. aſſiſted at the Council at Vienna A. D. 1310, and lived to 1328. He wrote an excellent Book how a general Council ought to be held: 'Tis divided into three Parts, in which he has collected, and ranged under diſtinct Titles, a great many Regulations drawn from Councils, and Fathers for reforming Abuſes and Diſorders, through all Degrees and Conditions: Particularly for correcting the Misbehaviour of Popes and the Court of Rome, Prelates, ſubaltern Eccleſiaſticks, and Monks. Philip Probus, a Lawyer of Bourges, printed this Book at Paris A. D. 1545. 'tis dedicated by the Publiſher to Pope Paul III. to the Cardinals, Biſhops, Abbots and other Perſons, who were to make part of the Council of Trent. 'Twas addreſſed to all theſe as a very ſerviceable Tract for reforming the Manners of Chriſtendom. There was a ſecond Edition of it at Paris, not long after: And laſtly, M. Faure Doctor of Divinity printed it at Paris A. D. 1671. with a Collection of ſeveral other Tracts of the ſame Nature. * M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. XIV.

DURFORT, an ancient and noble Family, originally of Guienne and Foix, has made a Figure for ſeveral Ages in the French Hiſtory. I ſhall only mention Lewis Marquiſs of Blanford, Earl of Feverſham, Captain of the Guards to King James II. and General of his Forces. He was made Knight of the Garter in 1685, and died in 1709, ſeventy one Years of Age. He married Mary Daughter to George Sonds, Earl of Feverſham, but had no Iſſue by her. * Dugdale Baronage.

* DUUMVIRI MUNICIPALES; Theſe two Magiſtrates in Country Boroughs had the ſame Power with the Conſuls at Rome. They were elected out of the Decuriones on the firſt of March; but did not enter upon their Office 'till three Months after: The Reaſon of this Delay was that the Corporation might have time to enquire into the Legality of the Election: And if they happened to find any Flaw in it, they might have time to chuſe another. They took an Oath to ſerve the Town faithfully, and wore a Gown edged with Purple, with a white Tunick under it. They had Serjeants marching before them with a little Wand in their Hand. Some of them, however, took the Privilege of being attended by Lictors with Axes and Rods, as Tully relates in his Oration againſt Rullus: 'Twas cuſtomary for them at their coming into their Office to preſent the Decuriones, and entertain the People with the Gladiators. Their Office commonly laſted five Years; which is the Reaſon they were called Magiſtratus Quinquennales.

The Duumviri for marine Affairs were firſt elected in the Year of Rome 542: 'Twas done at the Motion of M. Decius Tribune of the People, when the Romans were engaged in a War with the Samnites. Their Buſineſs was to get the Fleet careened, and to provide Rigging and Complement.

The Duumviri called Capitales, or Judges of capital Cauſes, &c. ſate at that which we call the Crown Bar. There lay an Appeal from them to the People. There was a certain Number of theſe Judges at Rome, and in Country Boroughs: Theſe latter were elected out of the Decuriones, had a conſiderable Authority, being Members of the Senate or publick Council; They had the Inſpection or Government of the Priſons, and as Marks of their Dignity, two Lictors went before them. * Livy, Lib. V. Juvenal, Sat. V. Pancirollus. Cap. VIII.

DUSSON, a noble Family in the Country of Foix, and originally belonging to the Kingdom of Arragon. Francis III. was Lord of Bon Repos, and ſecond Lieutenant of a Gally in 1671. And after having ſerved ſeveral Years in the King's Gallies, was in 1676 made Commiſſary General of the Marine, and had likewiſe the Command of a Man of War. In 1683 he was made Intendant General of the Marine with a Commiſſion to command a Squadron, and had his Share in the bombarding Genoa in 1684. The next Year the King ſent him Envoy extraordinary into England, where he reſided 'till 1686. The Year after he returned to England with the Character of Plenipotentiary, and concluded a Treaty December the 11th. He was ſent to England the third time in Auguſt 1688. and in September following finiſhed another Treaty, and at his Return had a Penſion ſettled on him of 3000 Livres. In 1689 the King gave him a Commiſſion for Vice-Admiral, and at his coming off his Sea Campaign in 1692, he had a new Penſion of 12000 Livres. Afterwards his Majeſty pitching upon him for his Ambaſſador Extraordinary in Denmark, and his Plenipotentiary to the Princes in Germany; he concluded a Treaty with the King of Denmark, in which the Dukes of Wolfenbuttle were concerned, March 11th 1693. And another with the ſame King for concerting the Enterprize upon Ratzbourg in April the ſame Year.

John the ſecond Duſſon, Brother to him laſt mentioned, Marquiſs de Bezac, beſt known by the Name of Marquiſs Duſſon. In 1672 he was Captain in the Regiment of Turenne; afterwards had the ſame Commiſſion in the Royal Regiment of Dragoons, next Major of the ſame Regiment, then Collonel of the Touraine Regiment of Foot, Inſpector or Comptroller General of the Troops, Governor of Furnes in 1690, and Field Marſhal the Year following: In this Quality he commanded at Limerick in Ireland, where he did his part in holding out the Siege with great Reſolution; and afterwards managed to the ſame Advantage at Pignerol, and in the Valley of Barcelonetta. He was at the Battel of Marſaille in 1693. and was made Lieutenant General in 1696: In this Poſt he commanded at the Siege of Barcelona under the Duke of Vendome, and in 1699 the King, who in the Year 1694 had made him Knight of St. Lewis, diſtinguiſhed him now by the Title of Commander of this Order. In 1701 his Majeſty gave him the Character of Envoy Extraordinary to the Princes of Wolfenbuttle, then his Allies, with a Commiſſion to command their Troops: Upon his return from Germany, he was Governor of Lovain A. D. 1702. And in December this Winter he burnt the Enemy 200 Stacks of Hay near Liege. The next Year he marched into Germany in Marſhal Villars's Army, and joined the Elector of Bavaria in Swabia. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the firſt Battle at Hochſtet, Septembar 20th 1703. where Count Stirum was defeated. Two Years after the King gave him the Command of the Town and County of Nice. He blew up the Walls and Fortifications of that Place, Auguſt the ſame Year, and came to Marſeille in September 1705, where he died at the Age of 53 Years. He left no Iſſue behind him.

DYPTICS were publick Regiſters where the Biſhops Names were entered. Thoſe Prelates who died in the Catholick Communion were inrolled there, and never expunged, unleſs convicted of Hereſy or Intruſion: The Names of the living and deceaſed Biſhops were entred there, and recited at the Celebration of the Holy Euchariſt. And when their Names were recited the Prieſt prayed for them. * Goar. Euchолog.

E. EBERN-

E.

EBERNBERG, or Ebernbourg, a Caſtle built upon a Rock well fortified: It ſtands in the Palatinate of the Rhyne in Germany, in the County of Spanheim, upon the River Nahe, where it falls into the Alſen, which parts it from the Caſtle and County of Rhigraveſtein, and a League from the Town Creutznach. The Landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel beſieged this Fort in 1692, but the French Garriſon forced him to raiſe the Siege. * Maty, Diction.

EBERNSDORF, a Town within the Arch-Dutchy of Auſtria. This Town, where the Arch-Dukes have a fine Palace, ſtands about three Leagues below Vienna. Ebernſdorf is commonly taken for the old Ala Nova, a Town of upper Pannonia. * Bauhrand.

EBERSHEIM, or Eberſ-Munſter, a Town with a famous Abby belonging to it. 'Tis within the Biſhoprick of Strasbourg in Alſace upon the River Ill, between Scheleſtat and Benevelt, a League from the firſt, and two from the latter. Maty, Diction.

EBERSTEIN, (the Country or Earldom of) a Country in Swabia: It lies between the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, the Ortnaw, and the Marquiſate of Baden: This County, which takes its Name from the Caſtle of Eberſtein, is about ſix Leagues long, and two over. It has formerly belonged to Earls of its own: But now the Marquiſs of Baden is Lord of the greateſt part: The Duke of Wirtemberg has Newſtad, the Biſhop of Spire, the Earls Wolkenſtein and Grondsfelt, are Maſters of the Remainder. * Maty, Diction.

EBERULFE, Chamberlain to Chilprick the Firſt, King of France, was a ſcandalous Miniſter who made his Fortune by ill Practice. He drew the Averſion of Queen Fredegonda upon him, by charging her with the Murder of the King her Husband. This Princeſs made the Suſpicion of this Crime rebound upon Eberulfe, who to cover himſelf from her Revenge retired with his Effects into St. Martin's Church at Tours; this Place was reckoned to have the Privilege of a Sanctuary, but Fredegonda and King Gontran, whom ſhe had gained to her Intereſt, prevailed with one Claude a Courtier, to decoy Eberulfe out of the Sanctuary. Claude who had all along pretended Friendſhip to Eberulfe, perſuaded him to walk out of the Church, and carrying him to a Place where they were to drink a Glaſs of perfumed Wine, run him through the Body: But Eberulfe's Servants coming up in the Minute, and finding themſelves the ſtronger Party, killed Claude in a neighbouring Monaſtery, whither he had run for Shelter; and thus theſe two Knaves were taken off A. D 548. And all Eberulfe's Eſtate was beſtowed upon King Gontran's Courtiers. * Hiſtoire de France. Le Sueur, Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe & de la Empire.

* EBION, was, as 'tis ſaid, a Stoick Philoſopher, a Diſciple of Cerinthus, and a Nazarene Sectary. He is reckoned the Head of the Ebionites. This is the Opinion not only of St. Epiphanius, but of Tertullian, Optatus, St. Hillary, St. Jerom, St. Pacian, Marius Mercator, and many others. However, according to Origen and Euſebius, they had not their Denomination from the Head of their Hereſy, but from the Hebrew word Ebion, which ſignifies a poor deſpicable Man, becauſe they had low and diſhonourable Sentiments of our bleſſed Saviour. Irenæus, in deſcribing the Hereſy of the Ebionites, takes no Notice of Ebion: The Silence of this Father, together with the Teſtimonies of Euſebius and Origen, would make one believe Ebion, is only an imaginary Name, or it's poſſible it might belong to Cerinthus; for St. Epiphanius ſpeaking of Ebion reports a Story which belongs to Cerinthus; 'tis that of St. John's making haſte out of a Bath upon Cerinthus's coming in, for Fear the Building ſhould fall upon him. The ſame Father aſſures us Ebion preached in Paleſtine and Aſia, which likewiſe agrees with Cerinthus. * Origen. Cont. Celſ. Lib. II. Tertul. l. de præſcript. Cap. 34. Euſeb. Lib. III. Cap. 11. St. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 30. Hieron. in Luciferianos. Philaſtrius Cap. 37. Optat. Milevit. Lib. IV. St. Aug. de Hæreſib. Marius Mercator, Theodoret, Hæret. Fabular. Lib. II. Baronius. Tillemont, Mem. Eccleſ. Tom. 2. M. Du Pin, Three firſt Centuries.

* EBIONITES, Hereticks appearing in the 2d Century, and a Branch of the Cerinthians and Nazarens, held that every Body was obliged to obſerve the Moſaick Law, and that our bleſſed Saviour was only a mere Man deſcended of Mary and Joſeph, according to moſt of them, and born of a Virgin in the Opinion of the reſt. For we are to take notice, that Origen, Euſebius and Epiphanius diſtinguiſh the Ebionites into two Sorts. They receive no other Goſpel than that of St. Matthew, which they have in Hebrew, but interpolated and maimed; this they call the Goſpel according to the Hebrews. They rejected the reſt of the new Teſtament, and eſpecially all St. Paul's Epiſtles, looking upon this Apoſtle as an Apoſtate from the Law: They made Saturday and Sunday equal Holy Days: They bathed themſelves every Day like the Jews, and worſhiped Jeruſalem as the Houſe of God. They call their Meetings, Synagogues, and not Churches; and celebrated their Myſteries every Year with unleavened Bread. The firſt Ebionites lived a Regular and mortified Life: But the latter ſtruck out into Extravagance and Diſſolution. However they pretended to eat nothing which had been animated. They received the Pentateuch for Canon, but not all of it. They had a Veneration for the old Patriarchs, but deſpiſed the Prophets: They made uſe of forged Acts of the Apoſtles, as St. Peter's Travels, and many other Apocryphal Books; and at laſt they united with the Helceſaites. * Iren. Lib. III. and the other Authors cited in the Preceding Article.

EBUSIUS, (Titus Elva) General of the Roman Cavalry under A. Poſthumius then Dictator. Ebuſius perceiving the Victory to hang doubtful between the Romans and Latins, who fought near the Lake Regillum, at preſent Lago di Cattiglioni, ordered the Bridles to be taken off all the Horſes, and then powdering upon the Enemy drove them from the Field of Battel. This happened in the Year of Rome three hundred and twenty. * Livy, Florus.

EBUSIUS, one of the braveſt and moſt knowing Generals Veſpaſian had in the Jewiſh War. He inveſted Joſaphat, and prevented the Hiſtorian Joſephus, then Governor of Galilee, from making his Eſcape out of the Town. Ebuſius was killed at this Siege A. D. 67. which was the laſt Year of Nero's Reign. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. L. III. Cap 2. & Lib. IV. Cap. 4.

ECCLESIASTICUS, or the Wiſdom of Jeſus Son of Syrac. 'Twas firſt written in Hebrew, as appears by the Preface, and tranſlated into Greek by Syracides the Grandſon. St. Jerom reports that he had ſeen an Hebrew Copy which was not called Eccleſiaſticus but Parables; 'Twas written in the Pontificate of Onias III. in the Reigns of Ptolomy Epiphanes, and Antiochus, and tranſlated in the Reign of Ptolomy Phyſcon, Brother of Ptolomy Philometor: Some antient Writers have reckoned this Work to Solomon, upon the Score of the great Reſemblance of the Subject and Thoughts. This Writer has borrowed the Method and Manner from the Proverbs. That is, he recommends Morality by ſhort Sentences, and Maxims. But his Expreſſions have not the ſame Force and Luſtre with Solomon's. The Hebrew Text of this Book has been loſt a great while, and the Latin Verſion is in ſome Places different from the Greek Text. The Jews never received Eccleſiaſticus into their Canon; and in the antient Catalogues of Canonical Books drawn up by the Chriſtians, Eccleſiaſticus is plainly diſtinguiſhed from the inſpired Canon, and only ranged among thoſe Books which the Church reads for Edification, and not for proving any Article of Faith. * Clemens Romanus Epiſt. ad Corinth. Tertul. Lib. III. contr. Marcion. Clement. Alexand. in Stromat. Origen, Lib. III. contr. Celſ. Hieron, Prolog. Galeat. & in Pſalm 73. in Iſaiam, & in Ezekiel.

ECHETLE, a Town in Sicily at the Head of the River Achates, and formerly well fortified: And in the firſt Punick War, 490 Years before the Incarnation, 'twas the Frontier between the Syracuſians and Carthaginians. 'Twas ſo called from the Tranſpoſition of a Letter of the Hebrew Word Etchela, which ſignifies a ſtrong Place. 'Tis now called Ochula or Aquila.

* Bochart, Geograph. Sac. Polyb. Lib. I. Stephan. Byzant.

ECHINADES, five little Grecian Iſlands upon the Coaſt of Acarnania, over againſt the Mouth of the River Acheloüs: They are ſuppoſed to be made of the Gravel and Mud which this River rowls down the Channel, and throws into the Sea. They are now called Curzolari or Ezzulari. 'Twas near theſe Iſlands that the Chriſtians deſtroyed the Turkiſh Fleet, October 7th 1571. And here Don John of Auſtria, Charles V.'s natural Son, was the Chriſtians Admiral. * Thuanus. Lib. XXXVIII. & L.

ECHION, one of Cadmus's Companions. This Cadmus tried the ſame Experiment at Thebes, which Jaſon repeated two hundred Years after at Cholcis. He ſowed Dragons Teeth, and had a Crop of Men from them: Who as ſoon as they ſtarted, divided into two Companies, and cut each others Throats. There was but four of them that eſcaped the Battel beſides Echion, who afterwards married Cadmus's Daughter and helped him to build Thebes: For which Reaſon Horace gives the Epithet of Echioniæ to Thebes. Valerius Flaccus mentions one Echion Son to Mercury, who was one of the Argonauts, and ſerved in the Quality of an Herald. * Horat. Lib. IV. Od. 4. Valer. Flac. Argonaut. Lib. I.

ECHIUS, or Eckius (John) Doctor in Divinity, and Profeſſor at Ingoldſtat, was born in Swabia A. D. 1483. He raiſed his Reputation by his Writings and Diſputes with Luther, Caroloſtadius, Melancthon, and other leading Proteſtants in Germany: He appeared at the Diet at Ausburg 1538. where he argued againſt the Proteſtant Confeſſion: And in A. D. 1541, he aſſiſted in the Conference at Ratisbone, where he diſſented from Pflug and Gropper, with Reference to the Union Articles. He was in a manner at the Head of the all publick Diſputes the Roman Catholicks had with the Lutherans and Zwinglians. He wrote a great many Polemical Tracts, and amongſt the reſt a Manual of Controverſies, in which he diſcourſes upon moſt of the Heads conteſted between the Papiſts and Proteſtants. This Book was printed at Ingoldſtat A. D. 1535. He wrote another Tract againſt the Articles propoſed in the Conference at Ratisbone, printed at Paris A. D. 1543. He likewiſe wrote two Diſcourſes upon the Sacrifice of the Maſs: More controverſial Pieces: An Expoſition upon the Prophet Haggi; and ſeveral Homilies. He died at Ingoldſtat A. D. 1543. As to his Character, he was a Perſon of conſiderable Learning, and very warm in Defence of his Communion. * Bellarmin. de Script. Eccleſ. Spondan. Annal. M. du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. XVI.

EDRISSITES, in Arabick Adareſſah. The Name of a Dynaſtie of Princes who reigned in Africk ſomewhat more than 100 Years. The firſt Monarch of this Family was Edris Son of Edris, who deſcended in a right Line from Calif Haſſan Son of Hali. This Family was extinguiſhed in the 296 Year of the Hegyra, that is A. D. 908. When the Fathimites made themſelves Maſters of all Africk, Edriſſi the Geographer, who was of this Family, retired to Roger King of Sicily for Shelter. Segelmeſſa was the Edriſſites Capital .* D'Herbelot, Bibliotheque Oriental.

EDSARD I. Earl of Eaſt Friezland, and Son of Ulric, was the firſt upon whom the Emperor Frederick III. conferred the Title of Count, with the appertinent Rights and Privileges within the Territory which reaches from the Ems to the Weſer. This Honour and Juriſdiction was granted privately at firſt, in regard the Friezlanders were jealous of their Liberty. But about ten Years after the Grant was made publick. Edſard II. his Son ſucceeded him, and having gained the Affection of his Subjects, enlarged his Dominions upon the Neighbourhood, but was forced to quit what he had conquered, being preſſed by the Auſtrians and Saxons, who drove him within the Ems. He left two Sons, Enno I. who was a ſleepy unactive Prince, and died young. And Edſard III. who put the Government in the Hands of Ann of Oldenbourg, who acquitted her ſelf to general Satisfaction; when Enno was at the Helm, the Town of Emden received the Confeſſion of the Swiſs Proteſtants, whereas Edſard followed the Augsbourg Belief. This Diverſity of Perſuaſion occaſioned great Differences between the Town, and the Count. * Hepotius, Hiſt. Lib. IV. See Embden.

EGEUS, or Ægeus King of Attica, and Son of Pandion II. to whom he ſucceeded 1308 before the Incarnation: Pandion's Kingdom after his Deceaſe was divided amongſt his four Sons, Ægeus, Lycus, Niſus, and Pallas. Ægeus, who was the Eldeſt, had Athens and the neighbouring Country for his Partition. At this time Minos II. reigned in Crete, and Androgeus, this Prince's Son, travelling to Athens was ſlain in his Return Home by Ægeus's Order. Minos, to revenge his Son's Death, declared War againſt Ægeus, and having carried Megara and Nicea, ſate down before Athens. The Plague and Famine, after a long Siege, forced the Athenians to ſurrender at Diſcretion. And here as a Penalty Minos obliged them to ſend ſeven Youths and as many Maids to Crete every ninth Year, to be ſacrificed there. When the third Period for paying this Tax came up, Ægeus ſent off his Baſtard Son Theſeus, whom he had by Æthra, Pelops's Grand Daughter. Theſeus having the good Luck to kill the Minotaur, and get out of the Labyrinth, ſet Sail for Athens. Ægeus ordered the Pilot who ſteered Theſeus's Ship, that in Caſe the Voyage proved lucky, he ſhould change the black Sails, which were cuſtomary upon this melancholy Occaſion, and clap on white Canvas. But the Crew were ſo tranſported with ſeeing their own Shore again, that they forgot their Orders: This Miſtake made Ægeus believe his Son was dead, upon which he threw himſelf into the Sea in the forty eighth Year of his Reign. Some Writers are of Opinion that the Archipelago or Mare Ægeum took its Name from this unfortunate Accident. * Plutarch. in Vit. Theſei. Ovid. Metam. Lib. VII. M. Du Pin, Hiſtorical Library. See Ægeus.

EGGELINGUS (Johannes Henricus) a famous Greek, Roman, and German Antiquary, was born at Bremen in 1639, and extracted from a conſiderable Family. He ſtudied in ſeveral Univerſities, and travelled into Switzerland, Italy, France, and moſt Parts of Germany. At his Return to Bremen, after ſeveral Commiſſions and Poſts of Credit, he was made Secretary to the Republick of Bremen, which Employment he managed to great Commendation. He died in February 1713 ſeventy four Years of Age. Some of his Works are theſe, De Numiſmatibus quibuſdam abſtruſis Neronis cum Car. Patino per Epiſtolas Diſquiſitio. Printed at Bremen in 1681 in Quarto. Myſteria Cereris & Bacchi, in Vaſculo ex uno Onyche. Printed at the ſame Place in 1682 in 4to. This Tract is publiſhed in the VII Tome of the Greek Antiquities. Diſcuſſio Calumniarum Fellerianarum, 1687 in 4to. De Orbe Stagneo Antinoi. Epiſtola, 1691 in 4to. De Miſcelaneis Germaniæ Antiquitatibus quarum I. & II. de Vocabulo Germaniæ & de Caucis, A. 1694. III. de Ptolomæi Παβιεγήνω, A. 1695. IV. & V. Wiclibetho & Statuis Ruthlandicis. A. 1700. * Acta Leipſiaca Ann. 1713. pag. 190.

EGRY, or le Val d'Egeris formerly Ægeria, a Valley in Switzerland near Zug. It begins near a ſmall Lake of this Name. 'Twas here that the Swiſs defeated Arch-Duke Leopold's Troops, November 16, 1315. For having imprudently drawn up his Cavalry in a Defile between this Lake and a Ledge of Rocks, his Troops were pelted with Stones, and knocked off their Horſes. That Part of Leopold's Army which made their Way through the Defiles were attacked by the Swiſs in open Ground, and entirely defeated. * Stumpfius. Simler. Plantin.

* EGYPT, a large Country in Africk. The Egyptians pretend to a prodigious Antiquity, and divide the Length of their Government into three Periods. The firſt is that of the Gods. And here they reckon 113 Generations, ranged under 30 Dynaſties, amounting to thirty ſix thouſand five hundred and twenty five Years. The ſecond Period is that of the Demi-Gods, or Heroes; called likewiſe Auritæ, or Meſtreans: theſe run out to eight Deſcents, and make two hundred and ſeventeen Years. The third Diviſion comprehends the Government of their Kings, and here Manetho has left us thirty Dynaſties. If theſe Dinaſties are reckoned ſucceſſive Reigns they will ſtretch to five thouſand three hundred fifty five Years. Beſides this, Heratoſthanes has left a Regiſter of thirty eight Kings of Thebes, moſt of which are different from thoſe mentioned in Manetho's Dynaſties. Herodotus, Joſephus, and Diodorus Siculus, mention ſeveral Ægyptians Kings, but here they neither agree among themſelves nor with other Authors.

To

To reconcile theſe Differences, we muſt ſuppoſe (and which is nothing but matter of Fact) that Ægypt was cantoned into a great many Kingdoms, and particularly into three principal Diviſions, Thebais, upper Ægypt, and lower Ægypt; and here we are to obſerve, that all the Hiſtory of the Gods reigning in Ægypt, is purely romantick, and that Hiſtorians are generally agreed Menes was the firſt who reigned over all Ægypt: The Æra of this Prince's Reign muſt be fixed 2210 Years before the Incarnation. Ægypt was afterwards ſubdivided between the Kings of Thebais, the Kings of the Thanites, the Kings of the Memphites, and the Kings of lower Ægypt, mentioned in Manetho's Dynaſties. Queen Nitocris enlarged her Dominions, and drew theſe Principalities into one Government. Some time after, about the Year 1509 before the Incarnation, the Arabian or Phoeneſian Princes called Shepherds, having ſeized Memphis, and part of the lower Ægypt, erected a Government there. The Kingdom of Thebes ſubſiſting in the mean time, and forming a third Government in little Dioſpolis. Afterwards Ægypt was reduced to a ſingle Monarchy under Thetmoſis, 1220 Years before the Incarnation. This Kingdom held on as far as the famous Conqueror Seſoſtris, ſuppoſed to be the ſame with Shiſhac mentioned in the Scripture, who took Jeruſalem, and plundered it in the fifth Year of Reboboam. After the Deceaſe of this Prince, Egypt was once more divided into the three Kingdoms of Memphis, Dioſpolis, and Thanis; this happened 950 Years before the Incarnation. There was likewiſe another Government raiſed at Bubaſtis, in the Year 730 before the Incarnation. Sabaeo an Æthiopian Prince diſpoſſeſſed Anyſis the Blind, and undid Bochoris who had likewiſe ſet up a Principality in part of Egypt. After the concurrent Reigns of ſeveral Kings, Pſammiticus reigned Monarch of Egypt, in the Year 660 before the Incarnation: He reigned four and forty Years, and was ſucceeded by Necho, Pſammis, Vafres, and Amaſis. Pſammeticus, Son to Amaſis, loſt his Country to Cambyſes the Perſian; from this time Egypt was part of the Perſian Dominions: Notwithſtanding ſome Egyptian Princes ſtarted up when the Perſians were embarraſſed, and reigned in part of the Country. Thus things ſtood 'till Nectanebo the laſt Egyptian Prince, who was conquered in the eighteenth Year of his Reign by Artaxerxes Ochus, three hundred forty four Years before the Incarnation. And from this time to Alexander the Great, all Egypt remained part of the Perſian Dominions. * Herodot. Diodor. Sicul. M. Du Pin, Bibliotheque Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

EGYPTIANS, or Gypſies, are Rogues by the Laws of England: They pretend to be Natives of Egypt; but are commonly Engliſh or Welſh, who travelling in Companies, diſguiſing themſelves in ſtrange Habits, ſmutting their Faces and Bodies, and making uſe of a Jargon particular to themſelves, ſtrole up and down the Country; and under pretence of telling Fortunes, and curing Diſeaſes, abuſe the ignorant People, and oftentimes ſteal what is not too hot, or too heavy for their Carriage. They are puniſhable by the two following Statutes, 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. Cap. 4. 5 Eliz. Cap. 20.

EHINGEN, a little Town in Swabia. It ſtands upon the Danube, four Leagues above Ulme. It's commonly taken for the old Dracuina a Town of Vindelicia. There is another Ehingen in Swabia, ſtanding upon the Necker, two Leagues above Tubingen. * Maty, Diction.

EHINGER, (Elias) Library Keeper to Augsbourg in Germany. In the Year 1614 he printed the Canons of the Eaſtern Church at Wittemberg from the famous Library at Augsbourg. This Work, intitled, Codex Canonum Eccleſiæ Orientalis, had been printed in Greek in 1540 by John Tilly, from a Copy belonging to the Chapter of St. Hillary of Poitiers. In 1663 Ehingen printed a large Catalogue of the Library of Augsbourg, which was much valued.

EIRAS, a Mountain in Meſſenia, upon which the Meſſenians encamped, and defended themſelves eleven Years againſt the Lacedemonians: For after the Lacedemonians had gained a Battel, Ariſtomanes intrenched himſelf upon this Mountain, and ſometimes acted offenſively. And notwithſtanding Ariſtomanes was taken in a Skirmiſh, the Meſſenians maintained their Camp, and this General not long after making his Eſcape, held out ſeveral Years. But at laſt the Lacedemonians carried the Place in the firſt Year of the XXVIII. Olympiad. * Pauſanias, in Meſſeniacis. Marſham.

EISSENCHSMID, (John Gaſpar) Doctor in Phyſick, and a famous Mathematician, was born at Strasbourg in 1656. He travelled over moſt of the conſiderable Countries in Europe. At his Return to Strasbourg in 1684 he commenced Doctor in Phyſick, and eight Years after had the Misfortune of receiving a Fall, which hindred his Practice. This Accident made him ſpend his time wholly in Mathematicks, in which Study he diſtinguiſhed himſelf ſo much, as to be choſen an Aſſociate in the Royal Academy at Paris. His Works juſtify this Mark of Eſteem. He publiſhed a Tract upon the Elliptico-ſpherical Figure of the Earth: And another of the Weights and Meaſures of ſeveral Nations, and of the Value of old Coins. He held Correſpondence with moſt of the learned of Europe. There is honourable mention made of him in the Hiſtory of the Academy Royal of Sciences, and in the Journal des Savans. He made a Map for the French King, and died December 1712. * Acta Leipſiaca, 1713. pag. 280.

EISENTHORN. That is to ſay, the Iron Gate. A ſtrong Paſs at the Entrance into Tranſilvania. It lies upon the Confines of this Principality, of Walachia, and upper Hungary, and gives the Name of Eiſenthorn or Viſcapu to a Chain of almoſt inacceſſible Mountains, which face the South of Tranſilvauia. * Baudrand.

* ELCESAITES, or Sampſeans, a Sect of Hereticks who appeared in the II^d^ Century; one Elxai a Jew begun the Hereſy, joined the Ebionites in the Reign of Trajan A. D. 114, and threw new Hetrodoxies into that Sect. The Elceſaites no leſs than Ebionites obſerved the Ceremonies of the Moſaic Law, Sacrifices excepted: They held Chriſt deſcended from Heaven into Jeſus: They believed him of an human Form thirty eight Leagues high, and that there was a Holy Ghoſt of the ſame Bulk, whom they pretend was a Woman, but inviſible. They held Chriſt was not the Son of God, but of one of the Arch-Angels; and that the Deſign of his coming was to put an End to the Sacrifices given to the Creator: The Elceſaites rejected almoſt all the Books of the old and new Teſtament; they had a Book which they pretended fell down from Heaven among them, and another written by Elxai. They abominated St. Paul, and held it lawful to renounce their Faith, and worſhip Idols. Some amongſt them, held Adam was the Chriſt created before all things: That his Spirit was ſuperior to the Angels; that he deſcended into Adam's Body, and appeared to the Patriarchs; that at laſt he came again in the Adamical Body, and was crucified. This Sect ſettled moſtly in Paleſtine beyond Jordan, and ſubſiſted when St. Epiphanius wrote. They had a great Veneration for Elxai, and his Brother Texius, and all of that Family: And in the Reign of Valens, they paid a great Reſpect to two Siſters, who, as they ſaid, deſcended from them. For Inſtance, they made them a large Retinue to wait on them when they went abroad, they gathered up the Duſt of their Feet, and even their Spittle, believing it medicinable: Origen frequently attacks theſe Elceſaites, and they are mentioned by Euſebius, Epiphanius, and St. Auguſtin. * Epiphan. Hær. 19. 53. &c. Auguſtin. de Hæreſ. Cap 32. Euſeb. Lib. VI. Hiſt. Cap. 31.

ELEAZER, a zealous and learned Jew, who underſtanding Izates, King of the Adiabenians, had turned Jew without being circumciſed, told him plainly his Converſion would ſignifie nothing, and that it was not poſſible to be ſaved, unleſs the Mark, which diſtinguiſhed the faithful from the Infidels, paſſed upon him. This Advice made ſuch an Impreſſion upon the King, that he immediately ſent for a Surgeon, and was circumciſed, though his Age made the Operation extremely dangerous. * Joſep. Antiquit. Lib. XX. Cap. 2.

ELEAZER, Son of Dineus of the Province of Galilee, was a famous Robber, who plundered and deſtroyed whole Towns of the Samaritans. He did them ſtill more Miſchief upon his being choſen Head of his Clan againſt thoſe of Samaria, when they made War upon each other. The Rupture began upon the following Occaſion. The Jews of Galilee who went to Jeruſalem at the ſtated Feſtivals, uſed to travel through the Samaritans Country: ſome Galileans happened to have have a Diſpute with the Inhabitants of Nais, one of the Dependencies of Samaria: The Quarrel grew ſo warm that ſeveral of the Jews were killed in it. Some Perſons of the beſt Quality in Galilee, made their Complaint of this Outrage to the Governor Cumanus. But this Magiſtrate being prepoſſeſſed and bribed by the Samaritans gave them no Satisfaction. This harſh Refuſal provoked them to a Reſolution of running to Arms. They ſaid their Servitude was rugged enough without the Addition of Outrage and Injuſtice, and having no Officer to command them, they ſent for Eleazer the Son of Dineus, who putting himſelf at the Head of their Troops, beat the Samaritans ſeveral times and plundered them: And had not Cumanus marched againſt him with the Cavalry of Sebaſtia, the Miſchief would have gone much farther. But now being overlaid with Numbers, Eleazer was taken and executed. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XX. Cap. 5.

ELEAZER, Son of Ananias the Jewiſh High Prieſt, was a very raſh and inſolent Perſon. He put himſelf at the Head of a Company of Ruffians like himſelf, ſeized the Gates of the Temple, and openly declared, that they ought not to receive any Preſents or Offerings, except from thoſe of their own Nation, which was directly contrary to antient Cuſtom. The other Prieſts, the Elders, the Nobility of Jeruſalem, and all thoſe who had a Regard for the Honour of God, and the Repoſe of their Country, perceived plainly that this Singularity would diſoblige the Romans, kindle a Civil War, and prove fatal in the Conſequence. To prevent this Misfortune, they remonſtrated firſt, and afterwards made uſe of Force, but all to no purpoſe, for Eleazer continued this Practice, 'till the Temple was demoliſhed. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. II. Cap. 30.

ELEAZER, a Jew, Son of one Simon, graſped at the Sovereignty, and endeavoured to make himſelf abſolute in Jeruſalem; and after ſome Conteſt and Difficulty carried his Point: When the Jews rebelled upon Geſtius, he took a great deal of Plunder from this General, ſeized all the Money deſigned for the Payment of the Army, and omitted no Expedients for making himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem, at the breaking out of the War againſt the Romans. Thoſe who were more peaceably inclined, did what they could to diſappoint his Deſigns; but Intereſt having the ſovereign Command of Buſineſs, his Money got him ſo many Adherents, that he grew up to a cruel Tyrant. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. II. Cap. 42. Lib. IV. Cap. 5. & 31.

ELEAZER, a Jew. This Man was Head of the Sicarii or Cut-Throats: After the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, he threw himſelf into Maſſada, and held out the Siege boldly againſt Flavius Silva: But perceiving 'twas impoſſible to prevent the Place being ſtormed, he prevailed with his Companions to chuſe Death rather than Slavery. In ſhort, they charged each other by Conſent, and cut one another's Throats, 'till there was not one left when the Tragedy was over. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. VII. Cap. 30.

ELECTRIS, a ſmall Iſland bolonging to Magna Grecia; Servius calls it Febra, and the Name of it now is Monte Sardo: It lies in the Gulph of Tarentum, and belongs to the Kingdom of Naples; the Country is rocky, there is a conſiderable Village in it, and a Fort for Defence againſt Pyrates. 'Tis ſeven Miles from Tarentum towards the South. * Baudrand.

ELEPHANT, one of the biggeſt, ſtrongeſt, and as natural Philoſophers pretend, one of the moſt ſenſible four footed Animals. This Beaſt has but a little Hair, and in this reſpect reſembles Buſles, as it does likewiſe in the Hide, which is black, thick and difficultly entered, though it ſeems ſoft to the Touch. The Elephant's Head is large, his Neck ſhort, his Ears are two Hand Breadth, his Noſe, which they call his Trunk, is long and hollow, like a large Trumpet, and ſerves inſtead of a Hand: 'Tis made of a thick Cartilage, and hangs between his Teeth: His Foot is round two or three Hand Breadths over, all callous, and with five and twenty Nails upon it; and his Tail reſembles that of a Buſle, about three Spans long; his common Walk will overtake a Man that runs a little, and carries three Mile an Hour. He is ſo ſure footed, that he never makes a falſe Step, and is very commodious for travelling over Mountains; he ſwims better than any other Beaſt; and riſes and lies down with the ſame Eaſe with other four footed Animals, contrary to the Opinion of the Antients, who believed he had no Joints. He is chained by the hinder Foot, and faſtened to a Tree, or ſome other thing not eaſily ſhaken. They ſometimes fight Elephants with each other, who ſhock and toſs with their Teeth as Bulls do with their Horns. One Blow with their Trunk will kill a Camel or an Horſe. The Elephant lives in the Field upon Leaves and Fruit. They wont endure a Bridle, but are manageable by their Maſters, and underſtand their Language. The old Naturaliſts report abundance of ſtrange things of the Elephant, moſt of which are no better than Fables: They fancy that if this Animal is ordered to frighten any Body, he'll run furiouſly upon them as if he would tare them all to pieces; but when once he comes near he will ſtop ſhort without doing any harm. Cardan affirms, that Elephants Teeth may be reduced to a ſoft Conſiſtence, and made ductile like the Horns of an Ox: But if Cardan had this Secret, 'tis loſt at preſent.

They take Elephants by making Pits covered with twiſted Oſiers with a little Earth over them. But if they once eſcape this Ambuſcade, they will tear out a Piece of the Hurdle with their Trunks and examine the Ground. They likewiſe take them by barricading narrow Paſſages, whither they are decoyed by a Female: They go a Year with their Young, when they go to rutt they are ſo furious that they will kill any Body that comes in their Way. And in ſuch Caſes nothing can abate their Rage but Fireworks. They live ſometimes to a hundred and a hundred and twenty Years, and grow 'till thirty. Their Teeth have been ſeen two Yards long and as thick as a Man's Thigh. Though Elephants are very common in the Indies, yet ſome of the beſt of them will fetch four or five thouſand Crowns. Some Elephants are thirteen and ſome fifteen Foot high: Thoſe of Ceylan, though the leaſt, are moſt valued. 'Tis ſaid that the Elephants of other Countries pay them a Reſpect by natural Inſtinct. This Animal has as ſtrong a Senſe of Shame and Injury as human kind. The King of Achem orders them to be treated with great Regard, and gives them the Privilege of Umbrellas, which his Subjects dare not pretend to. He marries them with conſiderable Ceremony, and when he falls out with them, he ſtrips them of all their Honour, at which they are extremely diſturbed. Thoſe of Bengal worſhip a white Elephant, which is ſo uncommon, that they reckon it an holy Creature. The Indian Kings often fight bloody Battels to make themſelves Maſters of them: 'tis ſaid there is none to be found but in the Kingdom of Siam, and that the Kings of this Country have treated the Elephants, time out of Mind, with as much Reſpect as they would do ſome neighbouring Princes, who made them a Viſit. M. L'Abbé de Choiſi reports in his Travels, that in the ſecond Court of the King of Siam's Palace, he ſaw the famous white Elephant, the getting of which coſt 5 or 6000 Men's Lives, between this Prince and the King of Pegu. This Animal, as he relates, is conſiderably large, ſtrong made, but old and wrinkled, and that he has four Mandarins, or Indian Lords, to fan him. They are likewiſe furniſhed with Branches of Leaves to drive away the Flies, and Umbrellas to ſhelter him from the Sun when he walks abroad. This Elephant is always ſerved in gold Plate, and Monſieur Choiſi ſaw two Veſſels of Gold before him, the one to eat, and the other to drink in. The Water he drinks has been kept ſix Months, for the older 'tis the more wholſom. 'Tis ſaid when this old Elephant drops off, there is a young one ready to ſucceed him. This Gentleman likewiſe reports, that they have one they call the Prince Elephant, which has more Bulk and Senſe than any of the reſt; and that this Animal is kept for the King's Service. He won't ſuffer any Subject to mount him; but when the King appears, he immediately kneels to his Majeſty. An Elephant is a ſerviceable Beaſt in the Field, carries a Piece of Artillery ſix Foot long, with the Carriage, and which is big enough to diſcharge a Pounder. An Elephant requires five Pounds of Rice every Day to feed him, they make Balls of this Rice mixed with Butter and Sugar. In the Year 1681 the Elephant at Verſailles dying at ſeventeen Years old, was diſſected by M. du Verney. * See the Hiſtory of the Academy by M. du Hamel, p. 196. Second Edition.

* ELEU-

* ELEUTHERIUS, (Pope) his condemning the Montaniſts at the Inſtance of the Biſhops of Gaul, is a Miſtake. 'Tis only certain, that the Confeſſors and other Chriſtians in Gaul, wrote upon this Subject to his Holineſs; in which, as Euſebius reports, they gave their Opinion upon the new Propheſies of Montanus and his Followers; and here their Judgment was conformable to the Catholick Faith, penned with regard to the Peace of Chriſtendom, but without approving theſe Novelties. Tertullian aſſures us that a Biſhop of Rome had given his communicatory Letters to theſe pretended Prophets, which he recalled at the Inſtance of Praxeas, upon his Remonſtrance, That 'twas counter to the Conduct of his Predeceſſors. Baronius believed that it was Anicetus who gave theſe communicatory Letters: But he is miſtaken, for the Montaniſts did not appear ſo early. Some are of Opinion 'twas Eleutherius who gave in to this Latitude, upon the gentle Report the Martyrs of Lyons, and the other Gauliſh Churches, had made upon this Subject; but 'tis more probable, this Pope was Victor, and that his Predeceſſors alledged by Praxeas, were Eleutherius and Soter. The Requeſt made by Lucius King of the Britains, and Eleutherius's Anſwer, is no better than a Fiction. * M. Du. Pin. New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. II. Collier's Eccleſ. Hiſt. Vol. I.

ELEUTHERUS, Biſhop of Tournay, lived in the VI^th^ Century: He was born of Chriſtian Parents, A. D. 456, and educated by St. Medardus, Biſhop of Noyon. His Parents were baniſhed Tournay, upon the Score of their Religion: But after the Marriage of Clovis and Clotilda, they were recalled, and Elutherus was elected Biſhop of Tournay A. D. 495; immediately after his receiving this Character, he applied himſelf to the converting Idolaters and Hereticks: He made ſeveral Journies to Rome, and held a Council at Tournay A. D. 527. The Hereticks ſet upon him and gave him a Blow on the Head, of which he died ſoon after, A. D. 532. After his Deceaſe, St. Medardus, Biſhop of Noyon, took Care of the Dioceſs of Tournay, and preſided there fifteen Years. The Union of theſe two Churches was afterwards continued by his Succeſſors. There are ſome Sermons reckoned to Eleutherus in the Bibliotheca Patrum: But 'tis not certain they were written by him. Eleutherus's Holiday ſtands in the Martyrologies at the 20^th^ of February. * Baillet Vies des Saints, Mois de Fevrier.

* ELIAS, or Elijah: I ſhall refer the Reader to the Holy Scriptures, for the Main of this Prophet's Hiſtory: However, we may obſerve it was an Opinion generally received among the Jews, that Elias was to appear before the Meſſiah; for which Reaſon ſome of the Jews miſtook our Saviour for Elias. Some of the antient Chriſtians believed that Elias and Enoch would appear before the Day of Judgment; and that theſe two Witneſſes or Martyrs, would be put to Death by the Beaſt in the Revelations, and that they were to riſe again ſoon after. A great many of the Chriſtians have likewiſe believed, that Elias and Enoch live in the terreſtrial Paradiſe: Elias's appearing upon Mount Tabor, and his being taken up into Heaven, has a Feſtival aſſigned it in ſome Churches. The Greek Church ſets the Holiday at the 20^th^ of July, and ſo does the modern Latin; but the antient Latin Martyrologies place it at the 14^th^ of Auguſt. The Fryers Carmelites pretend Elias was the Founder of their Order. * Auguſtin, de Civit. Dei. Lib. XX. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

ELIHU, Son of Barakel, of the Family of Ram, and one of Holy Job's Friends: 'Tis ſaid Buz was the Son of Nacor, Abraham's Brother. The Jews make this Elihu the ſame with Balaam, whom Balac ſent for to curſe the Iſraelites: But others, with more Probability, believe that Job's Friend lived before the Children of Iſrael went out of Egypt. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

* ELIPANDUS, Archbiſhop of Toledo, lived in the VIII^th^ Century: Felix, Biſhop of Urgel, upon the Queſtion put to him by Elipandus, whether our bleſſed Saviour, with reſpect to his human Nature, was the adoptive or natural Son of God; returned Anſwer, that under this Conſideration, he ought to paſs for no more than the adoptive Son. Elipandus wrote in Defence of this Sentiment, and endeavoured to ſpread it through Spain, France, and Germany. Adoſinda, Silo King of Galicia's Widow, who turned Nun in a Spaniſh Monaſtery, oppoſed Elipandus's Errors with a great deal of Zeal, delated him to Etherius, Biſhop of Oſma, and to Beatus a Prieſt; informing them at the ſame time, how he had ſolicited her to Hetrodoxy. Theſe two Eccleſiaſticks, who were of a gentle and charitable Temper, endeavoured to recover him from his Miſtake, but to no Purpoſe. He ſtill maintained his Errors in his Letters to them, which occaſioned their Writing two Books to confute his Hereſy. Theſe Diſcourſes, as 'tis ſaid, are ſtill preſerved in the Archives of the Church at Toledo, and for this we have the Teſtimony of Ambroſius Morales, and ſome other Spaniſh Writers. Elipandus's Hetrodoxy was cenſured in a Council convened at Ciutad in Friuli, by Paulinus Patriarch of Aquileia, A. D. 791. The Year after the Biſhops met at Ratisbonn, at the Inſtance of Charlemagne, condemned this Error, together with Felix and Elipandus who maintained it. This Sentence was confirmed by Pope Adrian, who brought Felix to a Recantation. However, ſome Spaniſh Biſhops kept on their Opinion. And Felix, who ſeemed to retract, revived his Hetrodoxy, and Elipandus wrote a Letter to ſecond him. This Letter was diſproved and cenſured, firſt by Pope Adrian, then by an Italian Synod, and laſtly, by the Council at Frankfort held A. D. 794. Theſe Fathers wrote to Elipandus and the other Spaniſh Biſhops, proving that our Saviour ought to be ſtrictly called the Son of God, and not an adoptive Son, becauſe there is no Diviſion or Separation in the two Natures: Charlemagne likewiſe writing to theſe Biſhops, preſſes them cloſe, and exhorts them to lay down their Miſtakes. There are four of theſe Letters extant. * Eginhard. in Vit. Carol. Mag. Sigebert. A. C. 763. Baron. Annal. A. C. 783, 791, 792, 794. Tom. VII. Concil. P. de Marca, in Marca Hiſpanica. M. Du Pin, Biblioth. des Aut. Eccleſ. VIII. Siecle.

ELIZABETH, (commonly called of Bohemia) Princeſs Palatine, Eldeſt Daughter of Frederick V. Elector Palatine of the Rhyne: She was born Decemb. 26. 1618. of Elizabeth, Daughter to James I. King of England. This Lady had an extraordinary Genius for Learning, and was reckoned the moſt knowing Perſon of her Sex. Ladiſlaus IV. King of Poland, after the Death of his Queen Renata Cecilia of Auſtria, courted her for Marriage; but ſhe was too much affected with her Books to think of any other Engagement. The Electreſs Palatine her Mother taught her ſeveral Languages in her Infancy, and when ſhe grew up ſhe made great Improvements in natural Philoſophy and the Mathematicks; and having read des Cartes Meditations, ſhe was ſo pleaſed with his Notions, that ſhe prevailed with him to live at her Palace near Leyden: Des Cartes was ſurprizingly entertained with her Quickneſs, Judgment, and Penetration: He made her Miſtreſs of ſome of the moſt curious Problems, and Notions in Geometry and Metaphyſicks; where ſhe made ſo ſurprizing a Progreſs, that Des Cartes in the Dedication of his Principles to her, declares that ſhe was the only Perſon he had met with who perfectly underſtood what he had then publiſhed. Her Mother, without giving herſelf time to examine, whether this Daughter was concerned in the Death of Epinay, a French Gentleman, aſſaſſinated at the Hague, expelled her the Family. Notwithſtanding this Diſgrace, ſhe continued her Philoſophical Studies, and held an epiſtolary Correſpondence with Des Cartes. This Princeſs having lived ſometime at Groſſen, at Heidelberg, and at Caſſel; at laſt accepted the Abby of Hervorden, a Preferment of about 1000 Crowns per Annum. She made this Abby a Philoſophical Academy; where all Perſons of parts and Learning, without Exception of Sex, or Religion; for Roman Catholicks, Calviniſts, Lutherans, Socinians, and Deiſts were all equally entertained: Some ſay her Inclination lay moſtly for the Church of Rome; but that the Byaſs of her Education held her to the Religion of her Family, which was Calviniſm: Her laſt Settlement brought her towards a Comprehenſion for Lutheraniſm: For now ſhe lived in a Lutheran Abby, and had the Government of Nuns who profeſſed that Perſuaſion. This Abby was looked on as one of the firſt publick Places for teaching the Carteſian Philoſophy: But this Seminary ſunk at this Princeſs's Death, which happened in the Year 1680. Queen Chriſtina of Sweden looked upon this Princeſs as ſuch a Rival in Learning, that ſhe could not endure to hear Juſtice done her. * Moreri de Paris.

ELORA, a famous Place near the City Aurangeabad, Capital of the Province of Balaguate in the Peninſula of Indus beyond the Gulph of Bengale; 'tis a large Plain upon the Top of a Mountain, where there are a great many fine Towns and Villages, and from whence there is a rocky Deſcent into another Plain, beautified with Pagods or Temples, admirably built. A famous Traveller gives the following Deſcription of them. There is a Portico cut out in the Rock, each Side of which is ornamented with a gygantick Figure cut out of the ſame Rock. There is likewiſe a Gallery ſupported with Figures, a Court, ſtately Monuments, together with very magnificent Pagods or Chapels: All theſe Buildings are hewn out of the Rock: Amongſt the reſt, there is a large Temple ſupported with eight Rows of Pillars in Length, and ſix in Breadth, at two Yards Diſtance from each other. At the farther End there is an Idol of a Gygantick Size, with a Head as big as a Drum, and the reſt of the Body proportionable; the Walls are ornamented with reſembling Figures in Relief; and all round the outſide of the Temple there are Statues of an extraordinary Bulk, which repreſent Men and Women ſaluting each other. All along the Rock for the Length of more than two Leagues, there are ſuch ſort of Pagods, with Santons, or Heathen Prieſts, to look after them: Theſe Santons are quite naked, excepting a Cloth before them; they let their Hair grow as long as 'tis poſſible, and cover themſelves with Aſhes; they pretend that all theſe Buildings were made by Giants, but no body knows when. But let this be as it will, thoſe who conſider the Bigneſs of the Temples, the Pilaſters and Colums, with ſuch a prodigious Number of Figures, and all cut out of the hard Rock, will be apt to conclude the Bulk and Curioſity of the Architecture and Sculpture, exceeds the common Force, and Induſtry of Mortals. * Thevenot, Travels into India Tom. III.

ELYSIAN FIELDS: ſo the Place is called, whither the Heathens believed the Spirits of good People were ſent after Death; and where they were entertained to full Satisfaction. The Word comes from a Phœnician, or Hebrew Etymology, and ſignifies a Place of Pleaſure and Entertainment. Diodorus Siculus, in his Deſcription of the Funerals in Ægypt, mentions pleaſant Meadows near Memphis, on the Banks of the Acharuſian Lake. Homer gives the Elyſian Fields this Situation: And in another Place, ſpeaking of the Elyſian Fields, without pointing to Geography, he only mentions how well People are received there; that there is neither Snow nor rough Weather, and that People feel only refreſhing Weſtern Breezes. Heſiod ſets the Elyſian Fields in ſome Iſles of the Ocean. Dionyſius the Geographer aſſigns the White Iſland for them, in the Euxine Sea: Virgil ſeems to place them in Italy, (but then 'tis under Ground) and Plutarch will have them in the Moon: Plato, who is ſomewhat more wary and reſerved, calls the Place, where honeſt People live happily after Death, the Elyſian Fields, without determining any thing about the Place. Moſt Writers make the Fortunate Iſlands the Elyſian Fields; but although Authors differ about the Situation, they all agree there is a Place of Reſt and Pleaſure, for entertaining the Souls of good People. * Homer Odyſſ. &c.

ELZIVERS: There are four of this Name very famous for the Buſineſs of Printing; viz. Bonaventure, Abraham, Lewis, and Daniel. They fall ſomewhat below the Reputation of the Stephens's, with Reſpect to Learning, and the Editions of the Greek and Hebrew Books; but as to the Choice of good Books, they ſeem to have been their Equals, and to have exceeded them, in a beautiful ſmall Character: Their Virgil, their Terence, their new Greek Teſtament, and ſome other Books with red Letters, are their Maſter Piece. And upon this Score they have juſtly the Reputation of the beſt Printers in Europe. Daniel, though he left Iſſue, goes for the laſt of his Family in this Buſineſs. The Elzivers have printed ſeveral Catalogues of their Editions: But the laſt publiſhed by Daniel is conſiderably enlarged; 'twas printed at Amſterdam 1674 in twelves, and divided into ſeven Tomes or Parts. * Memoires du Tems. Baillet, jugemens des Savans ſur les Imprimeurs.

EMMINENCE: The Diſtinction of Eminence is pretty antient, and is frequently given the Italian Biſhops by Gregory the Great; but it was grown into Diſuſe, when Pope Urban VIII. fancying the Title of moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip, then given to the Cardinals, was under proportioned to their Quality, upon the Score of its being common to a great many other People: Upon this Conſideration, he publiſhed a Bull A. D. 1638. in which 'twas ordained, that all Perſons, excepting crowned Heads, ſhould give the Title of Eminence, to Cardinals, to the three Eccleſiaſtical Electors, and to the great Maſter of Malta; with a Prohibition of this Title to all others; graciouſly allowing however, that Kings Son's ſhould enjoy their Title of Highneſs. When the Pope writes to Cardinals he ſtyles Voſtra Signoria; the Emperor calls them Reverendiſſima Paternitas, the King of France ſalutes the Cardinals Couſins; and inſtead of any honourable Diſtinction only calls them You. The Kings of Poland, and Portugal, and the Republick of Venice, give them the Title of moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip. Notwithſtanding the Cardinals of Heſſe, Eſte and de Medicis, are no King's Sons, but only younger Branches of ſovereign Houſes; yet the Emperor writing to the Firſt, ſalutes him with the Title of Dilection; and all Miniſters and Ambaſſadors call him his Highneſs, and ſo they do the Cardinals of Eſte and de Medicis. But other Cardinals ſalute them only with the Diſtinction of Eminence: and refuſed to give the Title of Highneſs, even to Prince Caſimer, Cardinal of Poland, becauſe he was the Son of an Elective King. * Memoires Curieux.

ENARCHUS, being given over by the Doctors, and looked upon as dead came to Life again, and aſſured his Friends that he was really in the other World. He told them that the Spirit which carried his Soul out of his Body, was ſeverely reprimanded by another in a ſuperior Poſt, for bringing him, inſtead of one Nicauda, a Tanner, who died of a Fever the ſame Day and Hour: And to prove the Truth of this Reſurrection, he told Plutarch, who was then ſick, that he ſhould recover, which quickly happened accordingly. Plutarch himſelf is Voucher for this Story. * Plutarch, de Anima.

* ENCRATITES, Hereticks, who appeared in the II^d Century, and had Tatian for their Maſter. This Heretick wrote a Book entitled de Perfectione Salvatoris, where he ſets too wide a Diſtinction between the Old Man and the New; and makes the Moſaic Law and Marriage the Work of the Devil. Clemens Alexandrinus cites a Paſſage of this Tract in the third Book of his Stromata. Epiphanius diſtinguiſhes the Tatianiſts from the Encratites; but then he affirms theſe laſt followed Tatian's Doctrine, and taught in effect the ſame Hetrodoxy; 1^st, That there are Principalities in the Heavens; and a Devil Enemy to the true God, independent of him, and Arbitrary in his Conduct. 2^dly, That People ought to avoid Marriage, eat nothing that had Life in it, nor drink any Wine. 3^dly, That we ought to make uſe only of Water in the Euchariſt; and for this Reaſon theſe Hereticks were called Hydroparaſtates or Aquarians. * St. Iren. Lib. I. Cap. 31. Tertul. de Præſcript. Cap. 32. Theodoret. hær. fab. Lib. I. St. Epiphan. hær. 46. St. Auguſtin. hær. 25. Baronius, A. C. 179. M. du Pin, Eccleſiaſ. Library for the three firſt Centuries.

* ENNIUS, (Quintus) a Roman, who wrote ſeveral Tragedies and Annals of the Republick in XVIII. Books. There are Fragments of moſt of theſe Books extant. Scriverius publiſhed the Fragments of his Tragedies and Comedies at Leyden in 8^vo A. D. 1620, together with other Latin Tragick Poets, which had been printed at Lyons in 1603. Merula printed the Fragments of his Annals at Leyden in 4^to A. D. 1595. Gerom Colonna publiſhed the Remains of his Tragedies and Annals at Naples in 4^to A. D. 1560. And there is a new Edition of them printed at Amſterdam 1707. Tully reports Ennius a much better Poet than Nævius, though he borrowed conſiderably from him: Both Tully and Ovid give Ennius the Character of a great Genius, but without much Art.

Ennius ingenio maximus, Arte Rudis.

But then this Diſadvantage was made up by the Richneſs and Force of his Imagination which made him write well without underſtanding the Laws of Poetry. Horace will have it that he never ſtrained his Muſe without a Glaſs extraordinary.

Ennius ipſe Pater nunquam niſi Potus ad Arma Proſiluit Dicenda.

Virgil drew a great deal of good Thought out of him. Ennius was the firſt Roman that wrote Heroic Verſe. He is ſaid to have brought the Latin Poetry out of Woods and Villages into the Town; and thus the Muſe grew more faſhionable and better bred: However, her Stile was not perfectly poliſhed. * Aulus Gellius, Lib. XVII. Cap. 21. Macrob. VI. Saturnal. Cap. I. Cicero, de Senectut. & in Bruto. Voſſ. de Hiſtor. Latin. Lib. I. c. 2. & de Poet. cap. 1.

* ENNODIUS, (Marcus, or Magnus Felix) Biſhop of Pavia, in the VI^th^ Century, was deſcended from a noble Gauliſh Family, and born in Italy A. D. 473. His Circumſtances were but ſtreight at firſt, but he happened to marry a Fortune, which ſet him at Eaſe. After he had lived plentifully for ſome time, his Wife and himſelf reſolved to part, and enter into a State of Monaſtick Diſcipline. During this Retirement he made himſelf famous by his Epiſtles and other Writings. He was pitched upon to compoſe a Panegyrick upon King Theodoric, and undertook the Defence of the Council of Rome, which acquitted Pope Symmachus. His Merit brought him to the See of Pavia in 510. He was afterwards choſen to work a Reunion between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches. He travelled twice into the Eaſt for this Purpoſe. He took his firſt Journey A. D. 515, with Fortunatus, Biſhop of Catana. And the ſecond two Years after with Peregrinus, Biſhop of Miſenum: And though he was not ſo happy as to ſucceed to the Length of his Wiſhes; he diſcovered his Prudence and Reſolution to great Advantage. The Emperor Anaſtaſius did his utmoſt both to impoſe upon him, and bring him to a Byaſs; but finding him too knowing for the one, and too honeſt for the other, he treated him roughly; and at laſt got him put on board an old weather-beaten Veſſel, with Orders not to ſet him on Shore at any Port in Greece: Notwithſtanding this hazardous Condition, he arrived in Italy, and died ſoon after, A. D. 521. Forty eight Years old. Sirmondus printed Ennodius's Works in 1612: This Book furniſhes IX Books of Epiſtles to ſeveral Perſons; to which may be added, a Collection of miſcellany Pieces: For Inſtance, a Panegyrick upon Theodoric, King of the Oſtrogoths; an Apology for the Synod and the Pope; the Life of Epiphanius, Biſhop of Pavia; the Life of S. Anthony, a Monk of Lerins; XXVIII Declamations, Poems, and two Epigrams with Sermondus's Notes. Shottus printed Ennodius's Works at Tournay in 1610. Ennodius's Epitaph is in St. Michael's Church in Pavia, with theſe Words at the End of it.

Depoſitus Subd. XVI. Kal. Aug. Valerio V. C. Conſule.

* Bellarmin. de Script. Eccleſ. Baronius, A. C. 489. 503. 515. 517. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Lat. Lib. I. Cap. 8. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library VI^th^ Century.

* ENOCH, Son of Jared. The Propheſy reckoned to Enoch is of conſiderable Antiquity; 'tis cited by Irenæus, by Clemens Alexandrinus, by Tertullian, and Origen. It diſcourſes concerning the Stars, the Deſcent of the Angels upon the Earth, their Marriages with Mortals, the Diſperſion of the Jews, the laſt Judgment, and other Subjects interſperſed with Romantick Relations: Tertullian thought this Book part of the Canon; St. Jerom, Origen, and St. Auguſtin, believed this Book the ſame with that cited by St. Jude; other Writers fancy it a diſtinct Propheſy really delivered by Enoch. Some of the Antients queſtioned the canonical Authority of St. Jude's Epiſtle, upon the Score of his citing the Book of Enoch: But St. Auguſtin judiciouſly obſerves, that the citing an Apocryphal Book is no Diſadvantage to the Authority of St. Jude's Epiſtle; becauſe there may be ſeveral uſeful Truths in a Book ſhort of the Canon. * St. Auguſtin, de Civitat. Dei, Lib. XV. Cap. 23. & Lib. XVIII. Cap. 38. Tertullian, adv. Jud. Cap. 2. de Anima. Cap. 58. de Reſur. Carnis, &c. S. Irenæus L. I. Cap. 5. & Lib. IV. Cap 30. Philo Jud. Lib. de Vita Sapient. Baron. A. C. 68. M. du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation to the Bible.

EPHA, (an Hebrew Meaſure:) There were two Sorts of them, the common, and that which may be called of the Sanctuary: The firſt held ſixty Pound of Water or Liquor of the ſame Weight, at ſixteen Ounces the Pound, which makes eight Congii, three Muids or Buſhels, and three Sats. This Meaſure is the ſame with that called Amphora Romana, Metreta, Pes Cubicus, or Quadrantal. Every Bath or Epha, as 'tis collected from Joſephus, holds ſeventy two Setiers, Paris Meaſure, a Paris Setier making two Engliſh Gallons. The Epha of the Sanctuary, as we may call it, was one third larger than the common: Thus three Ephas or common Baths, made but two of the Sanctuary. From this Difference 2 Chron. Chap. iv. ℣ 5. we read that Solomon's brazen Sea held 3000 Ephas or Baths: And in 1 Kin. Ch. vii. ℣. 26. 'tis ſaid it held only 2000. For reconciling theſe two Places we are to underſtand a common Epha in the Chronicles, and that of the Sanctuary in the Kings. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

* EPHESUS, a Town of Ionia in Aſia the leſs, &c.

The General Council of Epheſus.

The II^d^ Council of Epheſus, which is the III^d^ General one, was convened A. D. 431, for condemning Neſtorius Biſhop of Conſtantinople. This Biſhop allowed Anaſtaſius a Prieſt, and Dorotheus, a Biſhop to declare publickly from the Pulpit, that the bleſſed Virgin ought not to be called the Mother of God; and which was more, he was their ſecond in this Sentiment. His People and Clergy remonſtrated againſt this Doctrine; and this Conteſt ſpreading as far as Egypt, Cyril of Alexandria proteſted openly againſt Neſtorius's Hetrodoxy. Pope Celeſtin furniſhed with Papers from both Parties, called a Council in Auguſt 430, where Neſtorius's Doctrine was cenſured. 'Twas likewiſe ordered by this Synod, that Neſtorius ſhould be acquainted with their Reſolution, and that provided after ten Days Notice he ſhould refuſe to retract his Novelties, and approve the Deciſion of the Churches of Rome and Alexandria, and indeed of the whole Catholick Church, he ſhould be depoſed and excommunicated. And here S. Cyril being authorized to put the Sentence in Execution, advertiſed John of Antioch, and John of Jeruſalem of what had paſſed. Theſe two Prelates communicated Cyril and Celeſtin's Letters to fix other Biſhops: (Theodoret being one of the Number.) And now Neſtorius was exhorted to own the bleſſed Virgin might lawfully be called the Mother of God: But this Prelate continued ſtiff and unreclaimable, affirming that ſhe ought only to be called the Mother of Chriſt. Cyril convened a Council in Egypt, November A. D. 430; and here the Execution of the Sentence pronounced by the Weſtern Biſhops againſt Neſtorius was confirmed, and four Biſhops with the Synodical Letter were delegated, to let him know, that in Caſe he did not own the Doctrine of the Church within the time preſcribed by the Weſtern Council, he ſhould forfeit his Character. St. Cyril tacked a Confeſſion of Faith, and his twelve famous Anathematiſms to this circular Letter: And now Neſtorius requeſted the Emperor Theodoſius the Younger to call a general Council; and his Adverſary addreſſing for the ſame thing, the Emperor ſummoned the Biſhops to meet at Epheſus at Whitſuntide the next Year. Cyril of Alexandria, with fifty Egyptian Biſhops, appeared firſt at Epheſus: Neſtorius likewiſe came with ten Biſhops. Juvenal, Biſhop of Jeruſalem, brought ten Biſhops of Paleſtine thither; but John of Antioch, and the Eaſtern Biſhops could not come up at the time appointed. Theodoſius diſpatched Count Candidianus to take Care that things were orderly managed. Cyril of Alexandria, Juvenal of Jeruſalem, and the Biſhops of Egypt and Aſia, having waited a Fortnight after the ſet time for the Eaſtern Biſhops, opened the Council, and held their firſt Seſſion June the 22^d^. This was done notwithſtanding the Pope's Legates were not come up, and that a great many Biſhops inſiſted upon ſtaying for them. To proceed, Neſtorius was twice ſummoned, and his Letters and Writings were examined together with thoſe of S. Cyril: In ſhort, they condemned Neſtorius, who threw in an Exception to the Sentence. Five Days after John of Antioch, and ſix and twenty Eaſtern Biſhops arrived; and now convening with the Biſhops of Neſtorius's Party, and ſupported by Count Candidianus, they depoſed Cyril of Alexandria, Memnon Biſhop of Epheſus, and excommunicated thoſe who held Communion with them, 'till they ſhould profeſs their owning the Faith of the Council of Nice without any any ſupplemental Explanations, anathematiſe St. Cyril's Chapters, and obey the Emperor's Inſtructions, who would have the Controverſy examined without Diſorder and Noiſe. Candidianus having diſpatched a Narrative of what paſſed to Court, Theodoſius ordered that all the Deciſions made at St. Cyril's Synod, ſhould be reputed void, and that the preſent Council ſhould proceed to a rehearing of the whole Matter. And now the Biſhops of both Parties wrote to the Emperor. Upon the tenth of July Philippus and Arcadius the Pope's Legatees arrived at Epheſus, and joyning St. Cyril and his Adherents, held a ſecond Seſſion, in which they read Celeſtin's Letter to the Council. The next Day after they held a third Seſſion, in which the Acts of the firſt were read, and approved by the Legates: At the IV^th Seſſion held July 16 Cyril and Memnon's Depoſition, paſſed by the Eaſtern Biſhops, were reverſed. At the V^th Seſſion held the Day following, John of Antioch, and three and thirty Biſhops of his Party were excommunicated. Upon the 22^d of July there was a VI^th Seſſion, in which the Biſhops approved the Form of the Council of Nice, condemned that which had been drawn by a Prieſt of Neſtorius's Faction, and confirmed all which had been hitherto decreed. In the VII^th Seſſion, held the laſt of July, the Difference between the Biſhops of Cyprus, and the Patriarch of Antioch was ſettled, ſix Canons were made, and an End put to ſome other Diſputes. Theodoſius being informed of the Proceedings at Epheſus, ordered that Neſtorius, Cyril, and Memnon, ſhould be expelled, and that the other Biſhops ſhould come to an Accommodation. Count John, diſpatched to Epheſus to execute this Order, put Neſtorius, Cyril and Memnon, under an Arreſt. The Biſhops of both Parties remonſtrated againſt this Reſtraint, and ſent Commiſſioners to the Emperor, who made a ſecond Order, by Vertue of which Neſtorius was to withdraw into his Monaſtery, and Cyril and Memnon remain confined 'till their Cauſe was farther examined. Afterwards Theodoſius having heard the Delegates of both Parties at length, declared Neſtorius rightly depoſed; that Cyril and Memnon might continue upon their Sees; that all the other Biſhops ſhould return to their Churches; that neither Party were Hereticks; and that they ſhould be exhorted to friendly Correſpondence and Union: The Council acquainted with this Order, immediately broke up. St. Cyril returned to Alexandria, Neſtorius retired to the Monaſtery of St. Euprepius at Conſtantinople, and October the 25^th Maximianus was conſecrated in his Room. Though the Council was cloſed, the Diviſions in the Church kept open; the Eaſtern Biſhops ſtanding firm to the Judgment they had given. The Emperor being deſirous to put an End to theſe Diſturbances, exhorted John of Antioch to endeavour the Repoſe of Chriſtendom, and ſent off Count Ariſtolaus to negotiate an Accommodation. This Affair had a great many Traverſes; and at laſt John of Antioch being brought to condemn Neſtorius, and ſigning a Confeſſion of Faith, in which he owned 'twas lawful to ſtyle the bleſſed Virgin the Mother of God, St. Cyril and this Prelate took each other by the hand; and ſoon after moſt of the Eaſtern Biſhops following John of Antioch's Preſident, communicated with St. Cyril. The taking up this Difference was approved by Pope Sixtus, A. D. 433. Neſtorius was expelled his Monaſtery, and baniſhed to Oaſis by the Emperor's Edict, dated A. D. 435. And by another Edict the ſame Year his Books were ordered to be burnt, with a Prohibition againſt reading them. This Emperor ſet forth another Edict, by Virtue of which he obliged the Eaſtern Biſhops, not only to condemn Neſtorius's Perſon, but to anathematiſe his impious Tenents, and at the ſame time make a Declaration that there was but one indiviſible Son of God, begotten of God in an ineffable manner, before all time, and in reſpect to his Humanity born of the bleſſed Virgin. So that upon the whole, ſhe is Mother of God, becauſe the ſame ſingle Perſon is both God and Man. This new Edict diſconcerted John of Antioch and the Eaſtern Biſhops, who took it ill to find their Orthodoxy queſtioned, and juſtified themſelves ſo much to Satisfaction, that St. Cyril was obliged to own them for Catholicks. The Conteſt ſoon after revived, becauſe Diodorus of Tarſus, and Theodorus of Mopſueſtia were joined in the Cenſure with Neſtorius: For the Eaſtern Biſhops undertook their Defence. * Act. Concil. Epheſ. Tom. II^d Cyril. Alex. Epiſt. ad Theod. &c. Socrat. Lib. VII. cap. 33, &c. Baron. A. C. 430, 431.

EPHOD, part of the Jewiſh High Prieſt's Habit. It comes from an Hebrew Root, which ſignifies to faſten, tie or gird. The Septuagint, and the Vulgate, tranſlate it a Garment faſtned to the Shoulders. This Ephod had two Fillets which going over the Shoulders met in the Waſte, where they ſerved for a Girdle. The Habit was made of gold Tiſſue, intermixt with blew, purple, ſcarlet and fine Linen; upon the Shoulder part of the Ephod, there were two precious Stones, upon which the Names of the twelve Tribes were cut, the Rationale or Pectoral was faſtened to it. Thus Moſes deſcribes the High Prieſt's Ephod. Several Authors are of Opinion, that the Ephod was a ſort of ſhort Coat or Cloak. Joſephus reports it had Sleeves; that a great many Colours were interwoven in it with gold Flowers, and that upon the Breaſt there was an open Place four Fingers ſquare, which was covered with the Rationale; that the two Onyx Stones ſet in Gold, and faſtened at each Shoulder, ſerved for Buckles to the Ephod, to keep it faſt and ſmooth: The Names of the twelve Sons of Jacob were cut upon theſe Stones in Hebrew, that is, the ſix Eldeſt upon the right Shoulder, and the other ſix upon the left. Philo Judeus reſembles it to a Breaſt Plate; and St. Jerom makes it a ſort of Coat, like thoſe called Caracalla. This Ephod was to be worn by none but the High Prieſt: However, the other Prieſts and Levites wore a Linen Ephod: And even David and Gideon appeared in that Habit at extraordinary Solemnities. Iſaiah informs us that the pretended Deities were likewiſe dreſſed with Ephods. * Exod. Chap. xxviii. Levit. Chap. viii. Judges Chap. viii. & Chap. xvii. 1 Sam. Chap. xxii. 2 Sam. Chap. vi. Joſeph. Lib. II. Cap. 7. Philo Lib. III. de Vita Moſis. Hieron. ad Fabiolam & ad Marcellam.

* EPHORUS, an Orator and Hiſtorian, born at Cumæ in Eolia, lived in the CVII. Olympiad about 352 Years before the Incarnation. Socrates who was his Scholar adviſed him to write Hiſtory. Ephorus declined medling with the confuſed Memoirs of the fabulous Period, and began with the Return of the Heraclidæ into Peloponneſus, and carried on his Work from this famous Æra to the 20^th Year of Philip of Macedon, Father to Alexander the Great. This Diviſion of Time took in about 750 Years. His Hiſtory was divided into thirty Books, each of which had a Preface before them. The Learned differ in their Opinion concerning the Value of this Author. For Inſtance, Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Polybius, Dionyſius Hallicarnaſſæus, give him the Character of a very good Hiſtorian; and it muſt be ſaid theſe Men were very good Judges: However, on the other Side, Duris of Samos, Dion Chryſoſtom, and Suidas, not only charge him with miſtaking Matters of Fact, but likewiſe find Fault with his Style. Voſſius alſo takes notice of ſome Overſights in Ephorus. Notwithſtanding this Cenſure the Loſs of his Hiſtory is generally regretted. He wrote Books upon other Subjects in Greek: For the Purpoſe, a Tract concerning things invented. One of the Goods and Evils of Life in XXIV Books. One concerning Curioſities and Rarities to be met with in ſeveral Parts of the World. Ephorus had an offer of being entertained in Alexander's Court, but declined the Honour. * Diodor. Sicul. Lib. V. & XVI. Strabo Lib. I. III. & XIII. Suidas. Joſeph. contra Appion. Photius, Bibliothec. Cap. 176. & 245. Voſſ. de Hiſt. Græc. Lib. II. &c.

* EPHREM (St.) born at Niſibis, and Deacon of the Church of Edeſſa in Syria, was born in the IV^th Century, and in the Reign of Conſtantine the Great. He propoſed St. James of Niſibis for his Pattern, profeſſed the monaſtick Life very young, and had the Government of a great many Religious. Happning to make a Viſit to the Church of Edeſſa, he was ordained Deacon there. He travelled to Cæſaria in Cappadocia, and was well received by St. Bazil, who had a particular Regard for him. 'Tis ſaid this Saint taught him Greek, and made him a Prieſt. But this is a random Report; for all the Antients agree that he died no more than a Deacon. Sozomen relates, that upon his being elected Biſhop of a Town, he pretended himſelf crazed, for Fear of being conſecrated. He died in the Year 378 or 379. He wrote ſeveral Tracts in Syriac, which according to St. Jerom were ſo well received, that they

uſed

uſed to be read publickly in Churches after the Holy Scriptures. They were tranſlated into Greek, and are cited by S. Bazil and S. Gregory Nyſſen. Photius had ſeen XLIX Homilies of this Father, and drew Extracts from them. St. Ephrem wrote a great many Poetical Pieces in Syriac, which were ſung in the Syrian Churches. Farther, the Antients report him Author of a Commentary upon all the Bible; of Controverſial Tracts againſt a great many Hereticks, and of a Book upon the Subject of the Holy Ghoſt. His Commentaries and controverſial Tracts are loſt: But Gerard Voſſius has publiſhed a conſiderable Remainder of moral Diſcourſes, and Hymns belonging to this Father: Some have queſtioned whether theſe Remains were written by St. Ephrem: But their Exceptions are ſlenderly founded. Ambroſius Camaldulus publiſhed ſome of St. Ephrem's Works A. D. 1490. But Gerard Voſſius's Edition printed at Rome in 3 Tomes, in a ſingle Volume at Cologne in 1603, and at Antwerp in 1619, is much more compleat. There are eighty nine Tracts in the firſt Tome; eighteen in the 2d, with Photius's Extracts; and 27 Diſcourſes upon practical Subjects, with his laſt Will and Teſtament, in the 3d. Cotelerius has publiſhed a Greek Panegyrick reckoned to this Father. The Syrians pretend they have a great many Manuſcripts in Syriac, and Arabick, written by St. Ephrem, whom they call the Syrian Prophet. Ebed Jeſu in his Catalogue of Chaldean Writers, mentions theſe following; S. Ephrem's Commentaries upon Geneſis, Exodus and Leviticus; upon Joſhua, Judges, the Books of Samuel, and the Kings; upon the Pſalms, and the four great Prophets. He likewiſe takes notice of his Polemical Books and Epiſtles, his Diſcourſes in Verſe, his Exercitations and Liturgic Offices; his Tracts againſt the Jews, againſt the Manicheans, and ſome other Hereticks: And in fine, what fell from his Pen againſt the Emperor Julian. The Eccleſiaſtick Books of the Maronites have ſeveral Hymns attributed to St. Ephrem: Abraham Ecchelenſis cites an Office upon the Death of the bleſſed Virgin, which he believes belongs to St. Ephrem, and now is lodged in the Maronite College at Rome. * St. Hieron. in Catal. c. 115. Amphilochius Comp. S. S. Bazil & Ephr. St. Bazil Hom. 2 in Hexam. St. Gregor. Nyſſen, Orat. in ejus Vita. Genad. c. 3. de vir. Illuſt. Photius, Cap. 196. Sozomen. Theodoret, Palladius, &c. Baronius A. C. 338. n. 26. 378. n. 14. M. Simon. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſiaſtical Library fourth Century.

EPIPHANES, Son of the Arch Heretick Carpocrates. His Father bred him to Learning and Hetrodoxy: He wrote a Book upon the Subject of Juſtice: He goes upon Plato's Principles, and diſputes againſt Property ſo far, as to argue for a Community of Women: He declared ſtrongly againſt the Precepts of the Moſaick Law, and particularly againſt the tenth Commandment. Clemens Alexandrinus cites a Paſſage from this Epiphanes; and reports, that after his Death, the Cephalonians, from whom he was deſcended by his Mother's Side, made a God of him. * Clement. Alexand. Stromat. Lib. IV. Epiphan: Hær. XXXII.

* EPIPHANIUS, Biſhop of Pavia, born A. D. 438. Ordained Prieſt by Criſpin, Biſhop of Pavia, and ſucceeded him A. D. 466. He was concerned in ſoliciting a Reconciliation between the Emperor Anthemius and Ricimer his Son in Law. In the Reign of Julius Nepos, who ouſted Glycerius, Anthemius's Succeſſor, Epiphanius was diſpatched to Evaricus, King of the Viſſegoths at Tolouſe, and concluded a Treaty with him. The Emperor Nepos, diſpoſſeſſed and expelled by Oreſtes the Patrician, Momillus, Oreſtes his Son, commonly called Auguſtulus, was declared Emperor: This Turn brought Odoacer, King of the Heruli, into Italy with a great Army: Oreſtes retreating into Pavia, was beſieged, taken, and put to Death by Odoacer; who confined Auguſtulus in the Caſtle Lucullano near Naples; and thus the Roman Empire ended in the Perſon of Auguſtulus A. D. 476. This Army of Barbarians having made themſelves Maſters of Pavia, plundered and burnt the Town, and carried off great part of the Burghers Priſoners. Under this terrible Calamity, Epiphanius was very ſerviceable to the People: He got moſt of the Priſoners enlarged, and prevailed ſo far with Odoacer, as to procure the Town an Exemption from Taxes for five Years: He brought the Churches to their former Condition of Quiet and Solemnity: But this Repoſe was but of ſhort Continuance: For Theodorick, King of the Oſtrogoths, falling in upon Italy with a powerful Army, A. D. 489, defeated Odoacer: And at laſt making himſelf Maſter of all Italy, Epiphanius was diſpatched to him, to ſolicit the recalling an Edict, publiſhed by this Prince, againſt thoſe who had appeared his Enemies: Epiphanius ſucceeded in this Negotiation, and afterwards had a publick Character from Theodorick to Gondebalk, King of the Burgundians, to treat the Redemption of Captives: And here he likewiſe ſucceeded. Two Years after, he came to Theodorick's Court, to requeſt a Diſcharge of the Taxes aſſeſſed upon Liguria, and having prevailed for an Abatement of two thirds, he died in his Return, Januray 21, A. D. 497. * Ennodius. Baillet, Vies des Saints mois de Janvier.

EPIPHANY, a Feſtival of the Adoration of the three Kings. The Greeks kept the Holiday for our Saviour's Birth on the 6th of January; for which Reaſon they called this Feſtival Theophania and Epiphania, becauſe they believed our bleſſed Saviour appeared in the World upon this Day. And at the ſame time they refreſhed their Memory with a Recollection of other remarkable Circumſtances of our Saviour's Life; as the Adoration of the Magi, the Purification of the bleſſed Virgin, our Saviour's Baptiſm, and his firſt Miracle; drawing together a great many glorious Paſſages of his Life upon the Solemnity of the ſame Day. The Latin Church, who kept the Feſtival of our Saviour's Birth, upon the 25th of December, reſerved (at leaſt from the Vth Century downward) the Feſtival of the Magi's worſhipping our bleſſed Saviour, his Baptiſm, and his firſt Miracle at the Marriage of Cana, to the 6th of January. However, 'tis certain that our Saviour's Baptiſm, and his firſt Miracle at the Marriage in Cana, did not fall upon the ſame Day. Neither is it certain that the Magi came to worſhip our bleſſed Saviour upon the 6th of January, thirteen Days after his Birth, according to the Latin Church. Some of the Learned are of Opinion, that this Appearance of the Magi, did not happen 'till after the bleſſed Virgin's Purification, ſome little time before their Retreat into Egypt. As to the Circumſtances of the Magi, we know nothing certainly about them, excepting what we find related in St. Matthew's Goſpel: For all the other Evangeliſts are ſilent in this Matter; and as for the Narrative in other Authors, they go upon Conjectures, Allegories, and falſe Memoirs. Notwithſtanding the common Opinion, that the Magi were only three, there is no Demonſtration for this Number in St. Matthew's Goſpel, where 'tis only ſaid, There came Wiſemen from the Eaſt. The three Sorts of Preſents they made are no convincing Proofs that the Perſons were of that Number, becauſe they preſented jointly, and not each by themſelves. Farther, 'tis not known what Countrymen they were: But the Name of Magi being more known and reſpected by the Perſians, than amongſt other Nations, has inclined moſt of the Fathers to believe that the Wiſemen, who came to worſhip our bleſſed Saviour, lived in Perſia or Chaldea: The modern Commentators choſe rather to bring them from Arabia, but their Conjectures are ſhort of Conviction. 'Tis certain that they ſaw an extraordinary Star in the Eaſt, which occaſioned their Journey: But we have no probable Reaſons to conclude that they had learned from the Predictions of the Prophets, that this Star preſaged the Birth of a King. 'Tis more likely they concluded from the Principles of Aſtrology, that this Phænomenon foretold ſuch an extraordinary Event. To proceed, the Goſpel does not inform us that this Star was their Guide from their own Country, as far as Judea; St. Matthew ſays no more, than that they had ſeen this Star in the Eaſt, and that at their going out of Jeruſalem, it appeared again, and led them to Bethlehem. St. Matthew does not give the Title of Kings to the Magi, and thoſe Texts, which are cited from the Prophets, may be fairly underſtood of Princes and great Lords, as well as of Sovereigns and Monarchs. The Names Melchir, Balthaſar, and Gaſpar beſtowed on them at the End of the XIIth Century, and the Hiſtory of their Circumſtances and Lives, is pure Romance. The Intention of the Church is not to celebrate a Feſtival for the Magi, but only to keep up the Memory of their Worſhip, which may be looked on as the firſt Fruits of calling of the Gentiles.

The Church likewiſe commemorates the Baptiſm of our Saviour by St. John on this Day; becauſe upon this Occaſion our Saviour was declared the Son of God by a Voice from Heaven, pronouncing theſe Words; This is my beloved Son, &c. The Feſtival with this Relation ſeems more antient, than under the Circumſtance of the Magi's Worſhip. In the Reign of Adrian, Baſilides and his Followers kept it on the 10th of January. The Greeks call it Theophania, or the Feſtival of Lights. It was a Day ſet apart by that Church for the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm; upon which St. Gregory Nazianzen made an excellent Diſcourſe to thoſe newly baptized: The Vigil of this Holiday was ſolemnly obſerved: For then every thing was prepared for the Baptiſm of the Catechumens; and particularly, a Prayer was ſaid over the Water, deſigned for this Uſe. In ſome Churches this Feſtival had an Octave ſolemnized in the ſame manner with the principal Holiday.

Laſtly, this Feſtival is kept in Memory of the Miracle of changing Water into Wine, at the Wedding in Cana: For notwithſtanding this happened upon a different Day, 'twas the firſt Miracle wrought by our Saviour. When Epiphanius wrote, this Feſtival was kept by the Eaſtern Churches, and joined to the other Solemnity for our Saviour's Birth. * Tillemont. Mem. pour l'Hiſt. de l'Egliſe. Tom. I. Baillet Vies des Saints, mois de Janvier. The Commentators upon St. Matthew.

EPITAPHS; ſo at firſt the Verſes were called, which were ſung in Honour of the Dead, at their Funerals; and repeated every Anniverſary. Epitaphs were afterwards taken as they are at preſent, for Inſcriptions upon the Monuments of the Dead. The Greeks put only the Name of the deceaſed Perſon with theſe Epithites. Good Man, or good Woman, a good Day to you.

ΝΙΚΩΝ ΖΗΝΩΝΟΣ
ΧΡΗΣΤΕ ΧΑΙΡΕ.

Nicon Son of Zenon,
Good Man Happineſs
to You.

ΟΛΥΜΠΙΑΣ
ΧΡΗΣΤΗ ΧΑΙΡΕ.

Olympia,
Good Woman
Happineſs
to You.

Pauſanias obſerves that the Sicyonians uſed only to cut the Perſons Names upon the Tomb with the Salutation ΧΑΙΡΕ. But it appears by the Epitaphs above mentioned, that they added the Word ΧΡΗΣΤΟΣ, and ſometimes ΗΡΩΣ; though the Quality of the Perſon did not deſerve it. The Athenians only mentioned the dead Perſon's Name, his Father's Name, and the Name of his Tribe. The Romans at the top of their Epitaphs put DIIS. MANIBUS: ſometimes expreſſed by DIS. MAN, and moſt commonly by the two Letters D. M. Amongſt thoſe Romans who wrote their Epitaphs in Greek, they made uſe of Θ. Κ. that is to ſay, ΘΕΟΙΣ ΚΑΤΑΧΘΟΝΙΟΙΣ; as in the following Inſcription.

Θ. Κ.
ΙΟΥΛΙΩ. ΑΛΚΑΙΩ. ΠΑΤΡΙ.
ΕΥΣΕΒΗΣΤΑ ΤΩ
ΙΟΥΛΙΟΣ ΛΑΜΠΡΟΚΛΗΣ.

DIS MANIBUS
Julio Alcæo Patri ſuo
Piiſſimo.
Julius Lamprocles hoc Monumentum Dicavit.

This Epitaph and other reſembling ones belonged to original Romans ſettled in Greece, or to Greeks living at Rome. For 'tis not probable that the other Greeks, and particularly thoſe who lived before that Nation fell under the Roman Juriſdiction; 'tis not probable that theſe Dedicated in their Sepulchral Monuments with the Addition of Diis Manibus. Farther, the Romans took care to make their dead ſpeak in Defence of their Urns. Thus the following Epitaph.

C. JULIUS C. L.
BARNÆUS.
OLLAM EJUS SI QUI VIOLARIT,
AD INFEROS NON RECIPIATUR.

That is, Here lies C. Julius Barnæus Caius his manumiſed Slave, if any Perſon diſturbs his Urn and his Aſhes let him not be ſuffered to paſs the River Styx at his death. Sometimes their Epitaphs were garniſhed with moral Sentences, and Repreſentations of illuſtrious Actions. * Danet.

EPOPEE, or an Epick Poem. 'Tis defined, A Diſcourſe for forming the Manners by Inſtruction, diſguiſed under the Allegory of a noble Enterpriſe, related in Verſe, in a probable, entertaining, and ſuprizing Manner. An Epick Poem, when well executed, is the higheſt Performance in Poetry. Homer amongſt the Greeks ſtruck out a Model of this kind in his Iliads and Odyſſes, and Virgil in his Æneids amongſt the Latins. However, ſome Criticks ſpy out Faults in both theſe Authors. Taſſo's Jeruſalem, Marino's Adonis, and Arioſto's Roland, though powdered with a great many ſhining Lines, fail in their Oeconomy, and are very remote from the Perfection of an Epick Poem. The French have miſcarried in this Way, no leſs than the Italians, and as for Lucan's Pharſalia, it is more a Hiſtory in Verſe, than an Heroick Poem. * Boſſu's Treatiſe of Heroick Poetry.

EPOCHA, a Diſtinction of Time. The Chriſtian Epocha is taken from the Birth of our bleſſed Saviour. This Period is commonly ſuppoſed to begin with the four thouſand ſeven hundred and fourteenth Year of the Julian Period; the ſeven hundred ſeventy ſixth, ſince the ſettling the Olympiads, and ſeven hundred fifty two from the Building of Rome. The Turkiſh Epocha begins from the Hegyra or Flight of Mahomet; that of the Romans from the Building their City; that of the Greeks from the Beginning, or reſtoring the Olympiads; that of the antient Perſians and Aſtronomers from Nabonaſſar his Æra. In the former part of the Vth Century, Dionyſius Exiguus propoſed a Calendar for adjuſting the Calculations of time, which was quickly univerſally approved. The Church made uſe of this old Calendar, 'till about the End of the XVIth Century; and thoſe who don't receive the Gregorian Account, compute ſtill by it. Before Dionyſius Exiguus, the greateſt part of Chriſtendom made their Computation either from the Building of Rome, or the Conſul's Regiſter, or the Emperors Reigns. But Dionyſius Exiguus began a new Period, and reckoned from the Incarnation: This Æra is ſtill made uſe of in the Court of Rome, for the Dates of Bulls, and Briefs, whereas we reckon from the firſt of January next following. The Olympiads begin ſeven hundred ſeventy ſix Years before the Incarnation. The Varronian Year, or from the Foundation of Rome, is ſometimes fixed ſeven hundred fifty three before our Saviour's Birth, and in the third Year of the VIth Olympiad. Nabonaſſar, King of Babylon's Æra, made uſe of by Ptolomy, Cenſorinus, and ſeveral other Authors, began ſeven hundred forty ſeven Years before the Incarnation, and in the three thouſand nine hundred ſixty ſeventh Year of the Julian Period. The firſt Year of Julius Cæſar's correcting the Calendar, ſtands five and forty Years before our Saviour's Birth, and falls in with the four thouſand ſix hundred ſixty ninth Year of the Julian Period. The Diocletian Æra, or that of the Martyrs, reckons from the two hundred eighty fourth Year of our Saviour's Birth, though others begin it at the Year three hundred and two. It is called the Martyrs Æra, upon the Score of great Numbers of Chriſtians put to death in Diocletian's Reign. The Arabian Epocha called the Hegyra begins at the Year of our Lord ſix hundred twenty two, July the 16th. Du Cange has made Tables of all theſe Epocha's, of the Cycles of the Sun and Moon, of the Indictions, of the dominical Letters, and Eaſter Feſtivals; to which he has added the Epocha's of the Arabians and Perſians, of the Catayans, and other Eaſtern Nations, all which he has reduced to our common Computation. * Petavius Rationarium Temporum & de Doct. Tem. See Æra the Chriſtian.

EREC-

ERECTHEUS VI. King of Athens, ſucceeded Pandion in the two thouſand ſix hundred thirty third Year of the World, and a thouſand four hundred twenty three Years before the Incarnation, he reigned fifty Years. In his fifteenth Year Ceres came to Athens, and taught the Athenians Agriculture. It was likewiſe in the Reign of this Prince, as the Marmora Arundeliana inform us, that Proſerpine was carried off, and the Eleuſian Myſteries were inſtituted. * Cicero, Orat. pro Sextio, & pro Roſcio. Hygin. Pauſanias. Euſeb. in Chron.

* ERASMUS, (Deſiderius) of Rotterdam, was of ſhort Stature, but of a grave and becoming Air and Behaviour. His Conſtitution was but ſlenderly ſet together; and at the latter End of his Life, he was much troubled with the Gout and Gravel: He had a prodigious Memory, wrote with wonderful Eaſe, and withal, with a correct beautiful Manner. He was, without Diſpute, a Perſon of the greateſt Genius, and Learning of his Age. 'Tis to him the publick is moſtly obliged for reviving the Belles Lettres, the Editions of the Fathers, the Improvements in Criticiſm, and a Reliſh for Antiquity. He is one of the firſt, who managed Theological Subjects, in a rational entertaining Way, and diſengaged from the Jargon of the Schools. His Works upon practical Heads, are elegantly written. He reproved the Vices of the Times with great Freedom, and particularly the Misbehaviour of the Eccleſiaſticks: He laſhes them for their Superſtition, and their Averſion to polite Learning; and beſtows ſome Stroaks of Satyr upon the Ignorance and uncouth Management in the Schools. He let fly ſometimes againſt the Monks, and School Men, without much Reſtraint: But afterwards he repented ſome of theſe Sallies, and declares he would never have launched out ſo far, could he have foreſeen the Tempeſt raiſed by Luther. He was always a profeſſed Enemy to the Lutherans and Sacramentaries. He declared againſt ſeparating from the Roman Communion, though it is plain he did not approve every thing in it. He was admired and careſſed by Princes, Popes, and all the learned of his time. However, the Monks, People half learned, and ſeveral Divines, charged him with Hetrodoxy and Profaneneſs. The Liberty he took in reprimanding the Prejudices People then lay under againſt every thing that looked new; their Averſion for the Belles Lettres, and their Partiality for the received Notions and Cuſtoms, were the Occaſions of the Traverſes and rough Uſage Eraſmus met with. As to his Temper 'twas ſudden, but eaſily ſmoothed: He gives himſelf this Character, Iraſci celer, ſed ut placabilis eſſem.

Never Man was leſs touched with Ambition: So far from graſping at Honour, that he refuſed ſome of the higheſt Titles, and Stations. He had always a warm Inclination for Study, and preferred it to all other Buſineſs. He was ſober in his Refreſhments, free in declaring his Opinion, a ſincere plain Dealer, conſtant to Friendſhip, eaſily reconciled to thoſe who had diſobliged him, untinctured with Envy and Emulation, and loaths to diſguſt any Body: He was nevertheleſs pretty ſenſible of Libels and Affronts, apt to rally with Smartneſs enough, and not the moſt patient under Reproof. He ſometimes treated his Adverſary with an Air of Superiority, confuted them with Livelineſs, and ſometimes with a little Acrimony. In his Youth he was apprehenſive of Death, to ſomewhat of an Extream; but in the latter End of his Life the Dread of it abated, and he prepared himſelf in a very Chriſtian Manner for his laſt Hour.

All Eraſmus's Works are collected and printed at Baſil by Frobenius, A. D. 1540. in IX Tomes Folio. The two firſt and the fourth furniſh only grammatical Learning, with Tracts upon Rhetorick and Philoſophy, and afford nothing upon Eccleſiaſtical Subjects, excepting in ſome of his Colloquies, and ſome Paſſages in his Moriæ Encomium; the III^d takes in his Epiſtles, a great many of which treat of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; the V^th contains his practical Tracts; his VI^th the Tranſlation of the new Teſtament with Notes; the VII^th and VIII^th Tranſlations of the Greek Fathers; and the laſt his Apologies, which makes one of the biggeſt Volumes. Part of this Account is extracted from his Epiſtles, and from his Life prefixed to his Works. For the reſt, the Reader may be directed to the following Authorities. * Paulus Jovius, Elog. Cap. 95. Thuan. Hiſt. Spondan. Annal. &c. Vander Aa, Bookſeller at Leyden, has reprinted all Eraſmus's Works. And in this Edition, there is ſome Pieces never before publiſhed.

ERA, (the Chriſtian) it begins upon the firſt of January, after the Birth of our bleſſed Saviour, which is commonly fixed to the 25^th of December, and ſeven hundred fifty three Years after the Building of Rome. And here the Reader is to obſerve there are eight different Opinions touching the Year of our Saviour's Birth.

The firſt Opinion or Account ſets this Birth to the Year ſeven hundred forty eight, from the Building of Rome; under the Conſulſhip of Lælius Balbus, and Antiſtius Vetus. This is the Opinion of Marcus Antonius Cappellus, an Italian Cordelier, and John Kepler, a German Aſtronomer.

The ſecond places the Incarnation to the Year ſeven hundred forty nine of Rome, when the Emperor Auguſtus, and Cornelius Sylla were Conſuls. Father Dekar and Petavius are of this Opinion.

The third ſets the Birth of our bleſſed Saviour to the Year of Rome ſeven hundred and fifty, in the Conſulſhip of Calviſius Sabinus, and Paſſienus Rufus. This is the Computation of Sulpitius Severus, &c.

In the Calculation of a fourth Party, the Incarnation falls upon the ſeven hundred fifty one Year of Rome, in the Conſulſhip of Cornelius Lentulus, and Valerius Meſſalinus. This Account is maintained by Cardinal Baronius, Torniellus, Spondanus, Scalliger, and Voſſius.

The fifth places the Birth of the Meſſiah to the Year ſeven hundred fifty one of Rome, in the Conſulſhip of Auguſtus, with Plautius Sylvanus. Salian, Onuphrius, &c. follow this Opinion.

The ſixth, which is the common Computation, fixes the Birth of our Saviour to the Year ſeven hundred fifty one of Rome, under the Conſulſhip of Cornelius Lentulus and Calphurnius Piſo. This is the Opinion of DionyſiusExiguus, Bede, &c. It is likewiſe received by the Church of Rome, in her Martyrology, Breviary, and Calendar.

The ſeventh begins this Era in the ſeven hundred fifty fourth Year of Rome. This Computation is followed by George Hervat, &c.

The eighth's reckon our Saviour's Birth to the Year ſeven hundred fifty ſix of Rome: This is Paul of Middlebourg's Opinion. This Diverſity in the Chronology, proceeds from the Difficulty of fixing the Year of Herod the Great's Death, who, as 'tis evident from the Evangeliſts, was living at our Saviour's Birth; beſides Chronologers are not agreed what Year Auguſtus and Tiberius began their Reigns, nor what Year the taxing or muſtering of the Roman Subjects was made, when Cyrenius or Quirinus was Governor of Syria. (St. Luke chap. ii.) Upon theſe chronological Points there is ſome Difference amongſt antient Writers. Some of them place the Death of Herod to the Year ſeven hundred fifty four of Rome, and others ſome Years earlier. Some begin the Reign of Auguſtus at Julius Cæſar's Death, ſome at his firſt Conſulſhip, and others at the Triumvirate. Some ſet the Beginning of Tiberius's Reign at the Death of Auguſtus, and others two Years before, becauſe, ſay they, he was then Auguſtus's Collegue, or joint Emperor with him. Farther, there were ſeveral Regiſtrings of the Number of the Roman Subjects, under Auguſtus and Cyrenius; and 'tis ſomewhat difficult to ſtate the Year in which that was taken, which St. Luke mentions. But let this be as it will; all the Learned are agreed that as to Computation and Uſe, the common Epocha is to be followed; therefore Baronius, who comes two Years beyond, and Onuphrius, who falls a Year ſhort, ſtrike one or two Conſuls out of the Faſti Conſulares, to bring their Account to the common Epocha. * Riccioli, Chronolog. Reform. Lib. VIII. Cap. 2.

ERA, (the Diocletian) a famous Epocha, which is called the Key of the Chriſtian Chronology: This Period begins at the firſt Year of Diocletian's Reign, which falls in with the two hundred eighty fourth Year of our Lord, September the 17^th. This Computation is made good by the Authorities of Theophilus and St. Cyril, Arch-

Archbiſhops of Alexandria, of St. Ambroſe, of Dionyſius Exiguus, and other learned Authors cited by Petavius, and Riccioli; this chronological Account is likewiſe vouched by the Faſti Conſulares, and by the Chronicon of Alexandria publiſhed by Raderus.

ERA of the Martyrs; 'tis the ſame with the Diocletian laſt mentioned, excepting that the Egyptian Year begins on the firſt Day of Thoth, which anſwers to the 29th of Auguſt A. D. 284. 'Tis likewiſe called the Era of the Cophti or Egyptians, and was ſo diſtinguiſhed becauſe the Emperor Diocletian made a great many Martyrs in Egypt. However, we are to obſerve that this Perſecution did not begin 'till the nineteenth Year of Diocletian in March A. D. 303. * Petavius de Doct. Temp. Riccioli, Labbe, &c.

ERIA, the Lake of Eria, or of the Cat. 'Tis a Lake within new France in Northern America. It ſtands to the South of the Lake Caregnondi and to the Weſt of the Lake Ontario. Geographers make it 110 Leagues in Compaſs; a great many Rivers and particularly that of St. Laurence fall into it. Father Hennepin, who travelled upon this Lake, reports it 140 Leagues long, and that the Breadth of it opens ſo much to the Weſt, as to make it as big as all France.

ERRICO, Enrico, or Henry, (Scipio) born at Meſſina, was an Italian Poet, and flouriſhed in the XVIIth Century, in the Pontificate of Urban VIII. He wrote ſeveral Poems in his own Language, amongſt which we may reckon, 1st, The Pictures of fine Ladies, in Stanzas of ſix Verſes. 2d, Idyllia of Endymion and Ariadne; 3d, The Milky Way, or, St. James's Road in the Sky, in Sixains, or ſix Line Stanzas; 4th, A Volume of Lyrick Poetry; 5th, An Heroick Poem upon the Deſtruction of Babylon: And another Poem entituled, The Trojan War: 7th, Two Comedies, one called the Revolt of Parnaſſus, and another, A Trial at Pindus: 8th, The Parnaſſian Wars, in two Parts: 9th, The Croſs powdred with Stars, in Stanzas of eight Verſes: 10th, A little Poem upon the pretended Letter of the bleſſed Virgin, to the Burghers of Meſſina: 11th, An Opera called Deida Meia: 12th, The victorious Auſtria, which is a kind of Epithalamium: 13th, The Metamorphoſis, in Imitation of thoſe made by Ovid, and Moſes's Paſſage, which is a Poetical Paraphraſe in Proſe. Toppi reports, that Errico was particularly admired for the Eaſineſs of his Manner, the Livelineſs of his Genius, the Smoothneſs of his Expreſſion, and ſeveral other entertaining Qualities. * Nicol. Topp. Della Bibloth. Napolit. pag. 280, 281.

ERTZEBURG, or the Circle of Mountains, part of Miſnia in upper Saxony: This Country is almoſt quite encloſed with the Rivers Mulda and Multa; here are the Mines of Lead, Tin, and Silver, for which Saxony is ſo famous. Chemnitz is the Capital: The other conſiderable Towns are Fridberg, Anneberg, and Marienberg. * Maty, Diction.

ESCHEVIN, a Magiſtrate choſen by the Burghers to take care of the Buſineſs of the Corporation, and the ornamenting the Town; at Paris there are four Eſchevins and a Prevot des Marchands, who has the Juriſdiction of Matters relating to the Intereſt and Privileges of that City, and has likewiſe an Authority to examine the Commodities which come up by Water, and to take Cognizance of Diſputes ariſing from thence: Theſe five are Lords as it were of the Rivers which come to Paris. They are likewiſe intruſted with the Rents of the Hôtel de Ville or Guild Hall, and have the Cognizance of Suits commenced for the Payment of them. They ſet the Aſſize, or Rates, upon Commodities and Proviſions, &c. There lies an Appeal from them to the Parliament. In other French Towns there is a Mayor and Eſchevins, or Aldermen. They call them Conſuls in Languedoc, Provence, and Dauphiny: Capitouls at Toloufe, and Jurats at Bourdeaux: Antiently Eſchevins were Aſſeſſors and Counſellors to the Counts and Judges of a City; and therefore in ſome Places they call them Peers, which is the Name for aſſiſtant Judges or Counſellors, as the French call them. They ſometimes had the ſole Cognizance in Cauſes of ſmall Value: and from thence incroaching by Degrees, they graſped Juriſdiction to baſſe Juſtice. See Loiſeau.

The Eſchevins have likewiſe the Power which the Ediles had at Rome, and were the ſame with the Magiſtrate called Poteſtas, in the leſſer Italian Towns, where they are ſtill called Podeſta. In Holland the Eſchevins have the Cognizance of all Property Concerns, in the firſt Inſtance. They likewiſe try criminal Cauſes, and in Caſe the Priſoner confeſſes the Fact they have Authority to put the Sentence in Execution, whither capital or leſs, and here there lies no Appeal from them. They can likewiſe put the Perſon proſecuted to the Queſtion or Torture, and in Caſe he holds out, and makes no Confeſſion, the Trial is to proceed according to the Civil Form, ſaving always the Liberty of appealing to the Court of Holland. The Number of the Eſchevins is not the ſame in all Towns. There are nine of them at Amſterdam. * Du Cange. Paſquier, &c.

In Holland the Eſchevins are a Court of Juſtice in every Town; at Amſterdam, as has been obſerved, they are nine, of which ſeven are annually choſen; but two of the preceding Year continue in Office. A double Number is named by the Senate, out of which the Princes of Orange chooſe. The Eſchevins are ſovereign Judges in all criminal Cauſes. In Civil, after a certain Value there lies an Appeal to the Court of Juſtice of the Province; they paſs Sentence of Death upon no Man without adviſing with the Burghomaſters; though after they have gone through that Form, they proceed by their own Opinion, without being bound to follow that of the Burgomaſters. * Temple's Obſervations upon the Netherlands.

* ESDRAS. To what has been ſaid upon this Article in Morery, we may add ſomething of Eſdras's collecting the canonical Writings. Some of the Fathers give Eſdras a greater Share in this Work, than is aſſigned him, even by the Jews. They maintain that all the Scriptures were deſtroyed in the Babyloniſh Captivity, and that Eſdras reſtored them by divine Revelation. This is the Opinion of Irenæus, Tertullian, Clemens Alexandrinus, St. Bazil, St. Auguſtin, and others; but they went upon a miſtaken Ground, and had no better Authority than the xivth Chapter of the IId Apochryphal Book of Eſdras. 'Tis granted that in the Reign of Joſiah, the Books of the Law were ſo far loſt that none but Hilkiah's Copy could be produced; for it may be reaſonably concluded from the Surprize Hilkiah and Joſiah expreſſed at the reading of it, that neither of them had ſeen it before: And if the King and the High Prieſt, both Perſons of exemplary Piety, were unacquainted with this Book, it may reaſonably be concluded, I ſay, that the reſt of that Nation knew nothing of it. But during this Prince's Reign, Copies were tranſcribed from this original Pentateuch, and Search made for the other Parts of holy Scripture. And thus, tho' the City was deſtroy'd within a few Years, and the authentick Copy of the Law burnt with the Temple; yet by this time Copies both of the Law and Prophets were in private Hands, and carried into the Captivity. That Daniel had a Copy of the holy Scriptures with him in Babylon, is plain from his mentioning the Law, and Jeremy's Prophecy; and in the vith Chapter of Ezra 'tis ſaid that at the finiſhing of the Temple, the Prieſts and Levites were ſettled in their Functions, according as it is written in the Law of Moſes: But how could they be ſure it was done, according to this written Regulation, unleſs they had Copies of the Law amongſt them? Now this Relation of the Prieſts Settlement was near ſixty Years before Eſdras came to Jeruſalem; farther, in the viiith Chapter of Nehemiah, when the People deſired the Law of Moſes might be read to them, they did not entreat Ezra to addreſs for Inſpiration, they did not expect it ſhould be dictated afreſh from Heaven; they only requeſted he would bring forth the Book of the Law of Moſes, which the Lord commanded Iſrael; which evidently ſhews the Book was known to be extant, and that there was no Need of Recourſe to a miraculous Expedient for producing it; in ſhort, all that Ezra did in this Matter, was to get as many Copies of the canonical Writings as he could, and to draw a correct Edition out of them, and here his Performance may be ranged under the following Particulars.

Firſt, he corrected all the Errors occaſioned by the Negligence of Tranſcribers; for by comparing the Copies, he was able to ſettle the true Reading. Whether the Keri Cetib, in our preſent Hebrew Bibles, were part of theſe Corrections, is hard to determine; though the Generality of the Jewiſh Writers declare for the affirmative. By the Way Keri Cetib are various Readings in the the Hebrew Bible, Keri ſignifies that which is read, and Cetib, that which is written; for where there are any ſuch various Readings, the wrong Reading is written in the Text; this is called the Cetib: And the true Reading, which is written in the Margin, is called the Keri.

Secondly, Eſdras collected all the Books of the then inſpired Writings, ranged them in Order, and ſettled the Canon: Theſe Books he divided into three Parts, 1st, the Law, 2dly, the Prophets, and 3dly, the Cetubim or Hagiographa. Joſephus, in his firſt Book againſt Appion, makes mention of the ſame Diviſion: According to which the Law contains, 1st, Geneſis, 2d, Exodus, 3d, Leviticus, 4th, Numbers, 5th, Deuteronomy: The Writings of the Prophets are, 1st, Joſhua, 2d, Judges with Ruth, 3d, Samuel, 4th, Kings, 5th, Iſaiah, 6th, Jeremiah with his Lamentations, 7th, Ezekiel, 8th, Daniel, 9th, the twelve minor Prophets, 10th, Job, 11th Ezra, 12th, Nehemiah, 13th, Heſter: And in the Hagiographa are, firſt, the Pſalms, 2dly, Proverbs, 3dly, Eccleſiaſtes, 4thly, The Song of Solomon, which all together make two and twenty Books. This Diviſion was made for reducing their Books to the Number of their Alphabet conſiſting of 22 Letters: But at preſent they reckon theſe Books twenty four, and ſet them in the following Order. 1st, the Law which takes in the Pentateuch: 2dly, the Prophets, which they divide into the former and latter Prophets; and here Moſes's Books making five, thoſe of the former Prophets are, 6, Joſhua, 7. Judges, 8. Samuel, 9. Kings: The Books of the latter Prophets are, 10. Iſaiah, 11. Jeremiah, 12. Ezekiel, and 13. the twelve minor Prophets: 3dly, The Hagiographa, which are 14. the Pſalms, 15. the Proverbs, 16. Job, 17. the Canticles, 18. Ruth, 19. the Lamentations, 20. Eccleſiaſtes, 21. Eſter, 22. Daniel, 23. Ezra, 24. Chronicles. Under the Name of Ezra they take in the Book of Nehemiah, for the Hebrews and Greeks too antiently reckoned Ezra and Nehemiah but one Book. But then all theſe Books were not received into the Canon in Ezra's time, for Malachi, as it is ſuppoſed, lived after him; and in Nehemiah mention is made of Jaddua, as High Prieſt, and of Darius Codomannus, as King of Perſia, who were at leaſt an hundred Years after his time; and in the third Chapter of the firſt Book of Chronicles, the Genealogy of the Sons of Zerubbabel is carried down to ſo many Generations as makes it reach to the time of Alexander the Great: 'Tis therefore moſt likely that the two Books of the Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Eſter, and Malachi, were afterwards added in the time of Simon the Juſt; and it was not 'till then, that the Canon of the old Teſtament was fully compleated.

To proceed, the five Books of the Law are divided into fifty four Sections. This Diviſion many of the Jews affirm one of the Conſtitutions of Moſes; but others with more probability reckon it to Ezra. 'Twas made for the Uſe of the Synagogue and the better Inſtruction of the People. For every Sabbath Day one of theſe Sections was read in their Synagogues. This as we read in the Acts of the Apoſtles (Act. x. ℣. 21.) was done of Old Time, which may fairly be interpreted from the Time of Ezra. They ended the laſt Section with the laſt Words of Deuteronomy, on the Sabbath of the Feaſt of Tabernacles. And the next Sabbath after, began again with the firſt Section of Geneſis, and went round in this Circle every Year. The Number of theſe Sections was fifty four; becauſe in their intercalated Years (a Month being then added) there were fifty four Sabbaths. On other Years they reduced them to the Number of the Sabbaths, by joining two ſhort Sections together; for they believed themſelves obliged to have the whole Law thus read over in their Synagogues every Year. 'Till the time of the Perſecution, under Antiochus Epiphanes, they read only the Law: But then the reading of it being forbidden, they ſubſtituted fifty four Sections out of the Prophets, in the room of the ſame Number of the Law: And this reading of the Prophets was ever after continued. So that when the reading of the Law was revived by the Maccabees, the Section which was read every Sabbath out of the Law ſerved for the firſt Leſſon, and the Section out of the Prophets for their ſecond Leſſon; and thus it was practiſed in the time of the Apoſtles. Thus when St. Paul came into the Synagogue at Antioch in Piſidia, 'tis ſaid he ſtood up to preach after the reading of the Law and Prophets. (Acts xiii. ℣. 15.) And in his Sermon then preached he tells them the Prophets were read at Jeruſalem every Sabbath Day; that is, in thoſe Leſſons which were taken out of the Prophets.

Theſe Sections were divided into Verſes which the Jews call Peſukim. They are marked in the Hebrew Bibles with two great Points at the end of them, called Soph-Paſuk, i. e. the End of the Verſe. This Diviſion was not begun by Ezra, but 'tis certainly very antient. 'Twas moſt probably invented for the Convenience of the Chaldee Interpreters. For after the Hebrew Language was no longer the Jews Mother Tongue, and the Chaldee was ſpoken inſtead of it. When this Change happened at the Return from the Babyloniſh Captivity, the Cuſtom was to read the Law to the People firſt in the original Hebrew, and then tranſlate it into Chaldee, that all the Congregation might underſtand it: And all this was done Period by Period. Now that theſe Periods might be the better diſtinguiſhed; that the Reader might certainly know how much he was to read at a time, and that the Interpreter might be better acquainted with the Proportion of every Interval, there was a Neceſſity that ſome Marks ſhould be invented for their Direction. Their Rule was that in the Law the Reader was to read one Verſe, and then the Interpreter was to turn it into Chaldee; but that in the Prophets, the Reader was to read three Verſes together, and then the Interpreter to follow him with the Chaldee Tranſlation of them. This Cuſtom plainly proves that the Diviſion of the Scriptures into Verſes muſt be as antient as the interpreting them in their Synagogues into the Chaldee Language: Now this Cuſtom began with the erecting the Synagogues, and the Uſe of reading the Scriptures publickly in them, which was at their Return from the Babyloniſh Captivity. This at firſt was practiſed only in the Law 'till the time of the Maccabees. But afterwards the ſame Reading and Tranſlation paſſed through the Prophets and the Hagiographa; and from hence 'tis moſt likely the Diviſion of the holy Scripture into Verſes was firſt made, but without any Figures to tell the Number. The Manner by which they are now diſtinguiſhed in their common Hebrew Bibles, is by the two great Points Soph-Paſuk abovementioned. But whether this was the antient Way is ſomewhat of a Queſtion too long to be here diſcuſſed.

The Diviſion of the holy Scriptures into Chapters is of a much later date. The Pſalms 'tis true were always divided as we now have them. For St. Paul in his Sermon at Antioch in Piſidia, quotes the iid Pſalm. (Acts xiii. ℣. 33.) But as to the reſt of the holy Scriptures the Diviſion of them into the preſent Chapters, is what the Antients knew nothing of. Some reckon it to Stephen Langton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in the Reigns of King John and King Henry III. But the true Author of this Invention was Hugo Cardinalis, who flouriſhed about the Year 1240, and died A. D. 1262. This Cardinal made the holy Scriptures his main Study, and wrote a Comment upon the whole Canon. To carry on this Work with the greater Convenience, he invented a Concordance for the Vulgar Latin Bible. This Work was afterwards much improved by Arlottus Thuſcus and Conradius Halberſtadius, the firſt a Franciſcan, and the other a Dominican, who lived both about the End of the ſame Century The chief Deſign of the Concordance was for the eaſier finding any Word or Paſſage in the holy Scriptures. To make it anſwer this Purpoſe, the Cardinal found it neceſſary to divide the Books into Sections, and the Sections into Subdiviſions: By this Management, the References were more ſignificant, and the Index could point out more exactly to every Word or Paſſage in the Text. For 'till then every Book of the holy Scriptures in the Vulgate, was without any Diviſion. And thus had the Index referred only to the Book, the whole Book poſſibly muſt have been read over before the Place ſought for could have been found. But by referring to it by this Diviſion, the Reader might come at it at firſt Sight. Now theſe Sections are the Chapters into which the Bible has ever ſince been divided.

IIId, The third Branch of Ezra's Performance upon the holy Scriptures was the throwing ſome ſupplemental Paſſages for explaining, Connection, and finiſhing: And here he was aſſiſted by the ſame infallible Spirit, by which they were first written. Now, the last Chapter of Deuteronomy is an Instance of such a supplemental Narration: Here we have an Account of the Death and Burial of Moses, and of Joshua's succeeding him; this could not be written by Moses; but as it is most probable, was added by Ezra to make the History of Moses compleat. That there are Passages in Scripture posterior to the inspired Authors who wrote the Books, may be made good by several Instances. To mention some few of them, Genesis xxii. 14. we read, As it is said, to this Day, in the Mount of the Lord it shall be seen. But Mount Moriah, the Mount here meant, was not called the Mount of the Lord, 'till the Temple was built upon it. Genesis xxxvi. ℣. 3. 'tis written, And these are the Kings that reigned in the Land of Edom, before there reigned any King over the Land of Israel. Now this could not have been related, 'till after there had been a King in Israel; and therefore they cannot be Moses's Words, but must have been thrown in by some Person posterior to him. Once more, Exodus xvi. ℣. 35, the Text informs us, That the Children of Israel did eat Manna forty Years, 'till they came to a Land inhabited. They did eat Manna 'till they came to the Borders of the Land of Canaan. But here we are to observe that Moses was dead before the Manna ceased; and therefore these can't be his Words, but must have been inserted afterwards; to conclude this Remark with another Instance; In the xxv^th^ of the Proverbs, 'tis written, These are the Proverbs of Solomon, which the Men of Hezekiah King of Judah copied out. This Sentence it is evident must have been inserted several Ages after Solomon; for Hezekiah was the twelfth in Descent from him. But here the Reader is to take notice that these additional Passages are no Disservice to the Authority of the Canon; because they were all inserted by supernatural Direction; this as to Ezra's Case is without Dispute; for he was most certainly the Writer of that Book which goes under his Name: There are likewise good Reasons to prove him the Author of the two Books of Chronicles. Now since intire Books written by him are of divine Authority, there is all imaginable Reason to suppose he was no less directed by the holy Spirit in his supplemental Passages: The Reason of the thing holding in the one Case, no less than in the other.

IV. The next Part of Ezra's Performance was transcribing the inspired Writings in the Chaldee Character. This Language being grown the Vulgar amongst the Jews after their Return from the Captivity, he made use of the Chaldee Alphabet in copying the Scriptures. As for the old Hebrew Character, 'twas continued only by the Samaritans, who use it to this Day. This was the old Phœnician Character from which the Greeks borrowed theirs. The old Ionian Alphabet resembles it in some Measure, as Scaliger observes in his Notes upon Eusebius's Chronicon. In this Samaritan Character Moses and the Prophets recorded the sacred Oracles, and in this the Finger of God himself wrote the ten Commandments upon the two Tables of Stone.

V. Whether Ezra at his Collection of the inspired Writings added the Vowel Points now in the Hebrew Bibles is a Question disputed; 'twas resolved without Contradiction, in the affirmative, 'till Elias Levita a German Jew wrote against it in the XVI^th^ Century. Buxtorf the Father endeavoured to disprove his Arguments, but Capellus, a French Protestant, and Hebrew Professor at Saumur, has published a thorough Reply to what was objected: Buxtorf the Son, has encountred Capellus in Defence of his Father's Performance: But his Attempt falls short of Satisfaction; the Generality of the Learned being still of Capellus's Opinion. The English Reader who desires to see the Point argued at Length on both Sides, may consult the learned Doctor Prideaux. * Iren. adversus Hæreses Lib. III. Cap. 25. Tertul. de Habitu Mulierum cap. 3. Clemens Alexandrin. Strom. I. Hieron. contra Helvidium. Augustin de Miraculis Sacræ Scripturæ, Lib. II. Walton's Prolegom. 8. §. 18, 19, &c. Hieron. in Prologo Galeato. Buxtorf, Synagoga Judaica Cap. xvi. Scaliger in Animadvers. in Eusebii Chronicon. pag. 110, 111, 117. Prideaux old and new Testament connected, &c. Part I.

* ESOP a Phrygian: There is not much Credit to be given to Esop's Life written by Planudes, and therefore we must look farther for Authors of better Authority: Plutarch assures us Crœsus sent Esop to Periander then at the Helm at Corinth, and that Socrates turned Esop's Fables into Verse; that Esop and Solon met at Crœsus's Court; that the Burghers of Delphi put Esop to Death, because he had sent Crœsus back the Money which he had given him to present the Oracle. Plato, tho' he excepts against the Poets, allowed the reading Esop's Fables in his Common-wealth: Those which go under his Name at present were put into Form by Planudes, tho' the Thought was Esops's. Phœdrus mentions a Statue erected for Esop by the Athenians. Some are of Opinion that Locman, so much celebrated by the Eastern Nations, is the same with Esop. The best Life extant of Esop, is that written by Monsieur de Mezeriac, reprinted at the Hague in the first Tome des Mémoires de Literature. * See Esop in English Morery Vol. first.

*ESPENCÆUS (Claudius) a French Doctor and Divine of the XVI^th^ Century, born at Châlons upon the Marne, descended from a noble antient Family, and by the Mother's Side extracted from the Ursini in Italy. The Cardinal of Lorrain entertained him in his Family, and had a great Esteem for him. His Sermons preached in Lent A. D. 1543. gave him some Trouble. Some Propositions he had maintained, were complained of to the Faculty of Divinity at Paris: And here to give Satisfaction, he appeared in the same Pulpit, and softned, or rather recanted, some of his Tenents. He attended the Cardinal of Lorrain in his Journey to Flanders A. D. 1544. whither his Eminence was dispatched for ratifying the Treaty between King Francis I. and the Emperor Charles V. Espencæus was afterwards sent by his Majesty to Melun, to assist at a Conference of twelve Divines the King had convened there, in order to receive their Advice touching the Questions which were to be handled at the Council of Trent. He appeared there, and had a principal Share in forming the Resolution then taken. In the Year 1547 King Henry II. sent him to the Council lately removed to Bologna. The Cardinal of Lorrain carried him to Rome A. D. 1555, where his Reputation ran so high, that Paul IV. had thoughts of making him a Cardinal, to keep him with him; but this Design dropping, Espencæus gave God Almighty Thanks for missing the Promotion. In the Year 1563, he appeared at the Meeting of the Estates at Orleance, and the next Year he was at the Colloquy of Poissy: And here he came to an Accommodation with the Calvinists upon some Articles, for which the Prelates, and other Divines of his Party, were by no Means satisfied: He was charged with writing a Tract about Images, which occasioned him some Disturbance. He spent the rest of his Time in his Study, and died of the Stone A. D. 1571. Espencæus was one of the most learned and judicious Divines of his Time: He was thoroughly acquainted with the Canons and Discipline of the Church; he was likewise very well skilled in classical and profane Learning; he had a noble Manner in writing Latin, composed several excellent Tracts, and amongst the rest Commentaries on St. Paul's Epistles to Timothy and Titus; in which after having explained the Text, he handles several material Questions at length, touching the Hierarchy and Discipline of the Church. He wrote a Discourse concerning clandestine Marriages, where he endeavours to prove that Children cannot lawfully enter into matrimonial Engagements without their Parents Consent: He likewise wrote a Treatise upon publick and private Masses, with several other Pieces, collected in his Latin Works printed at Paris A. D. 1619. To these may be added several French Discourses, upon Controversy and moral Subjects, published by themselves. * Thuan. Lib. L. Spondan A. C. 1561. N. 17. 1571. N. 36. Sainte-Marthe Aux Eloges. Lib. II. La Croix du Main, & du Verdier Vauprivas, Biblioth. Franc. &c.

* ESTER (the Book of) contains the History of a Jewish Lady of this Name, Niece to Mordecai of the Tribe of Benjamin. Chronologers are not agreed about the Time when this History was Matter of Fact; nor what King it is of the Medes or Persians, who married Ester, and is called Ahasuerus in Scripture. This King cannot be Cyaxares King of the Medes, and Son of Phraortes, because he was dead before the Jews were carried to Babylon in the Reign of Jeconiah. 'Tis granted his Son Astyages is called Ahasuerus in the last Chapter ter of the Greek Text in Tobit: But then Herodotus relates that this King was married to Anana, Daughter to Halyates, King of the Lydians; and beſides he muſt have had another Queen before by whom he had Mandana, Cyrus's Mother. Thus neither one nor the other of theſe Ladies can be Heſter. Some Writers are of Opinion that Ahaſuerus, Eſter's Husband, was Darius the Mede, who was likewiſe called Cyaxares. But the King mentioned in the Book of Eſter, was King both of the Medes and Perſians, whereas Darius the Mede was King only of the Medes and Chaldeans. Farther, the Hiſtory of Eſter can by no Means be brought to Cyrus's Reign: However, ſome Writers reckon it to that of his Son Cambyſes, who is called Ahaſuerus in Ezra: (Chap. iv. ℣. 6.) But then Cambyſes reigned not above ſeven or eight Years, whereas Heſter's Ahaſuerus governed more than twelve. (Eſter chap. iii. ℣. 7.) A great many Writers aſſign this Hiſtory to Darius Hyſtaſpes; and to this Prince the Circumſtance of Ahaſuerus's Reign, deſcribed in Eſter, ſeem to agree; for his Dominions reached from India to Ethiopia: Suſa or Shuſhan was the Place of his Reſidence: He was married to a Lady Herodotus calls Artiſſone, for whom he had an extraordinary Affection: He brought the Iſlands in the Mediterranean under Contribution: All theſe Circumſtances ſuit with Eſter's Ahaſuerus: And Mordecai being one of the Jews that was carried to Babylon with King Jeconiah by King Nebuchadnezzar; this chronological Period makes the Hiſtory of Eſter impracticable to any Perſian Kings poſterior to Darius: For upon ſuch a Suppoſition, Mordecai muſt have been above 120 Years old, and his Niece Eſter by Conſequence muſt have been far advanced in Life. But here, according to Herodotus, none of Darius's Queens can be either Eſter or Vaſti; for the two firſt are Atoſſa, and Artiſſone, Cambyſes's Daughter, and the laſt was Parmis, Daughter to Smerdis, Cyrus's Son. Beſides, Darius, Son of Hyſtaſpes, countenanced the Jews in the 2d Year of his Reign; whereas Eſter's Ahaſuerus knew nothing of them, 'till twelve Years after his coming to the Crown: In fine, what has been obſerved concerning Mordecai's Age, ſeems likewiſe to exclude Darius; for if Mordecai was carried Captive in the Reign of Jeconiah, he muſt have been above an hundred Years old when this Hiſtory happened. However, it may be returned, that it was not Mordecai but his Grandfather that was carried to Babylon in Jeconiah's Time. Thus the Hebrew Text of Chapter ii. ℣. 6. may be interpreted: Though the Greek Text, and the Vulgate tranſlate it, upon Mordecai Eſter's Uncle. However, in the Greek Text Ahaſuerus is called Artaxerxes. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid by the Greek Hiſtorian, that Haman was a Macedonian, and that he had a Deſign to transfer the Perſian Empire to the Macedonians. If this Remark holds, it will bring this Hiſtory lower than the Reign of Darius Hyſtaſpes. Scaliger is of Opinion that Eſter's Ahaſuerus was Xerxes. Thus Xerxes's Queen is made the ſame with her called Ameſtris by Herodotus, but then this Lady was a Perſian; and by Conſequence cannot be Eſter: And over and above, Xerxes was not at Suſa, but in Greece, the ſeventh Year of his Reign. Some Chronologers draw theſe Events ſtill forward to the Reign of Artaxerxes Longimannus, Xerxes's Son: This Opinion ſeems ſupported by the Greek Text, where Ahaſuerus is called Artaxerxes: Joſephus likewiſe places the Hiſtory of Eſter under this Prince. Capellus drives the Hiſtory ſtill downward to the Reign of Darius Ochus, but this Chronology ſtretches too far. Amidſt this Diverſity of Opinions, 'tis ſomewhat difficult to pronounce upon the Time. If Mordecai was carried Captive in the Reign of Jekoniah, 'tis probable Eſter's Ahaſuerus was Aſtyages. But upon Suppoſition, it was not Mordecai, but his Grandfather, that was removed to Babylon with Jeconiah, then in all Likelihood Artaxerxes Longimannus muſt be the Prince.

The Author of this Hiſtory is no leſs uncertain than the Time. St. Epiphanius, St. Auguſtin and Iſidore, reckon this Book to Ezra; Euſebius believes it not ſo ancient; others ſuppoſe it written by Jehoakim the Jewiſh High Prieſt, Grandſon to Joſedeck. The Majority of Writers make Mordecai the Author, and ſome give Eſter a Share in it. The Talmudiſts pretend that the Sanedrim, to tranſmit what happened to Poſterity, and to juſtify the keeping the Feſtival of Purim, ordered the drawing up this Book, and having examined it, placed it in the Canon. It was firſt written in Hebrew, and afterwards ſome Helleniſt Jew enlarged it, which Additions are inſerted at the End of the third or laſt Verſe of the tenth Chapter. Origen ſeems to have believed theſe Additions were formerly in the Hebrew Text; But it is more probable they are only the Supplement of a Greek Writer. Eſter makes part of the Jewiſh Canon, 'tis likewiſe reckoned amongſt the inſpired Writings by the Council of Laodicea, confirmed by the general Council of Chalcedon, not to mention other Authorities. St. Jerom throws the VI Chapters, which come after the Xth, out of the Canon: and moſt of the Learned, 'till Sixtus Senenſis, are of this Father's Sentiment; but now the Council of Trent has had the Courage to decree all the Sixteen Chapters canonical. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XI. Hierom. Prolog. Galeat. M. Du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible.

ESTRÉES (Cæſar de) Cardinal, Chamberlain of the ſacred College, Biſhop of Albano, Abbot of St. Claude in the Franche-Compte, and ſeveral other Abbies, Doctor of Sorbon, one of the forty Members of the French Academy, and Protector of the Academy of Soiſſons. He was nominated Biſhop and Duke of Laon, and Peer of France A. D. 1653. being then but twenty five Years of Age; which it may be was the Reaſon why he was not conſecrated 'till two Years after. He was afterwards by the King's Order, and Pope's Conſent, conſtituted a Mediator between his Holineſs's Nuntio, and the Abettors of the four Biſhops of Alet, Beauvais, of Pamiers, and Angiers, then embroil'd with the Court of Rome; and here he managed with that Dexterity as to procure an Accommodation, which terminated in the Repoſe of the Gallican Church. Pope Clement X. made him a Cardinal A. D. 1671. At the Death of this Pope, the Cardinal d'Eſtreés was the only French Man of that Quality that came into the Conclave, where Innocent XI. was elected, and procured the Delay of the Election for above five Weeks, 'till the Conclave had its juſt Number. He returned into France in 1677. where after ſix Months the King gave him a publick Character to the Court of Bavaria to treat the Dauphin's Marriage with the Electoral Princeſs, and to negotiate other important Affairs: Having reſigned the Biſhoprick of Laon in Favour of his Nephew, he went to Rome with a Commiſſion to manage the nice Affair of the Regale; which grew more difficult by the Reſolution of the Aſſembly of the Clergy A. D. 1682. and here he maintained his Majeſty's Prerogative, and the Privileges of the Gallican Church, with ſo much Force and Argument, that Innocent XI. never durſt publiſh any Inſtrument or Decree againſt one or t'other, notwithſtanding he was earneſtly preſt to it by the Enemies of France, and the chief Cardinals of the Court of Rome. After the Death of the Duke his Brother A. D. 1687. all the publick Affairs of France were intruſted with him. The deceaſed Duke, in Conſideration of the Cardinal, had the ſame funeral Reſpect at Rome that is uſually paid to crowned Heads. When Innocent XI. died, A. D. 1689. the Cardinal D'Eſtreés was the only Frenchman of that Diſtinction then at Rome. And here without the Aſſiſtance of any publick Miniſter from King Lewis XIV. he went into the Conclave; and notwithſtanding the Oppoſition made by the Faction of the deceaſed Pope, and the Auſtrian Party, he managed the ſacred College with ſo much Addreſs and Reach of Conduct, that they durſt not venture upon an Election 'till King Lewis's Ambaſſador, and the French Cardinals, came up. After the Election of Alexander VIII. he returned to Paris A. D. 1690. The next Year it was thought proper to diſpatch him to Rome, to appear at the Conclave, where Innocent XII. was choſen. And now the King ordered him to remain at Rome, and endeavoured the taking up the Differences between the French Clergy, and that Court. He applied himſelf to this Buſineſs with the Aſſiſtance of the Cardinal Janſon: and after two Years ſoliciting, brought the Affair to a Concluſion A. D. 1693. He returned into France and continued there 'till Innocent XII.'s Sickneſs obliged him to take another Journey to Rome, with the other French Cardinals, A. D. 1700. In October the ſame Year he appeared in the Conclave, and aſſiſted at the Election of Clement XI. After this Election the other French Cardinals being upon their Way

Way to France, the King ordered him to ſtay in Italy, to negotiate with the Republick of Venice, and other Princes. After this, he was ordered to attend King Philip V. into Spain, to conſult with the chief Miniſters of this Prince about ſettling the Affairs of that Kingdom. He was Protector of the Portugueze Nation, though a Stranger in that Kingdom. This Cardinal died December the 19th 1714. almoſt 87 Years of Age, being born February the 5th 1628. * French Morery's Supplement.

* EVAGRIUS, called Scholaſticus, born at Epiphania in the Reign of Juſtinian A. D. 536. Was a Barriſter at Antioch, which gave him the Addition of Scholaſticus, for ſo they called thoſe who pleaded at the Bar. He wrote an eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory in VI Books; and ſets out where Socrates and Theodoret gave over; that is at the Year 431: He carries on his Hiſtory to the 12th Year of the Emperor Mauritius A. D. 594. Evagrius publiſhed another Volume, containing Epiſtles, Speeches, Imperial Reſcripts, and Diſputes upon ſeveral Subjects: Their Majeſties Tiberius and Mauritius rewarded this Hiſtorian with ſeveral Poſts of Honour and Profit. Photius gives him the Character of a clear and exact Writer. He vouches the publick Records and Hiſtorians of his Time for the Warrant of what he relates. Photius allows him a polite Writer, though his Diſcourſe is ſometimes a little luxuriant. His Digreſſions are frequently foreign to his Subject, and he ſeems to be better acquainted with profane than eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory: However, he has one Advantage above the Church Hiſtorians before him; for he has given no Occaſion to fall under the Reproach of countenancing any Party, or falling into any Miſtake, with Reſpect to Belief or Diſcipline. Valeſius's Edition and Tranſlation of Evagrius is the moſt correct. * Photius. Cod. XXIX. Bellarmin. de Script. Eccleſ. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. Lib. II. Cap. 23. Baron Annal. &c.

* EVARISTUS, Biſhop of Rome, ſucceeded Clemens at the End of the Ist Century. He ſate eight or nine Years: His Martyrdom is probably enough reckon'd to the Reign of Adrian. As to the other Circumſtances of his Life reported by modern Authors, there's no certainty in 'em; to which we may add, that the Decretal Epiſtles, which go under his Name, are plainly ſpurious. * Iren. Lib. III. cap. 3. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. III. cap. 34. Auguſt. Epiſt. 165.

EUCHARIST, (the Holy) a Chriſtian Sacrament inſtituted by our bleſſed Saviour at his laſt Supper. The Biſhops and Prieſts have only an Authority to conſecrate. In the primitive times the Deacons us'd to give this Sacrament to the Congregation. The Catechumens and Penitents were not allowed to be preſent at the Conſecration of the Euchariſt. 'Till the XIIth Century (and farther) the Faithful communicated in both kinds, both in the Greek and Latin Churches. Afterwards the Latin Church refus'd giving the Laity the Cup, the Greek Church ſtill continuing the ancient Uſage. Formerly both the eaſtern and weſtern Churches conſecrated with leaven'd Bread. This Uſage is ſtill practiſed in the Greek Church, but the Latin Church make uſe only of Bread unleaven'd. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library.

EVENUS I. II. III. in Morery Vol. Ist. expunge.

* EUGENIUS, was elected Biſhop of Carthage in the Year 480, or 481, after a Vacancy of 24 Years in the Reign of Hunnericus. This Prelate being a Perſon of extraordinary Conduct governed for ſome time without Diſturbance. But in the Year 483 Hunnericus publiſhed a Proclamation, by Vertue of which all the Biſhops who believed the conſubſtantial Doctrine were ſummon'd to appear at Carthage to hold a Conference with the Arian Prelates. The Catholicks at firſt remonſtrated againſt coming, without the Approbation of the tranſmarine Churches. However, there was a Meeting. At firſt the Title of Catholicks, by which the Orthodox diſtinguiſhed themſelves, and that of Patriarch, aſſumed by Cyrita, Head of the Arian Biſhops, was ſome time debated. Afterwards Eugenius preſented a Confeſſion of Faith, and offered to enter the Liſt with his Adverſaries; but Hunnericus, an Arian Prince, cruſh'd the Orthodox by dint of Authority. The Catholick Biſhops were preſently expell'd the Town: Eugenius was baniſhed to the Deſarts of the Province of Tripoly, where he continued 'till the Death of Hunnericus, which happened at the End of the Year 484. He ſate quietly during the Reign of Gondebald: But King Traſamond forc'd him to quit Carthage again, and ſent him baniſh'd into that Part of Gaul where Alaricus, King of the Viſigoths, then reign'd. Eugenius retir'd to Albi and lived there undiſturb'd the Remainder of his Life. He died at Viance Sept. the 6th A. D. 505. There are ſome ſmall Diſcourſes of his in Defence of the Catholick Faith extant. viz. Expoſitio Fidei Catholicæ. Apologeticus pro fide. Altercatio cum Arianis, &c. * Gennad. de Script. Cap. 97. Honorius Auguſtodun. de lumin. Eccleſ. lib. II. cap. 96. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Lib. Cent. V.

Eugenius IV. in Morery Vol. I. for Felix IV. ſet up in his Room, read Felix V.

* EULOGIÆ, ſo the Greek Church calls the Panis Benedictus, or the Bread which had a Bleſſing pronounc'd over it, and was diſtributed to thoſe who were unqualify'd to communicate. The Name of Eulogiæ was likewiſe given to the Panis Benedictus, which the Biſhops and Prieſts ſent to each other for keeping up a friendly Correſpondence. Farther, thoſe Preſents, which were made either out of Reſpect or Obligation, were likewiſe called Eulogiæ. * Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latin.

EUMOLPIDES, Prieſts of the Goddeſs Ceres Eleuſinia, ſo called from Eleuſis, a Town of Attica: They took their Name from an Anceſtor, Eumolpus, whoſe great Uncle was King of Thrace: This Eumolpus was preferred Prieſt to Ceres Eleuſinia, by Erectheus, King of Athens. This Prieſthood gave him ſo much Intereſt, as to put him into a Condition to fight the Prince who promoted him. Both Eumolpus and the King being killed in the Conteſt, their Children came to a Treaty; by Virtue of which the Prieſthood was to remain to Eumolpus's Deſcendants, and the Crown to thoſe of Erecteus. The Ceremonies belonging to this Office were called the Myſteries by Way of Excellency; the Particulars were kept ſo private, that very little of them have been brought to Notice. * Clement. Alexand. lib. VII. Stromat. Salmaſ. in Solin. pag. 750.

EUPHEMIA, (Saint) a Virgin and Martyr of Chalcedon in the IVth Century. She ſuffered in the Diocletian Perſecution A. D. 307. There was a famous Church called by her Name, where the Council of Chalcedon was held. 'Tis ſaid her body was laid in that Church, and removed from thence to Conſtantinople in the VIIth Century; where there were four Churches in Honour of her Memory. Leo Iſauricus, as 'tis reported, threw her Relicks into the Sea, which were found again, as ſome will have it, and depoſited in the Iſle Metelin; from whence Conſtantine and Irene got them removed to Conſtantinople A. D. 796. The Greek Church has a ſolemn Feſtival on the 11th of July in Memory of a Miracle wrought by St. Euphemia for confirming the Doctrine of the Council of Chalcedon. The Latins ſet her Feſtival to the 16th of September. * Evag. Hiſt. Lib. II. cap. 3. Mabillon. Analect. Tom. 3. Baillet. Vies des Saintes.

EURICLES, a noble Lacedemonian, was of a flattering, falſe, and cunning Temper; and to give him his Character in a Word, one of the moſt wicked Men living. Beſides, he was ſo ſecret, and walked ſo much in the dark, that the moſt dextrous and refin'd Politicians were ſometimes ſurpriz'd by him. He took a Journey to Jeruſalem, and preſented Herod to a great Value: By this Means he wrought himſelf into Favour and Confidence with this Prince, who returned him his Preſents with Intereſt: And to give him more particular Marks of Eſteem, he lodg'd him at Antipater's Houſe, who was then his favourite Son. This crafty Perſon, after having gained the Aſcendant in the Fancy of theſe two Princes, made himſelf intimately acquainted with Alexander; and having wrought himſelf into the Affection of this Prince, he made him believe that he was much in the good Graces of his Father in Law Archelaus. In ſhort, this Greek play'd his Part ſo dextrouſly that he was every where welcome. He did not ſeem attach'd to any Party; but made his Obſervation upon all their Motions, deceiv'd 'em all, and faſtened a Calumny upon any body he had a mind to. He had ſo far gained their good Opinion that none of 'em miſtruſted him; and and each of 'em thinking they had him in their Intereſt, concluded the Correſpondence he kept with the reſt, was only to do them more Service. Prince Alexander was the firſt who found himſelf miſtaken, by diſcovering himſelf too far upon ſome unkind Uſage he had receiv-ed from King Herod his Father. This falſe Man diſ-clos'd what he had been told in Confidence, to Antipa-ter, aſſuring him that upon the Score of the Favours he had receiv'd he thought himſelf bound to advertiſe him of the Danger that threatned him, that he might be upon his Guard, and take ſufficient Precaution againſt Alexander, who without doubt waited an Opportunity for Revenge. Antipater, beſides a thouſand Thanks, made him conſiderable Preſents. Euricles went to He-rod and maliciouſly told him the ſame Story: Now this Prince being too forward to believe every thing that was reported to the Diſadvantage of his two Sons, Alexander and Ariſtobulus, gave Credit to whatever was related by this perfidious Man, and over and above, rewarded him with fifty Talents for his Information. But his Ava-rice wanting a farther Morſel, he took a Journey into Cappadocia to Archelaus his Court, ſpoke very much to the Advantage of Prince Alexander, and told him that he had been ſo fortunate, as to bring his Father and him to a right Underſtanding. Archelaus, who had a real Regard for his Son in Law Alexander, who married his Daughter Glaphyra, gave Euricles an honourable Reception, treated him with great Friendſhip, and after having richly preſented him, gave him the Liberty to return to Lacedemon. After having liv'd there ſome time, and playing his uſual Tricks, he was at laſt diſ-cover'd for a Knave, and baniſh'd. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XVI. Cap. 16.

EUROPE, was anciently only a Country in Illyricum. 'Twas the eaſtern Part of Thrace, and ſtretched along the Coaſt oppoſite to Aſia Minor from the Euxin Sea to the Archipelago. The principal Towns within this Di-viſion were Conſtantinople, Selivrea, Rudiſto, Apri, and Gallipoli ſtill in being. 'Tis generally believed that Europe took its Name from this Country, as Aſia was ſo call'd from Aſia the leſs; Africa from Africa proper; and as the vaſt Country of northern America is call'd Cana-da, from the little Country of Canada. * Maty, Dic-tion.

* EUSEBIUS, Biſhop of Cæſarea in Paleſtine, was one of the moſt learned Men of his Age. He was born towards the End of the Reign of Galienus: Being ordain'd Prieſt by Agapius, Biſhop of Cæſarea in Paleſ-tine, he ſet up a famous School in that Town. When Diocleſian brought a Perſecution upon the Church, he exhorted the Chriſtians of Cæſarea to Conſtancy and Reſolution, and aſſiſted his Friend Pamphilus, who af-ter two Years Impriſonment, ſuffered Martyrdom, Feb-ruary the 15th A. D. 309. During this Perſecution, Eu-ſebius was tax'd with offering Incenſe at a Heathen Temple to procure his Liberty: But this is meer Ca-lumny without Ground. After the Perſecution was over, Euſebius ſucceeded Agapius in the See of Cæſarea A. D. 313 or 314. He had a Share in the Arian Contro-verſy, and favoured Arrius at firſt, in concert with ſome other Biſhops of Paleſtine, who were of Opinion that Alexander, Biſhop of Alexandria, proſecuted Arrius too far. Euſebius wrote to Alexander in Favour of Arrius, and not having Intereſt enough to procure his being re-ſtor'd, he allowed Arrius and his Partizans the Pri-vilege of their Character, and was willing they ſhould meet in their Churches, upon Condition they ſubmitted to the Juriſdiction of their Biſhop, and made their hum-ble Application to be reſtor'd to his Communion. He aſſiſted at the Council of Nice, declared againſt the Arian Hetrodoxy, and offered an orthodox Confeſſion of Faith, to which the Council added the Term Con-ſubſtantial. Euſebius, tho' ſomewhat ſhock'd at firſt, afterwards recollected himſelf and agreed to it, ac-quainting the Fathers that the Word Conſubſtantial had been antiently made uſe of in his Church. He was pre-ſent at the Council of Antioch A. D. 330. where Euſta-thius, Biſhop of that Town, was unjuſtly depoſed: But the See being offer'd to Euſebius, he refuſed to accept it. He was likewiſe at the Councils of Cæſarea and Tyre, where Sentence was paſſed againſt St. Athanaſius A. D. 334. After this, he went to the Synod of Jeru-ſalem, from whence he was ſent to the Emperor Con-ſtantine, to juſtify the Proceedings againſt S. Athanaſius. 'Twas now he made the Panegyrical Oration upon Con-ſtantine in the 30th Year of that Emperor's Reign, and the laſt of his Life. Euſebius, who was much a Favourite of this Emperor, liv'd not long after his Majeſty. His Death is reckoned to the Year 338. He wrote a great many learned Tracts: His firſt Compoſure was five apo-logetical Diſcourſes in Defence of Origen, which him-ſelf and the Martyr Pamphilus wrote during the Dioclе-tian Perſecution: To theſe he added a ſixth Book after the Death of this Martyr. About the ſame time he wrote a Tract againſt Hierocles, who had publiſhed two Books againſt the Chriſtian Religion. After he was preferr'd to the See of Cæſarea he wrote fifteen Books de preparatione Evangelicâ, and twenty de demonſtrati-one Evangelicâ. His next Performance was his Chro-nicon, from the Beginning of the World, to the twen-tieth Year of Conſtantine the Great. His eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory in ten Books follow'd his Chronicon, and ſeems to have been finiſh'd after the Council of Nice. In the Year 332. he wrote a Paſchal Cycle in Imitation of that of Hippolytus. His Books againſt Marcellus of Ancyra were written A. D. 335 or 336. Laſtly, his four Books of Conſtantine's Life, were written after the Death of that Emperor, i. e. after the 9th of Septem-ber 337.

Beſides theſe Works where the Chronology may be accounted for, he wrote, as St. Jerom reports, five Books de Incarnatione: Ten Books of Commentaries upon Iſaiah, 30 Books againſt Porphyry, ten of which were loſt in St. Jerom's time, who had ſeen no more than twenty: The three laſt were ſpent in refuting Por-phyry's Calumnies againſt the Book of Daniel: To theſe may be added his Topica, tranſlated by St. Jerom, and entitled a Book of the Country of the Hebrews. It has been ſince publiſh'd in Greek by Bonfrerius A. D. 1631; and more correctly by Father Martianay in the 2d Tome of S. Jerom's Works. In this Book two other Tracts of the ſame Nature are mention'd; one of which explain'd the Names the Jews gave to other Nations; and the other was a Topography of the holy Land, and the Temple. Farther, St. Jerom, among the Catalogue of Euſebius's Works, mentions three Books of the Life of Pamphilus, Opuſcula upon the Martyrs, Com-mentaries upon all the Pſalms, (which he promiſed to publiſh in the fifth Book of his Demonſtratio Evangelica cap. 2.) afterwards tranſlated by Euſebius Vercellenſis: To which may be added his Method for reconciling the four Evangeliſts, with a Letter to Carpianus. St. Jerom likewiſe in his Epiſtle to Pammachius takes no-tice of a Commentary of Euſebius upon the firſt Epi-ſtle to the Corinthians; and elſewhere this Father men-tions his having procured an Edition of the Septuagint, which Euſebius takes notice of himſelf in the 9th Chap-ter of his firſt Book de demonſtratione Evangelicâ, and in the third and ſeventh Chapters of the ſeventh Book de preparatione Evangelicâ. And in his ſeventh Book de demonſtratione Evangelicâ, he refers to a Tract he had written for reſolving ſeveral Queſtions touching our Saviour's Genealogy, which poſſibly is the ſame with that which S. Jerom tells us was written for reconciling ſome ſeeming Contradictions in the Goſpels. In the firſt Book de preparatione Evangelicâ, cap. 3. he likewiſe men-tions a Tract where he had collected all our Saviour's Predictions, and ſhewn the full Accompliſhment of every one. Euſebius's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory is one of his moſt conſiderable Performances. Ruffinus was the firſt who tranſlated him into Latin: The Greek Text was printed by Robert Stephens A. D. 1544. and with Chriſtopherſon's Verſion A. D. 1612. Valeſius has ſince publiſh'd a more correct Edition, together with a new Tranſlation printed at Paris A. D. 1659. M. the Preſi-dent Couſin made an excellent French Verſion of this Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. Euſebius's Chronicon was tran-ſlated by St. Jerom, who continued it to the ſixth Con-ſulſhip of Valens and Valentinian: And this Tranſla-tion firſt printed at Baſil was afterwards more cor-rectly publiſhed by Pontac, Biſhop of Bazas. Scali-ger likewiſe publiſhed this Work with conſiderable Greek Fragments. His Books againſt Hierocles are pub-liſhed with Acciaoli's Verſion, and the five Books a-gainſt Marcellus of Ancyra with Richard Mountague's Tranſlation. Father Dom Bernard de Montfaucon has lately publiſhed Euſebius's Commentary upon the Pſalms. Curterius has printed ſome Fragments of this Author upon the Lives of the Prophets, and prefix'd 'em to Procopius's Commentaries upon Iſaiah. Annotations upon the Canticles, reckoned to Euſebius, were publiſh'd in Greek, without any Verſion by Meurſius, and printed with Polychronius and Pſellus, A. D. 1617. Sirmondus publiſh'd the Opuſcula reckoned to Euſebius in Latin, and they were printed in Octavo at Paris A. D. 1643. Euſebius's Letter to Carpianus, and his Canones Evangelici are prefixed to ſome Editions of the new Teſtament. Laſtly, his Books de preparatione, and demonſtratione Evangelicâ, were publiſhed at Paris with a Latin Verſion A. D. 1628. * Baron. Annal. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV. Tillemont Memoires, &c.

EUSEBIUS, Biſhop of Theſſalonica, was Contemporary with Gregory the Great at the End of the VI^th^ and Beginning of the VII^th^ Century. He ſent his Reader Theodorus to this Pope with ſome Writings. Theodorus deliver'd the Papers to one Andrew, a Monk, who held the Incorruptibility of our Saviour's Body. This Monk interpolated the Papers; but Pope Gregory diſcover'd the foul Play, and acquainted Euſebius with it. Photius informs us that the ſame Monk maintained his Error in a Letter to Euſebius, and that Euſebius returned him an Anſwer with Advice to recant. But Andrew was a poſitive Man, and wrote a Book in Defence of his Opinion; which Euſebius anſwered in ten Diſcourſes abridg'd by Photius in his Bibliotheca. * Photius Cod. 162. Gregor. Lib. 9. Epiſt 69. &c. M. Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VII.

* EUSTATHIUS, Patriarch of Antioch, was born at Side in Pamphilia in the fourth Century. He was tranſlated againſt his Will from Beræa to Antioch, after the Death of Philogonus A. D. 323. He aſſiſted two Years after, at the General Council of Nice, where he made a conſiderable Figure, and open'd the Synod with a Speech to the Emperor Conſtantine. His Zeal againſt the Arians made them form a Practice againſt him A. D. 330. They charg'd him with Sabellianiſm, and Immorality. Theodoret relates their ſuborning a Strumpet to ſwear ſhe had a Child by him. Theſe falſe Articles gaining Credit, they depoſed him, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of ſeveral Biſhops; but the People of Antioch mutiny'd to keep him with them.

The Euſebians apply'd to the Emperor, and charg'd Euſtathius with mal-treating the Emperor's Mother, and being the Cauſe of the Inſurrection. Conſtantine believing this Information, baniſh'd Euſtathius to Trajanopolis in Thrace, where he died with the Character of a very holy and reſign'd Perſon. The Greek Church keeps a Feſtival for him on the 20^th^ of February, and the Latins on the 16^th^ of July. This Biſhop according to St. Jerom was the firſt who wrote againſt the Arians: He wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt this Hereſy, a great many Homilies, ſeveral Diſcourſes upon the Soul, and one Treatiſe of the Woman with a familiar Spirit, againſt Origen. Eulogius, of Alexandria, cited by Photius Cod. 225, mentions only ſix Diſcourſes of Euſtathius againſt the Arians, and cites a ſingle Paſſage; but Facundus, in the firſt Chapter of his eleventh Book, cites four from his ſeventh and eighth Book againſt the Arians; and Theodoret relates a large Paſſage in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory Lib. I. cap. 8. and another in his 3^d^ Book cap. 5. and a great many more in his Dialogues. His Tract upon the Pythoneſs, or Woman with a familiar Spirit, was publiſhed by Leo Allatius A. D. 1629. with another Diſcourſe upon the Hexameron; but this laſt is moſt probably the Work of ſome other Author. Sozomen in the 2^d^ Book of his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, cap. 19. gives Euſtathius the following Character; This Author, ſays he, had acquired an extraordinary Elocution, his Writings are extreamly valuable on the Score of the Correctneſs of his Stile, the Nobleneſs of his Thoughts, and the Beauty of his Expreſſion. * Euſeb. Lib. III. in Vit. Conſtant. Cap. 59. Athanaſ. paſſim. Hieron. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. &c.

EUSTATHIUS, a Monk living in the fourth Century, who under a Pretence of a more mortify'd and perfect Way of living, introduc'd ſeveral erroneous Opinions and Practices contrary to the Uſages of the Church. The Biſhops met at Gangra in the Year 324. condemn'd his hetrodox Singularities. In their ſynodical Epiſtle they charge him and his Partizans with theſe erroneous Singularities. 1. With condemning Marriage, and parting Women from their Husbands. 2. With quitting the publick Congregations and ſeting up private Meetings. 3. With encouraging Servants to leave their Maſters, and Children their Parents, under a Pretence of a more ſelf denying Way of living. 4. With allowing Women to wear Mens Cloaths. 5. With rejecting the Faſts appointed by the Church, and practiſing other Days of Abſtinence according to their own Whimſey, not excepting Sunday. 6. With maintaining the Unlawfulneſs of eating Fleſh at any time. 7. With rejecting the Miniſtrations of marry'd Prieſts. 8. With having no regard to conſecrated Places, and the Tombs of the Martyrs. 9. With maintaining that no Body could be ſaved without parting with all his Eſtate. Theſe Heads of Miſperſuaſion ſtand condemned in 20 Canons, inſerted in the Code of the Canons of the univerſal Church. Cardinal Baronius is of Opinion that this Euſtathius is the ſame with him whom Epiphanius calls an impoſterous Monk of Armenia. * Concil. Gangrens. Epiphan. Her. 40.

* EUSTATHIUS, Biſhop of Theſſalonica. His Commentaries upon Homer are very copious; they are full of hiſtorical and philoſophical Diſſertations, and good critical Remarks. And over and above, he has examined and explained the Force of every Word in Homer with ſo much Exactneſs and Perſpicuity, that he ſeems to have exhauſted the Subject. Voſſius de Hiſtor. Græc.* p. 491. Baillet, Jugemens des Savans ſur les crit. Grammair.

* EUSTOCHIUM, Daughter of Toxotius, deſcended from the Julii, and Paula, of the Family of the Scipio's and the Æmilii. She had a pious Education under her Mother Paula: Afterwards ſhe ſpent ſome time under St. Jerom's Inſtructions A. D. 382. When this Father came to Rome with St. Epiphanius, and Paulinus, of Antioch, Paula and Euſtochium followed St. Jerom into the Eaſt; and after having travelled through Syria, Paleſtine, and Egypt, and made a Viſit to the Monaſteries, and other Places remarkable for Miracles and Religion, they retired to a Monaſtery at Bethlehem, where they ſtudied the holy Scriptures under St. Jerom's Conduct. The Diſaffection John, Biſhop of Jeruſalem, bore St. Jerom, drew hard Uſage upom Euſtochium's Nunnery, which ſhe complains of to Pope Innocent. This Lady died A. D. 419: The Roman Martyrology ſets her Feſtival to the 28^th^ of September. She underſtood Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, and employ'd all her time in ſtudying the holy Scriptures. * Hieron. Epiſt. 10. 19. 22. 26. 27. Epitaph. Marcelli. Innocent. Pap. Ep. 23. Baron. Annal. &c.

EUTHYMIUS, an Archimandrite in Paleſtine, and born at Melitene in Armenia A. D. 377. He was ordain'd Prieſt by the Biſhop of Melitene, and made Abbot of all the Monaſteries in that Town: At 29 Years of Age he retired into Paleſtine, and ſhut himſelf up in a Cell, and wrought for his Subſiſtence. He converted a great many Arabians or Saracens, and oppoſed the Neſtorian and Eutychian Hereſies. The Empreſs Eudoxia conſulting him, receiv'd ſuch ſatisfactory Anſwers, as diſengaged her from the Miſtakes the Monk Theodoſius had drawn her into: Euthymius having ſpent 68 Years in Solitude, died 95 Years old A. D. 473. * Cyril. Vit. Euthym. publiſhed in the Analecta Græca by Father Lopin. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Mois de Janvier.

EUTHYMIUS, Biſhop of Sardis in Aſia Minor, a great Bigot for the worſhipping of Images, lived in the 9^th^ Century. He aſſiſted in the 2^d^ Council of Nice, and was afterwards baniſh'd by the Emperor Nicephorus. He return'd to his See in the Reign of Michael Curopalates, and was baniſh'd a ſecond time by Leo the Armenian, and afterwards by Michael Balbus. He died of hard Uſage A. D. 828. And having ſuffer'd ſo much in Defence of Image Worſhip, ſome ſuperſtitious Greeks made a Martyr of him, and gave him the 11^th^ of March for his Holiday. * Act. Concil. ſecund. Nicen. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Mois de Mars.

EUTROPIUS, Reader in the Church at Conſtantinople in St. Chryſoſtom's Time: After the Baniſhment of this holy Father, he was charged with ſetting Fire to the Cathedral. Being apprehended for this Crime they put him to the Queſtion to make him confeſs that St. Chryſoſtom's Clergy were concerned in this Miſchief, but he reſolutely declared the contrary and died in the Torture. * Pallad. in Vita Chryſoſt. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Mois de Janvier.

* EUTYCHIANUS, Biſhop of Rome: All that we know certainly concerning this Pope, is that he ſucceeded Felix A. D. 275, and that he ſat ten Months according to Euſebius. Bucherius's Catalogue, and the Liber Pontificalis, aſſign him eight Years and eleven Months; but Euſebius's Computation, and the ancient Catalogues, who make Caius his Succeſſor A. D. 276, are more to be depended upon. His pretended Martyrdom ſtands upon ſlender Evidence: 'Tis much more probable he never ſuffer'd Death for Chriſtianity, ſince the Diſtinction of Martyr is not given him in the old Roman Calendar. * Euſeb. in Chron. & Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 7. cap. 16. Baron. Annal. M. Du Pin, &c.

* EUTYCHIUS, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Son of Alexander and Syneſia, was born A. D. 512; his Father deferr'd his Baptiſm 'till he came to the Age of Diſcretion. He was firſt Biſhop of Lazicum in the Province of Pontus: He quitted his See and retir'd into a Monaſtery at Amaſea; and was choſen General of all the Monks in that Country. In the Year 552 the Biſhop of Amaſea ſent him to the 5th general Council of Conſtantinople: And here he maintain'd that thoſe who died in the Communion of the Church, might notwithſtanding be afterwards anathematis'd: This Propoſition he laid down to procure the cenſuring of Theodorus Mopſueſtenus, whoſe Tenents were then examined. Having gained Juſtinian's Favour by this Aſſertion, this Emperor got him elected Patriarch of Conſtantinople upon Mennas's Death, which happened at this time. Eutychius preſided in this Council, and ſat quietly for 12 Years: But afterwards declaring againſt the Opinion of thoſe who held our Saviour's Body to be incorruptible from the Moment of its being united to the Divinity, he was ſeized by the Emperor's Order, and commanded to appear before a Synod. But refuſing to make his Appearance, he was cenſur'd and baniſh'd into an Iſland in the Propontis, from whence he was afterwards conveyed to his Monaſtery at Amaſea. Johannes Scholaſticus was put in his Place; but after the Death of this Biſhop, which happened A. D. 577, Eutychius was reſtor'd. * Gregor. Lib. XXIV. Moral. cap. 29. Baillet, Vies des Saints, Mois d'Avril.

EXAMILION, a famous Wall, built by the Emperor Emanuel A. D. 1413. upon the Corinthian Iſthmus, to cover the Morea from the Inſults of the Infidels. 'Twas call'd Examilion, becauſe 'twas ſix Miles in Length. This famous Wall began at the Portus Lecheus 16 Stadia or Furlongs from Corinth, and ended at the Haven of Cenchrea upon the Sinus Saronicus, now called the Gulph of Engia.

Amurath II. riſing before Conſtantinople A. D. 1424, made an Infraction upon the Peace concluded with the Greek Emperor, and demoliſhed the Examilion. The Venetians to preſerve the Morea projected the Rebuilding this Rampart: And in 1463 their Admiral Lewis Loredano debark'd ſome Troops there, which joining the Forces of Bertoldo de Eſte undertook this great Buſineſs. They employed thirty thouſand Workmen, who in a Fortnight's time finiſh'd the Wall, fortifying it over and above with double Ditches, and 136 Baſtions. The Ottomans, notwithſtanding this Strength, attacked the Wall; and being repuls'd, entrench'd themſelves in the Neighbourhood. Loredano went to the Siege of Corinth, where he loſt his Life. Bertino de Calcinato, who commanded the Army after the other's Deceaſe, being afraid of the Beglerberg, who was coming up with fourſcore thouſand Men, quitted the Siege, and left the Wall, which had coſt ſo much, to the Ottomans. * Coronelli. Deſcript. Morea.

EXCELLENCY, the Kings of France of the firſt and ſecond Line were ſtil'd Excellentiſſimi or their Excellencies. On the other hand, Charlemain gave the ſame Title to Pope Adrian; Kenulphus, King of the Mercians, ſaluted Pope Leo III. and Ivo, Biſhop of Chartres Paſchal II. with the ſame Term of Reſpect; S. Bernard alſo paſſed the ſame Compliment upon Ricuinus, Biſhop of Toul. Excellency was the firſt Title given to the Princes of the Blood of France, and to thoſe of other ſovereign Houſes.

But many great Lords, who were no Princes, aſſuming the Title of Excellency, the Princes, to guard their Quality, took the Diſtinction of Highneſs. The French Ambaſſadors at Rome formerly gave the Title of Excellency not only to the Relations of the Regnant Pope, to the Conſtable Colonna, and the Duke of Bracciano; but likewiſe to their eldeſt Sons, to the Prince of Carbognano, to the Dukes Savelli and Ceſarini, and to the Princes of Papal Families: But of late they have been more reſerv'd in their Civilities. But then they have been ſtill more liberal in beſtowing this Title upon the Roman Princeſſes, for they give it to all of that Rank, without Abatement. The Viceroys of Naples don't call the Roman Lords, who have Eſtates in that Kingdom, their Excellency; eſpecially they are not ſo ſaluted when preſent. Clement IX.'s Nieces were ſtil'd their Excellency, when their Husbands were only moſt Illuſtrious: And after this Pope's Death, his Nephew was Excellency, tho' he had neither Dutchy nor Principality to claim by. The ſecular Dukes and Peers of France are ſtil'd Excellency when they are at Rome. But the Biſhop of Laon expecting the ſame Title there, the Roman Lords gave it him; but moſt of the Cardinals were not ſo complaiſant. And thoſe who refus'd him that Title ſaluted him with moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip; the Court of Rome pretending that Excellency was only a ſecular Title. As to Ambaſſadors, the Title of Excellency was firſt given them in 1593, when King Henry IV. ſent the Duke of Nevers Ambaſſador to Rome: And here he was ſo ſaluted on the Score of his Birth and not of his Character: Ever ſince that time all Ambaſſadors have pretended to that Honour, not excepting the Ambaſſadors of the Princes of Italy, of Germany, and of the great Maſter of Malta. In 1636 the Emperor and King of Spain agreed to give the Title of Excellency to the Venetian Ambaſſadors. In a great many Courts the Ambaſſador of the Duke of Savoy is treated like thoſe of crown'd Heads and ſtil'd his Excellency: And ſo is the Ambaſſador of the Duke of Florence, and thoſe of other Italian Princes; but the Ambaſſadors of crown'd Heads diſpute this Title with them at Rome, becauſe there 'tis not the cuſtomary Uſage. No crown'd Head gives the Title of Excellency to Ambaſſadors: But the States General and the Princes of Italy do it. The Republick of Venice calls them Your Lordſhip. As to Perſons in great Offices, the Cardinals and Roman Princes, give the Title of Excellency, to the Chancellor, to the Secretaries of State, and to the firſt Preſidents of the higher Courts in France; to the Preſidents of the Councils of Spain, and to the Chancellor of Poland; provided they are not Eccleſiaſticks, for in that Caſe they ſalute 'em in the Stile of moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip. * Mémoires Curieux.

* EXCOMMUNICATION: This Term ſignifies in general breaking off of Intercourſe or Commerce with the Perſon, that 'twas kept up with before; and in this Senſe a Man that is thrown out of a Society or Corporation may be ſaid to be excommunicated. But the Notion of Excommunication has a reſtrain'd Senſe, and relates to Religion in the Conſtruction of Pagans, Jews, and Chriſtians. For the Heathens, no leſs than the reſt, had their Excommunications executed by the Prieſts with Ceremonies cuſtomary to the Caſe. Thoſe excommunicated were forbid being preſent at the Sacrifices, and afterwards they were conſigned over to the evil Genii with Imprecations: This they call'd Sacris interdicere, Diis devovere, execrari; and becauſe this was look'd on as the ſevereſt Puniſhment, 'twas never inflicted but in Caſe of Extremity, when the Criminal prov'd incorrigible. The Prieſteſs Theana, Menon's Daughter, was commended for refuſing to excommunicate Alcibiades, notwithſtanding 'twas ſo reſolv'd by the Athenian Government. And on the other hand, the Eumolpides were blam'd for executing the States Reſolution. Plato in his 7th Book de Legibus forbids all Prieſts and Prieſteſſes excommunicating any Perſon, 'till the Caſe was throughly examin'd, and found warrantable by the Laws: This Ceremony came from the Greeks to the Romans; 'twas a Practice of long Standing in this Republick, tho' very ſeldom us'd, as Plutarch obſerves. We have an Inſtance of this Diſcipline upon Marcus Craſſus. Attëius, Tribune of the People, not being perſuaſive enough to hinder this General's Expedition into Syria to fight the Parthians, run to the Gate through which Craſſus was to march, and threw down a Chafen Diſh of Coals in the Middle of the Paſſage: When Craſſus came up he threw ſome Perfumes upon the Fire, curs'd him in a dreadful Manner, and called upon ſome pretended Gods, which carried Terrour in the Pronunciation. The ſevereſt Puniſhment amongſt the old Gauls was Excommunication, as Julius Cæſar informs us in the 6th Book of his Commentaries: Here, ſpeaking of the Authority of the Druids, he acquaints us, "That when any one refuſes "to ſtand to their Award, they bar him the Privilege "of being preſent at their religious Ceremonies. Thoſe, "who are thus thunderſtruck, are looked on as wicked "and ſcandalous Wretches; every body ſhuns their "Company: If they have any Occaſion to commence a "Suit, they are not allowed the Benefit of a Court of "Juſtice: They are never admitted to Poſts of Profit "or Honour; and all this Infamy and Diſregard con-"tinues for Life, and paſſes on their Memory." When the excommunicated Perſon repented, and deſired Forgiveneſs of the Gods, he applied to the Prieſts to be reſtor'd, and then one of that Order having firſt examin'd the Caſe, and found the Delinquent ſincere, reſtor'd him to his former Condition of Privilege. And when the excommunicated Perſon happened to die unreſtor'd, the Prieſts, however, offered a Sacrifice to the Dii Manes, praying 'em not to uſe his Soul roughly, when he came amongſt 'em. Antiq. Græc. & Rom.

Perfumes

The Chriſtians, whoſe Society ought to be unblemiſh'd both in Faith and Manners, have always taken great Care to throw Hereticks and ſcandalous Perſons out of their Communion. This Diſcharge is called Excommunication; which, tho' it does not deprive them of civil Commerce with other Chriſtians, yet it excludes 'em the Benefit of Prayers, Sacraments, and all Offices relating to Religion. And here we are to diſtinguiſh two Sorts of Excommunication practis'd by the antient Chriſtians. The one is Medicinal, the other Mortal Excommunication, as St. Auguſtin calls them. The Medicinal was that, by Vertue of which thoſe under Penance were excluded Communion 'till they were like to die, or only for a Time, 'till they had made Satisfaction for Misbehaviour; for this ſee the Article Penance in the Supplement. Mortal Excommunication was a Cenſure diſcharg'd againſt Hereticks or impenitent Sinners: Our bleſſed Saviour having given his Church a Commiſſion to excommunicate, and which was executed by the Apoſtles; the Biſhops, the Apoſtles Succeſſors, having by Conſequence the ſame Power, pronounce the Sentence of Excommunication againſt Hereticks and impenitent Offenders.

And it has ſometimes happened that Biſhops and Churches have reciprocally excommunicated each other, i. e. they have ſeparated from the Communion of each other. Provincial Councils have a Right to excommunicate the Clergy and Laity of their reſpective Provinces; and the Cenſure of General Councils reaches all Chriſtians, who offend in the Particulars of Doctrine, Diſcipline, or Manners. 'Twas a general Rule that when a Perſon was excommunicated by Provincial or Dioceſan Authority, he was not to be receiv'd in any Church. The modern Canoniſts diſtinguiſh Excommunication into two Kinds, with Reſpect to the enuring of the Sentence: The one is incurr'd upon committing the Action prohibited, which they call Excommunication ipſo Facto, or latæ Sententiæ; the other, which requires a Sentence pronounc'd by the Judge, they call Comminatory, or ferendæ Sententiæ; this latter ought to have canonical Monition before they proceed to Sentence. The antient and modern Canoniſts diſtinguiſh Eccleſiaſtical Penances according to the Difference both of Perſons and Crimes.

The Clergy were ſometimes depos'd, bar'd the ſacerdotal Functions, and reduc'd to Lay-Communion; and ſometimes they were only reſtrain'd in ſome Branches of their Function. And ſome Councils ſink them to that which is call'd Communio Peregrina, i. e. they leave them only the Diſtinction and Precedence of Eccleſiaſticks, without any ſacerdotal Buſineſs. As to the Laity, beſides the Medicinal and Mortal Excommunication above mention'd, there was one paſs'd upon leſſer Inſtances of Misbehaviour, by which they were oblig'd for ſome time to forbear coming to Church. The modern Canoniſts diſtinguiſh Excommunication into two Sorts: The Greater, which excludes People wholly from Communion, unqualifies 'em from receiving or adminiſtring the Sacraments, or performing any Eccleſiaſtical Function: And the Leſſer, which only deprives of the Privilege of the Sacraments, and incapacitates for Ordination and Eccleſiaſtical Promotion; but not from hearing Maſs, or other Parts of divine Service. Beſides Excommunication, the Canoniſts mention two other Kinds of Cenſure, Suſpenſion and the Interdict: Suſpenſion bars an Eccleſiaſtical Perſon from the Exerciſe of his Office, and ſometimes from the Profit of his Benefice; and that either for a ſet Term or indefinitely. An Interdict is a Cenſure which prohibits a Church the Uſe of the Sacraments, divine Service, and Chriſtian Burial. 'Tis local, perſonal, or mixt. Laſtly, the Canoniſts make ſeveral Sorts of Immoralities or Impediments, which either diſable Perſons from receiving holy Orders, or exerciſing 'em when they have 'em.

The warrantable Grounds for Excommunication may be rang'd under three Heads, Heterodoxy, Immorality, and Diſobedience; and according to the Maxims and Practice of the antient Church, Prelates ſhould be very cautious and backward in launching their Excommunications, and not do it without Neceſſity and Regret. In the firſt Ages of the Church the ſpiritual Sword was never drawn but upon ſpiritual Occaſions. But later Councils have excommunicated thoſe who ſeize on the Eſtates of the Church; and afterwards this Cenſure has been diſcharg'd to force People to a Diſcovery of their Knowledge of private Injuries, with Reference either to Perſon or Eſtate: This they call a Monitory, and is frequently practis'd in theſe later Ages.

The main Effect of Excommunication is excluding the excommunicate the Society of the Faithful, depriving him of the Benefits of divine Service, and the Sacraments, and all other Privileges of Church Communion. An excommunicated Perſon is look'd on as no better than a Pagan or Publican, as the Scripture ſpeaks; but then this Cenſure does not make a Man incur any civil Forfeiture; whatever belongs to him as a Man, a Citizen, a Father, an Husband, or a King, by the Law of Nature, of Nations, or the Conſtitution of his Country; whatever belongs to him upon the Score of any Capacity or Qualification with Reference to theſe Things, remains untouch'd. However, the Apoſtles exhorted the Faithful to break off Correſpondence with Perſons excommunicated, to avoid their Company, neither to eat with 'em, nor ſo much as ſalute 'em. But then this Prohibition was not to reach neceſſary Duties, or cancel Obligations, but only to ſtand off from Familiarity, where a Man is at Liberty to engage, or keep his Diſtance, as he pleaſes. The Canoniſts commonly comprehend the Reſtraints of Excommunication in this Verſe, that is to ſay, they are refus'd Converſation; no body prays with 'em, ſalutes 'em, or eats with 'em; but then theſe ſame Canoniſts throw in ſome mitigating Exceptions contain'd in the following Verſe:

Os, orare, vale, Communio, Menſa negatur.

Utile, Lex, humile, Res ignorata, neceſſe.

The meaning of which is, that the Prohibition does not include the Man and his Wife; that it does not hold between the Father and his Children; between Relations, nor with Reſpect to thoſe where Duty is owing, i. e. Servants and Subjects with Reference to Maſters and Kings: And farther, that a Man may keep Correſpondence with an excommunicated Perſon, provided he does not know him to be under ſuch a Cenſure, or that there is a Proſpect of converting him, or that ſome Caſe of Neceſſity throws him into his Company. According to the new Canon Law, thoſe who converſe with Perſons under the greater Excommunication, are reckoned excommunicated themſelves. But thoſe, who converſe with Perſons under the leſſer Excommunication, are not in the ſame Condition of Diſadvantage: And 'tis the Cuſtom in France, that no Penalty falls upon thoſe, who converſe with Perſons even under the greater Excommunication, unleſs they are denounc'd. Some Popes have pretended to a Power to deprive Kings and Princes of their Dominions by Vertue of an Excommunication. This Cuſtom firſt ſet on foot by Gregory VII. has been too freqently practiſed, and attended with fatal Conſequences: But ſuch Attempts are a plain Contradiction to the Spirit of the Goſpel, and the Methods of the Church, and have always been oppos'd by Princes and Biſhops. When a Man dies excommunicated he is refus'd Burial in a conſecrated Place, and none of the Clergy prays for his Soul: And if he happens to be buried in a Church or Churchyard the Corpſe is dug up, and ſometimes the Places are re-conſecrated. It has been the Belief, and is ſtill with ſome in the Greek Church, that an excommunicated Corpſe can't putrify, nor diſſolve into Duſt, 'till an Abſolution has been ſaid over it. It has ſometimes been the Practice to excommunicate People after their Deaths, by razing their Names out of the Dypticks, i. e. out of the Liſt of thoſe who were pray'd for at the Euchariſtic Sacrifice. Notwithſtanding the Conſequences of Excommunication are dreadful when the Cenſure is executed upon due Grounds and by due Authority: But when 'tis unauthoriz'd, or unjuſt, it has only temporal Inconveniences, and forfeits no Favour or Privilege in the Court Above.

are

The Manner of Excommunicating in the primitive Church was without much Form or Ceremony. In the Apoſtles Time the Faithful ſeparated themſelves from thoſe who were Heterodox in their Belief, or irregular in their Practice, purſuant to the Inſtructions they receiv-ed from their ſpiritual Guides. In the following Centuries the Councils and Biſhops enjoin'd a Separation from Hereticks and immoral Perſons, pronounc'd an Anathemà againſt 'em, and would not ſuffer 'em to be preſent at Church Aſſemblies. In later Times frightful Ceremonies have been made uſe of, to make the Cenſure go deeper in the Impreſſion, ſuch as lighting of Torches, throwing 'em down, and putting 'em out when the Sentence is pronounc'd. In ſome Places when a Man was excommunicated, the Mob uſed to carry an Herſe to the Door, call him a great many hard Names, and pelt the Houſe with Stones. At preſent 'tis no where the Cuſtom to excommunicate with lighted Torches, excepting at Rome on Holy Thurſday, when the Bull in Cœna Domini is fulminated.

In the primitive Times Abſolution and Excommunication were reſerv'd to the Biſhops. At preſent ſome Excommunications may be taken off by Prieſts; ſome are reſerv'd to the Biſhops; and in Roman Catholick Countries the Cenſure in ſome Caſes can only be taken off by the Pope. There are ſet Forms of Prayer in the Rituals for abſolving an Excommunicated Perſon. Some of the Capitulars of the French Kings and Emperors enjoin the excommunicated Perſon to procure Abſolution within ſuch a Time under the Penalty of Impriſonment and Forfeitures. And in England, if a Man ſtands excommunicated forty Days the Excommunication is certify'd into the Chancery, and a Writ de excommunicato capiendo awarded. * Morinus de pœnitentiâ. Evillon des Cenſures. M. Du Pin, de antiq. Eccleſ. Diſciplin. diſſert. de Excom.

EXETER, ras'd by the Fury of the Danes A. D. 603. in Morery Vol. I, read A. D. 963.

EXORCISTS, one of the leſſer Orders, whoſe Buſineſs it was to exorciſe Catechumens and Perſons poſſeſs'd. The Greek Church does not range 'em with any of the Eccleſiaſtical Orders, in which they follow S. Jerom's Sentiment. In the Latin Church the Exorciſts are one of the leſſer Orders, and ſtand next to the Acolythi; and the Ceremonies of their Ordination are inſerted in the ancient Rituals. They receiv'd a Book of Exorciſms from the Biſhop, who pronounc'd theſe Words; Take this Book and get it by Heart, and have Authority to lay Hands upon Catechumens and baptized Perſons poſſeſs'd. This Form was concluded with a particular Benediction upon the Exorciſt. The Jews had their Exorciſts, as we may learn from the Goſpels, from the Acts, and Joſephus. Juſtin Martyr in his Dialogue with Trypho charges the Jews with ſuperſtitious Practices in their Exorciſms, and that they made uſe of Perfumes and Ligatures like the Heathen. From whence we may conclude that exorciſing was practiſed among the Heathen, which is likewiſe confirm'd by Lucian.

* EXPIATION; an Action by which the Obligation to Puniſhment was cancell'd. The firſt Thing in Expiation was to go to the Temples and Altars, and implore the divine Aſſiſtance. Phœnix in Homer, to ſoften Achilles, and work him to a Reconciliation, puts him in mind that the Gods, when addreſs'd by Prayer were better diſpos'd to Pardon; notwitſtanding their Greatneſs; that Prayers were Jupiter's Daughters, that they diſarm'd their Fathers Anger, and prevailed with him to ſend the Goddeſs of Vengeance to puniſh thoſe who were of an implacable Temper. Ovid thought it hard that ſince the Gods were willing to be reconcil'd to Criminals upon humble Application, that Mortals ſhould be ſtiff and inexorable; and that Auguſtus would not pardon him a Fault, which was certainly pardon'd by the Beings above. He was ſure the Gods had forgiven him, becauſe he had heartily repented; and was much leſs troubled for his Sufferings than his Crime.

Sæpe levant pœnas, ereptaque lumina reddunt,
Quum bene peccati pœnituiſſe vident.
Pœnitet, ô, ſi quid Miſerorum creditur illi,
Pœnitet, & facto torqueor ipſe meo.
Quamque ſit Exilium, magis eſt mihi culpa dolori,
Eſtque pati pœnas, quàm meruiſſe minus

Herodotus mentions a Phrygian of the Blood Royal, who came to Cræſus's Court to deſire that Prince to explate him: Cræſus undertook it with the Ceremonies cuſtomary to the Lydians, which were much the ſame with thoſe practiſed by the Greeks. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus reports that when Horatius was acquitted by the People for murdering his Siſter, the Roman King would not let the Matter reſt there, but oblig'd him to paſs through the Forms of Expiation preſcrib'd for involuntary Murder. The Ceremonies were theſe: They erected an Altar, ſays this Hiſtorian, to Juno, and another to Janus; upon which they ſacrific'd, and then made Horatius walk ſub Jugo or under a Gallows. And elſewhere he mentions another Sort of Expiation, where after a Quarrel or Fray amongſt the Burghers, the Town was to be expiated, before they could ſacrifice in it. Beſides theſe, there were particular Expiations for the Purgation of a Country and of Strangers: The Scholiaſt upon Ariſtophanes takes notice that a leſſer Sort of Myſteries were appointed for the expiating of Strangers, it not being lawful to acquaint them with the great ones.

Diodorus Siculus relates that Hercules got himſelf initiated in the Myſteries of Ceres Eleuſinia. Plutarch reports that Theſeus, in Imitation of Hercules, likewiſe got himſelf expiated, after he had been guilty of ſeveral Murders. The Ceremonies practiſed in theſe Expiations were brought from Egypt into Greece. Faſting was one Circumſtance in theſe religious Purgations, as Clemens Alexandrinus obſerves: There were likewiſe other Inſtances of ſelf-Denial. But the general Method was by Way of Ablution; from whence we may conclude that the Heathens borrow'd their Religious Ceremonies from the Jews. Nothing is more commonly met with in the Greek and Latin Poets, than Peoples waſhing their Hands, and ſometimes their whole Body, before they ſacrific'd. Sophocles in his Oedipus Tyrannus relates, that voluntary and involuntary Crimes were to be expiated with Water. Euripides makes Hippolytus ſay, he thought himſelf polluted by being ſolicited to a Crime, and that therefore his Ears ought to be waſhed: And Æneas in Virgil deſires his Father Anchiſes to carry the Houſhold Gods; for as for himſelf he was not fit to touch 'em upon the Score of his not having waſhed after his being ſtained with Blood and Slaughter.

Tu Genitor cape ſacra manu, patrioſque Penates:
Me Bello e tanto digreſſum & cæde recenti,
Attractare nefas; donec me flumine vivo
Abluero.

* EZEKIEL, the third of the four called Great Prophets, was of the ſacerdotal Family, and Son to the Prieſt Buzy. He was carried to Babylon in the Reign of Jeconiah, and began to propheſy at thirty Years old, in the fifth Month of the fifth Year of Jeconiah's Captivity; which falls in with the 584th Year before the Incarnation. He propheſy'd 20 Years, and was kill'd, as is generally believ'd, by a Prince of his own Nation, whom he reprov'd for Idolatry. The Author of the Opus Imperfectum printed in St. Chryſoſtom's Works, ſeems to ſay he was preſs'd to Death. The Roman Martyrology mentions him on the Tenth of April.

His Propheſy is very obſcure, eſpecially at the Beginning and the End; which probably is the Reaſon why the Jews would have no body read him 'till they were 30 Years old. After having given an Account of his Miſſion, he foretels the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, confirms Jeremy's Predictions, and declares againſt the vain Promiſes of the falſe Prophets. He likewiſe predicts the Calamities that were to fall on the neighbouring Nations, propheſies the Reſtoration of the Jews and the Rebuilding of the Temple; which in the higheſt Meaning are ſuppoſed to be figurative Predictions of the Reign of the Meſſiah, the calling of the Gentiles, and the ſettling of the Chriſtian Church. Ezekiel, of all the Prophets, delivers himſelf moſt in Ænigmatical Viſions. St. Jerom ſays his Stile is neither very elegant nor very vulgar, but between both. He is pretty full of beautiful Sentences, of rich Compariſons, and diſcovers a great deal of Learning in Pagan Affairs. His Propheſies or Viſions are two and twenty, and rang'd in the Order of Time they were communicated to him. * Ezekiel 1. 2. &c. Hieron. Præfat. in Ezek. Epiſt. ad Paulin.

EZEKIEL, a Greek Poet living in the Reign of the Emperor Trajan or Adrian. There goes a great Tragedy under his Name upon the Subject of Moſes, or the Deliverance of the Children of Iſrael out of Egypt. 'Twas printed at Paris A. D. 1609. Clemens Alexandrinus mentions this Author more than once, and gives a conſiderable Fragment of him. Gentianus Hervetus, who thought this Poem loſt, concluded from this Sketch, that the whole Play was beautifully written. * Clem. Alexandrin. Stromat. Lib. I. Euſeb. præpar. Evang. Lib. IX. Gentian. Hervet. in Comment. ad Stromat.

F. FABER

F.

FABER, or le Fevre (John), Biſhop of Vienna in Auſtria. He was of Len Kirchen in Algou a Province of Germany, and was called the Mawl of the Hereticks for his Zeal againſt the Reform'd, and a Title of a Book written by him. He was Secretary to Ferdinand, Arch-Duke of Auſtria, and afterwards Emperor, who preferr'd him to the See of Vienna, where he died A. D. 1541, at 63 Years of Age. He batteled the Lutherans with a great deal of Stomach and Vigour, and was ſucceeded in that controverſial War by Frederick Naudea, a no leſs formidable Enemy. Faber wrote a Book entitled Malleus Hereticorum, which he dedicated to Pope Adrian VI. There are ſeveral other Works of his extant: He wrote one Book againſt Balthaſar Paci Montanus, Head of the Anabaptiſts; a Tract concerning Faith and Works, printed at Cologn; a Diſcourſe againſt ſome of Luther's Tenents printed at Rome 1522; a Confutation of Zwinglius's ſix Articles preſented to the Swiſs Aſſembly at Baden A. D. 1526, and printed at Tubing; a Letter in High Dutch to Zwinglius, in which he reproaches him for not appearing at the Baden Aſſembly; ſome Diſcourſes of the Pope's Power; of the Celibacy of Prieſts; of infant Baptiſm, and of Patience, &c. * M. Du Pin new Eccleſ. Libra. Cent. XVII.

* FABIANUS, Biſhop of Rome, ſucceeded Antherus in the Year 236, but how long he ſat is uncertain. Euſebius aſſigns him 13 Years for his Pontificate, beginning at the 238, and ending at 251. Bucherius and Mabillon's Catalogues give him 14 Years, one Month, and ten Days. His Death is ſet to the 20th of Jan. A. D. 250. This chronological Account is confirmed by S. Cyprian, who informs us Fabian died in the Beginning of the Decian Perſecution, i. e. in the Year 250. 'Tis clear from S. Cyprian's Epiſtles that Fabian ſuffered Martyrdom; which is all we know certainly of his Life. For the Decretal Epiſtles reckon'd to him are evidently ſpurious. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Libr. Cent. III.

* FABII: The Fabii were an illuſtrious Roman Family. This ſingle Houſe undertook a War againſt the Veii under the Conduct of Fabius Cæſo. They loſt 300 of their Clan in the Battel of Cremera. This Family had ſeven Conſuls immediately ſucceeding each other, from whence we may conclude that their Friends, Clients and manumized Slaves were numerous enough to have furniſhed an Army. They were drawn into an Ambuſcade by the Veii, entirely routed, and loſt Bag and Baggage: And here they were all ſlain upon the Spot; inſomuch that there was none of the Family remaining excepting a Boy of 14 Years old Son to M. Fabius. From this ſingle Perſon the Family recovered and furniſh'd the Republick with ſeveral great Men, and amongſt the reſt Fabius Maximus; who perceiving Rome ſplit into two Factions, divided the Burghers into four Tribes, and by this Means diſabled 'em from preferring thoſe to publick Poſts, who could bribe higheſt. This Fabius ruin'd Hannibal by drawing the War into length. Q. Fabius Rutilianus, General of the Horſe, fought the Samnites and defeated 'em in the Dictator Papirius's Abſence, and againſt his Order. The Dictator, notwithſtanding the Requeſt of the Senate, proſecuted him for diſobeying his General, and had taken his Life, had it not been for the Peoples Interceſſion. * Danet.

FABLE: This Word ſignifies all Sorts of Fictions. There are two Kinds of Fables, moral ones, which under handſomely invented Emblems, hold forth Precepts for the Conduct of Life. The other Sort of Fables concerns the Religion of the ancient Pagans, their pretended Deities and the Stories they told about them, which at the Bottom were real Hiſtories, but cruſted over with a Mixture of Romance. Fable likewiſe takes in a Subject of Fiction, which ſerves for the Matter of Heroick Poems, of Dramatick Performances and Romances. Abpthonius the Sophiſt, makes the Poets the Inventors of Fable. 'Tis ſubdivided into Sybaritick, Cilician, and Cyprian, from the different Countries of thoſe who were in the Invention. Hiſtorians have always counted Fable very proper for the Improvement of all Sorts of Perſons, becauſe it diverts and inſtructs at the ſame time. Thus whether they reported Matter of Fact, or explained the Secrets of Nature, or delivered Precepts of Morality, they always gave it a little Intermixture of Fable. Plutarch in the Beginning of his Treatiſe, where he gives Rules for reading the Poets, make it appear that Fable is very ſerviceable for the Inſtruction of young People, and indeed of all other People, provided it be prudently manag'd. Clemens Alexandrinus obſerves that the couching Truth under the Cover of Fiction, is very proper to awaken, and give an Edge to the Mind, and make it eager for the Diſcovery of Divine and Moral Truths. Plutarch takes notice that the Egyptians concealed the Secrets of their Philoſophy, under fabulous or Ænigmatical Repreſentations. Thus they had their Sphinxes at their Temple Gates, as much as to ſay, 'twas no eaſy Matter to explain their Myſteries. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid that by Apollo, the Pythagoreans meant Unity; that Diana ſignified the Number Two; that Minerva ſtood for ſeven; and that Neptune was expounded a Cube. Saluſt, the Philoſopher, will have it that Fables contain ſomething divine in them, becauſe thoſe who make uſe of them are inſpired Poets, Philoſophers, Prieſts, and even the Gods themſelves in delivering Oracles. He adds that the main Service of Fable is to call up the Powers of the Mind, and make it exert in Purſuit of the hidden Meaning. That Fable reſembles the Deity, who, notwithſtanding he diſcovers ſome of his Perfections to common View, has others which lay out of Sight, and are only to be reached by Contemplation. The Poets, as has been already hinted, ought not to be taken for meer fabulous Reporters; but for Hiſtorians, who embroider their Matter with agreable Fiction, and give it an Air of Wonder to make the Performance more entertaining. Polybius, Strabo, and other Writers affirm that the Ground of Homer's Iliads and Odyſſes is a real Hiſtory, which Aſſertion is made good by the Teſtimony of ancient Hiſtorians. And as for the Poets daſhing their Repreſentations with Fable, 'tis only to heighten the Subject, and make the Story more agreeable. The moſt conſiderable Writers of moral Fable are Eſop and Phœdrus. Phœdrus in the Preface of his third Book of Fables dedicated to Eutyches, delivers himſelf thus, " I ſhall only mention the Reaſon in a few " Words why Fables were invented. A Man finding " himſelf in a State of Servitude and Dependance, not " having the Liberty to ſpeak his Mind, delivers his " Thoughts in a fabulous Diſguiſe; and thus by divert- " ing his Reader, ſcreens himſelf from Calumny and " Reflection."

FABRICIUS (George): A German born at Kemnitz in Miſnia, a Province of the upper Saxony A. D. 1516, wrote ſeven Books of the Art of Poetry in Latin: He likewiſe wrote a Compariſon of the Latin Poets, form'd upon Julius Scaliger's Animadverſions; to which may be added another Diſcourſe entitled, An Abridgment of the Art of Poetry: He likewiſe wrote a great many Latin Performances in Poetry; amongſt theſe are his ſacred Poems in five and twenty Books printed at Baſil in two Volumes Octavo A. D. 1567: Odes againſt the Turks; his Poem called Rome; his Travels; and the Hiſtory of his Country. 'Tis obſerv'd that his Poetry throughout is remarkable for Correctneſs and Perſpicuity. He is very nice in the Choice of his Words; here he was ſcrupulous to ſuch a Degree, that in his ſacred Poems he refuſed to make uſe of any Terms that had a Tincture of Fable or Paganiſm. He blames the Chriſtian Poets exceedingly for larding their Subject with Heatheniſh Fables, and applying to the Deities of Parnaſſus. His Rome is by ſome reckoned an excellent Piece: He form'd this Poem upon the Obſervations made by him in that Town, where he makes uſe of the Expreſſions of the ancient Poets, as far as the Subject would give him leave. * Melch. Adam, Vit. Philoſoph. German. Hieron. Weller, in Judicio de Georg. Fabr. le Mire, de Scriptor. Sæcul. XVI. Baillet, Jugement des Savans ſur les Poëtes Modernes.

* FACUNDUS, Biſhop of Hermiana in the Afri- can Province Byzacena, liv'd in the ſixth Century: He took a Journey to Conſtantinople, and aſſiſted at a Conference upon the Three Chapters. He had before written a Diſcourſe in Defence of theſe Three Chapters, from whence he made an Extract; and delivered his Opinion in Writing. He did not alter his Sentiment like Pope Vigilius, but was one of thoſe who held firm, and choſe rather to ſuffer Baniſhment than ſign the Condemnation of Theodorus of Mopſueſtia, than cenſure the Writings of Theodoret, and Ibas's Letter: But that which was moſt remarkable in the Conduct of theſe Men is, that they not only diſapproved this Cenſure, but parted from the Communion of thoſe who ſign'd it. Facundus's Works printed by Syrmondus A. D. 1629. are divided into twelve Books. Here, after having given an Account of his own Belief, he endeavours the Defence of the Three Chapters, i. e. to prove the Orthodoxy of Theodorus Mopſueſtenus, of Theodoret's Writings, and of Ibas's Letter. He wrote another Tract dedicated to Mucianus to refute the Parallel drawn between the Abettors of the Three Chapters, and the Donatiſts. He likewiſe diſcourſes upon the ſame Subject in a Letter publiſhed by Dacherius in his Spicilegium. Facundus's Manner is warm and vehement, and he gives a Turn to his Matter with a great deal of Addreſs and Elocution. His Remarks are generally judicious, and his reaſoning ſolid; but then ſometimes his Zeal carries him too far, makes his Argument fail, and drags him to inconcluſive Reflections. He was well read in what the Fathers have written upon the Incarnation, and throughly underſtood the Controverſy occaſion'd by the explaining of this Myſtery. * Baronius, A. C. 547, 553. Victor, Chronic. Syrmond, in not. ad Facund. Du Pin, Bibliotheque des Aut. Eccleſiaſt. VI. Siecle.

FALDSTRAND, a good Town in Denmark upon the Eaſtern Coaſt of Northern Jutland, between the Cape of Schagen and the Gulph of Alborg. This Town has a good Haven and a ſmall Fort to defend it. * Maty, Diction.

* FAREL, (William) born in the Year 1489, and deſcended from a Gentleman's Family within the Precincts of Gap in Dauphiny. He ſtudied in Paris and made a conſiderable Proficiency in Greek, Hebrew, and Philoſophy. He was one of thoſe invited to Meaux A. D. 1521. by Briçonnet, Biſhop of that Town; from whence himſelf, and other Reformers were expell'd in the Year 1523. He retired to Strasbourg where Bucer and Capito entertained him: Afterwards he made an Acquaintance with Zwinglius at Zurick, and with Æcolampadius at Baſil.

He was pitch'd upon to ſettle the reform'd Religion at Montbelliard, and at Neuchatel; from whence he came to Geneva, where he was expell'd, and afterwards A. D. 1534. recall'd by the Burghers, where he began his Reformation even before Calvin came thither. In the Year 1538 both of 'em were oblig'd to quit the Town: And now Farel withdrew to Baſil, and from thence to Neuchatel, where he was to miniſter to the Year 1542. From Neuchatel he went to Metz, made ſome Proſelites there, was oblig'd to go off with them, and retir'd to the Abbey of Gorze, which was beſieg'd ſoon after; and having the good Fortune to make his Eſcape he return'd to Neuchatel. From hence he went ſeveral Times to Geneva: But at laſt the Magiſtracy being diſſatisfy'd with him, diſſuaded Calvin from allowing him a Pulpit. He took a ſecond Journey to Metz and preach'd there. At laſt, at his Return to Neuchatel he died there in September the 13th 1565. One Peter Caroli, who retired to Geneva, charg'd Farel with reviving the Heterodoxy of Paulus Samoſatenus, and that of the Elceſaites; but he was cleared of this Imputation in a Synod at Lauſanne. * Spondan, in Annal. Sleidan, Comment. Æcolampad. & Calvin. in Epiſt. Thuan. &c.

FARO, Capo di Faro, antiently call'd Pelorum Promontorium, a Cape in Sicily in the Valley de Demona. It ſtands to the North of the Town Meſſina, at the Chops of the Streights of that Name, over againſt Cape Seiglio in Calabria. This Cape takes its Name from a Town there, where a Lighthouſe is ſet up to direct the Pilots in the Night time. Between this Cape and the Town Meſſina, the famous Rock Charibdis may be ſeen. * Maty, Diction.

FASTI, the old Romans Calendar, where the Feſtivals, Ceremonies, the Names of the Magiſtracy, and the working Days were ſet down. They called the Working Days Faſti Dies, and the Holidays Nefaſti. Upon the Faſti Dies the Courts of Juſtice were open, and the Prætor gave Judgment, briefly expreſſed by theſe three Words, do, dico, adjudico: Ovid refers to them in the following Dyſtich:

Ille nefaſtus erit, per quem tria verba ſilentur;
Faſtus erit, per quem lege licebit agi.

Tully obſerves that in the Beginning of the Roman Republick, the Matter of Hiſtory was furniſh'd only from the Prieſts Annals call'd Faſti, and that this Cuſtom continu'd 'till the Time of the High Prieſt Mutius. The Faſti Conſulares were a Sort of Regiſter, where, beſides the Triumphs, the Names of the Conſuls, Dictators and Cenſors were entered. The Regiſtry was kept in one of the Apartments of the Capitol. This Chronological Treaſure was found in the Popedom of Paul III. in the Comitium of the Forum Romanum. They are made uſe of for computing the Years from the Building of Rome. They are likewiſe called Faſti Capitolini: But here we are to obſerve that theſe Faſti compute by a ſhorter Year than Varro's Epocha. For this Reaſon the moſt exact Chronologers always give notice whether they follow the Faſti Capitolini, or Varro's Epocha. * Cicer. de Orat. Valer. Max. Lib. II. Ovid. de Faſtis.

FATIMA, Mahomet's Daughter married to Haly. Some Accounts report her the ſame great Saint which is addreſſed with ſo much Devotion at Com; but moſt Travellers are of another Opinion. Some of 'em will have it that the Saint at Com is Haly and Fatima's Daughter. And according to Pietro Della Valle ſhe is their Granddaughter. Others relate her Daughter to Mouſa Dgafar's Son. This laſt Opinion has good Evidence to ſupport it, i. e. the Stile in which the Saint at Com is ſaluted in the ſolemn Applications the Pilgrims addreſs her. This Form of Prayer affords ſufficient Proof that Travellers are not always exact in their Relations; ſince ſome of the moſt famous have given a wrong Deſcription of this Saint. By the Form of Prayers abovementioned it appears that Fatima Mahomet's Daughter and Haly's Wife, tho' ſhe had ſeveral Children, is notwithſtanding addreſſed as a Virgin. I wiſh you, ſays her Votaries, eternal Happineſs, O moſt pure Virgin, moſt juſt, moſt glorious and immaculate Fatima, Daughter to the elect Mahomet, Haly the well beloved's Wife, and Mother of God's twelve moſt noble Vicars.

But after all 'tis poſſible the Word Virgin ſignifies no more than a vertuous married Woman. * Pietro della Valle, Travels Tom. II. Tavernier's Travels Lib. I. Sir John Chardin's Travels to Perſia.

FAURE (Charles), firſt ſuperior General of the Regular Canons of the Congregation of France. He was born at Luciennes near St. Germain's en laye. His Father John Faure was a Gentleman of an ancient Family in Auvergne, and no leſs valuable for his Probity than his Extraction. Charles was a conſiderable Genius, and diſcovered an early Inclination for Virtue: When he was about ſeven Years old a Storm of Thunder broke upon him and cover'd him all over with Flame without doing any Harm. Beſides the Education in Letters he receiv'd from his Father he improv'd himſelf farther in the Jeſuit's College at Bourges, and afterwards went to La Fleche. At 19 Years of Age he reſolv'd to turn Religious, and his Family having procured him Admiſſion into the Abbey of St. Vincent de Senlis, of the Order of the Canons Regular, he came thither in the Year 1613. But the Diſcipline of this Houſe being very looſe and out of Order, he deſign'd to quit it: But ſome good People perſuaded him to ſtay there. The Year after he took the Habit, and ſpending his Noviciate in great Auſterity, the Monks of the Society, who could not bear his exemplary Virtue, did him a great many ill Turns: However he was not diſcouraged, but got himſelf profeſſed in the Year 1615. During his Noviciate two Religious of the Convent were recover'd from the Irregularities of the Houſe by one Ranſſon a ſecular Clergyman; who for this good Office was cruelly haraſſed by the reſt of the Religious, and even by the Prior of St. Vincent himſelf. In ſhort, they delated Ranſſon in the Biſhop's Court, and got him impriſoned upon falſe Accuſations: This rough Uſage gave him an Opportunity of making an Acquaintance with ſome Eccleſiaſticks belonging to the Family of Cardinal Rochefoucault, then Biſhop of Senlis, and by their Means to inform this Prelate how Matters ſtood in St. Vincent's Abbey. The Cardinal enlarg'd the Priſoner, took the well diſpoſed Part of the Convent into his Protection, and did his utmoſt to bring on a Reformation of the Abbey. Thoſe, who were inclin'd to Regularity, kept a cloſe Correſpondence with Charles Faure, govern'd themſelves by his Advice, and concerted Meaſures with him for a thorow Reformation. He was extreamly remarkable for his Piety, his Diſengagement from the World, and Self-denial. He lay upon the Ground, drank nothing but Water, eat only Bread and Pulſe, and ſpent a great Part of the Night in Prayer. He ſtudied in the Univerſity at Paris, and made a conſiderable Progreſs in Philoſophy and Divinity. During this Time five or ſix of the moſt diſorderly Monks at St. Vincent, and who were moſt averſe to a Reformation, died. The Prior being one of this Number, Charles Faure believing this to be the proper Time to reſtore Diſcipline, came on Purpoſe to Senlis to aſſiſt the Society with his Advice, and diſpoſe 'em to chooſe a new Prior when the Cardinal Rochefoucault was preſent; in hopes his Intereſt might make the honeſt Party an over Balance. This Election fell upon Father Baudoüin, and may be look'd on as the Birth of the Reformation. For Charles Faure, tho' not yet in Prieſt's Orders, was very active and enterpriſing, and made a new Draught for the good Government of the Houſe; which Statutes were immediately publiſh'd, receiv'd and put in Practice. This new Rule for Conduct made a ſurprizing Alteration in a ſhort time. And thus Devotion and Regularity were continually gaining Ground upon Libertiniſm, and Diſſolution of Manners. When any Novices came to the Houſe they put 'em under the Conduct of P. Faure, who bred 'em to his own Principles; and notwithſtanding he lived at Paris to finiſh his Studies, he came every Week on Foot from thence to Senlis, and ſpar'd no Pains for the Inſtruction of the Novices. And having gone through the cuſtomary Courſe of Academical Studies, he came back and ſetled at Senlis: Here he was very ſucceſsful upon the Audience in his Sermons; was made Sub-Prior and Director of the Conſciences of thoſe who came thither for a temporary Retirement. And now his Reputation running high, and the Noiſe of his Reformation beginning to ſpread, abundance of People of all Degrees came to St. Vincent to ſee the Proof of what was reported, and to paſs their Retirement under the Conduct of P. Faure. The Abbot of our Lady in the Town of Eu, and another of our Lady of Clair-Fontaine in the Dioceſe of Chartres, came thither, and deſir'd him to lend 'em ſome Monks to reform their Abbies. He very willingly ſatisfied their Requeſt, and went along with them himſelf, encouraging the Religious by his own Example to ſuffer Perſecution, and go through the utmoſt Hardſhips of Poverty. A great many other Houſes deſiring the ſame Aſſiſtance, and the Religious of St. Vincent perceiving themſelves oblig'd to go to a great many Parts of the Kingdom, thought it adviſeable to make one of their Convent a Director General, and give him Juriſdiction over the other particular Superiors. Father Le Faure was unanimouſly choſen into this Poſt, being then but 29 Years old. Soon after this Election Leonor d'Eſtampes de Valence, Biſhop of Chartres, ſolicited him ſo ſtrongly to ſpare him ſome of his Monks for reviving Diſcipline in St. John's Abbey in that Town, that he was forc'd to ſend him ten, which by the Biſhop's Encouragement had a good Effect. The Cardinal of Rochefoucault reſolving to reform his Abbey of St. Genevieve, to which King Lewis XIII. had nominated him, invited P. Faure to come and ſettle a Dozen of his Monks there; which was done with a great deal of Figure and Solemnity the 27th of April 1624. The Noiſe of this Reformation ſpreading far and wide, P. Faure was farther preſſed to go on with his Zeal, and take a larger Compaſs. He reſign'd to this charitable Motion, travelled to new Places, and notwithſtanding a great deal of Diſcouragement and Contradiction, reform'd abundance of Abbies in the chief Towns of France. He founded a Seminary for Children at St. Vincent in Senlis, and ſeveral other Places, purſuant to the Regulation preſcrib'd by the Council of Trent. In 1628 a Chapter was held at Senlis, where he was continued in the Poſt of Superior of the Reformation. Four Years after the Cardinal Rochefoucault ſummon'd another Chapter at St. Genevieve to chooſe a General: But the Election proving impracticable, his Eminence by his own Authority made P. Faure Viſitor, Vicar and Commiſſary General. Soon after a Bull was procured from Rome for erecting a Congregation, with Powers to chooſe a Triennial Abbot of St. Genevieve, who during that time ſhould have the Title and Authority of a General. P. Faure's Enemies, ſeeing he ſtood faireſt for the Election, endeavoured to diſcredit him at Court, and deliver'd a Paper of Articles againſt him to the French King, which upon Examination being found no better than downright Calumny, P. Faure was now valued more than ever. At the firſt general Chapter of the Canons Regular of the Congregation of France held the 10th of October 1634, P. Faure was choſen Coadjutor Abbot of St. Genevieve, and Supeperior General of his Congregation. And going to wait upon the King after his Election, he was receiv'd with particular Marks of Affection and Eſteem: The very Sight of him upon this Occaſion, prevailed upon a young Officer then in the Preſence, to turn Monk. He afterwards was inſtrumental in the reforming a great many Monaſteries, and was made uſe of by Perſons of the firſt Quality in religious Matters. Three Years forward another Chapter was held purſuant to the Bull, and here P. Faure had a Univerſality to continue him Abbot and General. At this Chapter he offered ſome Regulations, which were approv'd; he got ſome Fundamental Conſtitutions to paſs, and here he gave the finiſhing Stroke to his Reformation. After this Chapter broke up, he ſent his Monks to a great many religious Houſes. And here the Hardſhips himſelf and theſe Perſons went through, can ſcarcely be imagin'd; the greateſt Part of the old Monks declaring open War againſt 'em, and doing 'em all the Miſchief in their Power. Farther, the Bull of Erection continuing the ſame Perſon Abbot and General only for ſix Years, when P. Faure's ſecond Triennial Term was expired, 'twas neceſſary to chooſe another Perſon: And now P. Francis Boulart, one of Faure's Eleves, was choſen to ſucceed him: But conſidering the Situation of Affairs, and that there was no going on without P. Faure's Aſſiſtance, they forc'd him againſt his Inclination to take the Quality of Vicar General, and manage the ſame Buſineſs he had hitherto done. Thus he went on reforming a great many more Monaſteries, and particularly he reſtor'd Diſcipline to a due pitch in the Chapter of a Cathedral Church in Languedoc, whither he diſpatch'd ſome of his Convent.

On the 26th of April 1643 a general Chapter was held; and here P. Faure was again choſen Abbot and General, but this prov'd the laſt time; for the great Fatigues he had gone through, and his mortify'd Way of living, broke his Conſtitution by Degrees: Thus happening to fall ſick upon a Viſitation, he was forc'd to return to Paris, where after having continued ſome Months in a languiſhing Condition, and that without diſcontinuing his cuſtomary Functions, he died the 4th of November 1644. being but 50 Years of Age. And notwithſtanding his Life was far from a long one, he recover'd the ancient Diſcipline in 50 Monaſteries of his Order, and procur'd the founding a new Congregation. He wrote ſeveral Tracts, ſome of which are printed, and others only in Manuſcript. * La Vie du Révérend P. Charles Faure, imprimée in 4to à Paris, en 1698.

FAUSTUS, Deacon of Alexandria and Martyr, was a Companion of Dionyſius of Alexandria in the Perſecution this Biſhop ſuffer'd in the Reigns of Decius and Valerian. He went along with Dionyſius into Baniſhment A. D. 257. On his Return to Alexandria he was ordain'd Prieſt, liv'd to the Diocleſian Perſecution, and was beheaded A. D. 311. His Feſtival ſtands on the 19th of November. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 7. cap. 12. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

FAUSTUS, a Martyr of Corduba; he is one of the three crown'd Perſons in Prudentius's Panegyrical Poem. The other two are St. Januarius and St. Martialis. They ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Corduba, and were burn'd at the Stake. The preciſe Time is uncertain; ſome Martyrologies ſet their Feſtival at the 13th of October, and others at the 28th of September. * Prudentius περὶ στεφάνων. De Tillemont, Memoires Eccleſ. Tom. 5.

FAUSTINUS, a Deacon or Prieſt according to Gennadius of the fourth Century: He adher'd to Urſicinus againſt Damaſus, and afterwards fell in with the Luciferians. He dedicated ſeven Diſcourſes againſt the Arians and Macedonians to Flacilla, Theodoſius the Great's Empreſs. Some make one Gregory, Biſhop of Elvira, Author of theſe Tracts, but there's no Queſtion but that they belong to Fauſtinus. Sirmondus in the Year 1650 printed Fauſtinus and Marcellinus's Libellus Precum addreſs'd to the Emperors Valentinian, Theodoſius, and Arcadius; here after a Preface in Favour of Urſicinus againſt Damaſus, they entreat the Emperors that the Luciferians may have Juſtice done 'em. This Petition, which was preſented A. D. 394, had its Effect, for the Emperor Theodoſius publiſh'd a Reſcript in their Favour. * Gennad. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. cap. 16. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV.

FAUSTULUS, King Amulius Numitor's Shepherd, preſerv'd Romulus and Rhemus, the Veſtal Rhea's two Children, which Amulius, her Father, had expos'd upon the Banks of Tyber: This Fauſtulus got 'em bred up privately under the Care of his Wife Acca Laurentia. * Livy, Lib. I.

FAYDITE, (Peter) a Prieſt of Riom in Auvergne, began to make himſelf known by a Sermon on the Subject of St. Polycarp preach'd at Paris, when the Differences between the French Court and Pope Innocent XI. ran higheſt. He declaim'd in this Sermon againſt Innocent's Conduct, drawing a Parallel between Pope Anicetus with reſpect to his Diſagreement with St. Polycarp; and likewiſe between Pope Victor and Polycrates with the Aſiatick Biſhops touching the keeping of Eaſter; drawing a Parallel, I ſay, between theſe Prelates, and Pope Innocent XI, with regard to the Conteſts between his Holineſs and the King and Clergy of France. This Sermon was ſtill more taken notice of by a Sermon printed at Liege, entitled, Le Predicateur Regaliſte de Saint Polycarp confundu; or, The Court Preacher confounded. Some People ſuſpected the Abbot Faydite had made this Confutation himſelf. But let that be as it will; in 1687 he printed an Abridgment of his Sermon at Maeſtricht, with Teſtimonies to prove the Matters of Fact he had aſſerted. Since this time he wrote ſeveral other Tracts; and beſides the Memoirs againſt M. de Tillemont's Eccleſiaſtical Dictionary, he publiſh'd a Tract upon the Trinity entitled, Eclairciſſement ſur la Doctrine, & Hiſtoire Eccleſiaſtique des deux premiers Siecles, in which he declaims againſt the Syſtem of the School Divines upon the Trinity, and ſets up another Hypotheſis, which was ſuſpected to lean towards Tritheiſm. Father Hugo, Canon regular of the Præmonſtrants, wrote an Anſwer to this Diſcourſe, to which Faydite in the Year 1704. publiſh'd a Reply, where he ſoftens ſome crude Propoſitions maintain'd in his former Tract. Faydite wrote ſeveral ſmall Diſcourſes within the Subject of the Belles Lettres, and amongſt the reſt a Critic upon Homer and Virgil, in which there are a great many entertaining Fancies. He died at Riom, A. D. 1709. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

FEBRUARY, in Latin Februarius: 'Twas under the Protection of Neptune. This Month is not in Romulus's Calendar, which conſiſted only of ten Months; but in the Reign of Numa Pompilius the Calendar was reform'd. This Prince, who was acquainted with Pythagoras, made uſe of that Philoſopher for this Purpoſe, and follow'd the Grecian Method for the Diſtribution of Time. 'Tis true, whereas the Greeks made their common Year to conſiſt only of 354 Days, Numa lengthen'd his Year to 355; and that only becauſe 'twas an odd Number: And in this he was govern'd by a ſuperſtitious Fancy of the Egyptians, who had an Averſion for even Numbers, and reckon'd 'em unfortunate. Thus he ſubſtracted a Day from each of theſe ſix Months, April, June, Sextilis, September, November and December, to which Romulus had aſſign'd 30 Days, leaving the other Months the 31 Days they had before. Afterwards adding theſe ſix Days to fifty one, which were wanting in Romulus's Year of only 354 Days, he had 57 of 'em, dividing of 'em into two other Months, which were plac'd between December and March: Theſe two Months were January with 29 Days, and February with 28. He made no Scruple to give this laſt Month an even Number, becauſe 'twas deſign'd for ſacrificing to the infernal Gods, to whom an unlucky Number ſeem'd moſt agreeable. He call'd this Month February from the pretended God Februus, who preſided at the Purifications; or from Juno, called Februa or Februalis, becauſe the Lupercalia were then ſolemniz'd in Honour of that Goddeſs, where the Women were purify'd by the Prieſts of Pan call'd Luperci.

Numa being deſirous to perpetuate this Regulation made uſe of the Greek Intercalation of 45 Days; this Supplement of Time he threw in every two Years: The Intercalation of 22 Days was made after the Feſtival call'd Terminalia, which happened on the ſixth of the Calends of March, that is, on the 24th of February: And then two Years after the extraordinary Intercalation of 23 Days was made upon the ſame Day: And thus within the Compaſs of four Years they had an Intercalation of 45 Days, which was equal to that us'd by the Greeks in their Olympiads. This Month thus thrown in every two Years, was call'd Mercedonius. * Danet.

FELICISSIMUS, a Confeſſor at Carthage in St. Cyprian's Time: He was one of the firſt impriſon'd with Rogatianus at the Beginning of the Decian Perſecution. It was to theſe two Confeſſors St. Cyprian wrote, exhorting 'em to take Care of his Flock in his Abſence in Conjunction with the Biſhops Caldonius and Herculanus. And whom he commiſſion'd to excommunicate another Feliciſſimus mention'd in Morery. Their Feſtival ſtands in the Roman Martyrology at the 26th of October. * Cyprian. Epiſt. 38.

FELICITAS (Saint), ſuffer'd Martyrdom with her ſeven Children at Rome in the Reign of Antoninus Pius, as ſome report, but more probably in that of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. She and her ſeven Sons were brought into Court before Publius, Præfect of Rome; they all refuſed to ſacrifice to Idols, and made a noble Confeſſion of their being Chriſtians. The Præfect or Governor reported their Anſwer to the Emperor, who aſſign'd them Judges, by whom they were executed by ſeveral Sorts of Torture. Their Mother was beheaded. The Names of her ſeven Sons were, Januarius, Felix, Philip, Silanus, Alexander, Vitalis and Martialis. Their Feſtival is ſet to the tenth of July. * Surius, Acts of St. Felicitas. Ruinart. Acta Martyrum Sincera. Gregor. Mag. Hom. 3. ſuper Evangelia. De Tillemont. Mem. Eccleſ. Tom. 2.

FELIX, Arch-Deacon of Rome, intruded into that See when Pope Liberius was baniſh'd A. D. 355. He, with the reſt of the Roman Clergy, had taken an Oath never to own any other Biſhop of Rome, living Liberius; but the Emperor Conſtantius got him conſecrated by Epictetus, Biſhop of Centum-Cellæ. St. Hierom reports that Acacius had a Share in this Conſecration, and charges Felix with Arianiſm, and ſo does Socrates: But Theodoret and Ruffinus affirm that he was no Arian in Belief, tho' he communicated with thoſe Hereticks. But be this as it will, all the Ancients agree that his Conſecration was unwarrantable. St. Athanaſius in his Epiſtle ad Solitariam Vitam agentes, reports him ordain'd in the Emperor's Palace, without the Choice of the Clergy, or the People's Conſent, and that he was conſecrated by Epictetus, three Eunuchs and three Biſhops making the Congregation, which latter may rather be reckon'd Spies than Biſhops; that the People would not ſuffer him to go into the Church, nor communicate with him. Marcellinus and Fauſtinus in the Preface of their Libellus Precum affirm the ſame thing. Optatus and St. Auguſtin don't put Felix into the Catalogue of the Biſhops of Rome, and St. Hierom calls him an Anti-Pope In ſhort, Liberius at his Return was receiv'd as the only Catholick Biſhop at Rome. Some modern Authors are therefore miſtaken in putting Felix in the Liſt of the Popes: And thoſe, who make a Martyr of him, are ſtill more out of the Way. When the Roman Martyrology was reform'd in the Papacy of Gregory XIII, Baronius wrote a Diſſertation to prove that Felix was neither Saint nor Martyr. Cardinal Santorio undertook the Defence of Felix's Memory; however he had been raz'd out of the Martyrology, if by chance a marble Coffin had not been found at the ſame time under an Altar in the Church of St. Coſmus and St.

St. Damianus at Rome; if a marble Coffin, I ſay, had not been found with the Relicks of the Martyrs Marcus Marcellinus and Tranquillinus on one Side, and on the other a Corps with this Inſcription; The Body of St. Felix, Pope and Martyr, who condemned Conſtantius.

Baronius, who relates this Matter, goes into the Belief of it; and 'tis poſſible there might be ſome Weight in the Evidence, was it not inconſiſtent with the Account the Ancients give of Felix; and if the Hiſtory of his pretended Martyrdom was free from Marks of being ſpurious; for by this Narrative he is beheaded by Conſtantius, who had been excommunicated by him: Now 'tis certain Felix ſurvived Conſtantius, and that this Emperor was never excommunicated by him; which is a farther Proof that the Inſcription found in the Church of S. Coſmus and S. Damianus is no better than a counterfeit Record. This romantick Account therefore apart, the Reader may obſerve from Marcellinus and Fauſtinus that Conſtantius coming to Rome two Years after the Conſecration of Felix, the People petition'd him that Liberius might return; that the Emperor granting their Requeſt he came back the 3d Year after his Baniſhment, A. D. 357; that the People receiv'd him with great Satisfaction; that Felix was expell'd Rome, but return'd thither, ſet up his Claim, and got Poſſeſſion of a Church: That he was driven out with Diſgrace a ſecond Time, and died eight Years afterwards in the Conſulſhip of Valentinian and Valens, that is, in the Year 375. Theodoret likewiſe reports that Conſtantius being come to Rome, the Roman Ladies addreſſed him that Liberius might return, and that his Majeſty ſatisfy'd their Requeſt. He likewiſe adds, that Conſtantius order'd Liberius and Felix ſhould govern the See of Rome jointly, and that each ſhould be Head of his own Party: but the People hearing this Imperial Order read in the Circus, cry'd out one and all, There's but one God, one Chriſt, and one Biſhop; and in fine, that upon Liberius's Return to Rome, Felix retir'd to another Town. * Athanaſ. Epiſt. ad Solitarios. Præfatio Marcellini & Fauſtini ad Libellum Precum. Ruffin. Lib. XXII. Cap. 2. Hieron. de Viris Illuſt. & in Chronic. Socrat. Lib. II. Hiſtor. Cap. ——. Sozomen, Lib. IV. Cap. 11. Theodoret, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. II. Cap. 17.

FELIX, Biſhop of Treves, lived towards the End of the fourth Century. In the Year 386 he was choſen Biſhop of Treves by the Italian Biſhops; that is, thoſe who were in the Intereſt of Ithacius, Biſhop of Oſſobon in Spain, from whoſe Communion the other Catholick Biſhops parted, becauſe the Ithacians proſecuted the Priſcillianiſts to Death. Ithacius was depoſed by a Council conven'd by St. Ambroſe at Milan; and Felix was refuſed Communion by the Catholick Biſhops upon the Score of his being conſecrated by a Schiſmatick. This Sentence being confirm'd in a Council held at Turin, A. D. 398. Felix reſign'd his Biſhoprick, and retir'd to a Monaſtery of his own founding near Treves, where he died ſoon after. Notwithſtanding he engag'd in a Party, with which the moſt celebrated Catholick Biſhops refus'd to communicate, he is enter'd for a Saint in the Calendar for the 26th of March. * Sulpicius Severus, Hiſtor. Concil. Mediolan. & Taurin. Baillet, Vies des Saintes au Mois de Mars.

FELIX, an African Martyr, Biſhop of Tubiſa within the Proconſular Diviſion, was ſeiz'd when Diocleſian's Edict was publiſh'd in Africk February the 24th A. D. 303. Magnilianus the chief Magiſtrate of the Town having orders to execute the Edict, apprehended one Januarius a Prieſt, and Fortunatus and Septimianus two Readers, and commanded 'em to deliver him the Scriptures that they might be burn'd. The Prieſt Januarius told him they were at the Biſhop's Houſe. Magnilianus ſending him to bring the Biſhop before him, Felix came, but refus'd to obey the Order. Magnilianus ſent him Home and bid him take care what he did. Three Days after he order'd him to come before him again, and upon his Refuſal to deliver the Bible, ſent him to the Proconſul at Carthage. Felix having anſwered the Proconſul with the ſame Reſolution, was tranſported into Italy, where he was examin'd by the Præfectus Prætorio at Naples, who gave Judgment of Death upon him for refuſing to deliver the Bible, which he confeſſed was in his Cuſtody. * Ruinart, Acta Martyrum Sincera. De Tillemont, Memoirs Eccleſiaſtiques. Fleuri, Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

FELIX (Saint), born at Nola in Campania in the third Century; His Father Hermias originally a Syrian and an Officer in the Army ſettled in Italy. Felix having a Chriſtian Education was made a Reader, and afterwards ordained Prieſt by Maximus, Biſhop of Nola. During the Perſecution under Decius and Valerianus the Biſhop of Nola was forc'd to withdraw out of the Town: Felix, who ſtaid there, was carried before the Magiſtrate, whipt, loaden with Irons, and put in Priſon; but an Angel enlarg'd him that he might be in a Condition to aſſiſt his Biſhop, who was fallen ſick in the Mountains. He found him juſt at the Point of Death in a Field full of Thorns. And here having providentially found ſome Grapes among the Thorns, he preſſed a Bunch, and put ſome of the Juice into Maximus's Mouth, which reviv'd him. Felix took him upon his Shoulders and carried him to Nola; and after having lain concealed ſome time at his own Houſe, he began to appear, and encourage the Chriſtians to Reſolution. The Heathen would have apprehended him, but miſſed in the Attempt. He made his Eſcape and abſconded in a Ciſtern, 'till the Storm was over. After Maximus's Death they would have choſe him Biſhop, but he refuſing the Promotion, got one Quintus elected, and liv'd the Remainder of his Life undiſturb'd. The preciſe Year of his Death is not known. Some place it to the Year 256, and others ten Years after. That a great many Miracles were wrought at his Tomb, is atteſted by St. Paulinus, by St. Auguſtin, by Sulpicius Severus and Pope Damaſus. Felix has had always the Reſpect of a Saint at Nola, and 'twas not long before the ſame Regard was paid him in Africk: His Feſtival was kept at Rome and at Nola on the 14th of January in Pope Gelaſius's Time. * Paulin. Carmin. 20. Nat. de Sancto Felice. Auguſt. de cura pro mortuis gerend. Sulpit. Sever. Epiſt. 9. ad Severum. Gregor. Turon. de gloriâ Martyrum. De Tillemont. Tom. IV. des Mem. Eccleſ.

FELIX (Saint), Biſhop of Nantes in the ſixth Century, was deſcended from one of the moſt ancient and noble Families in Aquitain. He was born at Bourges A. D. 513. two Years after his Grandfather's Conſulſhip, if 'tis certain that he was Grandſon to Felix who was Conſul with Secundinus A. D. 511. He was ordain'd Prieſt A. D. 540, and choſen Biſhop of Nantes in the Year 550, after Eumelus's Death. Nantes was then under the Government of Conan, who had already put three of his Brothers to Death, and would fain have diſpatch'd Maclau the fourth, but Felix found means to preſerve him. This Biſhop aſſiſted at the IIId Council of Paris A. D. 557. and at his Return Home endeavour'd to ſettle the Diſcipline that was decreed by the Council. King Clothaire having taken Nantes A. D. 560, made the Biſhop Governour of the Town: Which Poſt he ſoon quitted after Clothaire's Death (which happened the next Year) to lay himſelf out wholly in the Functions of his Character.

He aſſiſted at the Council of Tours A. D. 566, and executed the Regulations paſs'd there in his Dioceſe. He finiſh'd the great Church begun by his Predeceſſor, and dedicated it A. D. 568. He went to the IVth Council of Paris A. D. 573, where he had ſome Conteſt with the Archbiſhop of Tours. At his Return to his Dioceſe he was a great Relief to his People, in ranſoming thoſe that had been taken Priſoners by the low Bretons, and by promoting the Repoſe of the Country. Being dangerouſly ill, he deſigned to make his Nephew Burgundianus his Succeſſor: But Gregory, Archbiſhop of Tours, looking upon this Nomination as irregular, refus'd to conſecrate him. Felix died A. D. 584: He is mentioned in the modern Martyrologies on July the 7th. * Gregor. Turon. Hiſt. Lib. IV. Cap. 4. Lib. V. Cap. 5. & 49. Lib. VI. Cap 15. Le Cointe, Annal.

* FELIX, Biſhop of Urgel. Beſides what was done at Frankfort, Felix's Heterodoxy was condemn'd in a Council held at Rome under Leo III. A. D. 799: And Felix was ordered by Charlemain to go to Aix-la-Chapelle to confer with ſome Biſhops. He made his Appearance accordingly, propoſed his Scruples, and being convinc'd by Alcuinus renounc'd his Error, gave in to the Doctrine of the Church, and made an Orthodox Confeſſion now extant. Thoſe of his Diſciples, who had gone along with him, were likewiſe recover'd. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VIII.

FEMER-

FEMERSUND, a narrow Paſſage in the Baltick. It is between the Iſland Fermeren and the Dutchy of Holſtein. It is but two Miles over in the narroweſt Place. * Maty, Diction.

FENESTRELLES, a ſmall Village in the upper Dauphiny. It lies in a Valley upon the River Cluſon about ſix Leagues from Pignerol. The Jeſuits have a Houſe there, and the French King built a Citadel to cover the Frontier from the Duke of Savoy, to whom he quitted Pignerol and Perouſe which ſerv'd for the ſame Purpoſe. But in the late War the Duke of Savoy making himſelf Maſter of this Fortreſs, 'twas yielded to him at the Treaty of Utrecht. * Memoires Du Tems.

FENICUSA, or Fenicur, a ſmall Iſland affording a great deal of good Paſture. 'Tis likewiſe call'd Palmaria, and lies between the Iſlands Lipari and Ericuſa in the Tuſcan Sea. * Baudrand.

* FERDINAND III, for Conqueſt of Morocco in Morery Vol. I. read Conqueſt of Granada.

FERIA, a Town with the Title of a Dutchy in Eſtremadura in Spain, five Leagues from Badojox to the North. Some Geographers take this Town for that anciently call'd Seria and Julia Fama, which others ſuppoſe to be Xeres de Guadiana. * Baudrand.

FERIA (the Duke of), was Governor of the Milaneſe and General of the Spaniſh Troops in Germany. In 1625 he was forc'd to raiſe the Siege of Verüe, and in 1633. he march'd from the Milaneſe into Germany to reinforce the Bavarians, and took Bibrac. Afterwards his Army being over-fatigu'd was loſt, and himſelf died in Bavaria, A. D. 1634. * Mercure François, Hiſtoire du XVII Siécle.

* FERNELIUS, for Mary de Medicis in Morery Vol. I. read Catherine.

* FERITHARIS, II^d King of Scotland; expunge this Article in Morery Vol. I.

FERNANDO NOROGNE, La Ilha de Fernando Norogne, an Iſland in the Braſilian Sea. 'Tis threeſcore and ten Leagues from the Coaſt of Rio Grande to the Eaſt. The Circuit is ſmall; but the Ground is well improv'd ſince the Portugueſe diſcovered it. * Maty, Diction.

FERNANDO PAO, La Ilha de Fernando Pao, an African Iſle near Guinea, near the Mouth of the River of the Camerons, twelve Leagues from the Coaſt of Benin. 'Tis about twenty ſix Leagues in Compaſs. It belongs to the Portugueſe, who have built a Fort there and ſome Villages. * Maty, Diction.

FERNE, anciently Farfar, Pharphar, and Chryſorrhoas, a little River in Syria. It riſes in Mount Libanus, and divides into ſeveral Streams; one of which runs under the Walls of Damaſcus, another croſſes the Town, and a third drives through the Fields to the North. Part of it falls into a ſmall Lake on the Eaſt of Damaſcus, and part of it is loſt in the Plains, which are much enrich'd by it. Some believe that this Chryſorrhoas was one of the four Rivers in Paradiſe. * Maty, Diction. Le Clerke upon Geneſis.

FERRAND (Lewis), born at Toulon October the 3^d 1645. He ſtudied firſt at Toulon, afterwards came to Paris, from whence he went to Mentz for the Convenience of making a Tranſlation of the Hebrew Bible. Not ſucceeding in this Buſineſs he return'd to France and ſtudied the Law. Afterwards he took the cuſtomary Degrees in that Faculty, and was receiv'd an Advocate or call'd to the Bar for the Parliament at Paris. In the Year 1670 he printed a little Tract, entitled, Conſpectus ſive Synopſis libri Hebraici, qui inſcribitur Annales Regum Franciæ & Regum Domus Othomanicæ. 'Tis a Letter written in Hebrew to the Abbot de Bourzeis giving a Plan of the Annals of the French Kings and Ottomans. The Preſident Monſ. de Meſme was his Patron, and encouraged him to publiſh his Works. His 2^d printed Performance is entitled, Reflections upon the Chriſtian Religion, containing an Explanation of the Prophecies of Jacob and Daniel concerning the Coming of the Meſſiah. Printed at Paris A. D. 1679. Here he handles a great many curious Queſtions in Chronology and Hiſtory. Afterwards he printed a large Latin Commentary in Quarto upon the Pſalms. And after having been a Critick and Commentator, he turn'd Controverſialiſt at the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes: And in 1685. publiſh'd two polemical Diſcourſes, one upon the Subject of the Church, and another entitled, Réponſe à l'Apologie pour la Reformation, pour les Reformateurs, & pour les Reformés. He likewiſe wrote two Letters to prove St. Auguſtin a Monk. After his Death a Diſcourſe of his was printed, entitled, De la Connoiſſance de Dieu. He died in his 54^th Year A. D. 1699. Ferrand had a great deal of Learning; he underſtood the Languages, and was well read in Antiquity. But then he overlays the Reader with immethodical Citations. And to conclude with him, though he has made abundance of Collections, he is neither ſublime in his Manner, nor very cloſe in his Reaſoning. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* FERRARA (Renata of France and Dutcheſs of), Daughter of Lewis XII, by Ann of Britain. She was a learned Princeſs, and protected the Reform'd. When Calvin quitted France he retir'd to Ferrara, A. D. 1535, whither Marot had withdrawn himſelf ſome time before for Shelter. Theſe Men diſpos'd the Ducheſs to favour the French Reformation. As long as the Duke her Husband liv'd, ſhe made no Difficulty to declare her Opinion, and countenance the Proteſtants. But when ſhe was a Widow, ſhe remov'd into France and liv'd at Montargis, where ſhe continu'd her Protection to the Reform'd, but at laſt was forc'd to give 'em up. She ſolicited ſtrongly for the Prince of Conde when he was in Priſon; but afterwards ſhe broke her Correſpondence with him, becauſe he appeared at the Head of the Hugonotick Troops, which both this Ducheſs, and her Court, look'd upon as no other than downright Rebellion. * Brantome. * Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. XXVI. & XXX.

* FERRARIUS (Bernardine): Beſides the Works mention'd in Morery under this Article, Ferrarius wrote a Tract of the Acclamations of the Ancients printed at Milan A. D. 1627. He likewiſe wrote a Tract concerning the uſe of Literæ Formatæ, &c. and another explaining the Manners and Ceremonies the Chriſtians us'd at Funerals. All this Author's Works are full of Learning and curious Diſquiſitions. He wrote with Perſpicuity and Method, diſcovers great Judgment in his Conjectures, and is very exact in his Citations. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

FERREOL (Saint), commonly call'd St. Forget or Fargeu, a Martyr of Vienne in Gaul: He was a Perſon of Condition in that Town, and an Acquaintance of St. Julian de Brioude, who lodg'd at his Houſe. St. Julian being beheaded in Auvergne, and his Head carried to Vienne to the Governor Criſpin, Ferriol got it into his Cuſtody, and was afterwards delated for a Chriſtian. The Governor, after having admoniſh'd Ferreol to change his Religion, had him whipt, loaden with Irons, and caſt into a Dungeon. The third Day after his Impriſonment, his Chains, as 'tis related in his Hiſtory, fell off. Thus making his Eſcape he ſwam the Rhone: But Soldiers being ſent after him, he was overtaken and beheaded on the Bank of that River. His Martyrdom is commonly reckoned to the Reign of Diocleſian and Maximian. A Church was afterwards built where he was buried: At laſt his Corps was remov'd to Vienne, and depoſited in a Church which carries his Name. * Ruinart, Acta Martyrum Sincera. Gregor. Turon. Lib. XXIV. & XXV. de glor. Martyr. Cap. 1. & 2. Sidon. Apollinar. Epiſtolar. Lib. II. Epiſt. 7. &c.

The Feſtival of this Saint ſtands at the 18^th of September.

The ſame Day is kept in Memory of another St. Farreol, Biſhop of Limoges, in the Reign of King Chilperick. Gregorius Turonenſis reports ſeveral Circumſtances of his Life, which ſhew him to be a Perſon of great Reſolution. Gregor. Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. V. Cap. 10. & 29. Baillet, Vies des Saintes. Before this Article is diſmiſſed we muſt take notice of a third St. Ferreol, Biſhop of Uſez, Son of Ausbert, whoſe Father was Tonance Ferreol, Præfectus Prætorio of Gaul in the fifth Century. This S. Ferreol was choſen Biſhop of Uſez A. D. 537. He was ſucceſsful in converting the Jews, who were very numerous in his Dioceſe. The Correſpondence he kept with theſe People occaſioned his being charg'd with a Practice againſt the State. King Chilperick being prepoſſeſſed againſt him, baniſh'd him to Paris: But his Innocence appearing ſoon after, he was return'd to his Dioceſe, and continued his Endeavours for converting the Jews. He built a Monaſtery and wrote a Monaſtick Rule. He likewiſe reform'd his Clergy, and after having governed with Commendation twenty eight Years, died January the 4th, A. D. 581. * Vita Ferreoli per Ausbertum. Gregor. Turon. Lib. VI. Hiſt. Cap. 7. Sidon. Apollinar. Epiſtolar. Lib. I. Ep. 7. Lib. VII. Ep. 12.

FERRIER (John), a French Jeſuit born at Rouvergue A. D. 1614, and made Confeſſor to the French King A. D. 1670. He was generally thought to be more fit for Buſineſs than his Predeceſſor, Father Annat. He publiſh'd ſeveral Books, and was one of the beſt Controverſial Writers againſt the Janſeniſts. There's a Latin Anſwer of his extant to Father Baron's Objections to Scientia Media; 'tis entitled, Reſponſio ad Objectiones Vincentianas. He deſign'd to have publiſh'd a Courſe of Divinity, of which only the firſt Tome is printed, where he diſcourſes de Deo uno juxta Auguſtini & Sancti Thomæ principia. His other Works are in French, and relate moſtly to the Buſineſs of Janſeniſm. He wrote two Letters againſt Monſieur Arnauld, and gave a Relation of every Thing that paſs'd A. D. 1663. with Reſpect to the Controverſy with the Janſeniſts. His Theſis upon the Doctrine of Probability made a great deal of Noiſe: He held the affirmative ſide of the Queſtion at Toulouſe in June 1659. * Sotuel Biblioth. Scriptor. Societ. Jeſu. Bayle, Diction Hiſtor.

FERRIER, (John du), Son of Mr. du Frerier Chief Juſtice of Foix, was born at Toulouſe, A. D. 1644. He was a conſiderable Genius, and a Perſon of Probity and Conduct. He was ſucceſſively Vicar General to Mr. de Noialles, Biſhop of Rhodes, to Mr. du Lude, Biſhop of Alby, and M. Fouquet, Archbiſhop of Narbonne. The Jeſuits would never pardon him for publiſhing the Declaration which the late Mr. Ailan de Solminiac, Biſhop of Cahours, made on his Death Bed. This Prelate being juſt upon the Edge of the other World, deſired Ferrier to tell the Biſhops of Alet and Pamiers, that the Jeſuits were the Plague and Ruin of the Church, and that thoſe Prelates, who had no other View but the Glory of God, ſhould employ none of that Society in their Dioceſes, nor ſo much as countenance 'em with a Viſit. Ferrier performing what he had in Charge, the Jeſuits ſat upon his Skirts, and made him come in for a Share in the Diſturbance given his Friend the Biſhop of Pamiers. He was baniſh'd to Tonnerre A. D. 1680. His Papers were ſearch'd by the Arch-Biſhop of Alby: And tho' 'tis ſaid they diſcovered nothing to his Diſadvantage, he was ſent notwithſtanding to the Baſtile. And here being examin'd by a Doctor of the Sorbonne he confirm'd what he had ſaid before: Adding withal, that he would maintain his Teſtimony to his laſt Breath, and that he thought himſelf oblig'd to publiſh what the Biſhop of Cahours had enjoin'd him; for that Holy Prelate being at the Point of Death could deſign no ſecular Intereſt. Ferrier after a Year and four Months Impriſonment died in the Baſtile A. D. 1685. being more than fourſcore Years old. * Memoires du Temps.

FERRIERE (Claude de), born at Paris A. D. 1639. He was a celebrated Lawyer, and wrote ſeveral Books in that Faculty: To mention ſome of 'em, Inſtitutiones Juſtiniani ſingulari methodo illuſtratæ, & cum jure Gallico collatæ. Ad Titulum Digeſtorum de Regulis juris & Verborum ſignificatione Commentarius, ſecundùm alphabeticum Materiarum ordinem digeſtus, cum notis praxis forenſis. He wrote likewiſe the Right of Patronage, Inſtructions for publick Notaries. The Inſtitutes of the French Law, ſhewing the Reſemblance and Difference between the French Municipal and the Civil Law, &c.

FESCAMP (Fiſcannum, Fiſci Campus), an old Town with the Title of a Barony, and Chief Juſtice Juriſdiction, with a Caſtle and Haven upon the Coaſt in Normandy, between Dieppe and Havre de Grace in the Country of Caux. This Town formerly conſiderable, has no Wall about it. The famous Nunnery founded by Waningus A. D. 662. is ſtill to be ſeen, 'twas rebuilt by Richard I, Duke of Normandy, and given by Richard II. to the Benedictines A. D. 1006. In the Year 1656. the Monks of the Congregation of St. Maur ſettled their reform there, and built a beautiful Monaſtery. This Abbey has in a Manner Epiſcopal Juriſdiction over ſix and thirty Churches, which Privilege is notwithſtanding conteſted by the Archbiſhop of Roan. The Monks have likewiſe ſix Baronies within their Et

ſtate, and their Church is one of the biggeſt in France. * Du Chêne, Recherche des Antiq. des Villes. Baudrand.

* FESTIVALS (the Chriſtian): As the Chriſtian Religion has external Worſhip to manifeſt and heighten inward Devotion, ſo there are Feſtivals appointed for the ſame Purpoſe; ſome of which have been practiſed by the earlieſt Ages, and others afterwards ſettled at different Times. All the firſt Days of the Week, commonly call'd Sundays, have been kept holy ever ſince the Apoſtles Times. Upon this Day, as Juſtin Martyr obſerves, the Chriſtians us'd to meet for publick Prayer, and the receiving the Euchariſt. The Reaſon of its being pitch'd upon for ſolemn Worſhip, was in Honour of our Saviour's Reſurrection. Saturday was likewiſe kept Holiday in ſome Churches, but this Cuſtom was of no long Continuance.

Eaſter has always been reckon'd one of the moſt ſolemn Chriſtian Feſtivals. Some Churches kept it upon the 14th of March, and others upon the Sunday following: See Supplement, Article Paſſover.

Pentecoſt is another ſolemn Feſtival in Memory of the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles. Neither is the Aſcenſion of leſs Antiquity: St. Auguſtin ranges it amongſt the four moſt antient Feſtivals founded upon Apoſtolical Tradition. Theſe four Holidays according to him are Good Friday, Eaſter Day, the Aſcenſion, and Whitſuntide.

Beſides theſe four Feſtivals, the primitive Chriſtians kept Holidays in Memory of the Martyrs; but theſe Feſtivals at firſt were particular only to ſome Churches: But without dilating upon a Detail of the Circumſtances upon the Saint's Holidays, we ſhall only remark the Inſtitution of the principal Feſtivals obſerv'd by the Latin Church throughout the Courſe of the Year.

The firſt of January is kept holy in Memory of our Lord's Circumciſion. 'Twas formerly religiouſly diſtinguiſh'd only as an Octave of Chriſtmas Day. The keeping it preciſely with regard to our Saviour's Circumciſion is poſſibly no older than the 7th Century.

The ſixth of January is the Feſtival of the Epiphany. This Feſtival was formerly kept in the Greek Church for our Saviour's Nativity. At preſent the Memory of the Adoration of the Magi, of our Saviour's Baptiſm, and his firſt Miracle are join'd in the Worſhip of this Day.

The 2d of February is kept holy in Memory of our Saviour's Preſentation in the Temple, and the Purification of the bleſſed Virgin. 'Tis commonly call'd Candlemaſs becauſe of the lighting a great many Tapers. This Feſtival call'd Hypapante by the Greeks, was not inſtituted 'till the ſixth Century.

Dies Cinerum, or Aſh-Wedneſday, ſtands at the Beginning of Lent, and is ſo called becauſe the Chriſtians us'd to have Aſhes given 'em on that Day. This Cuſtom runs up no higher than the eleventh Century.

At preſent the Annunciation, or our Lady Day, is kept on the 25th of March. It does not appear that this Feſtival was obſerv'd in the five firſt Centuries: But 'twas ſettled in the ſixth, and afterwards receiv'd through almoſt all Chriſtendom.

In ſome Churches not only Eaſter Sunday and Whit-Sunday, but likewiſe the whole Week which followed were kept holy; but now only the two firſt Days next to Sunday are thus diſtinguiſh'd.

The Feſtival of the Trinity kept the firſt Sunday after Whitſuntide began to be made an Holiday in ſome Churches of Germany and Italy in the tenth and eleventh Centuries, but 'twas not made an Holiday in the Roman Church 'till the fourteenth in the Pontificate of John XXII, and was not every where ſettled 'till the XVth Century.

The Feſtival of the Holy Sacrament was inſtituted by Urban IV. A. D. 1264, and confirm'd by Clement V. at the Council of Vienne A. D. 1311.

The Greeks and Latins have a great many Feſtivals for the bleſſed Virgin: The chief are theſe that follow.

The Feſtival of the Viſitation on the 2d of July, not only in Memory of the Viſit ſhe made Elizabeth, but likewiſe to honour the Sanctification of St. John. 'Twas firſt ſettled in the Church of Rome, by Urban VI. A. D. 1389, and confirm'd by the Council of Baſil A. D. 1441.

The Aſſumption; for this ſee the Supplement to Morery, Article Aſſumption.

The Festival of the Nativity of the blessed Virgin is kept in the Latin Church on the 8th of September. It began to be settled in the IXth Century: The Eastern Greeks receiv'd it from the Latins.

The Festival of the Conception of the blessed Virgin began no sooner than the XIIIth Century, neither was it settled 'till the Council of Basil A. D. 1439; which Regulation was afterwards confirmed by Sixtus IV. A. D. 1476. & 1483.

The Festival of the Nativity of our Lord commonly call'd Christmas is observ'd on the 25th of December; and is certainly the most ancient next to the four first abovementioned: However, St. Augustin does not range it among those of Apostolical Tradition. The Greek Church, as has been already remark'd, kept it on the 6th of January in the IIId and IVth Centuries; but the Latin Church has always made the 25th of December that Holiday; and in the Vth Century the Greeks follow'd the Custom of the Latins.

The Festival of the Murder of the Innocents began in some Churches as early as the Vth Century; but was not generally observ'd in the Latin Church 'till the IXth Century. The Latins keep it on the 28th of December, the Greeks on the 29th, and the Syrians on the 27th.

Besides the Festivals peculiar to each Saint, the Latin Church keeps a general Holiday for All Saints: But this began long after Boniface IV. A. D. 610, turn'd the Pantheon into a Church and dedicated it to the blessed Virgin and all the Martyrs. In the Year 731. Gregory III. likewise dedicated a Chapel at Rome to all the Saints: And 'twas not 'till after this time that Gregory IV. A. D. 840, ordered the keeping this Festival, and plac'd it to the first of November.

The Commemoration of all the Faithful Departed, or All Souls, kept on the 2d of November, was first brought on by Odilo, Abbot of Cluni, for his own Order, and afterwards receiv'd by most Churches in the XIIIth Century.

The Festival of S. Michael and the other holy Angels is kept on the 29th of September by the Latins, Greeks and Eastern Christians: But this Festival does not run very high in Antiquity.

The Festivals of the Saints, whether Martyrs or others, are commonly kept on the Day of their Death, called Dies Natalitius or their Birth Day; not thus denominated, as some fancy, because they are then born to Immortality; but in regard Natalis is a general Term for a Festival. The Latin Church solemnizes no Birth Day excepting those of our Saviour, the blessed Virgin, and St. John.

The Festivals of the twelve Apostles are the most solemn of any dedicated to the Memory of Saints.

The Christian Festivals are chiefly design'd for divine Worship: And since Business and Labour are Hindrances to this Purpose, they are ordered to be forborn upon the great Holidays.

This laying aside Work and Employment with Respect to Sunday was turn'd into a Law by Constantine the Great: Which Regulation was confirm'd by succeeding Princes. However Working is not forbidden upon all Festivals; and here the Practice is not the same in all Places. The Festivals in the Roman Rubricks are distinguish'd into annual Festivals, Solemn-Majors, Solemn-Minors, Doubles, Semi-Doubles and Simples.

* Thomassin. Tractat. Historic. de Fest. Baillet, aux fêtes des Chrétiens, 4. Tom.

FESTIVALS (the Mahometan.)

Every Friday is a Mahometan Holiday: Upon this Day they meet for publick Prayer; and keep it with the same Solemnity as the Christians do Sunday, and the Jews Saturday.

Besides Friday, they have two other solemn Festivals: The first is called the Festival of Sacrifices: 'Tis kept on the 10th Day of the last Month of the Year: the second comes up at the End of the Fast of the Month Ramadhan, and stands on the first Day of the Month Chaval. There are no Sacrifices offered during this Festival; it being only distinguish'd by some particular Prayers made in their Moschs. They have likewise some Festivals upon particular Occasions, as religious Applications for prospering their Arms, for Rain or fair Weather, for discharging their Vows, and in Memory of some of their Predecessors.

FESTIVALS (the Chinese): The Chinese have two or solemn Festivals every Year in Honour of Confucius; besides others of lesser Distinction. They likewise offer Sacrifices twice a Year to the Ghosts of their Ancestors: To which may be added others less solemn every Month, when the Moon is new and at the full, and on the first Day of the Year with two the Solstices. The 15th Day of the first Moon of their Year is one of those kept with the greatest Solemnity: They make a great many Bonfires and hang out Lanthorns upon it. The 5th Day of the 5th Moon is likewise an extraordinary Holiday, and so is the 15th of the 8th Moon.

The Indians have likewise several Holidays in Honour of their Idols both in Autumn and at other Times of the Year; and in general it may be said that all People, who pretended to any Religion, had also their Holidays. * Les Relations Historiques de l'Empire de la Chine.

FESTIVAL (the Trades Man's) was kept at Rome, when Pagan, on the 15th of May in Honour of Mercury, because on that Day a Temple was dedicated to him in the great Circus, when Appius Claudius and P. Servilius were Consuls. They sacrific'd a Sow big with Pig to this pretended Deity, and then went and sprinkled themselves with the Water of a Fountain call'd Aqua Mercurii, which was at the Porta Capena. They address'd Mercury to be favourable to them in their Business and pardon their Legerdemain. Thus Ovid describes their Devotion in his 5th Book de Fastis V. 685. & deinc.

Sive Deum prudens alium, Divamve fefelli;
Abstulerint celeres improba Dicta noti.
Et pateant veniente Die perjuria nobis,
Nec curent Superi, si quâ locutus ero.
Da modo lucra mihi, da facto gaudia lucro:
Et face ut Emptori verba dedisse juvet.

FESTUS POMPEIUS, a famous Grammarian: He abridg'd Verrius Flaccus de Verborum significatione; and Paulus Diaconus abridging Festus almost quite spoil'd the Performance of the first Author. 'Tis Joseph Scaliger's Opinion that there's no Author more serviceable for the Latin Tongue than Festus. We have several Editions of his Book, and that in Usum Delphini is one of the best.

FEVRE (Nicholas le), Son of Vincent le Fevre, a rich Burgher of Lynas near Montlheri, who settled at Paris after the Death of his first Wife, and by Jane Haquer his second, had Giles and Nicholas le Fevre. This latter was born at Paris in June 1544. He was bred to Learning, and applied himself early to the Belles Lettres and to History. Afterwards the Law, Mathematicks, Philosophy, especially the moral Branch of it, made part of his Study. In the latter part of his Life he applied himself wholly to History and Ecclesiastical Antiquity. He kept Correspondence with all the learned Men of Europe; and when he understood any of his Acquaintance intended to publish an Author, or write an Original, he took Care to assist them with his Manuscripts, and furnish'd Memoirs, desiring withal that no Notice should be taken of him. His Works collected after his Death by John le Begue, Advocate General in the Court for the Mint, were printed at Paris in Quarto A. D. 1614.

M. le Fevre's written Performances tho' far from bulky are very considerable for Learning and good Sense. His first Piece is upon this moral Question, whether one may do the least Evil for avoiding one which is greater. His second is his fine Preface upon St. Hillary's Fragments. 'Tis admir'd by all the Learned, and explains a great many Passages relating to the History of Arianism: There's no less Learning and beautiful Manner in his Prefaces upon Seneca the Philosopher, and Seneca the Rhetorician. His Letter to Baronius upon the Subject of Wine and Myrrh given to our Saviour, is equally remarkable for Learning and good Stile: He is of Opinion that 'twas a Draught given to Malefactors to stupify the Senses, and break the Impressions of Pain. He has made some judicious Remarks upon several Texts of the new Testament; amongst which there is one Remark to prove that it was not Dionysius the Areopagite that came into France. He has likewise a pretty long Dissertation touching the Celibacy of Priests. Farther, there are some Poems in this Collection, and a Letter to Cardinal Baronius touching the Temporal Jurisdiction riſdiction of the See of Rome, and ſome other Letters. Beſides theſe Latin Tracts he wrote ſomething in French no leſs valuable than the reſt. And in fine, it may be affirm'd that Mr. le Fevre has ſhewn a great deal of Learning and Judgment in all his Compoſitions. His Stile is correct, clean, and unſuperfluous; his Conjectures are well aim'd; his Reaſoning is ſtrong, and his Citations plentiful. He was a great Maſter in antient Eccleſiaſtical and profane Authors, and examin'd the Print with Manuſcripts. He was a judicious Critick, and went home in his Enquiries without vent'ring too far. He was remarkable for Probity and Religion; charitable to the Poor, affable, humble and beneficent. He liv'd ſometimes retir'd with the Genteelneſs of a Courtier; and ſometimes at Court with the Plainneſs of a Recluſe. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

FEVRE (Ann le), Daughter of Tannaquil le Fevre, made a great Proficiency in Learning under her Father. She married M. Dacier and prevailed with him to turn Roman Catholick. This Gentlewoman, ſtill living, has diſtinguiſh'd her ſelf conſiderably by her Pen. She has written learned Remarks upon Florus, Aurelius Victor, Dictys Cretenſis, Callimachus, &c. She has tranſlated three of Plautus's Comedies into French, his Amphitryo, his Rudens, and his Epidicus: There are Notes added to each of theſe, and a learned Diſſertation by way of Preface concerning Dramatick Poetry, and the Theatre of the Antients. Here ſhe examines nicely into the Riſe of theſe Performances, and traces 'em thro' their Progreſſes and Alterations. She runs thro' the Diviſions of old, middle, and new Comedy, treats the Subject of Satyr, and all the different Repreſentations of the Stage. She prefers Plautus to Terence, both upon the Score of his comick Genius, and the Richneſs of his Invention, which ſhe fancies almoſt inimitable. She has likewiſe tranſlated Terence's Comedies, the Plutus and Nubes of Ariſtophanes, with learned Prefaces. To which may be added, her Tranſlation of Anacreon. To conclude, ſhe has lately publiſh'd a Tranſlation of Homer's Iliads with a critical Preface. But here her Commendation of Homer is not allowed by M. l'Abbé Terraſſon. This Gentleman in his late critical Diſſertation upon Homer's Iliad has diſſected that Poem, made learned Remarks upon the ſeveral Parts, and endeavoured to ſink that Poet's Character much below the Pitch of common Eſtimation. * Memoires du Tems. Diſſertation critique ſur L'Iliade, Par M. l'Abbé Terraſſon.

* FIACRE (Saint.) All that we know certainly of this holy Perſon, is what is reported concerning him in Hildegarius, Biſhop of Meaux, and Fulcoius, of Beauvais. In ſhort 'tis this, Fiacre travelled out of Ireland into France, and was entertained by S. Faro, Biſhop of Meaux, who gave him a Retirement in his Dioceſe at a Place call'd Breüil in Brie: And here the Biſhop built him a Chapel with an Hoſpital, where he received Strangers and Travellers, and died with a great Character for Piety A. D. 670. * Hildegardus Meldenſis. Fulcoius Bellocavenſis, apud Mabillon. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

FIERA (John Baptiſt), a Latin Poet of Mantua, born A. D. 1469: He has made himſelf known by ſeveral Tracts of Phyſick and Philoſophy, and ſeveral Poems mention'd in the Oxford Catalogue. He is reckoned a learned and judicious Poet as to his Matter, but his Manner is ſomewhat hard. His Poems have been tranſlated into ſeveral Languages, and ſome Criticks have made Commentaries upon them. He died A. D. 1538. * Jul. Cæſ. Scal. Hyper. critic. Poet. Lib. VI. cap. 4. Baillet, jugem. des ſav. ſur les Poëts modernes.

FIESCO, Fiſchia, or Phiſchio, formerly an Epiſcopal See, now only a Burrough in Natolia Proper. It lies North of the Iſland Rhodes, 45 Leagues from the Town Patera to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

FIGEN, a Town in Japan. 'Tis Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, and ſtands in the Iſland Saycot over againſt Firando. * Maty, Diction.

FIGERA, or Cap del Oro, formerly Caphareum Promontorium: 'tis the moſt Eaſtern Cape of the Iſle of Negropont, near the Iſlands Schiro and Undros. The Rocks round about it make the coming near it dangerous. Upon this Cape Nauplius, King of Negropont, ſet up a Lighthouſe: 'Twas to revenge the Death of his Son Palamedes, who had been falſely charged by Ulyſſes for holding Correſpondence with the Enemy. The Grecians in their Return from the Siege of Troy being battered with a Tempeſt, and fancying by the Signal of a Light, that the Haven was ſafe and commodious, put in thither, and had almoſt all their Fleet daſh'd in Pieces. * Baudrand.

FILESAC (John), a Pariſian, Doctor of Divinity of the Faculty at Paris, was a great Ornament to that Society; he died very old in 1636. with a great Reputation for Probity and Learning: He wrote a great many learned Tracts upon Eccleſiaſtical and other Subjects; for Inſtance a Diſcourſe of the ſacred Authority of Biſhops; a Diſcourſe concerning Lent; another concerning the Original of Pariſhes; of Auricular Confeſſion; of Idolatrous Magick; of Lay-Sacrilege; of Politick Idolatry, &c. There's a great deal of Eccleſiaſtical and ſecular Learning in Fileſac's Works: They are full of Citations, and almoſt all embroidered with borrow'd Sentences tack'd together with Reflections, but without much Order or Method. He moves from one Subject to another, blends ſacred with ſecular Matter, and makes frequent Digreſſions. There's much to be learned in Fileſac's Works, but they are not entertaining: His Stile is a little rough, and he ſometimes affects obſcure and unuſual Terms. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* FINCOMARCHUS, in Morery Vol. I. expunge the Article.

FINDA, the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name. 'Tis in the Country of Jetſengo in the Iſland Nipho, the chief Iſland in Japan. * Maty, Diction.

* FINDOCHUS, in Morery Vol. I. expunge the Article.

FINE, Porto Fine, a Town with a good Haven and Citadel: It belongs to the Republick of Genoa, and lies ſix Leagues from a Town of the ſame Name upon the Gulph of Rapallo, cloſe by the Cape of Porto Fine. * Maty, Diction.

FINGA, a Town in Ximo a Japanese Iſland. 'Tis the Capital of a ſmall Kingdom of the ſame Name in the South Eaſt Part of the Iſland. * Baudrand.

FINICHIA, a conſiderable Town upon the Southern Coaſt of the Iſland Candia. It ſtands in the Territory of Canea, five Leagues from the Town of that Name to the South. * Maty, Diction.

FINISTERRE (the Cape of), formerly called Nerium, Celticum, & Artabium Promontorium, a Cape in Galicia in Spain. This Cape runs fartheſt into the Weſtern Ocean, for which Reaſon they call it Finiſterre, that is the fartheſt Part of the Land. There's a Town upon this Cape of the ſame Name. * Baudrand.

FIRANDO, a Town and Kingdom in Japan. 'Tis in a little Iſland upon the North Weſt Coaſt of Ximo. * Maty, Diction.

FIRE (the), was worſhip'd by ſeveral of the Heathens as a Deity. The Alexandrian Chronicon relates that Nimrod, firſt King of the Aſſrians, and the ſame with Ninus, ordered the worſhipping of Fire. And in regard Ur was a famous Town in the Province of Babylon, and ſignifies Fire in Hebrew, it was commonly believ'd that the religious Regard paid to Fire had its Riſe in this Town. Eupolemus obſerves that 'twas reckoned the ſame Town with Camarina, deriv'd from the Hebrew Word Camar, which ſignifies to burn, or be on fire; and to fortify this Conjecture the Prieſts were call'd Camerin. The Jews, according to St. Hierom, fancy'd that this Text of Scripture, where Abraham is ſaid to go out of Ur of the Chaldeans, is to be expounded of a miraculous Deliverance out of the Fire, into which the Chaldeans had thrown this Patriarch, becauſe he refus'd to worſhip that Element. Lucan takes notice that the Chaldeans worſhip'd Fire. Herodotus obſerves that the Perſians worſhip'd the Fire as a Deity, and that for this Reaſon they never burn'd their dead Bodies, becauſe they would not feed their God with a Carcaſe.

'Tis probable the Chaldeans, the Perſians, and ſome other Eaſtern Nations worſhipping the Sun and the Stars, under the Notion of eternal Globes of Fire, might be deſirous to keep a ſymbolical Repreſentation of that perpetual Fire upon their Altars. And 'tis poſſible upon the Progreſs of Time that the ignorant People might mistake that Fire for their God. However, we must observe that there are but few Authors who directly assert that Fire was worship'd by the Chaldeans, or other ancient Eastern People. Julius Firmicus only relates that the Persians preferr'd Fire to the other Elements, and had it carried before them. Quintus Curtius takes notice that the Persians and the Magi kept Fire continually burning upon Silver Altars: But then they look'd upon it only as a Symbol of Jupiter, that is of the Sun. The Greeks and Romans were not so addicted to the Worship of the Stars as the Eastern Nations: However, they ador'd Vesta and Vulcan, one as the Culinary, and the other as the Elementary Fire: For they distinguish'd the Fire we make use of, from that in the Sky: Now Vesta represented the Earth, in the Center of which they believed a perpetual Fire. This is what Ovid relates in his Fasti. He likewise takes notice that a perpetual Fire was the only Image they had of Vesta; that being the best Representation they could make. That 'twas formerly the Custom to keep a Fire in the Porches call'd Vestibula; that they took their Refreshment in these Vestibula upon long Tables, where the Fire seem'd to make the Gods present to the Company.

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM

Esse diu stultus Vestæ Simulacra putavi.
Mox didici curvo nulla subesse tholo.
Ignis inextinctus templo celatur in illo,
Effigiem nullam Vesta nec Ignis habent.
Ante focos olim longis considere Scamnis
Mos erat & mensæ credere adesse Deos.
Ovid. Fast. Lib. VI. V. 295. & sequ.

The Vestal Virgins were not the only Persons trusted with keeping in the Fire; the Pontifex Maximus, even when that Dignity was in the Emperors, had the Guard of this Element. Thus we are inform'd by the same Poet, who gives a Reason for the Custom: The holy Fire, says he, is the same which Æneas brought from Troy as a promising Symbol that the Roman Empire should last for ever: For this Reason, the Emperors being descended from Æneas, and most interested in the Perpetuity of the Government, the keeping of the Fire was Part of their Charge. This perpetual Fire had the same Regard paid to it at Troy, as we may learn from Virgil, who brings in Hector's Ghost recommending the transporting of it to Æneas's Care:

Sacra suosque tibi commendat Troja Penates,
Hos cape Fatorum Comites———
Sic ait, & manibus vittas, Vestamque potentem,
Æternumque adytis effert penetralibus Ignem.
Virg. Æneid. Lib. II. V. 293. & Sequ.

'Tis possible 'twas in Imitation of the Israelites that other Nations had always Fire burning upon their Altars: For Moses, we know, receiv'd this Command from God Almighty. Some are of Opinion that Aaron's two Sons were punish'd with Death for letting the Fire of the Altar go out, and making use of that which was unhallow'd. The Vestals likewise, as Livy reports, were severely punish'd when they let their Goddess's Fire go out. The Romans had a strong Fancy that the Perpetuity of their Empire depended upon the Perpetuity of their Fire. Dionysius Halicarnassæus takes notice that Numa built Vesta a Temple at Rome, and appointed the Vestals for the Custody of the Fire, that there was but one Altar for this Purpose to acquaint the People that the same Fire being common to all, the whole Town was to be look'd upon as one Family: This was done to rectify Romulus's Appointment, who had multiply'd the Altars and religious Fires to the Number of the Curiæ or Wards in Rome. This Historian adds that Numa believed the Fire consecrated to Vesta, because Vesta being the Earth and Center of the World, 'tis by her Exhalations that the Stars are fed and repaired and kept continually burning. Plutarch and Pausanias observe that a perpetual Fire was kept at Delphi and at Athens, and that none but Widows, who were oblig'd not to marry, had the Custody of it.

Servius affirms that formerly they did not kindle the Fire upon the Altars, but fetch'd it from the Sky by the Prevalence of their Devotions; apud majores Aræ non incendebantur, sed Ignem divinum Precibus eliciebant. Diodorus Siculus relates that at the Death of the Kings of Persia, all the Fires were put out, and that they lighted them with Burning-Glasses, as Plutarch informs us, or by magical Operations, as Servius seems to hint. The Heathens are said to have nothing but Fire fetch'd from the Sky in their Temples, and that either kindled by Lightning, or Burning-Glasses; tho' Festus will have it that 'twas the Custom to bore a Piece of Wood 'till the Force of the Motion made it fly on Fire: Mos erat tabulam felicis materiæ tamdiu terebrare, quousque acceptum Ignem Virgo in ædem ferret.

* FIRMILIAN, Bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia in the III[d] Century, was a Friend of Origen's, who taught in his time at Cæsarea, as we are inform'd both by Origen and Gregory Nyssen in the Life of Gregory Thaumaturgus. Firmilian struck in with St. Cyprian in the Controversy about the rebaptizing those who had been baptiz'd by Hereticks. He wrote a Letter upon this Subject to St. Cyprian A. D. 256; where amongst other Arguments to justify this Practice, he cites a Decree of a Council held formerly in Iconium; from whence 'tis plain, that those who suppose this Council met the same Year that St. Cyprian wrote his Letter are quite mistaken. Firmilian presided in the Council of Antioch convened against Paulus Samosatenus A. D. 264. Paulus having promised to retract his Opinion, Firmilian was willing to believe him, and hoping to put an amicable End to this Dispute, thought it proper to defer the Sentence: But this Bishop of Samosata going on in his Heterodoxy, Firmilian was invited to a second Synod held at Antioch A. D. 269 or 270, in which Paulus was condemned: but Firmilian had no Vote in this Sentence, for he died at Tarsus upon his Journey to the Synod. St. Basil mentions some Tracts written by Firmilian. * Euseb. Lib. VI. Cap. 26 & 27. Lib. VII. Cap. 30. Epist. Cyprian. Ep. 74. Pearson. Annal. Cypr. Basil de Spirit. Sanct. Tillemont, Mem. pour l'Hist. Eccles. &c.

FIRMIUS CATUS, a Roman Senator, prosecuted his Friend Libo Drusus for high Treason against the Emperor Tiberius, where Libo sunk under the Charge. Afterwards Firmius was impeach'd of the same Crime, and a Sentence of Banishment passed against him by the Senate. But Tiberius recollecting the Service he had done him against Libo, punish'd no farther than by throwing him out of the Senate House. * Tacit. Annal. 2. 17. & 4. 41.

* FISHER (John): For a farther Account of this Bishop's Life, see Collier's Ecclesiastical History Vol. II.

FISHING. See Pescherie.

FIVELINGO, a Country of the Ommelands, within the Seignory of Groninghen one of the united Provinces. The Fivelingo is bounded by the Hunsingo, by the Territory of Groninghen, by the Old-Ampt, by the Mouth of the Embs, and by a small Part of the German Sea. The little Town of Dam, and the Fort of Delfziil are the chief Places in it. * Maty, Diction.

FIUM, el Fium, or Abutich, a Town in the middle Division of Egypt. 'Tis the Capital of a Government of the same Name, which lies to the West of the River Nile, between the Precincts of Giza and Ebensuef. Fium, which stands upon the Nile twelve Leagues above Grand Caire, has been famous in Antiquity for Osiris's Tomb. There's another Town of the same Name in upper Egypt; It stands upon the Nile forty Leagues higher than that first mention'd. * Baudrand.

* FLAGELLANTES: The Sect of the Flagellantes or Whippers was only well meant Indiscretion and Zeal push'd too far at the first, but was afterwards attended with unhappy Consequences. This odd Discipline began at Perugia about the Year 1260, where a great many Men of all Ages march'd two and two in Procession with their Backs stript, and lashing themselves publickly 'till the Blood came: And all this to move God Almighty to Pardon. These Processions had Priests at the Head of 'em, who carried the Cross, and the Body was made up of People of all Ranks and Degrees. The Women likewise privately in their Houses treated themselves with the same rough Usage. When this Pennance was first set on Foot, Reconciliations, Restitutions, and Works of Charity follow'd upon't.

This Custom in a short Time spread through Italy into Germany, and People being naturally inclin'd to over-value their own Practice, some of these Flagellan-

tes

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM

tes maintain'd in their Sermons that Remiſſion of Sins would not be obtained without this Condition. The Biſhops and Civil Governments, foreſeeing the Abuſes and Diſorders likely to be conſequent upon this ſuperſtitious Fancy, appear'd againſt it and check'd it for ſome time. But in the next Century it broke out again with more Fire and Folly; particularly in Germany and Hungary: Here an Impoſtor ſtarted up, and publickly declar'd that an Angel had brought him a Letter from Heaven, promiſing that thoſe, who laſh'd themſelves four and thirty Days, ſhould have all their Sins pardon'd. They admitted none into their Society but ſuch as were able to maintain themſelves; they oblig'd 'em, as a preliminary Condition, to confeſs their Sins, and pardon their Enemies; and if they were married they were oblig'd to prove that they had their Wives Conſent for engaging in this Diſcipline. At length they carried their Singularities to the laſt Exceſſes, rais'd Seditions, maſſacred the Jews, plundered the Laity, and committed a great many other Crimes.

King Philip de Valois, by the Advice of the Divines in Paris, ſtopt their coming into his Dominions: Theſe Divines acquainted his Majeſty that the Practice of this new Sect was contrary to the Law of God, to the Uſages of the Church, and dangerous to the Peoples Souls. Theſe Paris Divines likewiſe gave Pope Clement VI. notice of this Frenzy; upon which his Holineſs condemn'd all Sort of publick whipping; which Cenſure was very ſeaſonably paſs'd, conſidering the many of theſe Flagellantes encourag'd by ſome craz'd Prieſts and Monks, were ſo extravagant as to affirm that the Blood they drew by their Diſcipline was mingled with our Saviour's, with ſeveral other Heterodox and profane Whimſies. This is the Account Gulielmus de Nangis gives of 'em at the Year 1349, when this Sect reviv'd with Improvements in Frenzy upon the Occaſion of a great Mortality that then happen'd. * Sigonius Lib. XIX. de Regno Ital. Spondan, Annal. &c.

FLAHERTI or Fraherti (Roderic); an Iriſh Gentleman, publiſh'd chronological Memoirs concerning the Antiquities of the Kingdom of Ireland. This Work was printed at London A.D. 1685, and entitled, Ogygia, ſeu rerum Hibernicarum Chronologia, ex pervetuſtis monumentis fideliter inter ſe collatis eruta, atque è ſacris & profanis literis primarum Orbis Gentium tam Genealogicis quam Chronologicis ſuffulta præſidiis: He made his Dedication to the Duke of York, afterwards King James II. This Book begins immediately after Noah's Flood, and is divided into three Parts: The firſt Part diſcourſes of Ireland, of its Inhabitants, of the different Names it has gone by, of the Kings of the Iſland, and the Manner of electing them. The ſecond Part is a Sort of Chronological Parallel of the moſt conſiderable Occurrences in Ireland, compar'd with what was remarkable in other Countries at the ſame time. The third Part is ſpent in a large Narrative of what happened particularly in Ireland. There's likewiſe a Chronological Table annex'd of all the Chriſtian Kings of Ireland from A. D. 428. to 1022: From which Period there is farther ſubjoin'd an abridg'd Relation of the moſt material Events and Hiſtorical Matter which came up in this Iſland; which Account is continued 'till the Year 1684. At the End of the Book, which is a Quarto of about 600 Pages, there's a Chronological Poem, which gives a very particular Narrative of the Hiſtory of Ireland to the Reign of Charles II. at the End of which there's a long Catalogue of the Scotch Kings, which many of 'em, that ſtand foremoſt in the Liſt, may more properly be call'd Iriſh.

The Author ſeems to have cleared up a great many Parts of old Hiſtory: He goes deep in his Reſearches: He has taken a great deal of Pains in examining the Genealogy of the Royal Family of the Stuarts, which he makes to be originally Iriſh. As to his Stile, 'tis ſomewhat too affected, and Laconick for an Hiſtorian. * Memoires du Tems.

FLAMINIUS (Anthony); a learned Profeſſor of the Belles Lettres in a College at Rome in the Beginning of the XVI^th^ Century. He lov'd Solitude to that Degree, that he declin'd converſing with all Sorts of People both learned and unlearned. He never invited any Perſon, nor would accept any Invitation himſelf. He liv'd without any Servant; he bought what he eat every Day at a neighbouring Eating-Houſe. The Man of the Houſe perceiving that he had fetch'd nothing in three Days, and that he had not ſeen him, got into his Chamber through a Window in the Garden, and found him dead among his Books. He us'd to lay upon the Ground and ſtudy. He had taught a great while in Rome with the Character of an extraordinary learned Perſon. * Pierius Valerianus de Literatorum Infelicitate, Lib. I.

FLAVIUS (Sylla), ſucceeded Baſſus, who was the laſt Governor of Judea. He took the Fort of Maſſada the only unreduc'd Place in that Province. This good Fortune of his was owing to the Deſpair of the beſieged; who having no Expectation of Relief cut one another's Throats, as the Reader may ſee under the Article Eleazar. But an old Woman and a Couſin of Eleazar's not going ſo far in Deſperation, hid themſelves in the Aqueducts, while the Garriſon was murdering each other, and coming out the next Day related what happened to Flavius. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. VIII. Cap. 30.

FLECHIER (Eſprit), Biſhop of Nimes, was born at Pernes, a Town in the County Venaiſſin near Avignon. He was Nephew to Father Hercules Daudifret, General of the Congregation of the Fathers de la Doctrine Chrétienne. He was bred in this Congregation, and made a great Proficiency in Learning; upon his leaving this Society, and coming into the World, he acquitted himſelf with great Commendation, and became famous by his Panegyricks upon the Saints, and his Funeral Orations nobly written, and with great Delicacy and Elocution. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Emperor Theodoſius for the Dauphin, and that of Cardinal Ximenes. M. Flechier turn'd the Life of Cardinal Commendon into French: This Verſion was look'd on as a Maſterpiece in Tranſlation: He was choſen one of the forty of the French Academy in the Year 1673, in the Place of the famous Godeau, Biſhop of Vence. He was nominated Biſhop of Lavaur, A. D. 1685. and tranſlated to the See of Nimes, A. D. 1687. His Funeral Orations and Panegyricks, together with his Hiſtories of Theodoſius the Great and the Cardinals Commendon and Ximenes, were printed in his Life time, and ſo were ſome of his Paſtoral Letters. He likewiſe wrote ſomething in Poetry; for Inſtance, an excellent Latin Poem upon the Carrouſel or Tilting, and a Complaint of France againſt Rome for inſulting her Ambaſſador. To which we may add another Poem of his upon Quietiſm: 'Tis thrown into the Form of a Dialogue, and explains the myſterious Singularities of that Sect with great Perſpicuity. He was generally belov'd in his Dioceſe by People of all Conditions and Perſuaſions, by Roman Catholicks and Hugonots, not excepting Fanaticks. He was a very charitable Prelate, and ſupply'd the Hoſpital of Nimes with conſiderable Relief when Corn was dear. He left above twenty thouſand Crowns at his Death to the Poor. He died in 1710, 78 Years of Age. 'Tis generally agreed he had one of the beſt Pens for Panegyrick and Funeral Orations. Thoſe written by him for Madam d'Aiguillon and Marſhal Turenne are Originals for Excellency. His Inſtructions and Paſtoral Letters are very moving, and written with a ſtrong air of Piety and Concern. * Memoires du Tems.

FLEURY (Claude), was born at Paris December 1640. His Father was an Advocate, and of a Family in Normandy: Fleury the Son was call'd to the Bar for the Parliament at Paris, A. D. 1658. He practis'd the Law nine Years, and afterwards took Prieſt's Orders: And in 1672 was made Preceptor to the Princes of Conty. In the Year 1680 he had the Care of the Education of the Count de Vermandois, Admiral of France: After the Death of this Prince the King preferr'd him to the Abby of Loc-Dieu, belonging to the Ciſtercians, and in the Dioceſe of Rhodes. In the Year 1689. the King made him Sub-Preceptor to the Dukes of Burgundy, Anjou, and Berry, his Majeſty's Grand Children. In the Year 1696. he was admitted a Member of the French Academy. In 1706, when the Education of the three Princes was finiſh'd, the King gave him the Priory of Argenteüil belonging to the Benedictines in the Dioceſe of Paris, upon which Promotion he reſign'd the Abby of Loc-Dieu.

In the Year 1674. he printed the Hiſtory (but without ſetting his Name to it), Du droit François, or, The French Law; which was afterwards prefix'd to the Inof the French Law, written by M. Argoud Advocate to the Parliament. In the Year 1681 he publiſh'd his Tract, entitled, Les Moeures des Iſraelites, which is a good Introduction for underſtanding the old Teſtament: Afterwards his Book, call'd, Les Moeures des Chrétiens came out, or, The Manners of the Chriſtians, in which he gives a Repreſentation how the primitive Chriſtians liv'd.

In 1683. he publiſh'd his hiſtorical Catechiſm to inſtruct the leſs knowing of his Communion in the Principles of their Religion. This Book at the Inſtance of a Curè in the Dioceſe of Malines was tranſlated into Latin, and printed at Bruſſels. In 1684. he wrote the Life of Madam d'Arbouze, who reform'd the Abby of Valde Grace. In the Year 1686. he printed his Tract for the Method of Study, and the next Year the Inſtitutes of the Eccleſiaſtical or Canon Law, where he explains the Church Regulations for Diſcipline with Reference to the preſent Uſages of France. In the Year 1688 he publiſh'd Les Devoires des Domeſtiques, or, The Duty of Domeſticks: And laſtly, he undertook the writing of a Body of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory from the Beginning of Chriſtianity, to the preſent time, the firſt Volume was printed in 1690. 'Tis ſince enlarg'd to XVII Volumes: And the laſt Volume printed in 1713. ends at the Year 1260. Beſides the general Preface, there are three Diſcourſes prefix'd containing his Reflections upon the Subject; and over and above, his four Diſcourſes upon Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory are printed by themſelves in a ſmall Volume. M. Fleury pitch'd at firſt upon a Method of Study not only proper to diſtinguiſh Truth from Falſhood, but likewiſe uſeful and ſolid Knowledge from that which is trifling and inſignificant. He liv'd at Court like a Perſon retir'd, concerning himſelf with nothing but his Buſineſs and his Study. He was never ambitious either of Wealth or Diſtinctions, but ſatisfy'd himſelf in ſpending his Time in publick Service. * M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

FLEURMONT, or Blumberg, a Town fortified with a Caſtle. 'Tis within the Diviſion of Sungau in Alſatia between Forrette and Montbelliard, about four Leagues from each. * Maty, Diction.

FLIX, a fortify'd Town in Catalonia in Spain: It ſtands upon the Ebro between the Towns Tortoſa and Mequinanſa, ten Leagues from the firſt, and ſix from the latter. Some Geographers make it the old Ibera or Hibera, which others will have the ſame with Tortoſa. * Baudrand.

FLORENT (Francis), of Arneduc in Burgundy, practiſed firſt at the Bar at Dijom; and was afterwards Law Profeſſor at Orleans, from whence he remov'd to Paris, and had the Chair in the ſame Profeſſion. He is one of thoſe who reach'd fartheſt into the Origin and Principles of the Canon Law. He wrote Canonical Diſſertations and Commentaries upon ſome Titles of the Decretals, and ſhort Remarks upon the Paratitles of Alexander de la Chaſſaigne's Canon Law. Doujat reprinted all his Works at Paris in two Volumes Quarto. Florent died A. D. 1650. * Memoires du Tems. Denys Simon, Biblioth. Hiſt. des Aut. de Droit.

* FLORINUS, an Heretick of the ſecond Century, who with Blaſtus his Companion, publiſh'd his Heterodoxy at Rome. Notwithſtanding they were both excommunicated by Pope Victor, a great many People gave in to their Miſperſuaſion. Beſides his making God the Author of Evil, he is ſaid to have been a Libertine in his Practice, and to have deny'd the Article of the Reſurrection. St. Irenæus went to Rome, engag'd Florinus in a Conference, and afterwards confuted his Hereſy of making God the Author of Sin, in an Epiſtle de Monarchia: In this Diſcourſe he puts him in Mind of their having both ſtudied under St. Polycarp, and that their Maſter taught 'em no ſuch ſcandalous Doctrine. Florinus afterwards went over to the Valentinians. * Euſeb. Lib. V. Cap. 14. & 19. Iren. Lib. III. Theodoret. Her. Fab. Lib. I. Auguſtin de Hæreſ. Cap. 69.

* FLORUS, a Deacon of the Chruch of Lyons ſirnamed Magiſter, liv'd in the IX^th^ Century. In the Year 837. he aſſiſted at the Council of Kierſi. In the Year 852. he was pitch'd upon by the Church of Lyons to write againſt Scotus Erigena upon the Subject of Predeſtination: In this Diſcourſe he maintains two Predeſtinations, as he thinks they may be call'd; one of the Elect to Grace and Glory, and another of the Reprobates to Damnation in Conſequence of their voluntary Misbehaviour. Beſides this Tract and another Diſcourſe upon Predeſtination, he wrote a Commentary upon all St. Paul's Epiſtles, extracted from fourteen Latin Fathers; and another Commentary upon the ſame Epiſtles form'd upon St. Auguſtin: This latter Tract is printed in Bede's Works, and goes under the Name of that Author. He likewiſe wrote a Collection of Eccleſiaſtical Laws, ſome Fragments of which are preſery'd by Dacherius and Baluzius. Thoſe publiſh'd by Dacherius take in the Laws and Canons made againſt the Jews, and are inſerted in the XII^th^ Tome of his Spicilegium: His Remains, touching the Election of Biſhops, are at the End of Agobardus's Works. The Poems which go under the Name of Drepanius Florus belong to this learned Deacon, and ſo do ſome others publiſh'd by Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Analecta. The Martyrology, which goes under the Name of Florus, was likewiſe probably written by him, in regard Vandalbert, who wrote his Martyrology about the Year 850, makes uſe of it. However ſome are of Opinion that the Author of the Martyrology is older by a whole Century; but this is only a conjectural Aſſertion. His Diſcourſe on Predeſtination is in Hincmar's Works; and his Tract againſt John Scotus Erigena is publiſh'd by M. Maugin. * Sigebert, de Script. Eccleſ. Cap. 49. Matthew Weſtminſter ad An. 883. De Marca, Lib. VIII. de Concord. Sacerd. & Imper. Cap. 14. Baron, Annal. Baluz. in Præfat. & Not. ad Agobard, &c.

FLOTE (Peter), a hot, covetous, one-ey'd and ill ſhap'd Fellow, wrought the Flanderkins to a Revolt A. D. 1302: And thus theſe People, who could not bear Taxes and hard Uſage, diſengag'd themſelves from the Crown of France, to which they were Subjects before. * Mezeray.

FOIA, Nova Foglia or Fochia, in Latin Foria Nova, formerly Cumæ, an old Town in Aſia Minor: 'Twas an Epiſcopal See, Suffragan to Epheſus. 'Tis now in Natolia Proper upon the Gulph of Smirna, twelve Leagues from Smirna to the North. This Town has a good Haven and a ſtrong Citadel, which make it ſtill conſiderable. * Baudrand.

FONGE or Fongiah, a People ſettled between Nubia and Æthiopia on each ſide the River Nile. Their Country commonly goes by the Name of Bagiah and Reggiat: Their Neighbours know 'em only by their Incurſions and Thievery, for they have little Subſiſtence at Home. The Baſſhaw or Bey of Girge in the upper Egypt is frequently oblig'd to ſend out Parties after them, to cover his Frontiers from being pillag'd. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Oriental.

FONING, a great City within the Province of Fochien in China, has a great many Towns and Burroughs in its Precincts. The Chriſtians have a Church in the Town Tingteu ſupply'd by the Dominicans. The Mountain Taleo is ſomewhat remarkable, for in Autumn a Brook of blew Water iſſues from it, and ſerves for dying Stuffs of that Colour. Martin Martini, Deſcription of China in Thevenot's Travels, Vol. III.

FONTAINE (John de la), was born at Château-Thierry A. D. 1621. His Father, who had the overſeeing the Water Courſes and Foreſts of this Duchy, put his Son into the Place as ſoon as he was capable of managing it. But 'twas meer Compliance which made him engage, for he had no Reliſh for this Buſineſs. His Genius lay clearly for Poetry, and nothing elſe would go down with him. His Fancy ſtood for imitating Rabelais and Marot. His Talent was not at all inferior to either of theſe Authors. His Compoſitions have a great deal of Nature without Affectation: His Wit ſeems unſtudied, and ſo much Pleaſantry is hardly to be met with elſewhere: He never grows languid and heavy, but is always new and ſurprizing. Theſe are nice Qualities, and might have prov'd ſhocking, but it ſeems he had the good Luck to pleaſe every Body. He was Entertainment to all Tempers and Conditions, to the ſerious and pleaſant, to Gentlemen and Ladies, to old Men, and even to Children. No Body had ever a better Claim to paſs for an Original. He not only invented a different Kind of Poetry, but carried it to Perfection. He was at little Expence in giving Diverſion, for his Wit flow'd naturally, he did but in a Manner expreſs his own Thoughts, and paint himſelf: His Life had as little Affectation as his Poems: He always ſpoke his Thoughts,

Thoughts, and did what he had a mind to: He was likewiſe remarkably affable and unpretending, but without the Appearance of much Religion or Regularity, 'till his laſt Sickneſs, in which his Conſcience was awaken'd, and made him die like a Chriſtian in earneſt. He wrote ſome little Heroick Poems, where he reach'd the Thoughts and Expreſſion happily enough to have raiſed his Reputation; but he is moſt admir'd for his Poetry of the Comick Kind. His Æſop's Fables tranſlated, and ſometimes paraphras'd, are his Maſterpiece. He has enrich'd Æſop with ſo much Ornament from his own Invention, ſo proper to the Subject, ſo judicious and entertaining, that 'tis hard to find a Book of Pagan Extraction with more Profit and Pleaſure in't. And tho' he did not invent the Fables, he choſe the beſt, and generally improv'd 'em. His Contes or Stories, which are moſtly little Novels in Verſe, are not without Spirit, but then they are generally looſe and licentious; And therefore the Author makes a poor Defence by ſaying,

Chaſſez les Soupirans, Belles, prenez mon Livre,
Ie répons de vous Corps pour Corps.

For 'tis certain this Poem can't be read without a great deal of Danger; for when the Imagination is tinctured with theſe Ideas, People will be more diſpos'd to yield to Solicitation than repel the Attack. 'Tis ſaid this Book kept him a great while from being admitted a Member of the French Academy; but at laſt upon his writing a Letter to a Prelate of that Society, where he declar'd his Diſſatisfaction for the Liberties he had taken, and his Reſolution that his Pen ſhould never relapſe, he was receiv'd into that Body with Marks of Eſteem. He died at Paris A. D. 1695, 74 Years of Age. His firſt Fables are more valued than his laſt: He ſeems to have thrown the beſt of his Fire and Force into 'em; and both one and the other have more Sobriety and Correctneſs than his Stories. The Prologues ſtanding at the Head of each Book of his Fables are commonly of the ſublime Kind, and give a peculiar and moving Entertainment. He repented the writing his Stories, and ſeems to have renounc'd that libertine Manner in a Dedication to his Patroneſs M. la Marquiſſe de la Sabliere: But notwithſtanding theſe Proteſtations he ran Riot again. He makes an Excuſe for this more like a Poet than a Chriſtian, and calls himſelf the Butterfly of Parnaſſus, upon the Score of his Inconſtancy, and his fluttering from one Reſolve and Practice to another. * Perrault, les Hommes Illuſtres, qui ont paru en France. Baillet, jugement des ſavans ſur les Poëtes François modernes. Memoires Hiſtor.

FONTAINBLEAU (the Conference at); Philip du Pleſſis Mornay, one of the Heads of the Hugonot Party, wrote a Book againſt the Maſs, in which he collected above four thouſand Paſſages out of the Fathers, which he pretended contradicted the Belief and Practice of the Church of Rome. James Davy du Perron, Biſhop of Evreux, and afterwards Cardinal, peruſing this Tract, gave out that he was ready to ſhew five hundred Citations miſreported, falſify'd, dockt and chang'd. Du Pleſſis's Friends were diſturb'd at this Challenge, and adviſed him to return an Anſwer in Writing: But this Gentleman relying upon the Honeſty and Skill of thoſe who read for him, and furniſh'd him with Matter, ſent Perron a publick Summons to meet him, and join in an Addreſs to the King, that they might have Commiſſioners aſſign'd them to examine the Paſſages conteſted. Perron accepting the Offer, the King gave 'em Commiſſioners for this Purpoſe. Thoſe for the Roman Catholicks were the Preſident Thuanus, Franciſcus Pythœus, and one Martin the King's Phyſician; the Hugonot Commiſſioners were Philip Canaye, Lord du Freſne, and Preſident of the Chamber Miparty of Caſtres, who came in the Room of Calignon, Chancellor of Navarre, and Iſaac Caſaubon, the King's Greek Profeſſor. The 4th of May, A. D. 1600. was fix'd for the Conference. 'Twas agreed by the Commiſſioners that the Biſhop of Evreux ſhould bring in 50 Articles every Day during the Conference. He ſent the Sieur du Pleſſis 60 for the firſt Day; but du Pleſſis declar'd the next Day, that he had only time to examine 19 of 'em, which he was ready to defend. The Conference began the 4th of May according to Appointment. King Henry IV., M. the Chancellor, a great many Princes, Prelates, Lords, and Proteſtant Miniſters being preſent. Each Party had their Secretaries to write down what paſſed. M. the Chancellor open'd the Conference with a Speech, in which he declar'd that they did not come together to enter upon a Debate concerning the Doctrine and Condition of Religion; that his Majeſty would not ſuffer any Thing of this Kind to be diſputed without his Holineſs the Pope's Leave: Their Buſineſs therefore was to defend or diſprove the Paſſages cited by du Pleſſis in his controverſial Books: The King agreed to what the Chancellor deliver'd. By the Way, this Precaution was taken becauſe the Pope's Nuntio had excepted againſt the holding of this Conference, and Perron had much ado to gain his Conſent, tho' upon this Condition. After Perron and du Pleſſis had each of 'em made a preliminary Harangue, they came on to diſcuſs the 19 Paſſages; and it ſeems the Day was ſpent in examining 9 of 'em: And in all theſe Articles the Commiſſioners declar'd in Favour of Perron againſt du Pleſſis.

For the two Paſſages cited from Johannes Scotus and Durandus upon the Subject of the holy Euchariſt, the Judges declar'd that du Pleſſis had miſtaken an Objection for a Solution. Upon the third and fourth Paſſage cited from S. Chryſoſtom, and the fifth from St. Hierom, touching the Invocation of Saints, he had omitted ſome Words that altered the Senſe. The ſixth Quotation from St. Cyril touching the worſhipping the Croſs, was not in that Father's Works: And ſo neither was the ſeventh in the Conſtitution of the Emperors Theodoſius and Valentinian. Du Pleſſis cited Crinitus for it, but yet the Paſſage could not be found. Upon the eighth 'twas proved that the two Paſſages in St. Bernard relating to the bleſſed Virgin were thrown into one, to alter the Senſe: And laſtly, the Citation drawn from Theodoret prov'd unſerviceable; for here, as 'tis ſaid, du Pleſſis alledg'd a Paſſage pointed againſt Pagan Idolatry, to make it bear againſt the Images of the Chriſtians. The Night put an End to the Diſpute, which Perron deſir'd might be continu'd the next Day: But his Adverſary, it ſeems, affected with the Diſgrace, fell ill, withdrew to Paris, and from thence to Saumur without taking Leave of the King; and du Freſne Canaye turn'd Roman Catholick: However, 'twas not long before du Pleſſis recover'd his Spirits, cry'd Victory, and printed a Pamplet, entitled, A true Relation of the Conference at Fontainebleau: In which (as the French Supplementor continues) he not only diſguiſed the Matter of Fact, but diſputed the Paſſages examin'd over again, adding ſome Imputations of unfair Play; and endeavoured to ſhew that Gratian and the Biſhop of Evreux had miſcited ſome Paſſages. Perron immediately publiſh'd a Confutation of this Narrative, and reply'd to the Objection of Miſ-quotation: And the Chancellor, as 'tis ſaid, by his Majeſty's Order ſet forth a Declaration of the whole Proceedings of the Conference. However, the Hugonots complain'd of Miſrepreſentation; the Particulars may be ſeen in du Pleſſis's Life. * Spondanus Annal. A. D. 1600. Mezeray, Hiſtory of France. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

FORBES (William), Biſhop of Edinburgh in the XVIIth Century: He was born at Aberdeen in Scotland: He ſtudied in this Univerſity, commenc'd Maſter of Arts at ſixteen Years of Age, and was afterwards Logick Profeſſor: He held cloſe to what Ariſtotle wrote upon this Subject, and was a warm Diſputant againſt Ramus. He travelled into Holland and Germany, and made a great Proficiency in Divinity and Hebrew. He came afterwards into England, where the Univerſity of Oxford offer'd him the Hebrew Profeſſor's Chair: But his Health not allowing him to accept, he return'd to Aberdeen, where he was Divinity Profeſſor, and afterwards choſen Paſtor at Edinburgh; but his taking part with the Biſhops againſt the Presbyterians made him unacceptable to his Pariſhioners, inſomuch that he was oblig'd to withdraw. When King Charles I. erected an Epiſcopal See at Edinburgh, Forbes was made Biſhop there, and conſecrated with the cuſtomary Ceremonies. He dy'd the next Year 49 Years old. He was a Perſon of good Learning, and had a Regard for the ancient Practice of the Church, as appears by his Book, entitled, Conſiderationes modeſtæ & pacificæ Controverſiarum de Juſtificatione, Purgatorio, Chriſto Mediatore & Euchariſtia. This Work was printed after his Death in 1658.

He

He maintained the Arminian Tenets, and attack'd the Deciſions of the Synod at Dort. * Forbes's Life prefixed to his Book. Burnet's Life of Biſhop Bedell.

FORBIN (Touſſaint de), Cardinal de Janſon, made himſelf famous to the preſent Age by the publick Service done by him to the Kingdom of France. He was third Son to Gaſpard II. Marquiſs of Janſon by Claire de Libertat his ſecond Lady. He was made Knight of Malta in his Infancy; but afterwards going into the Church he was conſecrated Biſhop of Digne A. D. 1658, and ten Years after tranſlated to the See of Marſeilles. This laſt Poſt put him into the Condition to preſide frequently in the Aſſembly of the States of the Province, and to ſhew his Zeal there for the King's Service, but without diſobliging the Intereſt of the Subject. Lewis the Great diſcovering M. de Janſon's ſingular Talent for managing Peoples Tempers, after having firſt employ'd him in a publick Character to the great Duke of Tuſcany, ſent him Ambaſſador Extraordinary to Poland, A. D. 1673. And here by his Prudence and Addreſs he diſappointed the Attempts of thoſe foreign Miniſters who endeavoured to break his Negotiation; and at laſt had the Honour to compaſs the Election of the famous John Sobieski, Great Marſhal, or Crown General. This Monarch at his Acceſſion to the Throne thought himſelf oblig'd to acknowledge Janſon's Service, and with the French King's Conſent recommended him to the Pope for a Cardinal. The Biſhoprick of Beauvais, which makes the Biſhop a Count and Peer of France, falling void in the Year 1679, the King preferr'd him to it. And his Majeſty being ſenſible how acceptable this Prelate was at the Poliſh Court, ſent him thither the Year after with his former Character of Ambaſſador Extraordinary, charging him to tranſact Buſineſs as he went along with the German Princes. He made him Commander of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt, A. D. 1689, and the next Year Pope Alexander VIII. gave him a Cardinal's Cap. And now the King ſent him to negotiate with this Pope upon the Buſineſs of the Bulls for the French Biſhops: Theſe Inſtruments had been refus'd for ſome Years upon the Score of what paſs'd at the Aſſembly of the Clergy A. D. 1682, in which they made a Declaration upon the Subject of Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal Power, which diſguſted the Court of Rome; but the Death of this Pope happening in 1691. prevented the Diſpatch of that Affair. The Cardinal de Janſon reviv'd the Negotiation with Pope Innocent XII, and had the Satisfaction to bring it to an happy Iſſue A. D 1693. His Eminence continu'd his Embaſſy to the Death of this Pope, and afterwards had a great Share in bringing his preſent Holineſs Clement XI. to the Chair A. D. 1700. And having ſerv'd the King with great Conduct and Fidelity in Affairs of the niceſt Complexion, he made him great Almoner of France in the Year 1706. And notwithſtanding this Cardinal had quitted the Order of Malta upon his turning Eccleſiaſtick, he went into it again by a Privilege peculiar to Cardinals. The reaſſuming this Diſtinction was confirm'd by the Pope's Brief, and he was declar'd Commander of St. John d'Avignon, and would of Courſe have been one of the Grand Priors of the Obedience of Provence. He died at Paris A. D. 1713.

FORBIN (Francis, Touiſſaint de), Son of Lawrence, Marquiſs de Janſon by Genevieve de Briançon de la Saludie, was born February 1655. This Gentleman, when 20 Years of Age, happening to kill a Man in a Duel, withdrew into Germany, took Service in the Emperor's Army, was at the raiſing the Siege at Vienna, at the taking of Buda, and at the routing the Ottoman Troops. Upon the breaking out of a War between France and the Empire, he came into France diſguis'd, and took the Name of Count de Roſemberg. The King knowing him a Perſon of Loyalty and Courage, winked at his Return, and notwithſtanding he would not permit him to appear at Court, he gave him a Major's Commiſſion. He was wounded at the Battle of Marſal in October 1693, where he remain'd among the dead a conſiderable Time: At laſt ſome Soldiers of his Regiment finding him in this Condition, convey'd him to the Jeſuit's Houſe at Pignerol, where a Father of that Society making an Impreſſion upon his Conſcience, he ſolemnly engag'd to retire to the Abby la Trape in Caſe he recover'd. After the Peace between France and the Confederacy, he quitted his Employment, but thought little upon performing his Vow, 'till he fell into a ſevere Diſtemper. This Affliction refreſhing his Memory, he went to la Trape as ſoon as he had recovered his Strength, where he took the Habit December the 7th 1702, under the Name of Fryar Arſenne, and was profeſſed on the ſame Day in December the Year following. In the latter End of the Year 1704. the Great Duke of Tuſcany deſiring the Abbot of la Trape to ſend him ſome of his Convent to reſtore the ancient Ciſtercian Diſcipline in the Abby of Buon-Solazzo at the Foot of Mount Senario, Fryar Arſenne was drawn out with 14 or 15 more belonging to la Trape for this Purpoſe. They ſet out in the middle of Winter and came to Marſeilles, where Arſenne refuſed to ſee his Mother, tho' ſhe earneſtly deſir'd it. From hence they went to Piſa, where being well receiv'd by the Duke of Florence, they went forward to the Solitude of Buon-Solazzo. Here he was viſited by his Uncle the Cardinal de Janſon, who was very much affected with his religious Diſcourſe. He afterwards fell into a long Sickneſs in which he refuſed to be diſpenſed with in any Part of Diſcipline or Diet. He died in June 1710. with a very great Character for Piety and Mortification. * Relation of the Life and Death of Fryar Arſenne tranſlated from Italian into French.

FORE, or Vooren, an Iſland in the German Sea. 'Tis ſituate upon the Weſtern Coaſt of the Dutchy of Sleſwick, between the Iſlands Norſtrant and Sylt. This Iſland notwithſtanding its Smallneſs has two Sovereigns. The Weſtern Part of it belongs to the King of Denmark, and the Eaſtern to the Duke of Holſtein Gottorp. * Baudrand.

* FORMOSUS: For John X. in Morery Vol. I. read John IX.

FOX (George), Founder and Head of the Sect of the Engliſh Quakers. He was born at Drayton a Village in Leiceſterſhire. His Education was ſuitable to his Birth: His Trade was a Shoe-Maker which he follow'd a great while in Nottingham. Here he ſtudied the Scripture, and could quote a great many Texts, but miſtook lamentably in the Meaning and Application. At laſt, being a melancholy conceited Fellow, he fancied himſelf inſpired. His Reflections upon the Degeneracy of Mankind made him reſolve to attempt a Reformation. Thus believing himſelf under the Advantage of Illumination he ſhut up his Shop, and turn'd Preacher. His Doctrine and Appearance being altogether new, the Mob ran after him in great Numbers. This Succeſs encourag'd him to declaim with the utmoſt Vehemence againſt the Diſorders of the Time, and to give out that he wrought Miracles as a Return to his Prayers. His Diſciples affected Plainneſs in their Habit, were frugal in their Manner of Living, and reſerv'd in their Converſation. This demure Outſide, tho' admir'd by the Vulgar, was ſuſpected by thoſe who thought farther. Fox had ſeveral rough Traverſes in executing the Inſtructions he pretended to receive from Heaven. He was ſeveral times impriſon'd for diſturbing Congregations, falling foul upon the Preacher in the Pulpit, and ran the Hazard more than once of being knockt on the Head for his Enthuſiaſm. Cromwell had him ſeiz'd, and forbad his Followers holding forth.

Margaret Fell, Fox's Wife, had a Share in his miniſterial Functions and help'd to propagate his Deluſions. He began his Sect A. D. 1650. * Gerardi Crœzii Hiſtoria Quakeriana. Snake of the Graſs. See Morery Vol. II. Article Quakers.

FRACASTORIUS: For Paul III. read Paul IV. in Morery Vol. I.

FRANKENDAL, was formerly but an Abby, where a Conference was held between the Reform'd and the Anabaptiſts: They met by the Authority of the Elector Palatine Frederic III. ſirnam'd the Pious, in the Year 1571. Afterwards this Place was a Shelter for thoſe who were driven out of the low Countries A. D. 1574. At laſt, there was a well fortified Town built there: It ſtands in the lower Palatinate leſs than a League from the Rhine, 4 Leagues from Heidelberg to the Weſt, and at the ſame Diſtance from Spire to the North. 'Twas afterwards taken by the Spaniards and return'd to the Elector Palatine by the Treaty of Munſter. But in 1688. 'twas taken by the French and quite demoliſh'd the next Year. The Elector rebuilt it after the Peace at Reſwyck; but it has ſince ſuffered a great deal deal by the War that broke out afterwards between France and the Empire. * Memoires du Tems.

* FRANCIS D'ASSISE (Saint), Founder of the Order of the Franciſcans; reſolving to go into Syria to preach Chriſtianity took his Journey by the Way of Rome to obtain the Pope's Leave: He had his Requeſt of his Holineſs, and ſettled a Convent of his Order there, as he had done at ſeveral Places in Italy. He embark'd for Syria, but was forc'd by a Storm upon the Coaſts of Sclavonia, from whence he return'd into Italy, where he fell ſick. Upon his Recovery he ſet forward for Spain, intending to paſs from thence into Africk. He was well receiv'd in France and Spain, but his croſſing the Streights was prevented by another Sickneſs. He ſettled ſeveral Convents in France and Spain, and took another Journey to Rome. After having held a general Chapter of his Order there, he ſailed to Damietta in Egypt; and travelling through the Infidels Country to preach the Goſpel, he offer'd the Souldan to throw himſelf into the Fire in Proof of the Truth of Chriſtianity. The reſigning himſelf to this bold Teſt prevailed with the Souldan to give him Liberty to preach. At his Return into Italy he drew up a new Rule more ſhort and methodical than his firſt, and got his Order confirm'd by Pope Honorius III. both for Men and Women. Soon after this he reſigned his Generalſhip to Peter of Catana, and retir'd to one of the higheſt Mountains of the Apennine. And here 'tis pretended he ſaw a Seraphim crucified all on Fire, and that after this Viſion he had Marks upon his Body reſembling the Wounds which the Nails and Launce made upon our Saviour at his Paſſion: And 'tis from hence that he has the Name of Seraphick, a Diſtinction afterwards given to all his Order. St. Francis, tho' weakened by a Courſe of Auſterities, continu'd preaching, and falling at laſt into a Complication of Diſtempers died at Aſſiſe, October the 24th A. D. 1226. in the 45th Year of his Age: He was canoniz'd two Years after by Pope Gregory IX. * Bzovius. Raynaldi. &c.

* FRANCIS DE SALES (Saint), Biſhop and Prince of Geneva, Founder of the Order of the Viſitation, was extracted from one of the moſt ancient and noble Families in Savoy: He was Son to Francis, Lord of Sales, by Frances of Sionnaz. He was born in the Caſtle of Sales, within the Dioceſe of Geneva, Auguſt 21, 1567. His Infancy was remarkable for Piety and ſweet Temper. He ſtudied firſt in the College of Annecy: And finding himſelf inclin'd to the Profeſſion of an Eccleſiaſtick, he took the Clerical Tonſure at 12 Years of Age; and afterwards travelled to Paris: Here he learned the Languages under Genebrard, and went through a Courſe of Philoſophy, with ſome Progreſs in Divinity at the Jeſuits College. He improv'd himſelf farther by Maldonat's Lectures and thoſe of the Sorbon Doctors. His Father ordered him to Padua to ſtudy the Civil Law. Here his Companions carried him to a Courtezan, who did what ſhe could to debauch him, but by God's Aſſiſtance he broke through the Temptation. After having commenc'd Doctor in Padua, he left that Town and went to Rome to viſit the Apoſtles Tombs. At his Return into Savoy to his Relations he was admitted an Advocate in the Parliament at Chambery; but he ſoon gave over this Profeſſion, and turn'd Eccleſiaſtick. He receiv'd holy Orders, and was made Provoſt or Preſident of the Collegiate Church at Annecy. Claude Granier, Biſhop of Geneva, who admir'd his preaching, ſent him Miſſionary into the Valleys of that Dioceſe to convert the Zwinglians and Calviniſts. And it ſeems he prevail'd with a great Number of 'em in Chablais. The Biſhop of Geneva pitch'd upon him for his Coadjutor, but he refuſed to accept this Poſt, 'till he had gain'd the Permiſſion of Pope Clement VIII. He went to Rome accordingly for an Epiſcopal Character. The Pope conſecrated him with the Title of Biſhop of Nicopolis, and ſent him to proſecute his Miſſion in the Dioceſe of Geneva. At his coming back to Annecy he was ſeiz'd with a Diſtemper which had like to have carried him off. Upon his Recovery he was oblig'd to take a Turn into France, where he was generally valued. Cardinal Perron uſed to ſay that himſelf could convince any Heretick, but the carrying them through to Converſion could not be effected without the Aſſiſtance of M. de Geneve. Father de Berulle, afterwards Cardinal, adviſed with him for drawing a Rule for the Congregation of the Oratory.

King Henry IV. being inform'd of his Merit, offered him great Preferment to keep him in France; but he preferr'd his firſt Settlement, tho' ſlenderly endow'd, to the wealthy Biſhopricks to which he was courted, and return'd into Savoy, A. D. 1602. The Biſhop Granier being dead ſome Days before his Return, he was now ſole Governor. His firſt Buſineſs was to reform his Dioceſe, to which he led the Way by ſetting the Example in his own Family. Afterwards he took Pains amongſt the Calviniſts, and brought a great many of 'em off to the Church of Rome. He recovered all the religious Houſes in his Dioceſe to a State of Regularity, reviv'd the old monaſtick Diſcipline, and introduc'd the Feuillans and Barnabites. In 1610 he begun the Order of the Viſitation, of which the Baroneſs of Chantal was the Foundreſs. This Lady it ſeems had been converted (as the French Supplementor ſpeaks) by a Lent Sermon of his preach'd at Dijon. In 1618 he attended the Cardinal of Savoy into France: His Eminence's Buſineſs was to treat a Marriage between the Prince of Piedmont his Brother, and Chriſtina of France, ſecond Daughter to King Henry IV. At his Return to Annecy he continu'd to perform the Functions of a careful Paſtor, viſiting the Sick, relieving the Poor, and giving ſpiritual and temporal Aſſiſtance to all that wanted 'em. In 1622. he was ordered by the Duke of Savoy to go to Avignon, where that Prince was to have an Interview with Lewis XIII. The Biſhop ſtaying but a Week here went from thence upon Buſineſs to Lyons where he died of an Apoplexy December 28, 56 Years of Age. He was beatify'd by Pope Alexander VII. A. D. 1659. and canoniz'd 1665. His dying upon Innocents Day made the ſetting his Feſtival at his Anniverſary impracticable, for which Reaſon 'twas poſtpon'd to the 29th of January. St. Francis Sales wrote ſeveral practical Diſcourſes: Amongſt which his Introduction to a devout Life is moſt valued. The Deſign of this Book is to ſhew that Devotion ought not to be confin'd to Churchmen and the Cloyſter, but is an Exerciſe in which ſecular Perſons ought to ſpend Part of their Time. This devotional Tract made a very ſerviceable Impreſſion upon the Court, tho' ſome of his Maxims, as 'tis objected, are a little too much indulg'd. Some time after he wrote a Tract upon the Subject of the Love of God, entitled, Philotheus, where he carries the Notion very far. There are likewiſe ſome devotional Letters written by him. * Jac. Auguſte de Sales. Nicholas Talon. Henri de Maupas en ſa Vie. Hilarion de Coſte, Hiſt. Cat. Sainte Marthe, Gallia Chriſtiana.

FRANCIS of St. Domingo, was a Portugueſe, and took the Dominican Habit at Zamora. His religious Zeal carried him with ſeveral of his Order to the Philippine Iſlands. He afterwards went to new Segovia, where he took a great deal of Pains in inſtructing the Infidels. He baptiz'd a great many Pagans in the Iſland Formoſa. And going forward to a Corner of it called Pantas, he ſucceeded very well in his Miſſion amongſt the Savages at firſt; but afterwards endeavouring an Accommodation between the Commons and the governing Part, which had been a great while at Blows, they ſhot him to Death with their Arrows, A. D. 1633. * Hiſtor. Philippin. Tom. I. Lib. II. Cap. 37. Diar. Dominic. 25 Janvier.

FRANCIS-LEWIS, of Bourbon, Prince of Conty and of Roche Sur-yon, Knight of the King's Orders and Lieutenant General of his Armies, was born April the 30th 1664: His Father was Armand de Bourbon, Prince of Conty, Governor of Languedoc, and his Mother was Ann Mary Martinozzi: In his Infancy he went by the Title of Prince de la Roche Sur-yon, and was bred with the Dauphin, Son to Lewis XIV. His elder Brother, Lewis-Armand of Bourbon, and himſelf, made a Campaign in Hungary, and diſtinguiſhed themſelves with great Honour at the Siege of Neuhauſel, and when the Turks were routed near Gran in 1685. And his elder Brother, the Prince of Conty, dying at their Return from Hungary, that Title devolv'd upon him. He attended the Dauphin at the Siege of Philipsburgh, and through the Conqueſt of the Palatinate in 1688, ſerv'd afterwards in the Quality of Officer General at the Sieges of Mons, Namur, and Charleroy, and fought with great Courage at the Battle of Fleurus 1690, of Steenkerque 1692, and at that of Nerwind or Landen 1693. He had a great Share in gaining of the two laſt Battles, eſpecially that at Landen, where he preſſed into the hotteſt of the Fire, and by his perſonal Bravery, encourag'd the Troops which began to give way: He was wounded in this Engagement. In 1688. this Prince married Maria-Tereſia of Bourbon, Daughter to Henry Julius, Prince of Conde, by Ann, Princeſs Palatine. The Prince of Conty, after a long Sickneſs, died February the 22d 1709.

FRANCES DE BESANCON, was the firſt Foundreſs of the Nuns of the third Order of St. Francis, of the ſtrict Rule; they are call'd in ſome Places the Tiercelines. She began this Reform in 1604. at Verceil on the Frontiers of Alſatia in the Dioceſe of Beſançon; and in 1608. ſhe remov'd this Nunnery to Salins. In 1610. they ſettled at Gray, and 1614. they were put under the Obedience and Direction of the reform'd Monks of this Order of the Congregation of France. Afterwards they made farther Settlements at Dole, Lyons, and Paris, where the Nun Claire Frances de Beſançon, the Foundreſs's Daughter, ſettled a Nunnery of the Siſters of St. Elizabeth, and was their Abbeſs. This Reform encreaſed to about 20 Nunneries, ſome of which were under Epiſcopal Juriſdiction. * Joan. Mar. de Vernon. Annal. Tertii Ordin. S. Franc.

FRANCUS (Sebaſtian), an Anabaptiſt, liv'd in the XVIth Century, and publiſh'd ſeveral Heterodox Diſcourſes confuted by the Lutherans. He was a downright Fanatick. He maintain'd all Sins of equal Malignity, and held a Principle deſtructive of the Authority of the holy Scriptures; for one of his Tenets was that we ought to adhere to the Suggeſtions of the holy Spirit, without concerning our ſelves much with the Letter. He likewiſe believed the Church a Collection of ſeveral Sects, and threw both Papiſts and Proteſtants into the Compoſition. The Divines of the Ausburgh Confeſſion, who met at Smalcald, A. D. 1540, ordered Melancton to undertake the Confutation of this Man's Fanatical Singularities. This Francus likewiſe publiſhed a very ſatyrical Diſcourſe againſt Women, which was confuted by Luther and Johannes Frederus. * Seckendorf. Hiſtor. Lutheran. Lib. III.

FRANKPANI, a Frank Lord. The Name of a Roman Gentleman who ſerv'd the Kings of Hungary in their firſt Wars with the Turks. He ſettled in Croatia and was Head of the Frangipani. John Frangipani, the Son of Bernardine, was a Branch of this Family: After the Death of Matthius Corvinus, King of Hungary, he rebelled againſt Ladiſlaus, and againſt Duke John, Matthius's natural Son. This Duke beſieg'd Frangipany in Brevia, a Town in Croatia, and preſſed him ſo cloſe that he caſt himſelf upon the Protection of the Turks, which gave Bajazet II. an Opportunity of making himſelf Maſter of Croatia A. D. 1493. There's a Branch of theſe Frangipani's ſtill at Rome, and 'tis by them the Way of perfuming Gloves, à la Frangipane, was invented. * D'Herbelot. Bibliothec. Oriental.

FRANKS, an ancient German Nation, compounded of a great many diſtinct and diſtant Clans; as the Salii, Sicambri, Cheruſci, Bructeri, Ampſivarii, Catti, Teucteres, Uſipetes, &c. who running into a Coaleſcence or Collection, took the Name of Franks, which ſignifies Free. Their Country lay beyond the Rhine and was call'd Franconia. They ſometimes paſſed this River and made Incurſions upon the Roman Empire. Hiſtorians mention the Franks in the middle of the third Century. The Emperor Aurelian made War upon 'em A. D. 255. and 259. And Galienus made uſe of their Troops againſt Poſthumius A. D. 262. And in 265. they made an Irruption into Gaul, and forc'd their Way as far as Tarragon in Spain. The Emperor Probus took the Title of Francicus upon the Score of his having gain'd a Victory upon the Franks in Gaul. In the Year 280, the Franks, who had been made Priſoners in Probus's Reign, broke out in Rebellion, and ravag'd Sicily and Greece. At the End of the third Century they made themſelves Maſters of Holland, and of the Country all along the Rhine. Their Government was monarchical, and Genobaud, one of their Kings, made Peace with the Emperor Maximian. Some of theſe Franks remov'd into Gaul, and ſettled there with the Conſent of the Emperor laſt mentioned. Conſtantius Chlorus and Conſtantine the Great, fought the Franks with Succeſs. Conſtans, Conſtantine the Great's Son, after ſome Hoſtilities treated a Peace with 'em; from which Time they were reckoned ſuch friendly Allies, that Conſtantius's Court was full of 'em. In the Year 355. they plundered Cologne. The next Year Julian recovered this Town, and patch'd up a Peace with 'em which laſted but a ſhort Time: For Julian recommenc'd the War, paſſed the Rhine, and enter'd their Country. In Gratian's Reign the Franks over-run Gaul. However, afterwards they liv'd friendly with the Empire, 'till their Kings Genobaud, Marcomir, and Sunno defeated the Roman Troops 388. Arbogaſtus, who murdered Valentinian, and ſet up the Uſurper Eugenius, was a Frank, and being an Enemy to Sunno and Marcomir, declar'd War againſt 'em; but Eugenius and Arbogaſtus quickly concluded a Peace with them, that they might be reinforc'd with their Troops againſt Theodoſius. In the Reign of Honorius, Stilicho made a Peace with the Franks; and Marcomir and Sunno making an Infraction upon the Articles A. D. 397. receiv'd due Correction: The firſt was confin'd in Tuſcany, and the ſecond kill'd by the Franks themſelves. The Vandals routed the Franks at their firſt Encounter; but the Franks afterwards had their Revenge, and beat 'em A. D. 408. In 409. they plundered and burnt Treves. In 415. Theodomir, Son of Richimir, King of the Franks, was ſlain with his Mother. In the Year 418. the Franks ſeiz'd part of Gaul. The beginning of the Reign of Pharamond, and the ſettling the French Government in Gaul is reckoned to the Year 420; but neither this Prince nor his Succeſſors Merovéus and Clodion, had any very firm footing in that Country. Childerick afterwards ſettled in Gaul Belgick, and Clovis was the firſt Prince who fix'd the French Throne, and reign'd almoſt without Diſturbance over all Gaul. Theſe Franks, when firſt heard of, were Idolaters, of a warlike Diſpoſition, and from them the Salick Laws had their Original. * Gregor. Turon. Annal Francici du P. Ruinart Benedictin. Mezeray, de l'Origine des François, Tome I. à la tête de ſon Hiſtoire.

FRASSEN (Claude), a Monk of the Order of the Franciſcan Obſervants, was born near Peronne in Picardy. He was firſt profeſſed in the Cordeliers Convent in that Town, and afterwards remov'd to their grand Convent at Paris, where he took his Doctor's Degree in the Year 1662. In 1682. Father Fraſſen, in the Quality of Guardian or Superior at Paris, aſſiſted at a General Chapter of his Order at Toledo, where notwithſtanding the Jealouſy and Emulation between the French and Spaniards, he was choſen Definitor General of all the Franciſcans. At his Return the French King declared himſelf well ſatisfy'd with his Conduct. In 1688. Father Fraſſen, in Quality of Definitor General, aſſiſted at a Chapter of the Order held at Rome, where Cardinal Cibo preſided in the Pontificate of Innocent XI. Father Fraſſen was ordered to be Speaker at this nice Juncture: And here he manag'd himſelf with great Prudence and Capacity, maintain'd the Honour and Intereſt of France without giving Diſguſt to other Nations: And at his Return was receiv'd by his Majeſty with diſtinguiſhing Marks of Eſteem. And afterwards the King employ'd him to give his Advice in Buſineſs of great Conſequence, and which requir'd the Aſſiſtance of an extraordinary Perſon. He died in 1711. 91 Years of Age. His Philoſophical Tracts have been printed twice in two Volumes Quarto. His Theological Diſcourſes make four Volumes Folio. His French Tranſlation of St. Paulinus's Epiſtles is publiſh'd in 12ves. To which may be added his Diſquiſitiones Biblicæ printed in 4to. * Memoires de Trevoux, Janvier 1712. p. 104.

* FRATICELLI or Biſoches, Hereticks who appeared in Marca Anconitana about the Year 1294. They were almoſt all galloping Monks, who had run away from the Cloyſter: Peter Maurato and Peter de Forio Sempronio, two Minorite Monks, began this Sect. Theſe Religious prevail'd with Pope Celeſtine V. a great Lover of Retirement, to give 'em Leave to turn Hermits, and practiſe St. Francis's Rule up to the Letter. Thus, a great many People running after them, a lazy, ſtrolling, monaſtick Sect was form'd in Puglia. They liv'd without Rule or Superiors as their Fancy led 'em, and made all their Perfection lie in an Appearance of Poverty. Pope Boniface VIII. condemn'd 'em, and ordered 'em to be proſecuted by the Inquiſitors as Hereticks. Upon this, they tranſported themſelves into Sicily, and began to declaim againſt the Prelates and the Church. About the ſame time Peter John Oliva, a Friar Minorite of the Province of Beziers, wrote his Commentary upon the Revelations, which theſe rebellious Monks found very fit for their Purpoſe: For it ſeems this Peter John gave the Church a courſe Name and call'd her Babylon. In this Apocalyptick Commentary he promiſed a new Church more pure and unblemiſh'd than any that had yet belong'd to our Saviour: He held forth St. Francis's Rule as the only Evangelical Standard, and aſſerted it obſerv'd by Chriſt and the Apoſtles. He foretold the Deſtruction of the carnal Babylonian Church, and that a new Church would riſe and flouriſh under the Conduct of St. Francis. This Book being brought into Italy by a Minorite call'd de Bodicis, was receiv'd as a fifth Goſpel by the Fraticelli and the Begards. And ſome Enthuſiaſts upon the Strength of this Prediction, ventur'd ſo far as to attempt the creating a new Pope for this new Church. Farther, they choſe a General and Superiors, built new Monaſteries, took a cloſe ſtrait Habit, went on remonſtrating againſt the Church of Rome, and obſtinately maintain'd Peter Oliva's Singularities: They improv'd upon theſe Heterodoxies, and aſſerted that the Sacraments of the Church were inſignificant, becauſe the Clergy had no Authority to adminiſter. Pope John XXII. condemn'd 'em in the Beginning of his Pontificate, cenſur'd Peter Oliva's Commentary, and handled 'em roughly. A great many of 'em went off into Germany, where they liv'd at their Eaſe under the Protection of Lewis of Bavaria. * Prateolus. Spondan. A. C. 1297. Bzovius. Rainaldi. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIV.

* FREDEGARIUS, ſirnam'd Scholaſticus. Notwithſtanding Fredegarius's Name ſtands commonly for the Author of the Abridgment of Gregory of Tour's Hiſtory, and of the Continuation of that Hiſtory, yet there is no ſuch Name in the Manuſcripts, in which theſe Books are both anonymous. It has been thought that this Author liv'd in the Reign of Pepin or Charlemain, becauſe his chronological Account is continu'd to the Time of theſe Princes; but 'tis ſince diſcover'd by the Peruſal of the Print, and the Manuſcripts, that the Author finiſh'd his Work in the 2d Year of Clovis's Reign, A. D. 641; and that what follows was done by ſeveral Continuators, who made Additions one after another, as appears by the Edition of this Chronicon publiſh'd with Gregory of Tour's Works by Father Ruinart.

FREJUS (), a counterfeit French Ambaſſador to the King of Fez, A. D. 1670. He was a Merchant of Provence, who arriving at a Port of the Kingdom of Fez, ſent to the King to deſire a Paſſport, giving him to underſtand that he came Ambaſſador from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty. The King of Fez immediately ſent Orders to his Governors to treat him ſuitable to his Quality, and furniſh him with Camels for his Baggage: He likewiſe went out of his Town to meet him, convey'd him to his Palace and gave him Audience. This pretended Ambaſſador, after having preſented his Credentials, was attended to an Houſe prepar'd for him, where being well entertain'd he took an Opportunity of felling ſome of his Goods privately. At his ſecond Audience he deſir'd that a Company of French Merchants might have Leave to ſettle at Fez; but this Requeſt was refus'd, for the King would conſent no farther than for Liberty of Commerce. Frejus finding himſelf diſappointed, deſired an Audience of Leave, at which the King of Fez gave him a Letter for his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty. After this Frejus return'd to the Place where he came on Shore, and made ſome ſtay there to put off the Remainder of his Commodities; but ſome Difference happening between him and the Governor, he had the Confidence to go back to Fez to demand Satisfaction: But the King at laſt ſuſpecting his Character, took away the Letter he had given him, and commanded him to get immediately out of his Dominions. * G. Mouette, Hiſtoire du Roy de Tafilet.

FRESNE (Charles de), Sieur du Cange, was born at Amiens A. D. 1610. His Father Lewis de Freſne was Sieur or Lord of Fredeval, Counſellor and Provoſt Royal, or Sheriff of Beauquêne: And his Mother was Helen de Rely deſcended from a Gentleman's Family. M. du Cange receiv'd his firſt Education in the Jeſuits College at Amiens: He ſtudied the Law at Orleans, and was ſworn Advocate to the Parliament of Paris in 1631. He practiſed ſome time at the Bar; but without intending to make it the Buſineſs of his Life. He run through all Sorts of Learning, Humanity and Philoſophy, Law and Phyſick, Divinity and Hiſtory. His firſt Performance was a Genealogical Map of the Kings of France. He wrote the Hiſtory of Conſtantinople under the French Emperors: 'Twas printed at the Louvre, and dedicated to the King. About 8 Years after he publiſh'd an Hiſtorical Tract concerning St. John Baptiſt's Head, ſome Relicks of which are ſuppoſed to be at Amiens. Two Years forward he publiſh'd the Text and Verſion of Cinnamus with Notes both upon Cinnamus, upon Nicephorus and Anna Comnena, with Paulus Silentiarius's Deſcription of the Church of St. Sophia.

Some time after du Cange ſettled at Paris, a Propoſal was laid before a Miniſter of State to draw all the Authors together who at different Times had written the Hiſtory of France, and form a Body out of 'em. This Miniſter (who tho' not nam'd ſeems to have been M. Colebert) liking the Propoſal, and believing du Cange the beſt qualified for the undertaking, furniſh'd him with a great many Memoirs and Manuſcripts for this Purpoſe. M. du Cange wrought upon theſe Materials without Intermiſſion, and wrote a Preface of more than a Quire of Paper, containing the Names of the Authors, their Character and Manner, the Time in which they liv'd, and the Order they were to be rang'd in. When the Perſon, that went between him and the Miniſter of State, had ſeen his Scheme, he let him know 'twas not approv'd, and that it would be neceſſary to make another. Upon this M. du Cange being convinc'd that if he had follow'd the Order preſcrib'd, the whole Work had been ſpoil'd, frankly told the Gentleman, that ſince he had not been happy enough to pleaſe thoſe in Authority, his Advice was that they ſhould look out ſome of the beſt Hands in the Kingdom: and at the ſame time he return'd 'em all their Memoirs. He ſaw very well this clear Dealing would check his Intereſt: However, he choſe rather to ſuffer that Way, than ſervilely to comply with a Plan which would both have injur'd his own Reputation, and done no Credit to his Country. Being thus diſengag'd from a tedious Undertaking, he finiſh'd his Latin Gloſſary, which was receiv'd with general Commendation; and tho' Adrian Valeſius in his Preface to the Valeſiana, remarks ſeveral Miſtakes in it, 'tis notwithſtanding a very valuable and uſeful Book. Not long after he publiſh'd another Volume: It conſiſts of two Parts, and the Deſign of it is to explain the Byſantine Hiſtory: The firſt Part of it takes in the Genealogy of the Conſtantinopolitan Emperors; and the ſecond gives an exact Deſcription of the Condition of the Town under thoſe Emperors. To proceed, M. du Cange's next Performance was a Greek Gloſſary: It conſiſts of curious Paſſages and Remarks, moſt of which are drawn from Manuſcripts very little known. Theſe two Gloſſaries gave Occaſion to the following Epigram made by M. de la Monnoye.

Auſonios poſtquam Graioſque effuſa per agros
Barbaries Romana preſſit utramque diu.
Cangius hanc Vinclis qui tandem & carcere frœnet,
Res mira! è Gallis ecce Camillus adeſt.

He likewiſe publiſh'd a new Edition of Zonaras with his own Notes upon it. And laſtly, he publiſh'd an Edition of the Alexandrian Chronicon. He dy'd in October 1688. being 78 Years old. * Journal des Savans de l'année 1688. pag. 581. Perrault, les Hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France.

FRESNOY (Charles Alphonſus du), was born in 1611: He was Son to an eminent Apothecary in Paris, who bred him carefully to Learning with a Deſign to make him a Phyſician. He had no ordinary Talent for Poetry, and would have been famous that way, had his Genius not been carry'd off with a ſtrong Fancy for Painting. He went to Rome and ſtudied Painting with great Application, and endeavour'd to imitate Raphael and the antique Manner: But Titian, who was particularly his Inclination, he uſed to ſay had moſt of Truth and Nature in him. Freſnoy had carefully read Euclid's Elements, had a good Taſte for Architecture, and painted ſome Remains of the old Buildings at Rome. But notwithſtanding his Performances in this Art are not without their Value, his Memory is moſt oblig'd by his Poem Poem upon Painting: 'Tis printed with a French Tranſlation and Remarks. He died in 1655, 54 Years of Age. To conclude with him, there's no French Painter has come up ſo cloſe to Titian as Freſnoy. * De Piles, Abrégé de la Vie des Peintres.

FRISCH-HAFF, a Gulph in the Baltick, making part of that call'd Venedicus Sinus by the Ancients. It lies between the Coaſt of Pruſſia and the Iſland Friſch-Nerung, and opens into the Sea only by a Cut half a League broad. The Length of this Gulph from South Weſt to North Eaſt is about 20 Leagues, but the greateſt Breadth does not exceed three. It receives ſeveral Rivers, the greateſt of which are the two Eaſtern Mouths of the Viſtula and the Pregel. * Maty, Diction.

FRISCH-NERUNG, an Iſland of Pruſſia. 'Tis form'd by the two Weſtern Mouths of the Viſtula by the Gulph of Friſch-Haff and the Baltick. There's nothing conſiderable in this Iſland excepting the Fort Munde or Weiſſel-Munde, which lies at the Weſtern Mouth of the Viſtula. * Maty, Diction.

FUGGERS, the Territories of the Counts of Fuggers: a German Precinct in Suabia. 'Tis divided into two Parts. The Weſtern Diviſion lies to the South of the Town and Territory of Ulm. 'Tis about ten Leagues long, and three or four broad; Weiſſenhorn, Babenhauſen and Kirchem, are its principal Towns. The eaſtern Part lies upon the Confluence of the Leck and the Danube, between the Towns of Ausburgh and Donawert. It ſtretches ſix Leagues in Length and three in Breadth. There are none but Villages within this Canton, of which Biberbach and Obendorff are the moſt conſiderable. The Fuggers are likewiſe Proprietors of a great deal of Land in Bavaria, in the Hegow, and in the Thurgaw; and eſpecially in the upper Alſatia. This Family is divided into ſeveral Branches, and they are reck'ned the richeſt Counts in Germany: But their Nobility is not ancient. James Fugger, a Burgher of Ausburgh, began their Quality, and having lent Maximilian I. a great Sum of Money, had a Patent of Honour from that Emperor. This Family, like that de Medicis, owes its Riſe to Trade. * Maty, Diction.

FULVIA, a Roman Lady turn'd Jew by holding a Conference with one of the Rabbi's. The gaining this Proſelyte prov'd the Occaſion of expelling the Jews both Rome and Italy; of ſeizing four thouſand of 'em, and baniſhing them into Sardinia; to which we may add that a great many of 'em were put to Death for refuſing to obey the Emperor Tiberius's Orders. The Misfortune happened thus, a ſcandalous Jew, who ran his Country for Fear of being brought to Juſtice, made a cloſe Acquaintance with three other ſuch Wretches as himſelf: Theſe Fellows ſet up for expounding Moſes's Law, and having their Tongues well hung proſelyted a great many Heathens. Fulvia, taking them for Perſons of Integrity, gave in to their Religion, and reſign'd to their Direction. Theſe Knaves valuing themſelves upon their Conqueſt, perſuaded the Lady to furniſh 'em with ſome Gold and Purple to ſend to the Temple at Jeruſalem. She frankly gave 'em what they ask'd: But inſtead of making an Offering of her Devotion, they kept the Preſent to themſelves. This Cheat coming to the Knowledge of Saturninus, her Husband, he complain'd of it to the Emperor. And thus the Practice being ſcandalous, and the Informer a Favourite, made ſuch an Impreſſion upon Tiberius, that he puniſh'd the Jews in Italy with the Severity abovementioned. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XVIII. Cap. 5.

FUNERAL ORATION. The Romans had a Cuſtom to give dead People of Quality the Reſpect of an Harangue. 'Twas ſpoken at the great Square at Rome in the Roſtra, where the Company, who attended the Corps, ſtopt. He, who was pitch'd upon for this Buſineſs, made a Panegyrick upon the deceaſed. He began with the Antiquity of their Pedigree, and the Figure they made in the publick. From hence he went on to deſcribe the Regularity of their Behaviour, the Obligingneſs of their Temper, and how remarkable they had been for their Bounty, and publick Service; and if they had acted any ſhining Part either in the Magiſtracy, or the Field, 'twas always remembred. This Office was frequently perform'd by the Children or Relations of the deceaſed; and ſometimes the Senate made choice of ſome eminent Orator. Auguſtus, when twelve Years old, harangu'd publickly in Commendation of his Grandmother; and after his Coming to the Imperial Dignity he did the ſame Office for his Nephew Germanicus. Tiberius, as Suetonius obſerves, made a Funeral Speech for his Father at nine Years of Age; and ſome Time after his Acceſſion to the Throne did the ſame Thing for his Son. Caligula being under 17 Years old harangu'd it at his Great Grandmother Livia's Funeral; and Nero did the ſame Honour to his Predeceſſor the Emperor Claudius. The firſt who began this Cuſtom at Rome was Valerius Publicola; for as Polybius relates, after the Death of Junius Brutus, who was ſlain in the Battle againſt the Hetruſci, this Valerius, his Partner in the Conſulſhip, brought the Corps into the great Square, mounted the Bench, and gave the People a Detail of the Bravery and Conduct of that great Man. Plutarch and Alexander ab Alexandro inform us that this Cuſtom was continu'd, and that Fabius Maximus made a Funeral Oration both for Scipio and his own Children. The Roman Ladies, as appears by a Precedent already mention'd, had this Regard pay'd 'em.

Livy relates that when the Romans were bound by Articles to give the Gauls a great deal of Money, the Ladies made a Preſent to the State of their Necklaces and Jewels; and to reward their Affection to their Country, an Order paſſed for giving them the Honour of a Funeral Oration. Popilia was the firſt Roman Lady whoſe Memory was thus diſtinguiſh'd; and here her Son Craſſus made her Funeral Oration. Cicero takes notice that when Julius Cæſar was Quæſtor or Treaſurer, he made a Funeral Speech in the Roſtra for his Aunt Julia and his Wife Cornelia. * Sueton. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. &c.

FUNGYAN, a Town in China. 'Tis large and well built, and is the ſecond City in the Province of Nanquin. It ſtands upon the River Hoay, and has ſeventeen Burroughs within its Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

FUYNEN or Funen, Fionia, an Iſland belonging to Denmark: 'Tis one of the greateſt of that Kingdom, and lies in the Baltick between the Iſle of Zeeland, from which 'tis parted on the Eaſt by the Streight called the Great Belt, (four German Miles in Length) and South Jutland, from which 'tis parted by the Streight of Middelfard or the Little Belt which is very narrow. And as for the Figure 'tis almoſt round. This Iſland is a good Soil and populous, notwithſtanding it has ſuffered a great deal in the late Wars. 'Tis particularly rich in Corn and Paſture and maintains a great many Cattle. The Horſes bred there are much valued in Germany. The Capital of Funen is Ottenſe ſtanding in the middle of the Iſland; the next for Largeneſs is Nybourg in the eaſtern Part of the Iſland; to which may be added ſix other Towns leſs conſiderable, viz. Suinbourg, Foborg, Aſcens, Boens, Middelfard and Kartemunde, with four Caſtles and 264 Pariſhes according to Pontanus and others. 'Tis commonly ſubdivided into three Herrits or Precincts. * Baudrand.

G.

GALATEUS, the Emperor Valens's Son: He fell ſick, as Hiſtorians report, juſt when that Emperor was giving Orders for baniſhing St. Baſil the Great. This Accident made him defer his Reſolution, and ſend for St. Baſil, at whoſe coming the Child ſeem'd recover'd; but being afterwards baptiz'd by the Arians relaps'd and died. This Matter is related by St. Gregory Nazianzen, by Ephrem Syrus, by Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret, but with different Circumſtances. Now 'tis certain this Galateus was dead before the Year 373, for Themiſtius making a Speech to Valens this Year, begs Jupiter to bleſs him with Iſſue to reign with him.

St. Gregory Nazianzen ſuppoſes the Accident above mention'd happen'd at Cæſarea A. D. 370: And here he does not ſay that Galateus was recover'd, but that he might have done well if Valens had not got him baptized by the Arians. St. Ephrem on the other Side affirms him recover'd by St. Baſil's Prayers; but Socrates and Theodoret inform us, that Valens refuſing to promiſe St. Baſil that his Son ſhould be baptiz'd by orthodox Biſhops, that Saint took his Leave in dark, ill-preſaging Language. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV.

GALLAND (Anthony), a learned French Antiquary, was a Member of the Academy for Medals and Inſcriptions. He travell'd into the Levant, ſtay'd a great while there, made himſelf Maſter of Arabick, and was thoroughly acquainted with the Cuſtoms and Religion of the Mahometans. He wrote ſeveral curious Diſſertations upon ſcarce Medals, which are mention'd with Commendation by the Journaliſts. He was made King's Arabick Profeſſor in 1709, and dy'd in 1715. He tranſlated the Alcoran, to which he has added very curious Remarks, together with a Syſtem of the Mahometan Theology, more exact than any thing which has yet appeared. But this was unpubliſh'd at his Death, and is lodg'd in the Hands of the famous M. Bignon. * Memoires du Tems.

GALLIO, Brother to the famous Seneca Nero's Preceptor: His Name at firſt was Marcus Annæus Novatus, but being adopted by Lucius Junius Gallio, he took a Name from his Benefactor. 'Twas by his Brother Seneca's Intereſt, that the Emperor Claudius made him Proconſul of Achaia. He acquitted himſelf very handſomely in his Poſt. His Magiſtracy happening at the time when St. Paul preach'd Chriſtianity there, he refus'd to take any Cognizance of this new Doctrine. And when the Jews proſecuted and preferr'd Informations, he diſmiſs'd 'em the Court, letting 'em know, that ſince neither the Emperor's Intereſt nor Honour was concern'd, he ſhould try no Cauſes of that Kind: And ſince the Diſpute between St. Paul and them was only Matter of religious Controverſy, unrelating to Government, their Way was to take up the Difference among themſelves. This fair Uſage gave Occaſion to believe, that if Gallio was not really a Chriſtian, he had at leaſt ſome Diſpoſition towards that Belief. Several Conjectures have been made upon this Matter. For the Purpoſe: This gave a Colour to the pretended Correſpondence of St. Paul and Seneca, and to the Letters which paſs'd between 'em mention'd by St. Hierom and St. Auguſtin: But theſe Letters are not now extant, and 'tis generally believ'd that thoſe which go under their Name are ſpurious. 'Tis likewiſe not improbable that Gallio, without any Inclination to Chriſtianity, might out of pure Heathen Honeſty decline meddling with a Diſpute in which the Government was unconcern'd.

Gallio, being afterwards ſentenc'd to Death by Nero, kill'd himſelf, as Euſebius reports. It was to this Gallio, as Baronius will have it, that Seneca dedicated his Book De Vita Beata. * Simon. Dictionaire de la Bible.

GALLO GRÆCIA, a Country in Aſia, bounded by Bythinia, Cappadocia and Pamphylia: 'Tis otherwiſe call'd Galatia: For Gaul being overlay'd with Numbers, ſent off a great Part of the People to provide for their Subſiſtance elſewhere. This Colony forming themſelves into an Army enter'd Italy firſt, and made great Ravage and Devaſtation there; but being at laſt expell'd thence by the Bravery and Conduct of Camillus, they march'd into Greece and Macedon, where they were quickly diſlodg'd by Leonorius: And now being join'd by ſome ſtrolling Greeks, they mov'd forward into Aſia, where they ſettled, having ſome Lands aſſigned them by the King of Bythinia. 'Tis from this Mixture of Gauls and Greeks that the Name of Gallo Græcians was given 'em. After the War againſt Antiochus the Great, Vulſo Manlius brought 'em to an entire Submiſſion. The Country was then left to the Government of Tetrarchs. Dejotarus, being one of the moſt powerful of this Diſtinction, made himſelf Maſter of the whole Country. But 'twas not long before Auguſtus Cæſar gain'd a thorough Conqueſt, and made the Country a Province of the Empire. * Strabo. Lib. II. pag. 130. & Lib. XII. pag. 566, 567. Velleius Paterc. Lib. II. Cap. 39. See Galatia in Morery Vol. I.

GALLONIUS (Anthony), a Roman and Prieſt of the Congregation of the Oratorians, flouriſh'd at the End of the XVI^th^ Century, and died in 1605. He applied himſelf to the reading the Acts of the Martyrs, and enquir'd into the Variety of Torments they ſuffered, and the Inſtruments made uſe of for that Purpoſe. In 1591. he publiſh'd a Book in Italian on this Subject with Figures drawn by John Guerra de Modena, Painter to Pope Sixtus Quintus, and engrav'd in Copper by Anthony Tempeſt of Florence. He tranſlated this Work afterwards into Latin, and dedicated it to Pope Clement VIII. The beſt Edition is that printed at Paris in 1659. with Tempeſt's Cuts. 'Tis a curious Treatiſe, and wrought up with a great deal of Care. The Author has not only made his Collection from the Acts of the Martyrs, ſome of which are not of the beſt Credit; but has likewiſe drawn his Matter from ancient Authors both Eccleſiaſtical and Pagan. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

GAMALA, a Town within the Tribe of Manaſſeh to the Eaſt of the Lake of Genneſaret in the lower Diviſion of Gaulonitis. 'Twas the beſt Town in this Province, and notwithſtanding it was Part of Agrippa's Dominions, the Burghers choſe rather to ſtand upon their Defence than own him for their Sovereign. He beſieg'd the Town in Form ſeven Months, but without Succeſs, being then forc'd to riſe after the Loſs of the beſt Part of his Troops. But fancying the Romans would have better Luck, he deſir'd Veſpaſian's Aſſiſtance for the Enterprize.

This famous General, who was King Agrippa's Friend, began the Blockade the 21^st^ of September, and carried the Place the 23^d^ of October following. No People ever defended themſelves braver than the Burghers of Gamala. For even their Enemies declar'd, that if all the Towns of Judea had given 'em as much Trouble as Gamala, they could never have gone through with their Conqueſt: However, notwithſtanding this Character, the Romans cut 'em all in Pieces excepting two young Ladies, Daughters to one Philip, who had formerly been Agrippa's General. Theſe Ladies hid themſelves in the Ruins, where being found ſome time after, they were brought to Agrippa, who gave 'em their Lives, and ſecur'd 'em from ill Uſage. The King was wounded in the Arm at this Siege. As to the Strength and Scituation of the Town, 'twas built upon an Eminence ſhooting up in the middle of an high Mountain. Three Sides of it were fortified with unapproachable Valleys. That Part which lay cloſe to the Mountain was not ſo difficult to come at; but then 'twas made next to impregnable by a great Ditch. The ſloping of the Hill on the South ſide was cloſe built: The Houſes ſeem'd to ſtand upon the Brink of a Precipice, and look'd as ready to tumble. At this Quarter an Hill mounted to ſuch an Height, that the Depth of the Valley gave the Strength of a Citadel: There was likewiſe a Fountain at the End of the Town within the Walls. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. IV. Cap. 2, 3, & deinc.

GAMBARA (Lawrence), of Breſcia in Italy, was a good Latin Poet, and was entertain'd in the Family of the Cardinal Alexander Farneſe in the XVI^th^ Century.

At first he wrote some licentious Pieces, which he afterwards took care to burn. His Muse was reserv'd in the rest of her Productions: Amongst other Performances in Poetry, he wrote a Piece, entitled, De novi Orbis Inventione. He died in 1586, ninety Years of Age.

This Gambara wrote a Latin Tract to direct to the utmost Improvement in Poetry; 'twas printed at Rome in Quarto in the Year he died. In this Book he endeavours to prove that all Poets are indispensably oblig'd not only to avoid all Indecency and Smut, but likewise to stand clear of Mythology and Pagan Deities. * Lilius Giraldus, de Vit. Poet. Teissier in Elog. Baillet, jugement des Savans sur ceux qui ont écrit de l'Art Poëtique.

GAMBOLAT, Bashaw or Governor of Aleppo in 1606, rebell'd against the Grand Seignior; defeated the Bashaw of Tripoly, and the Beglerbeg of Mysia, and made himself Master of Tripoly and Damascus. In 1607 he beat the Grand Vizier; but was routed afterwards by Amurath Sedar, Grand Vizier: In this second Battel he was quite disabled, and had all his Estate seiz'd. But 'twas not long before his Fortune was recover'd by Calendar Ogly, another Head of the Asiatick Rebels, who made War upon the Grand Seignior and oblig'd him to restore Gambolat. * Giovani Sagredo, Memorie Istoriche di Monarchi Ottomani. Mercure François.

GAND (the House of). This Family was first settled in Flanders by the Emperor Otho I. or the Great, Son of Henry the Fowler: In the Year 949. this Prince built the Castle of Gant upon Ground belonging to the Monastery of St. Bavo: They call'd it new Castle, or Otho's Castle, to distinguish it from that which had been built long before by Julius Cæsar. Counts, and not Castellans, had the Government of this Castle; and four Towns with their Dependencies were annext as Demesnes to it, viz. Assenede, Bocholt, Axel and Hulst, with all the Country of Waes, the Country of Alost, with the Lordships of Termondo and Bornhem. The first Count settled here by this Emperor was Wichmannus, descended from the House of Saxony: Herimannus, this Count's Brother, was created Duke of the Lower Saxony by the same Emperor. Arnulphus, the old Earl of Flanders, confirm'd this Grant of the Castle to Count Wichmannus together with the Towns and Dependencies above mentioned, and gave him his eldest Daughter Luytgarde. Witichindus, in his Book of the Saxon Exploits, gives a noble Character of Count Wichmannus: He reports him a Person of great Bravery and military Skill, that his Conduct and general Knowlege were so extraordinary, that his Subjects look'd upon him as something above the rest of Mankind. By his Countess Luytgarde of Flanders he had two Sons, Theodorick de Gand, and Wichman call'd the Young; these two Lords commanded in the Saxon Army against the French under their Uncle Herimannus: And here Wichman being about to desert, and go over to the French, was kill'd in the Attempt. Theodorick, Son of Wichman I. was seiz'd of the County of the new Castle of Gand, after his Father's Decease, and marry'd Hildegarde, Daughter to Theodorick III, Earl of Holland, by whom he had Arnulph, who, as Sigebertus Gemblacensis reports, was kill'd by the Frizelanders at the Town Stavera, which he endeavoured to recover for his Grandfather the Earl of Holland. There's a long Genealogy of this Family of Gand, in which several of 'em make a great Figure, but a Detail of their History is too long to insert. I shall only take notice there are three principal Branches descended from this ancient House; that is to say, the Family of the Counts of Alost, that of the Counts of Guines, and that of the Princes of Ysenghien; the two first, viz. the Counts of Alost and Guines have intermarried with the greatest Princes and Sovereigns of Europe: And as for the Ysinghien Branch, it has been nobly distinguish'd by Alliances and Posts of Honour. * Meyerus. Lindanus. Miræus. Witichindus.

GARABUSA, or Garabusa Salvatico, formerly Corsyræ Insulæ. Two little Islands belonging to Candia about half a League from the Western Coast near Cape Buso. The Town Garabuse, call'd likewise Grabuse, has a good Haven and a very strong Citadel. The Venetians kept it 'till 1691, when Lucca de la Rocca of Messina, a Captain of a Company in the Garrison, seiz'd the Governor, and knocking down such as offered to make Resistance, deliver'd the Fort to the Bashaw of Canea. Some Geographers make Carabusa the Cape which the Ancients call'd Corycus Mons & Promontorium, which others place at Ponta di Corace, and some will have it Cabuso. * Maty, Diction.

GARACK; one of the most considerable Islands in the Persian Gulph, the same with that call'd Carge and Elchadr, and in Latin Ichara Insula. Mapheus and Golius, who make it the same with the Isle Baharem, are mistaken. For Garack lies to the North of Baharem at 12 or 15 Leagues Distance. 'Tis likewise equi-distant from the Coasts of Persia and Arabia, and about ten Leagues from the Mouth of the Euphrates. It belong'd formerly to the Jews. There are still the Ruins of a Town inhabited by them, which by the Remains seems to have been very large and beautiful. The Synagogue built in the Form of a Pyramid, serves now for a Mosch. This Country has run thro' a great many Revolutions: When the Portuguese were Masters of Ormus, they carried their Conquest over all the little Territories in the Neighbourhood: The Isle of Garack was part of their Acquisitions; for at that Time the King of Portugal was the only Sovereign of the Persian Gulph. But when the Great Scha-Abas mounted the Persian Throne, he drove the Portuguese out of Garack, after a long Dispute. All these Islands are now inhabited by Arabians, and there's little to be seen but Ruins and Rubbish. The Soil is sandy, extreamly hot, and almost naked; for there are scarcely any Trees in it excepting in the Eastern Quarter, where there are some Groves and Date Trees, which signify not much. There is still a great Aqueduct of Freestone to be seen, 'twas carried through the Middle of a large Town now demolish'd: And by the Bulk and Curiosity of it we may guess the Greatness of those Princes who possessed Garack. That which makes it still considerable is the Pearl Trade. Asia and Europe are furnish'd with these Jewels from hence: And all Lapidaries agree that there are few Pearls so beautiful as those that are fish'd upon the Coast of this Island. There are likewise upon the Shore, Shells of different Figures and Shades, and all so beautiful and nicely proportion'd, that they are worth seeing in a Virtuoso's Cabinet. * Baudrand. Carré, Voyage des Indes Orientales.

GARASSE (Francis), was born at Angoulême, and enter'd into the Society of the Jesuits A. D. 1601. He had Reading, Genius, and Elocution enough for the Pulpit. He distinguish'd himself first by his Zeal against Libertines and Atheists: These he attack'd in a Book entitled, La Doctrine Curieuse des beaux Esprits de ce Tems, ou pretendus tels; printed in 1623. The intemperate and drolling Manner of this Book was not at all agreeable to the Weight and Seriousness of the Cause he undertook to defend. The Prior Ogier, a famous Preacher, quickly publish'd Animadversions on this Performance, and dedicated them to the Jesuits: And here he charges Garasse with great Mismanagement, that his Book was more contriv'd for hardning than converting Rakes and Scepticks: That by relating the Principles and Objections of these Men of Dissolution, and offering nothing in Confutation, but slight Reasoning, and pleasant Stories, he had occasioned the Miscarriage of some People, and given Offence to others: and over and above, Ogier complains of him for interspersing some Strokes of Satyr upon Pasquier, Lipsius, Charron, and several other Authors of Sobriety and Credit.

Garasse publish'd an Apology against this Imputation, and being willing to let the World see he could confute Libertines and Atheists in a serious Way, he printed a Book in 1625, entitled, A Sum or concise Body of Divinity, where the Capital Truths of the Christian Religion are particularly handled. John du Verger, Abbot of St. Cyran, wrote a warm Answer against this Book: And the University complain'd of it to the Faculty of Divinity. Garasse offered at a Defence but without Success. His Sum was censured by the Faculty of Divinity at Paris, A. D. 1626. Four Years forward Garasse wrote a Tract, entitled, Rabelais Reforme, which is not, as some People mistook, a Correction of Rabellais's Book, but a controversial Tract against the French Protestant, Peter du Moulin, whom he charges with an Imitation of Rabelais. In 1622. he publish'd his Recherche des Recherches de Pâquier, in which he he uſes this famous Advocate very ill. This Jeſuit likewiſe wrote ſeveral Tracts out of Divinity, as, the Entertainment of the ſeven wiſe Men of Greece; a Latin Poem upon the Inauguration of Lewis XIII, with ſome Elegies upon the Death of Henry the Great: By which Performances it appears he was a much better Poet than a Divine. Pâquier's Sons publiſh'd a violent Satyr againſt Garaſſe in Revenge of his mal-treating their Father's Memory. Garaſſe after the Cenſure of his Book retir'd to Poitiers, where he made ſome Satisfaction for publiſhing his contraband Books: For the Plague being at this Town he ask'd his Superiors Leave to viſit the Sick in the Hoſpital; and in performing this very charitable Office he got the Plague, and died A. D. 1631, 46 Years of Age. * Alegambe Biblioth Script. Soc. Jeſu. Defence pour Etienne Pâquier. Memoires du Tems.

GARCEZ (Julian), an Aragonian of the Order of the Fryars Preachers. He took his Doctor of Divinity's Degree at Paris, return'd thence to Arragon, and manag'd the Divinity Chair there to Commendation ſeveral Years. The Emperor Charles V. nominated him for the firſt Biſhop of Tlaſcala, in the Province de los Angelos in Mexico. He was 70 Years of Age when he came to this See; here he ſpent all the Revenues upon the Poor of his Dioceſe. He built a famous Hoſpital between Mexico and Vera-Cruz for entertaining the Sick who came from Spain to go to the Eaſt-Indies, or who return'd thence into the Spaniſh American Dominions; and beſides furniſhing them with all Sorts of Conveniencies, he ſerv'd 'em himſelf. He govern'd this Dioceſe 20 Years, and was look'd on as the Father of the Poor, and the Guardian of Orphans and Widows. His Affection for the Indians, and his Zeal for Juſtice, made him diſlik'd by the Spaniards, who treated the Indians as if they had been no better than Brutes. Garcez wrote a Remonſtrance againſt this barbarous Uſage in a Letter to the Pope. He died with the Character of a very pious Prelate in 1520. * Diag. Hiſtor. Prov. Aragon. Lib. II. Cap. 36. Remez, Hiſtor. Provinc. Mexic. Lib. I. Cap. 42. Theat. Eccleſ. Hiſ. Pio, de Vir. Illuſt. Part II. Lib. IV. Col. 130.

GARCIA (John), a Spaniſh Dominican, after having gone thro' a Courſe of Study at Home, went to the Philippine Iſlands with a great many Miſſionaries of his Order A. D. 1632. He landed at firſt at the Iſland Formoſa to convert the Infidels; and here he built ſeveral Churches. After having ſpent ſome Time to good Purpoſe in this Country, he was ſent by his Superiors into China; where he arriv'd with two other Monks of his Order, A. D. 1636. Theſe Miſſionaries preach'd Chriſtianity without any Mixture of Innovation; but ſome ill-diſpos'd People provoking the Mandarins againſt them, they were oblig'd to abſcond three Years. Father Garcia, being roughly handled for refuſing to indulge his Converts a Compliance with ſome Chineſe Ceremonies, made his Eſcape to Formoſa. However, the Chineſe inviting him back, he return'd in the Year 1641. And having much more Liberty in this ſecond Miſſion, he travell'd over a great many Chineſe Provinces, and made Abundance of Converts. And after having ſpent 30 Years in China, and taken a great deal of Pains to propagate the Chriſtian Religion, he died in 1665. And here it muſt not be forgotten that he drew up a Catechiſm in the Chineſe Language. * Hiſt. du R. P. Grelon. Jeſuite, Cap. 28. Hiſtor. Philip. P. 2. Lib. I. Cap. 9, 10, 26, &c. & Lib. II. Cap. 38. Fontan. Monument. Dominic. 1662. & 1665.

GASPAR SIMEONI, or de Simionibus, born at Aquila in the Kingdom of Naples, Canon of St. Mary Major, Secretary to Pope Innocent X. wrote a Volume of Lyrick Poetry in Latin, and another in Italian; to which may be added his Miſcellanies in both Languages abovementioned, and his Panegyricks upon the Heroes of that Age. He was much valued by the Learned of his Time, and it may be ſaid of him that he made an handſome Effort to revive true Latin Poetry, which ſeem'd quite loſt in Italy. Simeoni's Attempt this Way, encourag'd ſome others to follow him, and amongſt the reſt Fabio Chigi, afterwards Alexander VII, together with thoſe who wrote the Latin Pleiade of this Pope. Gaſpar's Poems have Strength and Cadence in 'em, and are written in ſuch a beautiful Manner, that thoſe who are moſt indifferent to Poetry can't help being affected with them. * Hippolyt. Maraccius in Biblioth. Mariana. Leo Allatius in Lib. de Apib. Urbanis in Elogio Gabrieliis Naudæi, & in Elog. ejuſd. Gaſpar de Simeonibus.

GASTO, commanded the Lacedemonian Troops which were ſent to reinforce the Egyptians againſt the Perſians. This General being ſatisfy'd the Greeks would ſtand firmeſt in the Field, and that the Perſians were more afraid of them than of the Egyptians, ordered the Egyptians to change Arms with the Greeks, and drew up theſe latter in the Front. The Greeks and Perſians fighting for ſome time with equal Succeſs, Gaſto commanded the Egyptians to advance and ſupport the former. The Perſians who had hitherto maintain'd their Ground, upon the Miſtake of their being engag'd with the Egyptians, when they ſaw this new Body come on, took 'em for Greeks, and ran away. * Polyen. de Stratagem. Lib. II. pag. 136.

GATE, a long Chain of Mountains. They lie in India, and ſtretch from North to South quite through the Peninſula of India on this Side the Ganges, from the Kingdom of Cambaya to Cape Comorin. And thus this great Peninſula is divided into two equal Parts, one of 'em to the Weſt, and the other to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

GATIAN (Saint), firſt Biſhop of Tours, and one of thoſe, according to Gregorius Turonenſis, who were ſent into Gaul to preach Chriſtianity A. D. 260. 'Tis ſaid that he ſettled at Tours, made a great many Converts, and died there at the End of the third Century. A great Regard was paid to his Memory in this Town; and in St. Martin's Time his Corps was remov'd from the Church-Yard where he was buried, into the Church of St. Lidoire: and at preſent 'tis pretended that he lies in the Choir of the Cathedral Church at Tours, which has been called St. Gatian's ever ſince the XIV^th^ Century. In 1562. this Saint's Relicks were burn'd by the Hugonots; St. Gatian's Feſtival ſtands at the 18^th^ of December. * Gregor. Turon. Hiſt. Francor. Lib. I. Cap. 30. & Lib. X. Cap. 31. De Gloriâ Conf. Cap. 30. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

GAULMIN (Gibert), Lord of Montgeorges, born at Moulins in Bourbonnois, Counſellor of State, dyed in 1665, 80 Years old. He wrote Commentaries and Notes upon Pſellus de Operationibus Dæmonum; upon Euſtathius's and Theodorus Prodromus's Romances: He likewiſe wrote Notes upon a Tract of the Life and Death of Moſes made by a Rabbin: To which may be added his Remarks upon the pretended Calliſthenes. Gaulmin had the Reputation of one of the beſt Criticks in his Time, and receiv'd a great many Compliments from the learned then living. The Reader may ſee a Collection of theſe Ceremonious Applications in Colomeſius's Francia Orientalis. He had the Character of a ſure Hand in his Corrections: His Conjectures were well aim'd, and, if Coſtar may be believ'd, he was Maſter of all the Languages which were conſequent to the Confuſion at Babel; but his particular Excellency lay in Greek, Hebrew, Arabick, Turkiſh and Perſian. It were to have been wiſh'd that a Man of his Capacity had employ'd his Talent in more ſerious and ſignificant Studies. He was a faſt Friend to Cardinal Mazarin, and wrote biting Epigrams againſt the Parliament of Paris, two of which are inſerted in Gui Patin's 39^th^ and 74^th^ Letters. The Parſon of his Pariſh refuſing to marry him, he declared before him that he took ſuch an one for his Wife, and liv'd afterwards with her in that Relation: From hence this Sort of prohibited matrimonial Bargains, are call'd Gaulmin's Weddings. * Colomes. Gall. Orient. Baillet, jugement des Savans.

GAURE, or Gavere, a Town with a Caſtle belonging to it giving the Title of a Principality. It lies in Flanders within the County of Aloſt, upon the Schelde between Oudenarde and Ghent, two Leagues from each. * Maty, Diction.

GAYLINGIUS (John), born at Ilsfeld. He ſtudied firſt at Erford and afterwards at Wittemberg, where he made an Acquaintance with Luther, before this latter went off from the Church of Rome. This Change in Religion, inſtead of occaſioning a Rupture, brought on a cloſer Correſpondence. In the Year 1520. Luther ſent him Miſſionary to Ilsfeld. In ſhort, Gaylingius was the firſt that carried the Reformation into the Dutchy of Wittenbergh: He died in 1559. * Lewis-Melchior Friſchlin. Memoria Theologorum Wirtembergenſium reſuſcitata.

GELA,

GELA, a Town in Sicily built by the Rhodians and the Cretans, 45 Years after Syracuſe. 'Tis reported there was a Pond in this Town of ſo ſtrong and ill a Scent that there was no coming near it; and two Springs, one of which was good to improve Land, and the other made it barren. This Town was built at the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name: At preſent 'tis call'd Terra Nova. * Pliny. Lib. III. Cap. 8. Virgil. Æneid. Lib. III. Stephan. de Urbib.

* GELASIUS I. Pope, was an African, Son to Valerius, and was ſucceeded by Anaſtaſius II. Notwithſtanding the Conjectures ſome Criticks have advanc'd to prove the Tract againſt Eutyches and Neſtorius, does not belong to Pope Gelaſius, but to Gelaſius Cyzicenus, yet notwithſtanding ſuch Conjectures 'twas certainly written by this Pope. There are fifteen entire Epiſtles of this Pope extant; a Tract of Excommunication, a Diſcourſe againſt Andromachus, a Roman Senator, and ſome others who would have reviv'd the Lupercalia; and laſtly a Treatiſe againſt the Pelagian Tenet, that Men might live without Sin. * Gennad. Lib. III. Cap. 94. de Script. Eccleſ. Honor. Auguſtodun. Libell. III. Cap. 93. Baron. A. C. 492, 496. Bellarmin de Script. Eccleſ. Canus, in locis Theol. Lib. VI. Cap. 8, &c.

* GELASIUS, of Cyzicum, Son of a Prieſt of that Church, flouriſh'd in the Reign of the Greek Emperor Baſiliſcus about the Year 476. He wrote a Narrative of what paſs'd in the firſt general Council of Nice in two Books; for as to the third, it takes in only ſome of the Emperor Conſtantine's Letters. His Hiſtory of the Council of Nice was publiſh'd at Paris by Robert Balphor in the Year 1595, and was afterwards inſerted in the Councils; tho' to ſpeak clearly 'tis little better than a romantick Account. The Author pretends his Narrative tranſcrib'd from the old Acts of the Council formerly in the Cuſtody of Dalmatius, Biſhop of Cyzicum, to which he has made ſeveral Additions extracted chiefly from Euſebius Cæſarienſis and Ruffinus, which latter he calls a Roman Prieſt, and falſely aſſerts his having aſſiſted at the Council of Nice. In ſhort, this Hiſtory is moſtly a Collection taken out of Euſebius, Socrates, Sozomen and Theodoret: As to the Remainder, not borrow'd from theſe Authors, 'tis either uncertain or apparently falſe; under which latter kind we may reckon what he relates concerning the Philoſophers diſputing upon the Trinity and the Divinity of the holy Ghoſt. Theſe Conferences, from the 11th Chapter of the ſecond Book to the 24th Chapter are downright Fiction. He has fail'd in the Buſineſs and Character of an Hiſtorian in ſeveral other Reſpects: For there's neither Method in his Narration, nor Judgment in the Choice of his Matter, nor Beauty in his Elocution; to which may be added, his Remarks are trifling and ill made. * Photius, Biblioth. Num. 15, 88, 89, &c. Baron. Annal, Bellarmin, de Script. Eccleſ. M. Du. Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

GEM TCHELEBI, Son to Mahomet II, and younger Brother to Bajazet II. Mahomet II. dying in the 885 Year of the Hegira, and A. D. 1480, Bajazet, who was then in his Government of Amaſia, came immediately to Conſtantinople, and took Poſſeſſion of the Empire; but before he had been long in this Town he receiv'd Advice that his Brother Gem, aſſiſted with the Troops of Caramania, had ſeiz'd the Town of Burſa in Natolia, and made it the Capital of his Government. Upon this News Bajazet recall'd Ahmet Gheduc from Puglia: This Ahmet commanded the Sultan's Troops in Italy, and was ordered to march into Aſia, and fight Gem before he was farther reinforc'd. Ahmet defeated this young Sultan, and forc'd him to retire into Caramania with the Debris of his Troops in the 886 Year of the Hegira. Ahmet, notwithſtanding his Succeſs, was ſuſpected of a Correſpondence with Gem, becauſe he did not purſue him cloſe, and make the moſt of his Victory: Upon this Jealouſy Bajazet remov'd from Conſtantinople to finiſh his Brother's Ruin; And now the Armies coming to a ſecond Battle, Gem was routed, and forc'd to croſs the Sea and beg Aſſiſtance from the Souldan of Egypt. Soon after this, Bajazet ſtrangled Ahmet. As for Gem, he got a Report ſpread that he was gone in Pilgrimage to Mecha; but this was only to gain Time and cover his Deſign: For being reinforc'd in Egypt, he try'd his Fortune the third time in the Field againſt his Brother. But here being again routed, he fled to Rhodes for Protection, from whence the Great Maſter Peter d'Aubuſſon ſent him off to the Commandry of Bourgneuf in France. Bajazet underſtanding his Brother was in the Cuſtody of the Knights of Rhodes, concluded a Peace with 'em, and promis'd to pay them yearly 40000 Crowns in Gold, upon Condition they did not let him eſcape. Afterwards theſe Knights put this Prince into the Hands of Pope Innocent VIII. who ſent for him. Upon the Death of this Pope, Gem fell of Courſe into the Cuſtody of his Succeſſor Pope Alexander VI, who, for keeping him, had yearly 200000 Crowns paid him by Bajazet. The Pope was ſo punctual in performing his Word, that when Gem was wreſted out of his Cuſtody by Charles VIII. of France, then upon his Expedition for the Kingdom of Naples: At this Juncture 'tis thought his Holineſs ordered the giving Gem a ſlow Poiſon, of which he died at Terracina; This Doſe was given to prevent the French King's making uſe of him to embroil the Ottoman Empire. Cantacuzenus reports that Gem was but 28 Years old when he retir'd to Rhodes, and that he had left his Princeſs and his Son with the Souldan of Egypt; that this Son afterwards made his Eſcape to Rhodes, where turning Chriſtian he marry'd, and had Iſſue two Sons and two Daughters. Soliman, the Magnificent, happening to take Rhodes A. D. 1522. ordered Search to be made for Gem's Son, and having found him and his Children, he executed the Father and his two Sons for refuſing to turn Mahometans, and carried the two Daughters with him to Conſtantinople. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Oriental. L'Auteur de la Vie de Céſar Borgia. Cantacuzenus.

GEMINUS (Livius), a Roman Senator, was ſo mean a Paraſite as to declare in a full Houſe, with Oaths and Imprecations againſt himſelf and Family in caſe he reported a Falſhood, that he had ſeen the Princeſs Druſilla, lately deceas'd, fly up to Heaven. This Lady was Caligula's Siſter and his Wench; and 'twas to flatter the inceſtuous Paſſion of that Emperor that Geminus ſwore this Story. Seneca, tho' without naming him, rallies his Meanneſs in his Satyr upon the Apotheoſis of the Emperor Claudius. * Dion Caſſius, Lib. LIX. Senec. Ludicr. in Claud.

GEMINUS (Verbius), was ſent by the Emperor Vitellius againſt Anicetus, King Polemo's manumis'd Slave, who had rais'd Diſturbances in Aſia, taken Trepiſond, burnt the Fleet which guarded the Coaſt, and plunder'd the Country up to the Sea-ſide. Geminus defeated this Anicetus in October A. D. 68, forc'd him to retire for Shelter to the King of the Sedocheſi, who betray'd him for a Sum of Money. * Tacitus Hiſt. Lib. III. Cap. 47. & 48.

GEMUNDE, an Imperial Town in Germany. 'Tis ſcituate in Suabia, eleven Leagues from Stutgard to the Eaſt. This Town was at firſt an Abby belonging to the Benedictines, ſignifies, The Joy of the World in the Etymology, and 'tis this Name was given it becauſe the Nobility of Suabia us'd formerly to tilt there. None but Roman Catholicks can be Magiſtrates in this Town. The Territory belonging to it takes in twelve Villages, amongſt which Bergen, which has a fine Caſtle, is moſt conſiderable. * Baudrand.

GENGHISKAN, Son of Cham, or Emperor of the Moguls call'd Piſouca, was born at Diloun A. D. 1154. His Father was taken Priſoner by the King of China and laid in Irons, and made his Eſcape with great Difficulty: He died in his Preparation for a Revenge, Genghiskan being then but thirteen Years old. A Conſpiracy of his Subjects and a Confederacy of his Neighbours being form'd againſt this young Prince, he was forc'd to retire to Avenk-Ungkhan, Cham of Tartary, who is ſuppos'd to have been a Chriſtian, and the ſame with him commonly call'd Preſter John: Genghiskan being well receiv'd prov'd ſerviceable to Avenk-Ungkhan, not only in his Conteſts with the neighbouring Princes, but likewiſe with his Brother who had ouſted him. In ſhort, he reſtor'd his Entertainer and marry'd his Daughter Oiſoungin: However, notwithſtanding his great Services, Avenk-Khan reſolv'd to deſtroy him. Genghiskan ſmoaking the Deſign got off, and was purſued by Avenk-Khan and his Son: Genghiskan being not without Troops ſurpriz'd 'em both, and routed their Army. They were oblig'd to retire for Protection to Tabeneck, King of the Tartars, who put Avenk-

Khan to Death. His Son Schokoun making his Eſcape to the Country of Cacſhgar was likewiſe ſlain there. And now Genghiskan raiſing a great Army kept the Field with Succeſs 22 Years, and fought himſelf into large Dominions by the Victories gain'd upon the Moguls and Tartars, upon the Princes of Caracathay, againſt Mahomet call'd Khouarezm-Schah, King of Kariſme, of the Tranſocſaine, of Khovareme and Khoraſan, whoſe Dominions Genghiskan conquered, after having defeated him and his Sons in ſeveral great Battles. He reduc'd Tangut which had revolted, and made an Attack upon China. In fine, after having rais'd one of the greateſt Empires in the World he died in the 624th Year of the Hegira, and A. D. 1226, leaving his Son Octai his Succeſſor in the Kingdom of the Moguls; Giagathai, another Son, had the Tranſocſaine; and Tulican poſſeſs'd Khoraſan and Perſia for his Share. Bathou, Son of Giougio, who died living their Father, had the Country of Alen, of Rous and Bulgar above the Caſpian: This Prince had his Grandfather's martial Spirit, and conquered a great many Provinces. His Deſcendants continued powerful Princes, 'till Tamerlan ſeiz'd both their Dominions, and thoſe belonging to the Iſſue of Giagathai. Mangoucan, Son of Tulican, and his Brother Coblaican making themſelves Maſters of the Kingdom belonging to Octai's Deſcendants, made an Expedition into China. Coblaican was recogniz'd Emperor of China, A. D. 1280; and afterwards his Iſſue and Poſterity reign'd in that Country. But the Crown was not always ty'd to Proximity of Blood in the Mogul's Dominions; for ſometimes the Branch of Octai govern'd, ſometimes that of Coblai, and ſometimes that of Ortic-Bougar. Hulachou, Tuli's Son, and Brother to Coblai, ſucceeded his Father in the Kingdom of Khoraſan and Perſia, and conquered Part of Aſia. His Son Abacas, a Chriſtian Prince, ſucceeded him; but his Brother Ameth, of Nicoudor, a Mahometan, poiſon'd him A. D. 1280: But this Traytor was not long the better for his Perfidiouſneſs; His Subjects put him in Priſon, and took his Life.

Argoun, Abacas's Son, mounted the Throne after Ameth's Death, and was poiſon'd by a Jew. Ghendgiatou, his Brother and Succeſſor was aſſaſſinated by his Couſin Baidou, who held the Uſurpation but four Months. And now Ghazan, Argoun's Son, was acknowleg'd lawful Emperor: He was a Chriſtian, and made War upon the Mahometans. He over-run Syria, and march'd into Egypt, but loſt his Army there. However, he continued the War againſt the Souldan tho' with little Succeſs: Laſtly, he turn'd Mahometan and died A. D. 1303. Mahomet Chodabende, his Brother, ſucceeded him, and left the Government to his Son Abouſayd: This Prince was magnificent and brave, but his Pleaſures had too much the Aſcendant, and made him negligent in the Functions of Government.

After his Death, which happened in the Year 1335. the great Men parted his Dominions amongſt themſelves. And now the Deſcendants of Hulachou were thrown out of all, had nothing but an empty Title, and at laſt their Family was entirely deſtroyed by Cara Mehemed, a Turkiſh Prince, A. D. 1410. * D'Herbelot, Diction Oriental. Petis de la Croix, Hiſtoire du Grand Genghiskan I. Empereur des anciens Mogols & Tartares, edit. Paris, en douze 1710.

GENIALIS, firſt Duke of Gaſcony. Theodorick, King of Burgundy, erected this Dutchy, A. D. ſix hundred and two, and to make the Settlement more firm, beſides the Territories recover'd in Spain, viz. Pampeluna and the adjacent Country, the Vallies of Soule, lower Navarre, Baſſan and Labour, he likewiſe granted him five Cities in Novempopulania, annex'd to his Dutchy: Theſe Towns were Oleron, Bayonne, Acqs, Ayre and Bern. Aighinan ſucceeded Genialis, A. D. ſix hundred twenty ſix, Amand was the third Duke in ſix hundred thirty. Lupus was the fourth, who enlarg'd the Dutchy by gaining more Towns in Novempopulania. The Annals of Eginhardus mention another Lupus, Duke of Gaſcony, A. D. ſeven hundred ſixty nine, to whoſe Court Hunaut, Duke of Aquitain, retir'd, after having been defeated by Charlemain. * De Marca, Hiſtoire de Berne. Lib. I. Chap. xxiv. and xxvii.

GENNADIUS, Patriarch of Conſtantinople. His Works are not come down to us: There are only two Fragments remaining, one of 'em mention'd by Facundus, and the other by Leontius; the firſt is extracted from his Book written againſt St. Cyril's twelve Chapters; and the other Tract is addreſſed to Parthenius; as likewiſe a ſynodical Letter of this Biſhop againſt Perſons guilty of Symony. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

GENNADIUS, a Prieſt, 'Tis certain the Book de Dogmatibus Eccleſiaſticis was written by Gennadius. He likewiſe wrote eight Books againſt all the Hereſies then known, ſix Books againſt Neſtorius, three Books againſt Pelagius, and a Tract upon the Thouſand Years Reign in the Revelations. He never was a thorough Pelagian: However, he differed from St. Auguſtin's Sentiments upon the Points of Grace and Free-will, and follow'd Fauſtus Rienſis's Opinion, who is commonly reckon'd a Semi-Pelagian. He has added to S. Auguſtin's Tract of Hereſies four new Hereſies; viz. the Predeſtinarian, the Neſtorian, the Eutychian and Timothean. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Libra. Cent. V.

GENTILIS (Albericus), Law Profeſſor at Oxford, was Son to Matthew Gentilis an Italian Phyſician, and deſcended from an ancient and Gentleman's Family in Marcâ Anconitanâ. This Phyſician being ſenſible of the Corruptions in the Roman Communion, retir'd into Carniola, with Albericus, his eldeſt Son, and Scipio, the youngeſt but one of his ſeven Children. Albericus was ſent into England, where his Merit quickly recommended him to the Law Profeſſor's Chair in Oxford, A. D. 1582. He wrote three Books de jure Belli, which are ſuppos'd to have been not unſerviceable to Grotius. He likewiſe wrote three Tracts de Legationibus. His Diſputations upon the Subject of the abſolute Power of Princes, and touching the Union of the Kingdoms of Great Britain, and of the Injuſtice of reſiſting Kings in any Caſe, or, De vi Civium in Regem ſemper injuſtâ, are Evidences of his being a ſtrong Champion for the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance. His Books de Juris interpretibus, and de Advocatione Hiſpanicâ, are none of his leaſt Performances. He ſeems to have held the firſt Book of the Maccabees canonical. He likewiſe wrote a Tract in Defence of the Vulgate. He died at London, June, A. D. 1608, 58 Years of Age. * Scipio Gentilis, his Funeral Oration. Conig. Bibl. Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

GENTILIS (Scipio), Brother to Albericus, and no leſs eminent a Lawyer, was born at Caſtello di Sangeneſio in Italy, A. D. 1563. When his Father went off, he was forc'd to ſteal this Son from his Mother, who refus'd to quit either her Religion or her Country. Scipio ſtudied firſt at Tubinguen, and afterwards at Leyden, under Lipſius, and commenc'd Doctor of Law at Baſil, A. D. 1589. He afterwards travell'd to Heidelberg and Altdorf: He was likewiſe Counſellor, or Member of the Court of Juſtice at Nuremberg. He acquitted himſelf to Commendation in all theſe Poſts, and held his Reputation to his Death, which happened A. D. 1616. His Method of teaching was both clear and conciſe, and 'twas his Cuſtom to intermix Ornament with his Learning. He was invited to the Chair in France, Heidelberg and Leyden: And which is much more remarkable, Pope Clement VIII. promis'd him Liberty of Conſcience, upon Condition of his being Law Profeſſor at Bologna.

His Works are, De jure publico Populi Romani. De Conjurationibus, Libri duo. De Donationibus inter Virum & Uxorem, Libri quatuor. De bonis Maternis, & ſecundis Nuptiis, Libri duo. In Apuleii Apologiam Commentarius. De Juriſdictione, Libri tres. Commentarius in Pauli Epiſtolam ad Philemonem. De Erroribus Teſtamentorum. De antiquis Italiæ Linguis. Quæſtiones ad Africanum Juriſconſultum. Notes upon Tacitus. * See Scipio Gentilis's Funeral Oration ſpoken by Michael Piccart, Logick and Metaphyſick Profeſſor at Altdorf. 'Tis inſerted in Vitte's Collection.

GENTLEMEN in ordinary, belonging to the French King's Houſhold. They were firſt created by King Henry III. to the Number of five and forty, and reduc'd by Henry IV. to four and twenty, to which the Queen Mother added two in the Minority of Lewis XIV. Theſe Gentlemen wait ſix Months together, thirteen of 'em begin their Attendance in January, and thirteen in July. Their Buſineſs is to be always upon the Spot near the King, to receive his Commands, either to carry his Orders into the Provinces of the Kingdom, to the Parliaments and ſovereign Courts of Juſtice, to his Generals; or elſe tranſact Buſineſs with foreign Princes. The King diſpatches 'em with his Compliments of Congratulation or Condoleance to Kings, foreign Princes and Princeſſes: And when they happen to come into France theſe Gentlemen wait on 'em. They are likewiſe ſent to the French Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood, and to the Great Men of the Realm, either by Way of Viſit, or to carry 'em new Diſtinctions of Honour, Commiſſions and Employments. When they attend the King in the Field, they are his Aids de Camp, and the conveying Priſoners of War to Places of Security is their Buſineſs. And when Princes or Princeſſes are baniſh'd, or any other Perſons of Quality are confin'd, theſe Gentlemen ſtay with 'em. They likewiſe aſſiſt at the Funerals of the Children of France, where four of 'em hold up the four Corners of the Pall, and four others carry the Body. The King ſometimes makes 'em Governors to Princes of the Blood. They take no Oath of Allegiance, neither have they any Perſon to command 'em. They have their Diet at the Grand Maître or Steward of the Houſehold's Table. * Preſent State of France.

GERARD (John), one of the moſt conſiderable Divines belonging to the Lutheran Communion. He was born at Quedlimbourgh in Saxony, A. D. 1582. He was Divinity Profeſſor at Jena many Years, and died in 1637. He wrote a great many things much valued, of which there is a Catalogue in Henningius Witte's Theol. pag. 401. His principal Tracts are, Common Places in Divinity: A Catholick Confeſſion: The Harmony of the four Evangeliſts, partly done by Gerard, and partly by Chemnitius and Lyſerus; Commentaries upon Geneſis and Deuteronomy; upon St. Peter's Epiſtles, and the Revelations. He has the Commendation not only of his own Communion, but likewiſe of the Calviniſts. * Beirus in Rect. Jen. pag. 485. Spizelius in Templ. Honor. Thomaſius de Plagio, &c.

GERBASIUS (John), Doctor of Divinity in the Faculty at Paris, and of the Sorbonne, was born at Rupois, a Village in the Dioceſe of Rheims. He commenc'd Doctor in Divinity, A. D. 1661. and the Year after was made Rhetorick Profeſſor in the Royal College of France. He publiſh'd the Regulations agreed by the French Clergy for the Conduct of the Regulars, with Hallier's Notes. He afterwards publiſh'd another Latin Tract de Cauſis majoribus, to prove that Cauſes, in which Biſhops were concern'd, were to be try'd in the firſt Inſtance by the Metropolitan, and his Suffragans: A French Treatiſe of the Power of Kings upon the Engagement of Marriage; in which he ſteers a middle Courſe between Launoye, who makes it Part of the Prerogative Royal to throw in Bars and Impediments, and Galeſius, who gives this whole Privilege to the Church. He likewiſe wrote ſome Tracts in French touching the Goods and Propriety of Monks, Pariſh Prieſts and Biſhops, the expenſive dreſſing of Women, upon Plays, &c. Gerbaſe died in 1699. about 70 Years of Age. He had a lively Imagination, a ſtrong reaſoning Head, and wrote with conſiderable Ornament: But then it muſt be ſaid his Latin Stile is much more entertaining than his French. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Libra. Cent. XVII.

GERMANUS I, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was Son to Juſtinian, a Nobleman, executed by Conſtantine Pogonatus: Germanus liv'd in the eighth Century, and was dragged from the Church of Cyzicum to the See of Conſtantinople. There are three Letters of this Patriarch in the Acts of the VII^th^ General Council. The Theory or contemplative Diſcourſes reckon'd to him, belong to another Germanus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, living in the XII^th^ Century.

The Tract for which we have the beſt Evidence of its belonging to Germanus, is that de Retributione, of which Photius has given an Extract: And here he ſhews that Origen's Opinion, that the Torment of the damn'd will have an End, is falſely imputed to St. Gregory Nyſſen. Photius commends both the Style and Reaſoning of this Performance. Photius, Cod. 233. Zonaras. Cedrenus. Bellarmin. Baronius. &c.

GERMANUS II, ſirnam'd Nauphis, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, ſucceeded Manuel, and held the See about ſeventeen Years, from 1226. to 1243. He reſided at Nice, Conſtantinople being taken by the Latins. Moſt of the Tracts reckon'd to the firſt Germanus, belong to this latter: For Inſtance, his Myſtical Theory, or Rerum Eccleſiaſticarum Contemplatio, publiſh'd in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and by Greſter and Combefis; to which may be added two Epiſtles to thoſe of the Greek Communion in Cyprus, publiſh'd by Cotelerius; and ſome other controverſial Tracts againſt the Latins. * Biblioth. P. P. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

* GERMANY. The Provinces and Parts of Germany rang'd in alphabetical Order.

The Algou.
Alſatia.
The Arch-Biſhoprick of Saltzbourgh.
Auſtria.
Bavaria.
Biſhoprick of Aichſtat.
Biſhoprick of Bamberg.
Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim.
Biſhoprick of Liege.
Biſhoprick of Munſter.
Biſhoprick of Oſnaburg.
Biſhoprick of Paderborn.
Briſgaw (the Territory of).
Buchau (the Territory of).
Carinthia.
Carniola.
Caſſoubia (the County of).
County of Henneberg.
County of Hoye.
County of Marck.
County of Oldembourgh.
County of Ravensbourgh.
Creichgau (the Territory of).
Dutchy of Bremen.
Dutchy of Brunſwick.
Dutchy of Cleves.
Dutchy of Juliers.
Dutchy of Lauvembourg.
Dutchy of Lunenbourg.
Dutchy of Magdebourg.
Dutchy of Mons.
Eiffel (the Territory of).
Eiſchfeld (the Territory of).
Electorate of Cologne.
Electorate of Mentz.
Electorate of Saxony.
Electorate of Treves.
Franconia.
Frieſland (Eaſt).
Geraw (the Territory of).
Haveland (the Territory of).
Heſſe (the Upper).
Heſſe (the Lower.)
Holſtein (the Dutchy of)
Hundſtruck (the Territory of) Iſle of Rugen.
Luſatia.
Marquiſate and Electorate of Brandenbourg.
Miſnia.
Norgaw (the Territory of).
Ortnaw (the Territory of).
Oſterland (the Territory of).
Palatinate the Upper, or the Palatinate of Bavaria.
Palatinate the Lower, or the Palatinate of the Rhyne.
Pomerania the Hither.
Pomerania, the Farther.
Principality of Anhalt.
Principality of Verden.
Principality of Halberſtad.
Principality of Minden.
Saurland (the Territory of).
Suabia.
Sterneberg (the Territory of).
Stiria.
Sundgaw (the Territory of)
Tirol.
Thuringia.
Vaſgow (the Territory of).
Veſtervald (the Territory of).
Veſteran (the Territory of).
Voigtland (the Territory of) Weſtphalia.

The moſt conſiderable Cities and Towns in Germany.

Amberg.
Ausbourg.
Bamberg.
Bautzen.
Berlin.
Brandenbourg.
Bremen.
Briſac.
Brixen.
Brunſwick.
Camin.
Caſſel.
Coblentz.
Cologne.
Conſtance.
Drabourg.
Dreſden.
Embden.
Frankford upon the Maine.
Frankford upon the Oder.
Fribourg.
Friſingen.
Gorlitz.
Gratz.
Hal.
Halberſtad.
Hambourg.
Hanover Havelberg.
Hildeſheim.
Ingoldſtad.
Inſpruck.
Juliers.
Laubac.
Leipſik.
Liege.
Lintz.
Lubek.
Lunenburg.
Magdebourg.
Marpourg.
Mentz.
Meiſſen.
Mersbourg.
Meiden.
Mulhauſen.
Munick.
Munſter.
Naumbourg.
Neuſtat.
Nurembourg.
Oſnaburg.
Paſſaw.
Petau.
Ratisbon.
Roſtock.
Saint-Weit.
Saltzbourg.

Soeſt.
Spire.
Stetin.
Straelſund.
Straubingen.
Stutgard.
Trent.
Treves.
Tubingen.
Vienna.
Ulm.
Wiſmar.
Wittemberg.
Wolfembuttel.
Wormes.
Wurtzbourg.

The ſovereign Princes of Germany together with their reſpective Dominions.

The Emperor has the Kingdom of Bohemia; and in Germany his Dominions are Auſtria, Stiria, Carinthia, Carniola, the Territory of Windeſmarck, the County of Tirol with its Appurtenances, the Marquiſate of Burgaw, the Territories of Briſgaw and Ortnaw, and ſome other Lands in Suabia.

The Archbiſhop and Elector of Mentz is Sovereign of the Electorate of Mentz, the Country of Eiſenfeld, and the Towns of Erford and Fritzlar are likewiſe within his Dominions.

The Archbiſhop and Elector of Treves is Sovereign of the Electorate of Treves, and of the Abby of Prum, which is annex'd to it.

The Archbiſhop and Elector of Cologne has the Electorate of Cologne along the Rhyne with the Dutchy of Weſtphalia, and the Earldom of Reclinchuſe.

The Duke and Elector of Bavaria is ſeiz'd of the Dutchy and Electorate of Bavaria, of the Upper Palatinate, of the Landraviate of Leuchtemberg, of the Earldoms of Chamb and Mindelheim, and of the Town of Donavert.

The Duke and Elector of Saxony poſſeſſes the Electorate of Saxony, with the Upper Luſatia, Miſnia, the Biſhoprick of Meiſſen, the Counties of Mansfeld and Barby, and the four Baillywicks diſmembred from the Bourgraviate of Madgebourg.

The Duke and Elector of Brandenbourg (now King of Pruſſia) is Sovereign of all the Marquiſate of Brandenbourg, of the Dutchy of the Farther Pomerania, of Madgebourg, Cleves, and Coſſein, of the Principalities of Halberſtad, Minden, and Camin, and of the Counties of Marck and Ravensbourg, together with ſome Towns in Luſatia: And out of Germany, he is Sovereign of the Dutchy of Pruſſia, and two of the Territories of Rutow and Louvembourg.

The Count and Elector Palatine has for his Dominions the Lower Palatinate or the Palatinate upon the Rhyne which is an Electorate, the Dutchies of Simmeren and Juliers, of Mons and Nubourg, with the greateſt Part of the County of Spanheim.

The Archbiſhop of Saltzbourg has the Territories belonging to the Archbiſhoprick of Saltzbourg: 'Tis conſiderably large, and lies within the Circle of Bavaria.

The Biſhop of Munſter is Sovereign of that Biſhoprick, which reaches a great Way in Weſtphalia. See Munſter.

The Biſhop of Liege is Sovereign within that Biſhoprick, which ſtretches a great Way upon the Maeſe.

The Biſhop of Wurtzbourg is Duke of Franconia, and his Territories lie upon the Maine in Franconia.

The Biſhop of Bamberg's Dominions lie partly in Franconia, and partly in Carinthia.

The Biſhop of Paderborne's Territories lie in Weſtphalia.

Part of the Biſhop of Strasbourg's Country lies in the Territory of Ortnaw in Suabia, and the reſt in Alſatia.

The Biſhop of Ausbourg's Territories are in Suabia upon the Frontiers of Bavaria.

The Biſhop of Friſingen's Territories are within Bavaria.

The Biſhop of Baſil's Territories are within the Circle of the Upper Rhine, upon the Confines of France and Switzerland.

The Biſhop of Conſtance's Dominions lie upon the Lake of the ſame Name in Suabia upon the Borders of Switzerland.

The Biſhop of Hildeſheim's Territories lie in Lower Saxony within the Biſhoprick of Brunſwick.

The Biſhop of Paſſaw's ſmall Territories are in Bavaria near his See.

The Biſhop of Ratisbon's Territories are near the Town of that Name in Bavaria; his Dominions are very narrow.

The Biſhop of Spire's Territories are within the Circle of the Upper Rhyne, near the Lower Palatinate and Alſatia.

The Biſhop of Worm's ſmall Country lies near the Town of that Name, and wholly within the Lower Palatinate.

The Biſhop of Lubeck has the ſmall Territory of Eutyn near the Town laſt mention'd; almoſt all this Biſhoprick is ſeculariz'd to the younger Brothers of the Dukes of Holſtein.

The Abbot of Fulde has the Territory of Buthan within the Circle of the Upper Rhine.

The Abbot of Kempten's Lands are within the Circle of Suabia.

The Abbot of Corvey's Territories are upon the Weſer in Weſtphalia.

The Provoſt of Elbang has his Territories in Suabia.

After the Electors and the Eccleſiaſtical Sovereigns the French and Dutch Supplementors ſubjoin theſe ſecular Princes in the following Order.

The Duke of Brunſwick and Lunenberg of the Houſe of Zell has the Dutchy of Lunenberg and the Counties of Daneberg, Hoye and Diepholt.

The Duke of Brunſwick and Lunenberg of the Houſe of Hanover, is Sovereign of the Dutchies of Calemberg, Gottenguen and Grubenhaguen. Theſe two Families are now reunited.

The Duke of Brunſwick and Lunenberg, of the Branch of Wolfenbutel, has the Territory of Wolfenbutel, and the Town and Territory of Brunſwick for his Dominions.

The Duke of Mechlenberg Schwerin has half the Dutchy of Mechlenberg, and the Principalities of Schwerin and Ratzeburg in the Lower Saxony.

The Duke of Mechlenberg Guſtraw has half the Dutchy of Mechlenberg with a Quarter of Guſtraw.

The Duke of Holſtein Sleſwick, of the Branch of Gottorp, has half the Dutchy of Holſtein lying in ſeveral Places: He has likewiſe a Moiety of the Dutchy of Sleſwick; but this lies out of Germany: And this Duke has had great Conteſts with the King of Denmark, who in 1714. had ouſted him of moſt of it.

The Dukes of Holſtein, of the Branches of Sunderberg, Noderbourg, Glusbourg, Arensbec and Ploen have their ſmall Territories in Holſtein near the Places of the ſame Name.

The Duke of Wirtemberg's Territories lie in Suabia.

The Landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel is Sovereign of the greateſt Part of the Lower Heſſe, and of a good deal of the Upper, together with the Principality of Hirſchfeld, and Smalcalde.

The Duke of Saxony, of the Branch of Zuenfurt, is Sovereign of a great Part of Thuringia, with four Bailywicks taken out of the Dutchy of Magdebourg.

The Duke of Saxe-Mersbourg has the Dutchy of Mersbourg in Thuringia, and the Lower Luſatia.

The Duke of Saxe-Naumbourg has the Lands belonging to the Biſhoprick of Naumbourg in Thuringia, the greateſt Part of Voigtland, with the Parcel of the County of Henneberg.

The Dukes of Saxe Weimar, Eiſenach, and Jena have the little Territories of thoſe Names, with Part of the County of Henneberg.

The Duke of Saxe Gotha has the Cantons of Gotha, and Altembourg, otherwiſe call'd Afterland.

The Duke of Saxe Cobourg holds the Territory of Cobourg in Franconia.

The Marquiſs of Anſpach, of the Houſe of Brandenbourg, has the Marquiſate of Anſpach, which takes in the Lower Burgraviate of Nuremberg in Franconia.

The Marquiſs of Culenbach Bareith, of the Houſe of Brandenbourg, has the Marquiſate of Culenbach, which is in the Upper Burgraviate of Nuremberg in Franconia.

The Landgrave of Heſſe-Darmſtat has Legereaw, and the greateſt Part of the Upper Heſſe.

The Landgrave of Heſſe-Rhinfels has Part of the County Catzenellobogen upon the Rhyne, together with the Territories of Eſchwege and Rotemberg in the Lower Heſſe.

The

The Marquiſs of Baden has the upper Marquiſate of Baden in the Circle of Suabia, and Part of the County of Spanheim.

The Marquiſs of Baden-Durlach has the Lower Marquiſate of Baden, and Part of the Territory of Briſgaw.

The Prince Palatine, of the Branch of Birkenfels has the Principality of Birkenfels, and Part of the County of Spanheim in the Circle of the Upper Rhine.

The Princes of Anhalt, of the Branches of Deſſau, Bernbourg, Zerbſt and Plotzken have each their little Canton out of the Principality of Anhalt in Upper Saxony.

The Prince of Eaſt Friezland has Eaſt Friezland within the Circle of Weſtphalia, which is likewiſe call'd the County of Embden.

The Prince of Naſſau Hadamar holds the Principality of Hadamar Weſterwald within the Circle of the Upper Rhine.

The Prince of Zolleren holds the Principality of Zolleren in Suabia.

The Prince of Aremberg has the Principality of Aremberg in the Territory of Eiffel within the Circle of the Lower Rhine.

The Prince of Furſtemberg has the Territory of Furſtemberg in Suabia near the Head of the Danube and Switzerland.

The Prince of Etting's Principality lies in Suabia.

Beſides theſe Princes, there are a great many others mention'd under their reſpective Articles. There are likewiſe in Germany a great many Counties or Earldoms which hold only of the Empire: they are divided into four Claſſes, viz. thoſe of Tettereaw, of Suabia, of Franconia and Weſtphalia.

We are to obſerve farther, that the French King is Sovereign of the Upper and Lower Alſatia in Germany, together with the Territory of Sundgaw; but all this is now no longer Parcel of the Empire, being yielded to the Crown of France at the Treaty of Weſtphalia, A. D. 1648, and at that concluded at Nimeguen in 1679. The King of Denmark likewiſe has half the Dutchy of Holſtein in Germany, together with the Counties of Oldenberg and Delmenhorſt; but then he holds 'em as Fiefs of the Empire: And by the ſame Tenure the King of Sweden had the Hither Pomerania and the Dutchy of Bremen, the Principalities of Verden and Rugen, and the Town of Wiſmar, all which were granted to him at the Treaty of Oſnabrug: But now he has loſt all his Dominions in Germany.

Some Authors make the Kingdom of Bohemia Part of Germany, but without Propriety; for it neither lies in Germany, nor is Parcel of the Empire: 'Tis a ſeparate independent State, and very conſiderable with all its Appurtenances; they don't ſpeak High Dutch, their Language being the Sclavonian, neither do they ſo much as pretend to a German Original. * Heſſe, State and Deſcription of Germany. Baudrand.

To the Emperors of the Houſe of Auſtria, in Morery Vol. I. add

The Beginning of their Reign. Years	Months	Days		Length of their Reign. Y.	M.	D.
1657	April	2	Leopold-Ignatius-Francis-Balthaſar-Joſeph-Felician.	48	10	27
1705	May	5	Joſeph-James-Ignatius-John-Anthony-Euſtachius, he died Apr. 17, 1711.	5	11	13
1711	Octob.	12	Charles-Francis-Joſeph- now reigning, A. D. 1715.

GERVASIUS and Protaſius, (Saints) two Martyrs whoſe Corpſe were found at Milan when St. Ambroſe was Biſhop, A.D. 386: This happen'd when they were preparing to conſecrate the great Church in that Town. St. Ambroſe dream'd the Corpſe of theſe two Saints were lodg'd in St. Nabor and S. Felix's Church: He ordered the Sexton to dig there; and here the Bones of theſe two Martyrs were found with their Names cut upon their Coffins, for St. Ambroſe does not declare their Names were diſcover'd to him in his Dream. Soon after the opening of the Grave, ſeveral Miracles were wrought, and the Relicks of theſe Saints were firſt remov'd to St. Fauſtus's Church, and from thence to the Ambroſian. While the Corps were removing, one Severus, a Man ſtark blind, upon his touching ſome of the Flowers and Ornaments which lay upon the Martyrs Relicks, recover'd his Sight the ſame Minute: Several other Miracles were done during the Ceremony, which was a great Mortification to the Arians. The Feſtival of this removing their Relicks has been kept at Milan and in Africk ever ſince the fifth Century: And a religious Reſpect is likewiſe paid to the Memory of theſe two Saints by the Greek Church. * Ambroſ. Epiſt. ad Marcellinam 54 vet. Edit. 22 novæ. Auguſtin. de Civit. Dei, Lib. XXII. Cap. 8. Confeſſ. Lib. IX. Cap. 7. & de Curâ pro Mort. Cap. 17. Paulin. in Vit. Ambroſ. &c.

GEZAIRA, formerly Eden; an Iſland belonging to the Turks in Aſia. 'Tis three Leagues in Compaſs, and lies in the Tigris four Leagues below Bagdat. Diarbeck or Meſopotamia is likewiſe call'd Gezaira, which ſignifies an Iſland, becauſe 'tis in a Manner enclos'd between the Euphrates and the Tigris. * Baudrand.

GEZIRA, an old Town in Aſſyria. It ſtands in the Province of Erzerom in a little Iſland in the Tigris, between the Towns Diarbekir and Moſul, about 30 Leagues from each. It belongs to the Turk. * Baudrand.

GHERA, or Ghiera d'Adda, a ſmall Diviſion in Italy. Part of it lies within the Dutchy of Milan, and Part belongs to the Republick of Venice, and 'tis enclos'd between the Rivers Adda and Serio. The Towns in it are Calvenzano and Carravagio, to which may be added the Village of Agnadel famous for the Battel Lewis XII. King of France gain'd upon the Venetians A. D. 1509. * Maty, Diction.

* GILBERT of Sempringham, Founder of the Order of the Gilbertines in England, was born at Lincoln in the Conqueror's Reign, A. D. 1084. Being deſigned at the firſt for a Churchman he was ſent into France for Education; at his Return into England he was entertain'd in the Family of Robert Blunt, Lord Chancellor, promoted to the See of Lincoln A. D. 1093. Afterwards Gilbert ſet up a publick School, was ordain'd Prieſt, and made Penitentiary of the Church of Lincoln, by Biſhop Alexander, who ſucceeded Robert A. D. 1123. And now he founded the Order of Sempringham, ſo call'd from his Father's Family in Lincolnſhire. He was the Founder of eight Nunneries and two Monaſteries, beſides ſeveral Hoſpitals: However, the Rule ſettled by him for the Government of theſe Religious, gave him a great deal of Trouble, and Complaints were made againſt him to Pope Alexander III. The Lay Brothers of his Order mutiny'd againſt him. And tho' he had the good Fortune to get over this Difficulty by the Aſſiſtance of the Pope and King Henry II, he afterwards had a Share in the Diſgrace which fell upon Archbiſhop Beckett. Some little time before he died, he reſign'd his Government, procur'd the Election of Roger one of the Convent, and obey'd him as his Superior. He died A. D. 1189. being 106 Years of Age.

Innocent III. allowed the paying a particular Reſpect to his Memory, and 'twas not long before his Name got into the Martyrology, where it ſtands at the fourth of February. * Harpsfield, Hiſt. Angl. Cent. XII. Pitſeus de Script. Angl.

GILLON or Ægidius, a Roman who commanded the Roman Forces in Gaul, and reſided commonly at Soiſſons. The French, who had expell'd Childerick I. for Male-Adminiſtration, ſet the Crown upon Gillon's Head. Guinomand, who had an hearty Affection for the King depos'd, went over to Gillon, and by counterfeiting made ſuch an Intereſt in him, that he did nothing without his Advice. Having thus the Aſcendant, he puſh'd him upon violent Meaſures; inſomuch that this new Prince was much more hated than Childerick, whoſe ill Fortune had now brought him to Recollection and Temper. Guinomand wrought the Project ſo dexterouſly, that he got Childerick reſtor'd A. D. 463. However, the Revolution was not brought about without Blows, but Gillon ſunk in the Conteſt, and was routed in the Field with the auxiliary Troops in his Service. Idacius reckons his Death to the Year 464; from whence it follows that Gregory of Tours and ſome other Authors, who report Childerick eight Years unreſtor'd, are miſtaken. * Idacius, in Chron. Gregor. Turon. Lib. II. Fredegar. Sigebert, &c.

GILLOTIUS (Germanus), Prieſt and Doctor of Divinity in the Sorbonne, was extracted from a Gentleman's Family in Paris. He exhauſted his Fortune in Charities Charities beſtow'd upon the Education of poor Children, he bred between five and ſix hundred to the Study of Languages and other Parts of Learning. Some of 'em became famous at the Bar, and others commenc'd Doctors in Divinity, Law and Phyſick. They call'd 'em Gilotines, which Diſtinction was look'd on as good Evidence for their Regularity and Improvement. Gillotius was a Man of Courage, as well as a learned Divine. In 1656, when the ſecond Letter of Anthony Arnauld was cenſur'd, he declar'd againſt the five Propoſitions upon the Subject of Grace, which had been cenſur'd at Rome by the Popes Innocent X. and Alexander VII; and here 'twas his Opinion that in Queſtions of Fact, no body ought to maintain that Popes, or even General Councils were infallible; concluding his Opinion in theſe Words, quod Arnauldus Hæreticus ſit, ſatis non liquet, declaring at the ſame time againſt proceeding to Cenſure, and notwithſtanding he had no Preferment in the Church, he gave an hundred thouſand Crowns in Charity during his Life, beſides conſiderable Benefactions at his Death. * Memoires du Tems.

GIOACHINO, Græco, commonly call'd the Calabrian, was the moſt famous Cheſſe Player in his Time. For notwithſtanding he had travell'd to all the Courts on Purpoſe, he could never meet his Match. At the French Court, the Duke of Nemours, Arnaud le Carabin, Chaumont, and la Salle, valu'd themſelves extreamly for their Skill at this Diverſion, but none of 'em were able to hold up the Game againſt Gioachino, for he beat 'em firſt ſingle, and then altogether. In ſhort, he was a meer Hero at Cheſſe, who like a Knight Errand went in queſt of ſome body to tilt with, and whenever he enter'd the Liſts he had always the better of the Combat. A Man of Quality did him the Honour of the Verſes following.

A peine dans la Carriere
Contre moi tu fais un pas,
Que parta demarche fiere
Tous mes Projets ſont a bas:
Je vois des que tu t'avances,
Ceder toutes mes défenſes,
Tomber tous mes Champions;
Dans ma reſiſtance vaine,
Roi, Chevalier, Roc & Reine,
Sont moindres que des pions.

Theſe are taken from a Letter in the Mercure Gallant for the Month of December 1693. * Memoires du Tems. Bayle. Diction. Hiſtor.

GIOIA, a Town with a Caſtle. 'Tis in the farther Calabria a Province in the Kingdom of Naples. It ſtands at the Mouth of the Marro or Metauro, in the Gulph of Gioia: It lies between the Gulph of St. Euphemia and the Fare of Meſſina, which is the ſame the Ancients call'd Sinus Brutius, or Brutiorum Sinus. There's another Gioia in the Kingdom of Naples. It ſtands in the Territory of Bari between the Town Bari and the Gulph of Tarentum. * Baudrand.

GIR or Ghir, a great River in Africk. It has two Springs, one in Dara, a Country of Bilebulgerid, the other in the Deſert of Ghir. Theſe two Springs join in the Deſert of Zuenziga. This River thus form'd croſſes the Deſert of Targa, and falls into a Lake of the ſame Name, and iſſuing out from hence, according to ſome Maps, waters the Deſert of Lempta, the Kingdom of Borno, and after falling into the Lake Nuba, and ruſhing out takes the Name of Nubia, and at laſt diſcharges it ſelf into the Nile. * Wiſcher's Map of Africk.

GIRARD DE VILLE THIERRY (John), a Prieſt of Paris much recommended for his Piety and Learning, liv'd at the latter End of the XVII^th^ Century, and wrote a great many practical and devotional Tracts in French. To mention ſome of 'em: Le veritable Penitent: Le Chemin du Ciel: La vie des Vierges, des gens Mariés, des Veuves, & des Religieux & Religieuſes: Des riches & des pauvres, &c. The learned Du Pin obſerves that if all Girard's Tracts were put into one Collection, they would make a Body of Morality for all Degrees and Conditions. As to the Authorities upon which they ſtand; they are extracted from the holy Scriptures, from the Fathers and Councils. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* GIRINGBOMBA, an African Kingdom in Biafara, a Country in the Lower Æthiopia. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Kingdom of Metra; on the Weſt by that of Mujac; on the South by the Kingdom of Macoco; and on the Eaſt the Giaques, the Lake Niger, and Abiſſinia confine upon it. This Kingdom is likewiſe call'd Giribuma, and their Monarch is reported a powerful Prince, and that he has fifteen Kings for his Homagers, which by the Way have but very narrow Dominions. As to the Particulars of this Country, we know little, excepting that the Natives are Blacks, Pagans and Cannibals. * Maty, Diction.

GLADIATORS. The Cuſtom of this Profeſſion is originally deriv'd from the Aſiaticks, who fancied the deſtroying People at theſe Combats was a great Reſpect to their deceas'd Relations. The Trojans were ſo far dipt in this Superſtition, that the Women had Courage enough to open their Veins and bleed over the Graves or Funeral Piles of their Friends. Junius Brutus was the firſt Roman who paid this Regard to his Father's Memory: And Tacitus informs us that Tiberius honour'd his Grandfather's Funeral with two Prizes of Gladiators; one of which was fought in the Great Square, and the other in the Amphitheatre.

Thoſe who profeſs'd this bruiſh Trade of fighting, had always a Mark of Infamy upon 'em: At firſt none but Slaves offer'd themſelves for this Diverſion: But afterwards Perſons of Condition, who had run out their Circumſtances, turn'd Gladiators: And ſometimes Malefactors condemn'd to Death, and Priſoners of War, were forc'd to engage this Way. As to the common Sort of Gladiators, 'twas the Cuſtom to pick out ſtrong active Men; theſe were taught to fence, and no Coſt was ſpar'd to keep 'em in good Condition, to give 'em Force and Spirits to entertain the Company; And therefore Pliny, who reports their Diet was Barley-Bread and Water, was moſt probably miſtaken. Theſe Gladiators were rang'd under the ſeveral Claſſes following, Sequatores, Retiarii, Thraces, Myrmillones, Hoplomachi, Samnites, Eſſedarii, Andabatæ, Dimachæri, Meridiani, Fiſcales, Poſtulatitii.

The Weapons for the firſt were a Sword and a Club with Lead at the Head on't. The ſecond had a Trident and a Net, which they endeavour'd to throw over the Enemy. The third fought with a Sort of Cimetar, and went by the Name of their Country. The fourth call'd Myrmillones, from Myrmidones Achilles's Swaſh Bucklers, whom the Romans believ'd to be of Gauliſh Original, had a Fiſh carv'd upon the Top of their Headpiece. The Retiarian Fencer preſſing upon this Myrmillo, who traverſed his Ground, us'd to ſay, non te peto Galle, ſed Piſcem peto, that is, I aim only at the Fiſh, I have no Deſign to entangle you in my Net. The fifth call'd Hoplomachi were arm'd Cap-a-pee. The ſixth had the Name of Samnites, from the Averſion the Romans had to that People; and to refreſh the Idea of their Conqueſt, they fought with the Samnites Arms. The ſeventh fought in Chariots or Carts, and from thence had the Name of Eſſedarii. The eighth fought on Horſeback, and were ceel'd like Pigeons, and took their Diſtinction from being thus blinded. The ninth fought with two Swords in their Hand, and from thence had the Name of Dimachæri. The tenth, or the Meridiani, were thoſe who had been thrown to wild Beaſts, and come off with ſomething of Life and Limb: Theſe after they had diſengag'd themſelves from Lyons and Tygers, were forc'd to cut each others Throats to divert the People. The eleventh, or the Fiſcales, were ſo diſtinguiſh'd from their being maintain'd out of the publick Exchequer. The twelfth being ſome of the braveſt, and kept to entertain the Emperors, the People would frequently bawl for 'em, which made 'em call'd Poſtulatitii.

The Buſineſs of theſe Gladiators was to kill the Perſon they engag'd with, or at leaſt to defend their Lives handſomely, and die with a good Grace. When they came off with Succeſs, the Emperors and thoſe that furniſh'd the Spectacle, either diſmiſs'd 'em, gave 'em their Liberty, or ſome conſiderable Bounty. When they were diſcharg'd, they were not oblig'd to fight excepting upon Choice. And for a Mark of this Diſcharge they had a Wand given 'em call'd Rudis; as the Phraſe was, Rude donabantur: And when they were enfranchis'd, they had a Cap, for Evidence of their Manumiſſion. Conſtantine put down theſe Gladiators firſt; and afterwards when the Diverſion was reviv'd, 'twas prohibited by Arcadius and Honorius: And laſtly, Theodorick, King of the Oſtrogoths in Italy, wholly ſuppreſſed the Combats of the Gladiators, A. D. 500. * Roſin. Antiquit. Roman. Lib. V. Cap. 24.

GLEICHEN, a German Count, whoſe ſtrange Adventure it may not be amiſs to report. He was taken Priſoner in a Battle againſt the Turks, carry'd into Turkey, and underwent a long and rugged Confinement. They forc'd him upon digging and other ſervile Works; and as for his Deliverance, 'twas particularly ſurprizing. His Maſter's Daughter came up to him one Day as ſhe took a Walk, and ask'd him ſeveral Queſtions. This Lady, who was a Perſon of great Quality, was ſo much pleas'd with his Mien and Handineſs at his Buſineſs, that ſhe promis'd to ſet him at Liberty, and go along with him, upon Condition he would marry her. I have a Wife and Children, ſays the Count; that ſignifies nothing, replies the Lady, 'tis the Cuſtom in Turkey to have ſeveral Wives. The Count, who it ſeems was not very ſcrupulous, reſign'd to this Argument, and gave his Parole of Honour. The Lady work'd the Point ſo dexterouſly, that in a little time they got Aboard, and arriv'd at Venice. Here the Count met with one of his Men, who had rang'd about almoſt every where to get News of him. The Count underſtanding by this Perſon, that his Wife and Children were well, went immediately to Rome: And here making a frank Confeſſion of what he had done, the Pope gave him a Diſpenſation in Form to live with both his Wives. As to the Count's firſt Lady, ſhe was no leſs complaiſant than the Court of Rome: She treated the Turkiſh Lady with all imaginable Civility and Reſpect, and had a particular Affection for her, upon the Score of her having diſengag'd her Husband from Slavery; the Turkiſh Lady anſwered all this courteous Uſage with reciprocal Ceremony and Regard. And for a Voucher, there's a Record of the Fact at Erford. Now this Inſtance, if the Court of Rome will agree to it, may go for a Parallel to the Landgrave of Heſſe's double Marriage. * Hondorf, Theatrum Hiſtoricum.

GLEICHEN (the County of), a ſmall Precinct within the Circle of the Upper Saxony. It lies in Thuringia with the Territory of Erford to the Weſt. This Country belong'd to the Counts of the Houſe of Schwartzburg; but after the Death of the laſt Count of Gleichen, which happened in the Year 1639, the Archbiſhop of Mentz gave the Fees belonging to his Church, with the Reſervation of Homage, to the Count of Hazfeld; and the Dukes of Saxony inveſted the Count of Hohenloe with the reſt. This Partition, notwithſtanding great Conteſts to ſet it aſide, ſtill continues. The County takes its Name from the Caſtle of Gleichen, which ſtands between Erford and Gotha. * Maty, Diction.

GLISKOVATZ, a Town in European Turkey. 'Tis in Servia about twelve Leagues from Novibazar to the Weſt, and ſtands upon the River Veternitza, which falls ſoon after into the Lepanar. * Maty, Diction.

GNOMONICKS, or the Art of Dialling, is a Branch of the Mathematicks: 'Tis ſo call'd from the Gnomon or Pin of the Dial, which Points out the Hour by the Shadow. Diogenes Laertius and Aulus Gellius give the Invention of Sun-Dials to Anaximander, and tell us this Philoſopher made a Sun-Dial at Sparta in the LVIII Olympiad. Others will have Anaximenes the Mileſian the firſt in this Art. Salmaſius in his Notes upon Solinus makes it appear that Aſtrology and Dialling came from Babylon into Greece in the Lth Olympiad. 'Tis hard to aſſign the preciſe time when the Art of Dialling was practiſed at Rome. Pliny reports that from the time of his writing 'twas four hundred and ſeven Years ſince Marcus Valerius ſet up a Dial in the great Square at Rome.

Clavius has wroughr a Book in Folio of the Art of Dialling, which has exhauſted the Subject. There is likewiſe a Tract of reflex Dialling, which teaches the Art of making Dials to tell the Hour by the Reflexion of the Light upon all Sorts of Surfaces. * Diog. Laert. in Vit. Anaximand. Gellius, Noct. Att. Lib. I. Cap. 9. Salmaſ. in Solin. pag. 632, &c.

* GNOSTICKS: The Gnoſticks are not a particular Sect, but a Complication of ſeveral Sub-Diviſions of the firſt Hereticks; they were ſo call'd becauſe they pretended to extraordinary Knowledge and Illumination. This pretended Knowledge began in the Apoſtles times, and the Claim is cenſur'd by St. Paul in his firſt Epiſtle to Timothy. The main Branch of this Pretenſion lay in the Combinations and Genealogies of their Æons, or Attributes of the Deity; but theſe Combinations being no better than arbitrary and precarious Fancies, they differ'd about the Number and Order of theſe Æons, which Diſagreement made different Sects amongſt 'em; but the main Errors, which almoſt all of 'em fell into, are as follow: 1. They ſuppos'd a chimerical Production of Æons which amount to ſo many Deities or divine Attributes. 2. They held the Creation and Government of the World was the Reſult and Buſineſs of theſe Æons: Or at leaſt that Creation and Providence was effected and carried on by Angels and produc'd by theſe Æons, and that the ſupream Being had no Hand in it: 3. They believ'd the Moſaick Inſtitution a Rule ſet by the Demiurgus or Creator of the World, whom they diſtinguiſh'd from the Sovereign or Celeſtial Æons, which made up the Pleroma or Plenitude of the Deity: 4. They held that Chriſt ſent from Heaven to ſave Mankind, did not aſſume real Fleſh, and that of Conſequence his Sufferings were only in Appearance; from which Heterodoxy they were call'd Docetæ: 5. Their Principles led 'em to Licenſe and Diſſolution, they maintain'd 'twas not only lawful but commendable to reſign themſelves to Appetite and the animal Life: And as for their Practice, 'twas remarkably ſcandalous. They hated faſting, and diſapprov'd Martyrdom. They are charg'd with bruiſing an Infant in a Mortar and eating him afterwards, and with other Inſtances of infamous Practice, which Juſtin Martyr does not venture to charge 'em with. The Gnoſticks are ſubdivided into ſeveral Diſtinctions: Some of the firſt in this Hereſy were call'd Entuchytæ, they were the Diſciples of Simon Magus: We meet with 'em in the ſeventh Book of Clemens Alexandrinus's Stromata, and in Pamphilus's Apology for Origen, where 'tis ſaid they oppos'd the Goſpel to the Law and the Prophets, and affirm'd that Jeſus Chriſt was not the Son of him who gave the Law, but of another unknown Deity. The Gnoſticks were likewiſe call'd Barbelonitæ, Borboritæ, Stratiotici, Zacheans, Coddians, &c. They had ſeveral Apocryphal Books, which gave 'em their ſcandalous Principles, as, The Revelations of Adam, The Hiſtory of Noria Noah's Wife; a great many Books pretended to be written by Seth; The Prophecy of Batſuba; The Goſpel of Perfection, which was ſtuffed with ſcandalous Indecencies: Eves's Goſpel, in which are a great many idle Stories: Mary's Queſtions and lying in, from which Epiphanius reports ſeveral ridiculous and flagitious Paſſages; Philip's Goſpel, and ſeveral other Goſpels which they reckon'd to the Apoſtles.

The Sect, or rather the Sects of the Gnoſticks, ſpread through a great Part of Chriſtendom, and laſted pretty far through the IVth Century. St. Epiphanius relates that he had met with ſeveral Women of this Sect, who endeavour'd to pervert him, that he dilated 'em to the Biſhops, and procur'd the expelling above fourſcore of 'em from one Town. * Iren. Epiphan. Hæreſ. M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Libra. Cent. III.

GOCH, a good German Town in Weſtphalia. It ſtands in the Dutchy of Cleves, upon the Niers, between the Towns of Gelder and Nimeguen, five Leagues from each. Some Geographers take this Town for the old Mediolanum of the Jugernians, which others make the ſame with Miyland, a Village two Leagues from Cleves to the South * Maty, Diction.

GOCIANO, an old Town in Sardinia. It ſtands in the Province of Lughodori upon the River Thyrſo, ten Leagues from Alghet to the Eaſt. Gociano is fortify'd with a Caſtle, and is the chief Town of a County of the ſame Name. Maty, Diction.

* GODEAU (Anthony), Biſhop of Graſſe and Venee, deſcended from one of the beſt Families of the Town of Dreux, was much given to Poetry in his Youth, and ſucceeded remarkably in his Compoſitions: He was one of thoſe that gave Occaſion to the ſetting up the French Academy. M. Godeau and ſome other Gentlemen us'd to meet at M. Conrart's Houſe to diſcourſe upon their Studies and read their Performances. Cardinal Richelieu approving this Deſign, founded the French Academy. M. Godeau's Inclination led him to write Poems upon religious Subjects: He began with The Hymn of the three Children, Benedicite omnia Opera Domini Domino. This Poem, written in a very beautiful and ſublime Manner, gave him a great Reputation. His Preaching was very inſtructive and entertaining, and his Practice particularly exemplary: His appearing thus remarkably to Advantage, made Cardinal Richelieu recommend him to the French King for the Biſhoprick of Graſſe. He was conſecrated to this See in December 1636. Upon this Preferment he went immediately to his Dioceſe, and apply'd himſelf wholly to the Functions of his Character: He held ſeveral Dioceſan Synods, gave Paſtoral Inſtructions to his Clergy, and reviv'd the ancient Diſcipline, which was almoſt quite diſus'd: He procur'd a Bull from Innocent X. for uniting the Biſhopricks of Vence and Graſſe, his Predeceſſor having obtain'd the ſame Privilege from Clement VIII. This Union was made upon defenſible Motives, in regard the Revenue of both theſe Biſhopricks amounted but to ten thouſand Livres per Ann. and both of 'em made but thirty Pariſhes, and that the Towns of Vence and Graſſe were but three Leagues diſtant from each other. However, ſince the Clergy and Laity of Vence appeared againſt the Union, he choſe rather to reſign, than conteſt the Matter, and contented himſelf with the See of Vence. He aſſiſted at the general Aſſemblies of the Clergy held at Paris in the Years 1645 and 1655: And here he appear'd with great Reſolution in Defence of Epiſcopal Privileges, and ſound Maxims in Morality, both which were oppos'd by ſome Perſons then preſent. He ſpent the reſt of his Time to very good Purpoſes, and governed with great Commendation. He was ſeiz'd with an Apoplexy in April 1672, and died in that Month 67 Years of Age. Notwithſtanding the Buſineſs of his Dioceſe, he found Leiſure to write a great many French Tracts both in Proſe and Verſe. His principal Performance is his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, printed at firſt in three Volumes Folio; it takes in the Hiſtory of the firſt eight Centuries. He had made ſome Progreſs upon the Continuation of this Hiſtory; the Memoirs are lodg'd with a French Biſhop; but not being finiſh'd, and drawn out to a juſt Length, 'twas not thought fit to publiſh 'em. Notwithſtanding ſeveral eminent Perſons have ſince written upon this Subject, Godeau's Hiſtory will always hold up, and neither Time, nor after Performances, will abate his Value. His Paraphraſes upon St. Paul's and the other canonical Epiſtles, are very inſtructive Tracts: And here by throwing in ſome Words to connect the Text, and direct the Tranſition, he diſentangles the Difficulties of ſeveral Paſſages, brings the Author's Deſign farther into View, and diſcovers the Force of the Reaſoning. His Explanatory Verſion of the New Teſtament is of the ſame Nature, but much ſhorter. He gives a literal Tranſlation, and now and then inſerts a Word or two in Italick, for clearing up the Text. To theſe we may add, his Meditations upon S. Paul's Epiſtle to the Hebrews. Farther, M. Godeau wrote the Lives of S. Paul, S. Auguſtin, and S. Charles (Borromé); Panegyrical Diſcourſes upon the Biſhops particularly eminent for Learning and Piety through all the Ages of Chriſtianity; a Portrait, or Repreſentation of Penance; Homilies; Practical Diſcourſes; Homilies for all the Sundays and Feſtivals of the Year; to theſe may be ſubjoin'd ſeveral other little Tracts, viz. the Serviceableneſs of Miſſions; of Seminaries; of the Clerical Tonſure, &c. Laſtly, he wrote ſeveral practical Pieces in Verſe: particularly, his Tranſlation of David's Pſalms in French Verſe, which even the French Proteſtants have not ſcrupled to make uſe of, inſtead of Marot's, tho' the Dutch Supplementor ſays 'tis only for private uſe. He likewiſe wrote ſome Chriſtian Eclogues, and a great many other Performances in Poetry; in which there's a great deal of Genius, Spirit and Piety. However, notwithſtanding Godeau's deſerv'd Reputation for a good Poet, the Jeſuit Vavaſſor is ſo hardy a Critick as to queſtion, or rather deny, Godeau's Taſte for Poetry; 'Tis in a little Pamphlet with this uncourtly Title, Godellus an Poeta? To conclude, an excellent Tract of M. Godeau's was publiſh'd A. D. 1709: 'Tis a Paſtoral Inſtruction for the Curates and Prieſts of the Dioceſe of Vence. And in 1713. a Collection of his Letters were printed at Paris. * St. Marth. Gall. Chriſt. Pelliſſon, Hiſtory of the French Academy. M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

GODEGRAND or Chrodegrand, Biſhop of Mets, was Son to the Princeſs Landrade, Daughter to Charles Martel, and married to Sigrame, Prince of Hasbain. He ſpent the firſt Part of his Youth at Charles Martel's Court, and was chief Miniſter to his Unkle King Pepin: In the Year 743. he was conſecrated Biſhop of Mets, and afterwards went Ambaſſador to Adolphus, King of the Lombards, and to Pope Stephen II. This Pope, in Conſideration of the Service done to the holy See, gave him the Pall, and erected his See into an Archbiſhoprick. Codegrand conſecrated a great many Biſhops within the Kingdom of Mets. He founded the Cathedral of Mets, the famous Abby of Gorze in Lorrain, and that of St. Peter, both of 'em for the Benedictines. This illuſtrious Prelate died in the Year 767, after having ſat three and twenty Years. He began, or rather reſtor'd, the Conventual Way of living: He ſettled ſeveral Clerks in a Cloyſter, gave 'em a Rule, and furniſh'd 'em with Conveniences of Life. This Rule has been publiſh'd without Interpolation or Addition by Labbee, from a Copy tranſcrib'd from an ancient Manuſcript in the Vatican. Father Dacherius has given a Monaſtick Regulation under the Name of Chrodegrand; but this is only a Miſcellany extracted from Chrodegrand's genuine Rule, from the Canons of the Council of Aix-la-Chapelle, and from other Monaſtick Regulations. As for Bodegrand's original Rule, it reaches no farther than four and thirty Articles. * Dacherius, Spicileg. Menriſſe, Biſhop of Madaura.

* GODESCHALCUS: He held that People were predeſtinated to be damn'd no leſs than to be ſav'd: Of the Cenſure of this Opinion and the Penance put upon the Author, ſome Account has been already given in Morery Vol. I. However, the Divines of that Time, which was the ninth Century, were divided upon the Queſtion. Prudentius, Biſhop of Troye, Ratramnus, a Monk of Corbie, Lupus Servatus, Florus Diaconus of the Church of Lyons, handled this Queſtion favourably to Godeſchalcus, but ſtill without declaring for him. Amolo, Archbiſhop of Lyons, condemn'd him, without going any great diſtance from his Opinion, and without approving that of Hincmar: On the other Side, John Scotus Erigena declar'd expreſly for Hincmar's Sentiment, and maintain'd the Doctrine touching Predeſtination, which was oppos'd by the Divines above mention'd. In the Year 853. Hincmar drew up four Capitula or Articles at the Synod of Quiercy againſt Godeſchalcus's Tenets. Prudentius, Biſhop of Troye, who had ſign'd 'em, propos'd four others to the Council of Sens; and Remigius, Archbiſhop of Lyons, confuted the Capitula of Quiercy. The Council of Valencia, held A. D. 855, paſs'd ſix Canons upon this Subject, and diſclaim'd the Capitula of Quiercy.

The Canons of the Council of Valencia being tranſmitted to Hincmar by Charles the Bald, this Prelate refus'd to receive 'em. They were read afterwards at a Council held at Savonieres in the Dioceſe of Toul; and the Biſhops happening to diſagree about 'em, the Buſineſs was referr'd to the next Synod; but Prudentius not ſtanding to this Award, carried the Cauſe to Rome, and ſent the Canons of the Council of Valencia to Pope Nicholas in order to get 'em confirm'd. Prudentius reports the Pope approv'd 'em, but Hincmar wont allow this Matter of Fact; and in ſhort, it does not appear there was any formal Deciſion upon the Queſtion.

As to Godeſcalcus's Character, Hincmar repreſents him as an unbred, turbulent, and unſettl'd Fellow, and aſſures us that his Abbot, and the Monks of his Convent deſcribe him no better.

However, it can't be deny'd but that the Man had Wit improv'd by Study, tho' 'tis probable he was not without a Mixture of Prejudice and ſelf-Conceit. Godeſcalcus has two Confeſſions of Faith extant; a Fragment of that Confeſſion he deliver'd to the Council of Mentz; there's likewiſe his Tract upon the three Queſtions reported by Hincmar in his Diſcourſe upon Predeſtination; to theſe may be added an Abſtract of a Tract mention'd by Amolo; a Fragment of a Letter written to Ratramnus; a Diſcourſe upon the Expreſſion Trina Deitas inſerted in Hincmar's Anſwer. The Heterodoxies charg'd upon Godeſcalcus are, 1st, That God predeſtinates People to Damnation: 2dly, That 'twas not our Saviour's Intention to ſave all Mankind, that he did not die for all, but only for the Elect: His 3d erroneous Tenet was that he deny'd the Liberty of the Will. As to the firſt Article Godeſcalcus reply'd, that it might be defenſibly affirm'd that the reprobate Part of the World was predeſtinated to Damnation, but then 'twas upon the Score of their Sins: On the other ſide, his Adverſaries maintain'd that the Word Predeſtination ought always to be taken in a Senſe of Benefit and Favour: To the ſecond Article his Anſwer was, that God's efficacious ous Will for ſaving Mankind reaches no farther than Elect, and that our Saviour died finally only for them: In Explication of the third Article, he held that Mankind loſt their Liberty by Adam's Sin, and that they have no Freedom for doing a good Action, but by the Grace of Jeſus Chriſt. * Annal. Fuld. & St. Bertin. Concil. Tom. VIII. Prudentius Trecen. Florus Lugdunenſ. Lupus Ferrarienſis. Ratramnus, Hiſt. Pelag. Mauguin, Vindiciæ Prædeſtinationis & Gratiæ. Baronius, A. C. 848, 855, 859, &c. Uſſer. & Cellot. Hiſt. Godeſc. &c.

†

GODFATHER: He that held the Child at the baptiſmal Font, and anſwer'd for him. He is likewiſe call'd a Spiritual Father. This Cuſtom of Godfathers is very ancient in the Church, as we may learn from its being mention'd by Tertullian, St. Chryſoſtom, and St. Auſtin. Some will have it that the Uſage was firſt ſet on Foot by Pope Hyginus; but this Opinion is without Ground. Godfathers are likewiſe mention'd in the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, in the Works of the pretended Dionyſius the Areopagite, and in all the Authors who treat concerning the Rites us'd in Baptiſm. Formerly there was but one of theſe Sponſors, a Man for Boys, and a Woman for Girls. But latter Ages have introduc'd ſeveral of both Sexes for one Perſon. At preſent there's but one Godfather and one Godmother in the Church of Rome, who hold the Child and give the Name. * Vicecomes, de Baptiſme.

GOEZ (John Baron de), Cardinal and Biſhop of Gurck, had a ſtrong Genius for a Stateſman. His Talent being known, the Emperor Leopold employ'd him in ſeveral Embaſſies, and ſent him to negotiate a Peace at Conſtantinople, after the Turks had been routed at S. Goddard in Hungary. Upon his Return to the Court of Vienna, he took Orders, and was nominated by the Emperor for the Biſhoprick of Gurck in Carinthia. He was afterwards pitch'd upon for the Head of the Embaſſy at the Treaty of Nimeguen. Pope Innocent XI. made him a Cardinal in September 1686. When this Pope dy'd in 1689. the Emperor ordered him to go immediately to Rome, to aſſiſt in the Conclave, and take care of the Intereſt of the Houſe of Auſtria. He was preſent at the Coronation of Alexander VIII. After this the Emperor gave him a publick Character for Rome, where he died, A. D. 1696. in the 86th Year of his Age. * Memoires du Tems.

GOLDBERG, that is to ſay, a golden Mountain, a Town in the Duchy of Lignitz in Sileſia. It took its Name from a Gold Mine found there in the Year 1200. It ſtands upon the River Katsbach five Leagues from Lignitz to the Weſt, and three from Jawer to the the North. * Baudrand.

GOLDENGEN, a Town in the Duchy of Courland. 'Tis the Capital of Courland Proper, ſtands upon the River Weta eleven or twelve Leagues above the Town Windaw. * Maty, Diction.

GOMEZ CIUDAD-REAL (Alvarez), dy'd in July 1538, 80 Years of Age. This Gomez was a good Latin Poet if the Spaniſh Criticks may be depended on. His Golden Fleece is his Maſterpiece, and very much commended by Eraſmus. His Chriſtian Thalia, or, our Saviour's Triumph, which goes upon the Myſteries of our Religion, is much flouriſh'd on by Anthony de Nebrixa or Nebriſſenſis. His Muſa Paulina, that is to ſay, St. Paul's Epiſtles in Elegiacks, is a cloſe Imitation of Ovid, and in Nicholas Antonio's Opinion comes up to the Beauties of that Poet. He has likewiſe turn'd the Proverbs of Solomon, and the ſeven penitential Pſalms into Latin Verſe. 'Tis ſaid likewiſe that he wrote ſeveral Poems in Spaniſh. * Andreas Schottus, & Nicholas Antonio, Biblioth. Hiſp. &c.

GONDRIN (Lewis Henry de), Son of Anthony Arnald, Marquiſs of Montesban and Antin, Lord of Gondrin, Viceroy of Navarre, Captain of the Guard du Corps to Henry IV, and Knight of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt; and his Mother was Paula de Bellegarde, Siſter to Roger, Duke of Bellegarde, chief Querry of France.

Lewis Henry was born in 1620. at the Caſtle of Gondrin in the Dioceſe of Auſch. He was firſt ſent to the College of la Flêche, and afterwards went to Paris, and ſtudied Divinity amongſt the Sorboniſts. Octavius de Belegarde, his Couſin, and Archbiſhop of Sens, petition'd the Queen Regent that he might have him for his Coadjutor. He took Poſſeſſion of this Archbiſhoprick, in 1646, and govern'd with great Care and Application 'till 1674, when he dy'd at 54 Years of Age. He ſuſpended the Jeſuits from the Exerciſe of any ſacerdotal Function, which Suſpenſion took place in his Dioceſe five and twenty Years, that is, all the time they refus'd Submiſſion to his Injunctions. His Succeſſors took off this Suſpenſion after the Jeſuits came too. He was a zealous Champion for the Intereſt of the Church of Rome, and the Privileges of his own Character, upon all Occaſions. He was one of the moſt enterprizing Prelates in maintaining the Sentiments of the Janſeniſts touching Grace. He wrote to Pope Innocent X. in 1651. to acquaint him that the five Propoſitions laid before his Holineſs were equivocally penn'd; that 'twas neceſſary to enquire from what Author they had been extracted, and to mark preciſely in what Senſe they were to be condemn'd or approv'd; that the Parties ought to be heard againſt each other before Sentence was given; and that, in fine, they ſhould have been examin'd by the Biſhops in France before they had been brought to Rome. Gondrin was one of thoſe Prelates who would not receive Innocent X.'s Conſtitution in their Dioceſes without Limitations. He was likewiſe one of thoſe who in a Sort of Remonſtrance to Clement IX, declar'd that 'twas neceſſary to ſeparate the Queſtion of Fact from that of Right, which were jumbled together in the Formulary drawn for condemning the five Propoſitions attributed to Janſenius. In ſhort, 'twas by his Activity and Aſſiſtance, that the four Biſhops of Alet, Pamiers, Angers, and Beauvais diſentangled themſelves from the Difficulties of the Formulary, and kept their Sees.

Gondrin wrote a Treatiſe upon the Subject of publick Penance, together with ſeveral Paſtoral Inſtructions upon the principal Points of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline and practical Duties; And he was one of the firſt Biſhops that cenſur'd the Caſuiſts Apology. * Mêmoires Manuſcrit.

GONGORA (Lewis), was one of the fineſt Geniuſes for Poetry that ever appear'd in Spain: His Humour was very remote from Vanity, for he would not let his Talent be known 'till after he was dead. His Poſthumous Works have been ſeveral times printed at Madrid in Quarto, at Bruſſels, and elſewhere: They were firſt publiſh'd in 1659. He ran through almoſt all Kinds of Poetry, and in Nicholas Antonio's Judgment excell'd in all. His Manner was ſo new and extraordinary, his Sublime ſo ſparkling and judicious, that his Enemies were forc'd to confeſs no modern Poet could ſtand in Competition with him, for the Force and Elevation of his Heroick Performances, for the Delicacy and beautiful Turns in his Lyrick Poems, or laſtly, for the Smartneſs, entertaining Raillery, and ingenious Repartees in his Satyrs and his Comedy. His Works, conſidering his great Genius are not bulky, but then thoſe Pieces, which had his laſt Hand, are finiſh'd with all the Niceneſs and Heightnings imaginable. He threw Latin Words into his Poem, and enrich'd the Language of his Country. And notwithſtanding he was ſurprizing in all Kinds of Poetry, his Satyrs, which he ſometimes play'd at crown'd Heads, are thought to have been his Maſterpiece. * Nicholas Antonio, Biblioth. Script. Hiſpan. Tom 2. item in Præfat. ejuſd. Operis, pag. 23. item in Tom 2. Biblioth & alibi non ſemel. Roſteau, Mem. ou Sentiments ſur quelques ouvrages qu'il a lus, pag 71.

GONZAGUA (Julia de), Ducheſs of Trajetta and Counteſs of Fondi, was married to Veſpaſian Colonna: She was ſo remarkably a fine Perſon, that Soliman the Magnificent had a ſtrong Fancy to ſee her. To Compaſs his Deſign, this Grand Seignior ſent Barbaroſſa, King of Algiers, his Lieutenant General, with a great Army to Fondi, where this Lady uſually liv'd. However, the Enterprize miſcarried: For notwitſtanding Barbaroſſa made a Night March, and took the Town by Storm, Julia had the good Fortune to make her Eſcape. For, whether ſhe had Notice of the Danger, or had an extraordinary Impulſe upon her Mind, ſhe ran away barefoot upon the firſt Noiſe, and ventur'd her Life to preſerve her Honour.

This Ducheſs was ſuſpected of an Inclination to Lutheraniſm. However, Thuanus and other Authors give her a great Character for Learning. * Entretiens d'Ariſte & d'Eugene. Hilarion de Coſte, Tom. 2. des Dames

Dames Illuſtres. Brantome, Dames Illuſtres. Thuan. Lib. XXXIX, &c.

GONZALES (Peter), a Dominican, and Patron or Guardian Saint of the Spaniſh Sailors, who call him St. Elmo, was born at Aſtorga in 1190. He was firſt Canon and then Dean of the Chapter at this Town; but happening to fall from his Horſe when he went to be inſtall'd in the Deanery, he retir'd from the World and turn'd Religious. He was profeſs'd a Dominican at Palenza, and preach'd with Reputation and Succeſs.

Ferdinand III. invited him to his Court. He dy'd A. D. 1240, at Tuy in Galicia. Pope Innocent IV. beatify'd him, A. D. 1254. * Baillet.

GONZALES (Thyrſo), a Spaniard, General of the Jeſuits. He wrote againſt the Doctrine of Probability maintain'd by a great many of that Society: His Tract upon this Subject was printed at Rome, A. D. 1687, when he was General of that Order. Here he has prov'd this Doctrine was not generally held by his Fraternity, and cites ſeveral Jeſuits who diſclaim it. He afterwards confutes the Principle with great Strength of Argument, but without obliging the Fathers of his Society to follow his Opinion. He likewiſe wrote a Diſcourſe againſt the Propoſitions paſs'd by the Clergy of France at their General Aſſembly in the Year 1682. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

GOR, a Kingdom in the Mogul's Dominions. It lies beyond the Ganges between Kanduana, Pitan, and great Tartary. There is a Town of the ſame Name which is the Capital of the Province. * Maty, Diction.

GORDIANA, Tharſilla and Emiliana, were three Siſters of the Senator Gordian, who all profeſs'd ſingle Life. However, they did not retire to a Cloyſter, but liv'd Monaſtically at Home. At laſt Gordiana began to grow weary of this Way of living, and relaps'd, as St. Gregory ſpeaks, towards an Inclination to the World. When Tharſilla and Emilliana reprimanded her for forgetting her firſt Reſolution, and letting her Fancy rove and run out, ſhe recollected her ſelf ſeemingly, and put on a ſolemn Humour: But this Conſtraint laſting not long, ſhe return'd to Levity and foreign Amuſements, and delighted only in gay, entertaining Converſation. Tharſilla on the other ſide, continues St. Gregory, was particularly remarkable for Self-Denial, and ſpending her Time in Prayer: And thus reaching an extraordinary Degree in Piety and Improvement, it pleas'd God to give her a Diſcharge, and acquaint her with her Diſſolution, by the Apparition of Felix, Gregory's Grandfather, and Biſhop of Rome; who ſhewing her a Place of extraordinary Luſtre, bad her come quickly and dwell in that Region of Light. Next Day ſhe fell into a Fever, and finding her ſelf at the Point of Death, a great many People being about her, ſhe bad them withdraw quickly, for her Saviour was coming: And expiring at this Sentence, there was a ſtrong Perfume in the Room, which ſuppos'd the Preſence of ſomething very extraordinary: Some few Days after Tharſilla appear'd to her Siſter Emiliana, and told her, Since I could not keep Eaſter with you, we'll keep Epiphany together. But Emiliana being uneaſy about her Siſter Gordiana, the other reply'd with a diſconſolate Air, Come you, however, but as for her you ought to look upon her as a Perſon who has deſerted to a ſecular Way of living. Soon after this Viſion, Emiliana fell ſick, and dy'd, as her Siſter had foretold. Gordiana now alone, and Miſtreſs of the Fortune of the Family, married the Steward of her Lands, which conſidering her Vow of ſingle Life, is juſtly cenſur'd by St. Gregory. * Gregor. Dial. Lib. IV. & Homil. 38.

* GORGONS. Heſiod in his Theogonia, and Hyginus report the Gorgons three Siſters, Daughters to Phorcus, a marine Deity; that they had all three but one Eye, which they lent each other by Turns. They had long Wings, their Heads were dreſs'd with Snakes, their Teeth were as big as Boars Tuſhes, and their Talons were crooked and ſharp like a Griffon's. Fulgentius relates, from one Theoaritus an ancient Hiſtorian, that Phorcus was a King who left his three Daughters very rich; that Meduſa was the eldeſt and moſt powerful; that they call'd her Gorgon, becauſe ſhe apply'd her ſelf very much to the Improvement of Land and Tillage; that they repreſented her with Snakes about her Head as an Emblem of her Prudence; that Perſeus attacking her with a Fleet, (which makes the Poets give him Wings) ſeiz'd her Dominions and took her Life; that he made uſe of Meduſa's Head, that is, of her Treaſure and Forces to conquer Atlas's Territories; that his having routed this Prince, and obliging him to retire into the Mountains, gave Occaſion to the Story of Atlas's being metamorphos'd into a Mountain. Diodorus Siculus reports that theſe Gorgons were African Women of a very warlike Diſpoſition, that Perſeus conquer'd them and kill'd their Queen Meduſa by Minerva's Aſſiſtance, that is, by his own Reſolution and Conduct; This Goddeſs being the Emblem of thoſe valuable Qualities.

GORGONIA, (St.) Siſter to St. Gregory Nazianzen, was marry'd to a Perſon of Condition in Piſidia; ſome call him Miletius, and others Vitalianus. Gorgonia was a very pious Lady, and cur'd of a Diſtemper, as St. Gregory Nazianzen reports, by mixing the conſecrated Elements with her Tears, and making an Ointment of 'em. Her Brother St. Gregory deſcribes her exemplary Life in his Funeral Oration for her. Her Feſtival is kept on the ninth of December. * Gregor. Nazian. Orat. II. Baillet Vies des Saintes.

GORGUS, Son of Ariſtomenes a Meſſenian; which Ariſtomenes happening to be taken and bound by ſeven Cretan Rapparees, was carry'd to a Cottage in the Country of the Meſſenians, where a Widow and her Daughter dwelt. The Daughter dreaming one Night that the Wolves had brought a Lyon bound to her Houſe, and that this Lyon being unty'd eat up the Wolves, ſhe believing there was ſomething extraordinary in this Dream, ply'd the Cretans with Wine 'till they were drunk, and fell aſleep. And now making uſe of the Opportunity, ſhe drew one of their Swords, and unty'd Ariſtomenes, who quickly diſpatch'd theſe Banditti. Ariſtomenes, by Way of Acknowledgement, married his Son Gorgus to this Girl, who was but nine Years old. Gorgus afterwards put himſelf at the Head of a Colony of the Meſſenians, who ſailing into Sicily, and ſeizing the Town Zancle call'd it Meſſina. There was another Gorgus, Son to Thero, Tyrant of Agrigentum, who help'd his Father to conquer the Country of the Agrigentines. * Pauſan. in Meſſiniacis. Atheneus, Lib. III. Deipnoſophiſt. Polyæn. Lib. VI.

GOUDIMEL (Claude), one of the beſt Muſicians of the ſixteenth Century, ſet Tunes to moſt of Marot and Beza's Pſalms; and ſome are of Opinion 'twas for this Performance that he was maſſacred at Lyons, when great Numbers of the French Proteſtants were deſtroy'd there. Meliſſus, an intimate Friend of his, paid his Memory the Reſpect of an Epigram; and tells us that Goudimel would have found better Quarter in the Ægean Sea, as Arion did, than he met with in his own Countrey. The Epigram ſtands thus,

Prenſus ab externo ſi, Goudimel, hoſte fuiſſes
Vector in Ionio Muſice clare Mari;
Ille tibi Vitam vel non voluiſſet ademptam,
Linitus Citharâ, Carminibuſque tuis.
In tutos aliquis vel, ſicut Ariona Delphin
Tergore portaſſet te, quaſi Nave, locos.
Audivere tuos Galli moduloſque probarunt
Indigenæ, decori quêis tua Muſa fuit.
At datus es Letho, licet Inſons, inque Cruenti Stagnanteis Araris præcipitatus Aquas.
Proh Scelus indigenum! Nam barbarus hoſtis in hoſtem Barbaricum LANIIS Mitior eſſe ſolet.

* Lib. X. du Martyrologe des Proteſtans. Varillas, Hiſt. of Charles IX. Lib. 9. Meliſſi Schediaſmatum Reliquiæ.

GOULART (Simon), Son of Simon Goulart, a Genevian Miniſter, was Miniſter of the Walloon Church at Amſterdam, and a warm Arminian. Being provok'd by a young Miniſter of the ſame Church, he preach'd one Day againſt thoſe who aſſert that ſome Infants who die as ſoon as they are born, and ſome even before they are born, are damn'd to all Eternity by a Decree of Reprobation. He was ſuſpended for this Doctrine, A. D. 1615. This Goulart was one of the remonſtrant Miniſters, who for refuſing to ſubſcribe the Synod of Dort, were depriv'd and baniſh'd. He retir'd to Antwerp, where he wrote ſeveral Letters, which are inſerted in the Collection, entitled, Animadverſions upon M. Baſſecourt's Tract of eternal Election, and the conſequences of that Doctrine. He died at Frederickſtad in Holſtein, A. D. 1628, 52 Years old. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

GOURA, a Town in Poland five Leagues from Warſaw. It is ſo call'd from its Scituation upon an Eminence call'd Goury in the Poliſh Language. The Town has a Caſtle built with Timber. Wirsbicki the Biſhop of Poſnonia bought it, founded ſeveral Monaſteries there, and built 'em with Brick, which looks great in that Country. This Prelate chang'd the Name of the Town to Calvary, with Reſpect to the Monaſtick Societies with which 'tis ſtock'd. It has ſome Reſemblance with the Deſerts of Mount Libanus, upon the Score of Hermitages and Cells. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

GOURO, a Town in the Mogul's Dominions. 'Tis within the Kingdom of Bengale upon the Ganges, about five and thirty Leagues above the Place where this River ſubdivides into ſeveral Streams. Gouro is a conſiderable large Town. * Maty, Diction.

GRABE (John Erneſt), Doctor of Divinity, born in Pruſſia in the XVII^th^ Century, was Son to Doctor Sylveſter Grabe, Rector of the Univerſity at Coningsberg. Doctor John Grabe, as the learned Doctor Hickes late Dean of Worceſter deſcribes him, was a moſt learned and conſummate Divine. He printed Part of the Septuagint from the Alexandrian Manuſcript; and left Manuſcripts for compleating the reſt, with large Collections for a Volume of Annotations; together with Materials for Diſſertations, Prolegomena, &c. upon the four Volumes. He likewiſe left a Manuſcript of the Alexandrian Text of the new Teſtament, and of St. Clemens's Epiſtles, firſt publiſh'd by Junius, with Notes. To go on a little farther with his Manuſcripts, the next I ſhall mention are upon the two Volumes of his Spicilegium, revis'd and corrected in many Places, with large Additions and Collections for a third Volume, wherein he intended to publiſh a Fragment of one of St. Clemens's loſt Books, in which he calls the Holy Ghoſt Θεὸν God.

His Iræneus, revis'd and corrected with Collections and References for a new Edition, is another Manuſcript: And here he deſign'd to defend himſelf againſt the Exceptions of Maſſuet the learned Editor of the new Paris Edition of this Father. To proceed, he has left a great many Greek Fragments of Origen, particularly out of his Commentaries, to the Bulk of 120 Sheets in Quarto, and five in Folio. There are likewiſe amongſt his Manuſcripts, a numerous Collection of curious and uſeful Greek Fragments of other Fathers, and ſome of Hereticks, which would make ſeveral Volumes in Print: Of theſe and a great many more, there's an Account in the Catalogue of his Manuſcripts, lodg'd in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

Amongſt his Plans, which he intended to fill up, and finiſh, there's one in Latin, entitled, Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ Prerogativæ præ aliis Proteſtantium Cœtibus in Praxi & Doctrina ſpeciatim. The Title of one of the Chapters of this Treatiſe, in which he aſſigns one Reaſon for his eſteeming the Engliſh Reformation, is, becauſe of the Regard the Church of England declares for the conſentient Teſtimony of the Fathers, and Catholick Tradition: His Words are, In Veneratione erga univerſalem Patrûm conſenſum, & Catholicam Eccleſiæ Traditionem, &c.

But notwithſtanding his Preference of the Engliſh Reformation, he did not think every thing in the beſt and moſt primitive Scituation. For after ſeveral Articles of Commendation, he ſubjoins ſome Deſiderata written in Capitals. For Inſtance, he commends Mr. Whiſton for inſiſting upon the Precedent and Cuſtoms of Antiquity, and for declaring againſt the modern Defects of particular Churches, whether Roman or Reform'd.

And here the Doctor ſhews his Diſlike of not mixing Water with Wine in the Euchariſtick Cup, of eating Blood and Things ſtrangled, and diſcontinuing the ancient Practice of Immerſion in Baptiſm. The learned Doctor Hickes, his intimate Acquaintance, reports, that he us'd to deliver his Mind very freely in Defence of the ancient Catholick Uſages of all Churches. Amongſt theſe, the ſame learned Doctor Hickes, (with his own Approbation) mentions the Oblation of Bread and Wine, and the Prayer of Invocation to God the Father, to ſend down the holy Spirit upon the conſecrated Elements, to make 'em the Body and Blood of his Son Jeſus Chriſt to the Communicants, not in Subſtance, but in Grace and Vertue. Doctor Grabe likewiſe declar'd frankly for Chriſm in Confirmation; for anointing the Sick with Oyl, for Confeſſion and judicial Abſolution, for Prayer for the Souls of the deceaſed, who die in the Faith and Fear of God; for the ancient Commemoration of the Saints in the holy Euchariſt: And of all theſe, as the learned Reporter goes on, there are ſhort Memorandums or Hints rang'd under the Deſiderata. The Want of theſe Things, Doctor Grabe us'd to mention as Defects in the Reform'd Churches. And for this Reaſon he lamented the Alterations made in the Communion Office, when the firſt Reform'd Engliſh Common-Prayer Book was brought under a Review, and put in the preſent Form.

And to this Senſe he delivers himſelf fully in his Dedication of Irenæus to the King of Pruſſia: Where taking Occaſion to ſpeak of the Diſagreement between the Proteſtant Churches, he acquaints his Pruſſian Majeſty, "That the only Expedient to accomodate "Matters and bring theſe Differences to an happy Con"cluſion, is to make primitive Uſage the Standard of "the Reformation, and govern themſelves by the Belief "and Practice of the Ages prior to Conſtantine the "Great. That this ought to be the Rule with Reſpect "to Doctrine, Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the "Hierarchy and Diſcipline of the Church: That where "Calvin and Luther go off from this Direction, they "ought to be diſcarded, and given up. And that where "any Divines or modern Authority ſtrike out of the "primitive Path, and remove the ancient Landmarks "laid by the Fathers, we are to leave 'em. That an "unjudicious Averſion againſt the Corruptions of the "Roman Church, has carried ſome Reformers to the "other Extream, ſurpriz'd their Judgment, and made "'em undervalue Antiquity. That the beſt Way to "inderſtand primitive Doctrine, primitive Worſhip "and Government, is to conſult the ancient Fathers, "who taught and govern'd the Church.

On his Death-Bed he communicated by our firſt reform'd Liturgy, refuſing to receive by the other. Doctor Hickes, who adminiſterd the holy Euchariſt, anointed him with Oyl, Doctor Lee, a learned Phyſician, communicating with him. And purſuant to the Form of this firſt Liturgy, he left Legacies in his Will to be remembred in his Friend's Prayers. And tho' the Uſe is not clearly expreſs'd in the Will, 'tis ſufficiently hinted, and underſtood by the Legatees.

And now a Word or two of his Character, as 'tis given by another learned Gentleman in a Letter printed with Doctor Hickes's Diſcourſe already mention'd. He was, ſays he, remarkably diligent and curious in ſearching out the Remains of the ancient Hereticks, as well as of the Orthodox: That thus examining the one by the other, he might be better qualify'd to form a right Judgment of both.

As to the ſettling of his Religion, he enquir'd with Sincerity and Exactneſs, diſcharg'd the Prejudices of Education, and kept his underſtanding well balanc'd. The Proſpect of ſecular Advantage, the Affection of Friends and Relations, ſat with no Byaſs upon his Mind. He had no Regard to any Thing but Evidence and Orthodoxy; and nothing but Reaſon and Truth govern'd his Choice. 'Twas not his Principle to act by an implicit Faith, and take Religion upon Truſt: No, he thought himſelf oblig'd to bring things of this Nature to the Teſt, and compar'd 'em with the Originals. He dy'd at London in the Year 1712. His printed Works are, Juſtin Martyr's ſecond Apology with Notes: Part of the Septuagint from the Alexandrian Manuſcript, with learned Prolegomena: Spicilegium of the Writings of the Fathers and Hereticks of the three firſt Centuries, in two Volumes: Irenæus, Folio with learned Notes, &c. * Doctor Hickes, Some Inſtances of the Defect and Omiſſions in Mr. Whiſton's Collection of Teſtimonies, &c.

GRABOWISE, a Town in the Kingdom of Poland, it ſtands in the Palatinate of Belczo in Red Ruſſia, between the Towns Belczo and Chelm, fourteen Leagues from the firſt and ten from the lattter. * Maty, Diction.

GRACIA A DIOS; for fifteen or ſixteen hundred in Morery Vol. I, read fifteen or ſixteen thouſand.

GRACCHUS (Rutilius), deſcended from a noble but decay'd Roman Family. He liv'd about the latter

End

End of the tenth Century, and was one of the beſt Poets in his Time. He had the Misfortune to grow ſplenatick and humourſome to very remarkable Exceſſes. Among the reſt of his Whimſies, he bethought himſelf of an Expedient to mark the Diſtinctions of Quality by a different Manner of ſaluting. For this Purpoſe he wore three Hats put one upon another; when he met with Perſons of private Condition he only put off one; others of better Quality were ſaluted with two Hats; and thoſe of the firſt Rank had all three pull'd off to 'em. This Invention he thought of ſo great Service to the Publick, that he had the Vanity to demand a Penſion from the Exchequer; but we dont find his Expectation gratify'd. * Janus Nicius Erythræus, Pinacoth. Vir. illuſt.

* GRADO, a Town in Friuli built in a Moraſs of the Gulph of Venice. 'Twas formerly a Patriarchal See, which Privilege about two hundred Years ſince was conferr'd upon Venice. Pope Alexander IV. gave Additional Privileges to thoſe formerly granted by Leo IX, A. D. 1050. But in regard the Biſhops of Venice, who then were call'd Biſhops of Olivola, upon the Score of their Cathedral's ſtanding in the Iſland Olivola, afterwards call'd Caſtel in Venice; in regard the Biſhops of Venice had frequent Conteſts with their Patriarchs of Grado; Pope Eugenius IV. ordered that when one of theſe Prelates then living, happened to die, the two Churches ſhould remain to the Survivor with all their Titles, Rights and Preeminences: The Matter being thus ſettled, and the Patriarch Dominico Michaeli dying firſt, Laurentio Juſtiniano, then Biſhop of Caſtel, had the Patriarchal Dignity devolv'd upon himſelf and Succeſſors: Who from this time have aſſum'd the Title of Patriarchs of Venice. In the Year 602, one Elias, a Biſhop, held a Synod at Grado, the Acts of which are publiſh'd by Andrew Dandoli. * Baron. A. C. 602. Robert, Gall. Chriſt. Dandoli in Chron. Amelot de la Houſſaye, Hiſtory of the Government of Venice.

GRADUATES, a French Diſtinction given to thoſe who are Doctors, Licentiates, Batchelors, or Maſters; that is, in Divinity, Civil or common Law, Phyſick or the Arts. The Privilege of Graduates was granted by the Council of Baſil, which broke up in the Year 1438. The Doctors of Paris and other famous Univerſities having contributed very much towards the ſuppreſſing of Hereſy, had a great Intereſt in the Councils. Thus when the Reformation of Diſcipline came upon the Board they complain'd that Benefices were ill beſtow'd; either by the Pope upon the Score of Reſervations, and Expectatives; or by the Ordinaries who frequently collated unqualify'd and ignorant Men. They deſir'd therefore that Regard ſhould be had to Perſons of Learning. Upon this Remonſtrance the Council of Baſil decreed that the third Part of all Benefices ſhould be ſettled upon the Graduates of the more eminent Univerſities. This Decree of the Council was inſerted in the Pragmatick Sanction, with this additional Clauſe, that out of the third ſettled upon the Graduates, two thirds ſhould be reſerv'd for the Suppots or Fellows of the Univerſity. In Conſequence of this Appointment, 'twas ordered the Univerſity ſhould nominate thoſe ſhe deſir'd to prefer. Theſe are call'd nominated Graduates, and the reſt Graduates ſimple. The Pragmatick Sanction likewiſe oblig'd all Collators and eccleſiaſtical Patrons, to keep a Regiſter of all the Preferments in their Gift, that they might beſtow one in three to the Graduates as they came up in the Roll. This Privilege was preſerv'd by the Concordate; but the Liſt in the Regiſter was ſet aſide, and the Benefices, which fell void in four Months of the Year afterwards ſpecify'd, were to be given to the Graduates; which Manner of Diſpoſition ſtill continues. To qualify the reſpective Perſons, a Doctor in Divinity was to be ten Years ſtanding, beginning his Studies with Philoſophy. A Doctor of Civil or Canon Law, or Phyſick, ſeven Years. A Licentiate had the ſame Conſideration with a Doctor. Six Years Study was requir'd from a Batchelor in Divinity. Five Years was the Term for a Batchelor in Law or Phyſick, Noblemen excepted, for whom three Years were ſufficient. Five Years Study were likewiſe requir'd of Maſters of Arts. Farther, the Graduate was oblig'd to receive the Clerical Tonſure, and to be either a Secular, or a Regular, according to the Quality of the Benefice.

Thus almoſt all the Degrees in Phyſick were ſtruck off, becauſe few Clergymen ſtudy Phyſick. The Graduates four Months are January, April, July, and October. January and July are call'd Months of Rigour, in which the Patron or Collator is oblig'd to preſent or collate the nominated Graduates according to the Order of their Nomination; and in Caſes of Concurrence and Competition they are to be govern'd by the Diſtinction of Degrees and Faculties: And here Divinity is to be preferr'd to Law, Doctors to Batchelors, and Batchelors to Maſters of Arts. April and October are Months of Favour, during which the Patron or Collator may chuſe what Graduate he likes beſt, even Simple Graduates not excepted. The Graduate's Claim or Pretenſions reach all ſorts of Benefices, excepting Conſiſtorial and Elective Benefices, Capitular Dignities, and Benefices belonging to Lay-Patrons. The Graduate's Right takes Place only upon an Avoidance by Death. The Pope may throw in his Claim of Prevention; and unleſs they demand the Living within ſix Months after its being void, the Ordinary may collate at Diſcretion. The Graduate is not allow'd to be a Pluraliſt, and his Pretenſions are ſuppos'd ſatisfy'd when he has a Living of four hundred Livres per Annum: But this is to be underſtood of a Secular Graduate: for as to a Regular, the ſmalleſt Benefice anſwers his Title, becauſe he has made a Vow of Poverty. The Graduate's Right is not receiv'd in the Province of Britanny, no more than the pragmatick Sanction. The Council of Trent in the four and twentieth Seſſion ſuppreſs'd this Right with the reſt of the Expectatives; but afterwards in the five and twentieth Seſſion they reviv'd it. * Fleury, Inſtitution ou Droit Eccleſ.

GRÆVIUS (John George), one of the moſt celebrated Criticks of the ſeventeenth Century. He was born at Naumburg in Saxony, A. D. 1632, and extracted from a creditable Family. After ſome Improvements in his Education nearer Home, he travell'd to the Univerſity of Leipſick, from thence he went to Deventer in Holland, and ſtudied two Years under the famous Frederick Gronovius. From Deventer he remov'd to Amſterdam, where Alexander Morus and David Blondel had the Chair for the Belles Lettres. In 1656. the Elector of Brandenburgh invited him to the Profeſſorſhip at Duisbourg. After having ſpent two Years here, Gronovius being call'd to Leyden, Grævius ſucceeded him at Deventer. And now his Reputation ran ſo high that the States of the Province of Utrecht gave him an Invitation for Profeſſor in their Univerſity. After his accepting this Offer, he was frequently ſolicited to take the Profeſſor's Place at Amſterdam, Leyden, and even at Padua; But the States of Utrecht, who underſtood his Worth, gave him freſh Encouragement to keep him with 'em. Thus he was one and forty Years Politick, Hiſtory, and Rhetorick Profeſſor at Utrecht. Young People, that had any Taſte of Learning, came almoſt from all Parts to hear him; and Princes, not indifferently diſtinguiſh'd, made ſometimes Part of his Audience. He dyed ſuddenly in January 1703. As for his Temper, 'twas clear of Pride and Pedantry. He publiſh'd a great many Greek and Latin Authors: To mention ſome of 'em, Heſiod, a good Part of Tully's Works, Lucius Florus with a learned Preface, Suetonius, &c. The Reader may ſee more of his Character and Performances in his Funeral Oration made by Mr. Peter Burman.

GRAMMAR, in ancient Times was no more than the Art of teaching to write and read. This is the Definition that Diodorus Siculus gives of it where he mentions the Laws of Charondas.

Thus in a Manner the Caſe ſtood in Ariſtotle's Time; but after they began to obſerve the Rules of Art, to trace Etymologies, to examine the Force and Propriety of each Language, and that ſome People made it their Buſineſs to explain Authors; when this Improvement came on, Grammar had a more extended Signification, and belong'd only to this Buſineſs. The Method for writing and reading, thus loſing its firſt Name, was call'd Grammatiſtica, and look'd on rather as an introductive Step. Some will have it that Prometheus was the firſt who taught People to write and read. As to the modern Meaning of Grammar, it may be deſcrib'd an Art which teaches People to expreſs themſelves with Propriety, that is, to make a right Uſe of the Marks of Speech, ſo far at leaſt as to deliver their Thoughts without out Barbariſm or Obſcurity. As to Grammar taken in this Senſe, Plato is the firſt that mentions it in his Phiebus and his Cratylus; but then the Beginning of this Art was very imperfect, and went no farther than Etymology. Ariſtotle may fairly be reckon'd the firſt in this Sort of Skill; for he has thrown Words into ſeveral Claſſes, examin'd their Diſtinctions, and explained ſeveral Things of this Nature in his Tract de Arte Poeticâ. Theodectes has likewiſe made ſome Progreſs this Way; and 'tis poſſible both one and t'other borrow'd what they had of this Kind from Lampeus and Ileus. Diogenes Laertius relates from Hermippus, that Epicurus taught Grammar before he apply'd himſelf to the Study of Philoſophy. The Stoicks made great Additions to the Precepts which Ariſtotle and Theodectes had deliver'd: At laſt, this Art came towards Perfection, chiefly by the Aſſiſtance of the Alexandrians, who valued themſelves as much upon their Attainments in Grammar, as the Thebans did for playing well upon the Flute, and the Mitylenians for being a fine Harp. Crates Mallotes, King Attalus's Ambaſſador, was the firſt that ſet up the Faſhion of ſtudying Grammar at Rome. Some think it ſtrange that the Jews, whoſe Language is ſo ancient, ſhould be ſo late in the Rules of Grammar; and that the Arabians, who are much more modern, ſhould go before 'em. Rabbi Juda, Son of David Chiug, born at Fez in Africk, is reckon'd the firſt Jewiſh Grammarian: He liv'd about the Middle of the ſecond Century. The ſecond, who wrote upon this Subject, is Rabbi Jonas of Corduba; Aben-Ezra, a Spaniard, is the third. Rabbi David Himchi comes next: Now all theſe three liv'd between the tenth and twelfth Centuries. Thoſe amongſt the modern Jews, who have diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in this Sort of Learning, are Rabbi Abraham de Balmis and Elias Levita. Hebrew, Greek, and Latin Grammars have been very much improv'd in this laſt Century. * Diodor. Sicul. Lib. II. Gerard Voſſius, de Arte Grammatica Lib. I. Cap. 1, 2, 3, & 4.

GRAMMARIANS: Amongſt thoſe who have been diſtinguiſh'd with the Title of Grammarians as a Mark of more than ordinary Learning, without teaching publickly in this Faculty; amongſt thoſe may be reckon'd Cornelius Alexander; Appion of Alexandria, againſt whom Joſephus, the Jewiſh Hiſtorian, drew his Pen; Hyginus, Auguſtus's manumis'd Slave, and Solinus, who calls his Book Polyhiſtor. In the twelfth Century John Tzetzes, Iſaac's Brother, gain'd the Diſtinction of a Grammarian, not ſo much from his Scholia upon Heſiod, which ſignify little, as from his Hiſtory in Greek Verſe. Rolandino of Padua, who liv'd in the thirteenth Century, wrote it may be nothing more than the Hiſtory of the four Ecelini, his Countrymen; however he has the Title of Grammarian, probably for this Reaſon, becauſe he has diſcover'd more Judgment and Capacity than was commonly met with in the Writers of that Age. * Gerrard John Voſſius, de Arte Grammat. Lib. I. Cap. 10. Diomedes, Lib. II. de Arte Grammaticâ. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latin. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Græc. Sueton. de Illuſt Grammat. Baillet, Jugement des Savans des prejugés de titres d'honeur, Tom. I. pag. 189.

GRANCOLAS (John), Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty at Paris. Having ſpent a great deal of Time in ſtudying Liturgick and Ceremonial Books, reſolv'd to publiſh his Obſervations upon this Subject. His firſt Performance was a Tract of the Antiquity of the Ceremonies of the Sacraments, printed A. D. 1692. The next Year he publiſh'd another little Tract, call'd, The Inſtitution or Cuſtom of dipping the conſecrated Bread in the Wine. The Buſineſs of Quietiſm making a great Noiſe in the World, M. Grancolas read the Book of the myſtic Quietiſts, and inform'd himſelf of the Particulars of their Hiſtory; and being thus qualify'd, he gave a Relation of the Hereſy, and confuted it in a little Book, entitled, Quietiſm contrary to the Doctrine of Sacraments. This Tract gives the Detail of Molinos's Life, of his Doctrine, and the Cenſure paſs'd upon him. And here M. Grancolas lays open the Weakneſs and Ill-tendency of the Principles of this Spaniſh Prieſt and his Followers, and confutes their Heterodoxies from Scripture and the ancient Fathers.

He has likewiſe written ſome Diſcourſes upon Diſcipline and practical Points: For the Purpoſe, Religious Inſtructions drawn from Holy Scripture: The Confeſſors Science, or, the Manner for adminiſtring the Sacrament of Penance: The Church's ancient Penitential, or, the Penances formerly impos'd for every Sin, together with the Duty of all Conditions and Profeſſions, preſcrib'd by the Fathers and Councils: The Holy Hours, or, a Chriſtian's Exerciſe to prepare him for hearing Maſs, and coming to the Sacraments, taken out of the Holy Scriptures. But this Author's principal Works are, his Treatiſe of Liturgies, or, the Manner of officiating at the Maſs in every Century, both in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches; and his ancient Sacramentary of the Church, where all the ancient Practice in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments both in Greek and Latin Churches are reported; theſe two Books were printed in 1698, and 1699. It may fairly be ſaid that he has gone to the Bottom of the Matter, and made a full Collection of the Practice of Antiquity upon this Subject: Thus he has extracted from the Fathers and Eccleſiaſtical Writers, from Canons and Liturgies and other Records, from the firſt Ages to the preſent, in order to explain both the ancient and modern Diſcipline and Ceremonies in the Greek and Latin Churches.

It were to be wiſh'd he had been ſomewhat more exact in the Method and Connection of this Work. In 1713. he publiſh'd a Tract of the Maſs and divine Offices. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library Cent. XVII.

GRAND (Anthony Le), ſome call him the Abridger of Des Cartes. He publiſh'd a Body of natural Philoſophy, explain'd and prov'd by Experiments according to the Principles of the Corpuſcularian Hypotheſis: 'Twas printed at London in 1673. He wrote a Book likewiſe in Defence of Des Cartes's Opinion, that Brutes are nothing but Clock-work without Senſation. To theſe we may add his Notes upon Rohault's Phyſicks. * Memoires du Tems.

GRAND (Council the), a ſovereign Court of Judicature in Paris, which takes Cognizance of all Suits commenc'd, and Differences ariſing from Claims and Pretenſions relating to Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks, Abbies, Priories and other Benefices of the King's Nomination, excepting where the Regale is concern'd, which belongs to the Juriſdiction of the Parliament. The Grand Council likewiſe takes Cognizance of the Indults or Papal Grants made to Cardinals and other French Prelates; of the Indults given to Officers of the Parliament of Paris; of Evocations, or bringing the Cauſe from a lower to an higher Court; touching the Eſtates and Privileges of the great Religious Orders of France, as the Cluniacks, the Ciſtercians, the Premonſtratenſes, thoſe of Grand Mont, of the Trinity, of Fontevrault and St. John of Jeruſalem; and for recovering the Goods of Eccleſiaſticks. The Juriſdiction of this Court reaches all over the Kingdom. At firſt they us'd to review the Deciſions of the Judges, and the Contrariety of Decrees, which is ſtill done pretty often. The Grand Council was originally the only Board where the King ſat, and of which the Princes, the Officers of the Crown, and the firſt Preſidents of ſovereign Courts were Counſellors. King Charles VIII. reduc'd the Number to ſeventeen and an Attorney General; afterwards King Lewis XII. added three Counſellors to make the Number twenty, which being divided into tens, each Diviſion were oblig'd to ſerve ſix Months. Afterwards Advocates General and Preſidents were brought to the Board; and the Number of Counſellors augmented from time to time by new Creations: So that at preſent the Council conſiſts of a firſt Preſident, created by Edict in February 1690, of eight Preſidents, of four and fifty Counſellors, two Advocates General, and a Procureur or Attorney General who attends all the Year, whereas the reſt are only ſix Months in Buſineſs. The Preſidents us'd to be taken out of the Body of the Maſters of Requeſt; but in February 1690. the King, as has been already obſerv'd, created eight Preſidents, each four of which were to ſerve ſix Months, and afterwards made their Office equal to the Quality of a Maſter of Requeſts. They enter'd upon their Charge in January and July, and the Advocates General came on with 'em, one after another. The ſix Months Counſellors came to the Board in October and April, the firſt being the Winter, and the other the Summer half Year. Thus the Preſidents and Advocates General ſerv'd three Months in the Winter, and three in the Summer half Year. The Habit of Gere-mony of the Grand Council is a black Velvet Gown for the Presidents; and a Gown of black Sattin for the Counsellors, Advocates General, and Attorney General. The Chancellor us'd to be born President of the Grand Council; but since the erecting the Office of a First President this Privilege is lost. * Davity, de la France.

*GRANIUS (Petronius). For Scipio that followed Cæsar's Party, read Pompey's Party, Morery Vol. I.

GRAND-PONT or Ponte-Grand, formerly Athyra; 'tis but a small Town, though an Archiepiscopal See. It stands in Romania upon the Sea of Marmora, between the Town Selivrea, and the River Aqua-Dolce. * Baudrand.

GRANDPRE, a Town with a Castle. 'Tis in Champaigne upon the River Ayr, between the Towns of Rheims and Stenaye, twelve Leagues from the first, and five from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

GRATIOSA or la Gracieuse, a small Island in the Atlantick Ocean. 'Tis one of the Azores, and stands fifteen Leagues from Tercera to the North. Tho' the Extent is small, 'tis pleasant and well improv'd. * Maty, Diction.

GRATUS, sirnam'd Valerius, the fifth Governor of Judea for the Romans. He succeeded Rufus, and manag'd his Post with great Conduct eleven Years, when Pontius Pilate came after him. Hardly any Kings or Governors of Judea made so many Revolutions in the High Priesthood. At his first coming to Jerusalem he depriv'd Ananus and made Ismael High Priest. When Ismael had held it about a Year, he was oblig'd to resign to Eleazer, Son to Ananus. This Gentleman had no better Fortune, being forc'd to quit to Simon, Son of Camit. Simon, about a Year after, gave up his Office by Gratus's Order to Caiaphas, who kept the High Priesthood much longer, and almost to the Time of our Saviour's Suffering. Gratus was very brave in his Person and Conduct. When Archelaüs went to Rome to plead his Title before Augustus, the Jews made several Insurrections both against this Prince and the Romans. But Gratus always routed 'em, and forc'd 'em to their Duty. Amongst other Instances of his Correction he executed Atrongius and four of his Brothers, who had been guilty of barbarous Cruelties. As for Atrongius, he had the Impudence to crown himself. * Joseph. Antiquit. Lib. XVII. Cap. 12. & Lib. XVIII. Cap. 3.

GRAVEDONA, a Town in Italy within the Duchy of Milan. 'Tis in the Territory of Como and on the Western Bank of the Lake Como, two Leagues from Fort Fuentes, and the County of Chiavennes. * Baudrand.

GRAVENECK, a great German Town in Suabia. 'Tis three Leagues from the Town of Retling to the South East. Graveneck is the chief Town of the County of the same Name: The County lies between the County of Hohenzollern and the Duchy of Wirtemberg.

At the Diet of Ausbourg held A. D. 1555. the Counts of Graveneck took their Place with the rest of the Counts of Suabia, and had a Vote granted 'em in the Diets. * Maty, Diction.

GRAUSO, had the Command of Cunibert, King of Italy's Army, and restor'd his Master who had been depos'd by the Treachery of Alachus, who usurp'd the Crown by the Assistance of Aldo. * Paul. Diac. Longob. Lib. V. Cap. 40. & 41. Sigon. Lib. II, &c.

GRECINUS (Julius), a Roman Senator, was a Person of great Probity and Elocution. The Emperor Caligula sentenc'd him to Death, because he generously refus'd to manage a Charge against M. Silanus. He wrote something concerning Vineyards and Agriculture, as may be collected from Columella. * Seneca, Lib. II. de Benefic. Columel. Lib. I. Cap. 1.

*GREGORY the Great, Son to Gordianus, a Roman Senator, and Sylvia, and Great Grandson to Pope Felix II. After his Father's Death he spent all his Estate in building and endowing Monasteries. Pelagius II. ordain'd him Deacon, A. D. 582, drag'd him from his Retirement, and sent him Apocrisiary or Nuntio to the Emperor Tiberius's Court at Constantinople. He acquitted himself well in this Employment, and disputed with the Patriarch Eutychius concerning the Nature of glorify'd Bodies; Gregory maintaining against the other that they were not Aerial Vehicles, but palpable and solid, tho' supernaturally spiritualiz'd and refin'd. At his Return to Rome, he was made Secretary to Pelagius II, and upon the Death of this Pope was chosen his Successor September the 4th, A. D. 590. He was desirous to decline the Promotion, and wrote to the Emperor Mauritius not to allow the Election. But Germanus, Governor of Rome, writing to Constantinople in his Commendation, prevail'd with his Majesty to confirm it. Gregory finding himself thus disappointed, absconded in a Cavern, where, as 'tis said, he was discover'd by a Column of Fire that stood over it. Thus he was forc'd to acquiesce, and accept the Charge. John, Bishop of Ravenna, reproach'd him for his Incompliance. to defend this Conduct, he wrote his Pastoral. Baronius and some others are of Opinion that Gregory was never a Monk. This Sentiment is contradicted by several Men of Learning, and particularly by the famous Mabillon, of the Benedictine Order. We have several Editions of St. Gregory's Works; but the fairest and most correct is that publish'd by Sainte-Marthe, a Benedictine, of the Congregation of St. Maur. His Morals upon Job were written at Constantinople at the Instance of Leander, Bishop of Seville. He wrote a great many Homilies in his Pontificate. Those upon the Prophet Ezekiel and the Gospels are extant. His Dialogues were written during his Retirement. But his twelve Books of Epistles written when he was Pope, are the most serviceable Part of his Works, and furnish Rules and prudent Decisions upon a great many Points of Discipline. Other Works reckon'd to S. Gregory don't belong to this Pope; tho' some of 'em are partly borrow'd from his Writings, or Imitations of his Manner. He had a Genius proper for practical Discourses, and was extraordinarily furnish'd with moral and religious Thoughts: And tho' he was not very curious in his Composition, and the Choice of his Words, yet his Stile is flowing, his Discourse connected, and he holds up to his Pitch, with Equality enough. As for beautiful Turns and the Sublime, he does not seem to have made it his Business, but then there's Truth and Solidity in his Reasonings. On the other side, he is full of common Places and Maxims: He runs out too far sometimes in his Periods, and his Explanations and Allegories have more Subtlety than Proportion. * Isidor. Hispalens. Sigebert, Cap. 41. Honorius Augustin. Lib. III. Cap. 32. Johannes Diacon. in Vit. Gregor. Magn. Gregor. Turon. Bede. Baronius. Bellarmin. Du Pin, new Eccl. Lib. Cent. VI.

* GREGORY IV. This Pope went into France to countenance the Insurrection of Lewis the Debonair's Children against their Father: And here his Holiness threatned to excommunicate those who refus'd to assist these unnatural Rebels: But the French Bishops had the honest Resolution to tell him that if he came to excommunicate them, he should go back excommunicated himself, si excommunicaturus veniret ipse excommunicatus abiret. The Pope wrote a Letter upon this Subject, which is extant among Agobardus's Works. * Anastasius, Ciaconius, & Baronius, A. C. 827, 832, 835, 843. Du Pin, new Eccles. Library, Cent. IX.

* GREGORY VI, an Arch-Priest of the Church of Rome. He got into the Papal Chair by giving a Sum of Money to Bennet IX, Son to Albericus, Count of Frescati, who resign'd to him upon this Consideration. This Bennet had Silvester III. for a Counter-Claimant. It seems Bennet IX. was not punctual as to the time of his Resignation, for there were three Anti-popes at the same time. The Emperor Henry IV. marching into Italy, got 'em all depos'd as Intruders and Simoniacks. Bennet made his Escape; Gregory VI. was seiz'd and carry'd off into Germany where he dy'd; and Sylvester III. was sent back to his Bishoprick of St. Sabina. And in the Year 1046. the Emperor procur'd the electing Suidger, Bishop of Bamberg, who took the Name of Clement II. and was own'd by all the Western Church. * Otho Frisingens. in Chron. Malmsbury, Lib. II. Cap. 13. Baron. A. C. 1044, 1046, &c. Du Pin, new Eccles. Library, Cent. XI.

* GREGORY IX, of the Family of the Counts of Signi, and Nephew to Pope Innocent III. There are a great many of his Epistles extant, and better written than the Manner of that Age. 'Twas by his Order that Raymond de Pennafort made a Collection of the Decretals: This Work was approv'd by his Holiness, who prohibited the Use of any other in the Schools and spiritual Courts. In the Year 1233 he attempted an Union of the Greek and Latin Church; but thoſe, who were commiſſion'd on either Side for a Conference, could not agree upon the Terms. * Genebrard, Onuphrius. Sigonius. Spondanus. Lewis Jacob, Biblioth. Pont.

* GREGORY X. There are ſeveral of his Epiſtles extant. This Pope was the firſt who made a Law for ſhutting up the Cardinals in the Conclave upon the Pope's Deceaſe, and keeping 'em there 'till another was choſen: This was done to expedite the Election and prevent a long Vacancy, which had happen'd after the Death of his Predeceſſor.

This Regulation was revok'd by his Succeſſors Adrian V. and John XXI. But being reviv'd by Celeſtine V. and Boniface VIII. was afterwards conſtantly obſerved. * Onuphrius. Genebrard. Bzovius. Spondanus. Lewis Jacob. Du Cheſne. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIII.

* GREGORY XII, born at Venice, call'd Angelus Corarius, had been Biſhop of Venice and Chalcis, and Patriarch of Conſtantinople. He was ſent Nuntio into the Kingdom of Naples by Boniface IX, and made Cardinal by Innocent VII, when the Latin Church was diſturb'd with a Schiſm. Before his Election all the Cardinals ſign'd a Paper, and ſwore to obſerve the Contents, which was that the Perſon elected ſhould renounce being Pope. Corarius being elected confirm'd his Promiſe, and ſent three Ambaſſadors to Bennet the Antipope to agree upon Meaſures to execute this Reſolution. 'Twas agreed that the two Competitors ſhould come to Savonna in September following, with the Cardinals of each Party, to terminate this Affair. In the mean time, notwithſtanding Gregory appear'd inclin'd to reſign, he refus'd to appear at Savonna, tho' he had been forc'd to remove from Rome. The Cardinals of his Party perceiving his Inſincerity, went off from him, appeal'd from the Sentences he had pronounc'd againſt 'em, and met at Piſa. Bennet having written reproachful Letters to the French King, this King proſecuted thoſe that brought 'em, and declar'd his Kingdom ſhould ſtand neuter between the two Claimants. The Cardinals of the two oppoſite Colleges met, with other Prelates, at Piſa, A. D. 1409; And here having cited Bennet and Gregory, they condemn'd 'em for Contumacy; and afterwards they depos'd 'em both, and choſe Alexander V. in their Stead. In the mean time Gregory held a Council at Udina in Friuli, where he likewiſe intimated another Council. But ſoon after he diſguis'd himſelf and retir'd into the Kingdom of Naples, where King Ladiſlaus protected him for ſome time. And when this Prince diſengag'd, he took Shelter in Marca Anconitana, under Charles Malateſta, who was the only Perſon that ſtuck by him. At laſt July the 4th 1415. he put his Reſignation of the Popedom into the Hands of John, Cardinal of St. Sixtus, and Malateſta, and ſent it by them to the Council of Conſtance.

The Council in return to this Submiſſion, made Angelus Corarius Dean of the Cardinal's College, and decreed him Legate in Marca Anconitana during Life. He died at Recanati near Loretto, A. D. 1417, a little before Martin V. came to the Chair. * Theodoric de Nien, Lib. II. & III. hiſt. Sciſm. Binius, Tom. 8. Concil. Gregorius Polydorius in ſuo Gregor, &c. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XV.

* GREGORY NYSSEN. The Works of this Father are, Commentaries upon the Scripture: Dogmatical Tracts: Sermons upon the Myſteries of Chriſtianity: Moral Diſcourſes: Panegyricks upon the Saints: Orations, and ſome Epiſtles upon Church Diſcipline. Notwithſtanding St. Gregory Nyſſen profeſs'd Rhetorick, and that Photius affirms his Stile raiſed and entertaining, yet he falls ſhort of S. Baſil's and S. Gregory Nazianzen's Elocution. His Stile looks affected and overflouriſh'd, and is too ſtiff and luxuriant for an Orator: He is almoſt always plung'd in Allegory or abſtracted Reaſoning: He blends Philoſophy with Divinity, and argues upon Philoſophical Principles in his Explication of the Myſteries of Chriſtianity; and his moral Diſcourſes are commonly founded upon the ſame Bottom. Thus his Works look more like Plato and Ariſtotle, than the Performances of other Chriſtians. But notwithſtanding Origen was his Model for Allegory; yet 'tis probable the Paſſages, where we meet with ſome of Origen's Miſtakes, are interpolated. That the Fact ſtands thus, Germanus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, endeavours to ſhew in a Book, out of which Photius gives an Extract in his Bibliotheca; and where by precedent and ſubſequent Paſſages it appears that the Aſſertions in this Father for the Non-Eternity of the Puniſhment of the damn'd were foiſted in by the Originiſts: He obſerves farther that this Misfortune happen'd to his Dialogue with Macrino concerning the Soul, and to his Book of the Perfection of a Chriſtian; to which ſhould have been added his Tract concerning Children before the Age of reaſoning. However, it may be ſaid that St. Gregory Nyſſen having his Head full of Origen's Notions and Principles might ſometimes ſlip into his Miſtakes through Incogitancy. Tho' when he gave cloſe Attention, he was not of that learned Man's Opinion. To conclude, 'tis plain, there is a ſuppoſititious Addition at the end of his great Catecheſis, where he mentions the Heretick Severus. * Baſil, Epiſt. 43. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. 6. & in Epiſt. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Cap. 129. Socrat. Lib. III. Cap. 8. Lib. IV. Cap. 21. Lib. V. Cap. 9. Sozom. Lib. VII. Cap. 10. Theodoret, Lib. IV. Cap. 28. Photius, Biblioth. Cod. 6. & 7.

GREGORY (Saint), Biſhop of Langres, in the fifth and ſixth Centuries, Son of one of the principal Senators of Autun, was when young preferr'd to the Dignity of a Count or Governor of the Town: He quitted this Employment, retir'd from the World, and was ordain'd Biſhop of Langres at fifty ſeven Years of Age. He dy'd in the Year 539, 33 Years after his Conſecration. * Gregor. Turon. Hiſt. Francor. Lib. III. Cap. 15. & 19. Le Cointe, Annal.

* GREGORY of Betica. He was Biſhop of Eliberis or Collioure in Spain. Marcellinus and Fauſtinus, two Luciferian Prieſts, report, that when Hoſius was going to cenſure this Biſhop, he was inviſibly knock'd down and ſtruck ſpeechleſs: But the Truth of this Story is much to be ſuſpected. St. Hierom ranges this Biſhop with Lucifer Calaritanus, and 'tis probable he was one of the Luciferian Party. He flouriſh'd from the Year 357. to the End of the fourth Century. St. Hierom in his Tract de Viris Illuſtribus, written in the Year 392, mentions this Gregory as then living; where this Father affirms Gregory had written a Tract de Fide, which has been reputed the ſame with the ſeven little Treatiſes againſt the Arians printed at Rome under Gregory's Name in the Year 1575: But it has been ſince diſcover'd they belong to Fauſtinus a Luciferian Deacon, to whom Gennadius reckons them. They are dedicated to the Empreſs Galla Placidia, Siſter to the Emperor Honorius, who, by the way, was not Empreſs 'till a great while after the Death of Gregory of Betica. 'Tis therefore believ'd that this Tract de Fide, which belongs to Gregory of Betica, is that which goes upon the Divinity of the ſecond Perſon, and is inſerted among the Works of St. Gregory Nazianzen. This Author's Stile, according to St. Hierom, is but little rais'd. * Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Cap. 105. Gennad. Honor. Auguſtodun. Lib. I. de Lumin. Eccleſ. Cap. 106. Iſidor. de Vir. Illuſt. Cap. 1, &c.

* GREGORY of Tours, one of the moſt famous Biſhops and Authors of his Time, flouriſh'd in the ſixth Century: He was Son to Florentius, Brother to Gallus, Biſhop of Clermont, and deſcended from an illuſtrious Family in Auvergne. He wrote a Commentary upon the Pſalms, now in Manuſcript, and a Tract de Curſu Eccleſiaſtico, or, of the Church Service. This Author confeſſes his Stile rough and unpoliſh'd. He was too forward in his Belief of Miracles, and gives fabulous Relations without any Scruple. However, his Hiſtory is a ſerviceable Work, and furniſhes a great deal of uſeful Matter. The beſt Edition of Gregory of Tours is that publiſh'd by Ruinart a Benedictine, A. D. 1699. * Hilduin. in Areopag. Hincmar, Præfat. in Vit. S. Remigii. Honor. Auguſtodun. Lib. III. Cap. 23. Baron. A.C. 566, 574, &c. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Lat. Lib. II. Cap. 22. Sainte Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Tom. 1. pag. 739, &c.

* GREGORY PALAMAS, Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica in the fourteenth Century: He fell into the Heterodoxy of ſome Greeks, who aſſerted that the Light the Apoſtles ſaw upon Mount Tabor, was uncreated Luſtre. Barlaam a Greek Monk of Calabria delated Palamas and the other Monks of his Sentiment to the Emperor and Patriarch of Conſtantinople. This Controverſy occaſion'd the convening a Council at Conſtantinople tinople in the Year 1340, where Palamas's Opinion was approv'd, and Barlaam's cenſur'd. Some time after one Gregory Acyndinus another Monk reviv'd Barlaam's Charge againſt Palamas, but without any better Succeſs; for both himſelf and Barlaam were condemn'd at a ſecond Synod; but the Event turn'd the other Way in a third, where John Patriarch of Conſtantinople cenſur'd the Palamites. When the Emperor Cantacuzenus made himſelf Maſter of Conſtantinople, he got John depos'd, and Iſidore choſen in his Room, by whoſe Intereſt Palamas was made Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica. Theſe two Prelates were depos'd in the fourth Council of Conſtantinople conſiſting of Barlaamitiſh Biſhops, and held A. D. 1347. However, Iſidore kept Poſſeſſion of the See of Conſtantinople, and Caliſtus, who ſucceeded him, was of the ſame Perſuaſion, and condemn'd the Barlaamites in a fifth Council held A. D. 1355, where the Doctrine of the Palamites was farther explain'd and approved. As for Barlaam, he retir'd into the Weſt, was reconcil'd to the Latin Church, and made Biſhop of Gieraci in Calabria. There are ſeveral of his Tracts extant both for and againſt the Latins. Gregory Acyndinus refus'd to follow Barlaam's Precedent, and cloſe with the Latins; for he lay conceal'd in Greece, and went on writing againſt the Palamites. Palamas likewiſe wrote a great many Tracts both in Defence of his Opinion touching the Light upon Mount Tabor, and againſt the Latins upon the Subject of the Proceſſion of the holy Ghoſt. * Gregoras, Hiſtor. edit. Louvre. Cantacuzen. Lib. I. Spondan. A. C. 1337. Leo Allat, de perpet. Eccleſ. Orient. & Occident. conſenſu. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIV.

GREGORY (Peter), born at Tolouſe, read upon the Civil Law firſt at Cahors, and afterwards in the Town of his Nativity. He flouriſhed in the Sixteenth Century, was a very knowing Perſon, and has drawn abundance of Learning together in his Books: However, his Judgment ſeems to have fail'd a little in the Choice of his Matter. He had a very honourable Invitation into Lorrain, where he was made Civil and Canon Law Profeſſor at Pont-à-Mouſſon, lately made an Univerſity by Duke Charles. He acquitted himſelf in this Poſt with great Reputation 'till his Death, which happened in the Year 1597. He publiſh'd a great Folio, which has ran through ſeveral Editions: 'Tis entitled, Syntagma Juris univerſi atque Legum penè omnium Gentium, & Rerum publicarum præcipuarum, in tres Partes digeſtum, in quo Divini & Humani Juris totius, naturali & novâ Methodo per gradus ordineque, Materia Univerſalium & Singularium, ſimulque judicia explicantur. His other Works are, Syntaxis Artis Mirabilis de Republicâ Libri XXVI. Two Volumes upon the Canon Law. He likewiſe wrote againſt Charles du Moulin to prove the Council of Trent ought to be receiv'd in France. * Doujat, Droit Canon.

* GRETZER (James), a Jeſuit, born at Marckdorf in Germany, was five and twenty Years Divinity Profeſſor at Ingolſtad. He was an eminent Controverſialiſt, and apply'd himſelf to the Study of Antiquity both Eccleſiaſtical and Profane. He underſtood the Languages, and wrote with a great Appearance of Eaſe and Learning. He died at Ingolſtad Janu. 1635, ſixty three Years of Age. He was a very voluminous Writer, and beſides Polemical Diſcourſes, he publiſh'd a great many Greek Authors with Latin Tranſlations, and Latin Originals with Notes: He wrote a Volume in Folio upon the Croſs, printed, A. D. 1616. Gretzer was certainly a very learned Man, but 'tis to be wiſh'd he had ſhewn himſelf ſomewhat more a Critic, and not miſtaken ſpurious Tracts and Hiſtories for genuine. That for which he is moſt to be valu'd, is the prodigious Variety of his Matter, and his diligent collecting every Thing upon each Head which might ſerve for his Purpoſe. In ſhort, his Books are good Memoirs for thoſe who have Occaſion to treat the Subjects handled by him. * Spondan. in Annal. Alegambe, Biblioth. Script. Soc. Jeſu. Miræus de Script. Sec. XVII. &c. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

GRIBELIN (Mr. Sim:) In Morery Vol. I. under this Article I have mention'd the Curioſity of Darius's Tent: I ſhall now acquaint the Reader with what Mr. Gribelin has ſince perform'd with no leſs Art and Reputation. He has drawn and graved the Set of Cartons at Hampton Court, done by Raphael Urbin the beſt Hand living for at leaſt two thouſand Years. The Originals are above Price, and deſervedly reckon'd ſome of the fineſt Paintings in Europe. The Set conſiſts of ſeven Pieces, in which ſome Parts of St. John's Goſpel and the Acts of the Apoſtles, relating to the Hiſtory of St. Peter and St. Paul, are repreſented with ſurprizing Harmony, Nature and Strength. He has likewiſe graved a Set of the choiceſt Pictures in the Galleries at Windſor and Kenſington, which were well receiv'd by the Court. And he has now drawn ready to engrave on three Copper Plates, the famous Cieling in the Banqueting Houſe at White-Hall, painted by the celebrated Sir Paul Rubens; and which it may be, will anſwer up to any Thing of this Kind extant.

GRIMBERG or Grimborg, a Town with a Caſtle that commands it. This Place is the Head of one of the twenty five Bailliwicks belonging to the Archbiſhoprick of Treves: It ſtands between Lorrain and the Palatinate upon the Rhyne, three Leagues from Birkenfeld. * Maty, Diction.

GRIMMUS, youngeſt Son to Miſcilaus, King of the Heruli, and Brother to Miſtevo and Mizdrache: He is commonly reckon'd the firſt Prince of the Rugians. This Grimmus was Crito's Father who built Lubeck, and was a cruel Perſecutor of the Chriſtians: Having kill'd Buthues, King of the Obotritæ, he ſeiz'd his Kingdom; but met with the ſame Treatment himſelf from Henry, Brother to the diſpoſſeſs'd Prince: Raſo ſucceeded his Father or his Kinſman Grimmus; he was a warlike Prince, and built the Town Razenbourg. Jaromarus I. reign'd next: He built Straelſund, and was the firſt of his Family that turn'd Chriſtian. His Grandſon Wizlaw exerted his Zeal for the Converſion of the Livonians. His Son Jaromarus built Damgarten. Jaromarus left Iſſue Vizlere II, who died without Children, A. D. 1325. The Princes of Pomerania being deſcended in a right Line from Miſtevo, Grimmus's Brother, put up their Claim, and enter'd upon the Territories, notwithſtanding the Houſe of Denmark and the Princes of Mekelbourg enter'd a Counter Title, as being extracted from the ſame Branch, tho' at a greater Diſtance. * Jacob. Spenner, Syllog. Gen. Hiſt. in Famil. Vandal.

GRONOVIUS (John Frederick), an eminent Lawyer and Hiſtorian, was born at Hambourg in the Year 1611. He travell'd thro' Germany, Italy and France: From thence coming into the united Provinces, he ſettled at Deventer. From hence he was call'd off to Leyden to the Greek Profeſſor's Chair then void by the Death of Daniel Heinſius. He has publiſh'd ſeveral Things, and printed a good many Claſſic Authors corrected with Notes upon 'em. To mention ſome of 'em; in 1637. he publiſh'd a Diſſertation upon Statius's Sylvæ; two Years after he publiſh'd two Books of Obſervations much valu'd. In 1651. he printed a Tract upon Eccleſiaſtical Writers. He publiſh'd an excellent Book upon the Roman Seſtertia in 1656, afterwards printed in 4to, and entitled, de Vetere Pecuniâ. He likewiſe publiſh'd Plautus, Salluſt, Livy, Seneca, Pliny, Quintillian, Aulus Gellius, &c. He dyed at Leyden in 1672. James Gronovius, his Son, ſucceeded him at Leyden in the Profeſſor's Chair, and has likewiſe oblig'd the Publick from the Preſs; particularly, he has lately publiſh'd an excellent Edition of Herodotus. * Konig. Biblioth. Memoires du Tems.

GROSSA, an Iſland in the Gulph of Venice near the Coaſt of the County of Zara in Dalmatia of which 'tis Parcel. It belongs to the Venetians, and makes a conſiderable Length from Eaſt to Weſt, but is very narrow from North to South. There are ſome Towns or rather Villages in it. * Maty, Diction.

* GROTIUS (Hugo), was without Doubt one of the greateſt Men of his Time; if we conſider him either with reſpect to his Learning, the Beauty of his Imagination, or the Correctneſs of his Stile. He underſtood the Languages in Perfection, was thoroughly acquainted with Mythology and Hiſtory, extraordinarily well skill'd in Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Hiſtory, and an eminent Civil Lawyer. His Book de Jure Belli & Pacis is a Maſterpiece in this Kind. His Commentaries upon the holy Scripture exceed thoſe of moſt other Critics. He has been charg'd by ſome People with warping towards Socinianiſm and Pelagianiſm. However, his Book de Satisfactione Chriſti, to mention nothing more, is a Demonſtration he was no Diſciple of Socinus. His Notes upon Caſſander's Conſultation is an Argument he thought the Proteſtants went too far from the Church of Rome at the Reformation: Rivet wrote againſt theſe Notes, to which Grotius reply'd. 'Tis ſaid he refus'd the Aſſiſtance of a Lutheran Miniſter upon his Death-Bed. * Meurſius, in Athen. Batav. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. Hallervorgius, Biblioth. Curioſa. Imperialis, in Muſæo Hiſtor. Melchior Adam in Vit. Juriſconſult. German.

Notes

GRUBENHAGUE (the Principality of), a Duchy in the Country of Brunſwick in the lower Saxony. 'Tis divided into two Parts. The Weſtern Diviſion lies between the Principality of Calemberg, and the Biſhoprick of Hildeſheim; Eimbecke is the chief Town, two Leagues from which to the South ſtands the Caſtle of Grubenhague, from whence the whole Principality takes its Name. The Eaſtern Moiety lies upon the Confines of the Principality of Anhalt and Thuringia. 'Tis an hilly Countrey, but conſiderable for Iron Mines. The principal Towns are Lutterberg, Oſterode, and Andreasberg. This Principality and that of Calemberg, belong to the Duke of Hannover. * Maty, Diction.

GRUYERES or Griers, a ſmall Town in Switzerland. It ſtands upon the River Sana in the Canton of Fribourg to the South. This Town had formerly Earls of its own, whoſe Territories reach'd up to the Lake of Geneva. At preſent 'tis the chief Town of the Head Bailliage of Fribourg; there's likewiſe a good Caſtle in it, where the Bailiff reſides. Gruyeres is famous for good Cheeſe. * Maty, Diction.

GRYNEUM or Grynium, a Town near Clazomenæ in Greece: There was a Temple and a Grove conſecrated to Apollo, and oracular Reſponſes deliver'd here. The Temple was a ſtately Building of white Marble. From this Place Apollo was call'd Gryneus. * Virgil. Ecclog. 6. Strabo, Lib. III.

GRYPHIANDER (John), born in the Country of Oldenbourg, was Hiſtory and Poetry Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Jena upon the Deceaſe of Elias Reuſner, A. D. 1612. He commenc'd Doctor of Law in this Univerſity, in 1614; and fifteen Years afterwards return'd into his own Country and was made a Judge. He died in 1652. He wrote a Tract printed in Quarto at Frankford, entitled, Joannis Gryphiandri I. C^ti. de Inſulis Tractatus, ex I. C^tis. Politicis, Hiſtoricis & Philologis collectus, ut omnibus hiſce uſui eſſe poſſet, in quo plurimæ cognatæ Quæſtiones de Mari, Fluminibus, Lacubus, Littoribus, Portubus, Aquæ Ductibus, Aggeribus, Navigationibus, Alluvionis Alveique incremento, &c. excutiuntur. He wrote a Diſcourſe upon the Phœnix publiſh'd, A. D. 1618: And in 1625. he publiſh'd a great Curioſity, entitled, Commentarius de Weichbildis Saxonicis, ſive Coloſſis Rulandinis urbium quarundam Saxonicarum. * Konig. Biblioth.

GUADAGNOLO (Philip), Arabick and Chaldee Profeſſor at Rome in the College de la Sapienza in the ſeventeenth Century: He was one of the firſt employ'd in the Arabick Tranſlation of the Scripture: This Verſion was reſolv'd on by the Congregation de propaganda Fide; ſome Levantine Prelates having petition'd Pope Urban VIII, A. D. 1624. for this Purpoſe. The Archbiſhop of Damaſcus and Father Guadagnolo were pitch'd upon for this Work; but 'twas not long before the whole Weight of the Buſineſs fell upon this latter. He died at Rome in 1656. He wrote a Book, much eſteemed, againſt a Mahometan Doctor. 'Tis an Apology for the Chriſtian Religion againſt the Objections of Abmed Ben Zin Alabedin: This Book was publiſh'd at Rome in Latin, and afterwards in Arabick. He likewiſe wrote Linguæ Arabicæ Inſtitutiones in Folio, A. D. 1642. * Giornale de' Letterati Jan. 29, 1672. Bayle, Diction.

GUADALAVIAR, a River in Spain. It riſes in the Neighbourhood of Aragon and new Caſtille near the Head of the Taio and the Xucar, and having run by Albarazin and Tervel in Aragon, holds on its Courſe thro' the Kingdom of Valencia, runs by the Town Valencia, and ſoon after falls into the Gulf of that Name. * Baudrand.

GUADARRAMA, a River in new Caſtille in Spain. It riſes in Sierra Tablada, runs to Guadarrama and the Eſcurial, and diſembogues into the Taio three Leagues below Toledo. * Maty, Diction.

GUADAVARI, a Town in the Peninſula of Indus on this Side the Ganges. It ſtands in the Kingdom of Golconda upon the Cape Guadavari to the Eaſt of the Town Maſulipatan. * Baudrand.

GUADILBARBAR or Magrada, a great River in Africk. It riſes in Biledulgerid Proper, at the Confines of Techort; and after having held a Courſe thro' Borgio, Peſcara and Tebeſſa, in the Country of Zeb, it enters the Kingdom of Tunis, waſhes the Walls of Maſti, and divides into two Branches. The Eaſtern Stream, called Magrada, falls into the Sea at Porto Farina, and the Weſtern, after having run by Beja, falls likewiſe into the Sea near Tabarca, under the Name of Guadalquiver. * Baudrand.

GUAGNINI (Aleſandro), born at Verona, and naturaliz'd in Poland, made himſelf famous by his Pen and his Sword. He had conſiderable Poſts in the Poliſh Army, and having diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in Livonia, Moldavia, and the War with the Muſcovites, he was created a Poliſh Nobleman by King Sigiſmund Auguſtus, and made Governor of the Fort Witebsk. At laſt applying himſelf wholly to Learning, he wrote the Hiſtory of Poland, printed in Octavo at Frankfort, A. D. 1584; 'tis entitled, Rerum Polonicarum Tomi tres; quorum primus omnium Poloniæ Regum, à Lecho primo Gentis Duce, ad Stephanum Bathoreum etiamnum Regem; tum Principum Lithuaniæ, Chronologicam Recenſionem, ac Singulorum Res geſtas complectitur: Adjectâ recenti Hiſtoricarum in noſtram Ætatem incidentium continuâ narratione. II. Provinciarum, quæ uno Sarmatiæ Europeæ nomine vulgò veniunt, Chrorographicam deſcriptionem continet. III. Res ſingularitèr à Polonis in Valachia geſtas, Orationes item & Epiſtolas Sceptri Polonici Negotia concernentes habet. Alexandro Guagnino Equite Aurato peditumque Præfecto Auctore. Guagnini died at Cracow, A. D. 1614, ſeventy ſix Years of Age. * Stavorolſcius, ἐκατοντάδ. Scriptorum Polonicorum, pag. 101, 102.

GUARDAFUN or Guardafuy, a Cape in Ethiopia. It lies at the fartheſt Eaſtern Point of the Coaſt of Ayan over againſt Arabia the Happy, and the Iſland Zocotora, from which 'tis diſtant about forty Leagues. * Maty, Diction.

GUARDAMAR, a good Fort in Spain, it ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Valencia, at the Mouth of the Segura. * Baudrand.

GUARDE (the Lake of): This Lake is in Nigritia in Africk, upon the Confines of the Kingdoms of Gago, Guber, Cano, and the Agades. 'Tis conſiderably large, and the Niger runs thro' it. * Maty, Diction.

GUARINI, born at Verona, Scholar to Emanuel Chryſoloras, was one of the firſt who reviv'd the Belles Lettres in Italy in the fifteenth Century. He was a conſiderable Maſter in Greek and Latin, and taught with Reputation firſt at Venice, and afterwards at Ferrara. He tranſlated Strabo, ſome of Plutarch's Lives, and publiſh'd ſomething upon Grammar; to which may be added his Epiſtles, Orations and Verſes. He died at Ferrara in 1460. * Poggio. Leander Alberti. Voſſius, &c.

GUARINI (Baptiſta), Son of the former, followed the ſame Kind of Study with his Father, and taught the Languages a great while at Ferrara. His printed Works are, De Secta Epicuri; de Ordine docendi; de Regno adminiſtrando; Notes upon Ovid de Faſtis, and upon Catullus; Orations; Epiſtles; Poems, and a Tranſlation of ſome of Demoſthenes's and St. Gregory Nazianzen's Orations. * Geſner. Biblioth. Henric. Stephanus in dialog. de bene inſtituendis Græcæ Linguæ Studiis.

GUARINI, Mathematician to the Duke of Savoy; he was born at Modena and flouriſh'd in the ſeventeenth Century. There are two Folios of this Author's publiſh'd at Paris, one in 1666, entitled, Placita Philoſophica, and the other Cœleſtis Mathematica, printed after his Death in 1683. * Memoires du Tems.

GUASTECAN, a large Country within the Kingdom of Mexico in northern America. It takes in the Provinces of Panuco, Guaxaca, and the northern Part of Tlaſcala, as far as the Town Los Angelos excluſively. * Maty, Diction.

GUASTO or Guaſto di Amone, a Town with the Title of a Marquiſate in the Hither Abruzzo in Italy: It ſtands at the Mouth of the Trigno, twelve Leagues from Moliſſa and from Civita di Chieti. * Baudrand.

GUAXO CINGO or Guaco Cingo, a ſmall Town in new Spain. It ſtands in the Province of Mexico, between Mexico and Los Angelos. This Town inhabited by Spaniards and Indians enjoys a great many Privileges, becauſe the Burghers join'd Ferdinando Cortes againſt the Mexicans. * Baudrand.

GUAYAQUIL, a Town of Peru in Southern America. It ſtands within the Province of Quito, fifty Leagues from the Town Quito; it has a large Haven at the Mouth of the River Quayaquil in the South Sea over againſt the Iſland Puna. * Baudrand.

GUEIHOEU, one of the great Towns in China. It is the fourth for Largeneſs in the Province of Honan: It ſtands upon the Guai, and is the Capital of a Precinct with five great Towns in it. * Maty, Diction.

GUELDRIA, a Fort in the Peninſula on this ſide the Ganges. It lies upon the Coaſt of Coromandel in the Kingdom of Biſnagar, between Calecut, Narſingna and Paliacata. It belongs to the Dutch. * Maty, Diction.

GUENETLAN, a Town within the Audience or Territory of Guatimala in Northern America. 'Tis the Capital of the Province of Soconuſco, and ſtands upon the South Sea, five and thirty Leagues from St. Jago de Quatimala to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

GUESCAR or Hueſcar, a Town in the Kingdom of Granada in Spain. It has a Caſtle with the Title of a Duchy, and ſtands upon the River Guadadar, four Leagues from Baſa, upon the Confines of Andaluſia and the Kingdom of Murcia. * Baudrand.

GUET (James Joſeph du), is one of thoſe Authors who are very well known, notwithſtanding the Care they took to conceal themſelves. He was a great while a Prieſt of the Oratory, and upon his quitting that Order the Preſident M. Menars made him his Library Keeper: This Guet made it his Buſineſs to write learnedly, entertainingly, and with a ſtrain of Piety. Two Tracts of his were printed in 1707, one upon the Subject of Publick Prayer, and the other, entitled, Proper Qualifications requir'd of thoſe who either offer or partake of the holy Myſteries. They are written by Way of Letters. He wrote likewiſe a Tract for the Inſtruction of Novices. His Tracts are written with a great deal of Spirit and Delicacy, and well receiv'd. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

GUGLIELMINI (Dominico), extracted from a creditable Family, and born at Bologna in 1655. He ſtudied Mathematicks under M. Geminiano Montanari a Modeneze, and Phyſick under the famous Malpighius. He commenc'd Doctor in Phyſick at Bologna in 1678. The Comet, which appear'd in 1680 and 1681, occaſion'd his writing a Diſcourſe De Cometarum Naturâ & Ortu, Epiſtolica Diſſertatio, Bononiæ 1681. Here he gives a new Syſtem of Comets, which he fancies will account for all the Appearances; notwitſtanding, he has the Singularity at the ſame time to declare that he believes his Hypotheſis neither true nor probable. He gave farther Proof of his Skill in Aſtronomy by his Obſervation he made at Bologna of an Eclipſe of the Sun July the 12th 1684, which was printed in Latin the ſame Year. The Senate of Bologna made him chief Mathematick Profeſſor, and in 1686. choſe him Superviſor General of all their Water-Courſes belonging to their Precinct. To qualify himſelf the better for this Employment he apply'd to the Subject of Hydroſtaticks. And in the Years 1690. and 1691. publiſh'd a Book in two Parts, entitled, Aquarum fluentium Menſura nova methodo inquiſita. Here he ſets up a fundamental Principle acknowledg'd by all modern Philoſophers, and draws Conſequences of great Significancy from it. By his Calculation, the Danube in a Minute's time throws in about forty two Millions of Bononian Cubick Feet of Water into the Euxine Sea. This Tract bringing on a Controverſy between him and M. Papin occaſion'd the printing two Letters with the Title of Epiſtolæ duæ Hydroſtaticæ. And now a Salary for an Hydroſtatick Profeſſor being ſettled, himſelf was put in this Poſt. He aſſiſted M. Caſſini to mend his famous Meridian, which he had drawn forty Years before in St. Petrania's Church, and publiſh'd a Memoir of what had been done for the making and proof of that prodigious Inſtrument. In 1697. he publiſh'd his great Work, Della Natura de Fiumi, which is look'd on as his Maſterpiece. This Performance he dedicated to M. the Abbot Bignon, who the Year before had got him made Fellow of the Academy of Sciences. This Book being an Original in the Subject, made a great Noiſe. Cremona, Mantua, and ſome other Places, apply'd to this famous Water-Philoſopher. He ordered what Works and Drains he thought neceſſary, but his chief Excellency conſiſted in contriving Moles, which he made in the Po above Placentia, where this River had done great Damage, and threatned more. The Republick of Venice grudging Bononia this great Man, made him Mathematic Profeſſor at Padua in 1698. But notwithſtanding his accepting this new Employment, Bononia would have him keep the Name of Profeſſor of their Univerſity, and continued his Salary. In 1700. the Venetians diſpatch'd him into Dalmatia to repair the Ruins of Caſtle Novo; and ſoon after he was ſent into Friuli, where an impetuous Torrent had already deſtroy'd a great many Villages, and was ready to fall upon the Fort Palma. In 1702. he was made Phyſick Profeſſor, and quitted the Chair he read in before. About this time he publiſh'd two Diſſertations, one De Sanguinis natura & conſtitutione, the other De Salibus Diſſertatio Phyſico-Medico-Mechanica. He reply'd to M. Homberg, who differ'd from his Aſſertion that acid Salts make an uniform Figure in their Chryſtallization. He publiſh'd two more Books upon natural Philoſophy, one entitled, Exercitatio de Idearum vitiis, correctione & uſu, ad ſtatuendam & inquirendam morborum naturam; and the other, De Principio Sulphureo: The firſt was printed in 1707, and the other in 1710. in which Year the Author died. He never minded any thing but Learning; as for his Behaviour it appear'd ſomewhat rugged and unpoliſh'd, eſpecially to thoſe who were not us'd to him. He deſpis'd, ſays the Italian Journal of the Learned, that ſuperficial Genteelneſs, which a great many make their main Buſineſs; as for himſelf he would not have his Manners either in his Limbs or in his Language, but lie all in his Heart. * Hiſtoire de l'Académie Royale des Sciences de 1710.

GUIBERT, Abbot of Nogent Sous Couci, was born in a Village belonging to the Dioceſe of Beauvais, and extracted from a wealthy Family. He was choſen Abbot of Nogent in the Dioceſe of Laon, A. D. 1104, and dy'd A. D. 1124. His Works were publiſh'd by Lucas Dacherius, A. D. 1651. There's an excellent Tract upon the Subject of Preaching among 'em; a great many other uſeful and curious Diſcourſes, together with an Hiſtory, entitled, Geſta Dei per Francos, which furniſhes a Relation of the firſt French Cruſade, and the Conqueſts they made in the holy Land, and other Places in the Levant, particularly under the Conduct of Boëmond Duke of Puglia, and Godfrey of Bologn King of Jeruſalem. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIII.

GUILLEMETTE of Bohemia, was Head of a ſcandalous Sect which appear'd in Italy in the thirteenth Century. Her artificial counterfeiting gave her the Reputation of a Saint, A. D. 1281. But the Impoſture being diſcover'd after her Death, her Corps was dug up and burn'd, A. D. 1300. Boſſius charges this Sect with Licentiouſneſs; but Puricellus brings the Imputation no higher than Fanaticiſm; and to confirm this, the Charge of the Inquiſition only ſets forth that the Sectaries, who follow'd this Woman, held that ſhe was the Holy Ghoſt Incarnate, that her Mother was Conſtantia, marry'd to the King of Bohemia; that her lying in the Grave would be only for a particular Period; that ſhe would riſe again before the general Reſurrection and fly up to Heaven in Sight of her Diſciples; that ſhe had left one Maifreda a Nun, of the Order of the Humiliati, for her Vicar, who was to ſay Maſs upon Guillemette's Tomb, and who at laſt ſhould be poſſeſſed of the Apoſtolick See of Rome, and be attended with four Doctors who ſhould make four new Goſpels. Her Diſciples kept the three following Anniverſary Feſtivals at her Tomb; viz. St. Bartholomew's Day, being the Day on which ſhe dy'd; the Day her Corps were remov'd from the Church-Yard in Milan, to the Convent of Caravalla; and Whitſunday. In the Year 1306. one Dulcinus of Verceil, maintain'd reſembling Opinions; and much the ſame Heterodoxies, as Gulielmus Poſtellus reports, were held by Jane de la Mere. * Mabillon, Iter. Italic.

GUISCARD (Lewis de), deſcended from an ancient and noble Family, was Count de la Bourlie, Marquis of Magny, &c. He was Son to George de Guiſcard and Genevieve de Longueval, and was born in September 1651. He began to make himſelf known in the Field, being only a Captain in the Years 1672. and 1673, when the French King beſieg'd Maeſtricht and a great many Towns in Holland. The next Year he was Collonel of a Regiment in Normandy; and 'twas at the Head of this Regiment that he had a Share in the Honour the Garriſon of Grave gain'd by defending this Town. His rallying the Foot at the Battle of Conſarbrick, and his honourable Behaviour at the Sieges of Bouchain, Fribourg, the Fort of Keil, Luxembourg, and Philipsbourg. The Poſts of Brigadier, Inſpector or Comptroller General, Field Marſhal, and Lieutenant General; his being Commander in Chief in ſeveral Towns in Flanders, and upon the Frontier of the Maeſe; his being Governor of Sedan and Namur; the Battle of Boſſu, where the Enemy, notwithſtanding the great Superiority of their Numbers, were entirely routed; and the Defence of Namur in 1695, were the Steps which rais'd him to the Reputation and Diſtinctions he deſerv'd. In 1695. the French King made him Knight of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt; and as a farther Mark of Eſteem ſent him Ambaſſador to Sweden in 1698. His Brother Anthony de Guiſcard, Abbot of Bonnecombe in Roüvergue, was a very unhappy Perſon, endeavour'd to raiſe an Inſurrection to ſupport the Camiſars. Upon his Miſcarriage in this Attempt he quitted France, and went into Holland; where his Propoſals and Projects againſt his Country were rejected by the States as either too ſcandalous or impracticable. From hence he remov'd into England, and had a Penſion of five hundred Pounds a Year from the Court there. But upon March 19th 1711. he was ſeiz'd, brought to the Secretary's Office, and charg'd with a Correſpondence with France. The Proof coming ſtrong, and being reproach'd with Ingratitude, he fell into a Rage, ſnatch'd a Penknife, and gave Mr. Harley two Wounds. Upon which the reſt of the Company drew their Swords, gave him three Wounds, and ſent him to Newgate, where he dy'd ſoon after. * Memoires du Tems.

* GUISE (Claude de Lorrain Duke of*)*, ſecond Son of Renatus Duke of Lorrain, ſettled in France, after having (as 'tis ſaid) made an unſucceſsful Attempt to diſinherit his elder Brother Anthony. Being a Perſon of great Courage and other valuable Qualities, he quickly made himſelf much eſteem'd. He married Antonietta de Bourbon, a Princeſs of the Blood, and was promoted to great Poſts of Truſt and Honour. 'Twas out of Regard to him that the County of Guiſe was made a Duchy, with the Privilege of Peerage.

'Tis ſaid King Francis I. being after ſome time diſguſted with him, would not allow him the Title or Reſpect of a Prince. But let this be as it will, Claude of Lorrain wrought up an Intereſt, and ſtrengthned his Family to ſuch a Degree, that his Deſcendants were very near mounting the Throne, and carrying their Point over the Houſe of Bourbon. Claude ſignaliz'd himſelf upon ſeveral great Occaſions, and particularly at the Battle of Marignan. His Brother John, Cardinal of Lorrain, was a great Support to him. Claude dy'd in the Year 1550, leaving Iſſue ſix Sons and four Daughters, the eldeſt of which marry'd James V. King of Scotland. * Hiſtoire de France

GUISE (Lewis de Lorrain Cardinal of*)*, was Son of that Henry Duke of Lorrain who was kill'd at Blois. This Lewis notwithſtanding his being a Churchman, had ſo ſtrong a military Diſpoſition that he was pleas'd with nothing ſo much as Campaigns and Fighting. He was Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Rheims, when he attended the French King in his Expedition into Poictou: And here he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf no leſs than the boldeſt Officer, at the Siege of St. Jean d'Angeli. Some few Days after he fell ſick and dy'd June 21st 1621. The Duke of Nevers and this Cardinal happened to have a Suit about a Priory, which at laſt came forward to a fighting Quarrel: And here the Cardinal ſhew himſelf very ready to decide the Controverſy Sword in Hand. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtoire.

GUMANAPI, an Iſle in Aſia. 'Tis in the Archipelago of the Moluccas, to the North of the Iſlands Nera and Banda. This Iſland has a Town of the ſame Name built at the Foot of a Mountain, which, like Ætna, diſcharges Flame. * Maty, Diction.

GUNCZ, a Town in Germany. It ſtands in the Lower Auſtria upon the River Guncz, near the Frontier of Hungary, five Leagues above Sarvar. 'Tis thought Guncz is the ſame with the ancient Baſiana in the Upper Pannonia, which notwithſtanding ſome Geographers make Poſſega; and others will have it the ſame with Bantz. * Baudrand.

GUNDAMUND, Grandſon to Genſeric III. King of the Vandals in Africk, ſucceeded Hunneric, and was no leſs unfavourable to the Orthodox than that Prince. After twelve Years Reign he was ſucceeded by his Brother Thraſimond. * Procop. Grotius, Hiſtor. Vandal.

GUNDELFINGEN, a great Town within the Circle of Suabia. It ſtands upon the Danube three Leagues from the Town Burgaw to the North; and is the Head of a Barony which belongs to the Counts of Furſtenburg Blomberg. * Maty, Diction.

GUNDIS, Gondes or Gonthey, a Town in the Country of Valais, Confederate with the Swiſs. It ſtands upon the Rhoane a little below the Town of Sion, and is conſiderable for Chryſtal Mines, Saffron, and good Wine. * Maty, Diction.

GUNTZBURG, a ſmall Town in the Circle of Suabia. 'Tis within the Marquiſate of Burgaw upon the River Guntz about two Leagues from the Town Burgaw to the North. Guntsburg has a very magnificent Caſtle, where the Marquiſes of Burgaw us'd formerly to reſide, and where the Chancery of the Marquiſate is ſtill kept. * Maty, Diction.

GUPLO, a Lake in the Lower Poland. 'Tis in the Province of Cujavia, between the Towns Gneſna and Brezeſtie. The Caſtle of Kruſwick ſtands upon the Northern Bank of this Lake, where 'tis ſaid Popielus II. King of Poland was eaten up by Rats. * Baudrand.

GURCK, formerly call'd Corcoras, a River within the Circle of Auſtria. It runs through Windiſmarck a Country of Carniola, flows under the Walls of Seiſſenburg and Rudolfwerd, and falls into the Save at the Confines of Croatia and the County of Cilley. * Baudrand.

GURIEL or Ghuria, Part of Georgia in Aſia. Formerly it made the Southern Part of Colchis; and now it is ſometimes taken for Part of Mingrelia, from which notwithſtanding 'tis disjoin'd by the River Phaſis to the North. 'Tis bounded with the Kingdom of Imirette to the Eaſt; with Turcomania to the South, and with Natolia and the Black Sea to the Weſt. This Country has a Prince of its own, who governs under the Protection of the Grand Seignior. There's never a City within theſe Territories, Warthi, and Guni or Goni being the beſt Towns. * Baudrand.

GURIUS and Samoneus (Saints), Martyrs and Confeſſors of Edeſſa in Meſopotamia in the fourth Century. Gurius withdrew into the Country, where he practis'd great Auſterities, and liv'd 'till he was very old. Samoneus and a Deacon Abibelius came to him and were all three apprehended, A. D. 304. in the Diocleſian Perſecution. Gurius and Samoneus were kept a long while in Priſon, where they ſuffered Variety of Torments, and were beheaded together, November 15. A. D. 306. * Tillemont, Memoires pour l'Hiſtoire Eccleſ. Tom. 5. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

* GUTTEMBERG (John), invented Printing in the fifteenth Century. Trithenius, the earlieſt Author who mentions the Invention of Printing, affirms Guttemberg the firſt in this Art, and that John Fuſt and Peter Schoeffer, or Opilio aſſiſted his Preſs; the Abbot Trithenius receiv'd this Account from Peter Schoeffer himſelf. The firſt Thing they printed was a Bible, finiſh'd in 1450; therefore we have Reaſon to believe that all Books printed with a Date prior to this Year are antidated. William Fichet and John de la Pierre Prior of the Sorbonne brought the firſt Printers to Paris, ſet up a Preſs in the Sorbonne, and printed a great many Books there. Two other Germans, Peter Cæſaris and John Stole, ſet up another Preſs at Paris in the Year 1473. But the Myſtery of Printing was convey'd into England nine or ten Years ſooner. The Contrivance was this, Bourchier Archbiſhop of Canterbury, being inform'd that John Guttemberg had ſet up a Preſs at Harlem, prevail'd with King Henry VI. to diſpatch one Turner, belonging to the Wardrobe, to Harlem: Where having ſettled in Diſguiſe, and ſpent a great deal of Time and Money, at laſt he perſuaded Frederic Corſelli one of the Compoſitors to carry off a Set of Letters, and embark with him in the Night for London. Upon their Arival Corſelli was ſent down to Oxford by the Archbiſhop, where they gave gave the firſt Specimen of that Art. Not long after Preſſes were ſet up at Weſtminſter, St. Albans, Worceſter, and other Monaſteries of Note. As to foreign Countries, Printing was carry'd from France into Italy. The firſt Prints were made in Roman Characters; the Gothic Letter was the next: It began in Germany, and laſted almoſt a whole Century; after which Period, the Roman Character came again into Faſhion. * Chevillier, Diſſertation ſur l'Origine de l'Imprimiere, printed in the Year 1694. Serrarius, Lib. I. Cap. 37. Hiſt. Mogunt. Polydor Virgil, de Rer. Invent. Lib. II. Cap. 7. Chaſſanæus, Catal. Glor. Mundi. Pancirollus, Rer. Invent. & Salmuth. Melchior Adam, in Vit. Phil. Germ. Collier's Eccleſ. Hiſt. Vol. I, &c.

GUZMAN (Alphonſo Perez), a famous Spaniſh Officer, living at the latter End of the thirteenth Century. He had ſerv'd the Kings of Morocco a great while in the Poſt of Lieutenant General. After having acquir'd a great deal of Reputation and Wealth in Africk he came into Spain, where he began the Family of the Dukes of Medina Sidonia. He was Governor of Tariff, when this Town was beſieg'd by John Infant of Caſtille. This Prince, who had one of Guſman's Sons in his Cuſtody, threatned to cut his Throat before his Father's Face unleſs he ſurrendred. But Guſman ſcorning this Menacing, told him, that rather than be guilty of Treaſon he would furniſh him with ſomething to cut his Son's Throat, and at the ſame time throwing his Sword over the Wall went to Dinner with his Lady. This inflexible Reſolution provok'd the Infant to ſuch a Degree that he immediately had young Guſman's Head chopt off. The Garriſon, who look'd on, cry'd out at the barbarous Execution. Guſman, who heard the Noiſe, being apprehenſive of an Aſſault, left his Dinner, and mounted the Ramparts; but when he underſtood the Occaſion, he ſaid, This is a Thing of nothing, keep you your Poſts, and take Care of the Town. Upon this he went back to his Dinner, without the leaſt Sign of Diſturbance, and without ſaying any thing to his Lady of what had paſſed. Now ſome People queſtion whether this was not Courage over puſh'd, and carry'd to Stupidneſs and Brutality. * Turquet, Hiſt. of Spain.

GYMNETÆ, an Æthiopian Clan, anciently ſo call'd becauſe they went naked. They were forc'd to lodge a Nights upon Trees for Fear of wild Beaſts: But in the Day time ſheltring themſelves in other Trees upon the Banks of Rivers, they lay perdue for wild Cows, Leopards, and other fierce Creatures, which came to quench their Thirſt; and after having ſhot as many as they thought fit, fed their Family with 'em. Now this being their only Subſiſtence, they exercis'd themſelves in ſhooting with Bows and Arrows very early, and gave their Children no Meat 'till they could hit the Mark ſet up for 'em. * Diodorus Siculus, Antiq. Lib. IV.

H. HABDALA,

H.

HABDALA, a Sort of Ceremony among the modern Jews at the End of the Sabbath: The manner is this, when People are come Home from Prayers and the Stars appear, they light a Torch or a Lamp, and then the Maſter of the Houſe takes ſome Wine and rich Spices, bleſſes 'em and ſmells to 'em to begin the Week with Pleaſure, and wiſhes that every Thing may ſucceed well the ſeven Days enſuing: Afterwards he pronounces a Benediction over the Flame newly kindled, and then begins to think of falling to Work. All this Ceremony is call'd Habdala, that is to ſay, Diſtinction, to let 'em know the Sabbath is ended, and the holy Period divided from the Time for Work. The Jews, when they ſalute one another this Evening, don't ſay, Good Even, but God ſend you a good Week. * Leo de Modena. Diction. des Arts.

HACHA, Rio de la Hacha, or, Noſtra Segnora de los Remedios, a Town in Southern America. It ſtands at the Mouth of the Hacha in the Atlantick Ocean. 'Tis the Capital of a Government of the ſame Name, which lies between St. Martha and Venezuela. This Country has a rich Soil, and is conſiderable for Salt-Works, for Gold and precious Stones found there. * Maty, Diction.

HACKSPAN (Theodore), liv'd at Weimar. He was born in 1607, and dy'd in 1659. He was Divinity Profeſſor, and taught the Oriental Languages at Altdorf. He wrote a Tract of the Serviceableneſs of Rabbinical Books in Divinity: He likewiſe wrote an Arabick Grammar, and a Book, entitled, Interpres Errabundus. After his Death his Miſcellanea Sacra were publiſh'd, together with a Collection of Philological and Theological Diſputes; and Annotations upon ſome difficult Places in the Old and New Teſtament. * Spizelius, in Templo Honoris, pag. 140.

HADELLANTD, or Hadeln, a Country of the Duchy of Bremen in the Lower Saxony. It ſtretches along the Marſh and the River Elbe, from the River Oeſt to the German Sea. 'Tis divided into two Parts: The Eaſtern, of which Nienhuys is the Capital, and belong'd to the Swede: The Weſtern, where there's nothing remarkable, is a Dependency of the Duchy of Saxe-Lawembourg excepting the Bailliage of Ribenbuttle or Ritzenbuttle, which lies along the Coaſt, and belongs to Hamburg. * Maty, Diction.

HADEMAR or Hadamar, a ſmall Town of Weſterwald, within the Lower Diviſion of the Circle of the Upper Rhine. It lies in the Territories of Naſſau upon the River Ells, two Leagues from Dietz. This Town gives the Title of a Principality, and has two Caſtles, where the two Branches of the Houſe of Naſſau Seigen us'd to reſide. * Maty, Diction.

HAGIAR, a Town in Arabia Petrea with a fine Caſtle. It ſtands in the midſt of Mountains and Deſerts of Sand, where there is but one Well call'd Thomud. The Town lies upon the Road from Damaſcus to Medina forty Leagues from the latter to the North, and thirty Leagues from Madian to the Red Sea. 'Tis thought to be the Petra of the Ancients. * Nubienſis, pag. 110, 119. There are two other Towns of the ſame Name in Arabia Felix; but they are not conſiderable.

HAJACAN or Hiacan (the Kingdom of), is a Province belonging to the Mogul in Aſia. It lies on this ſide the Indus between the Provinces of Candahar, Attock, Multan, Buckor, and Sitziſtan in Perſia. Chatzan is the principal Town. This Province is ſtock'd with Bulloques, a Sort of ſtrolling Gipſey-like People. * Maty, Diction.

HAIDENHEIM, a ſmall Town commanded by the Caſtle of Hellenſtein. It ſtands in Suabia upon the River Brentz about ſeven Leagues from Ulm to the North. Haidenheim is the Capital of a large Seigneury which belongs to the Houſe of Wirtemberg. * Maty, Diction.

HAIN, a Town of Miſnia in Upper Saxony. It ſtands upon the River Reder three Leagues from Meiſſen, and at the ſame Diſtance from Dreſden, to the Eaſt of the firſt, and to the North of the latter. * Maty, Diction.

HALITGARIUS, Biſhop of Cambray and Arras in the ninth Century, ſucceeded Hildoardus in the Year 816. He was ſent Miſſionary with Ebbo of Rheims to preach Chriſtianity to the Danes; and was afterwards diſpatch'd by Lewis the Debonair with a publick Character to Michael the Stammerer the Greek Emperor. In his Return from this Embaſſy he died, A. D. 830. At the Inſtance of Ebbo of Rheims he wrote a Book, entitled, de Vitiis & Virtutibus & Ordine Pœnitentiæ. 'Tis a long Penitential divided into five Books, publiſh'd by Caniſius in the fifth Volume of his Lectiones Antiquæ, and likewiſe inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum. This Work is reckon'd by ſome to Rabanus Maurus. Miræus will have it that 'twas Charlemain who ſent Halitgarius to Conſtantinople. * Sigebert, C. 122. de Vir. Illuſt. Valerius Andreas Biblioth. Belg. Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Du Pin, new Eccleſ Library, Cent. IX.

HALLERVORD (John), a Poliſh Author born at Coninsberg in Pruſſia: This Hallervord in the Year 1676. publiſh'd a Catalogue of Books, entitled, Bibliotheca Curioſa, where he mentions ſome modern Authors, and gives Account of their Writings together with other Circumſtances belonging to 'em. This Work, tho' only deſign'd for a Supplement to Geſner's Bibliotheca, makes ſome Addition to Voſſius's Hiſtorians.

HALLIER Francis, Doctor of Divinity in the Faculty at Paris and Regius Profeſſor in the Sorbonne, Arch-Deacon of Dinan in the Dioceſe of St. Malo, and at laſt Biſhop of Cavaillon, was born at Chartres. He made three Voyages to Rome, was known to Pope Urban VIII, and had a Penſion offer'd him by Cardinal Barbarini to dwell there; Cardinal Richlieu made him a fair Propoſal to be his Confeſſor; both which Offers he refus'd. In his ſecond Voyage to Rome, A. D. 1652. he ſolicited ſtrongly againſt the five Propoſitions, which made ſo great a Noiſe in France, and procur'd the Bull againſt them cum Occaſione. At his third Voyage to Rome, A. D. 1656, Alexander VII. gave him the Bulls for the Biſhoprick of Cavaillon, to which Promotion he was recommended by ſtrong Teſtimonials from the French Clergy. He dy'd in the Year 1659. 63 Years of Age: And was ſo far ſunk with the Palſy and a Complication of other Diſtempers, that he forgot all his Learning, and could not remember ſo much as the Lord's Prayer. This Prelate's Life was not always undiſturb'd: His Writings in Favour of the Clergy againſt the Regulars, and the Diſputes the Five Propoſitions engag'd him in, made him a great many Enemies, and drew a Storm from the Preſs upon him: 'Twas rais'd by the Attacks of Cellotius, Bauny, des Faux, the Abbot of Boyſic, Paulus Irenæus, &c. All which receiv'd a Reply from him. His printed Works are theſe, Philoſophia Moralis, Lyricis Cantionibus abſolutiſſima; Analyſis Logicæ; Vindiciæ Cenſuræ Sacræ Facultatis; de Sacris Electionibus & Ordinationibus; de Hierarchia; Ordinationes Cleri Gallicani circa Regulares, cum Commentariis, &c. * French Morery.

HALYATTES II, King of Lydia, and Father to Cræſus, ſucceeded Sadyattes in the Year of the World 3385, and 619 before our Lord's Incarnation. He carried on the War begun by his Father, five Years againſt the Mileſians, haraſſed their Country, and laid it in Aſhes, and amongſt other Damages burn'd Diana's Temple. Hiſtorians report he was puniſh'd for this Affront to Religion by a troubleſome Diſtemper: and no medicinal Applications could reſtore him to his Health, 'till he had rebuilt the Temple. At laſt, having finiſh'd the War againſt the Mileſians, he turn'd his Arms againſt Cyaxares King of the Medes, to whom he afterwards marry'd his Daughter Ariene. He dy'd at the End of five and thirty Years Reign, and left Cræſus his Succeſſor. * Herodotus, Thalia. Euſeb. Chronic.

HAMATH or Hemath; the Name the Hebrews gave to all the Country from Paleſtine to the Euphrates. In the 2d of Samuel chap. viii. Toi is ſaid to be King of Hamath. According to St. Hierom Antioch is the Capital tal of this Country is call'd Amath or Emath in Scripture. * Hieron. de Loc. Hebraic.

HAMEL (John Baptiſt du), was born in 1624. at Vire in Lower Normandy, where his Father Nicholas du Hamel was an Advocate or Barriſter. He began his Studies at Caen, and went through a Courſe of Rhetoric and Philoſophy at Paris. At eighteen Years of Age he wrote a little Tract, where in a very ſhort Scheme he explain'd Theodoſius's Spherica: To this he added a very clear and ſuccinct Eſſay in Trigonometry; the Deſign was to make the firſt Entrance in Aſtronomy more eaſy. At nineteen Years of Age he was admitted in the Society of the Oratorians. After ten Years ſpent with theſe Fathers he quitted their Order to be made Cure of Neuilli upon the Marne. About this Time natural Philoſophy was like a great Kingdom ſplit into ſeveral Sovereignties, in a Manner independent upon each other. Aſtronomy, Mechanicks, Opticks, Chymiſtry, &c. were diſtinct Sciences, and had no Communication with that Part of Learning call'd Phyſicks. Natural Philoſophy being thus robb'd and impoveriſh'd, had nothing but a few barren and knotty Queſtions left her. M. du Hamel endeavour'd to break this Uſurpation, and reſtore that uſeful and entertaining Part of Learning wreſted from her. He began to execute this Deſign in his Aſtronomia Phyſica, and his Tract De Meteoris, & Foſſilibus, both printed in 1660. They are done by way of Dialogue: The Perſons are Theophilus, a great Admirer of the Ancients; Menander, a warm Carteſian, and Simplicius, a Philoſopher indifferent between both Parties, who for the moſt Part makes it his Buſineſs to reconcile, and over and above reſerves himſelf the Privilege of chooſing the beſt out of both. This Simplicius is M. du Hamel. His Form by Way of Dialogue has not only Tully for a Precedent, but he has imitated this great Roman in the Correctneſs of his Latin, and, which is more, in his entertaining Manner and beautiful Expreſſion. He was cenſur'd for maltreating Des Cartes: To this he anſwers, That 'twas Theophilus, a Perſon over fond of Antiquity, and who had no Taſte for any modern, that gave this rough Uſage, and that Simplicius never ſpoke to his Diſadvantage. 'Tis granted what he ſaid was true, but for all that 'twas Simplicius that put Theophilus's Words in his Mouth. In 1663. he reſign'd the Cure of Neuilli, and publiſh'd his famous Book De Conſenſu veteris & novæ Philoſophiæ. In 1666. King Lewis XIV, at M. Colebert's Inſtance, approv'd the erecting the Royal Academy of Sciences, to which M. du Hamel was choſen Secretary. His beautiful Latin Stile, ſo remarkable in his Works, made him pitch'd upon for tranſlating a French Tract into Latin, entitled, The Right of the Queen of France to Brabant, Namur, and ſome other Seignuries in the Spaniſh low Countries. The next Year he publiſh'd another Tract for maintaining the Juriſdiction of the Archbiſhop of Paris againſt the Exemptions of the Abbot of St. Germain des Prez. 'Twas M. de Pereſixe, then Archbiſhop, that engag'd M. du Hamel, and 'twas the only time that he forc'd his Humour to appear an Aggreſſor. But then the Diſpute was manag'd with all the Temper and Genteelneſs requir'd in Conteſts of this Kind. His great Reputation for the Latin Language occaſion'd M. Colebert de Croiſſy, Plenipotentiary for the Peace at Aix-la-Chapelle, to take him along with him in 1668. After the Concluſion of the Treaty, M. Croiſſy went into England, whither du Hamel travell'd with him. And here his chief Curioſity was making an Acquaintance with Men of Learning, particularly with the illuſtrious Mr. Boyle, who diſcover'd all his experimental Philoſophy to him. He took a Turn in Holland with the ſame View; and from theſe two Voyages made a rich Collection of Experiments and other Diſcoveries in Phyſicks, which ſerv'd both for Inſtruction and Ornament in his Books afterwards publiſh'd. In 1670. he publiſh'd his Tract De Corporum Affectionibus; and two Years after that De Mente Humana. In 1673. his Book De Corpore animato paſs'd the Preſs: Experimental Philoſophy, and eſpecially Anatomy make great Part of this Performance. Some time after he was ordered to write a whole Courſe of Philoſophy purſuant to the Method us'd in the Colleges. This Work appear'd in the Year 1678. under the Title of Philoſophia vetus & nova, ad uſum Scholæ accommodata in Regia Burgundia pertractata. This Work run thro' ſeveral Editions: Some Years after 'twas printed the Miſſionaries, who had carry'd it to the Eaſt Indies, wrote back that they had taught this Philoſophy with great Succeſs, eſpecially the Phyſicks. Father Bouvet a Jeſuit and famous Miſſionary in China, ſent an Account that when himſelf and his Brethren drew up a Body of Philoſophy for the Cham of Tartary, in that Emperor's Language, to diſpoſe him for the Chriſtian Religion; one of the chief Books they made uſe of was du Hamel's ancient and modern Philoſophy. In 1691. he printed a Courſe of Divinity in ſeven Tomes, entitled, Theologia Speculatrix & Practica juxta S. S. Patrum dogmata pertractata, & ad uſum Scholæ accommodata. This Work produc'd another, for being deſir'd to abridge his Body of Divinity, he ſatisfy'd the Requeſt, and printed the Epitome with the Title of Theologiæ Clericorum Seminariis accommodatæ ſummarium. It makes five Volumes. He begun to write the Hiſtory of the Academy in Latin from its firſt Eſtabliſhment in 1666. to 1696: He choſe to conclude his Hiſtory with this Period, becauſe in the Beginning of 1697. he laid down his Secretary's Pen, acquainting the Academy that he was grown too infirm to ſerve 'em. He was ſucceeded by M. de Fontenelle, who manag'd that Employment to Admiration. In 1698. his Hiſtory was publiſh'd under the Title of Regiæ Scientiarum Academiæ Hiſtoria. In 1701. a ſecond Edition enlarg'd with four Years for compleating the Century was printed. And to go backward a little; in the Year 1698. laſt mention'd, he likewiſe publiſh'd a very learned Book in Divinity, entitled, Inſtitutiones Biblicæ, ſeu Scripturæ Sacræ Prolegomena, una cum ſelectis Annotationibus in Pentateuchum. In 1701. he publiſh'd the Pſalms, and two Years after the Proverbs of Solomon, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Book of Wiſdom, with reſembling Notes. And in 1705. he publiſh'd the whole Bible with Annotations upon all Paſſages which ſeem'd to require 'em. And now, notwithſtanding he was 81 Years of Age, he attempted a Latin Tranſlation of the Hiſtory of the French Academy, and went thro' the incomparable Preface; but in 1706. he departed this Life, and had a gentle Paſs into the other World. He us'd to go every Year to Neuilli upon the Marne, to make a Viſit to his old Pariſhioners; and the Day that he ſtaid with 'em, was kept as a Feſtival by the whole Town: They were ſo overjoy'd to ſee him, that no body would do the leaſt Work. When he was at London, the Engliſh Roman Catholicks, who went to the French Ambaſſador's Chapel, us'd to ſay commonly, Let us go to the Holy Prieſt's Maſs. * Hiſtoire de l'Academie Royale des Sciences de l'Année 1706.

HAMON, (John), Doctor in Phyſick of the Faculty at Paris, was born at Cherbourg within the Dioceſe of Coutance in Normandy. His devout Temper made him prefer Retirement to all the Advantages his Parts and Profeſſion might have furniſh'd. After having ſold his Library, and given all his Eſtate to the Poor, he retir'd to the Solitude of Port-Royal des Champs, and was Phyſician to that Abby, where for eight and thirty Years together he went thro' all the Stages of Mortification and Penance. He faſted 'till the Evening, and drank nothing but Water. The laſt ſixteen Years of his Life he eat nothing but Dogs Bread, which was not known 'till after his Death. He eat always ſtanding, roſe every Morning at two a Clock, and ſlept upon a Board. He viſited all the Poor that were ſick in the Neighbourhood, and furniſh'd 'em for their Health and ſpiritual Neceſſities. He read all the Latin and Greek Fathers, the Councils, and a great Number of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians, and collected the moſt ſerviceable and beautiful Paſſages out of 'em. Several of his Devotional Tracts are printed. He dy'd in February 1687. ſixty nine Years of Age. The Verſes ſet to his Picture are as follow,

Tout brillant de Savoir, d'eſprit & d'éloquence,
Il courut au deſert chercher l'Obſcurité:
Aux Pauvres conſacra ſon bien & ſa Science,
Et trente ans dans le jeûne & dans l'auſterité,

Fit ſon unique volupté
Des travaux de la Pénitence.

The Luſtre of his Learning and his Wit,
He caſt into the Shades of Solitude:

Upon the Poor he ſpent his Wealth and Skill,
And thirty Years in holy Diſcipline:
Reſtraints and Faſting were his Entertaiment;
And that which ſhock'd the Senſes, pleas'd the Mind.

* Memoire Manuſcript.

HANAMEEL, an Iſraelite, Son of Shallum, and Couſin German to the Prophet Jeremy. When Jeremy was in Priſon, his Couſin came to him to offer him the Sale of his Field in Anathoth. The Purchaſe was agreed for ſeventeen Pieces or Shekels of Silver, each of which amounted to about half a Crown. If 'tis ask'd how Hanameel, who was a Prieſt, could ſell a Field, ſince the Prieſts were excluded a Share in the Diviſion of the Country. To this it may be anſwer'd, that the Levites and Prieſts had Portions of Land belonging to their Towns to a certain Extent: 'Tis true their Bounds were but ſmall, ſerving moſtly for Gardens, Orchards, or little Vineyards, or for Paſture to maintain their Cattle. * Jeremy 32. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

* HANNIBAL, for Silurus Italicus, in Morery Vol. I. read Silius Italicus, and for Paulus Æmilius read Lucius Æmilius.

HANNO, a Carthaginian General and Admiral, was ordered to ſail round Africk. He came into the Ocean by the Streights of Gibraltar, ſail'd upon the Back of Africk Southward, and diſcover'd a great many Countries: He had held on his Courſe farther if his Proviſions had not fail'd. Some Authors will have it that he ſail'd the Length of his Deſign, and came up to the fartheſt Part of Arabia. There's a Book which goes under Hanno's Name call'd Hanno King of Carthage's Voyages beyond Hercules's Pillars: This Book ſome People have believ'd more ancient than Homer: But 'tis pretty apparent that the Hanno mention'd in this Voyage is the famous Carthaginian General, who was at the Head of the War againſt Agathocles, when the Republick of Carthage was in a flouriſhing Condition, as Pliny obſerves where he mentions this Voyage. This Book therefore ſuppos'd to be written before Homer, deſerves no Credit: Athenæus reckons it no better than a ſpurious Piece forg'd by ſome Greek; However, ſome will have it an Abridgment of Hanno's Voyage. Notwithſtanding the Marks of Ungenuineneſs, Geographers and Criticks have made uſe on't. Gelenius is the firſt who printed it in Greek, A. D. 1533. Geſner publiſh'd a Latin Tranſlation of it in 1559; and Henry Bekler printed it in Greek and Latin in 1661. 'Twas likewiſe printed with Stephanus de Urbibus at Leyden in 1674, and at Oxford in 1698. DuPin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof. l'an.* 1707.

HANYANG, a Town in China: 'Tis the ſecond in the Province of Huquang, which has but one great Town more in't. Maty, Diction.

HAOAXES, a River in Africk: It riſes in the high Mountains of Ethiopia, upon the Frontiers of the Provinces of Xaoa and Ogge. It receives another River call'd March, and runs Eaſtward by the Kingdom of Adel, or Zeila as the Portugueſe call it. Iſaac Voſſius makes it as big as the Nile: It overflows the Country in the ſame Manner, and improves the Land with the Mud. * Ludolfus, Hiſt. Ethiop. Iſaac Voſſius, de Inundatione Nili.

HARDOUIN (John), a learned Jeſuit both as to Philology and Divinity. As to ſecular Learning, he has ſhewn himſelf much a Scholar in his Editions of Pliny and Themiſtius, and in his Book of old Medals, of People and Towns, publiſh'd in the Year 1684. Afterwards, applying himſelf to Eccleſiaſtical Subjects, he printed a Diſcourſe three Years forward, entitled, De Baptiſmo Quæſtio Triplex, or, Three Queſtions concerning Baptiſm: The firſt is touching the Baptiſm for the Dead mention'd by St. Paul (1. Cor. 15.): The ſecond Queſtion is touching Baptiſm adminiſtred in Wine, mention'd in an Anſwer of Pope Stephen II: The third is touching the Validity of Baptiſm, where the ſecond Perſon in the Trinity is only mention'd. In 1689. he publiſh'd St. Chryſoſtom's Epiſtle to the Monk Ceſarius, with a Diſſertation upon the Sacrament of the Altar: This Tract has a French Preface. Here he advances a very extraordinary Opinion touching old Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Authors, whoſe Works he believes to be ſpurious. He has likewiſe publiſh'd ſeveral other learned Performances; viz. De Nummis Herodiadum, &c. All Father Hardouin's Works were printed together at Amſterdam in 1709: But the publiſhing this Edition was prohibited at Paris. He wrote a Tract upon our Saviour's laſt Paſſover, where he proceeds upon a ſingular Notion for reconciling the Evangeliſts. Hardouin was born at Kimper-Corentin in Britany. As to his learned Character, he ſtudied with great Application, writes very good Latin, and gives his Thought a beautiful Turn. He has nothing of the Barbarouſneſs and unpolite Manner of ſome Antiquaries; but manages with Correctneſs and Spirit. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

HARMONIA, Thraſibulus's Daughter. The Burghers of Syracuſe running to Arms againſt her Father for making himſelf King againſt their Inclination, forced him to fly, and kill'd all they could find of his Family. In ſhort, there was none left undiſpatch'd but his Daughter Harmonia, who was narrowly ſearch'd for to be deſtroy'd: But her Governante produc'd another Girl to the Aſſaſſins of the ſame Age, dreſſed like a Princeſs, who ſuffer'd herſelf to be ſtab'd rather than diſcover the Miſtake. Harmonia admiring the Courage and Generoſity of this young Lady, would by no Means ſurvive her, but calling back the Murderers, and letting 'em know who ſhe was, had the ſame Fate with the other. * Diodor. Sicul. Lib. V.

* HAROLD, for eighth of September, in Morery Vol. I. read eighth of October. This Harold was Son to Goodwin Earl of Kent. He was adviſ'd by one of his Brothers not to command the Army, nor appear in the Field: For having broken his Oath to William Duke of Normandy, no Succeſs could be expected where he appear'd.

* HARPAGUS: for caus'd him to be ſerv'd up at his Father's Table in Morery Vol. I. read caus'd him to be ſerv'd up at his own Table.

HARPALICUS, King of the Amymnæi in Thrace, had a Daughter cally'd Harpalyce: This Girl was fed with Cow's and Mare's Milk mix'd together, and us'd to handle Arms very young. This Diet and Education gave her a martial Humour, inſomuch that ſhe ſerv'd her Father in the Field againſt Neoptolemus Achilles's Son, who was routed by her. Some time after Harpalicus being murthered by his Subjects, Harpalyce retir'd into the Woods; from whence ſhe us'd to ſally upon the Cattle of the Neighbourhood, and carry 'em off. At laſt, ſhe was taken and kill'd; at her Death the Peaſants quarrell'd with each other, and came to Blows for the Cattle ſhe had ſtole. Some time after, they us'd to meet and tilt at this Lady's Tomb to expiate the killing her. * Hygin. Virgil. Æneid. Lib. I.

HARPOCRATES. Varro declares he'll ſay nothing more about this pretended God for Fear of breaking the Silence recommended by him. The Finger he puts upon his Mouth, is the Forefinger call'd Salutaris in Latin, which 'twas cuſtomary to make uſe of for Silence. Harpocrates had his Statues in Temples and publick Squares, and the Egyptians cut his Figure upon precious Stones and Metals, which they engrav'd under certain Conſtellations, to receive the Influence of the Stars for Cures and Prophylacticks.

The Romans valu'd themſelves upon Rings of this Kind, as Pliny obſerves; Our Romans, ſays he, begin to make a Faſhion of wearing Harpocrates, and other Egyptian Deities in their Rings.

M. Spon, in his ſeventh Diſſertation des Recherches de l'Antiquité, has furniſh'd ſeveral Prints of Harpocrates pag. 124. in one of which Harpocrates ſits mounted on an Oſtrich, with the Sun and Moon upon the Reverſe; for Oſiris and Iſis, Harpocrates's Father and Mother, were the ſame with the Egyptians with the Sun and Moon amongſt other People. And here, without going too far in the Moral, it may be obſerv'd that the Ancients repreſented Harpocrates with the reſt of their Deities to ſilence the overhardy, who were apt to be too forward to give out that all the Gods were no better than Mortals, living a great while ſince; or, it may be, the Moral of the Emblem might ſuggeſt that all their Deities were properly compris'd in one, who ordered Silence about his Nature and Perfections.

The Letters upon the Reverſe of this Medal are whimſical Characters of the Gnoſtick and Baſilidian Hereticks, who blended the Myſteries of Chriſtianity with Pagan Superſtition. In another Medal Serapis and Harpocrates are repreſented with this Legend, conſervate me. From whence we may collect 'twas a Sort of Taliſman

Poeple carry'd about 'em to beg Health and Security of theſe Deities. Harpocrates is cut upon another Stone ſitting on a Lotus Flower, which was a Plant conſecrated to the Sun; becauſe this Flower opens at the Sun riſing, and ſhuts at the ſetting: The Letters engrav'd upon the Reverſe are ſome Baſilidian Superſtitions. There's another Medal of Harpocrates with a Lion's Head and Birds round about it.

Alexander Halenſis will have it theſe Birds were Angels or Intelligences aſſign'd the Planets by the Baſilidians, and that they call'd Saturn, Caſſiel; Jupiter, Sachiel; Mars, Samuel; the Sun and Moon, Michael; Venus, Anahel; Mercury, Raphael. Harpocrates is likewiſe repreſented ſitting upon the Head of an Aſs overturn'd, with theſe Words on the Reverſe, ΙΣΧΥΡΟΝ ΚΑΙ ΑΝΙΚΗΤΟΝ, Strong and Invincible, Epithets the Baſilidians gave their Jao. The ſame pretended God is likewiſe engraven with the ſeven Greek Vowels ſignifying the Word Jehovah. Theſe are in a Manner all the Figures remaining of Harpocrates taken from Sculptures and old Medals. * Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Spon. Natalis Comes, &c.

HARTZ, formerly Nelibocus Mons. Mountains in the Duchy of Brunſwick in Lower Saxony. In old time they parted the Cheruſci from the Catti. At preſent they reach from the River Leyne to the River Selke, ſtretch thro' the Eaſtern Diviſion of the Principality of Grubenhague, thro' the Weſtern of the Principality of Anhalt, and thro' the Counties of Reinſtein and Hohenſtein. The Summit of this Mountain which is between Oſterode and Wernigerode is call'd Blockesberg. The Foreſt of Hartzwald lies within this Range of Mountains, and is the ſame with that the Ancients call'd Bacenis Sylva or Semana Sylva. * Baudrand.

HARTZERODE, a Town within the Circle of Upper Saxony. 'Tis in the Principality of Anhalt upon the Selke, ſeven Leagues from the Town Halberſtad to the South. * Maty, Diction.

HASBAYE, or the County of Hasbain: A Country belonging to the Biſhoprick of Liege in the Circle of Weſtphalia. This County has Liege and its Territory to the Eaſt; the Condros to the South; the County of Lootz to the North; and Brabant to the Weſt. St. Tron is the Capital Town. Formerly this County reach'd as far as Louvain in Brabant. * Maty, Diction.

HASSAN-SABAH, Head of the Dynaſtie of the Iſhmaelites of Perſia, who reign'd in the Province Irack, the ancient Country of the Parthians. He made himſelf Maſter of the ſtrong Caſtle de Almont, A. D. 1090, died in 1124, and was ſucceeded by Kaia-Buzruk. This Haſſan was a famous Impoſtor, became Head of the Aſſaſſins under the Name of the old Man in the Mountain, mention'd in the Hiſtories of the Holy Land. * Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

HASSELS (John), Doctor and Divinity Profeſſor at Louvain, was ſent to the Council of Trent where he dyed in 1551. The Commentaries upon Iſaiah and St. Paul's Epiſtles printed under the Name of Adam Sasbouth Cordelier are reckon'd to Haſſels. There's a Diſſertation printed under his own Name, concerning the Suppreſſion of the penitentiary Prieſt's Office done by Nectarius Patriarch of Conſtantinople. In this Diſcourſe Haſſels maintains that this Order did not ſet aſide Confeſſion, but only the Cuſtom of having but one Prieſt to take Confeſſions. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVI.

HATSATSON-TAMAR, or Aſaſon Thamar, a Town belonging to the Tribe of Judah near the Lake Aſphaltites. It belong'd at firſt to the King of the Amorites; 'twas demoliſh'd by Chedarlaomer and other Aſſyrian Princes, who made War upon the Kings of Sodom, Gomorrha, &c. (Geneſ. xiv.). This Place is likewiſe remarkable for a great Victory that Jehoſaphat King of Judah gain'd upon the Moabites, Amonites, and Arabians, who encamp'd at Engaddi, the Precinct of this Town, with a Deſign to overrun his Dominions: But God made ſuch an Impreſſion upon their Mind and Senſes, that taking their own Army for the Enemy, they fell upon each other with great Fury, not giving over 'till they were all deſtroy'd. Thus the Jews became Maſters of the Field without ſtriking a Blow, and ſpent three Days in ſtripping the Dead, and gleaning the Plunder. The fourth Day the People came out of all the neighbouring Towns to the Army, and rendevouz'd in the Valley of Beracha: And here returning God Thanks for ſo unexpected a Bleſſing, they call'd it the Valley of Benediction. And here it may be obſerv'd that Hatſatſon-Tamar or Engaddi lies all along the Lake Aſphaltites or the Dead Sea, over againſt Saul's Cave and Lot's Cave; the Pits of Bitumen, the Valley of Salt Works, and the City of Salt; and the Valley of Benediction is between Gabaa, Modin, Tamna, and the Lake Aſphaltites. There's no Town in Judæa more rich in the Soil of the Precinct, than Hatſatſon-Tamar or Engaddi. The holy Scripture mentions Cluſters of Camphire in the Vineyards of Engaddi (Cantic. chap. i. ℣. 14. But theſe Cluſters of Camphire or Copher are ſuppos'd to be ſmall Shrubs planted in a Row like Vines, and which furniſh'd the Balm of Gilead. This Town has undergone a great many Revolutions; and at preſent there's not the leaſt Remain of its former Conſiderableneſs. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. III. Cap. 4. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

HATTO, King of Armenia, who in the Year 1256. finding his Dominions overrun and haraſſed by the Saracens, went to Cublay the great Cham of Tartary for Succour: He prevail'd with the Cham to turn Chriſtian and furniſh him with a ſufficient Reinforcement. In ſhort; Cublay ſent his Brother Haolone at the Head of an Army with Hatto; and thus the Saracens were driven out of Armenia, Syria, and the Holy Land. * Kircher's China.

HAVEL, a great River within the Marquiſate of Brandenbourg. It riſes in the Duchy of Meckelbourg waſhes the Walls of Furſtenberg, and after having parted the Marche of Uckerane from the County of Kappin; continues its Courſe thro' the middle Marche, running by Oranjebourg, Spandaw, Potzdam, Brandenbourg, Plaw, Ratenaw, and Havelberg within the Barony of Pregnitz; ſome Leagues below which laſt Town it falls into the Elbe. * Maty, Diction.

HAY (John), a Scotch Jeſuit, enter'd into that Society in 1566, and paſs'd his Noviciate at Rome. He travell'd into Poland, the Low Countries, and France, and taught Divinity, Mathematicks, and Hebrew in the College of Tournon. He dy'd at Pont-á-Mouſſon, where he was Chancellor of the Univerſity. His Fancy lying much for Controverſy, he wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt the Proteſtants, viz. Un Recueil de demandes aux Miniſters. L'Apologie de ces demandes. Antimonium ad Reſponſa Bezæ. Diſputatio contra Miniſtrum Anonymum Nemauſenſem. His Helleborum Johanni Serrano found among his Papers is kept at Rome in the Archives of the Society. He likewiſe wrote Scholia Brevia in Bibliothecam Sanctam Sixti Senenſis, and a Latin Tranſlation of ſome Jeſuits Letters written from Japan and Peru. This Verſion was printed at Antwerp in Octavo, A. D. 1605. * Sotuel. Biblioth. Script. Societat. Jeſu. Alegambe, &c.

HAY (Alexander), a Jeſuit, was convicted of frequent ſeditious Diſcourſe againſt Henry IV. of France after the Reduction of Paris: He carry'd his Exceſſes ſo far as to ſay, that in Caſe the King ſhould happen to walk under the Jeſuits College, he would throw himſelf headlong out of the Window upon him to break his Neck. For this intemperate Sally, and other treaſonable Diſcourſes, he was condemn'd to perpetual Baniſhment by an Arrêt of Jan. 10th 1595: And in Caſe he fail'd in obeying the Sentence he was to be hang'd without farther Tryal. * Mezeray, Hiſt. Tom. III. pag. 1135, 1136. Anticoton. pag. 38.

* HEBED-JESU, Patriarch of the Neſtorians, reconcil'd to the Church of Rome in the Pontificate of Pius IV, A. D. 1562. He was otherwiſe call'd Abdiſſi, and made Patriarch of the Neſtorians by Julius III. after the Death of Simon Sulacha. He had formerly been Metropolitan of Soba, and wrote ſeveral Books in Favour of the Neſtorian Tenets; but travelling to Rome during the Popedom of Julius III. he abjur'd Neſtorianiſm, and was declar'd Patriarch; which Dignity was confirm'd to him by Pius IV. at his ſecond Voyage to Rome. He brought over a great many Neſtorians to the Roman Communion. Abathalla ſucceeded him, and living but a ſhort time had Denha Simon, formerly Archbiſhop of Gelu, for his Succeſſor. This laſt was forc'd to quit Caraemit where his Predeceſſor us'd to reſide. He withdrew into the Province of Zeinalbeck in the the fartheſt Part of Perſia, being forc'd to give Way to the Patriarch of Babylon. Father Paul relates that Hebed-Jeſu wrote a Letter to the Council of Trent; but this Matter of Fact is conteſted by Cardinal Palavicini. * Father Paul & Palavicin. Hiſt. du Concile de Trente. Richard Simon, Hiſt. Critique des Egliſes du Levant. See Aldiſſi in Vol. I.

HEBER, Son of Salah. Huetius in his Demonſtratio Evangelica endeavours (concurrently with other learned Men) to ſhew that the Name of Hebrews comes neither from Heber nor from Abraham; but from the word Hever, which ſignifies beyond, becauſe they came from beyond Euphrates. This Opinion ſeems the moſt probable; for Abraham is call'd a Hebrew upon the Score of his coming from the farther ſide of the River Euphrates, and not becauſe of his being deſcended from Heber; for why ſhould Abraham and his Poſterity be call'd Hebrews upon the Account of their Genealogy, any more than the reſt of Heber's Deſcendants, who had none of this Diſtinction? The xiv^th^ of Geneſis is the firſt Place where the Vulgate and the Engliſh Tranſlation calls Abraham the Hebrew: But this Text in the Septuagint is turn'd Ἀβραμ τῦ περάτη i. e. Abraham the Paſſenger, or one that had paſs'd the Euphrates. And in the ſame Senſe the People beyond this River are call'd the Children of Heber, Geneſ. x. ℣ 21: And thus Joſeph told Pharoah that he was carry'd out of the Country of Heber, that is to ſay, out of the Country where the People formerly of Meſopotamia dwelt; for at that time of Day the Land of Canaan could not be call'd the Country of the Hebrews. * Joſeph. Lib. I. Antiquit. Cap. 7. Euſeb. in Chron. Hieron. in Trad. Hebr. in Cap. 10. Geneſ. Cajetan. Salian. in Annal. Sacr. Spondan. Huet. Demonſtrat. Evang. &c.

* HEBREW; A Name, as 'twas obſerv'd in the laſt Article, given to Abraham upon his coming from Meſopotamia into Canaan, becauſe Heber ſignifies beyond. From this Time downwards, Abraham's Deſcendants were call'd Hebrews, 'till the ten Tribes went off, and form'd the Kingdom of Samaria, as the other two did that of Judah: And now thoſe who reign'd over the greateſt Diviſion were call'd Kings of Iſrael, and the other Kings of Judah. Farther, the ancient Jews are call'd Hebrews of the Hebrews, to diſtinguiſh 'em from thoſe Jews who made uſe of the Septuagint, or were proſelyted from the Pagan Religion. The Jews Language was call'd the Hebrew Tongue only ſince the Helleniſt Jews, who ſpoke Greek, diſtinguiſh'd themſelves from thoſe who ſpoke the old Language of their Countrymen. After the Jews return'd from the Captivity of Babylon, the Syriac Language was call'd Hebrew, as appears by the Syriac Words in the Goſpels, where they are call'd Hebrew: But for a great while ſince, the old Language of the Jews is call'd Hebrew; in which Language moſt of the Books in the Old Teſtament were written. * Du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible.

HECATEUS ABDERITES, was a Philoſopher and Hiſtorian. There's was one Hecatæus, who wrote the Hiſtory of Egypt. 'Twas Hecatæus of Abdera, and not the Mileſian, that was bred with Alexander the Great, and liv'd afterward at Ptolomæus Lagus's Court, as Joſephus informs us in his firſt Book againſt Apion. Diodorus Siculus in the firſt Book of his Hiſtory mentions this Hecatæus, and in his Hiſtory of Egypt he has theſe Words, This is not only reported, ſays he, by the Prieſts of Egypt out of their holy Records; but a great many Greeks who wrote the Hiſtory of Egypt in Ptolomæus Lagus's Reign, and amongſt the reſt, Hecatæus, agree with what we have deliver'd upon this Subject. Ælian in his ſecond Book De Naturâ Animalium, Cap. 2. obſerves that Hecatæus Abderites wrote the Hiſtory of the Hyperboreans: This Work is likewiſe cited by the Scholiaſt upon Apollonius. Joſephus relates that Hecatæus wrote Abraham's Life. 'Tis probable 'twas Part of the Jewiſh Hiſtory, mention'd in his Books againſt Apion, and which Euſebius informs us was written by Hecatæus Abderites; who beſides his Talent at writing Hiſtory was a great Philoſopher and Stateſman. Euſebius cites a Paſſage from this Hiſtory; but Origen takes notice that this Book was ſo favourable to the Jews, that Herennius Philo ſuſpected Hecatæus was not the Author: Origen's Paſſage runs thus; There's a Book, ſays he, concerning the Jews which goes under the Name of the Hiſtorian Hecatæus, in which the Author runs ſo high in the Commendation of the Wiſdom of this Nation, that Herennius Philo queſtions the Hiſtorian, and adds, that if it was written by Hecatæus, 'tis probable he was prepoſſeſs'd to a partiality by being a Proſelyte to their Religion. Scaliger in his 115^th^ Epiſtle to Caſaubon pretends this Book was forg'd by ſome Helleniſt Jews, which is more than Philo abovementioned ventures to ſay. Stephanus cites Hecatæus's Æolicks, but does not ſay whether they were written by Hecatæus Abderides or not. Plutarch in his Tract De Iſide & Oſiride mentions a Book of Hecatæus Abderites, which ſeems to be the ſame with that cited by Laertius; 'tis poſſible this Book was Part of the Egyptian Hiſtory. Suidas under the Article Hecatæus Abderites makes him only a Philoſopher and Grammarian, and ſays, he wrote Notes upon Homer and Heſiod, without taking any notice of the Hiſtory abovemention'd. * Origen, Contra Celſ. Lib. I. Euſeb. Præpar. Evang. Lib. IX. Du Pin, Biblioth. des Hiſt. Prof.

* HECTOR, King Priam's eldeſt Son by his Queen Hecuba: He defended Troy almoſt ten Years againſt the Greeks, challeng'd all the Officers, and fought Telamon Ajax in a Duel, where Homer does not give him the Advantage of the Combat; afterwards he deſtroy'd great Numbers of the Enemy with his own Hand, ſtorm'd their Lines, drove 'em to their Fleet, and ſet one of their Ships on Fire. Achilles having a Quarrel with Agamemnon, lay by diſcontented, and refus'd to fight: But being apprehenſive their Fleet might be burnt, and their Return Home made impracticable, he gives Patroclus his Suit of Arms, and ſends him at the Head of his Myrmidons, to repel the Trojans. Here Homer, who had repreſented Hector in his ſingle Perſon an Overmatch to the Græcian Army, makes him turn Coward all on the ſudden, gallop out of the Field firſt, and adviſe his Men to follow him. This Behaviour of Hector, ſo ill ſuited to his former Character, encourag'd the Enemy, and occaſion'd the Loſs of a great many Trojans. At laſt Hector recollecting his Spirits, fought Patroclus, kill'd him, and carry'd off his Arms. Achilles enrag'd at the Loſs of his Friend, is reconcil'd to Agamemnon, and comes into the Field. Here Hector fights him, and, as we may conclude by Homer's telling the Story, had kill'd him twice, had not Minerva ſtruck in, and turn'd off the Lance from Achilles's Body. Hector had no Iſſue but Aſtyanax by Andromache, who at the taking of Troy was thrown down from the Top of an high Tower. Chevrau in his Hiſtory of Empires, obſerves that ſome Hiſtorians write that Hector kill'd Achilles; and Spanhemius mentions that the Ilienſes, who built either upon or near the Ruins of old Troy, had Statues and Medals of Hector. * Homer. Iliad. Euripid. in Andromach. Virgil, Æneid. Spanhem. de uſu & præſtantiâ Numiſmatum.

HEDMORE, a Town in Sweden, in the Province of Dalecarlia upon the River of that Name, near the Confines of Geſtricia and Weſtmania. * Baudrand.

HEGENDORPHINUS (Chriſtopher), a Lawyer living about the Middle of the ſeventeenth Century. He profeſs'd the Law at Francfort upon the Oder. His Works are Commentaries upon ſome of Tully's Orations; the Hiſtory of our Saviour's Paſſion; Annotations upon St. Peter's Epiſtles; a Book, entitled, Dialectica Legalis; to which may be added his Tranſlation of Nonnus upon St. John. * Konig. Biblioth.

HEGESILOCHUS, a ſovereign Magiſtrate of the Rhodians call'd Prytaniſt: This Hegeſilochus 171 Years before the Incarnation perſuaded the Burghers to equip a Fleet of forty Sail to joyn the Romans againſt Perſeus King of Macedonia. The Rhodians follow'd his Advice, partly to ſhew their Strength, and partly to take off the Suſpicion propagated by Eumenes King of Pergamus, as if they had been diſaffected to the Romans. Thus when T. Claudius Tiberius, P. Poſthumus, and M. Julius, who had a publick Character to the Towns in Aſia to engage 'em in a Confederacy againſt Perſeus; when theſe Ambaſſadors ariv'd at Rhodes, they found there was no Occaſion to ſolicit, for Hegeſilochus had got the Armament ready, which had no ſmall Weight in deciding the War. * Polyb. Legat. 64. Livy, Lib. XLII.

HEGESILOCHUS, one of the Sovereign Magiſtrates in the Iſle of Rhodes when the Democracy was chang'd into an Ariſtocracy; He liv'd in the Reign of Philip of Macedon, Father to Alexander the Great. At this Time the Rhodian Senators misbehav'd extreamly, and gave themſelves up to all Manner of Licentiouſneſs; they debauch'd Men's Wives, and run the laſt Lengths of Scandal: They carried their Impudence ſo far as to play at Dice for Women: And here the Looſer made uſe of all Sort of Stratagem and Violence to deliver the Lady to the Perſon that won her. Hegeſilochus was one who came up oftneſt with this Licenſe, and did it in the moſt publick Manner. In ſhort, his Drunkenneſs, and other Diſorders, made him ſo uncapable of Buſineſs, that he loſt his Poſt, and was counted infamous even by his Friends. * Athen. Deipnoſ. Lib. X.

* HEGESIPPUS, an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorian, born ſoon after the Death of the Apoſtles in the Beginning of the ſecond Century: He quitted the Jewiſh Religion, in which he had been bred, and turn'd Chriſtian. He travell'd to Rome in the Pontificate of Anicetus, and ſtay'd there 'till that of Eleutherius, i. e. from A. D. 165. to the Year 180. or thereabouts. He is the firſt Author who wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which he divided into five Books: In this Collection of Records he has given a Recital of what paſs'd in the Church from our Saviour's Paſſion, to the time of his writing. This Performance was written in a plain unornamented Stile, becauſe, as St. Hierom relates, he was deſirous to imitate the Stile of thoſe whoſe Life he deſcrib'd. We have nothing remaining of Hegeſippus but ſome Fragments preſerv'd by Euſebius in his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. The moſt remarkable of theſe Fragments are, 1. An Account of the Martyrdom of St. James firſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem. 2. Of our Saviour's Relations being called for by the Emperor Domitian. 3. A Narrative of the Martyrdom of St. Simeon Son of Cleophas Biſhop of Jeruſalem: This happen'd in the Reign of Trajan. 4. The Catamite Antinous's being deify'd by the Emperor Adrian. 5. An Account of the Author's Voyage to Rome, of the Election of St. Simeon to St. James's See, and concerning Thebutis the firſt Schiſmatick. As for the five Books of the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the Jewiſh War, which go under the Name of Hegeſippus, publiſh'd by Gualterius, A. D. 1559, and inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum, 'tis now generally agreed they don't belong to this Author, but to another Hegeſippus, who liv'd after Conſtantine the Great.

This Hiſtorian did little more than tranſcribe Joſephus, and it may be wrote in Latin, tho' ſome of the learned are of Opinion that St. Ambroſe tranſlated his Book out of Greek; others charg'd this Author with tranſcribing Joſephus's Verſion made by Ruffinus: But I. F. Gronovius ſhews theſe Men miſtaken, and obſerves that the pretended Hegeſippus has tranſcrib'd a Paſſage from Ammianus Marcellinus. He mentions Conſtantinople, the Saxons, and the Scots. In ſhort, according to Gronovius, his Stile is much like St. Ambroſe's; however, it may fairly be conjectur'd that this Work was written ſince the Reign of Nicephorus Phocas, that is, ſince the tenth Century, becauſe the Author ſpeaking of the City of Antioch, ſays it belong'd formerly to the Perſians, and that at preſent 'tis a ſtrong Barrier or Bulwark againſt 'em; which may be underſtood of the taking this Town by Phocas. But let this be as it will, this Author has either copyed or tranſlated Joſephus, and has made a very imperfect Abridgment of his Hiſtory. The Latin Author, who tranſlated from Joſephus, entitled the Book Joſephi or Joſipi, as appears from ſome very old Manuſcripts; now ſome ignorant Tranſcriber, not underſtanding his Name, put Iſigippi or Egeſippi inſtead of it. * Euſeb. Lib. II. III. & IV. St. Hieron. Cap. 22. Catal. Photius, Cod. 232. Bellarmin, de Scriptor. Eccleſ. Baron. Annal. Tom. II. A. C. 167. Scaliger. Petav: Gronovius, in Obſerv. Eccleſ. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. & Latin. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. II.

* HEGIRA, that is to ſay the Flight, a famous Epocha of the Arabians and other Mahometans. 'Twas ſo call'd, becauſe the Affairs of this falſe Prophet proving ſucceſsful after his Flight from Medina to Mecca, the Arabians began their Computation from this Time, which happen'd on Friday July the 15th, A. D. 622, in the Reign of the Emperor Heraclius.

To underſtand the Hegira rightly, it muſt be obſerv'd 1. that the Year of theſe modern Arabians or Mahometans is purely Lunar, conſiſting of twelve Lunary Months, which reach to thirty, and nine and twenty Days alternatively; and thus their common Year makes 354 Days. 2. We muſt take notice, they make uſe of a Period of thirty Years, conſiſting of nineteen common Years, and eleven extraordinary, that is, which have each of 'em 355 Days. Theſe longer or extraordinary Years are the 2, 5, 7, 10, 13, 16, 18, 21, 24, 26, & 29. The other, that is to ſay, the 1, 3, 4, 6, 8, 9, &c. are the ordinary ones. It muſt be obſerv'd farther that this Lunary Year is ſhorter by eleven Days than the Solar or Julian Year of 365 Days. Thus thirty two Arabian Years compleat, falls ſhort of the Julian thirty two times eleven Days, which amount to 352 Days; (almoſt a whole Arabian Year:) Or take it thus, in thirty three Arabian Years there want three and thirty times eleven Days, which reach in a Manner the Length of the Julian Year. Thus thirty three Arabian Years make about two and thirty Julian Years; and by this tolerable Computation, which ſerves to mark the time pretty near, and ſerve the Purpoſes of Hiſtory, it may be ſufficient to throw in a three and thirtieth Intercalary Year, and repeat the Intercalation every three and thirtieth Year. To explain this Matter farther, and avoid the Miſtakes of a great many Hiſtorians, who miſcompute in their References of the Hegira to the Chriſtian Æra, we are to remember that the firſt Year of the Hegira began July 15, A. D. 622; that the ſecond began July 4, 623; the third June 23, A. D. 624. And thus going commonly backwards eleven Days thro' all the Months of the Julian Year: Father Riccioli has publiſh'd Tables for the Reduction of the Years of the Hegira to the Chriſtian Computation; but 'tis ſomewhat difficult to make uſe of 'em; becauſe, like a learned Chronologer, he examines Matters with the utmoſt Exactneſs: However, the Reader ſhall have ſo much of his Calculation, as may be ſufficient for this Purpoſe. 'Tis this, after having added 621 to the Year of the Hegira, we muſt ſubſtract from the Total the Number ſet down in the Table following:

33—1	363—11	693—21	1023—31
66—2	396—12	726—22	1056—32
99—3	429—13	759—23	1089—33
132—4	462—14	792—24
165—5	495—15	825—25
198—6	528—16	858—26
231—7	561—17	891—27
264—8	594—18	924—28
297—9	627—19	957—29
330—10	660—20	990—30

For Example, to bring the 757th of the Hegira to an Agreement with the Year of our Lord, we muſt in the firſt Place add 621, which makes the Total 1378: We muſt then look in the Table whether the Number 757 is there. If we can't find it there, then the Number which ſtands immediately above it muſt be taken, which is 726; and the Number which ſtands in the right Hand Column over againſt it, which is 22, muſt be ſubſtracted from 1378, and then the Remainder will be 1356, which is the exact Year of the Chriſtian Æra.

757
621
1378
22
1356

Thus the Year 757 of Mahomet's Hegira is the Year 1356 of the Incarnation

This Subſtraction is made, becauſe the Mahometan Year is not equal to the Chriſtian, as has been already obſerved; and therefore from 33 Mahometan Years we muſt ſubſtract or cut off 1, from 66, 2, from 99, 3, and ſo onward. * Petavius, de Doctrina Tempor. Scaliger, de Emendatione Temporum. Riccioli, Chronol. Tom. I. Lib. II. Cap. 24.

HEGOW and Klegow, a ſmall Country within the Circle of Suabia. It lies between the Territories of Furſtemberg, Conſtance and Schaffouſe. This Country takes in the Langraviate of Nellembourg, of which Stockack is the Capital, and which belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria. There's likewiſe another ſmall Country within the Precinct of Hegow; and here ſtands the Fort Hohen-Twil, the Town Ballingen, and ſome other Places all belonging to the Dukes of Wirtemberg. This Country is ſuppos'd to be the ſame with that anciently call'd Eremus Helvetiorum. * Baudrand.

HEIDANUS (Abraham), Divinity Profeſſor at Leyden, was born at Frankendale in the Palatinate, A. D. 1597. He was an eminent Preacher, and being a Perſon of Probity and bright Parts, was much eſteem'd. He made an Acquaintance with Deſcartes, and by the Advantage of his Converſation finiſh'd a Tract he had begun, when he was one of Jachæus's Audience, then Philoſophy Profeſſor at Leyden. This Jachæus was a great Champion for ſubſtantial Forms, and occaſion'd the Queſtion's being much bandied in that Univerſity. Heidan drawn into the Diſquiſition by the Noiſe, examin'd the Objections to the Bottom, and compar'd 'em with Jachæus's Anſwers. And here upon the Concluſion, he found that People did loſe but their Time by philoſophizing upon theſe Principles: And by reading Deſcartes and converſing with him, he fancy'd he had found out the Rout to Truth in Metaphyſicks and Natural Philoſophy. But how ſerviceable ſoever his Reſearches were for ſolid Knowledge, they diſoblig'd his Fortune, and gave him a great deal of Trouble. To give the Reader a brief Recital: The Curators of the Univerſity publiſh'd an Order to lay the Diſturbances aſleep occaſion'd by Diſputes. By this Order Jan. 6. 1676. they forbad all Profeſſors reading or arguing upon certain Propoſitions lately debated, and particularly Deſcartes's Metaphyſicks. Heidan animadverted upon this Decree, and pretended there were Nullities, or Want of due Form in it: He aſſerted that the twenty cenſur'd Propoſitions had not been argu'd in the Univerſity of Leyden, as the Curators ſet forth: He complain'd that theſe Gentlemen were impos'd on by unfair Extracts. He made odious Compariſons between the Jeſuits and thoſe who deliver'd theſe Extracts; the Jeſuits, I ſay, who got thoſe Propoſitions condemn'd as written by Janſenius, which were not in that Author's Writings. In fine, Heidanus ſet the cenſur'd Propoſitions in a true Light. Theſe explanatory Animadverſions were printed firſt in Flemiſh, and afterwards in Latin. Heidanus was not the ſole Author; two of his Friends had a Share in the Buſineſs: However, to ſcreen his Aſſiſtants he took the whole upon himſelf. The Curators were ſo offended with this Diſcourſe, that they turn'd Heidanus out of the Chair, ſo that now he was only Miniſter of a Flemiſh Church. He printed Speeches upon ſeveral Subjects: An Examination of the Remonſtrants Catechiſm: A Diſcourſe in Quarto De Origine Erroris, and a Book in Flemiſh againſt the Pelagians and Semipelagians, written with ſuch Strength, that 'twas thought no body could anſwer it. As to his Corpus Theologiæ Chriſtianæ in quindecem Locos digeſtum, 'twas publiſh'd after his Death in two Volumes Quarto by his Grandſon Crucius Burgomaſter of Leyden in 1686. * Wittichius, in his Funeral Oration for Heidanus. Bayle, Diction. Hiſtoire.

HEILA or Heyla, a ſmall Town of Royal Pruſſia in Poland. 'Tis fortified and ſtands upon a Cape at the Entrance into the Gulph of Dantzick, from which 'tis parted only by the Bay of Pautzko.

* HELDINGE (Michael), born in the County of Feringen within the Territories of Wirtemberg, and died A. D. 1561. being 55 Years of Age. He was ordain'd Prieſt and made Suffragan at laſt to Sebaſtian d'Hauſſenſtein Archbiſhop of Mentz, Succeſſor to Albert Cardinal of Brandenbourg, under whom Heldinge ſeems to have had the ſame Employment. The Pope gave him the Title of Biſhop of Sidon. Some time after he was preferr'd to the See of Merſembourg. When he was Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Mentz, he wrote a practical Diſcourſe for young People, which probably is the ſame with that Melchior Adam calls the Mentz Catechiſm. This Heldinge, call'd Sidonius from his Titular See, was employ'd with Pfluggius and Iſlebius to draw up the Interim. He aſſiſted at the Council of Mentz, and publiſh'd the Decrees made there. And having done a great deal of Service to the Church of Rome he was promoted to the See of Merſembourg, but was not put in Poſſeſſion without a great deal of Trouble. However, Charles V.'s Authority, who had conquered the Elector of Saxony, and broke the Smalcaldick League, ſurmounted the Difficulties, and carried the Point. This Prelate being ſurrounded with Proteſtants, manag'd with great Gentleneſs and Moderation. He ſat in the Dyet at Ausburg, A. D. 1550, and ſeven Years forward had a principal Share in the Conference at Wormes. He likewiſe aſſiſted at the Council of Trent, where he ſhew'd himſelf a Perſon of great Learning. And to conclude with him, the Emperor Ferdinand made him an Aſſeſſor in the Imperial Chamber at Spire. * Obſervationum Selectarum ad Rem Litterariam Spectantium. Tom. I. pag. 60, &c.

* HELIODORUS, a Friend of St. Hierom. 'Tis to him this Father wrote his ingenious Epiſtle for recommending Solitude, which begins thus, Quanto Studio & Amore contenderim.

The Time and Place of his Birth are uncertain: However, that he was of Dalmatia, that his Parents were wealthy Chriſtians is ſufficiently clear. St. Hierom having prevail'd with him to quit his Country and travel into Italy, he went as far as Aquileia to meet him, and adviſ'd him to live an Aſcetic Life. Heliodorus went along with St. Hierom in his Voyage to the Levant. They ſtay'd ſome time at Antioch, where they made an Acquaintance with the famous Apollinarius. Farther, he accompanied St. Hierom to his Solitude in the Province of Chalcis; but at laſt, being deſirous to ſee his own Country and Relations, he took leave of St. Hierom, but not without a Promiſe to ſee him again after ſome ſtay at Home. But St. Hierom thinking him too long abſent, wrote him a Sort of Panegyrick upon Retirement, ſoliciting him to return. Heliodorus notwithſtanding travell'd no more into the Levant; He only made a Journey into Italy, where he was admitted into ſome of the lower Orders: Some Years after he was ordain'd Prieſt, and at laſt conſecrated Biſhop of Altino within the Province of Aquileia near Trevizi: This Town was afterwards demoliſh'd by the Huns and the See remov'd to Torcello. Heliodorus aſſiſted in Quality of a Biſhop at the Council of Aquileia, A. D. 381. S. Hierom in his Commendation of Nepotian aſſures us that Heliodorus during his laſt Character manag'd with all the Diſcipline and Auſterity of a Monaſtick Life. 'Tis not certain in what Year he died. He is mention'd in the modern Roman Martyrology on the 3d of July. * Hieron. Epiſt. 1. ad Heliodor. Epiſt. 41. ad Ruffin. 43. ad Chromat. 65. ad Pammach. in Epitaph. Nepot. Acta Concil. Aquileienſ. apud Ambroſ.

HELIUS, the Emperor Claudius's manumis'd Slave, had ſuch an Aſcendant upon his Succeſſor Nero, that this Prince, when he made a Year's Progreſs in Greece, A. D. 67, left him at Rome as it were Regent of the Empire, with ſuch an abſolute Authority over all Degrees of Perſons, that 'twas within his Commiſſion to put Senators to Death without writing for new Powers, or conſulting the Emperor. Helius back'd by Polycletus, another manumis'd Slave of the ſame Temper, went to the utmoſt Extremity of Cruelty: But Affairs growing diſturb'd, and foreboding an Inſurrection, he wrote to Nero firſt, and afterwards went to him to preſs his Return into Italy. After Nero's Death, Helius was made to follow his Maſter, and had ſome of his Deſerts from the Emperor Galba. * Dion Caſſius, Lib. LXIII. & LXIV. Tacit Annal. 14. Sueton. in Neron. & Galba.

HELLANICUS of Mitylene, was born twelve Years before Herodotus according to Aulus Gellius; Hellanicus, ſays he, was 65 Years old when the Peloponneſian War broke out. Herodotus was 53, and Thucydides 40; that this was the Diſtance of Time between 'em we are aſſur'd from Pamphilus's eleventh Book. This Paſſage fixes the Epocha of theſe three famous Hiſtorians; for the Peloponneſian War began the ſecond Year of the LXXXVIIth Olympiad: Thus Thucydides was born the ſecond Year of the LXXVIIth Olympiad: Herodotus the firſt Year of the LXXIVth, and Hellanicus the firſt Year of the LXXI. Hellanicus wrote an Hiſtory of the Kings of the earlieſt Antiquity, and of the firſt Founders of Towns, entitled, κτίσεις ἐθνων καὶ πόλεων: Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus mentions Hellanicus's Hiſtory of the Trojan War, and aſſures us, that what this Author has written about Æneas's quitting his Country, has a ſtronger Appearance of Truth, than what others have written on the ſame Subject: Halicarnaſſæus cites Hellanicus farther upon this Argument, and mentions how the ancient Inhabitants of Italy were forc'd to tranſplant themſelves into Sicily. Athenæus, Arrian, and Aulus Gellius mention Hellanicus's Hiſtory of Egypt.

To

To conclude, there's no Neceſſity of making more than one Hellanicus, for 'tis not improbable but that the Mitylenian, the Mileſian and the Lesbian were the ſame Perſon. * Gellius, Noct. Att. Lib. XV. Cap. 23. Halicarnaſſ. Antiquit. Rom. Lib. I. Athen. Lib. II.

HELMONT, a ſmall Town with a good Caſtle. It ſtands in the Peeland, a Country within the Dutch Part of Brabant upon the River Aa, between the Towns of Boiſleduc and Ruremonde, ſix or ſeven Leagues from each. From this Town John Baptiſt Van Helmon, the famous Chymiſt, took his Name. * Maty, Diction.

HELVETII, an ancient People of Gallia Celtica. They were bounded on the North by the Rauraci and by Vindelicia; they had Rhetia to the Eaſt, the Sequani to the Weſt, and the Allobroges, the Seduni, and the Veragri to the South. Thus their Country anſwer'd to the modern Switzerland, the Canton of Baſil excepted, which was poſſeſſed by the Rauraci, who, tho' they are now reckon'd Switzers, did not then paſs for Part of the Helvetian Body. The old Helvetians were divided into four Clans, the Ambroni, Tigurini, Tugenii & Urbigenii. Their chief Towns are, Aventicum, Eburodunum, Salodurum, Vindoniſſa, Vitodurum & Urba; which are now call'd Avenches, Tverdum, Soleurre, Vindiſch, Winterthern and Orbe. * Baudrand.

HELVII, Inhabitants of Gallia Celtica, mention'd by Cæſar in the firſt Book of his Commentaries De Bello Gallico. He makes the Mountain Gebenna, now call'd Les Cevennes, the Barrier between them and the Auvergnati; and in his ſeventh Book he takes notice of their being ſettled in the Roman Province of Gallia Narbonenſis; for when the Gauls of Auvergne, Chartres and Berri revolted, the Helvii continu'd firm in their Alliance with the Romans, and join'd their Neighbours the Vellani and the Gabali againſt Verlingentorix, who attack'd Cæſar. The Helvii according to ſome Geographers were ſeiz'd on the Country now call'd Vivares of which Viviers is the Capital, which was formerly a fourth Rate Town within the Provincia Viennenſis. Amongſt the Epiſcopal Cities under the Juriſdiction of the Archbiſhoprick of Vienne, Viviers is the next in Rank to Valence, and precedes Die, Grenoble, St. Jean de Maurienne and Geneva. Venantius Biſhop of Viviers aſſiſted at the Councils of Epaunum and Auvergne in the Reign of King Theodebert, and Cantinus another Biſhop of the ſame See was at the fifth Synod of Orleans. * Adrian Valeſius, Notitia Galliæ.

HEMINA, that is to ſay, a French Demiſetier: The Grammarian Feſtus ſays, " The Hemina is ſo call-" ed from the Greek ἡμισυ dimidium, becauſe it con-" tains the half of a Setier." This Etymology is confirm'd by Aulus Gellius, who obſerves, " That when " an Hemina is pour'd out of a Setier, we muſt ſay a " Demiſetier is emptied, and not a Setier divided in half; " Dimidium, non dimidiatum Sextarium." The Roman Hemina, as Garaut, Maſter of the French Mint, aſſures us, makes the Paris Demiſetier, which holds eight Ounces of Liquor: And Fernelius affirms the ſame thing. Apuleius makes the Cotylus and the Hemina ſynonimous terms, and that each of 'em was a Demiſetier, " The Hemina, ſays he, was the Half of a Se-" tier, which made the Greeks call it Cotylus, that is to " ſay, Inciſion or Diviſion, becauſe it divided the Setier " to two equal Parts. 'Twas the Romans Cuſtom to lay up the ſtandard Meaſures in Temples; and by them thoſe publickly us'd, were examin'd. Varro reports that the Scales for trying the weight of the Coin were lodg'd in Saturn's Temple: And we read in Fannius that the Amphora, which held eight Congii, that is to ſay 48 Setiers, was conſecrated to Jupiter Capitolinus.

Quam ne violare liceret
Sacravere Jovi, Tarpeio in Monte, Quirites.

And when the Emperor Veſpaſian rebuilt the Capitol, which had ſuffer'd in the Civil Wars, he lodg'd the old ſtandard Meaſures there. The Congius held ten Pounds, that is, an hundred and twenty Roman Ounces; their Pound conſiſting of no more than twelve Ounces; And theſe 120 Ounces make ſomewhat more than three Pints Paris. St. Bennet in his monaſtick Rule allows every Religious a ſingle Hemina of Wine per Diem, which has given Occaſion to diſpute the Quantity of the Meaſure. Some make it as much as a Paris Pint, and others leſſen it to a Roman Hemina, which was but ten Ounces: Some fix it at twelve Ounces, and others mount it to eighteen or thereabouts. * Lancelot, Traité de l'Hemine. Mabillon, IV. Siecle Benedictin. Martenne, de Ritib. Monach. Pelletier, Diſſert. ſur l'Hemine. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

HENAULT (N.), a French Poet of the XVII^th^ Century, ſuppos'd to be the Author of the famous Song, call'd De l'Avorton. He printed a ſmall Collection of his Works in twelves at Paris in 1670, entitled, Oeuvres diverſes, or Miſcellanies ——— par le Sieur D. H. He was a Man of Learning and Wit, but a Libertine, and took Pains in his Vice to make the Impreſſion go deep, and engage farther. He valu'd himſelf upon his Atheiſm, and appear'd a Sceptic with Confidence, Parade and Affectation. He wrote three different Syſtems of the Mortality of the Soul, and travell'd on Purpoſe into Holland to ſee Spinoſa. In his laſt Sickneſs his Sentiments were quite different: He was wonderfully touch'd with Remorſe, and would have carried his Penance towards an Exceſs. Had his Confeſſor not reſtrain'd him he would have receiv'd the Viaticum in the Middle of his Chamber with an Halter about his Neck. There's an Eclogue and an Elegy of this Author's in the Fureteriana. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HENETI, a Clan of the Vandals, were conquered according to ſome Writers by Ziemowits, who headed the Poles, A. D. 892. His Son Leſcus, who lov'd his Eaſe better than fighting, dropt the War againſt theſe People, as he did that of Pomerania and Caſſubia, notwithſtanding the Succeſſes of that Enterprize. Afterwards they were beaten by Leo or Lion Duke of Bavaria and Saxony; And here after a haraſſing War, in which their King Nicolot was ſlain, moſt of this Nation were deſtroy'd; and the Remainder driven to the Frontiers of Poland. Thoſe, who were contented to live under Diſadvantage rather than quit their native Country, were thrown out of all Offices and Diſtinction; and Colonies were brought from Eaſt Friezland to plant the Country. This happen'd in the XII^th^ Century. There were likewiſe Heneti in Paphlagonia, a Province of Aſia Minor. The Venetians have likewiſe been call'd Heneti, and Venice Henetia. * Cromer. Lib. II. Strabo, Lib. V. Euripides in Hippolit. &c.

HENICHIUS (John), Divinity Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Rinthel in the Country of Heſſe, was a Miniſter's Son and born in 1616. He had been a Superintendant at Bardewick five Years and manag'd to great Commendation. Auguſtus Duke of Brunſwick would have put the Dioceſe of Wolfenbuttel under his Care, but he declined the Promotion. He was a Perſon of great Candor and Moderation, and earneſtly deſir'd a Coalition between the Lutherans and Calviniſts. His reconciling Temper gave him ſome Trouble. He dy'd at Rinthel, A. D. 1671. His Works are, Diſſertatio de Majeſtate Civili. Rintel. 1653. in 4^to^. De Cultu Creaturarum & Imaginum Diſſertatio. ibid. 1653. in 4^to^. De Libertate Arbitrii, imprimis de Concurſu Cauſæ ſecundæ cum primis. ibid. 1645. in 4^to^. De Officio boni Principis piique Subditi. ibid. 1661. in 12^mo^. Diſſertatio de Pœnitentiâ Lapſorum. ibid. 1659. in 4^to^. Compendium Sacræ Theologiæ. ibid. 1657, 1671. in Octavo. De Veritate Religionis Chriſtianæ. ibid. 1667. in 12^mo^. 'Tis an Addition to that of Grotius upon the ſame Subject. Inſtitutiones Theologicæ. Brunſvigæ. 1665. in 4^to^. Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ & Civilis Pars prima, Rintel. 1669. Pars ſecunda, 1670. Pars tertia, 1674. in 4^to^. Diſputationes aliquot, ex quibus eſt, de Myſterio S. S. Trinitatis: De Confeſſione Auguſtini: De Fide & Operibus, &c. * De Witte, Memor. Theolog.

* HENNUIER (John); for one thouſand five hundred and ſixty in Morery Vol. I, read one thouſand five hundred fifty ſix.

HENRY, Son of Otho, of the Houſe of Bavaria; had the lower Bavaria for his Share at his Father's Deceaſe; his elder Brother Lewis having the Upper together with the Palatinate for his Diviſion. In 1282. theſe two Brothers made an Alliance at the Diet of Ausburg for recovering Auſtria, Stiria and other Territories, which had been taken from their Anceſtors. Henry's Poſterity fail'd in 1340, his Grandſon John being the laſt of that Branch.

HENRY

HENRY, call'd the Rich, Son of Frederic of Landſhut, and Nephew to the Emperor Lewis, after the Death of Lewis Longbeard, which happen'd in 1447, was ſeiz'd of the entire Territory of Ingolſtad excluſively of his Couſins. This Henry was Father of Lewis, whoſe Son George, Founder of the Univerſity of Ingolſtad, was the laſt of this Family, which dy'd with him in 1503. He made one Elizabeth, marry'd to Robert Count Palatine, his Heir, which gave Occaſion to the Bavarian War.

HENRY, call'd the black or the little Dog, Son of Guelphe I, poſſeſs'd the Duchy of Bavaria after the Deceaſe of his Father, and his Brother Guelphe II. By his Ducheſs Wulfilla of the Houſe of Saxony he had two Sons, Guelphe III. and Henry ſirnam'd the Proud, who was inveſted with the Duchy of Saxony by the Emperor Lotharius his Father in Law, A. D. 1137. He was likewiſe Duke of Bavaria, and built Munich. Afterwards being beſieg'd in Vinsberg, his Lady preſerv'd him by carrying him out of Town like a Pedlar upon her Shoulders: Not long after his Eſcape the Emperor Conrade, who had formerly been his Enemy, was reconcil'd to him. This Henry was Father to Henry ſirnam'd the Lyon, of whom the Reader may ſee an Account in Morery Vol. I.

HENRY II, call'd the Younger, an unquiet and ambitious Prince, bought the Primogeniture of his Brother William, and got the Purchaſe confirm'd by Charles V. in 1537. He did the Emperor good Service in Italy againſt the French; diſtinguiſh'd himſelf handſomely againſt the Boars in Germany, and in 1556. engag'd in the Intereſt of the Party call'd the Holy League. But ſitting very hard upon the Towns of Goſlar and Brunſwick, the Princes of the Smalcaldic League ouſted him of his Duchy in 1542: After this Misfortune being ſupply'd with Money from the French King he gave ſome farther Diſturbance, but was taken Priſoner with his Son by Maurice Duke of Saxony, and did not recover his Liberty 'till 1547. And now his enterprizing Humour being not quite ſpent, he met with ſeveral rough Accidents: At laſt, to get himſelf unembarraſs'd, to recover the Loſſes ſuſtain'd, and put his Country in a State of Repoſe, he apply'd himſelf wholly to Civil Adminiſtration, and the Intereſt of his Subjects: And after having waited a long time in vain for a General Council, he went in to the Ausburg Confeſſion, made a publick Declaration of his Belief, and dy'd in 1568.

HENRY, the Hermit of Toulouſe, a Diſciple of Peter de Bruys; after having gone along with his Maſter, and preach'd his Heterodoxies in Provence, came into the Country of Lauzanne, and ſent two of his Diſciples into the Dioceſe of Mans, who were well receiv'd there; which Encouragement made him come thither himſelf: But Hildebert Biſhop of Mans appearing againſt his Novelties, broke his Deſign, and order'd him to quit that Province. Upon this, he return'd into Languedoc, and publiſh'd the ſame Doctrine with the Addition of ſome new Opinions. The Misbelief of this Henry and Peter de Bruys, conſiſted chiefly in their declaring againſt external Worſhip; againſt Pædobaptiſm; againſt ſaying Maſs; the Uſe of Churches and Altars, and Prayers for the Dead. *S. Bernard's Life, Lib. II. Cap. 5. Baronius, A. C. 1147. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HENRY of Suſa, Archbiſhop of Embrun, and Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, A. D. 1262: Upon the Score of which laſt Preferment he is commonly known and cited by the Name of Oſtienſis. He is reckon'd the beſt Civil and Canon Lawyer of his time. He wrote a Sum upon this joint Subject commonly call'd the Golden Sum: This Book was twice printed at Baſil, and twice at Lyons in the XVI^th^ Century. He likewiſe wrote a Commentary upon the Book of the Decretals at the Inſtance of Pope Alexander IV, printed twice at Rome and twice at Venice. Theſe Performances of the Cardinal's are much valu'd by the Canoniſts, and may reaſonably paſs for Originals: For thoſe, who wrote afterwards upon this Subject, do little more than copy Oſtienſis. Authors differ about the time when this Cardinal dy'd; But his Death is moſt probably fix'd to the Year 1271. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HENRY CRUMP, a Ciſtertian belonging to the Abby of Baltinglaſſe in Ireland, and Doctor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Oxford, flouriſh'd in the Year 1382. He gave in to the Sentiments of the famous Richard Archbiſhop of Armagh, and like that Prelate was a great Enemy to the Fryars Mendicant: And happening to aſſert ſome harſh Propoſitions againſt their Inſtitution, and which ſeem'd to preſs a little upon the Papal Authority, he was forc'd to recant at Stamford before William Courtney Archbiſhop of Canterbury. This Henry was afterwads charg'd with Hereſy by William Andrew a Dominican, Biſhop of Meath in Ireland: The Article was, that he had taught that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Altar was no more than a Mirror or Repreſentation of his Body in Heaven. Crump's Works are, Determinationes Scholaſticæ, Lib. I. Contra Religioſos Mendicantes, Lib. I. An Account of the Foundation of all the Engliſh Monaſteries from the time of Birinus firſt Biſhop of Dorcheſter, to Robert Groſthead Biſhop of Lincoln, who dy'd in the Year 1253. * Thom. Waldenſis, Faſcicul. Zizaniorum a Reverendiſſimo Archiep. Armach. citat. in Lib. de Religione Antiq. Hiber. & Britan. Acta Gulielm. Andreæ. Balæus, Cent. 14. Num. 98. Sir James Ware, de Script. Hiberniæ, Dublin, 1639.

HENRY HARPHIUS, or de Herph, a Cordelier of the XV^th^ Century born at Herph a Village in Brabant. His Talent lay moſtly in myſtical Divinity. He wrote a Book call'd, Epithalamium: A Golden Directory for the Contemplative: Eden, or, the Contemplative's terreſtrial Paradiſe: The Golden Mirror upon the Decalogue: The Mirror of Perfection: A Diſcourſe touching the three Parts of Penance; and another of the threefold coming of our Saviour Chriſt. He wrote all theſe Tracts in Flemiſh, but they were afterwards tranſlated into Latin. His Myſtical Theology was tranſlated into French, and printed in 4^to^ at Paris in 1617. Harphius died at Malines in 1478. * Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. Poſſevin. in Appar. Sacr. Bellarmin. de Script. Eccl. &c. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XV.

HEPHRON, a Town beyond Jordan within the Tribe of Manaſſeh, near that of Gad. 'Tis famous for the great Slaughter made there by Judas Maccabæus. This General coming from the Defeat of the Macedonian Army commanded by Timotheus, deſir'd the Burghers of Hephron to give his Army free Paſſage through their Town, with a Promiſe not to do 'em any Damage. The Hephronites or Ephronites gave him a flat Denial, ſhut their Gates, and put themſelves in a Poſture of Defence. Judas enrag'd with this churliſh Uſage, commanded his Men to approach the Walls, and fall on by Scaladoe. The Attack laſted but four and twenty Hours, tho' the Service was very hot and dangerous. At laſt the Enemy enter'd the Town Sword in Hand, ſet the Streets on Fire, and gave Quarter not ſo much as to a ſingle Man. The Women, Boys and Girls were carried Priſoners to Jeruſalem. And thus this Town having five and twenty thouſand ſlain was entirely deſtroy'd in the Year of the World 3891, and 160 Years before the Incarnation. * 1 Maccab. v. 46. 2 Maccab. xii. 27.

* HERACLAS (Saint), Brother to the famous Martyr Plutarch, was of Alexandria in Egypt, and bred a Pagan. His Brother and himſelf were converted during the Heat of the Perſecution rais'd by the Emperor Severus. They were both afterwards Origen's Diſciples. Plutarch ſuffer'd Martyrdom, A. D. 204. and Heraclas liv'd retir'd, and wore the Philoſophick Habit. He ſtudied Philoſophy under Ammonius Saccas a Chriſtian Platoniſt, who had likewiſe been Origen's Maſter for that Purpoſe. Heraclas was ordain'd Prieſt, but neither chang'd his Habit, nor gave over his Reſearches in Philoſophy. Origen made him his Partner in the Catechiſt's Office at Alexandria, and put the new Converts and Catechumens under his Government. When Origen withdrew into Paleſtine, he left him the ſole Care of the Catechetic School. In the Year 232. Heraclas was choſen Biſhop of Alexandria, and govern'd that Church to his Death, which happen'd in the Year 247. Dionyſius of Alexandria, who was his Succeſſor, reports that Biſhop Heraclas would never receive thoſe who went to Heretical Meetings but upon Condition of their making a publick Declaration of every thing they had heard; and that then he admitted 'em to Communion without Rebaptization. He recover'd one Ammonius a Biſhop from his Hereſy. Uſuardus and the Roman Martyrology ſet his Feſtival to the 14^th^ of July. * Euſebius ſebius, Lib. VI. Hiſt. Cap. 3, 4, 15, 19, 33. Lib. VII. Cap. 7. Hieron. de Vir. Illuſt. Cap. 54. Epiſt. 85. De Tillemont, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Tom. III. Baillet, Vies des Saints au 14. de Juillet.

HERACLEONITES, a Branch of the Gnoſtick Hereſy: They took their Name and Heterodoxy from Heracleon, of whom Origen gives a large Account in his Commentary upon St. John's Goſpel. He is repreſented by Epiphanius as a Perſon that refin'd upon the Gnoſtick Divinity in a great many Points; but this was not done without Reſervation and keeping cloſe to the main Articles: However, to make himſelf the Head of a Sect, he went off from the uſual Expoſition of many Texts of Scripture, and ſometimes chang'd the reading to make it comply with his Notions. For the Purpoſe, he pretends that by theſe Words in S. John's Goſpel, (chap. i.) All Things were made by him, we are not to underſtand the World and every thing that is excellent in it. The World, which he calls an Æon, was not made, ſays he, by the Word; and to fortify his Fancy, he ſubjoins to theſe farther Words of St. John, Without him nothing was made, this ſupplemental Interpolation, of Things which are in the World. He diſtinguiſh'd two Sorts of Worlds, one of which was divine and the other corruptible, and limited St. John's Word πάντα or all Things, to ſignifie the latter. Origen therefore with great Reaſon reprimands his Boldneſs for throwing in ſupplemental Additions into St. John's Goſpel, as if himſelf had been a Prophet or an Apoſtle. This Heracleon argued from his own falſe Principles upon a great many Places in St. John's Goſpel, as Origen in his Commentary informs us. He maintain'd that the World was not the immediate Production of the Word, but that he was only the occaſional Cauſe of its being created by the Demiurgus. The Heracleonites deny'd the Authority of the Prophecies in the old Teſtament: This was done in Conformity to their Maſter, who held that St. John Baptiſt was really a Voice which directed to the Meſſiah or Saviour; but that the Prophets were nothing but Random Sounds in the Air without any Meaning. All theſe Gnoſticks fancied themſelves better Divines than the Apoſtles; and in Confidence of this Superiority of Knowledge, advanced ſtrange Paradoxies under Pretence of explaining the Scripture in a more ſpiritual and ſublime Manner. Thus they run out into groſs Impertinencies to ſuch a Degree, that Origen, who was much given to Myſtical Expoſitions of Scripture, thought himſelf obliged to reproach Heracleon with an abuſive Latitude, and exceeding the Bounds of Allegory. Epiphanius dilates upon the Syſtem of this ancient Heretick, and ſhews his having borrow'd a great many Things from another Branch of the Gnoſticks call'd Marcoſians. * Orig. Comment. in S. Johan. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 36.

HERALDUS (Deſiderius), an Advocate in the Parliament of Paris, has given good Proof of his Learning in ſeveral printed Performances. Some time after the Death of King Henry IV. he publiſh'd a Political Diſſertation upon the Independence of Princes under the Name of *David Leidkreſſerus. He dy'd in 1649. Salmaſius and he wrote againſt each other. He publiſh'd his Adverſaria in 1599. He repented the printing this little Book if we may believe the Scaligerana. His Notes upon Tertullian's Apologetick, upon Minutius Felix and Arnobius are well receiv'd. He likewiſe wrote Notes upon Martial's Epigrams. His Performance prepar'd againſt Salmaſius was publiſh'd in the Year 1650: 'Tis a Folio, entitled, Quæſtiones Quotidianæ, & Obſervationes ad Jus Atticum Romanum. He likewiſe wrote De Rerum Judicatarum Authoritate, Libri duo, printed at Paris, A. D. 1640. Obſervationum & Emendationum Liber unus, ibid. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HERMIONE, a Town of Argia in Peloponneſus. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Sinus Argolicus, or the Argolick Gulph: There was a famous Temple in it dedicated to Tellus, or the Earth. The Town gave its Name to the Gulph, and is now call'd Maria. Plutarch mentions it in his Lives of Themiſtocles and Pompey. * Lubin. Tabulæ Geographicæ in Vit. Plutarch.

HERMIANI, an old German Clan, and one of the moſt powerful in that large Diviſion of Europe: According to ſome Writers they dwelt in the Country now call'd Pomerania upon the Baltick Sea; but this does not agree with Tacitus's Deſcription. Baudrand makes the Hermiani one of the five principal Clans of Germany, and ſays they took in the Cheruſci, the Catti, the Hermonduri, the Armalauſii, the Oſii, the Lugii, the Allemanni, and the Marcomanni, all of 'em ſeated very remote from the Baltick and Pomerania. * Cluverius, German. Antiq. Lib. III.

HEROD, Son of Herod the Great by Mariamne Daughter to Simon the High Prieſt. His Father had declar'd him his Succeſſor to the Kingdom of Judæa; but becauſe his Mother was charg'd with being an Accomplice in Antipater's Conſpiracy, he revok'd his Declaration, and excluded him. Joſephus reports that this Herod was Herodias's Husband, and that ſhe elop'd and marry'd his Brother Antipas Tetrarch of Galilee. But this is a Miſtake, for the Scripture ſays expreſly that Herodias was Philip's Wife. * Matth. 14. 3. Marc. 6. 17. Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XVIII. Cap. 7.

*HERODOTUS, of Halicarnaſſus in Caria, Son of Lyxus and Dryo, was born in the firſt Year of the LXXIV^th^ Olympiad, and 484 Years before the Incarnation. 'Tis ſaid that being ſolicitous

What he ſhould do to be for ever known,
And make the Age to come his own,

he concluded the beſt Expedient would be to go to the Olympick Games, where all Greece was drawn together, and make a Rehearſal there of the nine Books of his Hiſtory: This Thought ſucceeded: His Performance was much admir'd, and where-ever he paſs'd he heard 'em cry out, There goes the Man, who has handſomely flouriſh'd upon our Victories, and made a noble Recital of the Advantages we gain'd upon the Barbarians. His Hiſtory was much admir'd for the natural Eaſineſs, beautiful Expreſſion, and Delicacy of the Ionick Dialect. He wrote his Hiſtory in the Iſle of Samos according to the general Opinion. Pliny is of another Mind, and affirms his nine Books were written at Thuria, a Town in that Part of Italy then call'd Magna Græcia, whither he retir'd with an Athenian Colony, and dy'd there. Notwithſtanding a great many Hiſtorians wrote before him, he is the oldeſt whoſe Works are extant: For at preſent we know nothing but the Names of the Hiſtories of Pherecydes, of Dionyſius the Mileſian, of Hecatæus, of Xanthus the Lydian, of Charon of Lampſacum, of Hellanicus, and ſome others. Theſe nine Books according to Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus's Computation take in the moſt remarkable Occurrences within the Period of 240 Years, from the Reign of Cyrus firſt King of Perſia, to that of Xerxes, when the Hiſtorian was living, as Photius and Diodorus Siculus report; but then this laſt Author is miſtaken in ſaying that Herodotus's Hiſtory reaches from the Deſtruction of Troy to Xerxes's Reign, which takes in the Compaſs of 700 Years. Diodorus Siculus ſeems to have made this Slip, becauſe Herodotus in his firſt Book touches a little upon the fabulous Age, and relates ſome Stories current in his Time about the taking of Troy. Herodotus's Manner is agreeable, beaten into Length, clear and flowing: But then his Narration is leſs rais'd and affecting than Thucydides. However, Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, in his Compariſon of theſe two Hiſtorians, gives Herodotus almoſt always the Advantage. His Dialect, which is a Way of ſpeaking particular to ſome Greek Colonies, is altogether Ionick; and 'tis ſaid that he made himſelf Maſter of this Way of ſpeaking at the Iſland Samos. 'Tis not univerſally agreed that Homer's Life, which follows the ninth Muſe, was written by Herodotus; but whoever was the Author, 'tis certainly very ancient. His Hiſtory is come down to us entire, notwithſtanding 'twas abridg'd by one Theopompus mention'd by Suidas. Several Criticks charge Herodotus with ſtraining towards Romance, and giving his Hiſtory ſo Poetical a Turn, that 'tis hard to diſcover what is Matter of Fact. Thus, where he writes any thing extraordinary and uncommon, they conclude there's either Ignorance or Deſign in him. Caſaubon will have it that Herodotus's Stories occaſion'd the inventing the French Word Radoter, that is, to talk Whimſy and Fiction. But then it muſt be ſaid Herodotus has had Friends as well as Enemies. Aldus Manutius, Joakim Camerarius, and Henry Stephens, have written Apologies for him. In ſhort, modern Travellers have given no leſs bold and improbable Relations than Herodotus. * La Mothe le Vayer, Jugemens des Hiſtoriens Grecs & Latins. Voſſius Lib. de Hiſt. Græc.

HEROLD (Baſil John), was born at Hochſted upon the Danube in Suabia in the Year 1511. He ſettled at Baſil in 1539, and made Divinity and Hiſtory his chief Study. He was living in 1566. His printed Works are theſe following.

Philopſendes, ſive Declamatio pro Deſid. Eraſmo Rot. contra Dialogum famoſum Anonymi cujuſdam Medici. Belli ſacri Hiſtoriæ continuatæ. Leges antiquæ Germanorum. Princeps Juventutis, ſive Panegyricus Ferdinando Archiduci Auſtriæ dicatus, cum Hiſtoriolâ Belli Turcici anno 1556. geſti. Pannoniæ Chronologia, commonly printed with Bonfinius's Decads. De Germaniæ veteris veræ, quam primam vocant, Locis antiquiſſimis; item de Romanorum in Rhætia littorali Stationibus, & hinc Ortorum ibidem Vicorum atque Municipiorum hodie ſuperſtitum Originibus, inſerted in the firſt Volume of Simon Schardius de Scriptoribus Rerum Germanicarum. He publiſh'd ſix Chyliads of Stratagems; a Funeral Oration for the Emperor Ferdinand: Hereſiologia, ſeu Syntagma veterum Theologorum tam Græcorum quam Latinorum numero 18, Qui graſſatas in Eccleſia hæreſes confutârunt, & præcipua Theologiæ capita tractârunt. * Bayle, Diction. And the Authors cited by him.

HEROS, Biſhop of Arles in the V^th^ Century, was depriv'd of his See, and Patroclus conſecrated in his Room. He was one of the Proſecutors of Pelagius at the Synod of Dioſpolis, A. D. 415. Notwithſtanding this Orthodox Conduct he was cenſur'd by Pope Zozimus as a Prelate expell'd and depos'd. Afterwards the ſame Pope condemn'd Pelagius, but without revoking what had paſs'd againſt Heros, and Lazarus Biſhop of Aix. * Acta Concil. Dioſpolit. Auguſtin. Epiſt. paſſim. Epiſt. Zozim.

HERRERA (Ferdinand de), of Seville, a Spaniſh Caſtillian Poet of the XVI^th^ Century: His Lyrick and Heroick Poems were printed at Seville in 1582. He is one of the beſt Spaniſh Lyrick Poets. His Stile is clear and very correct; and he had the Talent to write copiouſly, without leſſening the Entertainment. His Heroick Performance has likewiſe a beautiful Manner; but then he does not hit the Character of that Way of writing exactly. * Nicholas Antonio, Tom. I. Biblioth. Hiſpan.

HERSENT (Charles), a French Prieſt of the XVII^th^ Century: He publiſh'd a little Book in 1640, entitled, Optatus Gallus de cavendo Schiſmate: 'Tis dedicated to the Primates, Archbiſhops and Biſhops of the Gallican Church; which Church, as the Book pretends, was in Danger of making a Schiſm from the Roman. This Performanee being written with a great deal of Spirit and Freedom, and not unlikely to embroil Matters and make a Colliſion between Church and State, 'twas condemn'd to be burnt by an Arrêt of the Parliament of Paris, March 23^d^ 1640: And the ſame Authority order'd the Author and Printer to be proſecuted. John-Francis de Gondy firſt Archbiſhop of Paris, and his Suffragans meeting together, condemn'd it in May following, and publiſh'd ſeveral Pamphlets againſt the Argument. The Author believing himſelf not ſafe in France, travell'd to Rome, and was well receiv'd there at firſt; but happening to preach upon St. Lewis's Day in 1650. running out in a Panegyrick upon this royal Saint, and intermixing ſome Queſtions upon the Subject of Grace, he was charg'd with Janſeniſm, and had been put in the Inquiſition, if M. de Valencé the French Ambaſſador had not ſhelter'd him. He entreated the Pope that he might have the Liberty to juſtify himſelf: But this Application was to no Purpoſe, for inſtead of granting the Requeſt his Holineſs ſummon'd him publickly to appear at the Court of Inquiſition. Upon theſe Proceedings he printed his Sermon with an Apology, and return'd into France, where he died about the Year 1660. * Memoires du Tems.

HERVE, Archbiſhop of Rheims, was a young Lord belonging to the Court, and Nephew to Hugband. He was conſecrated Archbiſhop of Rheims by the unanimous Conſent of the Biſhops of the Province in the Year 900. He quickly gave Proof of his Capacity for anſwering his Station. His Charity and his Zeal for reſtoring the Diſcipline of the Church made him much eſteem'd. He held ſeveral Provincial Councils where the Repoſe of the Church and State were jointly conſidered, and Proviſion made for the farther Converſion of the Normans who turn'd Chriſtian about this Time. His Regard for this Nation occaſion'd his writing a Letter to Guy Archbiſhop of Rhoan: The Matter is divided into three and twenty Chapters, drawn from the Canons and Papal Decrees concerning the Manner how thoſe ought to be manag'd, who having apoſtatiz'd after Baptiſm, had recollected themſelves, and return'd to the Church. In the Year 909. he held a Council at Troſly, where ſeveral Regulations paſs'd for reviving Diſcipline upon ſecular Eccleſiaſticks and Monks. He held another Council in 911. at the ſame Place, where Count Erleband, who had been excommunicated for ſeizing ſome Church Lands, was abſolv'd. This Archbiſhop aſſiſted Charles the Simple in his March againſt the Enemy in Lorrain, and was the only Perſon of Quality that continu'd firm to this Prince, when the reſt of the French Lords deſerted him. He brought off the King into Rheims, and found Expedients to reſtore him. But not long after, the Lords breaking out into a new Revolt, met at Rheims and choſe Robert for their King. And here Herve made a wrong Step, and crown'd the Uſurper. This Want of Reſolution 'tis likely ſat hard upon his Spirits, for he dy'd four Days after, A. D. 922. Du Chêne in his Genealogy of the Houſe of Châtillon is poſitive that this Prelate was Brother to Odo Lord of Châtillon upon the Marne. * Flodoard, Lib. IV. Cap. 11. Hiſt. Rem. Haymo, in Supplem. Lib. V. Cap. 42. Robert & Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Baronius, in Annal.

HERVETUS (Gentianus) of Olivet near Orleans, Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Canon of Rheims, was born in 1499. and bred to Learning. He aſſiſted Edward Lupſet an Engliſhman in publiſhing Galen's Works, tranſlated into Latin by Thomas Linacer. Afterwards leaving Paris and travelling with Lupſet into England, he had the Care of Sir Arthur Pool's Education, and ſome time forward was invited to Rome by Cardinal Pool to turn ſome Greek Authors into Latin. His extraordinary Learning and the Benigneſs of his Temper, gain'd him the Eſteem and Friendſhip both of Cardinal Pool, and all the eminent Men of Learning in Italy. At his Return into France, he taught publickly in the College at Bourdeaux. He took a ſecond Journey into Italy, was entertain'd in Cardinal Marcello Cervini's Family; and 'twas at this Cardinal's Houſe where he tranſlated moſt of the Greek Fathers into Latin. He attended this Cardinal to the Council of Trent, and made ſome Speeches there. And when this Synod was reviv'd after ſome Diſcontinuance, he went thither with the Cardinal of Lorrain, who made him Canon of Rheims, where he ſpent the reſt of his Life in Study. He died in 1584. Beſides his Tranſlations of a great many Greek Fathers, he wrote a Diſcourſe for reſtoring Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline: And here he takes the ſixth Canon of the Council of Chalcedon for his Ground, in which 'tis decreed that no Clerk ſhall be ordain'd without a Title: He ſpoke a Diſcourſe at the Council of Trent that the Marriages of Children, under the Juriſdiction of their Parents, and contracted without their Conſent, are null: He has two Epiſtles concerning the Reſidence of Biſhops: To which may be added his Controverſial Tracts in French; ſeveral French Verſions of Greek and Latin Authors. His Manner was not proportionably beautiful to his Learning. * Poſſevin, Appar. Sacr. Du Verdier, Biblioth. Franç. la Croix du maine. Biblioth. Franç. Miræus, de Script. XVI. &c. Du Pin.

HESCHAM, Son of Abdalrahman, was the ſecond Caliph of the Family of the Ommiades in Spain. He ſucceeded his Father in the 172^d^ Year of the Hegira, that is, A. D. 788. He drove his two Brothers out of Spain, who ran to Arms againſt him, and forc'd 'em to tranſport themſelves into Africk. In the Year of the Hegira 175. he made great Incurſions into Galicia. In the Year of the Hegira 177. he took Gironne and Narbonne from the Chriſtians; but the French diſlodg'd him from Narbonne: At laſt, he was defeated by Alphonſus King of Galicia and Aſturia, and dyed in the Year of the Hegira 179. * D'Herbelot, Orient. Diction.

HESCHAM II, Son of Hakem II, was the tenth Caliph of the Family of the Ommiades in Spain. He ſucceeded his Father in the 366 Year of the Hegira, that is, A. D. 976. not fully eleven Years old. His Governor, who had the Adminiſtration of Affairs, was one Ebn Amer;

Amer; his Title was Great Chamberlain, and afterwards he was call'd Almanſor upon the Score of the great Victories he gain'd upon the Spaniards, and for his ſuppreſſing ſeveral Inſurrections of the Arabian Rebels. Heſcham, after having reign'd 33 Years under the Direction of his Great Chamberlain, fell into the Hands of one Almahadi, who ſhut him up in a very private Place, ſpread a Report of his being dead, and got another Man buried for him. But ſome time after a ſtrong Party of the Arabians attack'd this Miniſter and reſtor'd Heſcham, who took Care to diſpatch Almahadi in the firſt Place. At ſome Diſtance of Time the Burghers of Toledo revolted, and proclaim'd Obeidallah Son of Almahadi, King: This Revolt encourag'd the Town of Corduba to ſet up Soliman Heſcham's Nephew; inſomuch that he was forc'd to lay down the Scepter, and fall into Africk. Upon this Soliman was own'd by all the Arabians in Spain for their lawful Prince and Caliph. * D'Herbelot, Orient. Diction.

* HESSE: for William the Elder who died in one thouſand five hundred and fifteen in Morery Vol. I. read one thouſand five hundred and five.

HESSELS, Doctor of Divinity of Louvain, was born in 1522. After ſeveral creditable Poſts in Learning, he was made King's Divinity Profeſſor. In 1563. he went to the Council of Trent with Cornelius Janſenius Biſhop of Ghent. Heſſels died of an Apoplex in 1566. forty four Years of Age. His large Catechiſm is his moſt conſiderable Performance. 'Tis not only a brief Expoſition of Catholick Tenets, as the French Supplementer ſays, but a Body, or Collection of Divinity and Morality, extracted from the Fathers, and chiefly from St. Auguſtin. This Work was printed at Louvain, A. D. 1571. Heſſels has likewiſe ſeveral controverſial Tracts extant; viz. Upon the holy Euchariſt: Upon the Invocation of Saints: Upon the Indefectibility of S. Peter's Chair, &c. He wrote againſt Caſſander's Book de Officio Pii Viri, and againſt his Tract for communicating in both Kinds. He defended the Cuſtom of the Roman Churches having the publick Service in Latin, and animadverted upon ſome Lives of the Saints publiſh'd by Molanus at the End of his Martyrology. In fine, Heſſels made a Commentary upon St. Matthew's Goſpel: Upon the firſt Epiſtle to Timothy: Upon the firſt Epiſtle of St. Peter, and upon St. John's Epiſtles: To which may be added his Reflections or Conſiderations upon our Lord's Paſſion, and an Epiſtle upon the bleſſed Virgin's Conception. Theſe are all this Author's printed Works; who, as the French Supplementer continues, was a great Ornament to the Univerſity of Louvain, not only for his Elocution, his Skill in Languages, and the Extent of his Learning, but likewiſe upon the Score of his Judgment and Penetration, his Love for Truth and the Church, his conſtant Application to Study, and the Serviceableneſs of his Works. * Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. Miræus, de Script. Sæcul. XVI. Ghilini, Theat. d'Huom. Letter. &c.

HESSELS ( ), one of the twelve Judges of the Sovereign Council, which the Duke of Alva ſet up in Flanders for trying Criminals; this Heſſels, who was a Flanderkin, was commonly aſleep upon the Bench, and when they awak'd him to give his Opinion, he us'd to rub his Eyes, and cry out in a Slumber, ad Patibulum, ad Patibulum, that is, to the Gallows, to the Gallows. Afterwards Imbiſe and Rihowe, who headed the Mob at Ghent, hang'd this Judge upon a Tree without the Ceremony of a Tryal: It ſeems he had frequently ſworn by his grey Beard, that he intended them the ſame Uſage. * Du Maurier, en la Vie de Guillaume Prince d'Orange.

* HILARY (Saint), born at Poictiers, and Biſhop there. He was bred to Letters and the Pagan Religion. His Reflections upon the Marks of Impoſture in Heatheniſm, led him towards Truth by Degrees; which Beginnings of Improvement were farther carry'd on by reading the holy Scriptures. When he was perfectly inſtructed in the Chriſtian Religion, he was admitted to Baptiſm, his Wife and his Daughter being converted with him: He was conſecrated Biſhop of Poictiers not many Years before his Baniſhment, which happened, A. D. 356. He was a great Champion for the Catholick Doctrine againſt the Arians, maintain'd the Nicene Faith with Strength and Reſolution at the Council of Milan, held A. D. 355; and at the Council of Beziers. A. D. 356. And now by the Intereſt and Application of Saturninus an Arian Biſhop of Arles, he was baniſh'd into Phrygia. And being call'd to the Council of Seleutia, held A. D. 359. he ſtill defended the Nicene Belief. He ſtay'd at Seleucia 'till the Council broke up, and follow'd the Delegates to Conſtantinople; and now perceiving the Weſtern Biſhops had been impos'd on, and the Eaſtern overpower'd, he petition'd the Emperor for an Hearing: But the Arians willing to get rid of ſo powerful an Adverſary, prevail'd with the Emperor to ſend him back into Gaul. Upon his Arrival here, A. D. 360. he conven'd ſeveral Councils for reſtoring the ancient Belief, and in order to condemn the Synods of Ariminum and Seleucia. In the Year 364. he delated Auxentius Biſhop of Milan for an Arian to the Emperor Valentinian; which made this Prelate declare his Belief of the Divinity of our bleſſed Saviour. St. Hilary ſuggeſted to the Emperor that this Profeſſion was without Sincerity: At laſt, having gone thro' a great deal of Fatigue in defending the Catholick Faith, he departed this Life at the End of the Year 367 or the Beginning of the Year 368. The Martyrologies ſet his Feſtival at the 13th of January, tho' 'tis not certain he dy'd that Day. His Works extant are twelve Books upon the Trinity, begun in the Year 346. and finiſh'd in his Exile; a Tract De Synodis wrote during his Baniſhment, A. D. 359; three Books addreſſed to the Emperor Conſtantius: They are written in a Strain of Freedom and Remonſtrance. After his Return from Baniſhment he wrote a Diſcourſe againſt Urſacius and Valens two Arian Biſhops, Part of which are ſtill remaining among his Fragments. Being not ſuffer'd to live at Milan for refuſing to communicate with Auxentius, he wrote a Tract againſt that Biſhop. He wrote Commentaries upon the holy Scripture, almoſt all of 'em extracted from Origen. His Commentaries upon St. Matthew are extant, and Part of thoſe upon the Pſalms. He likewiſe wrote ſeveral Hymns; but his Epiſtle and Hymn to his Daughter Afra ſeem ungenuine. We have loſt his Book againſt Dioſcorus a Phyſician, dedicated to the Præfect Salluſtius; and another Diſcourſe upon the Number 7 inſcrib'd to Fortunatus. Some Writers make him the Author of the Gloria in Excelſis; of the Te Deum; and of the Pange linguâ glorioſi prælium Certaminis; but this is without Proof. This Father's Works have been printed ſeveral times: But the moſt correct and beautiful Edition is that of the Benedictines printed in the Year 1693. Almoſt all the Fathers poſterior to St. Hilary ſpeak in Commendation of him. St. Hierom calls him Latinæ Eloquentiæ Rhodanus, alluding not only to St. Hilary's Country, but to the Character of his Stile, which is as one may ſay, ſtrong and rapid like the River Rhone. * Socrat. Sozomen. Hieron. Præf. in Lib. II. Comment. in Galat. Epiſt. 7. 13. Auguſtin. Lib. I. cont. Julian. Cap. 3. Lib. VI. de Trin. Cap. 10. Athanaſ. Caſſiodor. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV, &c.

HILARY of Arles (Saint) a French Man. Chelidonius depos'd by a Council, appeal'd to Pope Leo I, who conven'd the Synod to try the Appeal. Upon this Hilary follow'd Chelidonius on foot to Rome. And after having paid his Regard to the Tombs of the Apoſtles and Martyrs, he waited upon Pope Leo, treated him with due Reſpect, and humbly beſought him not to alter the cuſtomary Diſcipline of the Church; remonſtrating withal that he had ſeen Biſhops at Rome at the holy Altars, who ſtood cenſur'd in Gaul; that this was a ſcandalous Practice: However, his Buſineſs here was only to pay his Devoirs to his Holineſs, without giving his Vote upon either ſide of the Queſtion; that what he had deliver'd was only by Way of Proteſt, and not with Deſign to proſecute: And that in Caſe his Holineſs refus'd to hearken to him, he ſhould importune him no farther. In ſhort, he declin'd communicating with theſe cenſur'd Biſhops. However afterwards he left nothing unattempted to bring the Pope to a friendly Temper. Firſt he diſpatch'd Ravennius a Prieſt to Rome who was afterwards his Succeſſor. Being diſappointed in this Application, he ſent Nectarius and Conſtantius two Biſhops to negotiate with the Pope: Theſe Prelates, tho' furniſh'd with large Inſtructions, ſolicited without Effect. Auxilius Governor of Rome acquainted Hilary in a Letter, that in Caſe he would relax, he might gain a great deal of his Point; but this Biſhop not thinking it ſafe to make any more Conceſſions, and deſpairing of any good Iſſue from farther Applications, gave himſelf wholly to Prayer and Study, and ſpent the reſt of his Life in Diſcipline and ſelf Denial. Notwithſtanding Pope Leo treated S. Hilary roughly in his Life-time, he commended him for his Piety after his Death. * Gennad. de Vir. Illuſtr. Cap. 69. & 99. Proſper. in Chron. & Lib. II. Cap. 9. de Vitâ contempl. & de Vocatione Gentium. Leo, Epiſt. 87. Ado Viennenſis, in Chron. Baronius in Martyrol. & Annal. Queſnel in Oper Leon. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V. &c.

HILDEBERT DE LAVARDIN, Biſhop of Mans, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Tours in the XI^th^ and twelfth Centuries, ſtudied firſt under Berengarius, and afterwards under St. Hugo of Cluni, who made him a Monk of his own Order. He ſucceeded Hoel in the See of Mans, A. D. 1098, and was before Archdeacon in that Church. He was at firſt diſturb'd by a War which broke out between Helie Earl of Mans, and William Rufus King of England. This Count being taken Priſoner by the King, the Town fell into the Hands of Foulque Earl of Angiers. The King of England ſeiz'd it afterwards. Hildebert adhered to the Earl of Mans, and was inſtrumental in his getting into the Town again. Some time forward he travell'd to Rome to wait upon Pope Paſchall II. where he was well receiv-ed. Soon after his Return he was made Priſoner at Nogent-le-Rotrou. Upon his Inlargement he conſecrated the Church of Mans then newly built, and ſat undiſturb'd 'till the Year 1115, when upon the Death of Guillebert he was tranſlated to the Archbiſhoprick of Tours. And here at firſt he had ſome Conteſt with Lewis the Groſs who ſeiz'd his Temporalties: But he quickly gain'd this Prince's Favour, went on ſmoothly, and dy'd in the Year 1132, having been twenty ſeven Years Biſhop of Mans, and ſix Years Archbiſhop of Tours. This Biſhop has eighty three Epiſtles extant; not to mention thoſe in Dacherius's Spicilegium. They are very well written, and go upon the Subjects of Morality, Diſcipline, and Hiſtory. He likewiſe wrote ſome Poetical Pieces, Sermons and Lives of Saints: All his contemporary Writers mention him with Commendation. Cardinal Baronius and Sirmondus upon a Paſſage in the 27^th^ Epiſtle of Ivo Carnutenſis, charge this Biſhop with Licentiouſneſs; but other Authors have clearly prov'd that the right Reading in Ivo's Epiſtle is Aldebertus, and not Hildebertus. * Bellarmin. de Script. Poſſevin, in Appar. Sacr. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Lat. Lib. II. Cap. 49. Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HILTEN (John), a German Cordelier, living in the latter End of the XV^th^ Century, pretended to raiſe Predictions from the Book of Daniel. Melancthon, who had ſeen the Original, reports that the Author foretold the Papal Power would begin to decline in 1516, that 'twould farther roll down the Deſcent, and never recover its former Heigth: And that about the Year 1600 the Turks would extend their Empire into Italy and Germany. Some will have it that in the Year 1600. Hilten predicted the appearing of a very cruel Perſon; and that in 1606. Gog and Magog would be Maſters of all Europe. After having beſtow'd a great deal of Pains about calculating the End of the World, he fix'd it at laſt to the Year 1651. M. Bayle pretends that Mornay du Pleſſis only pick'd what he thought for his Turn out of theſe Predictions. Hilten thought himſelf bound in Charity to Mankind to publiſh his Prognoſtications, and not to ſmother the Intelligences he had receiv'd from Heaven. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HIMILCO, a famous Carthaginian of a military Profeſſion: He had the Command of a formidable Army againſt the Syracuſians. The Forces were three hundred thouſand Foot, and two thouſand Men of War. He landed in Sicily, inveſted Himera now call'd Termini, and repell'd the beſieged in their firſt Sally. But Gelo, who march'd from Syracuſe at the Head of fifty five thouſand Men, burn'd his Ships, attack'd and routed his Army, and kill'd moſt of his Troops, himſelf being likewiſe ſlain: Thus the Carthaginians were forc'd to beg a Peace in the LXXV^th^ Olympiad, 480 Years before the Incarnation. * Diodorus Siculus Lib. II.

HIN, a Hebrew Meaſure. It contain'd Half a Roman Modius or Buſhel, and weigh'd an hundred and ſixty Ounces, which make ten Pounds Haverdupoize. * Exod. Cap. 29. & 30. Levitic. 21. &c.

HIPIS or Hippis, liv'd in the Reigns of Darius and Xerxes. He is the firſt that wrote the Hiſtory of Sicily, afterwards abridg'd by Myes. His Work was divided into five Books. He likewiſe wrote five Books of Chronicles, and an Account of the Origine of the People of Italy. Suidas cites a Book of his entitled, Argolicks or Argologics, 'tis probable it ſhould be Aſtrologicks, as the Scholiaſt upon Aratus read it; for Plutarch in his Book De Defectu Oraculorum takes notice that Phanias reports that one Petro believ'd there were an hundred and eighty Worlds according to Hippis of Rhegium. Aratus's Scholiaſt cites him under the Hyades; and Stephanus under the Name of the Prælunaries, as the Arcadians were call'd, which may confirm the Conjecture that the Title abovemention'd ſhould be Aſtrologicks. * Du Pin, Univerſal Library of Profane Hiſtorians, Tom. I.

HIPPARCHUS, a Mathematician of Nice according to Strabo, or of Rhodes, as Ptolomy will have it, flouriſh'd in the Reigns of Ptolomy Philometor, and Evergetes, Kings of Egypt. He left ſeveral Obſervations upon the Stars, and a Commentary upon Aratus now extant. Pliny makes frequent mention of Hipparchus with great Commendation: He makes him the next after Thales and Sulpicius Gallus, who laid down a Method for calculating Eclipſes exactly. He admires him for his Skill in computing the Number of all the Stars, and marking their reſpective Magnitude and Situation. Strabo on the other ſide charges this Aſtronomer with going too far in Criticiſm, and affecting Cenſure and Contradiction. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. Lib. II. Strabo, Lib. I. & II. Voſſius, de Scient. Mathem. Cap. 33. Sect. 4.

HIPPOCENTAURS, a Sort of Monſters, half Men and half Horſes, as the Poets and Painters will have 'em. Lucretius notwithſtanding his Poetry would not believe there were ever any ſuch Things: But Plutarch in his Convivium Septem Sapientum tells a Story of a Shepherd's bringing a Child in a Basket newly foaled from a Mare, the upper Part of which had the Shape of a Man, and the lower of an Horſe: moſt of the Company were ſurpriz'd at this Prodigy, and adviſ'd diverting the Omen by a Sacrifice. Thales, who was wiſer than the reſt of theſe Sages, told 'em that the beſt Way of Expiation, and which would prevent ſuch Misfortunes, was to order none but Women to look after the Mares. Pliny, who ſometimes ſeems to ſtrain Truth, ſays poſitively he ſaw an Hippocentaur which was brought to Rome embalm'd in Honey, according to the Cuſtom of that time. Phlego Trallianus reports the ſame thing. St. Hierom deſcribes the Hippocentaur which St. Anthony met in the Deſert when he went in Queſt of Paul the Hermit. The unuſual Sight gave ſomething of Surprize: However, St. Anthony having croſs'd himſelf, ask'd the Monſter where Paul dwelt: The Hippocentaur pointed to his Cell with his Hand, and ran off immediately. That which gave Occaſion to the Mythology of Centaurs, was the Theſſalians near Mount Pelion, who it ſeems were the firſt near that Country who ventur'd to mount an Horſe. This new Spectacle made their ignorant Neighbours fancy them all of a Piece, and that the Man and Horſe grew together. * Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Danet.

HIPPOCRATIA, Feſtivals in Honour of Neptune. The Romans built a Temple to Neptune mounted, and ordered Holidays call'd Hippocratia by the Arcadians, and Conſualia by the Romans. During this Solemnity the Horſes and Mules did no Work, but were led thro' the Streets of Rome richly harneſs'd and trimmed with Flowers. * Antiq. Rom.

HIPPODAMUS of Miletum, Son to Euriphon, drew up a whimſical Plan of a Common-wealth. He would have it conſiſt of ten thouſand Men, ſubdivided into three Claſſes, Artificers, Labourers, and Soldiers. He likewiſe canton'd the Country into three Shares, one for the Prieſts, another for the publick Revenue, and a third for private Property. * Ariſtot. Polit. Lib. II. Cap. 8.

*HIPPOLYTUS (Saint), Biſhop and Martyr. He wrote a great many Commentaries upon the Scripture: For Inſtance, upon the Hexameron, and the reſt of Geneſis, neſis, upon Exodus, the Canticles, the Pſalms, Zachary, Iſaiah, upon part of Ezekiel, upon Daniel, the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Revelations: To which may be added, his Diſcourſes concerning Saul and the Witch of Endor, concerning Antichriſt and the Reſurrection; againſt Hereſy, particularly that of Marcion: His Diſcourſe upon Eaſter, and a great many Homilies mention'd by Euſebius and St. Hierom; beſides ſome others, the Titles of which are cut upon his Statue. The Tract touching the End of the World, of Antichriſt, and the ſecond coming of our Saviour, printed under the Name of Hippolytus, is no genuine Piece; neither does that concerning Antichriſt publiſh'd by Combefis in Greek and Latin, belong to this Author; tho' this laſt Tract is much ancienter than the other. Farther, the Book of Demonſtration againſt the Jews, publiſh'd in Latin by Turrianus, is equally uncertain as to its Author. The ſame Uncertainty may be affirm'd of the Extracts cited by Anaſtaſius Bibliothecarius, of Hippolytus's Sermons upon the Incarnation, againſt the Valentinian Hereticks Hero and Felix, and of the Homily which Voſſius printed with Gregory Thaumaturgus, entitled, of one God in three Perſons, and of the Incarnation, againſt Noetus's Hereſy: However, tho' theſe Works can't be pronounc'd genuine, they are undoubtedly ancient: which is more than can be ſaid of the Lives of the twelve Apoſtles printed by Combefis, and reckon'd to Hippolytus; for this is plainly the Production of a much later Author; and ſo is the Hiſtory of our Saviour's ſeventy two Diſciples. Photius ſaw Hippolytus's Tract againſt Hereſy and his Commentary upon Daniel. St. Hierom, Palladius, and Theodoret cite ſome of Hippolytus's Fragments. Photius reports this Author wrote with Perſpicuity, that his Stile was not charg'd with unneceſſary Ornament, tho' after all, he fell ſhort of the Beauty and Correctneſs of the Attick Manner. That this Biſhop was a Martyr is out of Diſpute; but the time and the Manner of his Suffering is not agreed. Some aſſign his Martyrdom to the Year 235 in the Reign of Maximin, becauſe St. Hierom mentions him as an Author prior to Origen. Others make him live to the Year 250 upon the Score of his Exhortation to Severina, which Lady they pretend is the ſame with the Empreſs Severa, marry'd to the Emperor Philip, who began his Reign in the Year 244. Their other Reaſon for bringing him down ſo far in Time, is his Diſcourſe againſt the Noetians, who according to St. Epiphanius did not appear 'till Philip's Reign. Some Writers are of Opinion he ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Antioch: The Day of his Death is differently regiſter'd in the Martyrologies. But here we are to obſerve there were three Hippolytuſes: The firſt, whoſe Writings are mention'd in the preſent Article, and whoſe Feſtival is ſet to the 22[d] of Auguſt: The two other Hippolytuſes are likewiſe Martyrs, whoſe Feſtival ſtands on the 13[th] of Auguſt; that is, Hippolytus a Martyr at Rome converted by St. Lawrence, A. D. 258, and apprehended ſoon after with his whole Family. His Name ſtands in the old Roman Calendar upon Auguſt the 13[th]: The third Hippolytus was a Roman Prieſt, who ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Oſtia or Porto in the Decian Perſecution. This laſt was ty'd to wild Horſes and pull'd in Pieces: His Martyrdom is deſcrib'd by Prudentius. The Martydom of the firſt of theſe two is taken from the Acts of St. Lawrence, which deſerve no Credit. The Suffering of the laſt is atteſted by Prudentius. 'Tis probable the Biſhop, who makes the Bulk of this Article, was call'd Biſhop of Porto, only upon the Score of his having the ſame Name with him that ſuffer'd at that Town. * Euſeb. in Chron. &. Lib. VI. Hiſt. Cap. 16. Hieron. Cap. 16. Catal. Quæſt. 3. in Damaſ. Epiſt. ad Mag. & Proœm. in Math. Gelaſ. Lib. de duabus Natur. Photius in Biblioth. Cod. 121. 122. De Tillemont, Memoires Eccleſ. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III.

HIRCANUS, Son of Joſeph, Nephew to Onias II. a Jewiſh High Prieſt; that is to ſay, he was Son to Solim's Daughter, Brother to this Onias. Hircanus was a young Man of extraordinary Quickneſs and Capacity. His appearing with ſo early and diſtinguiſhing a Luſtre, drew the Envy and Diſaffection of his ſeven Brothers upon him. His Father ſent him to Alexandria to ſolicit for King Ptolomy's Favour, and congratulate him upon the Birth of his Son: Having receiv'd this Commiſſion, his Father's Steward refus'd to furniſh him with Caſh ſufficient for his Equipage, and the Preſents he was to make the King of Egypt. Hircanus provok'd with this Diſappointment, got the Steward impriſon'd, and kept him confin'd: Inſomuch that at laſt this Steward Arion (for that was his Name) was forc'd to come too, and ſupply Hircanus with ten thouſand Talents. The young Gentleman thus plentifully provided, was particularly well receiv'd by the King of Egypt and his Queen Cleopatra. At his firſt Audience he preſented their Majeſties with an hundred Boys, and as many Girls, each of which coſt him a Talent; every one of 'em having a Talent in their Hand to preſent the young Prince. Ptolomy was wonderfully ſurpriz'd with ſo rich and unuſual a Magnificence. Thus Hircanus wrought ſtrongly into the King's Favour, receiv'd all the Marks of Friendſhip and Eſteem, which could be expected, and was richly preſented at his taking leave. This honourable Reception rais'd the Envy of his Brothers: Theſe unhappy Men were puſh'd ſo far by their Paſſion, as to way-lay him in his Return with a Deſign to murder him: But he defended himſelf ſo well, that two of 'em were left dead upon the Place, and the other five were forc'd to fly with all their Retinue. Upon his coming to Jeruſalem, and perceiving his Father diſguſted at his ſpending ſo much Money, he retir'd beyond Jordan, and built a Fort at a Place call'd Tyri near Eſſedon upon the Frontiers of Arabia: From this Place of Strength he made frequent Incurſions upon the Neighbourhood, and carry'd on a Sort of War for ſeven Years. But upon the Death of Seleucus King of Syria, he was ſo apprehenſive of falling into the Hands of his Succeſſor Antiochus Epiphanes, and being call'd to Account for the Ravage he had made in Arabia and Syria, that he kill'd himſelf. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XII. Cap. 4. & 5.

HISTO, an old Town within new Caſtille in Spain. 'Tis nine Leagues from Cuença to the South Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

HITA, an old Town of new Caſtille in Spain. It ſtands upon the River Henares, between Aſcala de Henares and Siguença, nine Leagues from each. * Baudrand.

HOANG, or the Yellow River, which is the biggeſt in China. M. Witſen, in his large Map of great Tartary, makes it riſe from a Lake which lies about 15 Leagues from the Lake Chiamay to the Eaſt: The River Hoang runs from the Weſt to the Eaſt thro' the Kingdom of Tangut and the India beyond the Ganges as far as China; from hence bending its Courſe to the North Eaſt, it parts that Diviſion of the Kingdom of Tangut, which lies to the Weſt from the Province of Xenſi, up to the famous Wall of China. Afterwards it croſſes Part of Xenſi, paſſes thro' the Wall of China, and runs into the Deſert of Xamo in Tartary. Here it winds towards the South, repaſſes the Wall, parts Xanſi from Xenſi, waſhes the Provinces Honan, Xantung, and Nanquin, and falls into the Gulph of Nanquin. The Chineſe have made a Communication between this River and the Gulph of Cang: 'Tis done by making a great Canal, which begins in the Province of Nanquin, traverſes that of Xantung, and Part of the Province of Peking, and joins the farther End of the Gulph of Cang. * Witſen.

HOE (Matthias), a Lutheran Miniſter born at Vienna in 1580. He ſtudied Divinity at Wirtemberg, and in 1602. was invited to the Court of Saxony to preach before the Elector. The next Year he had the Direction of ſome Churches in the Voigtland; after he had held this Poſt eight Years he was ſent to Prague, and made Superintendant of the High Dutch Churches. Two Years after he was recall'd to the Elector of Saxony's Court, and rais'd to the Station of an Eccleſiaſtical Counſellor, and firſt Preacher to his Highneſs. Hoé was equally an Enemy to Roman Catholicks and Calviniſts. 'Twas he that negotiated the League which the Elector of Saxony and the Landgrave of Heſſe made with the Emperor againſt Sweden. Hoé wrote a great many Books, ſome in Latin, others in High Dutch; among which he publiſh'd a Tract upon the Revelations: 'Tis violently ſatyrical againſt the Church of Rome; but tho' he call'd this Communion the Church of Antichriſt, he throws the ſame Imputation upon the Calviniſtic Sect. He has likewiſe publiſh'd an Expoſition upon the Pſalms, and a Book, entitled, the Popiſh Laby- rinth. He dy'd in 1645. * Herman Witte, Memor. Theol. Renovat. Spizelius, in Templo Honoris.

HOEL-DA, a Welch Prince, who in the Year 914 conven'd the chief of his Subjects, among which 150 were Eccleſiaſticks. The Place where they met was call'd the White Houſe upon the Taf: Here having repeal'd the old Laws of the Country, he paſs'd new ones, call'd from his Name the Laws of Hoel-Da. There are ſome Manuſcript Copies of theſe Regulations both in Latin and Welch; but afterwards theſe Laws were partly alter'd by King Edward I, and partly by Henry VIII. * Spelman. Gloſſar. & Concil. Tom. I.

HOEL, natural Son of Alain call'd Twiſted-Beard Duke of Bretagne: This Prince after a long Conteſt with Conan for the Duchy of Bretagne was at laſt aſſaſſinated by a Soldier, A. D. 959. Guerec, his Fellow Baſtard Brother, was poyſoned at the ſame time with the Surgeon's Launcet, who let him Blood. * Argentré, Hiſtoire de Bretagne. Mezeray, in the Reigns of Lotharius and Lewis the Groſs.

HOEL, ſucceeded Conan Duke of Bretagne, whoſe Siſter he married. In the Year 1148. another Hoel, whom Conan the Groſs diſclaim'd being his Son, diſputed the Duchy of Bretagne with Eudes Earl of Penthiévre, who had ſeiz'd it in Right of his Lady, Bertha, Daughter to Conan laſt mention'd. * Argentré, Hiſtoire de Bretagne. Mezeray's Hiſtory of France.

HOFMAN (Melchior), a plain Handycraft'sman, who ſet up for a Preacher in Livonia, Saxony, and Holſtein. The King of Denmark ſettled him at Kiel notwithſtanding Luther's Remonſtrance. He preach'd Zuinglianiſm and Fanaticiſm, and entertain'd his Audience with the Building of the Tabernacle, the Viſions of the Revelations, and ſuch myſtical Subjects. He pretended the Day of Judgment would happen in the Year 1534. Freherus, Schuldorpius and ſome other Lutheran Miniſters, endeavouring to confute him, he gave 'em a rough and angry Reply. The King of Denmark, to prevent the ill Conſequences of theſe Diſputes, had a Conference held in 1529; where Hoffman being baffled, and perſiſting in his Whimſies, was expell'd Holſtein. From hence he ſtroll'd to Strasburg, and making a great many Proſelytes there, remov'd to Embden, where he continu'd his Courſe of Fanaticiſm. His Diſciples gave out he was the Prophet Elias, who was to appear before the General Judgment. One of 'em foretold he ſhould be impriſon'd at Strasburg, and diſcharg'd within ſix Months. The Matter of Fact holds thus far, that he return'd to Strasburg, was apprehended there in the Year 1532, came out of Priſon in the Year 1533. to hold a Conference with the Lutheran Miniſters; but then he was remanded to Confinement with one Polterman, who call'd himſelf Enoch. And here he dyed in Goal, notwithſtanding the ſanguine Predictions of his Diſciples. His chief Hereſies were, 1. That the Word was not united to any Fleſh taken from the bleſſed Virgin, becauſe all Fleſh is polluted: 2. That there is but one Nature in our bleſſed Saviour: 3. That the natural Freedom of the Will, is a Principle of ſufficient Force to procure Salvation: 4. That Pædobaptiſm is the Devil's Invention. * Mollerus, Iſagoge ad Hiſtoriam Cherſoneſi Cimbricæ. Frederic Spanheim, de Orig. & Progreſſu Anabapt.

* HOHENLOE or Holach, an ancient Family: They were Counts of the Empire, and of the firſt Rank of that Quality in the Circle of Franconia. The Counts of Hohenloe are related to the beſt Houſes in Germany. They pretend to draw their Genealogy from Italy, where they carried the Title of Alta Fiamina, or Flaminii: This ſeems to agree with the Name Hohenloe, which ſignifies the ſame Thing. Theſe Counts are ſeiz'd of a large Tract of rich Country, between the Duchy of Wirtemberg and Franconia; and were it not for their being divided into ſeveral Branches would be very powerful. At preſent their Houſe runs out into the Subdiviſions of Nevenſtein, Valbourg, Fedelbach, Lauguembourg, and Schelingsfurt. * Louis du May, preſent State of the Empire. Heiſs, Hiſtory of the Empire.

HOHENZOLLERN, an old Caſtle in Suabia, built upon the Top of a Mountain: 'Tis furniſh'd with a Garriſon, one Part of which belongs to the Prince of Hohenzollern, and the other ſwears Allegiance to the Emperor. Some time after it was demoliſh'd by Henrietta Counteſs of Wirtemberg and Mont Belliard; 'twas rebuilt in 1460. by Jocelin Nicholas Count of Hohenzollern; and here, Philip Duke of Burgundy; Albert Elector of Brandenbourg; Albert Duke of Auſtria, and Charles Marquiſs of Baden, laid the firſt Stone: This was done with great Solemnity, theſe Princes making uſe of a Hod, a Trowel and Hammer all Silver. The Lords of this illuſtrious Family are extracted from the ſame Stock with the Marquiſſes of Brandenbourg, and draw their Genealogy from Eitel-Frederic, and his Wife Elizabeth Daughter of Adalbert Count of Hapsbourg, and Siſter to the Emperor Rodolphus I, who were living in the Year 1252. The Counts of Hohenzollern are Hereditary Chamberlains to the Emperor, ſince the Reign of Maximilian I, who to reward Eitel-Frederic II. for publick Services, ſettled this Office upon himſelf and his Deſcendants. Farther, this Houſe being a Branch of that of Brandenbourg, the Chief is Vice-Chamberlain to the Empire, and gives the Emperor the Baſon when he eats in State, if the Elector of Brandenbourg happens to be abſent. Eitel-Frederic Count of Hohenzollern was made a Prince of the Empire in the Dyet at Ratisbon, A. D. 1623. Theſe Princes belong to the Circle of Suabia. * Heiſs, Hiſtory of the Empire. Imhoff, Notitia Imperii.

HOLDEN, an Engliſhman, after having read publickly in ſeveral Univerſities, came to Paris, and commenc'd Doctor in Divinity in the Year 1646. He dy'd in 1662. and was a Perſon of Probity and Learning. He wrote a Book, entitled, Analyſis Fidei: This Performance, tho' ſmall in Bulk, is comprehenſive in the Matter: He gives a Reſolution of the Chriſtian Faith (according to the Opinion of the Roman Catholick Divines) into its Principles and Motives, and applies his Principles to controverſial Queſtions. At the End of this Tract there's a ſmall Diſcourſe of the ſame Author upon Schiſm, where he handles the Subject of Schiſm in general, and likewiſe with a particular Regard to the Proteſtant Schiſm. In the ſecond Edition there's a Letter of Holden's concerning Uſury; where he makes Uſury conſiſt preciſely in taking of Profit for the Uſe of a Thing convey'd to the Poſſeſſion of another, and which grows worſe, and ſuffers ſome Conſumption by the uſing. In 1656. he wrote two Letters to M. Arnauld, where he declares for Efficacious Grace, and goes into the Sentiment of the Thomiſts. This Divine printed ſhort marginal Notes upon the New Teſtament: They go moſtly upon the literal Senſe. Holden, as M. Du Pin deſcribes him, argues with Strength and Method, is clear and categorical in his Manner, and exact in his Definitions and Diviſions. He ſtrikes out a Plan, and treats his Subject in a Manner very different from other Scholaſtic and Controverſial Divines. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

HOLSTENIUS (Lucas), of Hamburgh, travell'd into France, and gain'd a great Reputation there. He quitted this Country, took a Journey to Rome, and ſettled in Cardinal Francis Barbarini's Family, who made him a Canon in St. Peter's Church, and recommended him to the Pope, who made him Library Keeper of the Vatican. In 1655. he was ſent to meet the Queen of Sweden, and receiv'd her Profeſſion of the Roman Catholick Belief at Inſpruck. He dy'd at Rome Feb. 2d 1661. being ſixty five Years of Age. He left his Books to Cardinal Barbarini, who ſet up a Marble Tomb for him. Holſtenius was very knowing in Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Hiſtory, had a nice Taſte for Criticiſm, and was very clear and correct in his Manner. His Reputation ran high throughout Europe. 'Tis true he was no Voluminous Writer; but his Diſſertations and Notes upon Authors are written with Judgment and well finiſh'd: Moſt Part of 'em were publiſh'd after his Death, or inſerted in the Works of ſome of his Friends. In the Year 1638, he publiſh'd the Moral Sentences of Demophilus, Democrates and Secundus in Greek, with a Latin Tranſlation. In 1651. he publiſh'd Chriſtianus Ranzovius's Letter to Calixtus a Lutheran Miniſter, in which he lays down the Motives of his turning Roman Catholick. About twenty Years backward in 1630. he printed Pythagoras's Life written by Porphyry, with a Diſſertation upon the Life of Porphyry and his Writings, together with Obſervations upon Pythagoras's Life. Holſtenius's Notes upon Euſebius Cæſarienſis's Book againſt Hierocles, were printed at Paris with Euſebius's Works.

He was preparing an Edition of the Codex Regularum or Monaſtick Rules of St. Bennet of Aniana in Languedoc, which he deſign'd to improve with Notes, Diſſertations, Prefaces, and a Gloſſary, but Death prevented his finiſhing this Work: 'Twas printed at Rome in 1662, and at Paris the Year after with few or no Notes. The ſame Year a Collection in two Parts, of Canons, and Acts of Councils, of Popes Letters, and other Eccleſiaſtical Records, collected and put in Order by Holſtenius, with his Notes upon 'em, was printed at Paris. And here Henry Valeſius publiſh'd the Acts of St. Perpetua and St. Felicitas, which Holſtenius had tranſcrib'd from a Manuſcript at Mont-Caſſin. Ruinart afterwards inſerted theſe Acts in his Acta Martyrum Sincera. His Notes upon Charles de St. Paul's, Cluverius, and Ortelius's Geography, lately printed at Amſterdam, were firſt printed at Rome in 1666. The Expoſition of the Nicene Creed made by Theodorus of Ancyra againſt Neſtorius, which Holſtenius diſcover'd, and left amongſt his Papers, was printed at Rome. Allatius has inſerted in his Symmicta two of Holſtenius's Diſſertations; one upon the Abyſſin's receiving the holy Euchariſt in one Kind, and the other upon the River Sabbatarius. Labbeé at the End of his 13th Volume of his Councils has thrown in a Diſcourſe of this Author's againſt the Council of Baſil. Henry Valeſius, at the End of his Edition of Theodoret's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, has inſerted three of Holſtenius's Diſſertations, two of which relate to the Council of Nice; and the third goes upon the Reaſons Syneſius gave for his declining the Epiſcopal Character. And in fine, two little Tracts of Holſtenius concerning the Manner of adminiſtring, and the Form of Confirmation us'd in the Greek Church; both printed in 1668. with the poſthumous Works of Morinus. There are likewiſe a great many of Holſtenius's Letters in a Collection of Letters publiſh'd by Father Simon with Morinus's Life, entitled, Les Antiquités de l'Egliſe Orientale. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

HOLZAUSER (Bartholomew), Founder of the Order of the Clerks who live in common call'd Barthelemites, was born in Germany in 1613. He made a great Progreſs in Philoſophy and Divinity at the Univerſity of Ingolſtad, where he commenc'd Doctor in 1640; the ſame Year he went to Saltzbourg to form his Society of Barthelemites. He was Vicar General to the Biſhop of Chiemſée: The Elector of Mentz invited him to bring this Order into his Dioceſe, and for his Encouragement made him Dean of Bingen near Mentz, where he continu'd 'till his Death, which happen'd in May 1658. Pope Innocent XI. confirm'd this Congregation in 1680. They have three Sorts of Houſes belonging to 'em; Seminaries for the Inſtruction of young Clerks, Parſonage Houſes for benefic'd and other Prieſts, and Houſes to receive old People paſt their Labour. This Order is ſettled in a great many German Towns, and in Spain and Poland. * Conſtitut. & Exercit. Spirit. Cleric. in Comm. vivent.

HOMBER AM FLAUM, a Town in the Lower Langraviate of Heſſe in Germany. It ſtands upon a ſmall River four Leagues from the Town of Marpourg to the Eaſt, and three from Newſtad to the South. Homber is fortify'd with a Caſtle, and belongs to the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel. * Maty, Diction.

HOMBLINE (Saint), St. Bernard's Siſter, and born in the Year 1092. Her Father marry'd her to a young Nobleman related to the Ducheſs of Lorrain. This Lady happening to go to Clairvaux, to make a Viſit to St. Bernard and the reſt of his Fraternity, they refus'd to ſee her becauſe her Equipage and Retinue were rich and pompous. One Andrew a Monk, who happening to be at the Gate, reproach'd her for her Manner of living: She told him ſhe deſign'd to reform, and came thither for that Purpoſe. Upon this St. Bernard appear'd, and made her paſs her Word to retire from the World. Two Years after, in the Year 1124, her Husband gave her Leave to turn Nun: And thus being at Liberty ſhe took the Veil in the Nunnery of Billette, in the Dioceſe of Landres; where ſhe went thro' the cuſtomary Monaſtick Diſcipline 'till her Death, which happen'd about ſeventeen Years after. * Guill. de S. Thierri, Vie de S. Bernard. Annal. de Cîteaux.

HOMER or Chomer, the largeſt Hebrew Meaſure. It held as much as the Greek Chorus, that is to ſay, ten Ephahs or Roman Amphoraes, which make 240 Paris Pints. It weighs ſix hundred Paris Pounds, or 9600 Ounces. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

HOMMAGE, Homagium & Hominium, a Feudal Term deriv'd from Homo. 'Tis a Submiſſion the Vaſſal or Tenant makes to his Lord to ſhew his Dependance: And here to give the better Aſſurance of his Acknowledgment and Fidelity, he gives the Lord an Oath. Hommage both in the Term and Thing was unknown to the ancient Romans, this Cuſtom not coming up 'till the Goths, and other Northern Barbarians overrun the Empire. 'Twas then the Language and Practices of Fiefs and Hommages began; and they call'd him a Vaſſal, Man or Tenant, whom his Lord put in Poſſeſſion of ſome Land, to hold of him, and deſcend to the Heirs of the Tenant. At firſt the Conditions and Services the Vaſſal was oblig'd to, were pretty ſhocking and tireſome. The Form of the Oath anciently taken in England, and common to moſt other Nations was this; whoever was to be infeof'd was bound to make his Appearance before the Lord, without a Sword or other Arms: And here he was to kneel to the Lord bareheaded, to cloſe his Hands in a ſupplicating Manner, which the Lord ſitting was to take between his own; and in this Poſture of Submiſſion, the Vaſſal was to pronounce the following Form, Devenio Homo veſter ab hac die in poſterum, de vita, de membro, & de terreno honore, verus & fidelis vobis ero, & fidem vobis præſtabo, ob terras, quas à vobis teneo, ſalvâ fide Domino noſtro Regi & Hæredibus ſuis: in Engliſh thus, I become your Man, from this Day forth for Life, for Member, and for worldly Honour, and ſhall owe you my Faith, for the Land I hold of you, ſaving the Faith that I owe to our Sovereign Lord the King, and to mine other Lords. Afterwards the Lord kiſſes the Vaſſal, who then riſing takes the Oath of Fidelity. This Ceremony of putting the Vaſſal's Hands between the Lord's, ſignifies Countenance and Protection on the Lord's Part, and Submiſſion and Reſpect on the Tenant's. The Vaſſal is oblig'd to do Hommage but once in his Lifetime, notwithſtanding he may have ſeveral Lords in that Period. It can't be done by Proxy, but in the proper Perſons both of Tenant and Lord: The Ceremony is publickly perform'd, and commonly in the Lord's Mannor-Houſe or Palace. For this Reaſon Philip the Fair King of France refus'd to receive the Homage of Edward III. King of England by Proxy: 'Twas to be done for the Duchy of Guienne, and for the Earldoms of Ponthieu and Montreuil: King Edward therefore did this Service in Perſon at Amiens, A. D. 1328: He appear'd here with a pompous Equipage, and took the Oath to Philip de Valois. However, in ſome Caſes this Rigour was relax'd. As to Hommage to be done by Eccleſiaſticks, there have formerly been great Conteſts upon this Head. Pope Urban II. in a Synod held at Rome, A. D. 1099. excommunicated thoſe who did Hommage for their Biſhopricks to ſecular Princes. This Controverſy ran high with the Engliſh in the Reign of Henry I; however, at laſt Pope Paſcal thought fit to come to a Temper, and make ſome Advances towards gratifying the King. For tho' he would not yield up the Point of Inveſtitures, yet he diſpens'd ſo far as to give the Biſhops and Abbots leave to do Hommage for their Temporalties. Lewis the Groſs likewiſe King of France exempted Godfry Biſhop of Bourdeaux from doing Hommage. But a great while before this time we meet with a Form in which the Biſhops did their Hommage in Aſſemblies of their own Order: 'Tis recited by Haymo (Lib. V. Cap. 24.) in theſe Words, Ego Hincmarus, Eccleſiæ Laudunenſis Epiſcopus, Seniori meo Carolo R. ſic fidelis & obediens ero, ſicut Homo ſuo Seniori, &c. eſſe debet. Liege Hommage is that which is paid only to the King upon the Score of his Sovereignty, and which ties the Subject to the King's Perſon, the Word Liege being deriv'd from Ligare, which ſignifies to tie: And wheras other Hommages determine by throwing up the Lands which require 'em, Liege Hommage on the contrary cannot be diſclaim'd or renounc'd by any Subject. * Bracton. Lib. II. Cap. 35. Eadmer, Hiſt. Novor. Spelman, Gloſſar. Archæol. Roſenthal, de Feud. Cap. 6. Concluſ. 85. & Sequ. Nichol. Myler. in Tractat de Princip. & Stat. Imper. Cap. 38 per tot. Coke, Inſtit. upon Littleton.

HONOLSTIN, a ſmall Town with a Caſtle that commands it. It ſtands in the Electorate of Tréves: 'Tis

'Tis the chief Town of one of the Bailliages, and ſtands about a League from Weldentz. * Maty, Diction.

HONT (le Hont), is the Weſtern Mouth of the Scheld. It reaches from the ſmall Town Sandyliet to Fluſhing between Zeland and Dutch Flanders. 'Twas formerly no more than a Canal made by the Emperor Otho II. in the Year 980. But happening to overflow in the Year 1377, and ſwallowing up a great many Villages, is now become a Sort of Gulph, thro' which moſt of the Scheld falls into the German Ocean. * Maty, Diction.

HONTORST (Gerard), was reckon'd one of the beſt Painters of his Time. He was born at Utrecht in 1592. ſtudied firſt under Blomart, and afterwards travell'd to Rome; where having ſpent ſome time in drawing, he practis'd upon Night Pieces with ſuch Application and Succeſs, that no Perſon hitherto is thought to exceed him. At his Return to Utrecht he painted Hiſtory. He taught the Queen of Bohemia's Children, the Prince Palatine and Prince Rupert to deſign and paint. Charles I. King of England invited him to London, where he painted a great many Pieces for this Prince. At his coming back to Holland he painted Poetical Stories for the Prince of Orange in ſeveral of his Palaces; particularly at his Houſe call'd La Maiſon du bois, a League and an half from the Hague. * De Piles, Abrégé de la vie des Peintres.

HOOCHSTRATEN, a conſiderable Town with a good Caſtle and a large Juriſdiction in the Country. 'Tis in the Spaniſh Part of Brabant upon the Mercke, four Leagues above Breda to the North. * Maty, Diction.

* HOOPER. For Biſhop Latimer, who had been at Variance with him about Ceremonies in Morery Vol. I, read Biſhop Ridley.

HOPHRA, King of Egypt, call'd Vafres by the Septuagint, and Apries by Herodotus; he was Son to Pſammis and Grandſon to Necho, who kill'd Joſiah King of Judah. Clemens Alexandrinus relates that Nebuchadnezzar took Jeruſalem in the ſecond Year of this Egyptian Prince. Some will have it that Hophra was the laſt King that carry'd the Name of Pharaoh. For Amaſis ſet up by Nebuchadnezzar never took the Name of Pharaoh, poſſibly becauſe he was a Vaſſal of the Chaldæans, as Genebrard and Torniel will have it. But let this be as it will, Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus affirm that this Hophra was made Priſoner by Amaſis, and put into the Hands of the Chaldæans, that is, he was delivered up to Nebuchadnezzar, who had him ſtrangled. Some are of opinion that Hophra mention'd by the Prophet Jeremy was this Apries. He began his Reign in the Year of the World 3427. * Jeremy xliv. ℣. 30. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

HORLOGE DU PALAIS, is the firſt great Clock made at Paris. King Charles V. call'd the Wiſe, had it fix'd on the Tower of his Palace by Henry de Vic, who came at this Prince's Inſtanee from Germany: The Reaſon why Vic was ſent for, was becauſe at this time of day there was never a Clock-maker at Paris capable of this Performance. This Clock ſtrikes at publick Rejoycings, as at the Birth of the Princes of the Blood, the Proclamations of Peace, &c. It ſtrikes likewiſe at the King's Death, &c. * Regitres du Parlement, 1451.

HORN (Guſtavus), a Swediſh Marſhal much eſteem'd by the King Guſtavus Adolphus, who in the Year 1632. ſent him to treat an Alliance with France. He aſſiſted with the other Ambaſſadors in drawing the Articles. At the Battle of Leipſick, Guſtavus gave him the Command of the left Wing, where he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf handſomely, and had a Share in gaining the Victory. Afterwards he was beaten, and forc'd to retreat, by General Tilly; but being reinforc'd by Bannier he defeated ſix Bavarian Companies of Foot beyond the Danube, and took all their Baggage. After this, he took Pappenheim by Storm, made himſelf Maſter of Neumark in the Upper Palatinate, forc'd Bibrac, brought Kempten and Memmingen to a Surrender, and after theſe Succeſſes was taken Priſoner in the Battle at Norlingen, A. D. 1634. He ſurviv'd this Misfortune but a ſhort time. * Le Blanc, Hiſt. de Baviere. Loccenius, Hiſtor. Suevica.

HORNES, one of the moſt ancient and noble Families in the Low Countries; Butkens, an Hiſtorian of unqueſtionable Credit, gives an honourable Account of 'em. " The Family of the Hornes, ſays he, may be " reckon'd amongſt the Nobility of the firſt Claſs, up- " on the Score of their Antiquity, Power, and Al- " liances: Theſe three Advantages make 'em equal " to ſome Sovereign Houſes. And 'tis certain that the " Lords of Hornes have for a long time held their Ter- " ritories without paying any Acknowledgment or Ho- " mage.

The Country, which is the Earldom of Hornes, lies to the Weſt of Gelderland along the Meuſe, and gave its Name to this Family. They were Sovereigns of the Towns of Wert, and Nedewert, &c. But at preſent they have no Marks of Sovereignty remaining, excepting ſome Pieces of Money ſtamp'd with their Effigies, which is ſtill currant in the Country of Liege. Giles a Monk of Orval in his Annals of the Biſhops of Liege reports, " That in the Year 1071. Conrad Earl of " Hornes, Henry Biſhop of Liege, Albert Earl of Na- " mur, Henry his Brother, Conrard Earl of Luxembourg, " Henry Earl of Limbourg, Arnold Earl of Los, and " Henry Earl of Louvain made a joint Edict againſt Ho- " micides, Highwaymen, and Aſſaſſins. Thus it appears this Houſe made Edicts in the eleventh Century. 'Twas likewiſe probably well diſtinguiſh'd in the preceding Centuries: But the Normans, as every Body knows, making great Ravages about the Meuſe, burning Churches and Repoſitories of Records, deſtroy'd the Memoirs for Hiſtory, and made the Account of former times but lame and imperfect.

Butkens reports that in the Year 1106. the Emperor Henry V. diſſeis'd the Duke of Limbourg of the Duchy of Brabant, and made a Grant of it to Godfrey Earl of Louvain.

Theſe Proceedings of the Emperor brought on a War between theſe two Princes, the neighbouring Potentates engaging themſelves in the Conteſt. William I. Count Hornes, &c. went into the Intereſt of the Earl of Louvain Duke of Brabant. Butkens, without going much thro' the Detail of this War, takes notice that William Count Hornes was beſieg'd in his Town of Hornes, that the Earl of Louvain and Duke of Brabant came to his Relief, and that in Acknowledgment of this Aſſiſtance, he reſign'd the Sovereignty of his Territories, and held them of the Duchy of Brabant. The remaining Hiſtory of this Family conſiſting moſtly in Genealogy, and brought down to the Year 1703. is too long and foreign to be inſerted.

HORTENSIUS (Quintus), Son to the Orator, was ſo licentious at firſt that his Father was going to diſinherit him. 'Tis probable therefore he mended his Manners, if the Hiſtory of him holds that he was Proconſul of Aſia, and went into the Intereſt of Brutus and Caſſius. He was taken Priſoner at the Battle of Philippi, executed by Mark Antony's Order, and made a Sacrifice to the Manes of C. Antonius. He is ſuppos'd to be Father to Quintus Hortenſius Corbio, who was a Scandal to his Family by his Libertiniſm; another of Quintus's Sons was Marcus Hortenſius Hortalus, who ſunk ſo deep into Poverty, that unleſs Auguſtus had given him a little Money, he could not have married. Tiberius was not ſo liberal, for when Hortulus was diſtreſs'd with ſtreight Circumſtances, and a numerous Family, this Emperor had the ill Nature to let him ſtarve, notwithſtanding he was recommended by the Senate.

HORTENSIUS (Martin), born at Delft in Holland, and Mathematick Profeſſor at Amſterdam, would have gone a great way in his Profeſſion, had he not been taken off by Death in the Flower of his Age in the Year 1639. In his Preface prefix'd to a Book of Philip Lansbergius, which he tranſlated into Latin; in this Preface Hortenſius makes ſtrong Objections to Tycho-Brahé's Syſtem, which ſhews his great Progreſs in Aſtronomy. This Book of Lansbergius is entitled Commentationes in Motum Terræ diurnum & annuum, & in verum aſpectabilis Cœli Typum: 'Twas printed at Middelburg, A. D. 1630. Hortenſius likewiſe tranſlated William Blaeuw's Aſtronomical Inſtitution, and wrote an original Diſſertation De Mercurio ſub Sole viſo & Venere inviſa dedicated to Gaſſendus; with an Anſwer to Kepler's Prolegomenon to his Almanack, A. D. 1624. Gaſſendus's Letters to Hortenſius ſhew how great a Value that Aſtronomer had for him. There are ſome Speeches of his extant; one, De Utilitate & Dignitate Matheſeos, and another De Oculo ejuſque Præſtantiâ. After all, Deſcartes does not ſpeak to his Advantage: As to the publick Profeſſors, ſays he, there is not one of 'em that underſtands my Geometry, I mean, neither Golius, much leſs Hortenſius, who has not gone far enough in Mathematicks for that Purpoſe. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HORVAT (John), Governor of Croatia, put Elizabeth Queen of Hungary to Death, A. D. 1386; but being afterwards taken Priſoner by the Emperor Sigiſmund, his Empreſs Mary, Daughter to this Queen, prevail'd with her Husband to tie him to a Gibbet at Five Churches in Hungary, where after having been roughly handled, he was quartered in Terrorem, moſt of his Accomplices being beheaded. * Bonfinius, Lib. II. Decad. 3.

HORUS, Son of Iſis; 'twas under this Name the Egyptians ador'd the Sun. Some Authors make him King of Aſſyria, and a celebrated Philoſopher, that he diſtinguiſh'd the Seaſons of the Year, the Days and the Hours, which were call'd Horæ from him. Some Writers are of Opinion that Harpocrates is likewiſe the ſame pretended Deity with the Sun and Horus. * Danet.

HOSPITAL, a Place where the Poor are entertained and ſupported. In the earlieſt Ages of Chriſtianity the Biſhop had the Care of all the Poor, and directed Proviſion for Widows, Strangers, Orphans and the ſick. Afterwards, when the Church had ſettled Revenues, a fourth Part was aſſign'd to the Poor; and for their better Convenience, Houſes, now call'd Hoſpitals, were built on Purpoſe to receive 'em. Prieſts and Deacons had the Management of the Eſtate, and the Government of the Place, but within the Reſerve of giving Account to the Biſhop. The Founders of ſome of theſe Hoſpitals gave the Government of 'em to Monks or Nuns, and exempted them from the Juriſdiction of their Biſhop; and by this Encroachment, the Biſhops were barr'd the Right of Inſpection and Superintendance of theſe Houſes, which originally belong'd to their Character. Thus, when the Force of Religion decay'd, and Diſcipline was relax'd, the Clergy, who had the Government of Hoſpitals, converted 'em to Benefices, not giving an Account to the Dioceſan, but putting the greateſt Part of the Income in their own Pockets; inſomuch that the Deſign of the Founders was defeated. For this Reaſon the Council of Vienne forbad the giving Hoſpitals under the Title of Benefices to ſecular Clerks; and decreed that the Management of 'em ſhould be put into the Hands of Laymen of Capacity and Fortune, who ſhould be oblig'd to take a Guardian's Oath, and give an Account to their reſpective Ordinaries: And all this with a Clauſe of ſaving the Rights of the Military Orders, and other Hoſpitalers. This Decree was executed, and confirm'd by the Council of Trent, who gave the Ordinaries the entire Inſpection or Superintendance of the Hoſpitals. The Ordinance or Regulation at Blois makes a ſupplemental Proviſion, and decrees that the Adminiſtrators of Hoſpitals ſhall neither be Eccleſiaſticks, Lay Gentlemen, nor Officers; but plain Burghers, who might without Difficulty be obliged to paſs their Account. The Founders are to name the Adminiſtrators, who were to continue in their Office but three Years. * Fleury, Manners of the Chriſtians, &c.

HOSSCH, or Hoſſchius (Sidronius), a Flemiſh Jeſuit, born at Marke in the Dioceſe of Ypres, A. D. 1596. He got the Reputation of a conſiderable Author in the XVII^th^ Century by his Latin Poems, which were collected after his Death, and printed at Antwerp in the Year 1656. They make ſix Books of Elegies; one Sylva, conſiſting of Odes; ſome Eclogues, and other ſmaller Compoſitions. All his Poems are written with great Correctneſs and Delicacy. He had the Talent to write with Propriety and Elevation, two excellent Qualities which ſeldom go together. Pope Alexander VII, who was a good Poet himſelf, had a great Value for Sidronius's Poems. The Panegyrical Elegy upon the Poet Caſimir Sarbiewski a Jeſuit, is one of Hoſſchius's moſt beautiful Productions. He dy'd at Tongres September the 4^th^ 1653. * Olaus Borrichius, Diſſert. 3. de Poet Latin. Ren. Rapin, Reflexions ſur la Poëtique. Baillet Jugement des Savans ſur les Poëtes modernes.

HOSSEIN (Baſſhaw), who from a Governor of the Town Baſſera or Balſora for his own Nation, ſet up for a Sovereign of the Place, and commanded there independently for ſome time, and maintain'd his Ground againſt the Arms and Artifices both of the Turk and Perſian. He was, as may well be ſuppos'd, a Perſon of great Abilities, and of a bold enterprizing Spirit; which Reſolution, had it not been temper'd with a great Share of Senſe and Conduct, would have appear'd rather brutal than brave. Soliman III. was lately come to the Perſian Crown, and in an Age little capable of governing. His natural Bent dragg'd him towards Pleaſure, and the Reſtraints he had been kept under during his Minority gave him a keener Appetite. In the mean time the Perſian Dominions had ſuffer'd very much by a long War, and were over and above menac'd by their Neighbours, who enter'd into Alliances againſt 'em. The Mogul and the Tartars made great Preparations; which, as 'twas eaſy to diſcover, were pointed againſt Perſia. Now 'twas too much Buſineſs for a Prince, no better furniſh'd than Soliman, to defend himſelf againſt ſuch formidable Enemies, and attempt Balſora at the ſame time. The Turk always watching an Opportunity for new Conqueſts, made uſe of this Juncture to fall upon the Town. He immediately diſpatch'd Couriers to all the Baſſhaws of Syria, and other Provinces, and particularly to the Baſſhaw of Babylon, with Orders to march to Balſora with their beſt Troops at the Day appointed. And here the Command of the Army was given to the Baſſhaw of Bagdad. Theſe formidable Forces advanc'd to the Euphrates and the Tigris. The Burghers of Balſora were terribly ſtruck to ſee themſelves beſieg'd by the Turks, who commonly were extreamly cruel where they found Reſiſtance: Beſides, they were the more ſurpriz'd, becauſe the Turk being engag'd againſt the Chriſtians in Candia, they had no Apprehenſions of his making War elſewhere. Hoſſein had but a few Soldiers in the Place: And the Burghers, whoſe Profeſſion was not fighting, grew very troubleſome. They did what they could to work a Surrender before they were inveſted; and while he was endeavouring to quiet and ſuppreſs the Mutiny, he underſtood ſome of 'em were practiſing to deliver a Gate to the Enemy. Thus he found himſelf oblig'd to capitulate upon the beſt Conditions he could get, having firſt gained the Turkiſh General by rich Preſents. In ſhort, the Articles were that the Ottoman Army ſhould riſe and march off, and that the Town ſhould continue in Hoſſein's Poſſeſſion, paying from henceforward an annual Tribute of four hundred thouſand Crowns to the Grand Seignior. To ſucceed in this Negociation, he pitch'd upon Hiaya a rich intriguing Baſſhaw, to whom he had lately marry'd his Daughter: This Lady was an ambitious Woman, and ready to ſacrifice every thing to humour her Pride. She always aim'd at a Royal Match, and us'd to ſay ſhe would find her Husband a Sovereign or make him one. The Arabian Prince her Husband met with more Difficulties with the Miniſtry at Conſtantinople than he expected; however, he found Means to ſatisfy his Ambition. He was told the Treaty at Balſora was concluded againſt the Sultan's Mind; that the Conditions were diſhonourable to the Ottoman Empire, and that there was no inſiſting upon the Articles unleſs Balſora was put in the Grand Seignior's Hands; as for the Baſſhaw of Bagdad, he would be diſown'd, and have Reaſon to repent him for acting without Order in a Buſineſs of ſuch Conſequence. The Turkiſh Miniſtry at the ſame time felt the Pulſe of Hoſſein's Envoy, and finding him a Mercenary Perſon, let him underſtand that they would ſettle him in Balſora with the ſame Privilege and Authority his Father enjoy'd, provided he would go into the Meaſures of the Porte, and aſſiſt in gaining the Place. His own and his Wife's Ambition made him overlook his Honour, and cloſe with the Offer. In the mean time Baſſhaw Hoſſein had brought in new Troops, and drove the Mob and ſeditious Burghers out of the Town: And over and above he had furniſh'd himſelf with Ammunition, repair'd the Citadel, thrown up new Works, and put the Town in a Condition to hold out a long Siege. But the greateſt Strength is ſeldom impregnable againſt Infidelity and Treaſon. As for Hiaya, he was a Knave of Capacity, manag'd with great Fineneſs, and gave a coarſe Inſide an handſome Complexion: He made Hoſſein believe that he had put upon the Grand Seignior to ſerve his Father in Law; and in ſhort, conceal'd his Treachery under ſpecious Appearances. The Varniſh was ſo well laid on, that Hoſſein, 'tis poſſible, would not have ſeen thro' it, had not the Turks diſcover'd the Secret contrary to their Promiſe. But theſe Infidels, when they had drawn their Army together, declar'd openly they were marching to Balſora to expel Hoſſein, and put his Son in Law in Poſſeſſion of the Place. This unexpected Treachery of Hiaya threw Hoſſein off his Conduct and his Courage. He was ſo diſturb'd to find himſelf betray'd and miſtaken in his Choice; to ſee his Town inveſted again, and that by an Enemy who ſeldom make a ſecond Attack upon a Place: This unlook'd for Misfortune diſconcerted him ſo far, as to make him miſtake his Way, and run into extream Reſolves. He ſent an Envoy to the Sophy of Perſia with an Offer to return Balſora into his Hands, provided he would grant him the Government of the Place during Life. The Perſian ſent him an ambiguous Anſwer, from which he might eaſily collect that Prince was too much embarraſſed to venture a Conteſt with the Turk. Hoſſein being thus diſappointed, concluded it more eligible to retire, than run thro' the Fatigue of a long Siege, and then fall under the Turkiſh Cruelty. On the other ſide, the Ottoman Army was upon their March, and the Basſhaw of Bagdad was reſolv'd to carry Balſora, being well aſſur'd his Head muſt be loſt in caſe he miſcarried. As for Hoſſein, the Indians having lent him ſome Ships and ſmall Craft, he put his Money and richeſt Furniture on board: He alſo embark'd his Seraglio, conſiſting of a great Number of the fineſt Women in all the Levant. He likewiſe ſlighted the Fortifications he had rais'd, and demoliſh'd the Town: In ſhort, every thing was level'd and raz'd, not excepting the Moſch's and his own Palace; inſomuch that when he quitted Balſora to his Son in Law he left him nothing but Ruins and Rubbiſh. Being thus on board the Indian Veſſels he ſail'd to Suratte, from whence he went forward with his Wealth and his Women to the Mogul's Court: and thus remaining in a Condition of Plenty and Repoſe, he left other People the Trouble of defending their Country againſt the Turks.

To finiſh the Hiſtory of Hiaya and Balſora in few Words; the Turkiſh Army came before the Place in the latter End of the Year 1668. Hiaya according to the Treaty was put in Hoſſein Basſhaw's Place. Being thus ſettled, he encourag'd the Burghers to build their Houſes, and the Merchants to revive their Commerce. He diſcharg'd all Taxes and Cuſtoms for a certain time, and advanc'd conſiderable Sums of his own Money for the publick Service. And thus having reſtor'd Things to their former Condition, he grew wealthy in a ſhort time, even to a formidable Fortune: In ſhort, his Greatneſs might have given a Jealouſy to the Porte, had not the Sultan taken care to get rid of him. The Grand Seignior, who projected to be abſolute in Balſora, and put the Government of the Town into the Hands of a Turkiſh Basſhaw, reſolv'd to expel the Arabian Prince. For this Purpoſe they quarrell'd, made new Demands upon Hiaya, and extorted ſo much Money, that he was forc'd to quit the Town, and live in the Field at the Head of an Army. The Turks behaving themſelves inſolently, Hiaya inveſted the Town and carry'd it by Storm. The Turks were all put to the Sword excepting four hundred, who were permitted to retire to the Citadel of Gourna: 'Tis a Day's Journey above Balſora, and ſtands upon a Point of Land above the Confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates. And here Hiaya made a falſe Step; for attempting ſeveral times in Perſon to drive 'em from thence, he was always repuls'd. The Siege laſted a great while: Hiaya loſt the beſt Part of his Troops in the Enterprize, and at laſt was forc'd to retire to Balſora in Confuſion. And now receiving Advice the Turks were advancing upon him, he went out of the Town a ſecond time with his Women and his Treaſure. 'Twas a great while before he knew whither to withdraw for Shelter. At laſt he went on board the Portugueſe Fleet, got himſelf tranſported to the Eaſt Indies, and was protected by the famous Seva-Gy, who ſhall be mention'd under his Name: This Seva-Gy gave Hiaya an Employment in his Troops ſufficient to buſy him, but not big enough to enable him to do Miſchief. * Carre, Voyages des Indes Orientales.

HOULIERES (Antoinette de la Garde Widow of N. de la Fonde Boiſguerin Lord of), a Lady of diſtinguiſh'd Merit, and one of thoſe who about the End of the XVII^th^ Century conteſted with the Men who wrote the beſt French Poetry. There are few of either Sex who have carried this Way of Writing farther than Houlieres, eſpecially in Paſtorals. Her Invention was eaſy, and her Imagination rich: Her Stile was correct and well poliſh'd: She thought nicely, and dreſs'd as well. She was over and above a fine Perſon, and 'twas ſaid the Perfections of Mind and Body met in her. Notwithſtanding all theſe Qualities were not lucky enough to furniſh her with the Circumſtances ſhe deſerv'd: Her Husband who had ſome Employment in the Artillery, and being too ſtiff to bend to M. de Louvois, was, as 'twas ſaid, the Cauſe of her Misfortune. She dy'd at Paris February 1694. fifty ſix Years of Age. Her Works are publiſh'd in two Volumes Octavo. She left two Daughters, one of which was a famous Poeteſs, and carry'd the Prize of Eloquence in the French Academy. * Memoires du Tems.

HOUPELANDE (William), born at Boulogne in Picardy, Doctor in the Univerſity of Paris, Curé of St. Severin, Canon of Notre-Dame, Archdeacon of Brie, and Dean of the Faculty of Divinity in Paris, dy'd in Auguſt 1492. He wrote a Book of the Immortality of the Soul, and of its Condition in a State of Separation: This Diſcourſe is full of Citations from the Fathers, from the Philoſophers, Poets and other learned Writers. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XV.

HOWARD (Thomas-Philip), Cardinal and Brother to the Duke of Norfolke: He took the Habit of a Dominican, and had a Cardinal's Cap given him by Pope Clement X. May 27^th^ in 1675, with the Title of St. Cecilia. He was likewiſe Lord Almoner to Catherine Queen of England, and dy'd at Rome June 16^th^ 1694. in the ſixty fifth Year of his Age. He lies buried in S. Mary Minerva's Church.

HOY (Andrew), born at Bruges, and King's Profeſſor at Doway, dy'd in the Beginning of the XVII^th^ Century more than eighty Years of Age: He was a Latin Poet of Character: He wrote Tragedies upon Scripture Subjects; Elegies; a Poetical Paraphraſe upon Ezekiel, and ſome other Compoſitions well receiv'd. He imitated Catullus handſomely enough: His Diction is correct, and his Manner puſh'd towards the Sublime. He printed four Diſſertations about making a Greek Grammar; the firſt diſcourſes of the Cauſes of the Corruption of this Language; the ſecond treats of the Dialects and their Alterations; the third goes ſomewhat upon the Septuagint; the fourth lays down the beſt Way of pronouncing Greek. * Valerius Andreas, Diſſer. Biblioth. Belg.

* HUBERT (Saint): The Account of the Life and Adventures of St. Hubert in Morery before he was Biſhop of Maeſtricht, is taken from romantick Memoirs, written by an obſcure Author remote from the time of the Perſon deſcrib'd. All that is certainly known concerning St. Hubert is, that he was ordain'd by St. Lambert Biſhop of Maeſtricht, that after Lambert was kill'd, A. D. 708, he was choſen to his See; that he was not conſecrated, as was pretended, by Pope Sergius, his Holineſs being dead ſeven Years before: To go on with St. Hubert; he carry'd St. Lambert's Corpſe from Maeſtricht to the Village of Liege, where he fix'd his Epiſcopal See in the Year 721: Afterwards going Miſſionary into the Foreſt of Ardennes he converted a great many Pagans and dy'd in a Village between Louvain and Bruſſels May 30^th^, A. D. 727. His Corpſe was carry'd to Liege, and buried in St. Albin's Chapel. In the following Century the Monks of the Abby of Andain in the Foreſt of Ardennes deſir'd his Body: 'Twas granted to 'em by an Order of the Council then held at Aix-la-Chappelle, and was remov'd to Andain in the Year 825. In the XI^th^ Century St. Hubert was particularly addreſs'd againſt Madneſs. His Feſtival ſtands at the 3^d^ of November. * Vita apud Surium. Le Cointe, Annal Francfort. Chapeauville, Geſta Epiſcoporum Leodienſium. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

'Tis ſaid the Relations of this Saint cure the ſame Diſtemper by ſaying ſome Prayers; this, continues the French Supplementor, is believ'd by ſome People, whoſe Piety, it may be, exceeds their Underſtanding: But ſince theſe Perſons are unauthoris'd by the Church, no Body is bound to rely upon their Benedictions, or any thing preſcrib'd by 'em. However, it may not be amiſs to dilate a little upon the Hiſtory of theſe Sort of Cures. Thoſe who draw their Genealogy from St. Martin's Family pretend to cure the Falling Sickneſs: The Ceremonies they make uſe of, and the Sol with a Hole in't, which they hang about the Patient's Neck, look like ſuperſtitious Circumſtances. The Deſcendants of the Houſe of Coutance in the Vendômois, cure, as 'tis ſaid, Children troubled with a Diſeaſe the French call Le Carreau only by touching 'em; but the learned won't allow theſe Cures for Matter of Fact. 'Tis ſaid that thoſe of the Family of St. Roch are Proof againſt the Plague, and can ſometimes cure that Diſtemper: But notwithſtanding this Tradition, it may be thoſe Gentlemen would not be willing to be put to the Teſt, and venture themſelves in a Peſthouſe. The eldeſt Son of the Family of the Baron d'Aumont Count of Châteauroux, cures, as 'tis reported, the King's Evil, not by the Touch, but by Panis Benedictus, or, Holy Bread; and that this miraculous Quality was beſtow'd upon him, becauſe he has a Fountain within his Seigneury, near which, as 'tis pretended, a Lord of this Family formerly lodg'd the Relicts of the three Kings of Cologn. 'Tis believ'd in Flanders that the Children born on Good Fryday have the Faculty of curing Tertian and Quartan Agues, with many other Diſtempers. In France, the common People are perſuaded that ſeven legitimate Boys born ſucceſſively without a Girl between 'em, can likewiſe cure Fevers, and even the King's Evil, after having ſaid their Prayers to St. Marculphus. The French Kings cure the King's Evil only by touching, making the Sign of the Croſs upon the Patient, and pronouncing theſe Words, The King touches you, God heals you; this, ſays the French Supplementor, has much better Grounds of Belief; for this miraculous Quality is not only acknowledged by the French, but by moſt other Nations; as by Leonard Vair, Valdeſius Delrio the Jeſuit, and a great many others. Janſenius, tho' a Subject of the King of Spain, and an Enemy to France, has made no Scruple to own this Truth in his Book, entitled, Mars Gallicus, wherein he has us'd France very ſcurvily.

The Reader, if deſirous to be farther inform'd about this Matter, may conſult Laurentius and de Priezac in his Vindiciæ Gallicæ. In England, Edward the Confeſſor was the firſt Prince who cur'd the King's Evil; ſince which time thoſe afflicted with this Diſtemper have frequently been perfectly recover'd by the Touch of the Kings of England. * Thiers, Traité des Superſtitions. Collier, Eccleſ. Hiſt. Vol. I.

HUBERTIN DE CASA, of the Order of the Fryars Minorites, was one of the Heads of the Spiritual Party againſt the other Monks, who maintain'd the Lawfulneſs of having Property in common, that is, belonging to a Monaſtick Society, tho' not by Way of ſeparate Share to every Perſon in that Society: This Hubertin maintain'd the Writings of Peter de Oliva before Pope Clement V: Now this Oliva would allow of no Property under any Conditions. Hubertin likewiſe wrote ſeveral Diſcourſes both before and after the Council of Vienne, in Defenſe of this Party: One of theſe Tracts begins with theſe Words, Sanctitati Apoſtolicæ; another with theſe, Super tribus Sceleribus; and the laſt, written ſince the Council of Vienne, with theſe Words, Ne in poſterum. He defended himſelf before Pope Clement V, and got a Bull of Abſolution: But a freſh Charge was brought in againſt him by Fryar Bonagratia in the Pontificate of Pope John XXII. His Holineſs referr'd the Hearing to Cardinal William, Biſhop of St. Sabina: To this Cardinal in the Year 1321. Bonagratia preſented a Libel againſt the Conduct and Writings of Hubertin de Caſa, and cites ſome of the Tracts abovemention'd. In the Year 1322 Hubertin was interrogated by the Pope upon the Queſtion of the Poverty of our Saviour and his Apoſtles: His Anſwer was, that quatenus, or as conſidered Prelates of the Church, they had Goods to diſtribute to the Poor, and to the Clergy: But if we conſider'd 'em as private Perſons who practis'd the Monaſtick Perfection, we muſt diſtinguiſh two Sorts of having Property; the one by Way of Civil or Worldly Tenure, where a Man has a Right to defend it, and recover when 'tis ſeiz'd; the other Sort of having Property is Civil or Natural, and accrues by the Right of common Charity; that our Saviour and the Apoſtles had nothing by the firſt Claim, but by the ſecond they had a Right to the Neceſſaries of Life. This Anſwer being read in the Conſiſtory, was approv'd by the Pope, and afterwards maintain'd by Hubertin de Caſa in the Year 1330. He wrote likewiſe two Tracts; the one entitled, Arbor Vitæ crucifixæ; and the other, De Septem Conditionibus Eccleſiæ; both printed at Venice. * Trithem. in Cat. Petreius, Biblioth. Cart. Baluz. Miſcellan. Tom. I.

HUETIUS (Peter Daniel), of Caën, formerly Biſhop of Avranches; one of the moſt celebrated Authors of the preſent Century, upon the Score of his great Learning both in Languages and Things.

The late M. Montauſier Governor of the Dauphin, who valu'd Men of Learning, pitch'd upon Huetius for Subpræceptor to this Prince. He was firſt Biſhop of Soiſſons, and afterwards of Avranches in the Year 1686. And after having executed the Epiſcopal Function ſeveral Years, he reſign'd the See to ſpend the reſt of his Days in Retirement. He is ſtill Abbot of Aulnei, and one of the forty Members of the French Academy. He wrote two Books upon the Subject of Tranſlation; one, entitled, De optimo genere interpretandi; and the other, De claris Interpretibus: To proceed, he wrote a Cenſure in Latin of the Carteſian Philoſophy; publiſh'd Origen's Commentaries, and prefix'd a learned Tract to the Edition call'd Origeniana, which takes in Origen's Life, an Examination of his Doctrine, a Critic upon his Works, and the Hiſtory of the Controverſies which happened concerning Origen's Perſon and Writings. Huetius's principal Performance is, his Demonſtratio Evangelica, or, the Evidence of the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion. Farther, he wrote a Tract of the Harmony between Faith and Reaſon, entitled, Quæſtiones Alnetanæ; a French Tract concerning the Situation of the Terreſtrial Paradiſe, and of the Voyage Solomon's Fleet made to the Land of Ophir. M. Huetius is a Perſon of almoſt prodigious Learning, as appears plainly by his Works. He is a perfect Maſter of Latin, Greek and Hebrew; and no modern Author writes better Latin. His Poems run through the fifth Edition in 1709, which is a good Argument they were well receiv'd both for Thought and Expreſſion. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVIII.

HUGO (Hermanus), a Jeſuit born at Bruſſels in the Year 1588, and dy'd of the Plague at Rhinberg in 1629. He has the Reputation of a good Latin Poet, and is better diſtinguiſh'd by his Muſe, than by his larger Performances in Proſe, notwithſtanding ſome of theſe are well written. His Poetry, entitled, Defideria Pia, is divided into three Books. This Performance has a great many ingenious Emblems and Pathetick Reflections extracted from the Fathers. They go in the Elegiack Form, and are very pious and affecting. * Olaus Borrich. Diſſert. de Poët. Lat. & Alii, paſſim. Baillet, Jugement des Sav. ſur les Poëtes modernes.

HUGO DE FLAVIGNI, a Benedictin of St. Vannes of Verdun, afterwards Abbot of the Monaſtery of Flavigni in Burgundy in the XII^th^ Century. He wrote the Chronicle of Verdun in two Parts. The firſt of which begins with the Incarnation, and ends with the Year 1002; and the other carries on the Hiſtory juſt an hundred Years forward. This Work is publiſh'd by Labbé, who ſets a particular Value upon it in the firſt Tome of his new Library of Manuſcripts. But the ſecond Part is much preferable to the firſt. Hugo de Flavigni mentions his being choſen Abbot in the Year 1097. * Labbé, Tom. I. Biblioth. Nov. Trithem. Poſſevin, &c. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HUGO DE FLEURI, Monk of the Abby of St. Bennet upon the Loire in the XII^th^ Century: He left a Chronicle in ſix Books dedicated to Ivo Carnutenſis. This Chronicle, which begins with the World and reaches to A. D. 840, was printed at Munſter in 1638. This Author likewiſe wrote two Books, De Poteſtate Regia, & de Dignitate Eccleſiaſtica, inſcrib'd to Henry I, King of England: Baluzius has publiſh'd 'em in the fourth Tome of his Miſcellanea. * Voſſius. Poſſevin. &c. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HUGO D'AMIENS, or of Roan, remov'd from Amiens the Place of his Nativity into England, where he was made Abbot of Reading, and afterwards elected Archbiſhop of Roan, and conſecrated in the Year 1130.

He was one of the moſt pious and moſt learned Prelates of his time; and made a great Figure in his See

'till

'till his Death, which happen'd in the Year 1164. He wrote three Books by Way of Paſtoral Inſtruction, to fortify his Clergy againſt the Heterodoxies of that time: In the firſt, after a brief Explication of what we ought to believe with Reference to the Trinity and Incarnation, he treats of the Sacraments of Baptiſm, Confirmation, and the holy Euchariſt, and confutes thoſe Hereticks who argued againſt the Neceſſity of Baptiſm, againſt Pædobaptiſm, and againſt the Benefit and Neceſſity of the Euchariſt. In the ſecond Book he diſcourſes of holy Orders, and the reſpective Functions belonging to 'em. In the third he dilates upon the Dignity of the Prieſthood, and the proper Behaviour of the Clergy: He likewiſe treats of Unity and other Notes of the Catholick Church. Farther, there are two Letters extant of this Archbiſhop's; one to Thierri Biſhop of Amiens: Here he gives his Thoughts concerning the Abſolution granted to Penitents, who wrought in the building of a Church, upon Condition they had come to Confeſſion, been put under Penance, and reconcil'd to their Enemies: The ſecond is a Letter of Compliment to the Count of Toulouſe. Theſe Diſcourſes are publiſh'd by Dacherius in his Spicilegium, at the End of the Works of Guibert de Nogent, * Bernard, Epiſt. 25. Robert & Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

HUGO DE SAINT VICTOR, a famous Divine, Canon Regular and Prior of St. Victor, was a Flanderkin, born in the Precinct of Ypres, and not a Saxon, as is commonly believ'd. He enter'd into the Society of St. Victor in Paris at eighteen Years of Age, A. D. 1115, when this Congregation of Canons Regular of St. Auguſtin was under the Government of their firſt Abbot Gilduin. He read upon Divinity from the Year 1130. 'till his Death: And was ſo eminently learn'd, that they call'd him a Second Saint Auguſtin. We have three Tomes of his Works printed at Paris, at Venice, at Mentz, and Roan, with his Life prefix'd. The Authors of the Office of the holy Sacrament endeavour to juſtify Hugo's Memory againſt du Pleſſis-Mornay, and other Proteſtants, who cite him as one of their Opinion touching the holy Euchariſt. He dy'd in the Year 1142. forty four Years of Age. There are extant of this Author's two Sorts of Commentaries upon the holy Scripture. The one are drawn from the literal and hiſtorical Senſe of the Text; the other are Allegorical Commentaries, interſpers'd with Queſtions and common Places. Trithemius reckons theſe laſt to Richard de St. Victor, for they can't belong to Hugo, in regard the Author continues the Succeſſion of the Kings of France to Philip Son of Lewis the Younger, born in 1165, when Hugo was dead. There are likewiſe in the ſecond Tome ſome Diſcourſes upon Monaſtick Diſcipline reckon'd to Hugo de St. Victor, which belong to Hugo Foliet a Monk of Corbie. The laſt Tome conſiſts of Dogmatical Tracts, which plainly belong to Hugo de S. Victor, particularly his large Diſcourſe upon the Sacraments, where he explains the Queſtions treated in a very intelligible Manner, diſengag'd from Logical Terms, and without hamp'ring himſelf with Intricacy and obſcure Matter: He reſolves his Caſes from Scripture Paſſages, and Principles laid down by the Fathers: And here St. Auguſtin is his chief Inſtructor. He govern'd himſelf by this Father's Doctrine, and imitated his Stile. * S. Bernard, Epiſt. 77. Jacobus de Vitriaco, Lib. II. Cap. 24. Henric. Gandavenſ. Cap. 25. Trithemius. Bellarmin. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII.

* HUGUES (William). Expunge the Sentence in Morery Vol. I, which ſays King James I. gave leave to confirm ten thouſand Roman Catholicks.

HUNDSRUCK or Undſruck, a Country of the Electoral Circle of the Rhine. It takes its Name from the Huns a Sarmatian Clan, who ſettled Colonies there. 'Tis bounded by the County of Sponheim, the Duchy of Simmeren, the Moſelle, and the Rhine near Coblentz. The chief Towns are Coblentz, Boppart, St. Goar and Obber-Weſel. Hundſruck has ſometimes a larger Extent given it: The Length is ſtretch'd along the Rhine as far as Nahe, and thus it takes in the Duchy of Simmeren, and Part of the County of Sponheim: And with this Survey, formerly made one of the five Provinces of the Palatinate upon the Rhine. * Baudrand.

* HUNERICK, King of the Vandals, &c. for Patriarch of the Arians in Morery Vol. I, read Patriarch of the Orthodox.

* HUNNIADES: For at the Battle of Varna, Anno one thouſand ſix hundred forty four in Morery Vol. I, read a thouſand four hundred forty four.

HUSINGO, a Precinct within the Low Countries. 'Tis one of thoſe call'd the Ommelandes, Parcel of the Province of Groningen. The Hunſingo ſtretches along the German Sea up to the River Hunſe, and comes down as far as the Territory of Groningen and the Fivelingo. There are a great many Villages within it: but no conſiderable Place excepting the ſmall Fort of Soltcamp. * Maty, Diction.

HURONS (the Lake of the), or the freſhwater Sea of the Hurons, otherwiſe call'd the Lake of Karegnondi. 'Tis a great Lake in New France within the Northern America. 'Tis ſaid to be two hundred Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, and ſeven hundred in Circumference. The Lake of Ilinois falls into it. This Lake makes the Spring of St. Lawrence's River. * Maty, Diction.

HUSSARS, a particular Sort of Cavalry in Hungary and Poland, whimſically accoutred, and mounted upon ſmall Horſes, but which are high mettled, and good Travellers. The Huſſars are good Partymen and Forragers, but not at all proper for cloſe fighting. Their Heads are ſhaven with only a Tuft of Hair left in the Middle, with a large Muſtache hanging down to their Stomach, and a Fur Cap with a Cock's Feather upon it. The Officers have a Plume of Eagles Feathers, and their Cloaths are of the Turkiſh Faſhion: They wear Doublets with large Breeches, without ſtrait Coats, Cloaks or Shirts: However, to fence againſt bad Weather they have each of 'em a Tyger's Skin or Sheep's Skin ty'd to their Neck, which they take care to turn to the Weather. Moſt of 'em have no Stockings to their Boots. They give no Quarter, nor ask any when they are worſted. They have Fire Arms, but uſe 'em awkwardly: But are very dextrous with their Sabres: And a great many of 'em when marching up to a Trooper of the Enemy ſeldom fail of making him ſhorter by the Head. An Officer taken Priſoner, when the Huſſars were defeated by the French at Fribourg in the Year 1690, was ſo great a Maſter at this Exerciſe, that 'twas confidently reported that if twenty Men came ſucceſſively within his Reach, he would not leave one of their Heads upon their Shoulders. When the Huſſars have made their Campaign, the General gives 'em as many Pieces of Silver Money as they have Heads to preſent him with. The Puniſhment for Deſerters is extreamly frightful: They ſpit 'em alive, and lay 'em down 'till they are roaſted. * Memoires du Tems.

HUTTERUS (Leonard), Divinity Profeſſor at Wittemberg, was born at Ulm in 1562. where his Father was a Miniſter. His Proficiency in Learning was ſo conſiderable, that when but thirty three Years of Age he was prefer'd to the Divinity Chair at Wittemberg, the moſt celebrated Lutheran Univerſity, he acquitted himſelf to great Commendation. He was one of the rigid Lutherans, and particularly zealous for his Perſuaſion. He writes with Warmth not without Satyr, and gives a Character of Diſadvantage to thoſe call'd Martyrs of the Geneva Confeſſion. He dy'd in the Year 1616. He was a Voluminous Author: Some of his Works are as follow, Concordia Concors, ſive de Origine & Progreſſu Formulæ Concordiæ Eccleſiarum Auguſtanæ Confeſſionis, Liber unus, Rudolpho Hoſpiniano oppoſitus, in Folio, à Wittemberg, 1614. Diſputatio pro Formulâ Concordiæ. Collegium Theologicum de Articulis Confeſſionis Auguſtanæ, & Libro Chriſtianæ Concordiæ, Irenicum verè Chriſtianum, ſive de Synodo & Unione Evangelicorum non fucata concilianda, Tractatus Theologicus. Sadeel Elenchomenus, hoc eſt, Tractatio pro Majeſtate humanæ Naturæ Chriſti. He wrote likewiſe ſeveral Tracts againſt the Church of Rome. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HUTTERUS (Elias), publiſh'd a Bible in four Languages, Hebrew, Greek, Latin and High Dutch: 'Twas printed at Hamburg 1597. He afterwards enlarg'd it with Italian, French, Sclavonian and Saxon. His New Teſtament was printed in the Year 1600. in twelve Languages, that is, Syriac, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, High-Dutch, Bohemian, Italian, Spaniſh, French, Engliſh, Daniſh and Poliſh. Theſe he reduc'd to four in his Edition of 1603, that is, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and and High Dutch. This Polyglott is very ſcarce. There's a Collection of Letters, which give an Account what the Learned thought of this Work. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

HYCCARE, a Town in Sicily built by the old Sicanians, and fallen to Rubbiſh many Ages ſince. The Criticks are not agreed about the Etymology of Hyccare; ſome derive it from the Greek, and others from the Phœnician Language; but they all concur that the Name ſignifies Fiſhy; which anſwers well enough to the Gulph Hyccare. The Place is now call'd Muro Carini twelve Miles from Palermo, and was an Epiſcopal See in the time of Gregory the Great. * Fazellus Dec. 1. Lib. 7.

HYDASPES, the Name of two Rivers in Aſia. The one runs thro' Suſiana, and comes up to Suſa the Capital of that Province: The other, ſometimes call'd Hypaſus, on this ſide the Ganges, runs from Mount Taurus, and after having paſs'd by the Town Lahor in the Mogul's Dominions, falls into the Indus near the City Niſa. Lucan, Horace, Seneca and Claudian ſpeak of this River, and the two latter report that Gold and precious Stones were fiſh'd in it.

HYDASPES or Hiſtaſpes, is reckon'd one of the Perſian Magi, much more ancient than Homer and contemporary with Zoroaſtres. Some Writers by Miſtake ſuppoſe him the ſame with Hiſtaſpes Darius's Father. Lactantius believes him a Perſian King much more ancient. Ammianus Marcellinus reports that Hiſtaſpes march'd thro' India as far as the Retirement of the Brachmans, that having learn'd Natural Philoſophy, Aſtronomy and religious Ceremonies from theſe Sages he inſtructed the Magi with his Improvement. St. Juſtin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus and Lactantius cite Hiſtaſpes's Books where he predicts the End of the World; but 'tis probable theſe Books like thoſe of the Sibyls are ſpurious Records. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſtor. Prof.

* HYGINUS, Biſhop of Rome, his Pontificate begins in the Year 140, and according to Euſebius ends in 143. The ancient Catalogues of the Popes diſagree about the Length of his ſitting; one Regiſter gives him four Years, another ſix, and a third twelve: But Euſebius's Chronology is beſt vouch'd. For according to Epiphanius, Marcion did not come to Rome 'till after the Death of this Pope; and Tertullian relates that Marcion's Hereſy began in the Reign of Antoninus Pius. 'Tis certain this Hereſy had ſpread to notice in the Year 150, when St. Juſtin preſented his Apology. By this Computation 'tis plain that when Marcion came to Rome he had not publiſh'd his Hereſy; from whence 'tis plain that the End of Hyginus's Pontificate muſt be ſet before the Year 150. The two Decretal Epiſtles reckon'd to Hyginus are plainly ungenuine; and the Ordinations ſaid to be made by him deſerve no Credit. * Euſeb. in Chron. & Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. IV. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. II.

* HYMENEUS, Biſhop of Jeruſalem, ſucceeded Mazabanes, A. D. 260. He aſſiſted at the Council of Antioch in the Year 264, and in another at the ſame Place againſt Paulus Samoſatenus, A. D. 270. Zabdas ſucceeded him in the Year 270. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III.

HYMN, a religious Song in Honour of the Pagan Deities. They commonly conſiſted of three Sorts of Stanzaes. One of which they call'd Strophe, ſung when the Chorus mov'd from the Eaſt to the Weſt; the other call'd Antiſtrophe mov'd from the Weſt to the Eaſt: Afterwards they halted before the Altar and ſung the Epodos, which was the third Stanza. * Danet.

* HYPATIA, was a very learned Lady, and read Lectures in Plato's School, where Plotinus had formerly the Chair: She exceeded all the Philoſophers of her time, and read upon all the Branches of their Profeſſion: Her Reputation ran ſo high, that all People who had any Taſte for Learning, made Part of her Audience. And having gain'd Credit and competent Aſſurance by reading Lectures, ſhe us'd ſometimes to appear abroad, and make Viſits to the Judges and Governor. Now her Correſpondence with Oreſtes the Præfect or Governor made ſome of the Populace among the Chriſtians ſuſpect her of doing ill Offices, as if ſhe help'd to keep up a Miſunderſtanding between Oreſtes and the Archbiſhop Cyril. Upon this Jealouſy, ſome of the Mob, headed by one Peter a Reader, ſet upon the Gentlewoman as ſhe was going home, pull'd her out of her Chair, drag'd her to a Church call'd Cæſar's Church, pull'd off her Cloaths, and murther'd her with Sherds. And when they had pull'd her in Pieces carry'd off her Limbs and burn'd 'em. This barbarous Murther drew a Blemiſh upon St. Cyril and the Chriſtians in Alexandria: Quarreling and Aſſaſſination being altogether foreign to Chriſtianity. * Socrat. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. VII. Cap. 15.

HYPPICOS, a Tower in Jeruſalem built by Herod the Great. When Titus took the Town, he gave Orders that this Tower and two others ſhould be preſerv'd undemoliſh'd, there being nothing of this Kind like 'em for Height and Magnificence. His Deſign was to inform Poſterity that the Courage and military Skill of the Romans muſt have been extraordinary; for that otherwiſe they could not have made themſelves Maſters of a Town ſo unuſually fortify'd. * Joſeph. De Bell. Judaic. Lib. VII. Cap. 1.

HYVERT, Cape Hyvert or Winterſhoeck. This Cape ſtands upon the Northern Coaſt of Nova Zembla, and has its Name from its Situation. * Maty, Diction.

I.

IACI, Giaci, or Aci, in Latin Acis, a conſiderable Town in Sicily in the Valley de Demona, near the Gulph of St. Tecla, at the Foot of Mount Gibel, about three Leagues from the Town Catanea to the North. The Town is fortify'd with a good Caſtle, built upon a Rock, ſteep on all Sides. * Baudrand.

JACOB (Son of Leits), Founder of the Dynaſty of the Soffarides, ſo call'd becauſe his Father was a Soffar, that is, a Braſier or Tinker. The Son diſliking his Father's Trade turn'd Soldier. A Prince of the Province of Segeſtan taking a Fancy for him, gave him a Commiſſion, and finding him brave and ſucceſsful, rais'd him to the higheſt Poſt in the Army: And being Commander in chief of the Forces of Segeſtan, when this Prince dy'd the Troops declar'd for him, and thus he was made Sovereign of the Country, and his Maſter's Son ſet aſide. Soon after he attack'd the Neighbouring Princes, and took a great many Towns from 'em; and in the Year of the Hegira 255, that is, 868 of the Incarnation, he enter'd Perſia, and made almoſt an entire Conqueſt of it.

Two Years after he took the Remainder of Khoraſſan, and the Capital Balkhe; march'd from thence to Tharabeſtan, where he met with little Reſiſtance. He finiſh'd this War by gaining a great Battle two Years forward againſt Mohammed, who reign'd over all the Provinces lately conquered by Jacob: And having made this Prince Priſoner, he put an End to the Dynaſty of the Thaherites, and began that of the Soffarides his Succeſſors. He afterwards march'd into the Babylonian Province Iraque, with a Deſign to beſiege the Caliph Motamed in Bagdat: But this Caliph ſending his Brother with a great Army againſt him, Jacob was forc'd to retire with the Loſs of a conſiderable Part of his Troops. Five Years after having recruited his Army, he marched a ſecond time towards Bagdat, but dy'd of the Cholick before he reach'd the Place. He reign'd eleven Years after his firſt Incurſion into Perſia, and left his Dominions to his Brother Amrou. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

JACOB, Son of Joſeph, Grandſon of Abdal-Moumen, Founder of the Dynaſty of the Almouhades in Africk. Being challeng'd in the Year of our Lord 1194 by Alphonſus IX. King of Caſtille, he ſail'd from Africk into Spain, defeated the Caſtillians, and the Almoravides, who were ſplit into Factions, and with this Succeſs ſet up the Dynaſty of the Almouhades, which laſted to the Year of our Lord 1273. This Jacob had the Title of Almanſor. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

JACOB Begh, ſecond Son of Haſſan-Begh, was the eighth Prince of the ſecond Dynaſty of the Turcomans in Aſia: This Dynaſty had the Diſtinction of the White Sheep. He began his Reign upon the Deceaſe of his Brother, againſt whom he made an Inſurrection in the Year of our Lord 1481: His elder Brother had made him Governor of Diarbek: Here he began his Revolt, and engag'd another of his Brothers call'd Macſoud: In ſhort, he routed his elder Brother, who was ſlain in his Flight, having reign'd only ſix Months. The next Turn was Jacob's Death at Carabagh in the Neighbouhood of Tauris, being poyſon'd as 'twas thought, by his Courtiers in the Year of our Lord 1490. He dy'd at 28 Years of Age, and left his Son Baiſancor large Dominions, which ſoon after fell into the Hands of Schah Iſmael, who had been his Priſoner. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

JACOBÆUS (Oliger), was born at Arhuſen in the Peninſula of Jutland in July 1650. and extracted from a very conſiderable Family. For to go no higher in his Genealogy, his Great-Grandfather James Son of Matthias was Biſhop of Fuinen. Matthias Jacobæus Son of James was firſt Phyſician to Chriſtian IV. King of Denmark; and his Father James Son of Matthias was Biſhop of Arhuſen, and took all poſſible Care about his Son's Education. But his Father dying in 1671, his Mother, Daughter to the famous Gaſpar Bartholin, ſent Oliger to Copenhagen; where having taken the cuſtomary Degrees in that Univerſity, he began his Travels, and made the Tour of France, Italy, Germany, Hungary, England and the low Countries. Here he found his Account, and improv'd himſelf in ſeveral Parts of Learning, eſpecially of his Profeſſion, which was Phyſick. He made an Acquaintance with ſeveral Perſons eminent in his own Faculty, and other Branches of Learning. Theſe Perſons of Diſtinction, not to mention any more, were, Redi, Malpighius, Charles Patin, Borelli, Brown, Sydenham, Boyle, Moriſon, Drelincourt, Diemerbroek, Ray, Swammerdam, Spanheim, Cruſius, Grævius, Du Verney, Du Hamel, Ettmullerus.

When he came off his Travels in the Year 1679, the King made him Profeſſor of Phyſick and Philoſophy at Copenhagen. He took the Chair in 1680, and apply'd himſelf to the Study of the different Productions of Nature. He explain'd whatever he thought any conſiderable Difficulty and worthy the Curioſity and Reſearches of the Audience. In a Word, he acquitted himſelf in his Poſt to great Reputation. The King of Denmark Chriſtiern V. had a great Eſteem for him, gave him the Superviſing of his Cloſet of Curioſities, where his Buſineſs was to encreaſe and put in Order the Rarities lodg'd there. The King likewiſe, made him one of the Bench of Juſtice. He dy'd in 1701, having been remarkable for a regular and exemplary Life. His Works are as follow: De Ranis Diſſertatio, Romæ 1676 in 8vo, & Pariſiis. Bartholomæi Scalæ Equitis Florentini Hiſtoria Florentinorum, edita ab Oligero Jacobæo, ex Bibliotheca Medicæa, Romæ 1677. Jacobæus was oblig'd to the famous Magliabecchi for this Manuſcript. Oratio in Obitum Bartholini, 1681, 4to. Compendium Inſtitutionum Medicarum, Hafniæ 1684, in 8vo. De Ranis & Lacertis Diſſertatio, Hafniæ 1686, in 8vo. Franciſci Arioſti de Oleo Montis Zibinii ſeu Petroleo Agri Mutinenſis, edita ex MSS. Membranis ab Olig. Jacobæo Hafniæ 1690, in 8vo. Panegyricus Chriſtiano Quinto dictus 1691, Fol. Gaudia Arctoi Orbis ob thalamos Auguſtos Frederici & Ludovicæ, 1691, Fol. Muſæum Regium, ſive Catalogus Rerum tam Naturalium quam Artificialium, quæ in Baſilica Bibliothecæ Chriſtiani Quinti Hafniæ aſſervantur. Hafniæ 1696. * Programme contenant l'Eloge de ce Savant en Latin; & Memoires pour l'Hiſtoire des Sciences, &c. Octob. 1702. pag. 283, &c.

JAFEI, (Abdalla Ben Aſaad Al Jemeni), dy'd in the Year 770 of the Hegira. He wrote ſeveral Hiſtorical Books, the chief of which is that which begins with the firſt Year of the Hegira, and ends with the 750 of that Æra. This Hiſtory takes in the Lives of the Mahometan Saints. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

JAICK, antiently call'd Rhymnus. 'Tis a large River in great Tartary. It riſes in Muſcovy, and running towards the South Weſt, divides the Kalmouck Tartars from thoſe of the Nagays, who belong to the Province of Aſtracan. This River falls into the Caſpian Sea between the Mouth of the Volga and the Cheſel. * Baudrand.

JAICUBI, a River in Great Tartary It runs thro' the Country of the Kalmouks, takes in the Coſir, and falls into the Caſpian Sea between the Jaick and the Cheſel. Sanſon in his large Maps calls it Yem, and makes it take this Name at the Confluence of the Rudha and the Margha. * Maty, Diction.

JAKOTIN, a Town with a good Fort. It ſtands in the Lower Volhynia upon the River Supoi, ſeventeen Leagues from the Town Kiovia to the Eaſt. It belongs to the Muſcovite. * Baudrand.

JAKS or Jaektſie, a Town which according to Mr. Witſen is ſituate in Dauria in Great Tartary. 'Tis about ten Leagues from the River Yamour to the North, and forty from Albazin, a Town belonging to the Muſcovite, and bordering upon China to the Eaſt.

JALAM-

JALAMLAM, a Place in Arabia the Happy, where the Pilgrims of the Country, who travel to Meccha, meet and form their Caravan. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

* IAMBLICUS, not the ſame with the Platonick Philoſopher of that Name mention'd in Morery. This Iamblicus was born at Apamea in Syria, much eſteem'd in the Reign of Julian the Apoſtate, who wrote ſeveral Letters to him. 'Tis not improbable but that it may be this Iamblicus to whom Symmachus wrote, to entreat his Friendſhip and Correſpondence. 'Tis ſaid this Philoſopher poiſon'd himſelf in the Reign of the Emperor Valens. * Eunap. in Vit. Sophiſt. Julian, Epiſt. 40. Symmach. Lib. IX. Ep. 2.

One of theſe Iamblicuſes, and moſt likely the Philoſopher of Chalcis, wrote the Life of Pythagoras, where he gives an Account of the Doctrine of that Sect. There is likewiſe an Epiſtle of Iamblicus's extant againſt Porphyry's Letter to Anebo an Egyptian Prieſt, for Iamblicus perceiving the Credit of Magick vigorouſly attack'd in this Letter, endeavour'd to maintain it. * Tillemont, Hiſtoire des Empereurs.

IAMBLICUS, King of the Arabians, and Brother of Alexander: He follow'd Mark Antony's Fortune in the Conteſt between him and Auguſtus, for which Reaſon he was ſtrip'd of his Dominions after the Battle of Actium. The Son of this Prince, who was likewiſe call'd Alexander, was reſtor'd by the ſame Emperor 22 Years before the Incarnation. * Dion. Caſſius Lib. XXIV.

* JAMES (Saint, of Niſibis, the Frontier Town between the Perſians and Romans in Meſopotamia. He liv'd at firſt in Solitude, practis'd great Auſterities, was famous for being a Confeſſor under the Emperor Maximin, wrought a great many Miracles, and was choſen Biſhop of the Town abovemention'd. He continu'd his mortifying Manner, wrought Miracles as formerly, and, as 'tis ſaid, rais'd ſome dead People to Life. Theodoret reports that this Saint happening to be at Conſtantinople, when the Government endeavor'd to oblige Alexander Biſhop of that Church to receive Arius to Communion, he advis'd the Catholicks to apply to Prayer and keep a Week's Faſt, to form their Reſolution the better upon this Emergency. St. Athanaſius mentions this Biſhop as an Author, who wrote on the Catholick Side; the Reaſon why St. Hierom has not put him in the Liſt of his Eccleſiaſtical Writers, is, according to Gennadius, becauſe this Father did not underſtand Syriac: And reading the Syriac Authors only in a Tranſlation, we need not wonder he makes no mention of the Works of St. James of Niſibis, conſidering none of 'em were tranſlated into Greek. Gennadius gives a Catalogue of 'em, and mounts 'em to twenty ſix Books: However, he mentions only twenty three. Each Book runs upon a different Subject: For Inſtance, of Faith, againſt Hereſies, of Charity in general, &c. The Reader may ſee an exact Liſt of 'em in the IV^th^ Century of Du Pin's Eccleſiaſtical Library. This holy Perſon, according to Gennadius, dy'd in the Reign of Conſtantius, probably in the Year 350, after the Siege of Niſibis. He was buried in this Town purſuant to the Order of the late Emperor Conſtantine the Great: But Julian the Apoſtate, probably in Affront to the Memory of that Prince, commanded St. James's Corps to be taken up, and buried without the Town. * Theodoret, in Vit. Religioſ. & Hiſt. Lib. II. Gennad. in Cat. c. 1. Baron. A. C. 325.

JAMES and Simon, two Sons of Judas Galilæus, and no leſs hot headed and ſeditious than their Father: Of this Phrenſy they gave ſufficient Proof by appearing in the Field againſt the Emperor Auguſtus's Order for taking a Liſt of the Subject. They made an Inſurrection when Cyrenius, otherwiſe call'd Quirinus, was Governor of Syria. Thus by raiſing a Rebellion they did a great deal of Miſchief, but were at laſt taken and crucify'd. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XX. Cap. 3.

JAMES-CAPE, call'd likewiſe the Cape of the States, Cape Cod, and White Cape, lies in the Northern America, at the Extremity of the Peninſula of New Holland, and over againſt the Town of Plimouth. * Baudrand.

JAMOGOROD, in Latin Jama. 'Tis a very conſiderable Fortreſs in Ingria, it ſtands upon the River Laga, five Leagues from the Town Narva to the Eaſt. * Maty.

JANAGAR, a Town within the Mogul's Empire in Aſia. It lies in the Province of Soret, near the Bottom of the Gulph. 'Tis conjectur'd to be the ſame with the old Aſtacapra, a Town of India on this ſide the Ganges. * Baudrand.

JANBOU, a Spring and the Name of a Caſtle ſituate in an Arabian Province call'd Higiaz. 'Tis diſtant from the Town Medina eight Days Journey of a Caravan, and is one of the Stages where the Pilgrims to Meccha always reſt, for the Benefit of the Water. This Caſtle is but a Day's Journey from the Red Sea. for which reaſon the Africans who embark upon this Sea join the Pilgrims Caravan who come from Turkey to Meccha. The Neighbouring Country is not ſo barren as the Soil more remote upon this Route; for here are a great many Date Trees which produce excellent Fruit, and beſides the Country produces good Corn. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

JANNA or Janina, a Town in Greece; it ſtands upon a little Lake of the ſame Name near the Head of the River Peneus, about 30 Leagues from Lariſſa to the Weſt. Some Geographers will have it, that all Theſſaly is call'd Janna from this Town. 'Tis commonly taken for the old Caſſiope Dolopum. 'Tis ſtill pretty conſiderable in the Reſidence of a Governor, and the See of an Archbiſhop. * Baudrand.

* JANSENIUS (Cornelius), Biſhop of Ypres. To what has been already obſerv'd upon this Article in Morery, a farther Account may be added concerning this Biſhop's Works; for inſtance, a moral Diſcourſe for reforming the Inward Man, deliver'd in a Speech when he enter'd into the Monaſtick Society: His Alexipharmacum againſt the Miniſters of Bois-le-Duc; His Spongia Notarum, in Defence of his Alexipharmacum againſt Voetius: His Commentaries upon the Pentateuch and the four Goſpels; Two Reſolutions of Caſes of Conſcience concerning the obligatory Force of the King of Spain's Edicts with Reference to the Coin, and the Oaths requir'd of the Magiſtracy; he likewiſe wrote a Book, entitled, Mars Gallicus, under the Name of Alexander Patricius Armachanus, in which he endeavours to make out that France was to blame in giving Aſſiſtance to the rebellious and heretical Dutch. But of all his Works his Auguſtinus made the greateſt Noiſe. 'Tis written upon the Subject of Grace, and treats the Points of Free Will and Predeſtination, and runs counter to the Doctrine of Molina and his Party. He wrought a great while with Application upon this Performance, finiſh'd it before his Death, and by his laſt Will and Teſtament ſubmitted his Aſſertions to the Pope's Determination. Fromond and Calenus his Executors printed this Book at Louvain, A. D. 1640, where very little time paſs'd before it occaſion'd great Diſturbances in the Univerſity, and a great many Tracts appear'd both for and againſt it. The Jeſuits in particular printed ſeveral Theſes on the contrary ſide. Pope Urban VIII. in Order to lay the Diſpute aſleep, confirm'd the Conſtitutions of Pius V. and Gregory XIII. againſt ſome Propoſitions maintain'd by Baius: This was done in his Bull dated March 6^th^ 1642, where he forbids the publiſhing of Janſenius's Book and the Jeſuits Theſes, with a particular Cenſure of the Auguſtinus, charging it with reviving the Propoſitions condemn'd in his Predeceſſor's Bulls. This Bull publiſh'd at Louvain, inſtead of ſilencing the Diſpute, made it grow warmer. It was not long before this Conteſt reach'd France, where 'twas manag'd with no leſs Heat. The Judgment paſs'd upon it was afterwards carry'd to Rome by the French Biſhops, who mov'd his Holineſs to condemn five Propoſitious, which contain'd the main Doctrine of Janſenius's Auguſtinus. Innocent X. condemned theſe Propoſitions, and reckon'd 'em to Janſenius in his Bull of May 31, 1653. The Aſſembly of the French Clergy meeting in 1654 and 1655, receiv'd Pope Innocent X.'s Bull, and the latter Aſſembly drew up a Form for cenſuring theſe Propoſitions, faſtening all of 'em upon Janſenius. Thoſe, who appear'd for Janſenius, went ſo far as to condemn the five Propoſitions, but maintaining withal, that they were not in the Auguſtinus, and that Janſenius's Doctrine was very different from the Meaning of theſe cenſur'd Propoſitions. Anthony Arnaud, Arnaud, Doctor of the Sorbonne, having aſſerted in a printed Letter that he queſtion'd whether theſe five Propoſitions could be found in Janſenius, was cenſured and expell'd the Faculty of Divinity in Paris, with ſeveral other Doctors who refus'd ſubſcribing the Cenſure. The Form drawn up in the Aſſembly of the Clergy in 1655, was confirm'd in another, A. D. 1656. And Pope Alexander VII. by his Bull dated October 16 the ſame Year, declar'd the five Propoſitions extracted from Janſenius, and that they had been already condemn'd in the Senſe aſſerted by that Author. The Aſſemblies of the Clergy met in 1660, 1661, and 1664 ordered the ſigning of the Form abovemention'd, which was farther ſupported by the King's Declaration of April 29th.

Being thus reinforc'd, 'twas carry'd thro' all the Dioceſes of France, and ſign'd by the Eccleſiaſticks, Monks, and Nuns. Thoſe who refus'd ſigning were interdicted and excommunicated. They were likewiſe upon the Point of proſecuting four French Biſhops, who in their publick Mandates had diſtinguiſh'd the Fact from the Right, and declar'd they requir'd no more than a Submiſſion of Silence with Reſpect to the Fact; However, the Buſineſs was accommodated, A. D. 1668. under the Pontificate of Clement IX, who was contented that theſe Biſhops and their Clergy ſhould only ſubſcribe the Form without farther Explanation, tho' at the ſame time they had declar'd they ſhould not require the ſame Submiſſion for the Fact, as for the Right. Afterwards the Conteſt about ſigning the Form reviv'd both in Flanders and France. As to the Diſputes in Flanders Innocent XII. declar'd by his Brief of February 6th 1694, directed to the Flemiſh Biſhops, that there was no Neceſſity of making any Addition to the Form, and that 'twas ſufficient that thoſe that ſign'd it did it ſincerely, without Diſtinction, Reſtriction or Expoſition; condemning the Propoſitions drawn out of Janſenius's Book in the Senſe which lies fairly upon the Letter, and in the obvious Terms couch'd in the Propoſitions. The Reſolution of a Caſe of Conſcience ſign'd by forty Doctors, where the Diſtinction between Fact and Right was allow'd, renew'd the Controverſy in France at the Beginning of the preſent Century. In fine, Pope Clemens XI. in his Bull of July 15th 1705. declared with reference to all theſe Diſputes, that a reſpectful Silence was not a ſufficient Length of Obedience due to the Conſtitutions, and that all the Faithful ought to condemn the Senſe of Janſenius's Book in the five Propoſitions as Heretical Aſſertions; and that this Cenſure ought to come from the Heart as well as from the Tongue, and that no body can fairly ſign the Form any lower than this Sentiment.

This Conſtitution, notwithſtanding it was receiv'd by a general Aſſembly of the French Clergy held, A. D. 1705, and publiſh'd by the late King's Authority thro' the Kingdom, was not ſucceſsful enough to ſilence the Conteſt, eſpecially in the Low Countries, where they found the Expedient of putting different Senſes upon the Conſtitution.

And here the Dutch Supplementer ſubjoins, that the Conteſt has grown higher ever ſince the Pope by his Conſtitution September 13th 1713. condemn'd 101 Propoſitions extracted from the Annotations or Moral Reflections upon the New Teſtament publiſh'd by Father Queſnel, the leading Perſon of thoſe call'd Janſeniſts: For, notwithſtanding the late French King, the Gallican Clergy, and the Sorbonne enjoin'd Submiſſion to the Conſtitution, there are ſome Biſhops and Doctors who refus'd to ſubſcribe without a Latitude for Explanation. * Vit. Janſ. à la tête de ſon Auguſtin. Valere André, Bibliot. Belg. Sandere, Fland. Illuſt. Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. Le Mire, Hiſtoire du Janſeniſme. Ecrits pour & contre le livre de Janſenius. Leideker, Hiſtoria Janſeniana. Du Mas, Hiſtoire des Cinq Propoſitions.

JANSON (Arſenius), a Monk of the Abby la Trape, who, while he was a ſecular Perſon, had the Diſtinction of Count Roſemberg. He was born in Paris, A. D. 1655. After having gone thro' the Education and Exerciſes cuſtomary for young Gentlemen, he engag'd in a military Profeſſion, where he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf very honourably, and manag'd the Commiſſions he carried with great Reputation. At laſt, being weary of the World, and prompted by Religious Inclination, he retir'd to la Trape, receiv'd a Religious Habit there, December 1702, and was profeſſed the Year following. In 1704. he was pitch'd upon to carry the Reformation of his Houſe into the Dominions of the Duke of Florence.

The Abbot de la Trape ſent him off with eight Monks, four Novices, and four Freres Convers, or converted Brothers. This religious Colony was received by the Great Duke with all imaginable Marks of Eſteem and Veneration. His Highneſs aſſign'd him the Abby of Buon-Sollazzo, where Arſenius Janſon dy'd June 1710; having ſpent his time there in a very exemplary and ſelf denying Manner. * Compendio della Vita de Franceſco Arſenio di Gianſon, &c.

JANUARY, the firſt Roman Month of the Year. 'Twas not in Romulus's Calendar, but added by Numa, who plac'd it about the Winter Solſtice; whereas before, March ſtood at the Head of the Year, being fix'd by Romulus at the Vernal Equinox.

January was ſo call'd in Honour of Janus, becauſe the Romans ſuppos'd this pretended Deity preſided over the Beginning of all Buſineſs, and therefore 'twas thought proper the Month dedicated to him ſhould lead the Year: or, it may be, they went upon the Fancy of Janus's being painted with two Faces, as an Emblem of his ſingular Prudence in looking backwards and forwards; and upon this Score they thought it ſuitable to conſecrate a Month to him, which looks back upon the paſt, and forward upon the enſuing Year. And tho' the firſt Day of this Month, like the Kalends of the other Months, was under the Protection of Juno, yet this did not hinder the Kalends of January being particularly appropriated to the Honour of Janus, who had a Cake of new ſifted Meal ſacrific'd to him, with new made Salt, Incenſe and Wine. Upon this Day all the Mechanicks began ſomething of their Art and their Trade; the Men of Letters did the ſame, fancying that an active Beginning of the Year would carry their Induſtry to the End of it. This we may learn from Ovid,

Poſtea mirabar cur non ſine litibus eſſet
Prima dies. Cauſam percipe, Janus ait.
Tempora commiſi naſcentia rebus agendis,
Totus ab Auſpicio ne foret Annus iners.
Quiſque ſuas Artes ob idem delibat agendo,
Nec plus quàm ſolitum teſtificatur Opus.

The Conſuls before choſen, took the Chair, and enter'd upon their Office this Day, eſpecially when the Government was in the Emperor's Hands; and to ſpeak preciſely, this Cuſtom began during the latter End of the Republick, in the Conſulate of Quintus Fulvius Nobilior, and Titus Annius Luſcus, in the Year of Rome DCI. To return, upon this Day the Conſuls march'd to the Capitol attended with a Crowd all in new Cloaths; and here Jupiter Capitolinus had two white Bulls never yoked ſacrific'd to him, beſide a great deal of Incenſe and other Perfumes ſpent in the Temple. The Flamines together with the Conſuls, during this religious Solemnity, offer'd their Vows for the Proſperity of the Empire and the Emperor, after having taken an Oath of Allegiance, and confirm'd all publick Acts done by his imperial Majeſty the preceding Year. Theſe Vows were likewiſe made, and the ſame Oath taken by the reſt of the Magiſtracy and the People. Tacitus relates that an Information was preferr'd againſt Thraſeas for purpoſely declining every Year to appear at the Solemnity, where the Magiſtracy ſwore Allegiance, and the publick Vows were offer'd for the happy Reign of the Emperor. Ovid gives a Detail of all theſe Ceremonies.

Cernis odoratis ut luceat ignibus Æther,
Et ſonet accenſis ſpica ciliſſa focis?
Flamma nitore ſuo Templorum verberat aurum,
Et tremulum ſummâ ſpargit in æde jubar.
Veſtibus intactis Tarpias itur in arces:
Et Populus Feſto concolor ipſe ſuo eſt.
Jamque novi præeunt faſces, nova purpura fulget,
Et nova conſpicuum pondera ſentit ebur.

Colla rudes Operum prebent ferienda Juvenci,
Quos aluit Campis Herba Faliſca ſuis.

This Day the Romans laid aſide all old Grudges and ill Humour, and took care not to ſpeak ſo much as one ominous or untoward Word, as Pliny informs us; Cautum erat apud Romanos, ne quod mali ominis Verbum Kalendis Januariis efferretur.

Upon this Day 'twas cuſtomary for Friends an Acquaintance to preſent each other, the Preſents were called Strenæ. The Beginning of theſe New-Years Gifts is reckon'd to Tatius King of the Sabines, after the Alliance made between him and Romulus: For the Tradition goes that this Prince, to ſhew his Regard for thoſe who had done him good Service in his Conteſts with the Romans, us'd to ſend each of 'em on New-Year's Day a Branch of Laurel, taken out of the Grove of the Goddeſs Strenua, together with a Compliment, and wiſhing them an happy Year. This we may learn from Symmachus in a Letter from him to the Emperors Theodoſius and Arcadius; Strenarum uſus adolevit Auctoritate Tatii Regis, qui verbenas felicis Arboris ex Luco Strenuæ anni novi Auſpices primus accepit. The Romans took eſpecial Care to keep themſelves pleaſant and diverted this firſt Day, believing the reſt of the Year would take its Complexion from thence. * Ovid. de Faſt. Lib. I. Verſ. 75. & 161. Tacit. Annal, Lib. XVI. Symmach. Lib. X. Epiſt 28. Danet.

* JANUS, for King of Arcadia in Morery Vol. I, read King of Crete.

JAPHA, a Town in Galilee near Jotapata, within the Tribe of Zabulun. 'Twas the largeſt, beſt fortified and moſt Populous Town in the Province. Joſephus ſurrounded it with a double Wall to make it impregnable againſt the Romans in Caſe they ſhould beſiege it. But theſe Fortifications, tho' very conſiderable, were too weak for the Bravery of the Enemy. While Veſpaſian was employ'd at the Siege of Jotapat, he detach'd Trajan, afterwards Emperor, to Japha with a Body of two thouſand Foot and a thouſand Horſe. Theſe Troops kill'd and routed twelve thouſand Burghers, who were ſo hardy as to take the Field, and fight this Roman Detachment. Soon after, when Titus came up with a Reinforcement of Fifteen hundred Men, an Aſſault was made at two diſtant Places, and the Town was taken by Storm. To be ſomewhat particular, the ſcaling Ladders were mounted on all Sides, inſomuch that the Galileans after a ſlight Reſiſtance quitted the Walls, and Titus with his Men enter'd pell-mell. And now the Burghers did all that could be expected from Men of Reſolution to defend their Liberty and their Lives: Even the Women exceeding the Courage of their Sex, charg'd the Romans, kill'd 'em a great many Men, and ſold their Lives very dear. This Diſpute continu'd ſix Hours; but at laſt the braveſt being either kill'd or diſabled, the Remainder threw down their Arms. And now all the Men the Romans met with, either in the Streets or Houſes, were put to the Sword; and none ſpar'd but the Women and little Children, who were made Slaves. This happen'd upon the 15th of June in the 3d Year of Nero's Reign. By the way, this Town is call'd Japhia in Joſhua xix. 12. * Joſeph. in Vita ſua & Lib. III. Cap. 21. de Bello Judaico. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

* JARETTA, one of the largeſt Rivers in Sicily. It riſes in the Valley De Demonâ, between the Mountain Madonia and Mont Gibel, and after having taken in the Detaino, it runs along the Skirts of the Valley del Noto, and falls into the Gulph of Catanea. Some Geographers take it for the Simœtheus of the Ancients, which others make the River of St. Paul, which falls into the ſame Gulph two Leagues from Jaretta to the South. * Baudrand.

IBEK (Cothbeddin Ibek), Slave to Schehabeddin Prince of the Dynaſty of the Gaurides or Gourides, made himſelf Sovereign of Deli in India. He was at firſt ſix Years Governor of this Province: But the Prince, who gave him his Commiſſion, was no ſooner dead, when Ibek made himſelf Maſter of the Country, with an Acquiſition of ſeveral other Provinces in Indoſtan. He reign'd 14 Years after the Death of Schehabeddin, and his Conqueſts were reckon'd conſiderable enough to have a Book written on Purpoſe to deſcribe 'em. This Hiſtory is entitled Tage al Marther. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

IBEK (Azzeddin Ibek), firſt Sultan of the Mamaluke Turks who reign'd in Egypt. He was Cup-Bearer to Malek al Seleh Sultan of Egypt, of the Line of the Jobites. This Sultan being dead, and his Son Turanſchah aſſaſſinated, his Widow Schagredor married Ibek, who got himſelf elected Sultan by the Mamalukes, to reign jointly with Malek al Aſchraf a Child of ſix Years old, who was the laſt Sovereign of the Jobites in Egypt.

Ibek ſoon diſpatch'd this Child, and reign'd alone. But his Government was but ſhort: For his Princeſs the Sultaneſs, who rais'd him to the Throne, quickly threw him out by a violent Death: This Lady, it ſeems, had a Mind to govern by herſelf, which ſhe did during her Son's Minority. Ibek was ſlain in the Year of the Hegira 655, having reign'd ſix Years and eleven Months. He was ſucceeded by his Son Al Malek al Manſor. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

IBELIN; a Town in Paleſtine formerly call'd Gath. 'Tis famous by this Name of Ibelin, for having been the rendevous of the Cruſade in 1099, when Godfrey of Bollen after the taking of Jeruſalem defeated the Soldan of Egypt near Askelon, who came to relieve this Town with a formidable Army. This Mahometan Prince coming up too late, after the taking of the Place, and being forc'd upon fighting, had an hundred thouſand Men kill'd upon the Field of Battel, without reckoning thoſe that were drown'd and crowded to Death at the Gates of Askelon. On the other ſide, the Chriſtians loſt never a Man of Note, not ſo much as one Trooper, and very few of the Foot. * Hiſtoire des Croiſades Lib. III. Ann. 1099.

IBRAHIM, Son of Maſſoud VIII. Sultan of the Line of the Gaznevides. He was Grandſon to Sultan Mahmoud Son of Sebecteghin, Founder of this Dynaſty, and ſucceeded his Brother Ferokhzad. This Sultan kept on the Peace which his Brother had made with the Selguicides, upon Condition they made no Incurſions upon him. He had the Reputation of a very juſt and pious Prince, notwithſtanding the frequent Wars he was engag'd in with his Neighbours in Indoſtan. He was very ſucceſsful in his military Undertakings, which gave him the Title of Modhaffer or Manzor, that is, Conqueror. He reign'd 42 Years and dy'd in the Year of the Hegira 492, which anſwers to the Year A. D. 1098. This Ibrahim built a great many Moſques, Chapels and Hoſpitals. That Part of the Night which was not ſpent in Prayer, he employ'd in going round the Town Gazna, where he gave large Alms to all in want. He faſted three Months in the Year. He had thirty ſix Sons, who were all Perſons of Reputation either in the military or the Learned Liſt: He had likewiſe forty Daughters, who were all married to Perſons of Probity and Doctors of the Law; for Ibrahim refus'd to diſpoſe of 'em to other Princes, who notwithſtanding had ſo great a Regard for him, that they ſtil'd him the Lord and Maſter of all the Sultans. He built a great many Towns, which he call'd the Habitation of Goodneſs, the Reſidence of Faith, and ſuch other religious Names. Being a good Penman, he copy'd every Year an Alcoran with his own Hands, and ſent it with rich Preſents to Meccha. Does not ſuch Mahometan Exemplarineſs as this, ſays D'Herbelot, make Chriſtian Princes aſham'd of falling ſo much ſhort of it? * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

ICHMIAZIN, a large Town in Perſia in the Province of Erivan, about four Leagues from the Town of that Name to the Weſt. There is a Monaſtery in this Town where the Armenian Patriarch reſides, and where the Patriarchal Church is magnificently built. There are likewiſe two other Churches, and 'tis for this Reaſon that they ſometimes call it Tre Chieſe or Uck-Kliſſe, that is, three Churches. * Maty.

ICONOLOGY, a Science which deſcribes the Figures and Repreſentations both of Men and pretended Deities. And here, every one has the Properties which belong to 'em, and diſtinguiſh 'em from the reſt. Thus for the Purpoſe, Saturn is repreſented as an old Man with a Scythe: Jupiter has a Thunderbolt in his Hand with an Eagle by his Side: Neptune is painted or engraven with a Trident, ſitting in his Chariot drawn with Sea Horſes: Pluto has a Fork with two Tines, riding in a Chariot with four black Horſes: Cupid has a Bow and Arrows, a Quiver and a Torch, and ſometimes a Muffler over his Eyes: Apollo is ſometimes repreſented with a Bow and Arrows, and ſometimes with a Harp: Mercury has a Caduceus or Wand in his Hand, with Wings on his Hat, and at his Heels: Mars is arm'd cap-a-pe with a Cock, which was conſecrated to him: Bacchus appears crown'd with Ivy, arm'd with a Thyrſus, with a Tyger's Skin over him, ſometimes drawn with Tygers, and follow'd with a Train of Menades: Hercules has a Lyon's Skin for his Surtout with a Club in his Hand: Juno rides in a Cloud with a Peacock at her Side: Venus travels drawn with Swans or Pigeons in her Chariot: Pallas has an Head-piece on, leans upon her Shield call'd Ægis, with an Owl for her Attendant: Diana is dreſs'd like a Huntreſs with Bow and Arrows in her Hand: Ceres has a Sickle and a Sheaf, &c. And as the Heathens multiply'd their pretended Deities to a vaſt Number, the Poets and Painters carry'd their Fancy farther, and gave an Emblematical Figure to imaginary Beings. Thus, they repreſented the Divine Attributes, the Seaſons, Provinces, Rivers, Arts and Sciences, Virtues and Vices, Paſſions and Diſeaſes in corporeal Shapes, which mark'd the Quality and Diſtinction of thoſe Things. Thus Force is painted a Woman with a Martial Air, leaning upon a Cube with a Lion at her Feet: The Emblem of Wiſdom is a Looking-Glaſs with a Serpent twiſted about it: Temperance has an Hieroglyphical Bridle: Juſtice has a Sword and a Pair of Scales: Fortune is painted with a Muffler and a Wheel: And Opportunity has a Tuft of Hair on the Forepart of her Head, with Baldneſs behind. The Emblematick Figures for Rivers are Crowns of Reed and Pitchers. Europe has a clos'd Crown, a Scepter and a Horſe. Aſia has a Cenſor to burn Perfumes in, &c. But to go no farther in the Detail of the different Figures invented by Poets, Painters and Medaliſts, it were to be wiſh'd the Painters were better Maſters in Iconology; for ſometimes out of Ignorance in this Faculty they fall into very groſs Miſtakes. * Philoſtratus. Apollodorus. Hyginus. Lillius Giraldus de Imagin. Deor. &c.

IDRA, a ſmall Town unwall'd. 'Tis the Capital of Dalecarlia in Sweden, and ſtands upon the River Elſinam, about twenty five Leagues above its falling into the Lake of Silian. * Baudrand.

* IDUMEA. For Eſau the youngeſt Son of Abraham in Morery Vol. I, read the eldeſt Son of Iſaac.

JENA or Jeſne, Jena Deſna in Latin; a Town of the Upper Hungary. It ſtands upon the Confines of Tranſilvania, five Leagues from Giula to the Eaſt, and ſeven from Great Waradin to the South Eaſt. Jena is fortify'd according to the old Manner, with a Wall flank'd with Towers, and ſurrounded with a Ditch: It has likewiſe a Citadel with Fortifications much of the ſame Strength. * Baudrand.

JENIZZAR, a Town in Macedon about nine Leagues from the Town Salonichi to the South Eaſt. Some Geographers believe it built upon the Ruins of the old Pella, where Alexander the Great was born. * Baudrand.

* JERICHO: For the Wilderneſs of Jordan in Morery Vol. I, read the Wilderneſs of Judah.

* JEROBOAM II. For his Grandfather Jehoaz in Morery Vol. I, read his Grandfather Jehu.

* JEROM. To what is ſaid upon this Article in Morery Vol. I, a more particular Account of his Works may be ſubjoin'd: Amongſt theſe may be reckon'd his Critique upon the Bible. He firſt corrected the Greek Text of the Septuagint, and reform'd the common Edition upon Origen's Hexapla. He afterwards made a new Tranſlation from the Septuagint, in which with two Crotchets or Hooks he mark'd thoſe Places of the Septuagint, which were not in the Hebrew Text, and added the Verſion of what was in the Hebrew Text, but omitted by the Septuagint, diſtinguiſh'd theſe Additions with an Aſterisk; ſo that both what was added, and what was wanting in the Septuagint, might be ſeen at a ſingle View. We have this Verſion of St. Jerom upon the Prophets thrown in to his Commentaries.

This was St. Jerom's firſt Performance upon the Bible, which he undertook, when young, in his firſt Retirement. Afterwards, having made himſelf Maſter of the Hebrew Language, he conceiv'd a whole Tranſlation of the Bible from the Original would be no ſmall Service to the Church. Upon this Thought he undertook the Task, and publiſh'd a new Latin Tranſlation of all the Books of the old Teſtament, which the Jews reckon Canonical, together with the Books of Judith and Tobit, prefixing a Preface to each Book.

This new Verſion of St. Jerom was ill receiv'd at firſt: The Generality being much prepoſſeſs'd in Favour of the Septuagint, St. Jerom's Tranſlation was look'd upon as a raſh and dangerous Novelty. Even St. Auguſtin diſlik'd it, and took the Freedom to acquaint him that he had better have kept to the Septuagint's Tranſlation than have given Scandal and Diſturbance to the Church by making a new one. Ruffinus, and the reſt of his Enemies mounted the Impeachment higher, and charg'd him with corrupting the holy Scripture, and with putting a ſlight upon the Authority of the Apoſtles, in rejecting the Septuagint which they made uſe of: And all this to bring in a new Verſion, borrow'd, as one may ſay, from the Jews. All this Reproach did not hinder St. Jerom from publiſhing his Tranſlation.

However, he took care to vindicate himſelf, and ſhew the Injuſtice of theſe Cenſures, which he has done in moſt of his Prefaces. Sometimes he complains of the Ingratitude of his Contemporaries, who inſtead of Commendation made a Crime of the Service he had done the Church. And for a farther Defence, he declares he did not engage in this Undertaking to condemn the Septuagint, which he both approves and commends, having formerly beſtow'd ſome Pains in the correcting and tranſlating part of it; and that his preſent Deſign was only to publiſh a ſerviceable Performance. To this he ſometimes ſubjoins that he thought himſelf oblig'd to make a new Tranſlation, becauſe the Septuagint was faulty. But he inſiſts moſt commonly that the principal Motive, which led him to a new Tranſlation, was the Unaccurateneſs of the Septuagint, and the frequent Diſconformity it bears to the Hebrew Text, to which we ought to adhere as the true Original. For this Reaſon almoſt always, when he mentions the Original, he calls it the Hebrew Verity. Farther, he reinforces his Apology by obſerving that the Jews, when we diſpute with 'em, charge us with unfair Citations of the Scriptures, always objecting that the Septuagint does not keep cloſe to the Original: Now the Chriſtians who neither underſtood Hebrew, nor had a Tranſlation from that Language, found themſelves at a Loſs for an Anſwer, and were forc'd either to ſay nothing, or apply to the Rabbies.

To proceed, the Tranſlation of the Pſalms in the Vulgate is certainly not St. Jerom's: 'Tis not done from the Hebrew but from the Septuagint, tho' it ſometimes falls in with the Verſions of Theodoſion, Aquila and Symmachus. In ſhort, there are ſeveral Places in the Vulgate, which are Remains of the old Italick Verſion which lie intermix'd with St. Jerom's new one. The Tranſlations likewiſe of Wiſdom, Eccleſiaſticus, the Maccabees, Baruch, Jeremy's Letter, and the Additions to Eſther and Daniel are none of this Father's. For theſe Books, neither the Jews nor St. Jerom himſelf (as appears by his Prologus Galeatus) believed any Part of the Canon.

As to the New Teſtament, St. Jerom undertook no new Tranſlation. Here he went no farther than comparing the old Latin Tranſlation with the Greek Original, and correcting that Verſion where it differ'd moſt remarkably from the Text. That this was the fartheſt of his Performance he acquaints us in his Preface to the Goſpels addreſs'd to Damaſus, in his Epiſtle to St. Auguſtin, and in his Book of Eccleſiaſtical Writers. This Undertaking was much better receiv'd, than his Verſion of the old Teſtament from the Hebrew, becauſe moſt People underſtood the Greek, but very few the Hebrew Original.

St. Jerom wrote Commentaries upon the Great and Leſſer Prophets, upon Eccleſiaſtes, the Goſpel of St. Matthew, and on the Epiſtles of St. Paul to the Galatians and Epheſians, to Titus and Philemon. In his Commentaries, his Method is, firſt to give the old Italick Tranſlation for the old Teſtament, to which he commonly joins his new one. After this he takes care to find out the Meaning of the Hebrew Text, and compares it with the ſeveral Greek Verſions. Then he cites the other Places of Scripture, which carry a Reſemblance to what he is expounding. By Virtue of theſe Obſervations he endeavours to clear the literal Senſe of the Scripture, to explain the Prophecies, and ſhew the Time and Manner of their Accompliſhment. And here he is ſo frank as to confeſs, that in the Courſe of his Expoſitions, he frequently does no more than tranſlate ſome Paſſages of Origen's Commentaries, and other Greek Writers without ſo much as naming 'em: For this Reaſon he pretends himſelf not anſwerable for the Miſtakes and Contradictions that occur in his Commentaries, becauſe he is only a Reporter of other Men's Sentiments without approving 'em: Neither ought his Aſſent to be inferr'd becauſe ſuch Paſſages are not condemn'd by him; for he ſuſpended his Cenſure only in Tenderneſs to the Reputation of others: And in ſhort, that his charitable Silence ought not to be made a Handle for Calumny: And that his Enemies were unfair in charging him with Errors foreign to his Thoughts, and which he had refuted in other Places.

Farther, St. Jerom wrote Polemical Tracts againſt Helvidius, Jovinian, and Vigilantius; againſt the Pelagians, the Originiſts, and Ruffinus; He likewiſe wrote an hundred and fifty four Epiſtles, ſome of which are Panegyricks, ſome go upon Moral Inſtruction, and many of 'em are a Critique upon the Bible. He wrote a Tract concerning Authors of Character, in which he gives an Account of the Lives together with the Titles of Books, of thoſe Eccleſiaſtical Writers who flouriſhed before him. He tranſlated ſome of Origen's Homilies, and Euſebius's Chronicon: But as to this laſt Performance we are to obſerve, that 'tis more than a bare Tranſlation of Euſebius: For here St. Jerom, as he declares in his Preface, has added a great many things. For Inſtance, all the Hiſtory, as this Father informs us, from Ninus and Abraham, to the Deſtruction of Troy, is a cloſe Tranſlation from the Greek; but that after the taking of Troy to the 20th Year of Conſtantine, he has added and alter'd a great many things, collected from Suetonius and other Latin Authorities; and laſtly, he has continu'd Euſebius's Chronicon from the 20th Year of Conſtantine's Reign to the ſixth Conſulate of Valens, and the ſecond of Valentinian, that is, to A. D. 378.

To add ſomething by way of Character; St. Jerom was certainly the moſt learned of all the Fathers. He was a great Linguiſt, and underſtood the Polite Part of Learning: He was very well ſkill'd in Profane and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, and was Maſter of the Pagan Philoſophy: He was thoroughly acquainted with the Poets, Hiſtorians and Orators both Greek and Latin: He underſtood the ſublime Manner, and has ornamented his Writings with ſome of their fineſt Thoughts and Expreſſions. He wrote with a great deal of Life and Correctneſs. 'Tis true he does not affect a pompous Elocution, where the Language ſwells, and the Periods are round and muſical; but then he thinks and dreſſes nobly enough. In a Word, he has drawn the fineſt Paſſages in moſt Arts and Sciences into his Writings, where they look naturally handſome, without Whimſy and Dragging. His Commentaries upon the Scripture are written in a Stile different from the reſt of his Works. Here he throws off Flouriſh and Ornament, and aims no farther than to explain the Text with Eaſe and Perſpicuity. As to his Temper, he was warm and puſhing. He attacks his Adverſaries with a great deal of Fire, rallies 'em to Ridicule, ſtings 'em with Satyr, and treats 'em with Language of Contempt. But notwithſtanding his great Learning his Heat ſometimes exceeds his Judgment in his controverſial Writings, and here the Spirit and Vehemence is overproportion'd to that which is ſolid. To conclude, the beſt Edition of this Father's Works is publiſh'd by the Benedictines. * Marcellin, Chron. Baron, Annal. Du Pin, Nouvelle Biblioth, &c. Tom. III. Cent. V.

JERON, in Latin Jerona, Jovis Urii Fanum. 'Twas formerly a Town in Bithynia in the Leſſer Aſia: But now 'tis only a ſmall Fort upon the Streight of Conſtantinople, near the Town Scutari. * Baudrand.

JEROVILIA or Anſiloca, in Latin Argos Amphilochium, or Amphilochia a Town in Greece, in the Diviſion of Epirus, upon the River Aſpri, to the Eaſt of the Town Larta: This Town is conſiderably large, and has a great many Remains of its Antiquity. * Baudrand.

JERVENLAND or Jerveland, a little Country in Eſtonia, Part of Livonia. There's nothing conſiderable in it but the Town Witenſteim, which is the Capital. * Baudrand.

JESI, in Latin Aeſium, Aeſis, a Town in the Eccleſiaſtical State in Italy: It ſtands upon the River Fiumeſino in the South Weſt Part of Marca Anconitana. 'Tis not very large; however, 'tis a Biſhop's See, who has the Privilege of being Suffragan only to the Pope. * Baudrand.

JESUITESSES, an Order of Nuns, who had Monaſteries in Italy and Flanders. They follow'd the Jeſuits Rule, and notwithſtanding their Order was not approv'd by the See of Rome, they had ſeveral Houſes which they call'd Colleges, and others call'd Noviciates, where they had a Superior or Lady Abbeſs, who took their Vows of Poverty, Chaſtity, and Obedience; but then they did not confine themſelves to the Cloyſter, but gallop'd abroad and preached. They were two Engliſh young Women in Flanders, who being inſtructed and puſh'd on by Father Gerard, and ſome other Jeſuits, ſet up this Order. The Jeſuit's Deſign was to ſend theſe Women for Miſſionaries into England. One of 'em, whoſe Name was Ward, was a Sort of a General over more than two hundred Nuns. Pope Urban VIII. ſuppreſs'd this Order in his Bull bearing date January 13th 1630; which Inſtrument was diſpatch'd to his Nuntio for the Lower Germany, and printed at Rome, A. D. 1632. * Heidegger, Hiſt. Papatûs. Sect. 35. M. Simon, Bibliothec. Critic.

JESUS, Son of Gamala, a Perſon of extraordinary Vertue, and one of the moſt conſiderable in the Jewiſh Sacerdotal Family. He omitted nothing for checking the Sallies of the ſeditious Zealots, who under that pompous Title committed all Manner of Barbarity and Profanation in the Temple at Jeruſalem. He likewiſe made Head againſt the Idumeans, who came to join theſe Wretches: But being not ſtrong enough to diſpute their Paſſage, himſelf and Ananus were the firſt that were cut in Pieces. * Joſeph, de Bell. Judaic. Lib. IV. Cap. 18.

JETSENGEN or Jetſeſem, a Country in Japan. 'Tis one of the five principal Diviſions in the Iſle of Niphon. It ſtretches thro' the whole Breadth of the Iſland from North to South, with the Province Quanto to the Eaſt, and Jetſengo to the Weſt. There are ten Principalities within it. * Baudrand.

JEWS (the modern): Amongſt the Things moſt remarkable in the Religion and Cuſtom of the modern Jews may be reckon'd the following Particulars. I ſhall mention only thoſe which relate to Death, or the other World.

When any Perſon is buried, his neareſt Relations, that is, Father, Mother, Children, Husband, Wife, Brother, or Siſter, keep the Houſe a Week after the Funeral, ſitting on the Ground all the Time, excepting on the Sabbath Day when they go to Prayers, on which Day they have moſt Viſits and conſolary Diſcourſe made them than upon any other: During this Week they are neither to work, nor diſpatch any Buſineſs. The Husband and Wife are to lodge aſunder: And there comes at leaſt ten People Morning and Evening to ſay the cuſtomary Prayers with theſe near Relations, who are not to ſtir abroad. Their Devotions are concluded with a Prayer for the Soul of the Perſon deceaſed. They go into Mourning according to the Cuſtom of the Country where they lived, without being oblig'd to any ſuch Diſtinction ction of Habits. When the Week is ended, they go abroad to the Synagogue, where generally they light up Lamps, pray, and promiſe to give Alms for the Soul of the deceaſed. This charitable Service is repeated at the End of every Month, and every Year. If the dead Perſon is a Rabbin, or one of Figure and Condition, they make a Funeral Oration, by way of Panegyrick upon him. 'Tis cuſtomary for the Son to ſay the Gadiſe or holy Prayer every Morning and Evening in the Synagogue for his Father's or Mother's Soul, and this is to be done eleven Months together, and ſome amongſt 'em faſt upon every Anniverſary of their Death. After this Account of the Jews praying for the Souls of the deceaſed, it may not be amiſs to touch upon the Reaſon of this Practice: We are to obſerve then, that they believe there is a Paradiſe, which they call Gan-Hedem, where the bleſſed enjoy the beatifick Viſion. As for Hell, which they call Gheinam, they believe the Souls of the wicked are tormented there with Fire, and other Kinds of Puniſhment; that tho' ſome of 'em will be damned to all Eternity, yet others are thrown in for a certain Time. This Temporary Torture is that call'd Purgatory, which differs not at all from Hell in the Place, but only in the Time. They hold that no Jew uninfected with Hereſy, or Diſconformity to the Rabbins Regulations will be kept above a Year in Purgatory, and that moſt of 'em fall under this Claſs; for they believe there are but few damn'd to eternal Puniſhment for their Sins.

To proceed, ſome Jews believe Pythagoras's Tranſmigration, and that Death removes the Soul from one Body to another: This Travelling of Human Spirits they call Ghilgul, and endeavour to ſupport their Sentiment from ſeveral Paſſages in Job and Eccleſiaſtes. But this Opinion is not univerſal, and every body has Liberty to hold either ſide of the Queſtion.

It may not now be improper to give the Reader a ſhort Account of the thirteen Articles of the Jewiſh Creed: The Account ſhall be taken from a celebrated Jewiſh Rabbin Maimonides. This learned Author in his Explanation of the Miſna in the Tract Sanedrim and the Chapter Helec makes the following Report, receiv'd by all the Jews without the leaſt Contradiction.

I. That there is one God Creator of all things, the firſt Principle of all Beings, who is able to ſubſiſt and continue his Perfections without any Part of the Univerſe, but that nothing in the World can maintain their Exiſtence without him.

II. That God is an uncompounded indiviſible Eſſence; but that his Unity is different from all other Unities.

III. That God is an immaterial Being, and that no Corporeal Quality, however refin'd, can poſſibly make Part of his Eſſence.

IV. That God is eternal à Parte antè as well as à Parte poſt, and that every thing excepting the Deity had a Beginning in Time.

V. That God alone ought to be worſhipped, and that we ought to adore no other Beings either as Mediators or Interceſſors.

VI. That there has been Prophets qualified to receive divine Inſpiration, and that there may be ſuch for the future.

VII. That Moſes was the greateſt Prophet that has hitherto appeared, and that the Degrees of ſupernatural Light communicated to him were altogether ſingular, and much above the Communications and Illapſes vouchſaft to other Prophets.

VIII. That the Law which Moſes left them was all of it dictated by God Almighty, that there is not ſo much as a Syllable in it not receiv'd by Inſpiration; and that by Conſequence, the Traditionary Expoſitions of theſe Precepts, are entirely a Divine Revelation given to Moſes.

IX. That this Law is immutable, and that 'tis lawfull neither to add or diminiſh.

X. That God knows all our Actions, and governs them according to his Pleaſure.

XI. That God rewards the Obſervance, and puniſhes the Violation of his Law; that the beſt Rewards for Virtue are reſerv'd for the other World, and that the Damnation of the Soul, is the deepeſt Puniſhment.

XII. That a Meſſiah will appear of much more Merit and Luſtre than all the Kings before him; that tho' his coming is delay'd, we ought neither to doubt the Certainty, nor preſcribe the Time, and much leſs offer to foretel it from the Scripture.

XIII. That God will raiſe the dead at the laſt Period of Time, and paſs Judgment upon all Mankind; This Truth with the Conſequences of it, they maintain from the xii[th] of Daniel ℣. 2. And many of them that ſleep in the Duſt ſhall awake; ſome to everlaſting Life, and ſome to Shame and everlaſting Contempt.

Before this Article is taken leave of, a Word or two of their Excommunications and Confeſſions may not be amiſs. When they excommunicate any body they have him publickly curſed: When this Form has paſt upon him, 'tis not lawful for any Jew to ſpeak to him, or come near him within two Yards. He is bared coming into the Synagogue, and oblig'd to ſit barefoot upon the Ground, as if ſome Relation was dead: This Penance is to continue 'till he is abſolv'd by one or more Rabbins, and receives their Bleſſing. When the Caſe requires a ſolemn and extraordinary Excommunication, they meet in the Synagogue, light black Torches, and then winding a Horn, they pronounce Malediction upon the Perſon that has, or ſhall do ſuch a Thing, to which the Congregation anſwers, Amen.

As for Confeſſion they make none but to God Almighty in their Devotions: They have commonly a Form drawn up in Alphabetical Order, which they call Viddui. Every Letter takes in a Capital Sin, eſpecially one moſt frequently committed; thoſe of Knowledge and Ability, are particular in the Roll, and ſet down the Kinds and Circumſtances of their Sins. 'Tis cuſtomary to make this Confeſſion upon Mondays and Thurſdays, and upon all Faſt Days: On the Great Day of Expiation, they repeat this Confeſſion ſeveral times, and likewiſe when they are ſick, or in any great Danger, they make their Confeſſion before they go to Bed, and when they riſe. The Time appointed for Penance begins with the Month Elul, and laſts to the Day of Expiation: But moſt commonly they begin it with the Year, and carry it on to the ſolemn Day laſt mention'd. But if any Perſon finds his Conſcience uneaſy, all times are proper for him to ſhew his Compunction: If he is a Perſon of low Education, he asks ſome Rabbin's Advice: But provided he underſtands his Condition, and has been bred to read, he applies to thoſe Books which treat of Penance and reads what is proper for his Recovery, and upon the Directions he meets with there, he governs his Practice, and goes thro' Diſcipline, Faſting, Prayers, or Works of Charity. * Simonville or P. Simon Supplement Touchant les Samaritans, dans ſa Traduction de Leon de Modene.

IGUR or Aigur, a Clan of the Eaſtern Turks, who march'd to the Aſſiſtance of Ogouzkhan, when he was hard preſs'd in a War he was engag'd in againſt his Father and his Uncles, upon the Score of his Religion. Theſe Pagan Princes it ſeems would not ſuffer that Ogouzkhan ſhould renounce their Idolatry, and profeſs the Unity of the Godhead. They attack'd him with all their Force for this Diſconformity of Belief: And he muſt have ſunk under them, if his Neighbours of the ſame religious Perſuaſion had not join'd him with their Troops. Ogouz thus reinforc'd broke the Enemy, and call'd theſe Auxiliaries Igur or Aigur, which in the Language of the Country ſignifies Defence, Protection and Alliance. He form'd a diſtinct Militia out of this Clan, Clan, which encreaſing very much upon the Progreſs of time, ſettled in that part of Turkeſtan, which confines upon Cathai. Their Language is the ſame with that of the Cathaians, and ſo is their Calendar. After ſome time they turn'd Chriſtian, and had Biſhops in the Reign of Genghiskan; but they were not ſo happy to maintain their Creed, for at preſent they are either Idolaters or Mahometans. Idi Koub or Idi Gou, King of the Country of Igur, recogniz'd Genghiskan for his Sovereign, after he ſaw him Maſter of all the other Clans in Cathai and Turkeſtan. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

ILACK the Capital of a ſmall Territory of the ſame Name. 'Tis ſituate in Usbeck within Great Tartary, to the North of the River Cheſel, and twenty Leagues from the Town Alſhaſh. * Baudrand.

ILACK; ſee Ialak in Morery Vol. I.

ILDEPHONSUS, Hildephonſus, Iſleſonſus, or Alfonſus (Saint), a Diſciple of St. Iſidore of Sevil: Ildephonſus liv'd in the VII^th^ Century, and was firſt an Abbot, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Toledo. In the Year 653. he was preſent at the eighth Council held in this Town, but was then no more than a Prieſt. St. Engenius Biſhop of Toledo dying, A. D. 657. Ildephonſus was choſen to ſucceed him, and preſided nine Years in this Church, that is, 'till February 23^d^ 667, which was the Day of his Death. He wrote a Book of Eccleſiaſtical Authors, for a Continuation to that of Iſidore, and compos'd ſeveral other Works, of which his Succeſſor Julianus has given a Catalogue. Of all theſe Performances nothing remains but his Tract of the perpetual Virginity of our Lady: And here he attacks the reſpective Miſperſuaſions of Helvidius, Jovinian, and the Jews. The Life of fourteen illuſtrious Perſons publiſh'd in ſome Editions of Iſidore are reckon'd to this Archbiſhop; ſix Sermons likewiſe upon the Subject of the Aſſumption; two upon the Nativity of the bleſſed Virgin; and one upon her Purification carry the Name of Ildephonſus of Toledo: But they plainly belong to Authors of a later Age. His Works are publiſh'd by Feuardentius, and inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum; excepting the Tract De Viris Illuſtribus, which is printed with St. Jerom's Works and thoſe of Gennadius and Iſidore. Lucas Dacherius has printed ſome of this Ildephonſus's Letters in the firſt Tome of his Spicilegium. The Stile of Iſidore's genuine Works is conciſe and ſententious, and full of pious Reflections. * Bellarmin, de Script. Eccleſ. Baron, A. C. 667. Mariana, Hiſt. Tom. IX. M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. VII.

ILHEOS, in Latin Inſulæ, a Town in Southern America upon the Coaſt of Braſil, thirty Leagues to the South from the Bay of All Saints, and the Town of St. Salvador. Ilhoes is the Capital of a Diviſion, which lies between Bahia and Porto Seguro. * Baudrand.

* ILLUMINATI or Alumbrados, Hereticks. Soon after the Illuminati in Spain were ſuppreſs'd, there appear'd a new Heretical Sect in France who took the ſame Name. Picardy was the firſt infected Province; for here Peter Guerin Curé of St. Georges de Roye began to ſpread his Heterodoxies, and preach'd up a Sect call'd Guerenites; but ſome new Pretenders to extraordinary Diſcovery in the ſame Province call'd Illuminati joining the others ſettled in one Sect, and ſpreading afterwards into Flanders, were diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Illuminati. In the Year 1634. they began to be taken notice of; and King Lewis XIII, who was a Prince of Zeal, ordered they ſhould be proſecuted with the utmoſt Severity. The Judges of Roye and Mont Didier had Commiſſions to take 'em up and try 'em: In ſhort, the Priſons being fill'd with theſe Hereticks, the Heads of the Party were terrify'd and abſconded. But an Order of the Government being publiſh'd for a ſtrict Enquiry, the Matter was ſo vigorouſly puſh'd that this unhappy Sect was entirely extinguiſh'd in the Year 1635. Among other extravagant Opinions they held that Fryar Anthony Buckuet had a Syſtem of Belief and Practice reveal'd to him, which exceeded every thing Chriſtianity had yet been acquainted with; that by Vertue of this Method People might improve in a ſhort time, to the ſame Degree of Perfection and Glory which the Saints and the bleſſed Virgin had attain'd to; that this Improvement might be farther carry'd on to ſuch an Union that all our Actions would be deify'd; and when People were rais'd to this Pitch, they were to reſign their Minds wholly to God Almighty's Diſpoſal, without producing any Act themſelves. That none of the Doctors of the Church knew any thing of Devotion; That St. Peter was a well meaning Man, and that St. Paul ſcarce ever heard any thing about Devotion; that the whole Church lay in Darkneſs and Misbelief; that every one was at Liberty to follow the Suggeſtions of their Conſcience; that God regarded nothing but himſelf; that within ten Years their Doctrine would be receiv'd all the World over, and that then there would be no more Occaſion for Prieſts, Monks, and other ſuch religious Diſtinctions. By this Deſcription it appears that theſe Illuminati were much the ſame with the Quietiſts and Bourinianiſts. * Spondan, A. C. 1623. Gautier, Cron. Cent. XVII. Vittorio Ciri, Memoriæ Reconditæ.

INFANTE, CAPO INFANTE, a Cape upon Cafre Coaſt in Africk. 'Tis about ten Leagues from Cape Aiguelles, and 45 from the Cape of Good Hope to the Eaſt. There's a good Bay of the ſame Name near Cape Infante. * Baudrand.

INNICHEN, a Town of Tirol in Germany. 'Tis within the Biſhoprick of Brixen at the Head of the Drave. Some Geographers make Innichen the old Aguntum, a ſmall Town of Rhoſia, which others place at Doblach, a Town three Leagues from Innichen to the Weſt. * Baudrand.

INSCRIPTIONS. The cuſtomary manner of preſerving the Memory of conſiderable Actions among the Ancients, was Monumental Remains. At firſt, they went no farther than erecting Pillars or Stones to continue the notice of ſome memorable Event. Thus Jacob having had a ſupernatural Dream at Bethel, and being aſſur'd of God Almighty's Protection, took the Stone which had been his Pillow, ſet it up for a Pillar, and pour'd Oil upon it, as the Token of a Promiſe for Divine Protection, and that in Caſe of a proſperous Return the Stone might put him in Mind of the Holy Place, where he might offer the tenth of his Subſtance. When Jacob and Laban were reconcil'd, Laban threw up an Heap of Stones as a Mark of a good Underſtanding between 'em. Joſhua, by God's Direction, order'd the Children of Iſrael to carry twelve Stones out of the River Jordan, and ſet 'em up at Gilgal, to perpetuate the Remembrance of their miraculous Paſſage thro' the River. And thus the Tribe of Reuben, Gad, and half the Tribe of Manaſſeh, who were ſettled on the Eaſtern ſide of Jordan, ſet up an Altar of Stone at their Return from the Conqueſt of the Amorites, on the Bank of that River, as a Monumental Mark of their Relation to the other Tribes ſeated on the Weſtern ſide of that River. Thus Xenophon takes notice in his Account of the famous Retreat of the ten thouſand Græcians, that when the Soldiers, after a great deal of Fatigue and Danger, came up to the Euxine Sea, they rais'd a great Heap of Stones to teſtify their Joy, and record their Deliverance.

Theſe Stones at firſt convey'd but little Intelligence, excepting what could be gueſs'd from their Bulk and Situation. 'Tis true ſomething was hinted but nothing explain'd without the Help of Memory. But afterwards they ſpoke out with more Diſtinction. For this Purpoſe they cut their Stones in Figures, repreſenting Gods, and Men, and Battles, with the inſtructive Ornaments of Bas Reliefes, where the Hiſtory was farther deſcrib'd: They likewiſe cut Letters with Names, Inſcriptions and Laws. This Cuſtom of cutting Hiſtory upon Stone was very ancient amongſt the Phœnicians and Ægyptians, as Herodotus, Strabo, Lucan, Pliny, Tacitus, &c. inform us. Diodorus Siculus makes mention of ſubterranean Caverns in Ægypt call'd Syringes, where Hieroglyphick Letters were to be ſeen: The ſame Hiſtorian reports that at Niſa in Arabia there was a Column erected in Honour of Iſis and Oſiris, with an Inſcription in holy Characters. Thucydides takes notice that in the Citadel at Athens the Mal-adminiſtration of the uſurping Tyrants was cut upon Columns. Herodotus relates that by an Order of the Amphyctiones a Monument was rais'd with Inſcriptions in Honour of thoſe who were kill'd at Thermolypæ: The ſame Author mentions an Hiſtorical Column upon the Bank of a River in Scythia. Plutarch in his Diſcourſe upon Muſick mentions an Inſcription in the Town of Sicyon, where the Names of thoſe who ſacrific'd, the Poets, and Muſicians of Argos were regiſter'd. The Arundelian Marbles have preſerv'd a great deal of Greek Hiſtory and Chronology, and are by much the beſt Records of this Kind.

Laws, as has been already hinted, were written upon Pillars and Plates. God himſelf wrote his Laws upon Tables of Stone. Solon the Athenian Legiſlator wrote his publick Regulations upon Wood. Theopompus obſerves that the Corybantes were the firſt who invented the writing Laws upon Pillars, and other Figures of Stone: This Cuſtom was generally followed by other Nations excepting the Lacedæmonians, whoſe Legiſlator Lycurgus declin'd writing his Laws, that the People might take the greater Care to lodge 'em in their Memory. Numa Pompilius wrote his religious Ceremonies upon Oaken Tables, as Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus reports: The ſame Hiſtorian tells us, that Tarquin repeal'd Servius Tullus's Laws, and remov'd all the Tables upon which they were written out of the publick Square. Foreign Treaties likewiſe and Alliances were enter'd upon Record this Way: For Inſtance, Romulus wrote the Treaty contracted with the Veii upon a Column; Tullus that which he made with the Sabines; and Tarquin recorded that with the Latins upon the ſame Materials. Thucydides makes mention of Pillars in Greece, where the Articles of Peace and Confederacy were cut, and theſe publick Tranſactions were found thus regiſter'd in the Plains of Olinthus, in the Iſthmus, in Attica, in Athens, Lacedæmon and elſewhere.

To dilate a little farther upon this Article: The Principles of Sciences and Hiſtorical Matters were cut upon Columns. Porphyry mentions Inſcriptions in the Iſland of Crete, where the Corybantes deſcrib'd their ſacrificial Ceremonies. Euhemerus, as Lactantius relates, compil'd an Hiſtory of Jupiter and the other Gods, and was furniſh'd with his Matter from Inſcriptions in the Temples, particularly from that of Jupiter Triphyllian, where the Inſcription upon a Golden Column gave him to underſtand, that 'twas erected by that pretended Deity. Pliny obſerves that the Babylonian Aſtrologers made uſe of Brick to convey their Obſervations to Poſterity, and that ſuch durable Matter was choſen to perpetuate Improvements in Arts and Sciences. This Cuſtom has held a long time, for Arimneſtus Son of Pythagoras, as Porphyry vouches, conſecrated a Temple to Juno, where he cut the Sciences he was Maſter of upon a Braſs Plate. Pythagoras and Plato, as the learned will have it, furniſh'd themſelves with Philoſophy from the Inſcriptions cut upon the Columns of Mercury in Ægypt. Livy takes notice that Hannibal conſecrated an Altar with a long Recital in Punick and Greek of his military Exploits. The Inſcriptions we meet with in Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus are ſufficient Proof that this was the firſt Expedient for publick Inſtruction and tranſmitting Things to after Ages. This is more particularly deſcrib'd in Plato's Dialogue call'd Hyparchus, where 'tis ſaid that Piſiſtrates's Son had the Precepts for Agriculture cut upon Stone Pillars. And Pliny aſſures us, That the Treaty between the Romans and the Jews was engroſs'd upon Copper Plates. * Herod. Lib. VII. & IV. Thucyd. Lib. V. & VI. Jacquelot. Traite de l'Exiſtence de Dieu. M. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Aut. Prof. imprimée l'Ann. 1707. Tom. I, pag. 11, 12, 13.

INTHAL or Intal, that is to ſay, the Valley of Inn. 'Tis Part of Tirol, which reaches the Length of that Vale: Inſpruck and Halle are the Principal Towns in it. * Baudrand.

* INSPRUCK. See Maurice in Supplement.

INTOCETTA (Proſper), a Sicilian, publiſh'd a Syſtem of the Chineſe Politicks and Morals, form'd upon Confucius's Scheme: 'Twas printed at Goa, A. D. 1669. * Spizelius, de Vit. Scriptor. pag. 1076.

* JOACHIM (Saint), St. Ann's Husband. The Hiſtory of St. Joachim and St. Ann is taken from an Apocryphal Book mention'd in St. Gregory Nyſſen. St. Auguſtin, in his XXIII^d. Book againſt Fauſtus the Manichæan, obſerves that Fauſtus his Aſſertion that Joachim was the bleſſed Virgin's Father, and of the Tribe of Levi, was by no Means certain, being only reported in a Book of little Authority. However, in the VI^th Century the Greek Church ſeems to have been of another Opinion, by appointing a Feſtival for St. Joachim and St. Ann: But 'twas a great while before this Holiday got Place in the Latin Calendar; For in the eleventh Century Petrus Damianus aſſures us, that 'tis a vain and needleſs Curioſity to ſearch for the Names of the bleſſed Virgin's Father and Mother. St. Bernard in his Epiſtle to the Canons of Lyons, upon the Subject of the Feſtival of the Conception, declares there was no Holiday appointed for the Parents of the bleſſed Virgin. 'Tis ſaid Pope Julius II. began the Feſtival of St. Joachim, and fix'd it to the 22^d of March. Pius V. ſtruck it out of the Calendar and Breviary: But Gregory XIII. allow'd its being reſtor'd into the Calendar, tho' without approving the Office: At laſt, Gregory XV. by a Bull dated December 2^d 1622. ordered the keeping the Feſtival with a full Solemnity in the Office. * Baillet, Vies des Saints, Au 20. Mars.

* JOB, a Mahometan, &c. For kill'd at Conſtantinople, Ann. 52. in Morery Vol. I, read Ann. 672.

* JOHN, for King of Hungary and Cyprus in Morery Vol. I, read of Jeruſalem and Cyprus.

* JOHN XXIII, for his getting out of Priſon Ann. 1410. in Morery Vol. I, read 1418.

* JOINVILLE, for the younger Sons of the Houſe of Guiſe in Morery Vol. I, read the eldeſt Son.

JOLY (Claude), was born at Paris 1607, and extracted from a Family very remarkable for Learning and Piety. He was bred to Divinity, and well vers'd in the Fathers. The Books written by him diſcover his Penetration, Judgment, Diſintereſtedneſs, and religious Regards. The Subjects he wrote upon are, the Obligation to recite the Canonical Hours, the Reformation of the Breviary, the State of Marriage, the Education of Children, and the Duty of Princes and Perſons of the firſt Quality. In treating his Argument he always endeavour'd to follow the ſureſt Guides, and preferr'd the Ancients to the Moderns, being of opinion that to make the Point of Truth, we ought to ſtand cloſe to Tradition, and diſengage from Prejudice and Views of Intereſt. His laſt Work makes ſeveral particular Remarks upon Eraſmus's Life, and the Writings of the Learned of the ſeventeenth Century. He dy'd January 1700, and was ſolemnly buried at Paris. The Abbot le Gendre made his Funeral Oration and his Epitaph, which latter ſhall be tranſcrib'd for the Reader.

Hic jacet
Claudius Joly
Præcentor & Canonicus nec non Officialis Pariſienſis.
Vir egregiè probus.
Ingenio alacri, gravi prudentia temperato,
Rerum omnium eruditâ notitiâ,
Urbanitate, Modeſtia, Æquabilitate
Clariſſimus.
Vitæ innocentiâ,
Hilaris frugalitatis præſidio,
Ad ſummam Senectutem pervenit;
Nulli Morbo obnoxius;
Senſibus integerrimis,
Vegetâ Memoriâ,
Divinæ rei Noctu, diuque indeſinenter aſſiduus,
Senio confectus obiit
Die 15. Januarii.
Ann. Salut. M. DCC. Ætatis XCIII.
Canonic. LXIX. Præcent. XXIX.
Official. V.

JONA-

JONATHAN or John, Son of Joiada, and Grandſon to Eliaſib. He ſucceeded his Father in the Jewiſh High Prieſthood, which Station he held ſeven and forty Years. Joſephus calls him John, and reports how he tarniſh'd his Character by an Action barbarous in the laſt Degree. He had a Brother call'd Jeſus, who, it ſeems, had ſome Hopes or Expectancy of being High Prieſt: And 'twas this that rais'd John's Jealouſy and Spleen. One Day the two Brothers happening to meet in the Temple, fell into ſome Diſcourſe which diſcover'd a Competition: Jeſus who was much a Favourite of Bagoſes Artaxerxes's General, founded his Pretenſions upon this Nobleman's Promiſe. Jonathan, ſtung with ſeeing him ſo well ſupported, broke out into a Rage, and kill'd his Brother in the Temple; an Act of Savageneſs and Profanation, which few of the Heathen were guilty of. This Barbarity drew the Revenge of the Perſians upon the Jewiſh Nation, who ſoon after loſt their Liberty, and had their Temple profan'd. Jonathan was ſucceeded by his Son Jedoa or Jaddus. * Nehemiah, xi. 23. Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XI. Cap. 7.

JONATHAN, a Weaver, was born at Cyrene, and one of the Sicarii or Rapparees. After the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem he prevail'd with a great many of his Nation to make him their General. Being thus advanc'd he led 'em into a Wilderneſs, with a Promiſe of working Miracles. The chief Burghers of the Jews, who dwelt at Cyrene, being apprehenſive that ſuch a Revolt might draw a Storm upon 'em, gave notice of the Inſurrection to Catullus the Roman Governor of Lybia Pentapolitana. Catullus preſently ſent off a Body of Horſe, who routing theſe Rebels, ſeiz'd Jonathan, who in Hopes of procuring his Pardon, or delaying his Puniſhment, impeach'd great Numbers of the Jews, eſpecially the wealthieſt of thoſe who liv'd at Alexandria or Rome: And amongſt the reſt he brought Joſephus into the Scrape, charging this noble Jew with puſhing him upon the Sedition: But being brought to Rome before Veſpaſian, this Prince being a diſcerning Perſon, diſcover'd his Depoſitions were nothing but Trick and Calumny, and therefore ſentenc'd him to be carry'd to the Stake and burn'd. * Joſephus, de Bello Judaico Lib. VII. Cap. 37. & 38.

IONICKS; the moſt ancient Sect of the Græcian Philoſophers, who were diſtinguiſh'd under three Diviſions, the Ionick, the Italic, and the Eleatick. Thales Mileſius begun the firſt Sect, and was ſucceeded firſt by Anaximander, and then by Anaximenes, both of Miletus. Anaxagoras Clazomenius ſucceeded them, and remov'd his School from Aſia to Athens, where Socrates was his Scholar. * Gerrard. Voſſ. de Philoſoph. Sect.

* JOSEPH (Saint), Husband to the bleſſed Virgin. 'Tis not known at what Place he was born, but that he ſettled at Nazareth is beyond Queſtion. He was of a Mechanick Trade. St. Juſtin, St. Ambroſe and Theodoret ſuppoſe him a Joiner or Carpenter: Others, as St. Hilary and Chryſologus, make him a Lockſmith. Many of the Ancients believ'd him a Widower when he marry'd the bleſſed Virgin, becauſe the Scripture mentions our Saviour's Brethren: But this Reaſon is ſhort of Proof, for in the inſpired Writings, other near Relations are call'd Brethren. 'Twas a long time before any Part of the Church paid a religious Regard to St. Joſeph. His Feſtival was kept by the Eaſtern, before the Weſtern Chriſtians took notice of it. 'Tis ſaid the Carmelites were the firſt of the Latin Church in this Solemnity. At the time of the Council of Conſtans, Gerſon mov'd ſtrongly to have it every where ſettled, but without Effect. Sixtus IV. begun the Holiday at Rome, and a great many European Diſtricts follow'd the Example of this See: However, they did not all agree upon the ſame Day. The Roman Church keeps the Feſtival on the 19th of March. * S. Auguſtin, Serm. 18. de Tem. Hieron. adverſ. Helvid. & Jovin. Baron, in Appar. Annal. Tillemont, Tom. I. Baillet. Vies des Saints.

JOSEPH of Paleſtine, commonly called Count Joſeph; a Jew of Birth, born at Tiberias, very much regarded by the Jews when Hillel was Patriarch. 'Tis ſaid when Hillel lay at the Point of Death, he deſir'd a Biſhop, who liv'd near Tiberias, to make him a Viſit, under the Colour of giving him ſome Phyſick; whereas the Buſineſs was to make him a Chriſtian by Baptiſm. Joſeph was preſent at the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament, and ſoon after turn'd Chriſtian; being convinc'd of the Truth of that Religion by ſeeing a Perſon poſſeſs'd cur'd by a Prayer made to our Saviour. The Jews diſcovering that Joſeph read the Goſpels, uſed him ill. The Biſhop of the Place reſcu'd him out of their Hands: But the Jews going on with their Outrage, threw him into the Cydnus, a River in Cicilia, and left him, as they thought, drown'd: However, he got off alive, and ſome time after receiv'd Baptiſm. The Emperor Conſtantine gave him a Commiſſion to build Churches in the Towns and Villages belonging to the Jews in Paleſtine; which he perform'd accordingly. The executing this Commiſſion made him ſtill more the Jews Averſion. He was likewiſe an Enemy to the Arians, and entertain'd Euſebius of Verceilles baniſh'd to Scythopolis, where Joſeph liv'd. St. Epiphanius, then young, made this Biſhop a Viſit, and receiv'd the foregoing Relation from Count Joſeph himſelf. * Epiphan. Hæreſ. 30.

JOSEPH, Son of Tangri Virdi, a famous Author, and a Perſon of Quality belonging to the Soldan of Ægypt's Court. They call him by Way of Excellence Mouarekh Meſr, that is to ſay, the Hiſtoriographer of Egypt; becauſe of his extraordinary Performance in his Hiſtory of that Country. The Work is entitled, the Luminous Stars ſhining in the Hiſtory of the Kings of Egypt and Caire. This Hiſtory is divided into four Volumes; The firſt of which begins with the Conqueſt of Egypt by the Muſulmans, and goes on with the Government of Amrou Ebn al As, proceeding to the reſt who commanded there, or reign'd under the Caliphs, as far as Malek Al Aſchraf Inal, twelfth Soldan of the Mamalukes Circaſſians, who began to reign in the Year of the Hegira 857, that is A. D. 1449. The Author of this Hiſtory is ſo exact and punctual, that he takes notice every Year to what Degree the Nile roſe or fell ſhort in flowing the Country: Inſomuch that it may fairly be ſaid in his Commendation, there is no Hiſtory of Egypt more compleat than his own. Selim the Turkiſh Emperor, who conquered Egypt, reading this Work, ordered his Preceptor Schamſeddin to tranſlate it into the Turkiſh Language, which he perform'd very well. The Author himſelf abridg'd it, for Fear ſome body elſe ſhould undertake the Work, and maim it. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

JOSEPH, firſt Husband of Salomé, Siſter to Herod the Great, King of the Jews. This Prince was forc'd to go out of his Dominions, to juſtify himſelf before Mark Anthony, for the Death of the High Prieſt Ariſtobulus, Mariamne's Brother. Herod being oblig'd to be thus abſent, made Joſeph his Viceroy. He likewiſe gave him private Inſtructions that in Caſe Mark Anthony ſhould put him to Death, he ſhould immediately diſpatch Mariamne, for Fear ſome body elſe ſhould be poſſeſs'd of her Perſon. But Joſeph, through Indiſcretion, diſcovering this Order to Mariamne, encreas'd this Princeſs's Averſion to her Husband. Herod was no ſooner returned, but ſhe reſented it highly, and reproach'd him with his Barbarity. Herod's Jealouſy kindled upon this Reproach, and ſuſpected his Wife's Honour: He fancy'd Joſeph would never have diſcover'd ſo important a Secret to her, unleſs ſome unfair Correſpondence had paſs'd between 'em: In ſhort, he was ſo provok'd with the Diſcovery, that he immediately order'd him to be executed, without ſo much as hearing him in his Defence. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. XV. Cap. 4.

JOUR-

JOURDAIN (Anthony), a Jeſuit of St. Flour, living in the XVII^th^ Century. In the Year 1624. he publiſh'd at Lyons the Hebrew Roots compris'd in an hundred Decades in Verſe with a Latin Explication; to which he has added another Decade of Remarks. He ſtrives to be very ſhort, and is much richer in Thoughts than in Words. * Alegamb. Biblioth. Soc. Jeſ. Baillet, Jugem. des Sav. ſur les Grammariens Hebreux.

IPEPA, was formerly a Biſhop's See in Aſia Minor. 'Twas ſituate in Lydia near the Confines of Ionia. 'Tis now in the Country call'd Natolia Proper: It ſtands upon the Sarabat ſome Leagues above Smyrna. * Baudrand.

IRENÆUS (Saint), Biſhop of Sirmium in the IV^th^ Century, living at the Time when Diocleſian and Maximian perſecuted the Church. He was ſeiz'd and brought before Probus Governor of Pannonia, who put him to the Queſtion. He bore the Torture with great Reſolution, and was at laſt beheaded March 25^th^ A. D. 304. The Hiſtory of his Martyrdom is taken from Authentick Records, and publiſh'd by Ruinart. * Ruinart, Acta Martyrum ſincera. Tillemont, Memoires Tom. V.

IRMANOS, Os ſette Irmanos, that is to ſay, the ſeven Brothers. They are ſeven Iſlands, one great and ſix little ones; but all of them uninhabited. They lie deep in the Æthiopic Ocean, between the Iſland Madagaſcar and the Maldivians. To the Eaſt of theſe Sette Irmanos there's another Spot of little Iſlands, which ſome call Os-tres-Irmanos, that is to ſay, the Three Brothers. * Baudrand.

ISAAC (Saint), an Hermit of Conſtantinople in the IV^th^ Century, who, after having liv'd many Years an Anchoret in the Eaſt, came to Conſtantinople in the Reign of the Emperor Valens, and built a Cell near the Town in a ſolitary Quarter. When Valens left Conſtantinople to march againſt the Goths, who ravag'd Thrace, Iſaac foretold he would never return. Upon this the Emperor impriſon'd him, and threatned to put him to Death when he came back. Iſaac's Prediction was made good by the Event: For Valens was kill'd in the Battle againſt the Goths; or, to ſpeak preciſely, was purſued after his being defeated, and burn'd in a Cottage by the Enemy. This happened on the 9^th^ of Auguſt, A. D. 378. Theophanes relates that Iſaac, tho' in Priſon, knew the very Moment when the Emperor's Death happen'd. This Hermit was very much valu'd by Theodoſius the Great, and was preſent at the General Council of Conſtantinople held A. D. 381. * Socrat. Lib. VI. Cap. 31. Sozom. Lib. VI. Cap. 40. Theodoret. Hiſt. Lib. IV. Cap. 34. Theophan. in Chron.

ISATIS. Tatian mentions one Iſatis amongſt thoſe Writers who were prior to Homer; but no other Author takes any notice of him, which makes ſome learned Men believe that the Reading ſhould be Iſis inſtead of Iſatis. Now Iſis was Horus's Mother, who taught her Son the Sciences ſhe had learned of Hermes. Plato in his ſecond Book De Legibus, mentions Iſis's Songs or Tunes, which were Part of the Diverſions in Egypt. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof. Tom. I. p. 41.

ISENBOURG (le Bas). This Country, which is properly the County of Iſenbourg, lies in Weteravia along the River Seyn, between the Territories of Treves and Cologn, and the Counties of Wied and Seyn. This County or Earldom is of ſmall extent, and has nothing conſiderable excepting a little Town of the ſame Name, and which is fortify'd with a good Caſtle. This Country belong'd formerly to the Earls of Iſenbourg, but 'tis now fallen to the Counts of Runkel and Wied. * Baudrand.

ISENBOURG (le Comté du Haut), is properly the Earldom of Budingen: 'Tis a ſmall Territory in Weteravia in Germany. 'Tis ſituate between the Landgraviate of Heſſe, the Abby of Fulde, and the Counties of Hannaw and Solmes. 'Tis about eight Leagues in Length and three in Breadth: The ſmall Town of Budingen upon the Senne is the chief Place in it. The Earldom belongs to the Houſe of Iſenbourg a Proteſtant Family, and divided into two Branches. The eldeſt reſides at Offenbach upon the Mein; and the youngeſt at Bierſtein confining upon Fulda. * Maty.

* ISSEL. For Druſus Roman Emperor in Morery Vol. I. read Roman General.

ISIDORE, Son of Baſilides, follow'd his Father's Heterodoxies, and wrote in their Defenſe: Some of his Books were, a Commentary upon their Prophet Barcoph, a Book of Exhortations, a Syſtem of Morals, and a Tract concerning the ſecond Soul. Theſe Books are cited by Clemens Alexandrinus in ſeveral Places of his Stromata; where he mentions ſome Paſſages of Baſilides; from whence it appears that this Heretick's Doctrine concerning Martyrdom, the Nature of Good and Evil, Pleaſure, &c. is the ſame with that deſcrib'd in Irenæus, Epiphanius, and other Authors who have given an Account of this Heterodoxy. St. Juſtin Martyr, in his Dialogue with Trypho, mentions the Saturnilians and the Baſilidians; and St. Epiphanius obſerves that there were a few of 'em remaining in his time. This Iſidore liv'd in the third Century. * M. Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library.

ISIDORE (Saint) of Alexandria, Prieſt and Anchoret, was born in Egypt, and probably at Alexandria in the Year 318. He liv'd a great many Years in the Solitude of Thebais, and in the Deſert of Nitria. He was ordain'd Prieſt for Alexandria by St. Athanaſius, who made him Hoſpitaler of that Church: His Buſineſs was to entertain poor People and Strangers. His Studies were no leſs remarkable than his Auſterities. There was a great Intimacy between him and St. Athanaſius, whom he afterwards attended to Rome. After the Death of this Saint, he appear'd boldly in the Catholick Cauſe againſt the Arians, and had a Share in the Perſecution which Lucius the Arian Archbiſhop rais'd againſt the Anchorets. Afterwards Iſidore ſpent his time ſometimes at Alexandria, and ſometimes at his old Solitude at Nitria. At firſt he was much eſteem'd by Theophilus Archbiſhop of Alexandria, who ſent him to Rome with Accacius of Berea to get Flavian Biſhop of Antioch reconcil'd to Pope Damaſus. He acquitted himſelf ſo much to Satisfaction in all his Commiſſions, that Theophilus deſign'd to get him promoted to the See of Conſtantinople after the Death of Nectarius: But afterwards falling out with him, partly becauſe he appear'd in Behalf of a Prieſt, who was upon ill Terms with Theophilus, and partly becauſe Iſidore would not employ a Sum of Money for enlarging the Cathedral, which was depoſited with him for the uſe of the Poor: Upon this Account Theophilus exhibited Articles againſt Iſidore at the Meeting of his Clergy: And notwithſtanding Iſidore made a ſubſtantial Defenſe, Theophilus expell'd him his Church. Upon this Iſidore retir'd into the Deſert of Nitria, whither Theophilus purſu'd him with his Excommunication, and diſlodg'd him with three hundred other Monks whom he charg'd with Origeniſm. Theſe Religious retir'd into Paleſtin, which Theophilus's continu'd Perſecution forc'd 'em to quit. At laſt they were forced to come to Conſtantinople, A. D. 400, where they had a friendly Entertainment from St. Chryſoſtom, who endeavour'd to make up the Difference between them and Theophilus. This friendly Office made Theophilus St. Chryſoſtom's Enemy: After the Baniſhment of this latter the Monks were glad to ſhift where they could. Iſidore dy'd at Conſtantinople, A. D. 403. being eighty five Years old. * Hieron. Epiſt. ad Principiam. Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. Lib. VIII. Dialog. de Vita Chryſoſt. Theodoret. Hiſt. Lib. IV. Cap. 21. Sozom. Lib. VIII. Cap. 3. & 12. Socrat. Lib. VI. Cap. 9.

ISLE AU COMTAT, a good Town in the County Venaiſſin: It ſtands in a little Iſland made by the River Sorgue, three or four Leagues from Avignon, to the Eaſt. * Baudrand.

ISLE-DIEU, a ſmall Iſland upon the Coaſt of Poictou, near Gaſcogny, three Leagues from the Iſle Noirmoutier, to the South. There's a Village, with an Abby in Normandy, four Leagues from Roan, which is likewiſe call'd l' Iſle-Dieu. * Baudrand.

ISMAEL, Son of Phabæus, and Jewiſh High-Prieſt, by Agrippa's Favour he ſucceeded Ananias, Son of Nebedeus. He was forc'd to go to Rome with Chelcias, and ten of the principal Burghers of Jeruſalem, to juſtify himſelf before Nero, upon ſome Articles, which the Governour Felix had preferr'd againſt him. Joſephus travel'd with him, and did him conſiderable Service. However, neither Iſmael nor Chelcias return'd to Jeruſalem. Poppæa, Nero's Empreſs, a good-natur'd Lady, procur'd their Pardon from the Emperor, but kept 'em at Rome as Hoſtages. Joſeph, the Son of Cabi, or Cabeus, was put into Iſmael's Poſt, and held it only two Years. * Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. 20. Tirin. Chronol. Sacr. cap. 42.

ISSELMONDE, a ſmall Iſland, with a Town of the ſame Name in it. This Iſland is form'd by the Meuſe, between Dort and Roterdam, over againſt the Mouth of the little Iſſel, from whence it takes its Name. * Baudrand.

ISTRIA, Capo de Iſtria, a Town belonging to the State of Venice, and Capital of Iſtria. It ſtands in a little Iſland in the Gulph of Trieſte, and is join'd to the Continent by Draw-bridges. Capo de Iſtria, which is a Biſhop's See, under the Archbiſhoprick of Aquileia, was anciently call'd Ægida: 'Twas afterwards call'd Juſtinopolis, in honour to the Emperor Juſtin, who re-edify'd it. It was the Country and See of the famous Paul Vergerius, who being Paul III's Nuntio, in Germany, and juſt ready to have the Offer of a Cardinal's Cap, deſpis'd all this Grandeur, and in the Year 1548, retir'd into the Griſons Country, and ſtoop'd to be only a Miniſter among the Reform'd: He carry'd his Brother along with him, who was likewiſe a Biſhop. * Baudrand.

ITTIGIUS (Thomas) Son of John Ittigius, Doctor of Philoſophy and Phyſick, and Profeſſor of Phyſick at Leipſick. Thomas, after having ſtudied at Leipſick, at Roſtock, and Strasburgh, was made Aſſeſſor in the Faculty of Philoſophy at Leipſick, and publiſh'd a Tract to explain the Phænomena of Vulcano's. Afterwards he ſtudied Divinity, and was Profeſſor in that Faculty at the Town aforeſaid. He was for ſome time one of the Club, who wrote the Acta Leipſiaca. His other Works are Diſſertatio de Hæreſiarchis ævi Apoſtolici eique proximi. Appendix de Hæreſiarchis. Prolegomena ad Joſephi Opera à Bibliotheca Patrum Apoſtolicorum Græco-Latina. Hiſtoria Synodorum Nationalium in Gallia à Reformatis habitarum. Liber de Bibliothecis & catenis Patrum. Exercitationes Theologicæ. Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ primi & ſecundi ſæculi Selecta Capita. Ittigius dy'd in April 1710. * Acta Leipſiaca 1710, p. 221.

JIVAMI, a Town in the Iſle of Niphon, belonging to Japan. 'Tis the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, and ſtands upon the weſtern Coaſt of Jamayſoit, or Jamaiſtero. * Baudrand.

JUAN FERNANDES (the Iſles of) are two Iſlands in the Pacifick-Sea, near the Coaſt of Chili, over-againſt the Town San-Jago. That, which lies neareſt the Coaſt, is call'd Tierra. The other more remote has the Name of Fuora, which marks its Diſtance from the Continent. Both theſe Iſlands are well inhabited and improv'd. * Baudrand.

JUAN DE NOVA (the Iſle of) a ſmall African Iſland. It lies between the Iſland Madagaſcar and the Coaſt of Zanguebar, to the eaſt of the Mozambique. 'Twas diſcover'd in the Year 1501, by a Pilot of Galicia. * Baudrand.

IVANOGOROD, a good Fort in Sweden, 'tis built upon a Rock near the River Narva, over-againſt the Town of the ſame Name. 'Tis ſometimes call'd Ruſſian Narva, becauſe it belong'd to the Muſcovites, but was yielded to the Swedes by a Treaty at Stockholm, A. D. 1618. 'Tis now again in the Muſcovites Hands. * Baudrand.

JUCUNDUS and TYRANNUS, were two of Herod the Great's Guards: He had a particular value for 'em, upon the ſcore of their large Stature, and extraordinary Strength: But happening to diſoblige him, he caſhier'd 'em. Alexander, Herod's Son, took 'em into the Company of his own Guards, and finding 'em very brave Men, was very bountiful to 'em. Herod being enform'd how they were entertain'd, grew jealous of their being in a Practice againſt him, and order'd 'em to be put upon the Rack. They held firm againſt the Torture at firſt; but at laſt, ſinking under the Pain, they depos'd that Alexander had ſollicited them to kill the King as he went a Hunting, than which nothing was more remote from truth. Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 16. cap. 16.

JUDAS, Son of Saripheus, and Matthias, Son of Margalotheus, were two very learned and worthy Jews, and extreamly belov'd by their Nation. They perſuaded their Scholars, and ſome others, to knock down the golden Eagle, which Herod the Great had ſet upon the Top of the Temple, in honour of the Emperor Auguſtus: It ſeems they thought the ſtanding of this Eagle was prohibited by their Law. They were both ſeiz'd by the Officer who commanded Herod's Troops, laid in Irons, and carry'd before him to Jericho, where he lay ſick of the Diſeaſe he dy'd of: This Prince order'd 'em to be both burnt alive. Upon this Execution the People were ready to riſe in revenge. However, they check'd their Reſentment till Herod was dead; and then addreſs'd Archelaus, for Juſtice upon thoſe who had been the occaſion of the barbarous Death of the two Perſons above mention'd. And not prevailing for Satisfaction, an Inſurrection broke out, which coſt the Lives of about three thouſand People. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 17. cap. 8, & 11.

JUDAS, Son of one Ezechias, Head of the Robbers, whom Herod the Great had taken and executed, while he was Governor of Galilee. This Judas, after Herod's Death, taking his Opportunity when Archelaus was at Rome, drew a great many bold Fellows together, near the Town Sephoris in Galilee, march'd into the King's Lands, ſeiz'd the Arſenal, got Arms for his Men there, carry'd off all that Prince's Treaſure, plunder'd where ever he came, and made himſelf formidable to the whole Country: And at laſt had the Reſolution to aim at the Crown. * Joſeph. Antiquit. Lib. 17. cap. 8, & 11.

JUDAS, Son of another Judas, was one of Simon's Officers, who exercis'd ſuch arbitrary Tyranny in Jeruſalem, during the Siege. This Judas had the command of a Tower or Baſtion; but being affected with the horrible Barbarities which were committed, and projecting his own Safety, he call'd ten of the the Soldiers who ſerv'd under him, whom he could beſt confide in, and told 'em, that the ſureſt way of providing for their Safety, was to deliver up the Baſtion to the Romans. To this purpoſe, he call'd to the Enemy from the Top of the Tower, and acquainted 'em with his Deſign; but it ſeems they did not think fit to truſt him: And which was worſe, Simon getting Wind of the Buſineſs, cut Judas and his Company in pieces, in the ſight of the Romans, and threw their Corps over the Walls. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 5. cap. 34.

JULIA (St.) a Virgin and Martyr of Carthage. This Town being taken in the Year 439, by Genſericus, King of the Vandals, Julia was ſold for a Slave, and carry'd into Syria. The Merchant, who bought her, ſold her to one Euſebius, another rich Merchant, who embark'd with her for Gaul. Being arriv'd at the Cape of Corſica, Euſebius went on ſhore to aſſiſt at a Pagan Solemnity. Julia remonſtrated ſtrongly againſt this idolatrous Worſhip. Felix, Governor of the Country, being inform'd of what paſs'd, got her ſeiz'd, and order'd her to ſacrifice to the Gods. Upon her Refuſal they pull'd her Hair off firſt, and then diſpatch'd her on a Gibbet. The Monks of the Iſle of Marguerite carry'd off the Corps of this holy Virgin, where it reſted till Deſiderius, King of the Lombards, remov'd it to Breſia, A. D. 763, where ſhe lies interr'd in the Monaſtery of St. Julia. Her Feſtival is ſet to the 22d of May. * Ruinart, Hiſt. Perſecut. Vandal. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

JULIAN, a Roman Officer of Bithynia, and of a noble Family: He was one of the braveſt, ſtrongeſt limb'd, and moſt dexterous Men of his Time. He ſerv'd in the Siege of Jeruſalem, under Titus; and perceiving the Jews preſs the Romans in a Salley, he left his Poſt near the Tower Antonia, where Titus commanded, and threw himſelf ſingly upon the Enemy, and that with ſuch Intrepidity, that he made the Jews retire to the Corner of the Temple, hewing and killing every body that ſtood in his way. But running from one Place to another upon the Pavement, the Nails of his Shoes, which Soldiers commonly wear, made him fall; and his Arms ringing againſt the Ground, the Jews turn'd back at the Noiſe; and ſeeing him in this Poſture of Diſadvantage, ſurrounded him immediately, and attack'd him with Javelin and Sword. He endeavour'd to riſe, but was overlay'd with Numbers. However, he wounded a great many as he lay ſprawling; but at laſt, fainting through loſs of Blood, and none of his Friends having Courage enough to come in to his Reſcue, he was diſpatch'd by the Jews. The Loſs of him was much regretted by Titus and the Roman Army. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. Lib. 6. cap. 7.

JULIAN, of Alexandria, a Phyſician, living in the Reign of the Emperor Antoninus Pius. He wrote forty-eight Books againſt Hippocrates's Aphoriſms, and a Book concerning the method of Practice, which he entitled Philo. Galen mentions it, and defends Hippocrates's Aphoriſms againſt him. * Conig. Biblioth. Vet. & Nova.

JULIS, a Town in the Iſland Cea, in the Ægean Sea. The Poet Simonides was born in this Town, and ſo was Baccilides his Nephew, and the Phyſician Eraſiſtratus. When the four Towns in the Iſland Cea were reduc'd to two, Julis was one of thoſe two. 'Twas built upon a Hill three Miles from the Sea. * Strabo Lib. 10. Suidas.

JULIUS I. elected Biſhop of Rome A. D. 337. He ſent Legates to the Council of Sardica, and wrote a Letter to Alexandria, to congratulate with the Town upon the reſtoring St. Athanaſius. This Epiſtle, and one he wrote ſome time before to the eaſtern Churches, are certainly genuine, being mention'd at length by St. Athanaſius. The Eutychians made Pope Julius the Author of a Letter touching the Incarnation; 'tis written to one Dionyſius, and Gennadius believ'd it this Pope's. However, he takes notice, that tho' when Julius liv'd, it might be ſerviceable againſt thoſe who aſſerted two Perſons in our Saviour, yet it grew dangerous afterwards, becauſe it leans too much towards the Hereſy of Eutyches and Timotheus: This Epiſtle notwithſtanding, is rejected as ſpurious, by Hypatius, in the Conference with the Acephali, at Conſtantinople, by Facundus, Lib. 7. by Eulogius, in his third Diſcourſe, and by Leontius of Conſtantinople, in his Book de Sectis, cap. 8. All which Authors aſſure us that this Epiſtle belongs to Apollinarius; and that the Eutychians had untruly reckon'd it to Pope Julius. In the Council of Epheſus there's another Letter of Julius, cited upon the Subject of the Incarnation, written to Dacius. Facundus owns it for genuine. Vincentius Lirinenſis relates, that at this General Council, the Catholick Faith, among other Proofs, was aſſerted by Pope Julius's Teſtimony; Ephrem Syrus likewiſe believ'd this Letter penn'd by Julius, as appears by an Extract from his third Book of Laws, cited by Photius. Anaſtaſius quotes it, in his Diſcourſes upon the Incarnation, as being written to Acacius. Leontius is the only Perſon who rejects it, in his Tract above mention'd: However, he adds, that there's nothing contrary to the Catholick Faith in this Epiſtle, and therefore that it ſignifies not much who is the Author; in fine, the ſame Leontius aſſures us, that in his Time there was nothing extant of Julius (which is to be underſtood with an Exception of what is in St. Athanaſius) and that the ſeven Epiſtles, that go under his Name, belong to Apollinarius. Indeed, there's little Probability that Julius ſhould write any thing upon the Argument of the Incarnation, conſidering he liv'd in a time when there was no Diſpute excepting about the Trinity.

Beſide, 'tis well known that 'twas the Cuſtom of the Eutychians, to aſcribe Apollinarius's Works to thoſe Fathers, who were in credit among the Catholicks, on purpoſe to deceive the People, and draw 'em into their Hereſy. The two Decretal Epiſtles reckon'd to Pope Julius are plainly ſuppoſititious. The Author of Damaſus's Pontifical, Uſuardus, Ado Viennenſis, and ſome others report that this Pope was baniſh'd ten Months, 'till Conſtantius's Death; but this won't hold; for Julius never ſuffer'd any Perſecution in St. Athaſius's Defence, which may be concluded, from this Fathers not ſaying a Word about it in any part of his Works; whereas, had it been Matter of Fact, he would not have fail'd reproaching the Arians with Julius's Baniſhment, as he had done with that of Liberius, and other Biſhops of his Party. * Athanaſ. Apol. 2. & Epiſt. ad Solit. Socrat. Lib. 2 & 3. Gennad. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. 4.

* JULIUS II. For choſen after Pius II. in Morery, vol. 1. read choſen after Pius III.

JUNCALAON, or Junſalam, a Town in the Kingdom of Siam in Aſia. It is ſituate upon the weſtern Coaſt of the Indian Peninſula, beyond the Ganges; there's a good Port belonging to it, about an hundred and thirty-four Leagues from the Town Odiaa to the South. * Baudrand.

JUNNAN. This Country is famous for a great many Foreſts, where they take the Creatures which furniſh Musk. The Chineſe call this Animal Xechiam, i. e. the Musk Animal, or Ye-Hiam, that is to ſay, the Protecting Stag. 'Tis ſomewhat like a Stag, but without Horns; the Hair is ſomewhat blacker, and the Head reſembles that of a Wolf; it has two crooked Teeth, like a Boar's Tuſhes, which ſtick out from the upper Part of its Throat; near the Navel there's a Bunch, with a very fine Skin about it, and cover'd with ſoft Hair, 'tis full with Blood ſweet ſcented, which when congeal'd and laid upon the Fire, exhales a Perfume like Frankincenſe.

Their way of making Musk is this, when the Animal is taken, they bleed him till his Veins are quite empty, and take out the Bunch upon his Navel, afterwards he is flay'd and cut in a great many Pieces.

To make the choiceſt Musk, they divide the Animal in halves, that is, from the Kidnies to the Tail, and put the Fleſh in a great Stone Mortar, where they pound it to a Paſte, pouring in ſome of the Blood of the Creature as they pound it. The Fleſh thus prepar'd, is kept in Purſes made of the Beaſt's Skin. The Musk, made of the other Parts, taken from the Head to the Reins, is not ſo odoriferous.

There's another ſort of Musk brought into Europe, mixt with Ambergreaſe, and with a Juice ſtrain'd from a ſort of Cat, call'd Algalia, which makes a very agreeable Compoſition, and is ſtronger ſcented than Ambergreaſe alone. * Kircher, de la Chine. Martin Martini, Athl. Sinic.

JURIEU (Peter) was born December 1637; his Father Daniel was a French Proteſtant Miniſter at Mer. He was a Perſon of Character, both for his Piety and Learning, as appears by ſome Sermons of his in print. Peter had his Education in Holland and England, under the Direction of Rivet and du Moulin, his Uncles by the Mother's Side. He receiv'd Orders in the Church of England; but being call'd home to take care of his Father's Church, he was re-ordain'd, for fear his Orders receiv'd in a foreign Country, ſhould not be approv'd at Home. He remov'd from Mer to Vitry, where he wrote his Devotional Tract. From hence he went to the Univerſity of Sedan, where he was Divinity and Hebrew Profeſſor; and ſoon after a Church becoming void, was choſen into it. He gain'd a great deal of Reputation, not only by his Lectures in the Chair, but by the great Care he took to prepare the young Students for the Pulpit; for having a very lively inventing Imagination, he ſtruck out new Plans, and directed 'em to a Method very remote from common placing.

His Colleague, M. Le Blanc, was very remarkable for Judgment and Moderation in his Controverſial Theſes; But M. Jurieu refus'd to follow his Precedent: He carried the Diſpute, concerning the Neceſſity of Baptiſm, to an Extremity, in a Tract publiſh'd to defend his Theſes from the Objections rais'd againſt 'em. He ſucceeded much better in his Apology for the Morals of the Reform'd, againſt a Charge drawn up by M. Arnauld. His Preſervative againſt Peoples changing their Religion, ſtopt the Carrier of the Expoſition of the Catholick Faith, written by the Biſhop of Condom, afterwards of Meaux, which Book had brought over a great many to the Roman Communion. M. Jurieu, in this ſmall Tract, has plainly ſhewn that the Biſhop palliated the Doctrines and Practices of his Church, painted beyond yond the Life, and made his Colours too beautiful and glowing. The Univerſity of Sedan being taken out of the Proteſtants Hands, in 1681, Jurieu reſolv'd to quit his Church there, and accept another at Roan, to which he was invited: But when he was going to ſettle there, he underſtood the Court of France were appriz'd of his being the Author of a Book entitled, la Politique du Clerge. This ſmall Tract had given great Provocation; being therefore apprehenſive of ſome Violence, he retir'd for ſhelter into Holland. Upon his firſt coming thither, the Univerſity of Groninguen offer'd him a Profeſſor's Chair; but his Friends having procur'd him a reſembling Poſt, in the Schola Illuſtris at Roterdam, he preferr'd this Settlement to the other more diſtant one. And here 'twas not long before he publiſh'd his Book entitled, les derniers Efforts de l' Innocence Affligée, or The laſt Efforts of afflicted Innocence: And in this Tract he has vindicated, as 'tis ſuppos'd, the Reformations in France and Germany, againſt Maimbourg's Hiſtory of Lutheraniſm and Calviniſm. And now 'twas eaſy to perceive, that being in a Country of Freedom and Security, Jurieu play'd his Temper without Reſerve, and ſtruck out to the whole Length of his Fancy. And here it muſt be obſerv'd, that his Thoughts were very much ſpent upon the Revelations, inſomuch that he was convinc'd at laſt, that he had diſcover'd the Senſe of this myſtick Book, by the Aſſiſtance of Inſpiration. By this ſupernatural Light, he underſtood that France was the Place of the great City, where the Witneſſes lay dead and unburied, and that they were to riſe again within three Years and a half; that is, in the Year 1689. The unexpected and never to be forgotten Revolution in England, brought about by the Prince of Orange, made Jurieu ſtill believe he had got into the Heart of the Prophecy, and that the Event had anſwer'd his Prediction. He was charg'd with Deſign in his Prophetick Proſpects, and that his Intention was to prepare Peoples Minds for another, and greater Revolution: But thoſe who knew him beſt, are of Opinion that 'twas nothing but Prejudice and Enthuſiaſm, which miſled him, and which he miſtook for Evidence and Conviction. This, it ſeems, was his weak Side; for though he is ſaid not to be naturally credulous, he gave credit to abundance of Prodigies and ſham Miracles, which he reported as Preſages and Harbingers of the Accompliſhment of divine Prophecies. He had the Mortification, which never fails thoſe who hurry their Predictions, and give 'em but a few Years before they are to bear. His Spleen encreas'd when he found himſelf inſulted for mounting his private Fancy to Prophecy, and being ſo miſerably miſtaken in his Expoſitions. He was ſo unfortunate as to fall foul upon his beſt Friends, becauſe they would not go into his Whimſeys. He had a very warm conteſt with Monſieurs Bayle and de Bauval, who wrote very briskly againſt him. Even the Synods, where he had a conſiderable Intereſt, engag'd in the Quarrel, and acquitted M. Saurin, Paſtor of Utrecht, and ſeveral other Perſons of Merit, whom Jurieu had delated for Heterodoxy. And now Decrees were paſs'd, where, though his Name was ſpar'd, his Doctrine, touching Baptiſm, Juſtification, and his new Syſtem of the Church, were all condemn'd. This Diſappointment and Cenſure made the reſt of his Life uneaſy. He dy'd at Roterdam, January 1713. * Memoire Manuſcript.

JUSTICE, a Deity worſhip'd by the Heathens. Heſiod makes her Jupiter's Daughter, that ſhe is faſtned to his Throne in Heaven, and moves for Vengeance when People break her Laws. Aratus, in his Phænomena, gives a particular Deſcription of this Goddeſs Juſtice. While the golden Age laſted, ſhe convers'd with all ſorts of Mortals Night and Day, and inſtructed 'em in her Laws; but when the Age tranſmuted backwards, and dwindled to Silver, ſhe only made private Viſits in the Night, and upbraided People with their Degeneracy: But when the Age turn'd Braſs, Impudence and Licence grew ſo common, that not being able to bear the World any longer, ſhe withdrew to Heaven. * Heſiod. Gellius. See Aſtræa.

* JUSTIN (St.) To what has been obſerv'd in Morery, upon this Article, may be ſubjoin'd, that Euſebius, St. Jerome, and Photius, mention a Commentary of Juſtin Martyr's, againſt Hereſies, which is now loſt. Photius takes notice of ſome other Tracts againſt Marcion, &c. and one entitled The Pſalmiſt. There are ſeveral other Works which go under St. Juſtin's Name, but don't belong to him, being written either by other ancient Authors, or by ſome of leſſer Antiquity. Of the firſt ſort, we may reckon the Epiſtle to Diognetus, againſt Idolatry, and the Epiſtle to Zena and Serenus: Under the ſecond ſort may be rang'd, the Queſtions to Antiochus, the Queſtions and Anſwers to the Orthodox, and the Expoſition of the Chriſtian Faith. To give the Reader Photius's Opinion of Juſtin Martyr's Works:

" This Father, ſays he, was throughly vers'd, both in " the Chriſtian Religion and Heathen Authors. His At- " tainments were extraordinary, in moſt Parts of " Learning; but he was ſomewhat negligent in his " manner; he took no Pains about Ornament; and " therefore tho' he inſtructs to good purpoſe, he falls " ſhort in the entertaining Part."

This Character is juſt, for his Diſcourſes are full of Citations from Scripture and profane Authors, but without any Dreſſing, or much Method. There's ſcarce any of the Ancients have given ſo exact an Account of the Chriſtian Worſhip as this Father. * Iren. Lib. 4. cap. 13. & Lib. 5. cap. 3. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. & Chron. Hieron. cap. 23. Catal. Photius, Biblioth. Cod. 23 & 25.

* JUSTIN II. For his Grandfather Juſtinian, in Morery Vol. 1. read his Uncle Juſtinian.

* JUSTINIAN I. For the Son of Juſtin the Elder, in Morery, Vol. 1. read the Nephew of Juſtin.

IXE, a Town in the Province of Jetſengen, in the Iſle of Niphon, belonging to Japan. 'Tis the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name. * Baudrand.

K.

KALO, a Town in Upper Hungary, Capital of a County or Earldom of the ſame Name: It ſtands in a Moraſs, made by the River Kalo, between the Towns Bebrecin and Peter, or Petti-waradin. 'Twas taken in 1681 by Count Tekeli; and the Imperialiſts retook it in 1685. * Hiſt. & Deſcript. Du Royaume de Hongrie.

KALO (the County of) ſtands in Upper Hungary. 'Tis bounded on the North, with the Counties of Zathmar and Ugogh, to the Weſt with that of Chege, to the South with the Counties of Turtur and Czongrad, and to the Eaſt with Tranſylvania. Beſides the Capital Kalo, the other Towns are Great Waradin, St Job, Debrecin, and Bihar. * Maty, Diction.

KARACATHAL, a Country in Great Tartary Sanſon, in his large Map of Aſia, gives it the Alias of Chaulach, and places it to the South of the River Oby, upon the Frontiers of Siberia and Tingreſia. In the new Map of M. Whitſen, there's a Country call'd Karakitay; it lies in Tangut, with the Towns Camul, Sachion, and Campion, within it; Maty thinks it may probably be the ſame with the other above mention'd. * Maty, Diction.

KARAKATANKA, a Town in the Mogul's Dominions in Aſia. 'Tis the Capital of the Kingdom of Canduana, and ſtands upon a River to the North of the Lake Chiamay. Maty, Diction.

KARMATH, a famous Impoſtor, who, according to ſome Hiſtorians, was born at Hamadan Karmath, a Village within the Dependencies of the Town Cufa. Others will have it that this Name was given him becauſe he was Dwarfiſh and deform'd, for that's the meaning of the Word Karmath in Arabick. He was the Founder of a Sect, which ſap'd the Baſis of Muſulmaniſm; and notwithſtanding this open Contradiction, made ſo great a Progreſs in the Dominions of the Caliphs, that they were almoſt wholly infected with it in a ſhort time. This Fellow began to appear in the Year of the Hegyra 278, that is, A. D. 891. The Muſulmans look'd upon his Proſelytes, call'd Karmathians, not only as Sectaries, but as downright wicked atheiſtical People. Their Prophet practis'd great Auſterities, and pretended God commanded him to pray fifty times a Day, inſtead of five, which was the Muſulmans Cuſtom. By his Direction, his Diſciples eat a great many things forbidden by Mahomet's Law, and believ'd that the good Angels pointed out and govern'd their Actions, as the Devils did thoſe of their Enemies. They turn'd the Precepts of the Alcoran into Allegory: Thus, by their Principles, Prayer is nothing but a Symbol or Emblem of the Obedience they are bound to pay the Imam, or Head of their Sect, whom they call, by way of diſtinction, Maaſſum, that is to ſay, whom God preſerves.

Inſtead of the Tenth of their Eſtates, which the Mahometans give the Poor, they ſet aſide the fifth Part for their Imam, who is their Supreme, both in Spirituals and Temporals. As to Faſting, they look upon it only as a Sign of that Silence and Reſerve, they are to practiſe towards Strangers who are not of their Sect. In ſhort, they believe that their being true to their Imam, was hinted in the Command which forbids Fornication; inſomuch that thoſe who diſcover the Myſteries of their Religion, and fail in implicit Obedience to their Head, are guilty of Adultery and Fornication. The Karmathian Sect began in the Caliphate of Raſchid, or, as ſome will have it, in that of Mamon: But their Chief diſappearing, it lay conceal'd during theſe two Reigns. 'Twas in the Caliphate of Motamed, in the 275th Year of the Hegyra, that is, A. D. 888, that the Karmathians began to raiſe Diſturbances in the Neighbourhood of the Town Cufa in Chaldæa. But theſe Commotions were inconſiderable. In the Year 286 of the Hegyra, Abuſayd Habab, drew a great Number together of theſe Sectaries, and appear'd at the Head of them. He maintain'd a long War againſt Motadhed, took the Town Hagiar, the ancient Metropolis of Arabia (call'd Petra Deſerti, in Latin) and made it his Capital. When Moctafi was Caliph, the Karmathians were perpetually harraſſing the Provinces of Chaldæa and Syria. The Town of Damaſcus purchas'd their Safeguard, but Baalbeck and Salemiah were taken by Storm, and moſt of the People put to the Sword. Their Commanders in chief, were Jahia, Huſſain, and Zacrunah, the laſt of which defeated the Caliph's Army, and plunder'd the Pilgrim's Caravan going to Mecca. But at laſt, being routed by Joſeph, Son of Ibrahim, Moctafi's General, he dy'd of his Wounds, A. D. 906.

In the Year of the Hegyra 301, that is, A. D. 903, Abuſayd, Prince of the Karmathians, who reſided at Hagiar, was kill'd in a Bath by one of his Slaves: Said, his eldeſt Son, ſucceeded him, with this Condition however, that upon the ſcore of his ill Health, he ſhould reſign the Government to Abu Thaher, his younger Brother, as ſoon as he came to an Age fit to act. When Abu Thaher was eighteen Years old, he thought 'twas time to take the Reins into his Hands: for this Purpoſe, he made ſome of the leſs diſcerning of his Sect believe, that God had reveal'd wonderful Secrets to him. Being thus far in credit, he put himſelf at the head of a conſiderable Body, took the Town of Baſſora by Storm, put a great Number of the Burghers to the Sword, and quitted it, after having plunder'd it ſeventeen Days together: This happen'd in the Year of the Hegyra 311, that is, A. D. 923.

Next Year he ſeiz'd the Pilgrim's Caravan, at their return from Mecca, and took Abdallah Priſoner, who commanded the Guard. However, he releas'd him ſome time after, becauſe he was willing to come to Terms of Friendſhip with the Caliph Moctader. To bring this to effect, he ſent ſome Perſons with a publick Character, to propoſe a Peace: And here he offer'd to ſit down ſatisfy'd, provided the Town Baſſora, and the ſmall Province of Ahuaz, were yielded him. But the Caliph refus'd to grant his Terms, tho' he receiv'd his Embaſſadors, and preſented 'em honourably enough. Abu Thaher's Propoſals being refus'd, he had his Revenge the Year following; for he took the Town of Cufa, plunder'd it, kill'd part of the Burghers, and made Slaves of the reſt.

In the Year of the Hegyra 319, the Karmathians marching out of Bahrein and Ahaſſa, mov'd to Mecca, ravag'd the Country, took the Town, and kill'd above thirty Thouſand People. They fill'd the Pits of Zemzem with the Dead, buried three Thouſand Corps in the Temple, and carry'd off the famous black Stone, with which they cover'd no decent Place. After this unheard of Uſage, Abu Thaher came up towards Bagdat, to inſult the Caliph, with only five Hundred Horſe. The Caliph ſent Abuſage with thirty Thouſand Men to ſeize him. Abuſage, perceiving Abu Thaher had only an Handful of Men, deſpis'd him, and immediately wrote to the Caliph beforehand; Sir, ſays he, I ſend you Abu Thaher Priſoner, to diſpoſe of him as you think fit. Moctader wrote back to him thus, Break the Bridge over the Tigris, for fear he makes his Eſcape. Abuſage having receiv'd theſe Orders, ſent one to Abu Thaher, to let him know, that upon the ſcore of the ancient Friendſhip between 'em, he advis'd him to conſider the vaſt Superiority of the Caliph's Troops, and therefore either to ſurrender himſelf, or think upon ſome Expedient to get off. Abu Thaher ask'd the Meſſenger what Numbers Abuſage had with him; he told him thirty Thouſand: Well, ſays he, for all that he wants three ſuch Men as all mine are. Upon this, ordering three of his Soldiers to come to him, and ſpeaking to the Firſt, Soldier, ſays he, cut your own Throat immediately; to the Second, Plunge into the Tigris and drown yourſelf; to the Third, Jump down the Precipice here, and break your Neck this Minute: Theſe three Men diſpatching themſelves with the ſame Expedition they were order'd, Abu Thaher told the Meſſenger, that a General, who had Troops ſo abſolutely reſign'd to his Beck, need not concern himſelf with the Numbers of the Enemy; as for you, I ſhall give you fair Quarter; but pray take notice that I ſhall quickly ſhew you your General Abuſage chain'd to my Dogs. In ſhort, the Night following he attack'd Abuſage, kill'd part of his Troops, and routed the reſt.

Abuſage

Abuſage was taken Priſoner, and Abu Thaher chain'd him to his Dogs.

In the Year of the Hegyra 327, he promis'd to let the Pilgrim's Caravan to Mecca paſs undiſturb'd, upon Condition that they pay'd him twenty-five Thouſand gold Dinars: This Caravan, it ſeems, durſt not venture to travel this Road for eight Years paſt.

In the Year of the Hegyra 332, that is, A. D. 943, Abu Thaher dy'd in Peace, leaving large Dominions, divided among his Brothers, for he had no Iſſue. However, he thought fit to limit their Authority, by erecting a Council of Seven, who had the Adminiſtration of civil and religious Matters put into their Hands.

As for the Sect of the Karmathians, it dwindled by degrees, and came to nothing; for the Baridians having driven 'em out of Arabia, thoſe who made an Inſurrection afterwards at Aleppo, and other Places, had no Succeſs. * D' Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient. Bayle, Diction. Critic.

KAROPNITZE, or Gliuboten (in Latin, Karophitius, or Orbelus Mons) a Mountain in Europæan Turky. It parts Macedon from Albania, and joins Mont Argentario, upon the Frontiers of Bulgaria. * Maty, Diction.

KASIKERMEN, a Town in Tartary, ſtanding to the South of Boryſthenes, two Leagues from the Black-Sea. 'Tis fortify'd with four ſquare Forts made of Brick, and all of the ſame Bigneſs. The firſt Fort ſtands upon the Bank of the Boryſthenes, and is ſtrengthen'd with Towers, and ſo are two of the other which lie in the ſame Line. The fourth is the ſtrongeſt. On the other ſide, where 'tis not join'd to the other three, it has, inſtead of Towers, two large Baſtions and a Ditch. It faces the River, over-againſt a long Iſland, which has the Figure of an Ox-tongue; they call it Towan. The Tartars, in 1695, had two little Forts, with four Baſtions on each Side of the Iſland. They had likewiſe another Fort near the River. The ſame Year a Body of Coſſacks, the Czar of Muſcovy's Subjects, attack'd theſe Forts; and having carry'd 'em, beſieg'd Kaſikermen, of which they made themſelves Maſters in a ſhort time. A Truce being made for two Years at Carlowits, A. D. 1699, this Place, and Aſoph, were yielded to the Czar. But by the laſt Treaty, A. D. 1712, the Muſcovites reſign'd theſe Places to the Turk, after having demoliſh'd the Fortifications they had made there. * Memoires, du Temps.

KEDER (Martin) of the Royal Society of Antiquaries at Stockholm, publiſh'd a Book in Quarto, A. D. 1708, entitled Recherches des Medailles, or An Enquiry after the Medals ſtruck in Ireland, before Henry II. conquer'd that Country. In the ſame Work there is likewiſe a Catalogue of Engliſh-Saxon, and Engliſh-Daniſh Medals in the Author's Cloſet. It appears that there was Engliſh Money coin'd in Ireland, before the Year of our Lord 800. Keder grants it, and Sir James Ware proves it, in his Iriſh Antiquities. * Journal des Sav. 1709. Mois des Mars.

KEMNITZ, a Town in Upper Saxony. 'Tis the Capital of Ertzebourg, in Miſnia, and fortify'd with the Caſtle of Auguſtbourg.' Twas formerly an Imperial Town; but Frederick le Mordu, Marqueſs of Miſnia, made himſelf Maſter of it, A. D. 1308. * Maty, Diction.

* KEMPTEN. For 1625, it obtain'd a Charter from Frederick III. in Morery, Vol. I. read Frederick IV. A. D. 1465.

* KENNET. For Kennet I. in Morery, Vol I. read Kennet II.

* KENTIGERN. For towards the Middle of the Fifth Century, in Morery, Vol. I. read towards the Middle of the Sixth.

KERES, a River in Upper Hungary. 'Tis made up of three Rivers, all which have their Springs in Tranſylvania. The Keres is the midmoſt, receives the Tekierkeres, to the South, runs by Giula, and croſſes the Lake of Sarkad. After this, Keres takes in the Sebeskeres to the North, which ſome time before had paſs'd by Great Waradin; Keres thus encreas'd, diſcharges itſelf into the Bereton at Saravas; and thus join'd, they both fall into the Theiſſe at Czongrad. * Maty.

KERKA, KURKA, and CHERCA (in Latin, Cherca, or Titius Fluvius) a River in Dalmatia, which parted it from the Country call'd formerly Libernia. It has two Springs, one comes from Boſnia, and runs by Chnin, or Tina. After the Confluence of the two Streams, they take their Courſe to Scardona, and from thence to Sebenico, and fall into the Gulph of Venice. * Maty.

KERMEN (in Latin, Germia) a Town in Europæan Turky; it ſtands in Romania. 'Tis probable 'tis the ſame which the Maps call Hermaudi. * Maty, Diction.

KESSEL (the Territory of) in Latin, Keſſelienſis, or Caſtellanus Tractus. 'Tis a ſmall Country in Spaniſh Gelderland, ſituate between the Territories of Cuicke, the County of Horn, the Meuſe, and the Moraſs of Péel. There's nothing conſiderable in it, but the Town Keſſel, which ſtands near the Meuſe, two Leagues from Ruremond, and which is ſuppos'd to be the ſmall Town in Lower Germany, which the Ancients call'd Caſtellum Menapiorum. * Maty.

KETING, commonly call'd Dr. Keting, publiſh'd a Hiſtory of the Kingdom of Ireland, A. D. 1640. The Original is Iriſh, but 'tis tranſlated into Engliſh and Latin: It gives a great deal of Light into the Affairs of that Country, and particularly with reſpect to the Genealogy of great Families, Keting dy'd in 1650. * Keting, Præf. Operis Memoires du Temps.

KEYSERWERD (in Latin, Verda, Cæſaris Inſula) a ſtrong Town formerly within the Electoral Circle of the Rhine. It ſtands upon a ſmall Iſland form'd by the Rhine, in the Archbiſhoprick of Cologne, between Duſſeldorp and Duyſbourg. It has given Occaſion to frequent Conteſts between the States of the United Provinces, and the Archbiſhops of Cologn. The French, by the Aſſiſtance of the Cardinal Furſtenberg, made themſelves Maſters of this Town, and other Places in the Electorate, A. D. 1688. In the Year 1689, they were forc'd to ſurrender it to the Elector of Brandenbourg, who beſieg'd it with his Troops, being reinforc'd with the Allies againſt France. 'Twas confirm'd to this Elector by the Treaty of Ryſwick, who put it, with ſome other Places, into the Hands of the French again, a little before the War broke out in 1702, after which time, this was the firſt Place, which the Confederates beſieg'd: The Siege was long, and coſt a great many Lives, partly becauſe the Beſiegers did not begin their Attack at the moſt advantagious Place; and partly, becauſe Count Tallard, being poſted on the other Side of the Rhine with an Army, found Means to recruit the Garriſon, and ſupply it with Proviſions every Night. However, the Town ſurrender'd, June 15, 1702, upon Condition that the Fortifications ſhould be entirely raz'd, which was executed accordingly, * Memoires du Temps.

KIANG, the ſame, probably, with Kiam, call'd the Blue River, and the Son of the Sea: 'Tis a great River in China, which riſes in the Province of Yunnen, takes its Courſe through the Provinces of Soutchuen, Huquam, and Nankin; and after having run through four Kingdoms, and ſtretched four Hundred Leagues, falls into the eaſtern Ocean, over-againſt the Iſland Tcoummin, made at the Mouth of this River, by Heaps of Sand carried down the Stream. The Chineſe have a Proverb, that the Sea has no Bounds, nor the Kiam any Bottom: And in fact, 'tis hard to find any in ſeveral Places; and where they can ſound it, there is ſometimes two or three Hundred Fathom of Water. At Nankin, which is thirty Leagues from the Sea, the Kiam is half a League broad. 'Tis very dangerous to ſail upon it, and many Veſſels miſcarry in their Paſſage. The Stream is very rapid, and a great many Iſlands lie in the Chanel: Theſe are all ſerviceable to the Province, upon the ſcore of plenty of Ruſhes produc'd ten or twelve Foot high, which ſerve for Fuel to the neighbouring Towns. The River, by the Land-floods, pour'd down from the Mountains, is ſometimes ſo rapid, that it ſweeps down whole Iſlands, or waſhes 'em half away; and the ſame Force of the Water makes new ones in other Places; ſo that 'tis ſomewhat ſurprizing to ſee 'em thus floating and ambulatory. The Mandarins, to prevent their being miſtaken, have theſe Iſlands ſurvey'd every three Years, and either raiſe or ſink the publick Taxes, according to the Condition they find 'em in. *Le Comte, Preſent State of China, Letter IV.

KILIA VECHIA, or Kiliaſtary (in Latin, Kiliavetus, or Achillea) an old Town in the Lower Mœſia. It ſtands in Beſſarabia, upon the Iſland Kilia, form'd by the Northern Branch of the Danube. * Maty.

KILIAN, or Kulhm, a Biſhop, Miſſionary and Martyr in the Seventh Century. He was born in Ireland, and travel'd into Franconia, with ſome Aſſiſtance, to preach Chriſtianity there, A. D. 685. He ſtay'd ſome time at Wurtzbourg, where the chief Magiſtrate, Gosbert, and the People, were all Pagans. To execute his Function with the beſt Advantage of Authority, he travel'd to Rome with two of his Companions, that is, Coloman a Prieſt, and Totnan a Deacon, to receive a Commiſſion from Pope John V. who had been promoted to the Popedom a few Months before they ſet out for Germany. When they came to Rome, they found this Pope dead, but Conon, his Succeſſor, gave 'em a kind Reception, and conſecrated Kilian, A. D. 686, without aſſigning him any particular See: However, he had an Authority to go on with his Miſſion, and order every thing he thought neceſſary for the Intereſt of Religion, without having recourſe to any Perſon whatever. Kilian return'd to Wurtzbourg, and made it the Center of his Miſſion: Here he converted Prince Gosbert, and great Numbers of the People; but endeavouring to part this Prince and his Wife Geilan, becauſe ſhe was his Brother's Widow; this Lady thinking herſelf ill uſed, got Kilian, and his Companions, aſſaſſinated. This happen'd July 8, 689, on which Day his Feſtival is kept. * Bede, Martyrolog. Canifius, Tom. 4. Antiq. Lect. Waræus, de Scriptor. Hibern. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

KILISTINOUX, People of Northern America. They live in New France, between the High Lake and Hudſon's Bay. Sanſon, in his Maps, calls 'em Kiriſtinous. Their Country is water'd by a River of the ſame Name, and which falls into Hudſon's Bay. * Maty, Diction.

KIMIELNISKI (Bogdan) Commander in chief of the Coſſacks, and famous for the War he maintain'd againſt the Poles, in the ſeventeenth Century. He was a Perſon well qualify'd to head a Sedition; for he was brave, long-headed, and a good Diſſembler: He ſpoke Latin, Turkiſh, and the Tartar Language, which is not common with thoſe heavy unpoliſh'd People, who live in the Ukraine. His Poſt was but ſlender at firſt, for he had only the Command of a Company, with the Secretary's Place to a Regiment. The Coſſacks made him their Repreſentative to the Diet, held A. D. 1638. And here it was that he got acquainted with the Condition, and underſtood the Fort, and the Foible of the Court and Government of Poland. His Father was originally of Lithuania. They happen'd to be both made Priſoners by the Turks. His Mother ranſom'd them of the Tartars; and, ſoon after his return, he took Poſſeſſion of a ſmall Eſtate, which his Father left him near the Town Czebrin, in the Ukraine. This Province being laid waſte and uninhabited by the War, there was a great deal of Ground, which lay unclaim'd by the Death or Captivity of the Owners. Bogdan ſeiz'd the Lands which border'd upon his own; but 'twas not long before his Title was queſtion'd by a more powerful Perſon. Czaplinski, the King's Deputy Lieutenant, had a mind to this Eſtate. The Cauſe was try'd before Uladiſlaus. This King of Poland adjudg'd the Land to Czaplinski, and gave Kimielniski fifty Florins to comfort him under his Misfortune. But this Preſent did not ſatisfy him: He made loud Complaints, and fail'd ſo far in his Reſpects to Czaplinski, that he had him whipt in the publick Square. Kimielniski not bearing ſuch an Affront, withdrew to the Iſlands in the Mouth of the Boryſthenes: The Zaporovian Coſſacks entertain'd him, and choſe him for their General. When he receiv'd advice that General Potoski was preparing to purſue him, not confiding entirely in his Forces, he apply'd to Tamby, a Tartar General, who was a Perſon of a reſembling Character and Condition, and who had taken up Arms ſeveral times againſt the Cham his Maſter. Kimielniski was well practis'd in making his Court to this Tartar, and throwing out the Bait of good Plunder in Poland, prevail'd with him to enter into an Alliance; which was ſomewhat difficult, conſidering the Antipathy between the Coſſacks and Tartars, occaſion'd by the frequent Wars amongſt 'em.

The Poliſh General being deſirous to prevent the Execution of this Treaty, and the joining their Forces, detach'd four Thouſand Coſſacks, in the Service of the Republick, with fifteen Hundred Poliſh Troops, to go in queſt of Kimielniski, as far as Porovi. But when they came up hither, the Coſſacks kill'd their Officers, and went over to the Rebels: And thus Kimielniski defeated the fifteen Hundred Poles that remain'd, notwithſtanding they made a ſtout Reſiſtance for ſeveral Days. From hence he mov'd with ſeven Thouſand of his own Men, and four Thouſand Tartars, towards the Groſs of the Poliſh Army: This Army, receiving Advice of the ill Succeſs of Potoski's Expedition, and the Deſertion of four Thouſand Coſſacks, reſolv'd to retire with the Remainder: And thus, making a Body of about five Thouſand Men, they march'd off with their Waggons on their Flanks and Rear. But coming up to a Wood, full of Marſhes, the Barricade of their Waggons was eaſily broke: The Poles, thus ſurrounded on all Parts, were over-lay'd by the Enemy's Number: However, they might have got off, had it not been for the Treachery of eighteen Hundred Coſſacks, who, at the Beginning of the Fight, went over to Kimielnitski.

This Defeat happening when the King dy'd, occaſion'd a great Conſternation in the Republick, and open'd Kimielniski a way for executing his further Deſigns. The Iſſue was, that almoſt all the Flat Country of Ruſſia went into the Rebellion, to which the People had been too much diſpos'd of a long while. Podolia and Volhinia took the ſame Turn. The moſt conſiderable Lords of theſe large Provinces, after the Misfortune of ſeveral Skirmiſhes, were either kill'd or taken Priſoners; and thoſe who fared beſt, were forc'd to run from their Eſtates to preſerve their Lives. Duke Jeremy Wieſnowiski, loſt ſix hundred Thouſand Livers of yearly Revenue for his Share: This ſucceſsful Revolt of the Peaſantry, ſtruck Terror as far as the Capital; and this City of Cracow not being thought ſufficiently covered, they removed the Crown to a Place of better Security. Warſaw, where the Diet meets, was threatned with the ſame Inſult. The Conſternation went ſo far, that they talk'd of retiring to Dantzick with their beſt Effects, becauſe the Rebels advanc'd, and gave every Day freſh Alarms. But Courage and Prudence, two Qualities which never deſpair, even in the greateſt Calamity, prevented the execution of ſo cowardly a Reſolve.

General Kimielniski, making uſe of the Advantage of this Inter-regnum, he took the Town of Bar; and to ſhew himſelf no leſs concern'd for Religion, than for the Intereſt of thoſe who had given him the chief Command, he oblig'd the Roman Catholick Prieſts to marry the Nuns, and practiſe the Cuſtoms of the Greek Church. And as for the Jews, to prevent their taking Satisfaction in the Misfortunes of the Chriſtians, he cut off all thoſe who refus'd Baptiſm.

Things went on ſo faſt in Kimielniski's Favour, that himſelf was ſurpriz'd at the Succeſs, and fanſy'd that good Fortune having done ſo much for him, would never retire. In September following, he attack'd the Poliſh Army near Pilau, and entirely routed it. The Rebels were Maſters of the Field, and, which they valu'd more, all the Baggage fell into their Hands, which was valu'd at more than ſix Millions. This Loſs poſſibly preſerv'd Poland; for ſoon after this Diſgrace, forty Thouſand Tartars came up and claim'd a Share in the Booty, tho' they had none in the Danger. And being refus'd by the Peaſants, they left Kimielniski, and counter-march'd. The Coſſacks likewiſe went off, and march'd to a Place of Security, to divide the Wealth they had taken. At firſt, the Poles blam'd their Men, who had the Guard of their Camp, for not ſetting Fire to the Baggage, when they ſaw their Army routed: But afterwards they ceas'd finding fault, when they perceiv'd the Plunder made the Enemy loſe time, and gave the Republick Breath, and a better Opportunity of electing Caſimir King of Poland, who was proclaim'd November 17, 1648. Immediately after this Election, he ſent off

ſome

ſome Troops againſt Kimielniski, who being joyn'd with the Tartars, form'd an Army of an hundred Thouſand Horſe of that Nation; and over and above, muſter'd two hundred and fourſcore Thouſand Coſſacks. King Caſimir march'd in Perſon, with only twenty Thouſand Men, againſt this formidable Army; and after receiving an Attack, which the Poles ſuſtain'd with incredible Valour, this Prince brought the Tartars too, and concluded a Peace with 'em: Kimielniski was comprehended in the Articles. His Generalſhip was confirm'd to him, with new Privileges, and the ſtanding Troops of the Coſſacks, which before were only ſix Thouſand Men, were augmented to forty Thouſand.

But this General keeping too cloſe a Correſpondence with the Grand Signior, and the great Duke of Muſcovy, and making an Irruption into the Territories of the Prince of Walachia, an Ally of the Poles, King Caſimir projected Meaſures to check his Inſolence. And a War being reſolv'd, in the Diet at Warſaw, A. D. 1650, he levied an hundred Thouſand Men, and with ſurprizing Bravery fell upon the Tartars and Coſſacks, who both together made any Army of three hundred and fifty Thouſand Men. The Poles gave ſuch a furious Onſet, that the Tartars gave way. Their Cham ran out of the Field, notwithſtanding the Entreaties of Kimielniski, who was forc'd to follow him in his Retreat. Thus two hundred Thouſand Coſſacks were left to the Conqueror's Mercy; however, there were but thirty Thouſand of 'em ſlain, tho' they might eaſily have been all cut in pieces, if the Poliſh Nobility had ſeconded the Ardor of their King. This Victory brought on a Peace, leſs advantagious than the firſt for Kimielniski, who afterwards recommenc'd the War, and maintain'd it to his Death, tho' with different Succeſs. His Son Timothy Kimielniski, who marry'd the Daughter of Baſilius, Hoſpodar of Valacia, was kill'd in the Defence of his Father's Dominions: This Accident happen'd at an Aſſault upon the Town Soezana, where he was ſhut up. Hiſtorie des Diétes de Pologne. Relation des Coſaques. Thevenot, Recueil des Voyages.

KINCHEU, a Town in China. 'Tis the Sixth, in Largeneſs and Value, belonging to the Province of Huquang; it has twelve Towns within its Dependencies, and ſtands upon the River Kiang. * Maty, Diction.

KINGYANG, a Town in China. 'Tis a Seventh-rate Town in the Province of Xenſi; 'tis well fortify'd, and the Capital of a Precinct, within which are four other Towns. * Maty Diction.

KINGYVEN, a Town in China. 'Tis the Third in the Province Quiangſi; and has a Territory with eight other Towns in it. * Maty Diction.

KIRCHBERG (the County of.) 'Tis a ſmall Territory within the Circle of Suabia. It lies upon the Danube, above the Town of Ulme. 'Tis divided by the Barony of Juſtingen; Ehingen is the chief Town in the weſtern Diviſion; Erbach and Kirchberg lie in the eaſtern Moiety. This County belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria * Maty, Diction.

*KIRCHER (Athanaſius) a Jeſuit of Fulda. 'Tis reported for certain, that Father Philip Bonanni is going on with the Deſcription of the Cabinet of Rarities, begun by Kircher, in the College at Rome. The Curioſities lodg'd here will be engrav'd upon a great many Plates. George de Sepi, whom Father Kircher employ'd to make his Inſtruments and Machines, printed a ſhort Deſcription of 'em at Amſterdam; which after all, is no better than a very imperfect Catalogue. This Cabinet had been a little neglected, a great many Tools and Machines loſt, when Father Bonanni projected the putting of it into a good Condition. He has executed his Deſign, and divided the Curioſities into twelves Claſſes; the Pagan Idols are placed in the firſt Claſs; the Boards hung up for performance of Vows, and returning Thanks for ſome Bleſſing, makes the ſecond Claſs; the Third, beſides preſenting the Figure of old Sepulchres, furniſhes an hundred Epitaphs, lately digg'd up in the Neighbourhood of Rome; Sepulchral Lamps are lodg'd in the fourth Claſs, together with two ſorts of Veſſels, one of which was to put Tears in, and the other was made uſe of at Funeral Solemnities; in the fifth Claſs, Father Bonanni has rang'd other curious Remains of Antiquity; in the Sixth, Curioſities brought from foreign Countries; in the Seventh, Stones ſcarcely elſewhere to be met with, eſpecially thoſe that have the Figure of Animals; in the Eighth, Minerals and Salts; in the Ninth, all ſorts of Machines; the Tenth ſerves for Medals; the Eleventh for Microſcopes, by the help of which very ſurprizing Obſervations are made; the Twelfth for above eight Hundred curious and different Shells.

The whole Deſcription will make a large Folio, with the following Title; Muſeum Kircherianum, ſive Muſeum à Patre Athanaſio Kirchero in Collegio Romano Societatis Jeſu, jampridem incœptum, nuper reſtitutum & auctum, deſcriptum & Iconibus illuſtratum, à Patre Philippo Bonanni Societatis Jeſu. Romæ 1709. Typis Georgii Plachi cœlaturam profitentis, & Characterum fuſoriam, apud Sanctum Marcum. * Memoires de Trevoux 1709, Mois d' Octobre. Voyez auſſi le Journal des Savans de Paris 1709.

KIREI, the Name of a famous Tartar Family, who founded the Kingdom of the Crimean, or Precopenſian Tartars; from this Family Azi-Kirai was deſcended, who chas'd the Son of Tic-Tamiſc, from Taurica Cherſoneſus, that is to ſay, from the Crimean Dominions; and having made good his Revolt againſt this Prince, took the Style of King of the Tartars. After this time, the Crimean Tartars made Incurſions into Lithuania, Poland, and Ruſſia. * George Horn. Orb. Imper. cum notis Gelleri. pag. 435.

KIRKISIA, or Karkiſe, a Town belonging to the Turks in Aſia. It ſtands in Diarbecker, upon the Euphrates, twenty-five Leagues below Rika. The Emperor Gordian's Tomb is to be ſeen there. * Maty, Diction.

KIRN, a ſtrong Caſtle belonging to the Palatinate upon the Rhine, near the River Nahe, and the ſmall Town Kirnberg, ſix Leagues above Creutſnach. * Maty, Diction.

KIRSTENIUS (Peter) Phyſick Profeſſor at Upſal; was born at Breſlau in Sileſia, September 1577. After having ſtudied the Languages and Phyſick at home, he travelled into the Low Countries, into France, Italy, Spain, and England. At his Return he was created Doctor of Phyſick at Baſil, and afterwards remov'd into Pruſſia, from whence he was carry'd into Sweden, by the Chancellor Oxenſtiern, who made him Phyſick Profeſſor at Upſal, A. D. 1636. He was likewiſe Phyſician to the Queen of Sweden, and dy'd April 8, 1640. He is ſaid to have underſtood ſix and twenty Languages. Loccenius made his Funeral Oration His Epitaph calls him Polytropus, Polyhiſtor, and Polyglottus. His Works are, an Arabick Grammar. A ſacred Decad of Arabick Poems. Notes upon St. Matthew's Goſpel. A Book concerning the true uſe and abuſe of Phyſick. * Konig. Biblioth.

KITTIM, the Inhabitants of the Iſle of Cyprus, deſcended from Heth, or Keth, Son of Canaan. The Macedonians were likewiſe call'd Cheteans: Thus, 1 Maccab. viii. 5. Perſeus, the laſt King of Macedon, defeated by the Romans, is call'd King of the Citims, or Kittims. * Simon, Dictionarie de la Bible.

*KNIGHTS of St. Lewis. The Order of St. Lewis is a military Order, begun by Lewis XIV, in 1693. Military Service is the only paſſable Pretenſion to this Diſtinction. The King is the Sovereign of the Order. Thoſe call'd les Grands-Croix, eight in Number, and the four and twenty Commanders, wear a large Ribband Scarfeways, with a gold Croſs canton'd with gold Flower-de-luces, charg'd on one ſide with the Figure of St. Lewis, and on the other with a flaming Sword, with the Point ſtruck through a Laurel Crown. The plain Knights only carry a Croſs hanging down upon their Breaſt, upon a ſmall Flame-colour'd Ribband. * Memoires du Temps.

*KNOX (John) For a farther Account of his Character ſee Collier Hiſt. Eccleſ. Vol. 2.

KOKENHAUSEN, a Town belonging to Sweden, in Livonia, ſtanding upon the Dwina, nineteen Leagues above Riga, The Strength of the Place lies more in the Situation than the Works. However, it has a good Citadel. The Muſcovites took it in 1654, and and return'd it to the Swedes at a Peace made not long after. But now all Livonia, and by conſequence this Place, is in the Hands of the Muſcovite. * Maty, Diction.

KOKOTAN, a Town in Great Tartary, According to Father Avril, it lies in the Road from Toboik to Pekin. M. Witſen places it to the weſt of China, about thirty Leagues from the River Hoamk, amongſt the Towns the Chineſe hold in Tartary. * Maty, Diction.

KOLA, a ſmall Town in that part of Lapland belonging to the Muſcovite. It ſtands in the Territory of Mouza-Monskoi-Lepori, at the Mouth of the River Kola, in the Northern Ocean. The Engliſh and Dutch trade here for Furrs. * Maty, Diction.

KOLO, a Field about a quarter of a League from Warſaw, upon the high Road to Dantzick, and near the Viſtula. Here the famous Diet meets for chuſing a King of Poland. They call it the Diet of the Election, which conſiſts not only of the Senate, and the Repreſentatives of the Lower Nobleſſe, but all the Gentlemen of the Kingdom meet, without Exception, and vote there: Whereas in other Diets, none but the Deputies from the Palatinates, together with the Senate, are admitted. Memoires de Beaujeu.

KOM, or Com, a Town of Perſia, within the Province of Yerak, which is the ſame with the old Chaldæa. This Town ſtands in an open Country, between Iſpahan and Casbin. There are about fifteen Thouſand Houſes in it. Here is to be ſeen the ſtately Mauſoleum of Ruſtan-Can, Prince of the Family of the laſt Kings of Georgia, who turn'd Mahometan to gain the Government of this Kingdom, conquer'd by the Sophy of Perſia. There are no better Soap or Sword-blades made in all Perſia, than at this Town. The Country likewiſe produces plenty of Pomegranates. There are a great many Moſques here, but the moſt magnificent one is that, where Chaſephi, and Cha-Abas II, Kings of Perſia, are buried. The Structure of this Building is admirable, and immenſe Riches are to be ſeen in it. At the further End of the fourth Court, there are three ſtately Chapels of tranſparent Marble. On the Top of the Dome of the middle Chapel, there's a ſlender Spire about twenty Foot high, made of gold Balls ſet one upon another, and ſurmounted with a Creſcent of the ſame Metal. In this Chapel there's the Tomb of Fathima, Daughter to the Caliph Mouza-Cazem, which Lady is extreamely regarded by the Perſians. In the Chapels, on each Side, Sephi and Abas II are buried. Every thing here is ſurprizingly fine; the Floor is Porphyry Marble, the Roof curious Architecture, and all the Inſide is enlay'd with Gold and Azure, the Windows are Cryſtal, painted Gold and Azure, and let or enchas'd into maſſie Gold. All the Ornaments of theſe Chapels are Silver and Gold. Eight Mollas are hir'd to read the Alcoran, by Turns, Night and Day, before Fathima's Tomb. Twelve others perform the ſame Service at Sephi's Tomb, and five and twenty at Abas's. This Moſque has an Eſtate of three Thouſand two Hundred Tomans, annual Revenue ſettled upon it, which amount to an Hundred forty-four Thouſand Livres. This Revenue is ſpent in repairing the Building, maintaining the Mollas, or Mahometan Prieſts, together with the Doctors and Students, who are lodg'd there in a large Apartment. Three great Perſian Lords are the Governors. One of the Courts of this Moſque, ſerves for a Sanctuary for thoſe who are inſolvent; and here they are provided with Lodging and Diet, till their Friends can compound with their Creditors. * Travernier and Sir John Chardin.

KONICEPOLE, or Koniecpole, a Town in Poland. It ſtands in Lower Podolia, where a ſmall River joyns the Bog, twenty-four Leagues above the Town Braclaw. * Maty, Diction.

KONIG (Emanuel) a Phyſician born at Baſil, A. D. 1639. He made himſelf known by two Diſſertations, entitled De Regno Vegetabili & Animali. He is called a ſecond Avicenna. His other Works are, Regnum Minerale; Scholia, in Obſervationes Chirurgicas; Augmentum Hippocratis Helvetici, written by John Muralt of Zurich; Theſaurus remediorum è triplici regno; Obſervationes Miſcellaneæ, Medicæ, Phyſicæ, Chymicæ.

KONIGSTEIN, a ſmall Town with a very ſtrong Caſtle. It ſtands upon the Elb in Miſnia, within the Upper Saxony, ſix Leagues above Dreſden. * Maty, Diction.

KONIGSTEIN, a ſmall Town within the Electoral Circle of the Rhine. It belongs to the Archbiſhoprick of Mentz, four or five Leagues from Mentz, and the ſame Diſtance from Francfort. Konigſtein is fortify'd the modern way; but the Strength is not very great, becauſe of the Hills that command it. 'Tis the Capital of an Earldom, and eſcheated to the Archbiſhoprick of Mentz, by the Death of the laſt Earl of Conigſtein, happening A. D. 1487 * Maty, Diction.

KONIGSECK, a ſmall Town in Suabia, lying between Uberlingen and Buchaw, four or five Leagues from each of theſe Towns. Konigſeck is the Capital of an Earldom of the ſame Name. The Earls of Conigſeck are divided into two Branches, diſtinguiſh'd by the Names of Aulendorf and Rottenfels. * Maty, Diction.

KORIEUVICZ (Elias) a Muſcovite, and one of the moſt learned Subjects of the preſent Czar of Muſcovy. This Prince finding his People unpoliſh'd and ignorant, reſolv'd to improve 'em in Learning no leſs than in the Buſineſs of War. To this purpoſe he invited ſeveral learned Perſons into his Dominions, founded Colleges, and by his Bounty and Example, brought his Subjects to an Inclination to Letters: He has gotten a great many Books tranſlated and printed with great Judgment; and has not thought it beneath his Grandeur to tranſlate ſome himſelf. Elias Korieuvicz is one of the moſt conſiderable in promoting his Maſter's Deſigns for Learning. The Czar, Peter Alexiovitzs, perceiving this Muſcovite's Genius lie ſtrongly this way, ſent him into Holland in 1698. The Works he has already printed, and thoſe he intends to print, are ſufficient Proofs of his Capacity and Application. The Books M. Korieuvicz has already printed in the Sclavonian Language are as follow; An Introduction to Hiſtory, with a Deſcription of the Univerſe; a Planiſphere, with an Explication of the Art Military; an Introduction to Arithmetick; a Treatiſe of Navigation; a Sclavonian, Latin, and High-German Dictionary; a Poetical Sclavonian Dictionary; a Latin and Sclavonian Grammar; a Sclavonian Diſcourſe upon Rhetorick; Æſop's Fables tranſlated in Sclavonian; a Sclavonian Poem upom the Czar's Victories; the able and honeſt Politician, in Poliſh Verſe; Horace and Quintus Curtius. * Journal de Trevoux, au Mois de Septembre, 1711.

KORSOE, Korſor, or Korcor, a ſmall Fort belonging to Denmark, in the Iſle of Zeland. It ſtands upon the great Belt, over-againſt the Northern Point of the Iſland Langeland. It has a good Haven, from which they commonly put off to the Iſland of Fionia. * Maty, Diction.

KRASNOBROD, a Village in Poland, within the Palatinate of Belz, three Leagues from the ſmall Town of Chebrechim. It ſtands in an open Place in the Middle of a Foreſt. John Sobieski, King of Poland, made this Place famous, by a Defeat he gave the Tartars here, two or three Years before the Death of his Predeceſſor. He attack'd and drove 'em through theſe Foreſts, as far as Komarnouf, where they cover'd themſelves behind the Mear of that Town, which look'd like a Lake or Arm of the Sea, rather than a Pool. But the King came hither in queſt of 'em, croſs'd the Mear, by the Aſſiſtance of a Guide, who ſhew'd him where 'twas fordable; and puſhing 'em from this Cover, perſu'd 'em beyond the Nieſter. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

KUL, that is to ſay, a Slave in the Turkiſh Language. All thoſe, who execute any Offices in the Diſpoſal of the Crown, or receive any Salaries out of the Exchequer, have the Diſtinction of Kul, or the Grand Signior's Slave. The Grand Viſier himſelf, and all the Baſhaws of the Empire, value themſelves upon this Name, and reckon it more honourable than that of Subject. A Slave of the Sultan's has an Authority, as it were, to maltreat thoſe who have no other Quality than that of the Prince's Subjects. But a Subject can't do the leaſt diſobliging thing to a Slave, without danger of being puniſh'd. Thoſe who take the Title of Slave, reſign themſelves entirely to the Emperor's Pleaſure, Pleaſure, execute whatever he commands, and believe even Death itſelf, ſuffer'd by his Order, is no leſs than Martyrdom. * Rycaut, Turkiſh Hiſtory.

KUR (in Latin, Cyrus, Cyrrhus, and Cyrnus) a great River of Aſia, in Georgia. It runs by Teflis, in the Kingdom of Carduel, and by Zagan, in the Territories of Kakketi. Afterwards it parts the Province of Scirvan, from thoſe of Erivan, and Adirbeitzan; and then encreas'd by the River Araxis, and ſome other ſmaller Streams, falls into the Caſpian-Sea. * Maty, Diction.

KYLBURG, tho' no large Town, is the Capital of one of the Bailliages, or Precincts, belonging to the Electorate of Treves. It ſtands upon the River Kyll, five Leagues from the Town of Treves, to the North. * Maty, Diction.

L.

LAAS (in Latin, Laſium) a ſmall Town within the Circle of Auſtria in Germany. It ſtands in the Lower Carniola, at the Foot of the Mountains, and a League from the Lake Czirnicz to the North. 'Tis the Capital of a ſmall Country, call'd the Kacſeola. * Maty, Diction.

LABEO (Q. Fabius) run thro' moſt of the great Offices in the Roman Republick. He was Quæſtor in the Year of Rome 557, and in the Year 564 he was Prætor, and High Admiral; and amongſt other Succeſſes at Sea, recover'd all the Roman Priſoners from the Cretans; which was reckon'd an equal Honour to a naval Triumph. In the Year 570, he was Conſul with Claudius Marcellus, and commanded an Army in Liguria. There are ſome things, which tho' the Romans valu'd themſelves upon, ſeem to have a romantic Air: For the Purpoſe, 'tis ſaid that when he was choſen Referee, between the Burghers of Nola and thoſe of Naples, who diſputed a Patch of Ground upon the Borders; he prevail'd with each Party to relinquiſh ſomewhat of their Pretenſions, and then determin'd, that the Ground quitted by each Side ſhould belong to the Romans. 'Tis likewiſe ſaid, that having worſted King Antiochus, and concluded a Peace with him, one Article of which was, that this Prince ſhould ſurrender half his Fleet; he order'd all the King's Ships to be ſplit in halves, and by this means deſtroy'd the whole. * Livy, Decad 4. Lib. 7, 9, 10. Cicer. de Offic. Lib. 1. Valer. Maxim. Lib. 7. cap. 3.

LABEO (Antiſtius) an eminent Roman Lawyer, and bred under the famous Sulpicius, had the Intereſt of his Country ſo much at heart, that after having been dipt in the Conſpiracy againſt Cæſar, and finding his Party undone, by the loſs of the Battel at Philippi, he reſolv'd not to ſurvive the Liberty of the Republick; but order'd one of his Slaves, lately manumis'd, to diſpatch him in his Tent. * Appian, de Bell. Civil. Lib. 4.

LABEO (Q. Antiſtius) Son to him in the foregoing Article, and Scholar to the learned Trebatius, liv'd in the Reign of Auguſtus, and was one of the moſt able Lawyers of old Rome. He had likewiſe made a great Progreſs in other Parts of Learning; and which is more valuable, he was a Perſon of inflexible Integrity, and ſcorn'd to ſtoop to the Flattery then in faſhion; for he would never make his court to the Emperor, by doing any thing contrary to Law. Gellius and Suetonius report ſeveral Inſtances of this kind. And the latter obſerves, that this uncompliant Honeſty did not make him loſe the Emperor's Favour. But here Tacitus contradicts him with great Probability, and relates that this Stiffneſs hinder'd him from gaining the Conſulſhip. Labeo wrote a great many Books, where, relying too much upon his Capacity and Learning, he ſtruck out into Singularities. He is ſaid to have compos'd four Hundred Tracts, the Titles of ſome of which are ſtill remaining in the Index to the Pandects. Some of his Compoſitions went upon the Subject of the Privileges belonging to the College, or Society, of the Prieſts: He wrote alſo upon the Myſtery of Divination; and poſſibly, 'tis this Labeo whom St. Auguſtin cites, in his ſecond Book de Civitate Dei, cap. 2. I ſay 'tis poſſible, becauſe this Teſtimony might be cited from Cornelius Labeo, who wrote de Diis Penatibus, and of the Oracle of Claros, frequently quoted by Macrobius. To return and diſpatch the Article, Antiſtius Labeo is ſaid to have wrote Commentaries upon the Twelve Tables. * Aulus Gellius, Lib. 1. cap. 12. Lib. 7. cap. 15. Lib. 12. cap. 10, & 12. Lib. 22. cap. 1. Sueton. in Auguſt. cap. 57. Tacit. Annal. Lib. 3.

LABEZ, or Calao, a Town in the Province of Bugia, in Barbary. It ſtands near the River Major, and is the Capital of the Kingdom of Labez, ſurrounded with almoſt inacceſſible Mountains, the Avenues to which Territory are fortify'd by the Town Tezli. The Kings of Labez are tributary to the Algerines, who, notwithſtanding, have trouble enough to levy the Contributions. 'Tis ſuppos'd that Labez is the old Altao, or Atao, a Town within Mauritania Cæſarienſis. * Maty, Diction.

LACHI (in Latin, Lachium and Petra) a Town formerly belonging to the Kingdom of Macedon. 'Tis now the Country call'd Albania, and ſtands upon the Ionian-Sea, two Leagues from the Town Durazzo, to the South. * Maty, Diction.

* LACTANTIUS; to what has been ſaid upon this Article in Morery, may be ſubjoyn'd, that St. Jerome mentions other Works in this Father, that is to ſay, two Books to Aſclepiades; a Poem in Hexameter Verſe, containing the Deſcription of his Travels to Nicomedia; a Tract entitled Grammaticus. His Book de Mortibus Perſecutorum, was ſome Years ſince publiſh'd by Baluzius. And here Lactantius's Deſign is to ſhew, that the perſecuting Emperors all dy'd miſerable Deaths. Some queſtion the Genuineneſs of this Book, becauſe there's only the Name of Cecilius upon the Title; but the Style, the Time when 'twas written, and ſeveral other Circumſtances, are ſufficient Evidence 'twas written by Lactantius; the Poem of the Phœnix, commonly reckon'd to him, was written by ſome Pagan; the Paſchal Poem was written by ſome Chriſtian, but much later in time than Lactantius; that upon the Paſſion of our Saviour is penn'd in a quite foreign Style, and conſequently ſpurious; the Abridgment of the Mythology upon Ovid's Metamorphoſis, and the Notes upon Statius's Thebais, belong'd to Placidius Lactantius, a Grammarian. Euſebius, in his Chronicon, obſerves that Lactantius was ſo diſintereſted and reſign'd in his Fortune, that notwithſtanding he liv'd at Court, he was often unprovided with Neceſſaries. He may be ſaid to be the moſt eloquent of any, of all the Eccleſiaſtical Writers. His Style is correct, eaſy, uniform, and entirely reſembling Tully's manner. He confutes the Pagan Religion with a great deal of Force, and demonſtrates the Truth of Chriſtianity happily enough; tho', according to St. Jerome, he is beſt at the deſtructive way of reaſoning. He treats Divinity in too philoſophical a manner; he ſeems not to have reach'd the Bottom of the more myſterious Parts of Chriſtianity, and has ſometimes fallen into Error. The firſt Edition of Lanctantius was printed at Rome, in Folio, by Conrad Leweynheim, A. D. 1468. The laſt Edition is that of Amſterdam, with the Commentaries of ſeveral Authors; however, 'tis not the moſt exact; and here it muſt not be forgotten, that Father Nourri, a Benedictin, has lately publiſh'd a new Edition of the Book de Mortibus Perſecutorum, which he thinks does not belong to Lactantius; there is likewiſe an Abridgment of Lactantius's Inſtitutions, publiſh'd by this Father. * Hieron. in Chron. A. D. 317. Epiſt. 13. ad Paulin. Catal. cap. 181. M. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 3.

LACYDES, a Greek Philoſopher, Son of Alexander, born at Cyrene, was bred under Arceſilaus, and ſucceeded him in his philoſophical School. Diogenes Laërtius, reports him the Founder of a new Academy; but Tully aſſures us, that he follow'd Arceſilaus's Sentiments; and other Authors agree that 'twas Carneades that ſet up the third Academy. This Lacydes had a Gooſe that follow'd him wherever he went; this unuſual Attendance ſtruck the Philoſopher's Fancy ſo far, that when ſhe dy'd he made her a very ſolemn Funeral, as if ſhe had been his Father, or the neareſt Relation. Cicer. Quæſtion. Academic. Lib. 2. Laert. Lib. 4. &c.

LADERCHI (James) Prieſt of the Congregation of the Oratory of Rome, printed at this Town, A. D. 1705, an Hiſtorical Diſſertation upon the Baſilicæ, or Churches at Rome, dedicated to the Honour of the Martyrs Marcellinus a Prieſt, and Peter an Exorciſt, who ſuffer'd A. D. 302: They were beheaded ten Miles from Rome, at a Place then call'd Sylva Nigra, but afterwards Sylva Candida. Here a Church was likewiſe built in honour of St. Ruffina and Secunda. The Deſcription and hiſtorical Account of theſe and other Churches, Churches, gave Father Laderchi an occaſion to treat concerning the Titles of Cardinals. He is of opinion, that theſe Titles at firſt were only the Houſes of ſome wealthy Chriſtians, where the Faithful were receiv'd, not only for Prayers and the Euchariſt, but likewiſe were reliev'd in their Indigence, and cover'd from Perſecution. Afterwards the Biſhops of Rome fix'd a Prieſt to each of theſe Houſes, being turn'd into ſo many Churches. This Regulation is reckon'd to Pope Evariſus, who, as 'tis ſaid, divided Rome into five and twenty Diſtinctions of this kind. The Prieſts ty'd to theſe Titles or Pariſhes, were call'd Cardinals, from the Word Incardinare, which ſignifies to ordain a Biſhop, Prieſt, or Deacon, and oblige him to reſide and take care of a particular Church. This Name, which at firſt was common to all the parochial Clergy, was afterwards appropriated to thoſe who ſhare the Government of the Church of Rome with the Pope. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 17.

LADOGA, a great Lake in the northern Part of Europe, upon the Confines of Sweden and Muſcovy, between the Principality of Novorogod-Weliki, Ingria, and Livonia. This Lake takes in the Lake Ilmen, by the River Wolchova; the Lake Onega likewiſe flows into it, by the River Sueri: It has likewiſe a Communication with a great many Lakes and Marſhes of Livonia, by the River Woſen, and falls into the Gulph of Finland, by the Chanel of Nieva. 'Tis reckon'd the largeſt Lake in Europe, being no leſs than fifty-three Leagues over from North to South, and five and twenty from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis prodigiouſly ſtock'd with Salmon, and with another ſort of Fiſh about the Bigneſs of a Herring, which they call Ladog, from whence, as 'tis ſuppos'd, the Lake is call'd Ladoga. To conclude, the Country between this Lake and that of Onega, was formerly a diſtinct Province, call'd Ladoga; but now 'tis annex'd to the Province of Novorogod-Weliki. * Maty, Diction.

LAET (John de) born at Antwerp. He has publiſh'd a Deſcription of the Weſt-Indies in eighteen Books. He likewiſe wrote an Anſwer to Grotius's Diſſertation, concerning the Original of the Americans: And 'tis to this Author that the Publick is oblig'd, for a great part of the Diſcoveries of the Hiſtory, relating to the reſpective Governments and Condition of the native Weſt-Indians. * Konig. Biblioth.

LAGERLOOF (Peter) in Latin, Laurifolius, Rhetorick Profeſſor at Upſal, was pitch'd on by the King of Sweden, to write the ancient and modern Hiſtory of the Northern Kingdoms. He publiſh'd a Book entitled, Orthographia Suecana; and another de Commerciis Romanorum, &c. 'Tis ſaid his Lectures and Orations, will be collected and printed together in a Volume. His Latin Style was much eſteem'd in the North. He dy'd in January 1699. * Nova litter. Mariæ Balthici, 1699, Febr. p. 43.

LAKE, a Collection of Waters, deep enough to diſtinguiſh 'em from Moraſſes, but which have no Communication with the Sea, or which don't immediately fall in there, excepting by the Communication of Rivers. Some of theſe Lakes are call'd Seas, as the Caſpian, the Sea of Galilee, and the Dead-Sea. The other moſt conſiderable Lakes, are the Lake of Geneva, call'd Leman-Lake, remarkable for the clearneſs of the Water; the Lakes of Conſtance, of Ladoga, and Onega, in Europe; the Lake of Nicaragua, and thoſe of Ontario, of Caregnondi, the Superior, or Upper-Lake, and that of Deſpuants, &c. in America; the Lake Chiamay, in Aſia; to which we may add, the Lakes of Zaire, of Zaflan, of Dambea, and of Niger in Africa. * Maty, Diction. Memoires du Temps.

LAMI (Bernard) Prieſt of the Congregation of the Oratory, and born at Mans, he gave an early Diſcovery of a ſtrong Genius for Learning, and was a great Proficient in almoſt all Parts of it. He was a conſiderable Linguiſt, and well diſtinguiſh'd in the Belles Lettres; he went a great way in Mathematicks, and philological Criticiſm, was Maſter of the Heathen Philoſophy, was a good Divine, and underſtood the Rabbins; he taught Philoſophy in the College of the Fathers of the Oratory, at Saumur and Angers, and afterwards read Divinity Lectures at the Seminary at Grenoble. His firſt Performances in print were upon the Belles Lettres, and mathematical Subjects, viz. The Art of Speaking; Reflections upon the Art of Poetry; Tracts concerning the Æquilibrium; Elements of Geometry; Diſcourſes upon the Sciences, and the Method for ſtudying; A Treatiſe of Perſpective: Theſe Books have run through ſeveral Editions. His firſt Eſſay upon the holy Scriptures, is an Apparatus, or Introduction, to the Scripture, publiſh'd in Latin and French. He afterwards publiſh'd an Harmony, or Agreement, of the Evangeliſts, in which there are three Aſſertions, which gave occaſion to a long Controverſy: They are theſe; Firſt, The two Impriſonments of St. John Baptiſt; one by an order from the Prieſts and Phariſees; and, Secondly, by King Herod. His ſecond Aſſertion is, that our Saviour, in his laſt Paſſover, did not eat the Paſcal Lamb, but was crucify'd before the time appointed for that Purpoſe. Thirdly, That Mary, Lazarus's Siſter, and Mary, the great Sinner, was one and the ſame Perſon. Theſe three Opinions, and particularly that concerning the Paſſover, have drawn ſome learned Pens upon him. However, Father Lami has endeavour'd publickly to maintain his Ground, and given a Reply to all his Adverſaries. He has written a Commentary upon his Harmony, where he treats ſeveral important Queſtions concerning the Hiſtory of the Goſpels. He has finiſh'd a large Work concerning the Temple of Jeruſalem, of which he has given a rough Draught. He has likewiſe printed a Book entitled, A Demonſtration, or evident Proofs of the Truth and Holineſs of the Chriſtian Rules of Morality. Father Lami is a learned, modeſt, and judicious Perſon, and very well vers'd in Scripture Learning; he has an eaſy and natural Elocution, writes well in French and Latin, and carries his Reaſoning as far as the Argument will bear. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſtory, Cent. 18.

LAMI (Francis) a Benedictin Monk of the Congregation of St. Maur: This Gentleman was bred to a military Profeſſion, and ſerv'd in the French King's Army: But, afterwards, being weary of that way of living, turn'd Benedictin. He had a beautiful Genius, was a Man of great Piety, and went through all the Stages of Monaſtick Diſcipline. By his Application to ſtudy he became an excellent Philoſopher, a polite Writer, and very knowing in making Judgment upon the Paſſions and Retirements of the Mind. He has publiſh'd five Tomes concerning the knowledge of one's ſelf; a Tract of the demonſtrative Truth of the Chriſtian Religion; Modern Atheiſm overthrown; Pious Reflections upon a Monaſtick Life; Lectures upon Wiſdom; a Collection of Letters upon Theological and Moral Subjects; the Unbeliever conducted to Religion by Reaſon; Philoſophical Letters upon divers Subjects; a Tract againſt Eloquence, entitled, The Rhetoric of the College betray'd by its Apologiſt; and laſtly, A Diſcourſe concerning the Knowledge and Love of God. He dy'd at St. Dennis, in April 1711. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 17.

LAMIA, a Town in Theſſaly. 'Tis chiefly remarkable for a Battel within its Precinct, between the Athenians and other Greek Auxiliaries, and Antipater Governor of Macedon. This happen'd ſoon after the Death of Alexander the Great. The Iſſue of this Fight prov'd very calamitous to the Athenians, and many other Towns of Greece. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

LAMPTA, a Town in the Kingdom of Fez. 'Tis near the City Fez, and was built upon the Ruins of the old Vobrix, or Bobrix, a Town in Mauritania Tingitania. * Maty, Diction.

LANCELOT (Claude) a Pariſian and Benedictin Monk: He wrote the new Method for learning Greek, Latin, Italian, and Spaniſh. He likewiſe wrote a Diſſertation upon the Hemina of Wine, printed firſt in 12vo, and afterwards in 8vo, much enlarged. He made a General Grammar, tranſlated into ſeveral Languages. He tranſlated Phædrus's Fables, and ſome of Terence's Comedies, and took care to guard againſt Indecency. 'Tis ſaid that he has left a Tract behind him upon St. Benedict's Rule, which is look'd upon as a Maſterpiece in its kind. He had been Præceptor to ſome of the Princes of the Blood; and afterwards the Marqueſs of Louvois would have given him the Care of his Children's Education, with the Settlement of a thouſand Crowns Annuity, but he choſe rather to retire: And after having diſtributed what he had to the Poor, he turn'd Monk in a Benedictin Abby, Abby, upon the Borders of Touraine and Berry. He dy'd in April 1685, about eighty Years of Age. Memoire Manuſcript. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent.* 17.

LANCEROTTE, or Lancelotte. 'Tis one of the Canary Iſlands, and lies over-againſt the Kingdom of Sus in Africk, five Leagues from the Iſland Forteventura to the North. This Iſland, which is commonly taken for the Junonia Minor of the Ancients, is about ten Leagues in Length and four in Breadth. There is a Town in it of the ſame Name. Maty, Diction.*

*LANDRECY, a Town in the Low Countries, in the Province of Hainault, was inveſted by the Allies with a numerous Army, commanded by Prince Eugene of Savoy, July 17, 1712; but they were forc'd to raiſe the Siege, after having been beaten in their Camp at Denain, by the French King's Army, commanded by Marſhal Villars. This Victory brought on the taking of Marchienne, and ſeveral other Places of Importance, where the Confederates had lodg'd all their Ammunition for the Campaign; the taking of Doway, and the Peace at Utrecht, were likewiſe the Conſequences of this Advantage. But here the Dutch Man, who now and then makes Additions to the French Supplementer, is ſomewhat diſconcerted, complains of Partiality in the Recital, and take the Freedom to ſay, that 'twas the ſcandalous and unexpected going off of the Engliſh from the reſt of the Confederates, which occaſion'd this Misfortune.

LANGUAGES: Speech is the Interpreter of Thought, or the Art of diſcovering Peoples Minds to each other, by Marks or Sounds agreed on This is a Privilege, as we may call it, peculiar to Man, and is an evident Proof of an intelligent Being; for nothing below Men have invented arbitrary Marks to diſcover their Thoughts, with reſpect to Objects, which have no relation to their Senſations and Paſſions. 'Tis true, Beaſts have natural Signs to diſcover their Senſations of Pleaſure or Pain, their Hunger or Thirſt, and ſuch things as either pleaſe, or fall rugged upon the Diſpoſition of their Organs: But there are no ſort of Brutes which make uſe of ſettled and arbitrary Signs, to give notice of things independent of the Mechaniſm of their Bodies. Whereas Man is no ſooner grown up to the uſe of Reaſon, but he preſently looks out for means to communicate his Thoughts, and ſuch Thoughts, which have no Connexion, either with his Senſations or Paſſions. And in caſe he can't do it by the aſſiſtance of Voice, he projects other Expedients, as we ſee in thoſe that are born Deaf and Dumb, who expreſs themſelves by Signs, as others do by Sounds.

However, it muſt be granted, that no Marks are ſo ſerviceable to bring the Mind into view, as the Voice, which, by its different Articulations, furniſhes almoſt an infinite Number of different Words, to each of which Men faſten what Idea they pleaſe, and being once agreed upon their Signification, they are by this means in a Condition to make all their Thoughts intelligible to each other.

For this purpoſe, Man is naturally furniſh'd with Organs proper for forming an articulate Voice, a Proviſion which no other Animals are furniſh'd with in the ſame degree of Perfection. Being thus particularly provided for Speech, 'tis eaſy to conceive Men might form a great many Words by degrees, tye an Idea to 'em, make others acquainted with this Regulation, and ſo ſettle an uniform Language for Communication. 'Tis likewiſe eaſy to conceive, that in regard the Connexion between certain Words, and the things deſign'd to be expreſs'd by 'em, are perfectly arbitrary, they may be chang'd at different Places, at different Times, and by different Perſons: Indeed 'tis very unlikely, that the Variety of Capacities and Inclinations, the different Occaſions People have to expreſs themſelves, the different Turn of the Imagination, the forgetting old Words, the Eaſe People find in delivering themſelves in one Expreſſion rather than another, the new things met with which require new Names, Strangers which ſettle among Natives; I ſay, 'tis very unlikely, that theſe, and a great many other Cauſes, ſhould not bring an Alteration upon living Languages; we need not therefore be ſurpriz'd, to find Languages floating and variable, it being next to impoſſible they ſhould continue long in the ſame Condition. This Remark may ſerve to account for the Origin and Diverſity of Languages, ſuppoſing the holy Scripture had taught us nothing further upon this Subject.

But ſince 'tis the inſpir'd Writings that acquaint us with our Original, we ought likewiſe to learn the Origin and Diviſion of Languages from the ſame Inſtruction. Now, the Scripture informs us, that God having created the firſt Man Adam, brought the Fowls of the Air, and the Beaſts of the Field before him, to give 'em their Names, and the Name which Adam gave each of 'em, was that which they went by. The ſame Scripture relates, that God made uſe of Speech, in forbidding our firſt Parents the eating of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. The Devil is likewiſe there repreſented in Converſation with the Woman, who diſcours'd with the Serpent, and miſdirected her Husband: God likewiſe expoſtulates with Adam, charges him with Diſobedience, and Adam and Eve offer at an Excuſe. All this ſuppoſes that Adam and Eve were furniſh'd with Language and Being together; for Adam gave Names to all ſorts of Animals ſoon after his Creation, and before the Production of the Woman. Now, if he had not underſtood the meaning of one Language at leaſt, which way could he have thus quickly given Names to other Animals, and which afterwards laſted upon 'em? How could Adam and Eve, newly created, have underſtood God Almighty's Diſcourſe, been intelligible to each other, and prepar'd for Converſation as ſoon as they were plac'd in Paradiſe? It requires time to agree upon the Marks of Speech, to retain 'em in memory, and to apply 'em to the Things and Thoughts they are to repreſent; all this can never be done on the ſudden, but requires a conſiderable time to bring it about. Now, what we have already remark'd, happen'd ſoon after the Creation: Beſides, what colour of probability is there, that God, who created Man in his Perfection, ſhould ſend him into the World without Speech, which is of ſo much Uſe and Ornament; and that he ſhould bring Adam and Eve into Paradiſe, into a place of Pleaſure and Satisfaction, and not enable 'em to converſe together, without a great deal of Trouble and Fatigue? 'Tis therefore much more probable, that Adam and Eve were furniſh'd with the uſe and meaning of Speech immediately upon their Creation, than to ſuppoſe that they were only furniſh'd with Organs proper for forming of Words, and that they were left to Invention, Induſtry and Time, to hammer out a Language.

Upon the foregoing Suppoſition, which may fairly be granted, 'tis eaſy to conceive how the Deſcendants of Adam and Eve might learn and preſerve their Language: Daily Experience informs us in what manner Children learn to ſpeak, by the Converſation of their Parents, Nurſes and thoſe about 'em. And when all Mankind inhabited the ſame Country, kept up a Commerce with each other, and liv'd through a great many Ages, 'tis no wonder that the common Language was continu'd amongſt 'em, without any conſiderable Alteration, till the Flood. And ſuppoſing any remarkable Change of this kind ſhould have happen'd, yet ſince the World was then all deſtroy'd, excepting Noah and his Family, the Tongue ſpoken by this Patriarch muſt be the only remaining Language, and which might eaſily be handed down to his Deſcendants, as long as they dwelt in the ſame Country. But when, before their parting, they attempted to build a City, and a Tower, whoſe Top ſhould touch the Sky, God thinking fit to check this bold Enterprize, confounded their Language, inſomuch that not being able to underſtand each other, they were forc'd to ſeparate in Parties, and leave the Building unfiniſh'd. And here, notwithſtanding the confuſion of Languages, is plainly ſet forth in Geneſis 11, yet Father Simon, and Mr. le Clerc, have been ſo hardy as to aſſert, that God was not the Author of this Diverſity of Language, but only of the Miſunderſtanding and Diſagreement, which then happen'd to that degree amongſt Mankind, that they ſeparated from each other, and from thence the Alteration in Languages was produc'd. But, notwithſtanding the Singularities of theſe learned Men, the Text cannot be thus thus interpreted without Violence, for the Recital of this Matter in Geneſis, plainly gives us to underſtand, that 'twas not the Diſſenſion and parting of the Multitude, which occaſion'd the Change in their Language; but on the contrary, 'twas the miraculous Difference and Unintelligibleneſs of their Speech, which throwing them out of Capacity of underſtanding one another, and acting by concert, made 'em lay aſide their Deſign, and part from each other.

'Tis hard to know the preciſe time when this Separation happen'd. The Scripture only tells us 'twas when Phaleg was living; but in what Period of his Life is not recorded.

'Tis no leſs difficult to determine to how many Languages this Confuſion reach'd. The Rabbies reckon Seventy, becauſe the original Text reckons ſo many Deſcendents from Noah; that is, Fourteen deſcended from Japhet, Thirty from Ham, and ſix and Twenty from Shem: Theſe, the Scripture tells us, were Heads of Families; and by theſe were the Nations of the Earth divided after the Flood, Gen. x. According to the Septuagint, this Number muſt be mounted to Seventy-two; and upon this Suppoſition, two Languages muſt be added to the Number. But there's no Neceſſity to make the Number of Languages equal to the Number of Heads of Families deſcended from Noah; for many within this Liſt might preſerve the ſame Language. And that this is matter of fact, appears by Canaan's Iſſue, who furniſh ſeveral Heads in this Genealogy, whoſe Deſcendents, notwithſtanding, ſpoke the ſame Language; for the Inhabitants of Palæſtine, tho' ſubdivided into ſeveral diſtinct Governments, ſpoke the ſame Language when the Iſraelites diſpoſſeſs'd 'em.

'Tis not neceſſary to ſuppoſe this Diverſity of Languages was carry'd at firſt to the modern Diſtance; that is, 'tis not neceſſary to ſuppoſe that the old Language was entirely extinguiſh'd, and that God inſpir'd 'em with others altogether new. 'Tis much more probable to believe, that God broke the old Language into different Dialects, ſo remote, that Correſpondence muſt of courſe be check'd upon the Alteration. This ſeems the obvious Meaning of the Scripture, Let us confound their Language, that they may not underſtand one anothers Speech, Gen. xi. 7. From theſe Words it may be not improbably collected, that the old Language was only diverſify'd into ſeveral, tho' not very intelligible Dialects. From hence we may infer, that there was leſs Difference between the Languages of Mankind at firſt, than there is at preſent; for the Progreſs of Time neceſſarily brings an Alteration through all Languages. Beſides, we may obſerve, that the moſt ancient Languages of the Eaſtern People, who liv'd near the Tower of Babel, that is Hebrew, Chaldee, Arabick, Syriac, &c. have a greater Reſemblance with each other, than thoſe of the Inhabitants of remoter Countries.

To touch a little upon another famous Queſtion, that is, which was the firſt Language. It has been already obſerv'd, that the long Lives of the Antediluvians contributed very much to continue Adam's Language in the ſame Condition they receiv'd it; for the ſame Man is not apt to go off from the Language he was firſt taught. Now upon ſuppoſition his Life holds out to ſeveral Centuries, we may fairly conclude he'll keep to his Mother-tongue, and teach it others; and the Neceſſity that his Family and Neighbours have of correſponding with him, and the Conveniency his Domeſticks have of learning it from him; theſe Conſiderations, I ſay, will preſerve the Language from running off into unintelligible Alteration. For inſtance, Adam living nine Hundred and thirty Years, and Noah being ſix Hundred Years old at the Flood, which, according to the Hebrew Chronology, happen'd one Thouſand ſix Hundred fifty-ſix Years after the Creation; it follws, that Noah muſt be born a few Years after Adam's Death, and that he convers'd with the Antediluvians ſix Hundred Years together; and by conſequence, with a great many of thoſe who had convers'd with Adam and Eve ſome Hundred Years together. From whence it follows, that he muſt have learn'd and made uſe of Adam's Language. Further, Noah's Children, born before the Deluge, ſpoke, without doubt, their Father's Language, and kept it on till the Diviſion of People and Tongues. The Queſtion is then to know, whether this original Language ſubſiſted in its Purity in ſome Family, or Families, when the Confuſion happen'd; or whether 'twas broken into a Dialect: Now, this Point is not reſolv'd in Scripture; but, let this be as it will, it may be further enquir'd which is the moſt ancient Language? The Jews, and ſeveral learned Chriſtians, declare for the Hebrew; and others of conſiderable Character give preference to the Chaldee. The Firſt argue, that the Language, which Noah receiv'd from Adam, was carry'd down, without Alteration, through the Family of Shem and Heber; that Abraham learn'd it from his Father Terah, deſcended from Heber; and that it paſs'd from thence to the Iſraelites, who were call'd Hebrews, becauſe they ſpoke the ſame Language with Heber. Others, on the contrary, aſſert, that the moſt ancient Language is that which was ſpoken in Meſopotamia, beyond the Euphrates, that is, the Chaldee; that this was Abraham's Mother-tongue, who having been bred at Ur of the Chaldæans, and liv'd ſeventy-five Years in Meſopotamia, afterwards remov'd, croſs'd the Euphrates, and paſs'd into the Land of Canaan, where he was call'd an Hebrew by the Canaanites, from the Word Heber, which ſignifies beyond, becauſe he came from beyond the Euphrates; that upon his Removal he learn'd the Language of Canaan, which continu'd with his Family and Deſcendants, and that this was the Hebrew Tongue. The Arguments on each ſide of the Queſtion are too long to inſert; however, it may not be amiſs to mention ſome of the Authors. Amongſt the Ancients, who declare for the Hebrew, Origen may appear firſt; now this Father, in his eleventh Homily upon Numbers, tells us, that the Angels having ſtruck out ſeveral Languages, that which Adam ſpoke, which he believes was Hebrew, continued with the religious Part of Mankind. St. Chryſoſtome, in his third Homily upon Geneſis, reports that Heber preſerv'd the Language of his Anceſtors. St. Auguſtin goes into this Sentiment, and makes no doubt of its being certain (de Civitat. Dei Lib. 16. cap. 11.) St. Jerome (Comment. in cap. 3. Sophon.) affirms the Hebrew Language the moſt ancient and Mother of all the reſt. However, Theodoret gives the Point of Antiquity to the Chaldee. St. Gregory Nyſſen (Lib. 12. contra Eunom.) obſerves that a great many learned Men, reckon the Hebrew, comparatively, a modern Language, and that 'twas firſt ſpoken when the Iſraelites came out of Ægypt. Amongſt the Moderns, Serarius, Bonfrerius, Buxtorf, Walton, and Father Thomaſſin, plead for the firſt Opinion; but Grotius, Huetius, and le Clerk, are for the Second.

To proceed to ſome brief Remarks upon other Languages: The Punick Tongue is ſuppos'd to be no other than the Phœnician, which is either the ſame, or very much reſembling the Hebrew. Arabick is an original, beautiful, and moſt copious Language, and has been preſerv'd near three Thouſand Years. For a Proof of the Copiouſneſs 'tis obſerv'd, that there are a Thouſand different Words for a Sword, five Hundred for a Lyon, and two Hundred for a Serpent; that 'tis ſpoken where the Mahometan Religion is practis'd, and either made the common Language, or at leaſt, that of the Learned; that the Mahometans count it a flagitious Crime to tranſlate their Alcoran out of Arabick into any other Language; that their Prayers and religious Offices are in Arabick; and that the Courts of Juſtice make uſe of the ſame Language; that 'tis ſpoken not only in Natolia (tho' mixt with the Greek and Sclavonian) and Armenia, but in the eaſtern Parts of Cilicia, as alſo in Syria, Meſopotamia, Arabia, Ægypt, and from thence through Africk to the Streights of Gibraltar, through all Barbary between the Mediterranean and Mount-Atlas (excepting among the Emperor of Morocco's Subjects, and ſome other more inward Parts, where the old Africans are ſettled) in which Places, as Breerwood relates, 'tis become the vulgar Language, tho' under ſomewhat different Dialects. To which may be added, it has ſpread very much in Perſia, in the Mogul's Dominions, and other Indian Provinces; amongſt the Japonneſe, Chineſe, and Tartars. And where 'tis not the Mother-tongue, 'tis learn'd in Schools, like Greek and Latin among the Europæans (Walton. Prolegom. ad Bibl. Polyglott.)

The Ægyptian, or Coptick, Language, is reckon'd to three Originals. Athanaſius Kircher, in his Prodromus Ægyptiacus, and his Linguæ Ægyptiacæ Reſtitutæ, believes it the ancient Pharaonick Language, and that the recondite Parts of the Ægyptian Learning are penn'd in Coptick; and that the Inſcriptions of Obelisks are only to be known by learning this Language. Iſaac Voſſius ſuppoſes it a ſort of Jargon, form'd by a Rabble, or Multitude, of Libyan-Ægyptian and Arab-Ægyptian mixt together; and that 'twas not known till the Arabians, or Saracens, had ſubdu'd Ægypt. A third Opinion ſuppoſes Coptick a feign'd Language, and that 'tis no better than a ſort of Cant lately contriv'd by Cheats, like our Gypſies.

But the learned Renaudotius, in a ſett Diſſertation upon this Subject, diſproves all theſe three Opinions And here tho' he won't grant it the old Pharaonical Language, yet he allows it an Ægyptian Original, which has taken in a great many Greek Words, relating to Religion and Eccleſiaſtical Matters, into it; and that the Chriſtians in Ægypt have made uſe of this Language ever ſince the Mahometam Incurſions into Ægypt; that the Eutychian Jacobites particularly, have had their Liturgies, the Offices for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the Pſalter, in this Language, and that for above a Thouſand Years paſt. (Renaudot. Liturgiar. Oriental. Collect. Tom. 1.)

The Hetruſcan Language pretty much reſembles the Character of the Latin, and they read from the right Hand to the Left. Engubinus has furniſh'd an Inſcription in this Language, which was found fifty Years before the Dictator Sylla. The Romans look'd upon this Language as a Curioſity, and took Pains to learn it.

The Greek has undergone leſs Change in the Characters than other Languages. The moſt ancient are ſomewhat Square, and reſemble the Phœnician, or Hebrew: This, as Herodotus obſerves, was the Figure of the firſt Letters, which were brought into Ionia. Pliny mentioning the Greek Characters, after having ſaid that they reſembled the Roman Alphabet of his Time, gives no other Proof for his Aſſertion, excepting an old Inſcription upon a Plate of Braſs, which Veſpaſian and Titus lodg'd in the publick Library. In reporting this Inſtance he tells us, that " The ancient Greek Charac- " ters were almoſt the ſame with the modern Latin, " as appears from the old Plate of Braſs taken from " Delphos, where 'twas dedicated to Minerva, by Nau- " ſicrates: This Inſcription is this,

ΝΑΥΣΙΚΡΑΤΗΣ ΤΙΖΑΜΕΝΟΥ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΟΣ
ΚΟΡΑ ΚΑΙ ΑΘΗΝΑ. ΑΝΕΘΗΚΕΝ.

The ancient Greek Characters, mention'd by Pliny, and others, were pretty near the Figure of this Inſcription; for 'tis certain, the old Greeks knew no other Letters but Capitals: That this was their manner of writing, may be prov'd from Johannes Laſcares's (a Greek) Prologue to his Collection of Greek Epigrams, printed in Capitals, at Florence, A. D. 1484. Further, the pointing and Diſtinction of Words was not us'd in the earlieſt Times in Greece; which Cuſtom, according to Lipſius and Leo Allatius, continued to the Hundred and ſeventy-fourth Olympiad. 'Tis likewiſe obſerv'd, from the moſt antique Remains, that the Greeks divided their Diſcourſe only by full Periods, and the finiſhing the Senſe. And thus, where theſe Periods did not reach to the End of the Line, they ſtop'd with the Concluſion of the Senſe, and begun another Line where the Senſe was new, as appears from the Inſcriptions upon the Marmora Arundeliana: And thus they wrote by a ſort of independent Articles, and not by full Lines. The Reader, who is deſirous of examining this Subject farther, may conſult the Palæographia Græca of Father Bernard de Montfaucon, where he may be entertain'd with very curious Diſcoveries. There is likewiſe a fine Diſſertation upon this Argument, at the End of the Palæographia Græca, written by the Preſident of the Parliament of Dijon.

The Latin Language has likewiſe had its Improvements and Revolutions, like the reſt. And for this, the Reader may only obſerve the Difference between the moſt ancient and modern Inſcriptions. The Characters us'd in the Time of the Conſul Duilius, publiſh'd by Sirmondus, bear a nearer Reſemblance with the Hetruſcan and Greek, than thoſe of leſſer Antiquity; they diſcover a ſhaking Hand, like thoſe who firſt learn to write. The ſeven Latin Volumes, found in Numa's Tomb, were not written in this Character, and therefore 'tis moſt likely they were counterfeit; for Quintilian aſſures us, that the Alphabet was very ſcanty at that Time, and that the Figure and the Power of the Letters, were different from what they were in his Time.

The principal Languages ſpoken in Europe.

1. The Welſh, or ancient Britiſh, is, according to Scaliger, one of the Ten leſſer Mother-languages of Europe: 'Tis us'd in Wales, the weſtern Part of England, and in the Lower Bretagne in France: And thus the Lower Bretons and the Welſh underſtand one another with Eaſe enough.

2. The Cantabric is ſtill ſpoken in the Pyrenean Mountains, by the Cantabri and Gaſcons.

3. The Chauchic, is an ancient Language, common to the People of Eaſt Friſeland, when they converſe with their Country-men; but when they ſpeak with Strangers 'tis in High-Dutch.

4. The Epirotic, is us'd in the Mountains of Epire.

5. The Finic, is the Language of Finland and Lapland.

6. For the French, ſee Morery's Supplement.

7. The Greek, is one of the four great Mother-Languages, formerly very much ſpread in the ſouthern Parts of Europe. 'Tis now alter'd into a barbarous kind of Greek, which is ſtill ſubdivided into ſeveral Branches; that is to ſay, the Athenian Dialect, which is the moſt uncouth of all; the Peloponneſian, which is reckon'd the moſt correct and beautiful, to which may be added that call'd the Tzopeliſme, and the vulgar Greek: For a farther Account of all theſe Dialects, the Reader may conſult Cruſius's Turco-Græcia.

8. The Iriſh, is ſpoken in Ireland, and in the Highlands of Scotland.

9. The Spaniſh, is deriv'd from the Latin, and is ſubdivided into the Caſtilian, the Portugueſe, and that ſpoken in the Kingdom of Granada: The Caſtilian ſpoken in Andaluſia, is reckon'd the moſt polite.

10. The Hungarian, was brought into Europe by the Huns and Avari.

11. The Jazygic, in the northern Part of Hungary, is much us'd between the Danube and the Theiſſe: 'Tis very different from the Hungarian Language.

12. The old Illyrican Language, is ſtill ſpoken in the Iſland of Veggia, to the eaſt of Iſtria.

13. The Italian is a Branch of the Latin.

14. The Latin, is one of the four great Mother-Languages, ſpoken by all the Learned in Europe. It has ceas'd to be a National Language, ſince the Franks, Lombards, and Goths, made an Irruption into the Roman Empire: The Corruption of this Language has produc'd three Dialects, the Italian, French, and Spaniſh.

15. The Sclavonian, is one of the four great Mother-Languages of Europe, and ſpoken in the eaſtern Parts of this Diviſion of the World.

16. The Tartar, is the Language of the Coſſacks and the Precopenſian Tartars, who live between the Don and the Boryſthenes.

17. The Teutonic, is one of the four great Mother-Languages: 'Tis diverſify'd into Saxon, French, and Daniſh, which are ſtill farther ſubdivided.

There are likewiſe ſome Remains of Arabick, in the Mountainous Parts of the Kingdom of Granada; as alſo in ſeveral Places of Andaluſia, Valencia, and Arragon. Every Language has likewiſe a ſort of Jargon, ſpoken by the Peaſantry and little People. See Geſner in his Dictionary entitled, Mithridates. Alſtedius, Encycloped. Tome 1. Lib. 10. & Philander. Von Sittwald, Satyrici ſui, Lib. 7.

The principal Languages of Aſia.

1. The Hebrew, Chaldee, and Arabic, have been mention'd already.

2. The Antiochian, or Syriac, was formerly us'd by the Chriſtians in the Eaſt, and into this Language they have tranſlated the Old and New Teſtament. 'Tis a Dialect of the ancient Syriac, which is not much different rent from 3. the Chaldee. This Language was common in Judæa, at the time of the Incarnation, and ſpoken by our Saviour and his Diſciples. 'Tis ſubdivided into the Antiochian abovemention'd, into the Babylonian, and that call'd the Jeruſalem.

4. The Babylonian is the moſt correct Dialect of all the Syriac Language. Some Chapters of Daniel, Eſra, and the Babylonian Talmud, are written in this Language. This may be otherwiſe call'd the Chaldee.

5. The Jeruſalem Subdiviſion, is that in which the Jeruſalem Targum is written.

6. The Armenian, reaches no further than the Country of Armenia.

7. The Chineſe Language, is ſpoken throughout the vaſt Country of China, and the Iſland of Japan.

8. The Malayan Language, is the moſt correct and uncompounded of all the Languages of the Eaſt-Indies, and is generally learn'd by the Europæans who trade there. There is a Malayan-Latin Dictionary, done by David Haen, and printed at Rome, A. D. 1631.

9. The Perſian, has ſeveral High-Dutch Words in it, as Father, Mother, Brother, &c. Even the Name of Perſian comes from Peres, Peros, or Pert, which, in High-Dutch, ſignify an Horſe; for, from the Time of Cyrus the Great, 'twas a Diſgrace to a Perſian not to travel mounted.

10. The Turkiſh Language has ſome Affinity with the Perſian and Tartar, and borrows nothing but the Alphabet from the Arabic.

The principal Languages of Afric.

1. The Æthiopic, is the Language of the Abyſſins: There are two ſorts of it, one of which reſembles the Chaldee, and in this Dialect their Hiſtories are commonly penn'd. Scaliger, Ludolphus, Petreus, Niſſelius, and others, have publiſh'd their Alphabet and manner of writing.

2. The Coptic, has been mention'd already, and as the learned Renaudotius has prov'd, is neither the old Pharaonick: nor does it take its Name from Coptos, former the Metropolis of Thebais.

3. The Songaic: Travellers, in their Narratives on their Voyages, take notice of this Language, and report it ſpoken in the Countries of Sconbaya, of Muſmunde, of Zenete, of Gumée, of Guzule, of Hea, and of Sus. How far the Arabic is ſpread in Afric has been obſerv'd already.

The principal Languages of America.

1. The Cariban. The Author of the Hiſtory of the Antillæ Iſlands, printed at Rotterdam, A. D. 1658, has publiſh'd a Dictionary in this Language.

2. The Mexican, is pronounced by thruſting the Tongue toward the Teeth; and here they often clap the Letters T and L together. As for other American Languages, the Europæans as yet have no exact Skill in 'em.

Particular Remarks upon ſome Languages.

The Welſh is rough and full of Aſpirations: Their Words ſeem frequently without a Vowel, and heav'd up from the Bottom of their Throat. For inſtance, in the Petition of the Lord's Prayer, Deliver us from Evil, they ſay, Eithr gwaret, ni rhag drcovg. The Chineſe Language has no R, and all the Words are Monoſyllables, much diſtinguiſh'd by Dipthongs and Tripthongs. The French is reckon'd a beautiful Language, and fit to entertain Ladies. High-Dutch has a maſculine Sound, fit to be ſpoken to an Enemy, becauſe it naturally carries ſomething of Terror in it. My Lord Bacon (de Augment. Scientiar. Lib. 6. cap. 1.) obſerves that the Languages deriv'd from the Gothic are full of Aſpirations. The Greek Language makes frequent uſe of Dipthongs and Compounds. The Hebrew is the moſt uncompounded Language, and chuſes rather to go about, and make uſe of Periphraſes, than vary from a ſimple Structure. Spaniſh is noble and high ſounding; and, if the Spaniards may be believ'd, 'tis the only proper Language to addreſs God Almighty in. The Italian is grave and majeſtick, and fit for the Mouth of Quality and Princes. The Mexican, as has been obſerv'd, makes frequent uſe of the Letters T, L, as in theſe Words, Tetcotl, Mecaxuchilt Tlilxochitl, &c.

LANTERNISTS, the Name of the Members of an Academy of learned Men, ſet up at Toulouſe in France. The occaſion of the Name was as follows; ſome Counſellors of the Parliament of this Town, with other Gentlemen of ſeveral Diſtinctions, projecting to form a Society for cloſe Correſpondence, and commnnicating their Notions to each another, appointed a ſet Day for meeting at each others Houſes. And here, to prevent Interruption from forreign Company, they choſe to meet in the Evening, after the Hour for common Viſits was over. And to make their Meeting more private, they took no Flambeaux along with 'em, but lighted themſelves with a ſmall Lanthern. Thus they carried on their Converſation with a great deal of Pleaſure and Improvement, and kept it private for a conſiderable time. But, there being few things which Time does not diſcover, their meeting took Air at laſt, and all People of Senſe and Regularity commended the Deſign. And now, being no longer Incognito, they puſh'd the Project further. They encreas'd their Society, and made a Company in form. Upon the ſcore of their ſmall Lantherns, ſome pleaſant Men call'd 'em Lanterniſts. They took the Denomination in good part, as the learned Academies in Italy had done before 'em, all which have ſome whimſical Names beſtow'd upon 'em: Thus theſe Lanterniſts, to preſerve the Memory of their Original, took a Star for their Deviſe, with this Legend, Lucerna in Nocte. Afterwards they ſettled a Prize, to be given every Year, to that Man or Woman who made the beſt rhiming Copy of Verſes in commendation of the King, to be publiſh'd by the Company: The Prize is a very fine Medal, with a Star and Legend above mention'd. The reverſe of the Medal has an Apollo playing upon the Harp, and ſitting upon the Top of Parnaſſus, with this Motto, Apollini Toloſano. * Mercure Galant. Juin 1698.

LAT, the Name of an Idol worſhip'd by the ancient Arabian Pagans: The Mahometans will have it, that 'tis a Corruption of Allah, which ſignifies the true God. Lat is likewiſe the Name of an Indian Idol, worſhip'd in the Town of Soumenat. His Statue was a ſingle Stone an Hundred Yards high, plac'd in the Middle of a Temple, ſupported with ſix and fifty Pillars of maſſive Gold. Mahmoud, Son of Sebectegin, who conquer'd this Part of India, broke this Idol with his own Hands, and ſettled Mahometaniſm in India, as far as he was able. * D' Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

LATOMUS (James) defended the Articles of Louvain, and wrote other controverſial Tracts. He wrote likewiſe a Tract concerning the Study of Divinity through the three Languages, in which he defends the School-Divinity againſt Eraſmus. Eraſmus publiſh'd a Confutation of this Work, to which the Author made a Reply. Latomus was one of the moſt eminent Doctors of the Faculty of Louvain. He was a Perſon of good Parts and conſiderable Reading, wrote with eaſe in Latin, but without much Ornament. He underſtood neither Greek nor Hebrew, and was ſtrongly prepoſſeſs'd in favour of School-Divinity. * Coccius, in cat. Bellarmin, de Script. Eccleſ. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 16.

* LAZARUS (St.) The Scripture informs us, that the Prieſts and Phariſees hearing of Lazarus's being rais'd from the Dead, reſolv'd to kill him, but 'tis not ſaid they executed their Deſign. St. Epiphanius reports, that he liv'd thirty Years after being thus menac'd, and that he was thirty Years old when our Saviour wrought the Miracle upon him. The Greeks relate his Death in the Iſle of Cyprus, where he was Biſhop, and that his Relicks were tranſlated to Conſtantinople, in the Reign of Leo the Philoſopher; and the ancient weſtern Martyrologies confirm this Tradition. The Story of his ſailing to Provence, with Mary Magdalen and Martha his Siſters, and that he dy'd Biſhop of Marſeilles; this Story, I ſay, is without Ground, and but of late Invention. * John 11. Epiphan. hæreſ. 66. Zonar. Annal. Tom. 3. Launoy, de Commentitio Lazari in Provinciam Appulſu. Tillemont, Memoires pour l' Hiſt. Eccleſ. Tom. 2.

LECTISTERNIUM, a religious Ceremony practis'd by the Romans, when afflicted with any great Calamity. The manner was thus, they took down the Statues of their pretended Gods from their Pedeſtals, and laid 'em upon Beds made on purpoſe, in their Temples, with Pillows under their Heads; and in this Poſture they were ſerv'd with a ſplendid Entertainment. They made three ſtately Beds more particularly for the Statues of Jupiter, Apollo, Latona, Diana, Hercules, Neptune, and Mercury, hoping to gain their Favour by this Regard. When this was done, the Gates of the Temple were open'd, the Tables every where ſpread and loaden; and all Strangers, whether known or unknown, were regal'd gratis: And now, all Quarrels and Animoſities were forgotten; People treated their Enemies like Friends, and ſet all Priſoners at Liberty. This Feſtival was kept in caſe of a Mortality, or ſome other publick Diſtreſs. The firſt Lectiſternium was kept at Rome, by the order of the Duumviri, A. C. 335. Livy takes notice of the Original of theſe Lectiſternia. Caſaubon is of Opinion that theſe ſolemn Lectiſternia were us'd by the Greeks no leſs than the Romans. Spon gives a Deſcription of the Lectiſternium prepar'd for Iſis and Serapis, which is ſtill to be ſeen at Athens. The Bed is Marble, two Foot long, and a Foot high; here Serapis is plac'd with a Buſhel upon his Head, with a Cornucopia and Fruit before him. Iſis is repreſented ſitting ſomewhat lower: About theſe two pretended Divinities there are four or five Men carv'd. Spon likewiſe reports that there is ſomething of this kind to be ſeen at Salamis. * Livy, Lib. 5. Cap. 13. Cicer. in Orat. de Haruſp. Reſp. Valer. Maxim. Lib. 2. Cap. 1, & 10. Scholiaſt. Pindar. Olymp. od. 1. Spon, Voyage de la Grece, Part 2. p. 118.

* LEGION, a Body of Men in the Roman Militia.

The Names of the Roman Legions, cut upon an old Pillar found at Rome.

II. Auguſta.	XI. Claudia.
VIII. Auguſta.	XV. Apollinea.
XXX. Ulpia.	IV. Scythica.
XIV. Gemina.	X. Fretenſis.
IV. Flavia.	II. Trajana.
V. Macedonica.	III. Parthica.
XII. Fulminatrix.	XX. Victrix.
II. Parthica.	I. Minervia.
XI. Terratenſis.	X. Gemina.
XII. Gemina.	II. Adjutrix.
II. Italica.	I. Italica.
VI. Victrix.	XIII. Gemina.
XXII. Primigenia.	VII. Gallicana.
I. Adjutrix.	XVI. Flavia.
I. Parthica.	III. Cyrenenſis
VII. Claudia.	III. Auguſta.

* LEO I. commonly call'd the Great, Biſhop of Rome. To what has been ſaid upon this Article in Morery Vol. I. may be added the Judgment of the learned Du Pin, touching the Style and Character of this Biſhop. His manner of writing, ſays this Author, is polite, but not without ſomething of Affectation; his Periods are cut, and the Parts of 'em well meaſur'd; the Cadence is pretty ſtrong and muſical; his Diſcourſe is ſwell'd with Epithets, and ſet off with agreeable Antitheſes. He was particularly careful to guard (what he thought) the Rights and Prerogatives of his See; but then it muſt be ſaid, he manag'd his Privilege with Temper and Moderation. It may be ſaid, continues Du Pin, that the Church of Rome never appear'd in more true Greatneſs and leſs Pride, than in the Time of this Pope. Never was the Biſhop of Rome more honour'd and conſider'd, and never was that See manag'd with more Humility, Charity, and Diſcretion. The beſt Edition of Leo's Works, is that publiſh'd by Father Queſnel, printed at Paris, A. D. 1675, and afterwards at Lyons. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. 5.

LEO (St.) call'd the Apoſtle of the Gaſcoignes, and Biſhop of Baioune: He was born at Carentan in the Lower Normandy, about the Year 646. His Father, diſſatisfy'd with the Government of Charles the Bald, remov'd with his Family, ſettled upon the Rhine, and ſent his Son to Lewis the Debonair's Court. But a Court-life not agreeing with Leo's Inclinations, he went off, and ſtudied at Paris. Some will have it that he was promoted to the Archbiſhoprick of Roan, but this is very uncertain. There's much more Credit to be given to his being a Miſſionary in Gaſcogny; that coming to Baionne, with two of his Brothers, they preach'd Chriſtianity, and converted a great many People: Here he was Biſhop, and as 'twas ſaid, ſuffer'd Martyrdom. * Sainte-Marthe, Gall. Chriſt. De Marca, Hiſt. de Bearn.

* LEOPOLD I. Emperor, Archduke of Auſtria, &c. Son of Ferdinand III, and Mary of Auſtria, Siſter to Philip IV, King of Spain, was born June 9, A. D. 1640, and chriſten'd Leopold-Ignatius-Francis-Balthazar-Joſeph-Felician. He was elected King of Bohemia, A. D. 1654. and of Hungary A. D 1655. And July 18, A. D. 1658, he was choſen Emperor and crown'd at Frankfort. This Prince, ſays the French Supplementer, who writes this whole Article, was the moſt fortunate of all his Predeceſſors, in regard, that without running the Riſque of any Campaign, or appearing perſonally at the Head of his Troops, he has had the Satisfaction to ſee no ſmall Part of Europe combine to maintain him upon the Throne. In the Year 1661, Chimin Janos, lately choſen Prince of Tranſylvania, was attack'd by the Turks. The Emperor, who undertook his Protection, ſent him ſome Troops, under the Command of Montecuculi: This Army ſuffer'd much for want of Proviſions, not to mention the Diſtempers which leſſon'd their Numbers: Count Staremberg, a Lieutenant General, was carry'd off by Sickneſs. Notwithſtanding the Army was thus weaken'd, they hinder'd the Turks from making themſelves Maſters of Clauſembourg; but the next Year Chimen Janos was routed, and kill'd in his Retreat, by a Fall from his Horſe. And now Michael Abaffi, his Competitor for Tranſylvania, was ſettled in this Principality, under the Protection of the Turks, who, in the Year 1663, defeated Count Forgatz, the Imperial General, took Newhauſel, Novigrat, Levins, and Nitra. Theſe two laſt Places were re-taken the Year following, by the Baron de Souches, a Frenchman, who took Service under the Emperor, and commanded in Upper Hungary. Count Serini took five Churches, and broke the Bridge of Eſſeck, which was no ſmall Damage to the Turk. He likewiſe there demoliſh'd the famous Mauſoleum of Solyman the Magnificent. Serini being reinforc'd by Count Budiani, ſat down before Caniſia in April; but the Enemy forc'd him to raiſe the Siege upon the laſt of May. And now the Turks, headed by the Grand-Viſier, ſeiz'd the Fort Serini, and Little Gomorrah. The Baron Souches gave a Check to their Progreſs, by an Action which happen'd July 19, and which was a ſort of Prologue to an entire Defeat of theſe Infidels. For Lewis XIV, King of France, prompted by his generous Inclination, ſent a Body of ſix thouſand Men (a great many of which were Quality) to the Emperor's Aſſiſtance. This Reinforcement join'd General Montecuculi, at a very ſeaſonable Juncture; for now the Turks having paſs'd the River Raab, came poudering upon the Germans, encamp'd near St. Godard, Auguſt 1. The Imperaliſts were ſo ſhock'd at this unexpected Attack, that the right Wing gave way, without much Reſiſtance; inſomuch that the Imperial Army had been entirely defeated, if the French Troops, who were poſted on the left Wing, and commanded by the Count de Coligny, had not ſupported 'em, and charg'd through the whole Turkiſh Army. And here they cut above ſix Thouſand of the Enemy in pieces, more than that Number was drown'd in the River, the Canon was taken, and the Grand-Viſier ſo terrify'd, notwithſtanding his Troops were ſtill fourty Thouſand ſtrong, that in a few Days after, he concluded a Truce for twenty Years, between the Port and Vienna. The Reward the French had for this Service, was being refus'd Magazines of Proviſions to ſupply 'em in their Return. In the Year 1665, the Emperor made a Progreſs into Tirol, to take Poſſeſſion of that Country, left him by his Couſen Archduke Sigiſmond Auguſtus. Here he viſited the famous Church of Marienzel in Stiria; and this this Journey, it ſeems, was reckon'd ſo conſiderable, that Lambecius has given a Narrative of it.

Soon after this the Diſturbances in Hungary came up, the Hungarians, animated by Count Peter Serini, complained the Emperor had violated their Privileges: In ſhort; in the Year 1666 this Count levy'd Troops under ſeveral Pretences. He brought into his Intereſt his Brother in Law Count Frangipani, his Son in Law Count Ragotzki, and Count Nadaſti Preſident of the ſovereign Council of Hungary. Theſe Commotions kept the Court of Vienna embarraſs'd till the Year 1671, when the Counts Serini, Frangipani, and Nadaſti being ſeiz'd, were beheaded. (See the Hiſtory of this Revolt under the Article Serini in Morery, Vol. II.)

Theſe Executions did not extinguiſh the Troubles in Hungary; for in the Year 1672 the Emperor was forc'd to ſend Troops into upper Hungary againſt Count Tekeli. The ſame Year his Imperial Majeſty ente'd into an Alliance with Spain, and ſome other Potentates for aſſiſting the Dutch: To this Purpoſe he rais'd an Army of thirty thouſand Men, muſter'd 'em at Egra in Bohemia in the Year 1673, and gave the Command to Count Montecuculi: This General joyn'd the Prince of Orange, and both of 'em ſetting down before Bonne took the Town by Capitulation November 12. Afterwards the Emperor drew the moſt of the Princes in Germany into this War; and hoping to aggrandize himſelf and to raiſe his Authority in the Empire this way, he occaſion'd the breaking off the Conferences for Peace begun at Cologn, by ſeizing and carrying away Prince William of Furſtemberg, Plenipotentiary there for the Elector of Cologn. By taking this Step he begun the War in the Year 1674, which gave no Luſtre to his Reign, for he had the Mortification to hear his Army commanded by the Count de Souches, joyn'd with the Spaniſh and Dutch Troops, worſted at Seneff: His other Troops were likewiſe beaten this Campaigne by Marſhal Turenne at Sintzeim June 16; at the paſſing the Necker near Ladembourg July 5; at Enſheim October 4; and at Turckein the 5th of January following.

The Year 1675, which began ſo unpromiſingly for the Emperor, was more lucky for him in the Progreſs; for Marſhal Turenne who had paſs'd the Rhine, was kill'd at a Juncture, when he had reduc'd the Imperial Army commanded by Montecuculi to ſuch Streights, that they could not make a Retreat without conſiderable Loſs. This General's Death oblig'd the French to repaſs the Rhine; Montecuculi attack'd 'em in their Retreat, but this Onſet coſt him four thouſand Men. Afterwards he paſs'd the Rhine upon the Bridge at Straſbourg, inveſted Haguenau and Saverne; and rais'd both the Sieges upon the coming up of the Prince of Conde, who oblig'd him to repaſs the Rhine with Diſgrace: But this Mortification was moderated by the Defeat of Marſhal Crequi by the Army of the Circles commanded by the Dukes of Lorrain and Zell: This Battel was fought at Conſarbrick Auguſt 2, the Conſequence of which was the Loſs of Treves, where the French Marſhal was taken Priſoner.

In the Year 1676 Prince Charles of Lorrain, who commanded the Imperial Army in Germany, took Philipsbourg September 17 after 3 Months Siege; and the next Year he paſs'd the Rhine, march'd as far as Mouzon in hopes to recover Lorrain, to which Dutchy he was lineal Heir after the Deceaſe of his Unkle Duke Charles: Thus in hopes of Succeſs, the Motto upon his Colours was Maintenant ou jamais, that is, now or never. But he was diſappointed by Marſhal Crequi, who cut off his Proviſions, intercepted his Convoys, beat the Parties ſent out by him, fatigued his Army by Marches and Countermarches, and broke his Meaſures to that Degree that he was forc'd to repaſs the Rhine: The Marſhal follow'd him, beat a great many Squadrons of the Imperialiſts at Kockbert October 7, and took Fribourg the Capital of Briſgau, which was a very ſenſible Mortification to the Emperor, becauſe 'twas Part of his patrimonial Dominions. The Malecontents in Hungary took Advantage of the Juncture, run to Arms under the Command of Emeri Count Tekeli, Son of him already mention'd. Thus they took the Field in the Year 1677, and routed the Imperial Army at Neapel in Hungary October 10. Theſe Misfortunes were attended with further ill Conſequences; for in the Year 1678 a Body of the Imperial Troops were routed at Rhinfeld by Marſhal Crequi, who took ſeveral Forts, particularly that of Kiel, which was demoliſh'd: The Imperialiſts likewiſe quitted Landau, which was ſeiz'd by the Marſhal; Tekeli in the mean time making himſelf Maſter of the Field in Upper Hungary, and taking Lewents in the Lower, being now above twenty thouſand effective Men. This Train of ill Succeſs oblig'd the Emperor and King of Spain to think upon making a Peace with France, the Dutch having already left theſe two Crowns to ſhift for themſelves, and made a ſeparate Peace with the French King. Spain ſign'd the Peace September 17, 1678, and the Emperor's Plenipotentiaries February 5, 1679. The King of France yielded his Pretenſions to Philipsbourg to the Emperor, and the Emperor yielded Fribourg to that Prince, and agreed that all Alſatia ſhould remain to him in full Sovereignty: The Emperor likewiſe ſet the Prince of Furſtemberg at Liberty: 'Twas likewiſe agreed that Lorrain ſhould be reſtor'd to Prince Charles: But this Article being clogg'd with Conditions that Prince would not accept 'em. This Year there was a great Mortality at Vienna, and the neighbouring Places; inſomuch that from June to December the Plague ſwept away near fifty thouſand in the City, thirty thouſand in the Suburbs, and above fifty thouſand in the neighbouring Hoſpitals. The next Year 1680, the Emperor made a Truce with the Malecontents, (See the Article Tekeli in Morery, Vol. II.) which being quickly broken, they made another in 1681: During this quiet Interval the Empreſs was crown'd at Oedembourg in Hungary. They came to another Rupture in 1682, when Tekeli ſurpriz'd Caſſovia, Eperies, and other Places, being now ſo hardy as to aſſume the Title of Prince of Hungary.

The next Year 1683 was likely to have been fatal to the Emperor; he made a League offenſive and defenſive with the King of Poland, brought his Army into the Field, ſaw his Troops muſter'd near Presbourg May 6, and gave the Command of 'em to Prince Charles of Lorrain, who beſieg'd Newhauſel to no Purpoſe. During this Siege Tekeli took ſeveral Towns: And now the Tartars came up and made ſuch terrible Ravage that the Emperor thought it adviſeable to quit Vienna, and retire with his Court to Paſſau, which was done July 7. A Week after Muſtapha the Grand Viſier ſat down before this Capital of Auſtria with an hundred and fifty thouſand Men; the Siege was vigorouſly preſs'd, and the Place, tho' bravely defended by Count Staremberg, had fallen into the Infidels Hands, if John Sobieski King of Poland had not come ſeaſonably up to the Relief of the Beſieg'd. This Prince joyn'd the Duke of Lorrain, and fell upon the Turks September 12 with ſuch Reſolution, that he forc'd 'em to retreat, quit their Camp, and leave all their Cannon, Baggage, and Ammunition behind 'em. The Emperor came back to Vienna the 14th, to return Thanks to God for this almoſt miraculous Deliverance, and made the King of Poland a Viſit in the Turkiſh Camp. The Blow was followed, and the Infidels purſued, and ſeveral Poſts wreſted from 'em. They were likewiſe beaten near the Fort Barkam upon the Danube October 10. This Victory drew the taking of Gran after five Days Siege. And now the Emperor return'd to Lintz.

Upon this Succeſs, in the Year 1684, a League was concluded between the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the Republick of Venice. The Imperial Army commanded by the Duke of Lorrain carried Vicegrad, defeated the Baſhaw of Buda, who came up with fifteen thouſand Men near Veitzen or Vaccia, which was taken, and ſo was Peſt; but the Imperialiſts could not carry Buda, notwithſtanding they had routed the Seraſkier, who came up to ſuccour the Place. And thus after fourteen Weeks Siege the Germans were forc'd to break up, having loſt about ten thouſand Men. General Schultz at the Head of another Body routed a Part of Tekeli's Troops, carry'd Virovitza and ſome other Places, and came before Eperies, which prov'd too ſtrong for him. And now to bring the Narrative on this Side the Rhine; the War re-commenced between France and Spain upon their Diſagreement about the Frontiers: The Emperor diſguſted with the Town of Strasbourg's Submiſſion to the French King as Sovereign of Alſatia, and elated with his late Advantages againſt the Turks, hinder'd the Spaniard from hearken-ing to any Accommodation. But the French King taking Luxembourg this Campaign, a Truce for twenty Years was concluded with him at Ratisbonne.

The Year 1685 prov'd very prosperous for the Imperialists: They forc'd the Turks to raise the Siege of Gran; after which the Duke of Lorrain, seconded by the Elector of Bavaria and the Princes of Conti, and de la Roche-sur-yon, gave an entire Defeat to the Infidels August 16. Newhausel, invested before this Victory, was carry'd Sword in Hand; three Days after Eperies surrender'd; and Tekeli being now seiz'd and put under an Arrest by the Turks, the Town of Cassovia and several other Places open'd their Gates to the Germans. The next Year Buda was taken; the Garrison made an obstinate Defence, tho' the Imperial Army was above fifty thousand strong, encourag'd by the Duke of Bavaria, and a considerable Number of Voluntiers of the first Quality. The Seraskier attempted to succour the Place, but was several times beaten, and at last had the Discomfort to see it carry'd Sword in hand September 2. The Governour who, was a brave old Officer, mounted the Breach with his Sword in his Hand, and fell there. All that the Duke of Lorrain could do was not sufficient to hinder his Troops from staining their Victory with Cruelties and barbarous Excesses much unbecoming the Christian Name. There were four hundred Pieces of Cannon and sixty Mortars found in Buda. The Reduction of Segedin, of five Churches, of Darda and Capospar put an End to this Campaign.

The Summer in 1687 open'd with the destroying the Bridge of Essek, one Part of which was broken, and the other burn'd. The Duke of Lorrain pass'd the Drave and the River Walpo to get Intelligence of the Turkish Camp, but to no Effect; for his Troops being fatigu'd he was forc'd to countermarch. The Grand Visier follow'd him; but the Duke making an halt near Mohatz, a bloody Battel was fought August 10, much in the same Place where Solyman the Magnificent routed Lewis II. King of Hungary with two and twenty thousand Christians A. D. 1526. To return; the Infidels were now beaten with the Loss of twelve thousand Men; and the Duke of Lorrain, still assisted with the Elector of Bavaria, remain'd Master of the Field of Battel, forc'd the Turkish Camp, and took ninety Pieces of Cannon, and all their Baggage. The Towns Essek, Walpo, and other Places surrender'd upon this Victory. And now upon receiving Advice that Abaffi Prince of Transylvania had put himself under the Turks Protection, the Imperial Army march'd into this Countrey, seiz'd Clausembourg, where the States were conven'd, and at last forc'd the Transylvanians to give 'em Winter Quarters, and put themselves under the Emperor's Protection; this Treaty was finish'd in form the Year following. His Imperial Majesty making use of this Course of Success, prevail'd with the Hungarians to recognize his eldest Son Joseph as King of Hungary, and declare the Kingdom hereditary to his Heirs Male, and from thence to the Spanish Branch, in Case his own should fail. This young King was crowned at Presbourg December 9; and soon after the Turks evacuated Agria, having suffer'd a long Blockade.

The Year 1688 began with the Surrender of Mongatz, the Princess Ragotski, who was shut up there, being in no good Condition to hold out against the Blockade any longer than the 17th of January. Two Months after Alba Regalis shar'd the same Fate. Lippa was likewise taken Sword in Hand; Illoc and Peterwaradin quitted by the Turks fell of themselves into the Hands of the Imperialists, and the Elector of Bavaria, who was at the Head of the main Army, besieg'd Belgrade, which was taken by Storm September 6; nine thousand Turks of the Garrison being put to the Sword. Prince Lewis of Baden at another Quarter made himself Master of a great Part of Bossina and Sclavonia, and beat the Turks in several Rencounters. On the other Side the French King being acquainted that the Emperor had been practising against him for two Years last past; that he had made a Confederacy at Ausbourg with the King of Spain, the States-General of the United Provinces, the Electors Palatine, of Saxony and Brandenberg, and generally with all the Protestants of Germany, resolv'd to be somewhat before Hand with 'em, and prevent the Execution of their Designs. To this Purpose he order'd the Dauphine to besiege Philipsbourg, who enter'd the Place November 1, which was his Birth-Day; the taking of Keiserlauter, Creutznac, Heilbron, Mentz, Heildelberg, Manheim, Frankendal, Spire and Wormes follow'd the Surrender of Philipsbourg; and the Elector Palatine found himself distress'd in the first Place for entering into the League: In short, all the Country as far as Ausbourg was lay'd under Contribution. The Prince of Orange who had been the Primum Mobile or main Spring in this wonderful Contrivance, sail'd with Land Forces into England; and by what means he succeeded there, is generally known: In the mean time the Emperor, tho' embarrass'd with the Turks, made the best Defence he could against the Progress of France.

In the Year 1689 the Emperor's Affairs took a farther Turn of Success in Hungary. Sigeth surrender'd upon Articles, and Turkish Envoys were sent express to Vienna with Proposals of Peace; but the Terms being rejected the Infidels were beaten thrice by Prince Lewis of Baden who commanded the Imperial Army; that is on the 30th of August at Jagodina, near Nissa on the 24th of September, and in the Plain of Widin October the 14th. In these three Defeats the Turks had fourteen thousand Men kill'd, lost a great many Cannon, and the taking of Nissa and Widin follow'd soon after. On the Side of the Rhine the Emperor prevail'd to have France declar'd an Enemy to the Empire, and got a Resolution pass'd in the Diet of Ratisbonne, that no Member of the Empire, under any Pretence whatsoever, should stand Neuter: And now the Duke of Lorrain had the Command of a great Army: This General reinforc'd with the Electors of Bavaria and Saxony set down before Mentz, but could not make himself Master of the Place, till seven Weeks after the Trenches were open'd. Here the Germans lost above twelve thousand Men; amongst this Number there were four Princes of the Empire, and a great many general and subaltern Officers. During this Siege the French finish'd the Ruin of the Palatinate, and ravag'd the Territories of Baden. After this, the Duke of Lorrain made a quick March to joyn the Elector of Brandenbourg, who having taken Keiserwert besieg'd Bonne, tho' a great while without Success. At last, the brave Governor Asfeld seeing the Place beaten almost into Ruins and Dust, surrender'd October 14, upon very honourable Conditions.

The Year 1690 was not prosperous to the Emperor, excepting that his Son Archduke Joseph was elected King of the Romans January 24. The Turks recovering their Courage attack'd the Christian Troops at Kasaneth in Albania January 1, and routed 'em; took Kasaneth and Pristina, put the Garrison to the Sword, and at last made themselves Masters of all Albania, the Imperialists having above twelve thousand Men kill'd and taken Prisoners. In Hungary the Town Caniska surrender'd to the Emperor's Troops in April; but in August following Count Tekeli, lately set at liberty, defeated General Heusler upon the Frontiers of Valachia and Transylvania, and took him Prisoner after having kill'd four thousand of his Men. Tekeli upon this Advantage was recogniz'd Prince of Transylvania, but he held this Distinction but a short time: For Prince Lewis of Baden coming up brought the People about, and forc'd Tekeli to quit the Country at the latter End of the Year. But Success was not always on one Side; for the Grand Visier restor'd his Master's Affairs to a considerable Degree: Nissa, Widin, and Semandria were taken, Belgrade had the same Fortune; A Bomb happen'd to blow up a Magazine of Powder, and part of the Fortifications, and buried above a thousand Men in the Ruins: Thus the Turks enter'd the Breach, took the Town by Storm, and put above six thousand Imperialists to the Sword. Great Waradin, Temeswaer and Giula block'd up by the Imperialists, were reliev'd; Lippa, Peter-Waradin and Illock open'd their Gates to the Ottoman Troops, who burn'd Walcowart, and massacred the Garrison of Orsowa which had lately surrender'd. There was nothing considerable done upon the Rhine: The Dauphin pass'd this River, posted himself in the Enemy's Countrey, and held the Imperial Armies at Bay commanded by the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria. This was a very unhappy happy Year, and the Emperor had little to relieve his Spirits, excepting an hundred thouſand Piſtoles receiv'd of the Duke of Savoy, upon Condition that this Prince's Ambaſſadors might be receiv'd at Vienna with the ſame Ceremony and Regard which the Court of France had frankly granted 'em: For this Favour the Duke of Savoy declar'd for the Confederacy, having privately ſign'd the Articles two Years before.

In the Year 1691 Prince Lewis of Baden put the Emperor's Affairs in Hungary into a better Situation: He march'd for Tranſylvania in queſt of the Turks, and found 'em encamp'd near Salankemen upon the Danube. But advancing without Proviſions he was about to retreat, when the Infidels attack'd him. The Fight was rough and obſtinate, and might have prov'd unfortunate for the Chriſtian Army, had not the Grand Viſier Cuproli been taken off by a Cannon Ball. The Death of this General and the Aga of the Janiſaries broke the Courage of the Turks, and made 'em retire in Confuſion, with the Loſs of above twenty thouſand Men; the Imperialiſts loſt almoſt half as many. This Battel was fought Auguſt 19. The conquering Army paſs'd the Danube and beſieg'd Great Waradin, but could not take it; however the Siege was turn'd into a Blockade, and to make ſome amends for miſſing this Town, Lippa was taken by General Veterani. As to the Buſineſs at the Rhine, the Elector of Saxony, who commanded the Imperial Army, paſs'd this River into Alſace: The Marſhal de Lorges, who commanded the French Army, paſs'd the ſame River to move into the Palatinate: This Motion made the German General countermarch; and a Sickneſs happening in the Army, himſelf was carry'd off with it.

The Campaign of 1692 was ſlenderly proſperous for the Emperor; there was nothing done in Hungary, excepting the taking of Great Waradin by General Heuſler June 5: But then upon the Rhine the French routed a Body of ſix thouſand German Horſe, commanded by Duke Frederick Charles, Adminiſtrator of Wirtemberg, who was taken Priſoner. This Summer the Emperor created a ninth Electorate in Favour of the Duke of Hannover. This Creation occaſion'd ſome Jealouſy and Remonſtrance in the Empire. The Exploits in Hungary the next Year went no farther than the taking of Jeno, and beſieging Belgrade without Effect. On the Rhine Side the Prince of Baden thought it moſt adviſeable to entrench himſelf where the Enemy could not come at him: And thus he lay cover'd from the Dauphin, who croſs'd the Rhine and the Necker to give him Battel.

The Year 1694 was diſtinguiſh'd with no conſiderable Event. Prince Lewis of Baden paſs'd the Rhine into Lower Germany; but the Marſhal de Lorges appearing that Prince retreated. In Hungary the Turks came up to the Imperial Army then poſted at Peter-Waradin: But the Germans entrench'd themſelves ſo well, that after having ſuffer'd a Sort of Siege, the Rains forc'd the Infidels to go off. The two Campaigns of 1695 and 1696 were by no means proſperous to the Emperor: 'Tis true Giula ſurrender'd in the Beginning of 1695; but the Grand Seignior Muſtapha II. putting himſelf at the Head of his Troops took Lippa and Titoul Sword in Hand, put the Garriſons to the Sword, and demoliſh'd the Works: After this, near Karanſebes he ſurpriz'd General Veterani, who commanded the Imperial Troops in Tranſylvania; the Germans were entirely routed, a great many of the Infantry, and above four thouſand Horſe were killed upon the Spot, and the General was taken Priſoner, and dy'd ſoon after of his Wounds. The next Year the new Elector of Saxony being Commander in chief of the Imperial Army was eager to have Revenge for the ill Succeſs of the laſt Campaign: To this Purpoſe he beſieg'd Temeſwaer; but receiving Advice of the Sultan's Approach, he rais'd the Siege and march'd to fight him. The Turks waited for him near Olaſch. The Action was very rugged, and laſted a conſiderable time, but the Imperialiſts had the worſt of it, for General Polland loſt his Life there, and a great many other Officers were kill'd or wounded.

The Year 1697 was more lucky: 'Tis true a great many Malecontents made an Inſurrection in Upper Hungary, and ſurpriz'd Tockai and Mongats; but this Commotion was quickly lay'd aſleep; Tockai was retaken Sword in Hand, and the Rebels ſcatter'd; Prince Eugene of Savoy, who commanded the Imperial Army, inveſted Bihatz without Succeſs; but upon the 11th of September he ſurpriz'd the Turkiſh Infantry on this Side the Theiſſe near Zenta, and fell upon 'em: And here fourſcore thouſand of the Infidels were defeated, part of 'em being kill'd upon the Field of Battel, and part of 'em drown'd in the River; the Grand Viſier and the Aga of the Janiſaries being of this Number, ſeventy Pieces of Cannon, and between eight and nine hundred Waggons were likewiſe taken. From hence this General march'd into Boſſina, and ravag'd the whole Country. Serraio the Capital, which had an hundred and twenty Moſques, was burn'd to Aſhes. Vipalanka in Tranſylvania had the ſame Fate, the Garriſon and Burghers being firſt put to the Sword. About the Rhine both the French and Confederates ſtood upon the defenſive the two laſt Campaigns; and this Year was manag'd in the ſame manner. At laſt, the Emperor, who had hitherto been diſinclin'd to a Peace, being now diſguſted with the French Succeſs againſt the whole Confederacy for nine or ten Years together, and apprehenſive of their farther Progreſs, thought it beſt to look towards an Accommodation: The Duke of Savoy having made a Peace with France the laſt Year, made the reſt of the Allies more willing to follow his Precedent. Plenipotentiaries were therefore ſent from the contending Parties to Ryſwick in Holland; where the Emperor's Ambaſſadors always ſtanding off from any Concluſion, Spain, England and Holland ſign'd their reſpective Treaties; and the Emperor being left by his Allies was forc'd to come in ſix Weeks after. By this Treaty of October 31. Straſbourg remain'd to the King of France, who yielded up all the Places he had taken beyond the Rhine, viz. Philipsbourg, Fribourg, Briſac and Fort Kiel; this Prince being contented that this River ſhould ſerve for a Barrier between Germany and France. This Peace pav'd the Way to another between Vienna and Conſtantinople. The Paces of this Negotiation began to move with the Year 1698. There was an Houſe built on Purpoſe between Carlowitz and Salankamen for the Plenipotentiaries: And on the 26th of January 1699 a Truce for five and twenty Years between the two Empires was ſign'd. The Acquiſitions the Emperor had made in Tranſylvania were to remain to him, excepting part of a Province within the Dependency of Temeſwaer. Commiſſioners were agreed on both Sides for ſettling the Frontiers, and the Regulation was ſign'd July 25th 1700.

This Peace, as to the Chriſtian Part of Europe, was but ſhort-liv'd, the Death of King Charles II. of Spain giving new Occaſion for Diſunion. To prevent the War from breaking out again, a Partition Treaty of the Spaniſh Monarchy was propos'd and partly agreed: But to this the Emperor would by no means hearken. However King Charles II. made a Will, in which Philip of France Duke of Anjou was declar'd his Heir, and in Caſe himſelf and his Iſſue fail'd, the Crown of Spain was devis'd to his Brother Charles Duke of Berry, and in Caſe the Line of theſe two Princes fail'd, Charles Archduke of Auſtria was to be the next in Succeſſion. This Diſpoſition was ſufficient to awaken the Emperor's Jealouſy: He was much diſconcerted to ſee the Marriage of Maria Tereſſa of Auſtria with King Lewis XIV. of France, ſhould carry ſo many wealthy Dominions out of his Family, tho', by the way, 'twas Marriages which firſt brought 'em into the Houſe of Auſtria: However, to defeat the Settlement of the King of Spain's laſt Will and Teſtament, the Emperor engag'd the Dutch, the Engliſh, and ſoon after the Portugueſe, the Duke of Savoy, and all the Empire in his Intereſt, the Electors of Cologn and Bavaria excepted. All theſe Nations, upon different Motives, intereſted themſelves in this Affair, and made a common War, which ſhou'd have been decided between the Houſes of Bourbon and Auſtria.

The Emperor, to gain the Elector of Brandenbourg, permitted him in the Beginning of the Year 1701 to take the Title of King of Pruſſia. Afterwards he order'd ſome Troops to march into Italy to ſeize the Milaneſe: The French King likewiſe ſent ſome Troops to defend his Grandſon's Dominions. This Prince (as the French Supplementer believes) could eaſily have ſtop'd the Progreſs of the Imperialiſts in the Trentin; but he would not give any juſt Occaſion to reproach him with being the firſt in Acts of Hoſtility; no, the Emperor had all the Glory of this kind: His Troops commanded by Prince Eugene of Savoy paſs'd the Adige, and had ſome little Advantage of the French at Carpi: From hence they mov'd forward to Chiari upon the Oglio, where they entrench'd themſelves, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of the French Troops, which were forc'd to retreat after a Fight of two Hours. Prince Eugene poſſeſs'd himſelf of ſome Poſts in the Territories of Mirandola, Berſello, &c. The French Forces were under the Direction of the Duke of Savoy, to whom the French King had truſted the Command of his Army, in Conſequence of the Marriage of the ſecond Daughter of this Prince with the King of Spain.

ſtop'd

The next Year 1702 Prince Eugene attempted the ſurprizing Cremona, which ſucceeded on February 1, the Germans entering the Town the Night before. Marſhal Villeroy, who had his Quarters in this Place, was taken Priſoner, when going out of his Houſe to give Orders upon the Noiſe he heard: In ſhort, the Town had been gain'd by Prince Eugene had he not rely'd too ſoon upon his Conqueſt. He was going, it ſeems, to make the Magiſtrates take an Oath of Allegiance to the Emperor, when the French, hardly awake, forming themſelves into a Body under the Marquis de Revel Broglio attack'd the Germans; and after an obſtinate Fight in the Streets from Break of Day to two Hours within Night, forc'd Prince Eugene to quit the Town with conſiderable Loſs. He was likewiſe forc'd to raiſe the Blockade of Mantua, looſing ſeveral other Poſts at the ſame time. The King of Spain coming from Madrid to Naples, and from Naples to Milan, put himſelf at the Head of the Army commanded by the Duke of Vendoſme. This Prince no ſooner appear'd, but Viſconti a General Officer was beaten at Sancta Victoria: Afterwards Prince Eugene, who was entrench'd in the Seraglio, was willing to try his Fortune a little with the Enemy, hoping to diſengage himſelf with Honour from a Poſt where he could no longer ſubſiſt: But after five or ſix Attacks, well receiv'd by the French and Spaniards at Luzzara, he was forc'd to quit the Field of Battel, with the Loſs of five or ſix thouſand Men, and make uſe of the Night to ſtrengthen his Retrenchments. The Emperor notwithſtanding had Te Deum ſung for this Action, as if the French had the worſt of it, tho' they loſt but two thouſand Men: Beſides, the Town of Luzzara, where Prince Engene had his Magazines, was taken at Diſcretion the Day after the Battel; and within a few Days Guaſtalla ſurrender'd, Borgoforte was carry'd by Storm, and Governolo had the ſame Fortune; all which were ſufficient Proofs on which Side the Victory reſted. In fine, Prince Eugene of Savoy finding himſelf ſtreighten'd in his Quarters, and ſeeing the French Maſters of the Territories of Modena, left the Army, and went to Vienna.

As yet no Hoſtilities had paſs'd upon the Rhine; the French King, tho' in a Condition of Advantage, reſolving to keep cloſe to the Peace of Ryſwick, would by no means begin the War, and by this Scrupuloſity gave the Emperor time to ſtrengthen himſelf. His Majeſty of Vienna engag'd the three Colleges of the Empire to declare War againſt France and Spain, giving Philip V. no better Title than that of Duke of Anjou. His Army commanded by Prince Lewis of Baden ſat down before Landau, which after three Months Defence ſurrender'd to the King of the Romans, who came up to the Siege: But 'twas not long before the Marquiſs de Villars paſſing the Rhine with a Detachment of the French Army fell upon Prince Lewis of Baden at Freidlingen, and was the firſt who had the Honour to beat this Generaliſſimo of the Emperor's Forces; three thouſand Germans being kill'd in the Fight, and a great many Priſoners taken, were thought a ſufficient Service to procure Villars a Mareſchal's Staff. The taking the Fort of Kiel in the Beginning of the Year 1703, and ſeveral other little Towns and Forts were the Conſequences of this Victory.

The Empire's Declaration of War againſt France was not unanimouſly agreed by all the Princes. The Elector of Bavaria and his Brother the Elector of Cologn, did not think themſelves oblig'd to go implicitly into the Emperor's Sentiment: They inſiſted at leaſt that they might ſtand Neuter: But his Imperial Majeſty not allowing ſuch Indifferency, his Troops ſeiz'd upon Cologne; his Allies took Liege, where the Elector of Cologne was Biſhop and Prince; and to carry his Reſentment to the laſt Extremity againſt the Houſe of Bavaria, when the Biſhop of Hildeſheim dy'd, to whom the Elector of Cologne was Coadjutor; after the Death of this Biſhop, I ſay, the Emperor permitted the Duke of Hannover, tho' a Proteſtant, to ſeize the Revenues of the Biſhoprick by way of Sequeſtration. This rugged Treatment ruffled the Elector of Bavaria. This Prince had concluded a Treaty with the Circles of Suabia and Franconia to preſerve a Neutrality, and reſtore, if poſſible, the Repoſe of the Empire: This Treaty not ſuiting the Emperor's Meaſures, he order'd his Troops to march againſt the Elector, who ſtood upon the defenſive; and in March 1703 his Electoral Highneſs defeated General Schlik near Scharſinberg, who with a conſiderable Body of Saxon Troops attempted an Incurſion upon his Dominions: The Elector of Bavaria kill'd him three thouſand Men, and took a thouſand Priſoners. Afterwards he attack'd Count Stirum, who attempted to penetrate into the Upper Palatinate, and routed a Body of ſix hundred Men; the Prince of Anſpach was kill'd in this Action. The Elector having made himſelf Maſter of the Bridge at Ratisbonne was joyn'd by the French: And now, leaving them upon the Danube, he mov'd into Tirol, and made himſelf Maſter of Kufſtein, Inſpruck, and all the Places near the Head of the Leck, and the Inn. The French, who kept upon the Danube, routed five thouſand of the Emperor's Cavalry at Munderkingen, kill'd fifteen hundred of 'em, and prevented their making a Bridge at that Place. However, Prince Lewis of Baden, the Emperor's Generaliſſimo, made himſelf Maſter of Augsbourg; but the Elector of Bavaria countermarching to the Danube, and joyning Mareſchal Villars, they defeated Count Stirum at Hocſtet September 20, kill'd him four thouſand five hundred Men, took more than five thouſand Priſoners, and three and thirty Pieces of Cannon: From hence the Elector mov'd to Augsbourg, where the Germans had a Garriſon of five thouſand Men: This Town ſurrender'd to him December 16. There was great Store of Proviſions lodg'd there, Arms for ten thouſand Men, and an hundred and thirty Pieces of Cannon. The Imperialiſts on the other Side ſeiz'd Amberg, the Capital of the Upper Palatinate; but the Elector got an Equivalent by taking Paſſaw the Beginning of the Year 1704.

The Emperor was no more fortunate upon the Rhine, nor in Alſace; his Army keeping within the Lines gave no Diſturbance to the Duke of Burgundy, who took old Briſac in a Fortnight after opening the Trenches. The Emperor to leſſen this Misfortune beheaded Count Arco Governor of the Town, after he had ſerv'd him three and forty Years: His Majeſty likewiſe degraded Count Marſigli General of the Forces there: This Nobleman had his Sword broken over his Head by the Executioner, notwithſtanding the Service he had done his Maſter in the Courſe of this War, and the principal Share he had in concluding the Treaty at Carlowitz: The recovering Landau by Mareſchal Tallard follow'd the taking of Briſac; and the Imperial Army, which came up to raiſe the Siege under the Command of the Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, was entirely routed near Spire November 15, five thouſand Germans were kill'd upon the Spot, four thouſand taken Priſoners, and a great many Cannon, which Defeat oblig'd the Town to capitulate.

The Emperor's Forces in Italy had no better Succeſs; the Town of Berſello ſurrender'd at Diſcretion July 27; and the Duke of Vendoſme making his Way through the Trentin Mountains, and forcing ſeveral Poſts which ſeem'd inacceſſible, diſplay'd the French Colours before the Ramparts of Trent; and bombarding the Place gave the Burghers a true Account how Matters had paſs'd at the Battel of Luzzara. The Duke of Savoy's deſerting, who at the ſame time when he was General of the French and Spaniſh Armies, ſign'd a Treaty with the Emperor againſt his Son in Law Philip V. in Expectation of being made King of Liguria; guria; this Duke, I ſay, by this unexpected Step, might have reſtor'd the Emperor's Affairs in Lombardy, if the French King, appriz'd of this clandeſtine Engagement, had not order'd the Duke of Vendoſme to diſarm about three thouſand of this Prince's Troops ſtill remaining in the French Service. 'Twas about this time that the Emperor gave his Son Charles Archduke of Auſtria the Title of King of Spain; the Ceremony was perform'd at Vienna September 12; and the 3d of January following this pretended Monarch ſet forward for Holland, from whence he ſail'd into England, and thence to Portugal, where the Government had lately declar'd for the Emperor and his Allies.

And here, it may be ſufficient to relate in a Word or two, that the Duke of Savoy's remarkable Diſengagement with the French occaſion'd the Loſs of ſeveral of his beſt Towns; viz. Suza, Villafranca, Nice, Vorceil, Jurée and Verüe, where the Garriſons were made Priſoners of War. They conſiſted partly of the Emperor's Troops commanded by the Generals Viſconti and Staremberg: Theſe Generals in their March to the Duke of Savoy loſt above four thouſand Men, either taken or kill'd, in ſeveral Skirmiſhes by the Duke of Vendoſme's Troops. Oſtiglia upon the Po was quitted by the Remainder of the Imperial Army, who after having blown up the Fortifications of Sarravalle, retreated into the Venetian Territories, whither the Grand Prior of France, the Duke of Vendoſme's Brother, mov'd after them with a conſiderable Body.

The Year 1704, which was the laſt whole one of this Emperor's Life, open'd with a dark Proſpect, and had like to have prov'd the moſt fatal of all: On one Side he was preſs'd with the Malecontents of Hungary, who ſtruck a Terror into Vienna itſelf. In the Year 1701 Prince Ragotzki was ſeiz'd by the Emperor's Order, and convey'd to Neuſtat to be try'd. He was ſo fortunate as to make his Eſcape, otherwiſe he had undoubtedly loſt his Head there, as it happen'd to Count Serini, his Grandfather by the Mother's Side, about thirty Years before. Upon this Eſcape the Emperor proclaim'd Ragotzki a Traytor immediately, and ſet a Price upon his Head: Afterwards, in the Year 1703, he had him formally ſentenc'd to Death for Contumacy. Theſe deſperate Circumſtances made this Prince put himſelf at the Head of ſome Hungarians, who run to Arms upon the ſcore that the ancient Conſtitution was broken, and their Rights and Privileges taken from 'em. The Counts Berezini, Caroli, Eſterhaſi, Budiani and Forgatſch declar'd for Ragotzki, and reſolv'd to follow his Fortune: They ravag'd Upper Hungary, penetrated into Moravia, Sclavonia, Stiria, Auſtria and Tranſylvania, where Ragotzki was proclaim'd Prince in the Year 1704. They likewiſe made themſelves Maſters of Caſſovia, Newhauſel, Eperies, Zarmart, came up to the Gates of Presbourg, and even to thoſe of Vienna. Propoſals for an Accommodation, which the Emperor ſent them by the Dutch and Engliſh Ambaſſadors were rejected: Neither was Prince Eugene of Savoy, who commanded the Imperial Army in Hungary, in a Condition to do any thing againſt the hundred thouſand Men, who follow'd Ragotzki's Standard, and divided themſelves into ſeveral Bodies upon the Danube, in the Iſle of Schut, upon the Morava and other Places. This was the Condition of Affairs there in the Year 1704.

On the other Side, the Elector of Bavaria being Maſter of Paſſaw and Ens had nothing to ſtop him from coming to Vienna: The Circles of Suabia and Franconia, ſtruck with the Incurſions the French had made into their Country the Beginning of January, were at a ſtand which Way they ſhould declare; and Mareſchal Tallard having in the Beginning of May ſupply'd the Elector of Bavaria with a Convoy of five hundred Waggons loaden with all ſorts of Ammunition, and reinforc'd him with twelve thouſand Foot, three thouſand Horſe, and a thouſand Officers; Affairs being in this Situation, every thing ſeem'd to promiſe fair for his Electoral Highneſs: But now the Engliſh Generaliſſimo, created Lord Churchill by King Charles II, quitted Flanders, and made an haſty March with his Troops for the Danube. His Arrival there re-aſſur'd Prince Lewis of Baden: And now joyning their Forces they attack'd the Elector's Retrenchments at Schellemberg near Donavert. The Camp was defended by five French and eleven Bavarian Batallions, which after an almoſt incredible Reſiſtance, were forc'd to give way to a great Superiority of Numbers, having loſt about fifteen hundred Men. On the other Side the Allies had about ſix thouſand kill'd and wounded, loſt four General Officers, and Count Stirum dy'd ſoon after of the Wounds he receiv'd in this Battel. The coming up of the Engliſh Generaliſſimo oblig'd the Elector of Bavaria to call for farther Aſſiſtance. Mareſchal Tallard therefore march'd a ſecond time through the Black Foreſt, Mareſchal Villeroy keeping his Poſt with a conſiderable Body to obſerve Prince Eugene, then lying entrench'd within the Lines of Stolhoffen. Mareſchal Tallard joyn'd the Elector, and Prince Eugene decamping privately came up to the Engliſh General. In ſhort upon the 13th of Auguſt the Imperialiſts, being thus ſtrongly reinforc'd, attack'd the French and Bavarian Army at Hockſtet. The Mareſchal Marſin, who commanded the Left Wing, had conſiderably the better of the Enemy's Right; but the Imperialiſts getting over a Moraſſe, which was thought impracticable, charg'd the French Right Wing, commanded by Mareſchal Tallard, with great Reſolution, and made their Way to the Center: In ſhort, the French General Tallard was made Priſoner, and ſeven and twenty French Battalions, with four Regiments of Dragoons, being in no Condition to joyn the reſt of the Army, were forc'd to ſurrender. The French and Bavarians had twelve thouſand Men kill'd and wounded, and above ten thouſand taken Priſoners, together with the Loſs of a great many Officers and Pieces of Cannon. The prevailing Army of the Allies had near ſixteen thouſand kill'd and wounded: The Elector of Bavaria and Mareſchal Marſin retreated with the Debris of their Army, and paſs'd the Rhine at Strasbourg. The Imperialiſts, with the reſt of the Allies, croſs'd this River at Philipsbourg, and ſat down before Landau, where the King of the Romans came up to 'em. They took this Place November 25, about nine Weeks after opening the Trenches. Trarebach likewiſe ſurrender'd December 18, after a Siege of thirty four Days. And the Town of Ulm, garriſon'd with two thouſand five hundred French, capitulated when Landau was beſieg'd. The Electreſs of Bavaria, giving way to the rough Conjuncture, concluded a Treaty with the King of the Romans, which was ratify'd by the Emperor, by virtue of which the Bavarians evacuated all the Places of Strength within the Electorate.

In fine, after a Reign of forty eight Years, checquer'd with great Variety of lucky and improſperous Events, the Emperor Leopold dy'd at Vienna in the ſixty fifth Year of his Age, May 5. 1705. He left the Reputation of a pious Prince, but in the French Supplementer's Opinion, he was too much govern'd by the Temper of his Family, and ſtrain'd his Politicks to the Diſadvantage of Religion. But tho' he was not without his Failings, he cover'd 'em ſo handſomely with good Qualities, that his Character came up honourably to View: And tho' his Appearance was plain and little engaging, yet by his Conduct his Inſide ſeem'd to be good and well furniſh'd: And beſides, he had the good Fortune that his violent Meaſures, and which lay moſt expos'd to Cenſure, were for the common Part imputed to his Council rather than himſelf. To conclude with him; it muſt be granted rhat he was always equal, and ſometimes ſuperior to his Miniſtry at the Board, but if he had headed his Troops, his Generals in all likelyhood would have outſhin'd him.

LERNA, a Moraſſe in the Territory of Argos, famous for the Hydra with ſeven Heads, which ravag'd all the Neighbourhood, and was at laſt deſtroy'd by Hercules. The meaning of the Fable is, that this Moraſſe ſpoil'd the Air with infectious Exhalations. Mythology reports that the Danaides threw their Huſbands Heads, whom they murder'd on their Wedding Night, into this Marſh. That which gave Occaſion to the Fiction of Hercules's killing the Hydra, was becauſe this Heroe drain'd the Moraſſe, which gave him the Diſtinction of Lernæan, Lernæus turbâ capitum circumſtitit anguis.

Virgil, Æneid. 8. Pliny, lib. 4, cap. 5.

LESBONAX, a Philoſopher of Mitylene. Suidas makes him live in the Reign of Auguſtus. Photius reports him the Author of ſixteen Orations upon the Subject of Politicks. Two of his Harangues were publiſh'd at Hannover in 1619; one, περὶ πολέμων τῶν Κορινθίων, the other Λόγος προτρεπτικὸς to the Athenians. However, Sthottus affirms Lesbonax an Orator more ancient than the Philoſopher of Mitylene of that Name. * Photius, Cod. 74.

LESCARBOT (Mark) an Advocate belonging to the Parliament, and born at Vervins in Picardy: He wrote an Hiſtory of New France: It takes in the Navigations, Diſcoveries, and Settlements made by the French in the Weſt-Indies, and New France by the Authority and under the Protection of the French Kings, and what Fortune the Planters met with for an hundred Years before the Publication of this Book: In which is comprehended the Natural, Moral, and Geographical Hiſtory of thoſe Countries with Cuts. The ſecond Edition of this Book was printed at Paris in 8vo in 1611. This Performance is a conſiderable Curioſity: And here the Author throws in a great many learned Remarks: He begins with the Deſcription of the Voyage of John Verazzan a Florentine, who was ſent into America by Francis I. A. D. 1524. This was the firſt Voyage which was made into this Countrey by the Approbation and Direction of the Crown of France. This Leſcarbot liv'd ſome time in New France; afterwards he went into Switzerland in the Train of Peter de Caſtille Lewis XIII's Ambaſſador, and having a Fancy for giving Relations of the Countries he travell'd into, he wrote a Deſcription of the thirteen Cantons in heroick Verſe, and printed it at Paris A. D. 1618. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

LETTONIA, Letten, or Litlande, the ſouthern Part of Livonia. 'Tis bounded by Eſtonia to the North, Courland to the South, Muſcovy to the Eaſt, and the Gulph of Riga to the Weſt: The leſſer Diviſion of this Country, within which are the Towns of Dunebourg, Roſiten, Lutxem, and Maienhuſen, belong to the Muſcovite. The Swedes were Maſters of the reſt, within which Diviſion Riga, Kokenhauſen, Segewold, Wenden, Wolmer, &c. are ſituated. Thus the matter ſtood till lately, but now the Muſcovites are Maſters of all Livonia. * Mary Diction.

LEURES (Martin) a Brabantine, flouriſh'd in the latter End of the 15th Century: He may be call'd the Women's Counſellor; for he wrote a Book to defend 'em againſt all the Exceptions commonly made by the diſaffected, and drew up a Collection of all the handſome and Heroick Actions perform'd by that Sex. Konig. Biblioth.

* LEWIS XIV, King of France, was Son to Lewis XIII. by Ann of Auſtria (Daughter to King Philip IV. of Spain) who had him after being three and twenty Years married without Iſſue. He was at firſt ſetting out very fortunate in the Field, which made People ſay of this Prince, that he began to conquer before he began to reign. Lewis II. Duke d'Enguien, ſo famous afterwards by the Name of the Prince of Conde, won the Battel at Rocroy, and took Thionville. The Mareſchal de Breze beat the Spaniſh Fleet before Cartagena: Turin in Piedmont was carry'd by Prince Thomas, General of the French King's Army; le Port d'Eſture by the Mareſchal du Pleſſis-Prâlin, and Rotwil in Germany by the Mareſchal de Guébriant.

The next Year 1644, was no leſs ſucceſsful: The Viſcount Turenne gain'd the Battel at Rotwil; and the Duke d'Enguien, after having beaten the Germans at Fribourg, carry'd Spire, Philipsbourg, Mentz, and other Towns, which follow'd the Fate of Gravelines, taken by Gaſton Duke of Orleans; and that of St. Ya in the Milaneſe. The French being defeated at Mariendal, had a double Revenge by taken of Roſe, de la Mothe, Bethune, Landau, &c. and by the Victories at Llorens in Catalonia gain'd by Count Harcourt; at Norlingen in Germany by the Duke d'Enguien; and at Mora in Italy by Prince Thomas.

The Succeſs in taking Courtrai, Mardyke, and Dunkirk in the Year 1646 was check'd by raiſing the Siege of Lerida, beſieg'd in vain by Count Harcourt, and where the Duke d'Enguien, by his Father's Death now Prince of Conde, miſcarry'd himſelf, in the following Year 1647. However, this Loſs was repair'd by the taking a great many Towns in Germany and Flanders; and by a Victory at Sea, which the Duke de Richlieu gain'd over the Spaniards near Caſtel-a-Mare; while the Duke of Guiſe made head againſt 'em in Naples.

The Year 1648 was altogether ſucceſsful for France: For the French took Tortoſa and Ypres: The Viſcount Turenne and General Wrangel beat the Imperialiſts at Zuſmarhauſen; and the Prince of Conde got the famous Victory of Lens againſt the Spaniards. The Treaty of Peace concluded at Munſter between France, Germany, and Sweden, yielded Alſatia to the French King, and ſecur'd all the Advantages gain'd this Year: But France was not ſo happy at home as abroad, for now the firſt Civil War at Paris broke out. The Malecontents were diſguſted to ſee Cardinal Mazarin at the Head of the Miniſtry: But theſe Commotions were quickly laid aſleep by diſtreſſing the Pariſians; the Prince of Conde having block'd up the Town with a ſmall Army of ſeven or eight thouſand Men. The impriſoning of this Prince, the Prince of Conti, and the Duke de Longueville, was the firſt remarkable Event in the Year 1650. France loſt Catelet, la Capelle, Porto-Longone and Mouſon: But then, there was ſome Relief by the Victory of Rhetel, where the Mareſchal du Pleſſis-Prâlin routed the Spaniards. The Enlargement of the Princes, the diſcarding Cardinal Mazarin, and the King's being declar'd a Major, make Part of the Hiſtory of the Year 1651. The Cardinal return'd to Court the Beginning of the next Year, which occaſion'd a ſecond Inſurrection at Paris. The Princes, who run into the Rebels, after having been worſted ſeveral times by the King's Forces, were ſtill more unſucceſsful at the Fauxbourg of St. Antoine, where the Prince of Conde's Troops had been entirely routed if the Pariſians had not open'd their Gates. In ſhort, the factious Burghers return'd to their Duty, and the King came to Paris in October. However, the Enemies of France made their Advantage of theſe inteſtine Diviſions, and retook Gravelines, Dunkirk, Barcelona, and Cazal: But now, the civil Diſturbances being pretty well over, the Arms of France began to recover. The Spaniards, who had then the Prince of Conde in their Intereſt, were beaten in the Year 1653 at la Roquette and Bordils. Bourdeaux, and ſome other Towns, engag'd in the Prince's Faction, were reduc'd; and the King, after his Coronation at Rheims June 7, 1654, took Villafranca, Stenay, Queſnoy and Puycerda. In Auguſt the ſame Year the Spaniards were defeated, and forc'd to raiſe the Siege of Arras, after having beſieg'd it ſeven Weeks. The next Year the King beſieg'd St. Guillain in Perſon, and concluded a Treaty with the Engliſh againſt the Spaniards, after the Duke of Vendoſme had beaten the Spaniſh Fleet near Barcelona. In the Year 1656 Valence upon the Po was carry'd; la Capelle was retaken, but then the French were oblig'd to raiſe the Siege of Valenciennes, and ſurrender Conde. St. Guillain was likewiſe loſt the next Year, and Cambray was beſieg'd to no Purpoſe: Theſe Diſadvantages made the French forget the little Turns of good Luck which they had in the Reduction of Montmidy and St. Venant, and in raiſing the Siege of Ardres, and taking Mardyke. The Year 1658 was an uninterrupted Train of Succeſs for the French: The Spaniards were beaten at the Dunes by the Viſcount Turenne, who with a kind-of Torrent of Victory carry'd Dunkirk, Bergue-Sainte Vinox, Furnes, and Dixmude. Gravelines, Oudenarde Ypres and Mortare had the ſame Fortune; and the Prince de Ligne was beaten near the Lis. This Courſe of Succeſs for the French weaken'd and alarm'd the Spaniard, and brought 'em to ſome Thoughts of Peace. And here the French King, as the French Supplementer goes on, being willing to check his Conqueſts for the Repoſe of Chriſtendom, the famous Pyrenean Treaty was concluded by the Plenipotentiaries Cardinal Mazarin and Don Lewis de Haro, November 7, 1659. Eight Months forward the King marry'd Maria Tereſa of Auſtria, Infanta of Spain, and Daughter to Philip IV. This Princeſs made her ſolemn Entry into Paris with the King her Husband Auguſt 26, 1660; and the next Year November 1, the Dauphin was born.

The King, now diſengag'd from the Concerns of War, projected to make his Subjects ſenſible of the Bleſſings of Peace. To this Purpoſe, a Chamber or Court was erected for the better Regulation of the Finances:

Finances: And in January 1662 there was a Creation of Knights of the reſpective Orders. In May, the ſame Year his Majeſty gave Audience to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, who ſolemnly proteſted in the Preſence of ſeven and twenty Ambaſſadors and Envoys, that the King his Maſter would never diſpute the Precedency with France. Thus Reparation was made for the Inſult done at London the Year before to the Count d'Eſtrades, the French Ambaſſador, by the Baron de Batteville, Ambaſſador from Spain. Soon after, the League between the Swiſs and French was renew'd at Paris. And now the King had a more full Satiſfaction for the Affront Pope Alexander VII's Guards put upon Duke Creqni the French Ambaſſador: This Difference was adjuſted by a Treaty concluded at Piſa in the Year 1664, and Cardinal Chigi, the Pope's Legate and Nephew, came to the French Court to excuſe, what had happen'd, in a publick manner. Notwithſtanding Chriſtendom was in a State of Tranquillity, the Arms of France were not altogether idle: They attack'd the Moors in Barbary, defeated 'em at Gigery, and took the Town. The Turks were likewiſe made ſenſible of the French Valour; and 'twas chiefly owing to the Forces ſent from this Nation, that the Germans gain'd the Battel at St. Goddard in Hungary in the Year 1664. But theſe martial Exploits were of too ſlender Conſequence to take up all his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Thoughts: He was now more ſignificantly employ'd for the Improvement of Commerce, of Arts and Sciences. And now, French Colonies were ſent off to ſettle at Madagaſcar and Cayenne: The Academy for Painting and Sculpture was founded, and the Canal of Languedoc, for a Communication between the Mediterranean and the Ocean, was begun. In January, the next Year 1665, the Journal des Savans was publiſh'd at Paris, which may be ſaid to have given Birth to all the other Journals of this kind, which the Learned of all the European Nations have printed ſince. And to put the French in a Condition to furniſh themſelves from their own Country, and have little or no Occaſion for the Induſtry of Foreigners, the King ſet up Manufactures of Woollen, Linen, Point, &c. And while his Fleet ſwept the Seas with Succeſs, where the Duke de Beaufort took and ſunk a great many Algerines, they proſper'd no leſs by Land, where Count Schomberg, in Conjunction with the Marquiſs de Marialva in Portugal, beat the Spaniards at Villavitioſa or de Montes Claros. The Engliſh, as the French Supplementer ſpeaks, refuſing to accept the French King's good Offices in Favour of the Dutch, with whom this Prince had made an offenſive League four Years before, his Majeſty declar'd War againſt the King of England to ſupport his Allies. To this Purpoſe a Body of Troops was ſent off into Holland; and the Engliſh were worſted in America, and driven out of the Iſland of St. Chriſtophers. The Peace concluded at Breda between England, Holland, France and Denmark in January 1667, put an End to this War to make room for another, in which the French King was more nearly concern'd. The Spaniards, after the Death of Philip IV, King of Spain, refuſed to ſatisfy his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Pretenſions, in Right of his Queen, to ſome Provinces in the Low Countries: Upon this he march'd into Flanders in May, and in leſs than three Months time, either by himſelf or his Generals, took Armentiéres, Charleroy, Bergues, Furnes, Ath, Tournay, Doway, le Fort de Scarpe, Courtray, Oudenarde, Aloſt and Liſle. The Enemy's Horſe, commanded by Count Marſin were likewiſe routed near the Canal of Bruges. His Majeſty to refreſh himſelf a little after his Conqueſts, at his Return to Paris built the Obſervatoire for Mathematical and Aſtronomical Experiments; the Royal Academy of Sciences being founded the Year before for the Improvement of Aſtronomy and Natural Philoſophy. Thoſe of the King's Subjects, who were forc'd to maintain their Right at the Fatigue and Expence of Law, were likewiſe reliev'd by the Vigilance of this Prince; for to ſtop the Chicane and dilatory Proceedings of the Lawyers, the Code-Loüis was this Year publiſh'd. The Beginning of the Year 1668 ſet forward with a Train of War: All the Franche-Comte was conquer'd in February; but the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle concluded in May following, return'd that Country to the Spaniards, who yielded the French King all the Towns he had taken in Flanders. The powerful Aſſiſtance this Prince ſent the Portugueſe help'd to bring on the Peace which the Spaniards made with that Crown. Soon after Troops were ſent to Candia to ſuccour the Venetians beſieg'd by the Turk. The Duke de Beaufourt, who carry'd more Forces next Year, was ſlain in a deſperate Sally made by the French; and a third Reinforcement was getting ready, when News was brought the Venetians had capitulated.

Whilſt the French King apply'd himſelf to the reforming Abuſes, regulating the Herald's Office, for diſclaiming thoſe who had no Right to give Coats of Arms; whilſt his Care was employ'd in the Improvements of Navigation neglected by his Predeceſſors; and whilſt (as the French Supplementer expreſſes it) by ſuppreſſing the Chamber of the Edict he laid the Foundation for the Extirpation of Hereſy; England, Sweden and Holland, who about a Year and an half ſince had enter'd into a triple Alliance, engag'd more particularly in May 1669, for the Preſervation of the Low Countries: And the Dutch did not ſtop there, but in January following treated farther with the Emperor and Spain: However, the Conſequences of theſe Alliances did not break out till two Years forward. In the mean time his Majeſty ſent the Duke de Crequi, and diſpoſſeſs'd the Duke of Lorrain, who was conſtantly in a Practice againſt France. The French King ſpent the Year 1671 in making a Progreſs through his Conqueſts, fortifying the Towns he had taken, and reviewing his Troops; but all this military Buſineſs did not abate his Endeavours for the poliſhing of Arts and Sciences: For 'twas now that he ſet up the Academy for Architecture, and ſent the beſt Mathematicians, at a great Expence, into diſtant Parts of Europe, Africa, and America, where they made Obſervations remarkable for Curioſity and publick Service. About this time the Royal Hoſpital, or Invalide, deſign'd for maim'd and ſuperannuated Soldiers, was begun; a Foundation worthy the Greatneſs and Generoſity of that Prince. And now the Year 1672 came up, ſo full of Victory for the French King, and ſo calamitous for the Dutch: His Majeſty, provok'd with the frequent Intrigues and unfriendly Practices of the States General, declar'd War againſt 'em in April: The Thunder immediately follow'd the Lightning; for in May he paſs'd the Meuſe with his Army commanded under him by the Prince of Conde and the Viſcount Turenne. Orſoi, Weſel, Rhinbergue, Emeric and Grol were taken in ſix Days; the Dutch at the ſame time being worſted by the Engliſh and French Fleets, in which the Duke of York was Admiral, and the Count d'Eſtrees Vice-admiral. Theſe Advantages were attended with a very bold and glorious Action: The French Army ſwam croſs the Rhine near the Fort Skeinck, notwithſtanding the Enemy's Fire, who were drawn up on the other Side: And here the French took four thouſand Priſoners, and ſtruck ſo great a Terror into the Enemy's Country, that the Province of Utrecht made a voluntary Submiſſion: The Towns which were ſo hardy as to ſtand an Attack, were quickly forc'd to open their Gates: And thus Arnheim, Zutphen, Nimeguen, Grave and Bommel ſurrender'd; not to mention a great many other Towns; the Detail of which would be too long to give the Reader. The Dutch had no better Luck in the open Field, than under the Shelter of their Walls; for the Duke of Luxembourg routed 'em twice; once near Woerden, and again near Bodegrave. The Princes of Europe, who had enter'd into particular Alliances, being ſtruck with the ſurprizing Progreſs of the French Arms, combin'd moſt of 'em againſt that Monarch. There was a Treaty concluded between the Emperor, Spain and Holland and the Elector of Brandenbourg; but the Prince laſt mention'd pay'd dear for this Alliance: For in the Beginning of the Year 1673 the Viſcount Turenne moving into the Countries of Cleves and Juliers, made himſelf Maſter of ſo many Places, that the Elector apprehending the Loſs of the Remainder, was forc'd to deſire a Truce, which was granted him: And notwithſtanding Plenipotentiaries were nominated in March to treat of Peace at Cologne, the War was carry'd on with the ſame Vigour. The King himſelf march'd to Maſtricht, and forc'd the Town to ſurrender thirteen Days after breaking ing Ground: And the Engliſh and French Fleets beat the Dutch twice. But here the Tide turn'd, the French loſt Naerden and Bonne, and were forc'd to quit their Conqueſts in Holland, to draw their Forces together and put themſelves in a Condition to face the Spaniard, who had lately declar'd War againſt France: The Elector Palatine came into the Confederacy in the Beginning of the Year 1674; and the ſeizing Prince William of Furſtemberg, afterwards Cardinal, againſt the Law of Nations giving a new Provocation to the French King, the Conference at Cologne broke off, and the Heat of the War reviv'd: Some Towns were taken by the French upon the Rhine, but the main Blow fell upon the Franche-Comte, which was conquer'd a ſecond time, notwithſtanding the vigorous Defence made by ſome of the Towns. The Spaniards were beaten in Rouſſillon by Count Schomberg, and their Army, reinforced by the Imperialiſts and Dutch, commanded by the Prince of Orange, was worſted at the Battel of Seneff by the Prince of Conde, who likewiſe forc'd the Dutch General to raiſe the Siege of Oudenarde. The reſt of the Campaign was leſs favourable to France: For they loſt Grave and Huy; but the firſt of theſe Towns did not ſurrender without the French King's expreſs Order; nor till the Trenches had been open'd above ſeven Weeks. The Count de Chamilly who was Governor of the Place was admir'd for his Bravery, even by the Enemies themſelves. On the other Hand the Viſcount Turenne had ſeveral Advantages upon the Upper Rhine, and beat the Germans at Sintzeim, Ladenbourg, Enſheim, and Mulhauſen.

The floating Temper of the Elector of Brandenbourg made him break the Truce, and take Arms againſt France: He ſmarted for it at the Battel of Turckein, where himſelf and his Allies were beaten by Mareſchal Turenne in January 1675: The Germans diſcourag'd by ſo many Diſgraces, quitted Alſace, and the French gain'd farther Advantages both on this Side and in Sicily, where a few Days after the Marquiſs de Valavoir had landed ſome Succours, the Duke de Vivonne beat the Spaniſh Army near Meſſina, upon which the Town took the Oath of Allegiance to the French King; Huy, Dinant, Limbourg in Flanders, and Bellegarde in Rouſſillon were forc'd to make the ſame Submiſſion: But this Courſe of Proſperity was ſomewhat diſturb'd by the Death of the Viſcount Turenne, who was kill'd July 27 beyond the Rhine by a Cannon Ball. The Loſs of this great General much regretted at the French Court, was no ſmall Satisfaction to the Enemy, who were not a little afraid of him. However, as it happen'd, they made no great Advantage by his Death, for the Count de Lorges and the Marquiſs de Vaubrun, who commanded the French Army, made an honourable Retreat, and repuls'd the Germans at the Head of the Bridge upon the Rhine. The Marſhal de Crequi was not ſo fortunate; for he was routed at Conſarbrik, and having thrown himſelf into Treves was made Priſoner of War there, after above a Month's Siege: The Town was loſt by the Cowardice of ſome of the Officers, who capitulated with the Enemy in ſpite of their General. The Prince of Conde, who took the Command of the French Troops in Germany, chang'd the Situation of Affairs, and forc'd the Germans to raiſe the Sieges of Haguenau and Saverne. The Fortune of the Campaign in 1676 was leſs diverſify'd, and run almoſt all on the French Side. Mr. du Queſne beat the Spaniſh Fleet near the Iſlands of Stromboly; and afterwards beat Admiral de Ruyter, who ſail'd into the Mediterranean with the Dutch Fleet to aſſiſt the Allies, and who dy'd of the Wounds he receiv'd in this Engagement near Agouſta. The Mareſchal de Vivonne cut ſeven thouſand of the Enemy in pieces near Meſſina. This Mareſchal took the Town of Agouſta the laſt Year, and this Year burn'd the Confederate Fleet in the Harbour of Palermo. The French King was at this time in Flanders, and had Conde, Bouchain, Aire and Fort Link ſurrender'd to him: The Prince of Orange, who ſat down before Maſtricht, reinforced after ſeven Weeks by the Count de Calvo, was obliged to raiſe the Siege at the coming up of Mareſchal Schomberg. About the ſame time France declar'd War againſt Denmark, to ſupport the Swede, who, by the way, had made but a feeble Diverſion. The only Loſs the French met with this Campaign was that of Philipsbourg; where the Garriſon, and particularly Mr. du Fay the Governor, made a glorious Defence: In ſhort, the Place was ſurrender'd only for want of Powder, after a Blockade of ſix Months, and almoſt ten Weeks from the opening the Trenches. The Campaign of 1677 began with the Reduction of Valenciennes, carry'd by Storm; Cambray ſurrender'd upon Articles, and the Confederate Army, commanded by the Prince of Orange, was routed at Caſſel by Monſieur the King's Brother, who made himſelf Maſter of St. Omer. The Prince of Orange, willing to get a Revenge, inveſted Charleroy, but rais'd the Siege upon receiving Advice that the Mareſchal of Luxembourg was advancing againſt him. Some little time before the Mareſchal de Noailles defeated the Spaniards at Epouilles in Catalonia; and about the ſame time the Mareſchal de Crequi harraſs'd the German Army ſo very troubleſomely in Lorrain, that they were forc'd to retire out of this Dutchy: The Mareſchal follow'd 'em into Germany, beat 'em at Cocberg near Strasbourg, and took the important Town of Fribourg in Briſgaw. In America the Count d'Eſtrees, after having taken Cayenne from the Dutch, burned fourteen of their Ships in the Haven of Tobago, in the Beginning of this Year, and took Goree and Tobago at the End of it. In the Year 1678 the King himſelf beſieg'd Ghent and Ypres, and carry'd both Places. His Majeſty now diſſatisfy'd with the Management of the Sicilians, order'd his Troops to be brought off from that Iſland by the Count de la Feuillade; and demoliſh'd the Works of Puycerda in Catalonia, lately taken by the Mareſchal de Noailles: The French Troops, commanded by the Mareſchal de Crequi, routed the Enemy at the Head of Reinsfeld Bridge, burn'd the Bridge at Strasbourg, and ſeiz'd all the Forts thereabouts in Sight of the Confederate Army: This Campaign ſhould have ended with the Treaty of Peace ſign'd in Auguſt at Nimeguen between France and Holland; the Articles of which were receiv'd by the Spaniard in September following. In the mean time the Prince of Orange ſnatch'd an Opportunity to attack the French at St. Dennis near Mons: The Surprize, at firſt, occaſion'd ſome Diſorder, but at laſt the Mareſchal Luxembourg repuls'd the Enemy with great Slaughter. The ſlow Paces taken by the Germans in ſigning the Treaty, coſt 'em the Loſs of Lichtemberg and Nuys: However, they came in after the reſt in 1679. The Elector of Brandenbourg was the only Prince who ſtill felt the Inconvenience of War: It ſeems his Electoral Highneſs could not be prevail'd on to reſtore the Swedes what he had taken from 'em: By this Incomplyance he loſt the Dutchy of Cleves, and the Town Lipſtad, and his Forces were twice beaten at Minden. At laſt, he got himſelf comprehended in the Treaty, which was likewiſe done by the King of Denmark.

The Repoſe of Chriſtendom being thus ſettled, the French King, to ſupport the Diſtinction of le Grand, which was generally thought his due, employ'd his Leiſure in Projects both ſhining and ſerviceable to the publick. In 1680 the Dauphin was marry'd to the Princeſs of Bavaria: The ſame Year he erected a Court of Juſtice to ſuppreſs the barbarous Practice of Poyſoning, which for ſome time had got Footing in France. Rochefort was built at the Mouth of the Charente, and Mont-Louis in Cerdaigne: This Year likewiſe the Forts of Saar Louis and Hunningen, and Landau and Phalzbourg were fortify'd. Further; the Faculty of Law was encourag'd by the Crown: The King founded a Lecture for French Law: The Profeſſor came to the Chair the laſt Year, after an hundred Years Diſcontinuance of that Exerciſe. The Canal of Languedoc was at laſt made navigable in the Year 1681. Strasbourg and Cazal fell voluntarily into the King's Hands, who, at the Inſtance of the Grand Seignior, condeſcended to make Peace with Tripoli. The Corſaires or Pirates, whoſe Cuſtom was to diſturb the publick Quiet, were lately corrected for their Perfidiouſneſs by the Marquis du Queſne, who cannonaded and ſunk their Veſſels as far as the Port of Scio. The late Peace was but tenderly ſet together: On the German Side, there were ſome Motions and Tendencies towards a Rupture: And in Flanders, they could not agree about ſettling the Frontiers: A Diſpute upon this Head made the King order a Blockade upon Luxem- bourg, which he voluntarily rais'd as ſoon as he receiv'd Advice of the Turks Preparations in Hungary; for fear the Diverſion, which the Defence of this Place might occaſion, ſhould make the Chriſtians in a worſe Condition to fight the Infidels. This Prince's pious Diſpoſition was rewarded with the Birth of the Duke of Burgundy, Son to the Dauphin and the Princeſs of Bavaria his Wife: He was born Auguſt 6, 1682. A little before, the King, who had ſixty thouſand Seamen liſted and rang'd under proper Diſtinctions, founded Academies for Guards-Marines, and Cadets; where young Gentlemen were bred at the Charge of the Crown, and improv'd in all Sorts of Exerciſes ſuitable to their Birth; and were thus well qualify'd for Land and Sea-Officers. 1683 was a melancholy Year in France by the Death of the Queen; who departed this Life July 30: The Loſs of her was extremely regretted by the King her Husband and all his Subjects. Mr. Colebert, who was a very faithful and able Miniſter dy'd ſoon after: His Death was generally lamented by thoſe who had any Taſte for Arts and Sciences, which had been ſo remarkably countenanc'd and promoted by him.

The Spaniards, and particularly the Marquiſs de Grana, Governor of Flanders, were perpetually giving Diſguſts to the French King. This Prince, to make 'em ſenſible of his Reſentment, took Dixmude and Courtrai, and bombarded Luxembourg, which was taken the next Year by the Mareſchal de Crequi. Mr. the Duke d'Anjou, now King of Spain, was born December 19, this Year. In July 1684, the Algerines, tir'd with the ill Succeſs of two Years War maintain'd againſt France, ſent Ambaſſadors to the French Court to beg a Peace at the King's Diſcretion. Their Town had been twice bombarded by the French, and a great many of their Ships taken, which brought 'em to this Compliance. The Diſturbances, which had ſomewhat ruffled Europe ſince the late Peace, were quieted at laſt by a Truce concluded between France, Spain, and the Empire.

The Reputation the French King acquir'd was not confin'd to Europe; the Luſtre of his Reign ſpread to moſt diſtant Countries: Thus the Report of his Power and Capacity brought Ambaſſadors from Siam to Verſailles: The Genoeſe had been ſo hardy as to affront him, and were made ſenſible of their Indiſcretion by a terrible Bombardment: However the Republick could not purchaſe their Peace till 1685, when, by the Mediation of Pope Innocent XI, the Doge of Genoa, attended with four Senators, came to the French Court, and were glad to receive the Conditions that were given 'em. Tunis and Tripoli were once more forc'd to ſue for a Peace they had ſo often broken. And thus far the King ſeem'd to work only for France and the Benefit of his Subjects: But his Mind was too big to ſtop here; now (to keep cloſe to the Language of the French Supplementer) his Zeal exerted for the true Religion. Calviniſm, ſo fatal to France by perverting great Numbers of Catholicks, and by a frightful Train of Rebellion, Murder, and Ravage, was intirely ſuppreſs'd this Year. The Revocation of the famous Edict of Nantes finiſh'd the Ruin of this Building, already ſhaken by ſeveral Blows the King had given it. In 1686 a New Embaſſy came from Siam, and carry'd Miſſionaries and Mathematicians Home with 'em next Year. The Duke of Berry, the Dauphin's third Son, was born Auguſt 31: But the Joy for this Birth was but of ſhort Continuance; for the King's dangerous Sickneſs afflicted the whole Realm. But the Prayers of his Subjects put up Night and Day for him procur'd the Recovery of a Prince ſo well belov'd, and ſo ſignificant to the publick. About this time, the Royal Houſe of Saint-Cyr was founded for the Education of three hundred young Gentlewomen. Thus the young Nobleſſe of both Sexes, whoſe Families were ſlender or decay'd, were furniſh'd with a comfortable Subſiſtance from the Crown. The more the Greatneſs of this Prince advanc'd, the more jealous other Princes grew of him: At the Carnaval at Venice in the Year 1687, the Duke of Savoy, the Elector of Bavaria and other Princes, either in Perſon or by their Envoys, concerted Meaſures for executing the vaſt Deſigns of the League of Ausbourg, the Ground-Work of which had been laid the Year before. The Pope himſelf Innocent XI, prepoſſeſs'd by his Miniſters, who were Enemies to the French King, countenanc'd what was projected by this League. His Holineſs being provok'd with the French King's maintaining the Franchiſes in his Ambaſſador's Quarters at Rome, refus'd to give Audience to the Marquiſs de Lavardin, and put the Church of St. Lewis under an Interdict, becauſe this Ambaſſador had communicated there: He carry'd his Reſentments ſo far as to refuſe confirming the Poſtulation of Cardinal Furſtemberg to the Archbiſhoprick of Cologne; tho' the Election was canonnical and paſs'd through all the Forms: But (as the French Gentleman goes on) this Prelate was attach'd to the Intereſt of France, and this was enough to make him miſcarry at Rome. The King having Reaſon to reſent the Pope's Partiality, broke with him, and ſeiz'd the County of Avignon, which was afterwards return'd to his Succeſſor Pope Alexander VIII: However, this Reprizal was only perſonal to Pope Innocent, for his Majeſty continu'd his Regard to the See of Rome no leſs than formerly. And now the Deſigns of the confederating Princes growing too viſible, 'twas no more than neceſſary Prudence to endeavour preventing the Execution of 'em, before they came forward to bear. 'Twas upon this View the French King mov'd. His Fleet, commanded by the Mareſchal d'Eſtrees had lately ſunk ſix Algerine Ships, and bombarded the Town. The Dauphin having the Command of the Army this Year, open'd the Campaign with the taking of Hailbron; and after having put a French Garriſon into Heidelberg and Mentz, undertook the Siege of Philipsbourg, which fell into his Hands October 29, 1688, nineteen Days after breaking Ground: This, tho' the Dauphin's firſt military Exploit, was manag'd with all the Conduct and Bravery of an experienc'd General. The Dauphin carry'd Manheim in three Days, and Frankendal in two; Spire, Wormes, and Oppenheim opening their Gates to him at the ſame time. The King having taken this Precaution on the Rhine Side, declar'd War againſt the Dutch, who were the firſt that Play'd the Springs of the Ausbourg Negotiation. And now Manifeſtoes were publiſh'd on both Sides; and all Germany declar'd War againſt France in March 1689: The King did the ſame with reſpect to Spain in April; and two Months after with regard to the Engliſh, then revolted againſt King James II. The Prince of Orange with thirteen or fourteen thouſand Land-men had made a Deſcent upon England in November laſt: His Expedition was well receiv'd by the Generality; and the King being deſerted by part of his Army, was oblig'd, for the Security of his Perſon, to retire into France, where his Queen, and the young Prince of Wales their Son, had landed a little before. The firſt Exploit on the French Side was Count Châteaurenaud's beating Admiral Herbert, tho' the firſt had but twelve Men of War againſt two and twenty commanded by the latter. Some few Days after the Duke de Noailles took Campredon in Catalonia; but the French met with a Rebuke at Walcourt in Flanders, where they loſt ſix hundred Men in attacking this paltry Town. On the German Side, the War was carry'd on with great Vigour. The Empire had never more formidable Armies on foot, nor were the reſpective Princes of that Body ever more heartily united againſt France. The ſmall Town of Keiſerwert was taken in four or five Days by the Confederate Army. Mentz attack'd by the Duke of Lorrain, and the Electors of Bavaria and Saxony, was defended with incredible Reſolution by the Marquiſs d'Uxelles, who capitulated eight and forty Days after the Trenches were open'd, upon a Bomb's happening to blow up the Remainder of his Powder. Bonn, where the brave Asfeld was Governor, was batter'd two Months with an hundred Pieces of Cannon by the Marquiſs of Brandenbourg; and notwithſtanding almoſt all the Houſes, Magazines, and Works were blown up and bomb'd into Rubbiſh, the Duke of Lorrain thought it proper to reinforce the Elector: And now Baron Asfeld having neither Ammunition, nor any Hopes of Succour, was oblig'd to capitulate, after the Town had been inveſted almoſt nine Weeks. The Allies, tho' they had loſt near twenty thouſand Men in theſe two Sieges, had their Expectations much rais'd after the Duke of Savoy had declar'd for them. Madam the Dauphineſs dy'd in 1690, which Year was not over favourable to the Confederates. To be ſomewhat particular; the Mareſchal and Duke of Luxembourg the French General in Flanders, had Orders ſent him from the King to attack the Enemy. This Command was executed July 1, 1690, near the Village Fleurus; where, after an obſtinate Fight, Luxembourg kill'd 'em ſix thouſand Men, wounded five thouſand and made almoſt eight thouſand Priſoners, amongſt which nine hundred were Officers, and took forty nine Pieces of Cannon, ninety two Standards, eight Pair of Kettledrums, and an hundred and fifty Waggons loaden with all ſorts of Ammunition. This Action was not without Loſs of Blood to the French: They had three thouſand kill'd and wounded, many of which were Perſons of Birth and Bravery. Ten Days after, Mr. de Tourville ſailing into the Chanel with the French Fleet, attack'd the Dutch and Engliſh then joyn'd, tho' they had both more Ships and more Men aboard than himſelf. The Fight lafted ſeven Hours, and the Dutch, who, for ſome time at leaſt, were in a manner left to ſhift for themſelves, fought with all the Conduct and Courage imaginable. However, one of their Men of War of ſixty Guns was taken, another burn'd, and a third ſunk; and twelve of their biggeſt Ships were ſo ill handled, that they were forc'd either to blow 'em up, or ſink 'em two Days after. During this time the Armies in Germany did little or nothing. But things were by no means thus inoffenſive in Piedmont, where Mr. Catinat, afterwards Mareſchal of France, gain'd a complete Victory over the Duke of Savoy at Staffarde. The Enemies Infantry, left naked by their Horſe, were almoſt all cut in pieces; and the French after having kill'd four thouſand upon the Spot, remain'd Maſters of the Field of Battel, took the Artillery, a great many Colours, and all the Ammunition. The French fought with the ſame Vigour, tho' not with the ſame Succeſs, in Ireland, where King James II. landed the Year before. The Prince of Orange ſail'd thither in June this Year, and three Weeks after his Arrival fought the French and Iriſh at the Boyne. The French did their Part very well, and ſo did the Iriſh Horſe; but the Foot of this Nation giving way, occaſion'd the Defeat of the whole Army. Mareſchal Schomberg, ſo famous formerly in the French Service, was kill'd in this Fight. The Proteſtant Religion profeſs'd by himſelf, and baniſh'd France, is thought to have made him an Enemy to that Crown. King James ſet Sail for France, and the Engliſh beſieg'd Limerick, imagining their late Victory would have carry'd the Conſternation thither; but Mr. de Boiſſelau defended the Town ſo well, that they were forc'd to raiſe the Siege. In Piedmont Mr. de Catinat took Suza. In America the Engliſh, who had been repuls'd at Quebec in Canada, made themſelves Maſters of St. Chriſtophers, one of the Antilly Iſlands. The Duke of Savoy, who was the laſt that declar'd for the Confederacy, was one of the firſt that ſuffer'd deeply for it. For being ouſted of all Savoy, and ſome Towns in Piedmont, he was farther unfortunate in the Beginning of the Year 1691, by the Loſs of Villafranca and Nice, which Mr. Catinat wreſted from him, while the King beſieg'd Mons in Flanders. This unexpected Enterprize broke up the Congreſs of the Confederates then held at the Hague: The Princes there met went off to their reſpective Countries and Poſts; and the Prince of Orange march'd with forty thouſand Men to the Relief of Mons: He came up as far as Hall, within ſix Leagues of the Place beſieg'd, but was forc'd to retire with the Diſſatisfaction of ſeeing it taken ſixteen Days after the Trenches were open'd. Two Months after the Marquiſs de Louvois, the great Miniſter of State, departed this Life. Notwithſtanding the taking of Mons, the French were threaten'd with a conſiderable Enterprize in Flanders; but all this dwindled to the taking of Beaumont, a ſmall unfortify'd Town, and where the Garriſon was no more than an hundred and fifty Men. The French Generals took Urgel in Catalonia, and Carmagnole in Piedmont, which was afterwards loſt. Montmelian, a Place of much more Strength and Importance, was carry'd five Months after, and better preſerv'd. Some time before this Mr. de Bouflers bombarded Liege, and the Count d'Eſtrees Barcelona, which were but ſlender Events in compariſon to what happen'd at Leuze in Flanders, where the Duke of Luxembourg, who had follow'd the Confederates with a Deſign to fall upon their Reârguard, ventur'd to attack ſeventy five Squadrons with only eight and twenty of his own. Here the King's Houſhold Troops diſtinguiſh'd themſelves, and the Enemy, who were routed, loſt fifteen hundred Men, and had three hundred taken Priſoners. This conſiderable Advantage was ſomewhat counterbalanc'd by the raiſing the Siege of Coni in Piedmont, but eſpecially by the Neceſſity of quitting Ireland, from whence Mr. de Chateaurenaud carry'd off all the French, together with fifteen thouſand Iriſh Forces.

The firſt Action in the Year 1692 was the moſt unlucky France had been engag'd in this laſt War. The French Fleet, conſiſting of four and twenty Men of War, was put to Sea to ſupport King James II, who had an Aſſurance given him that ſeveral Engliſh Land and Sea-Officers would declare for him. Upon the Strength of this Intelligence, which did not anſwer, the French Fleet bore down upon the Engliſh and Dutch who gave 'em a warm Entertainment Mr. de Tourville, notwithſtanding he was much overpower'd with Numbers, made a terrible Fire, and maintain'd the Fight without loſing a ſingle Veſſel, till Night drawing on he thought it beſt to ſheer off to ſome Place of Security: One and twenty of the largeſt Ships got into St. Malo; but fourteen others miſſing their Way in in the dark were thrown upon the Coaſt of Cherbourg and la Hogue: And now believing the preſerving them impracticable, they diſembarqued the Men and Cannon, after which the Engliſh boarded and burn'd 'em. The Marks of this Diſgrace were ſomewhat rubb'd out by the taking of Namur, attack'd by the King in Perſon. This Siege, one of the moſt famous in that Age, was puſh'd with extraordinary Vigour: The Strength of the Garriſon, and the continual Rains which hinder'd the carrying on the Approaches, ſerv'd only to draw the Conteſt to a little more length. In ſhort the Pace was taken June 5, and the Caſtle ſurrender'd the 30th of the ſame Month. The Prince of Orange joyn'd with the Elector of Bavaria, marching up at the Head of an hundred thouſand Men gave an Expectation of raiſing the Siege: But the Mareſchal de Luxembourg broke all his Meaſures, and encamping upon an Eminence within a League and a half of the River Mehaigne, waited two Months for the Enemy, who did not think it adviſeable to attack him. But they were more enterprizing at Steinkerke, where, to recover their Reputation, they came poudering upon the French Army, whoſe Infantry was not ſo ſtrong as theirs: However, their Charge was receiv'd with Reſolution, and the Event was more fortunate to the French than could well have been imagin'd. For after firing cloſe on both ſides for two Hours together, the French, encourag'd by their General the Duke of Luxembourg, and the Princes of the Blood, grounded their Firearms, and charging 'em Sword in Hand, cut part of 'em in pieces, and forc'd the reſt to ſhelter themſelves in a neighbouring Wood; the Prince of Orange, the Elector of Bavaria and Count Waldeck looking on, and doing their utmoſt to ſtop 'em from running away. The Slaughter was ſo much the greater, becauſe the Engliſh Regiments would not take Quarter, inſomuch that there were but thirteen hundred Priſoners taken, where near ten thouſand of the Enemy were kill'd upon the Spot: The Loſs on the French Side was three thouſand Men. To conclude this Campaign; the Marquiſs de Harcourt routed almoſt four thouſand Germans near Chiney, and the Marquiſs de Bouflers bombarded Charleroy. There was leſs Blood ſpilt in Germany: However, the Mareſchal de Lorges routed ſix thouſand Horſe at Phorzeim in the Dutchy of Wirtemberg; and in Piedmont, the Duke of Savoy, with an Army of thirty thouſand effective Men, only burn'd ſome paltry inſignificant Places in the Mountains of Dauphine, and took Ambrun and Gap, both unfortify'd Towns.

In the Year 1693 Dunkirk was threaten'd by the Enemy; but to prevent their Deſign, Furnes, which was a ſort of an Outwork to it, was carry'd by the Marquiſs de Bouflers in fifteen Hours, notwithſtanding there were four thouſand Engliſh to defend it. Soon after this, the French Officers, who had ſignaliz'd themſelves, had new Diſtinctions of Honour given 'em by the King, who after having made Choiſeul, Villeroy, Joyeuſe, Joyeuſe, Tourville, Noailles, Bouflers and Catinat Mareſchals, inſtituted the military Order of St. Lewis, with Eſtates ſettled, and which were given to rhe moſt deſerving. To proceed, the Germans forc'd the French to raiſe the Siege of Rhinfeld: But the Mareſchal de Lorges had his Revenge, who batter'd Heidelberg, and after having taken the Town by Storm, forc'd the Caſtle to ſurrender upon Articles. Roſes in Catalonia beſieg'd by Sea and Land was likewiſe taken in a Week. As to Buſineſs upon the Sea, the Engliſh were repuls'd at Martinico, which they attack'd with forty five Ships. They were ſtill worſe handled between Lagos and Cadiz near the Streights of Gibraltar, where the Mareſchal de Tourville waiting for the Turky Merchants and their Convoy, took, burned, and ſunk fourſcore Merchantmen, and three or four Men of War; a Loſs which, by their own Computation, amounted at leaſt to thirty Millions of Livres, and gave a conſiderable Blow to Trade, very much maim'd already by the French Privateers. There was not much Buſineſs done in Flanders this Campaigne, conſidering what might have been expected from two ſuch numerous Armies as thoſe of France and the Confederates. The Mareſchal de Luxembourg, who had Orders from the King to fight at what Hazard ſoever, made a Counterfeit Motion, as if he intended to attack the Retrenchments at Leige. This Feint deceiv'd the Prince of Orange, who march'd immediately to cover the Town: Upon this the French Mareſchal mov'd directly towards him, and in the Evening came up near his Camp at Naerwind. The Prince ſpent a whole Night in fortifying his Camp with a Paliſade, a Ditch, and a Parapet or Breaſt-work; upon which he planted an hundred Pieces of Cannon: But all this Precaution and Defence did not diſcourage the French from attempting to force the Confederates, tho' then no leſs than ſixty thouſand ſtrong. By the Advantage of the Ground the Enemy's Artillery did much more Execution than the French, which made 'em reſolv'd to advance cloſer and attack 'em Sword in Hand; in ſhort, they fought as it were in an Element of Fire, and charged through Piſtol, Muſquet, Mortar and Canon. Their main Attack was at the Villages on the Right, particularly at that of Naerwind, which was taken and retaken twice, not without great Slaughter. At laſt, the French remaining Maſters of the Place, ruſh'd into the Plain, notwithſtanding the Reſiſtance made by the Engliſh Foot: In ſhort, they routed the Confederate Army, having firſt broken their Horſe and puſh'd 'em into the Ghete, where many of 'em were drown'd. The Prince of Orange, and the Duke of Bavaria were forc'd to give way to the Torrent, and go off from the Field of Battel. And here the French took two thouſand Priſoners, ſeventy ſix Pieces of Cannon, eight Mortars, and a great many Colours, Stands of Arms and Equipages. The Number of thoſe ſlain and drown'd of the Confederate Side was above twelve thouſand; and the French had three thouſand kill'd, and four thouſand wounded. This Victory ſecur'd the French Lines, where the Duke of Wirtemberg was ready to break in: But this Defeat at Naerwind or Landen oblig'd him to give over that Enterprize, and joyn the main Army. The Advantage the French gain'd at Marſaille in Piedmont coſt 'em leſs Blood, tho' the Victory was not leſs complete. The Duke of Savoy, who projected the taking Pignerol, was battering Fort St. Bridgette, which cover'd this Town, when he receiv'd Advice that Mareſchal Catinat was come up into the Plain of Marſaille: Upon this he rais'd the Siege, march'd ſtraight towards him, and perceiv'd him advancing to give him Battel. The Conteſt was doubtful for ſome time, the Duke's Army rallying ſeveral times, notwithſtanding the French ran through 'em at the firſt Shock: At laſt, their Horſe were broken, and there was nothing but Rout and Slaughter, till they came under the Walls of Turin: Beſides an hundred Colours and four Pieces of Cannon, the Enemy loſt between eight and nine thouſand Men, and had two thouſand taken Priſoners; whereas in the French Army the kill'd and wounded amounted to no more than fifteen hundred. This Battel was fought October 4, and the 11th of November following Charleroy in Flanders was taken by the Mareſchal de Villeroy. And thus this Year ended, during which the French Court came to an Accommodation with the See of Rome and made the French Clergy renounce, in a great meaſure, what had paſs'd at St. Germain at their Aſſembly in 1682. The next Year 1694 remarkable for a Scarcity of Proviſions in France, was ſpent moſtly by the Confederates in bombarding Diepe, Havre, Calais, and other Places, tho' without much Effect. The War was carry'd on more vigorouſly in Catalonia, where the Mareſchal de Noailles, who commanded the French Army, attack'd the Spaniards entrench'd upon the Bank of the Ter. The French paſs'd the River in the Face of the Enemy, drove 'em from their Retrenchments, forc'd 'em to Battel, where they had four thouſand kill'd, and three thouſand made Priſoners. The Conſequences of this Victory were the taking of Palamos, Girone, and Caſtelfolit, all which fell into the French Hands this Campaign. The Deſign, which the Confederates had upon Dunkirk, miſcarried by the Dauphin's coming up unexpectedly, and covering the Town: For this Purpoſe, he made his Army march almoſt four and forty Leagues in leſs than four Days. Upon the unlook'd for Appearance of this Prince the Confederates retir'd, and contented themſelves with the taking Huy, which, during the whole War, had never been in a Condition to reſiſt an Army which kept the Field in the Neighbourhood.

The Death of the Duke of Luxembourg, which happen'd January 4, 1695 (and here I deſire the Reader once for all to obſerve, that the Year in this Article is reckon'd from January 1, and the Days of the Month are new Style) the Death I ſay of the Mareſchal de Luxembourg made the Confederates expect the War would go on with leſs Vigour in Flanders; but this did not hinder the French from drawing new Lines from the Lys to the Scheld, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition made by the Duke of Bavaria, who came up too late with twenty thouſand Men. In Italy, Cazal, beſieg'd by the Duke of Savoy, made a vigorous Defence, and ſuffer'd little or nothing: However the Italian Princes and States, whoſe Intereſt it was to prevent this Place falling into the Emperor or King of Spain's Hands, brought on a Treaty, in which the French King agreed the Town ſhould be deliver'd to the Duke of Mantua, upon Condition his Majeſty ſhould be reimburs'd the Expences he was out in the Fortifications, and that the Works ſhould be levell'd, which were executed accordingly. This Year the Confederates, tho' without much Succeſs, bombarded St. Malo, Calais, and Dunkirk, but the Revenge the French King took was a more ſure and ſenſible Blow; for the Mareſchal de Villeroy having receiv'd Orders to bombard Bruſſels, executed 'em to Purpoſe, whilſt five and twenty thouſand of the Enemy look'd on, being then encamp'd under the Walls of the Town. The Bombs made a frightful Havock, whole Streets were burn'd, the Town-Hall and a great many other publick Buildings and Palaces deſtroy'd, and the whole Town almoſt buried in Rubbiſh. At this time, the Prince of Orange preſs'd the Siege of Namur very warmly, defended by a ſtrong Garriſon, commanded by Mareſchal Bouflers and Count Giſcard. The Beſiegers had a formidable Army, and thunder'd Night and Day from their Batteries with an hundred and thirty Cannon and eighty Mortars. However, notwithſtanding all this Force and Fury, the Beſieg'd made a brave and obſtinate Defence. The Town held out four and twenty Days Siege, ſtood twice ſtorming, and the Outworks being ruin'd, 'twas by no means thought adviſeable to venture a third Attack. The Caſtle was likewiſe forc'd to ſurrender, tho' not till more than a Month after, when the Works had been ſo batter'd by the Bombs, that there was nothing but Heaps of Stones left. The Mareſchal de Villeroy had omitted nothing that might contribute to raiſe the Siege, for after the bombarding of Bruſſels, he endeavour'd, tho' without Effect, to draw Prince Vaudemont to a Battel. Villeroy had taken Dixmude in four and twenty Hours, and afterwards Deynſe, where between eight and nine thouſand regular Troops were made Priſoners. He had likewiſe himſelf examin'd the Woods, the Defilez, and the Moraſſes within which the Prince of Orange, who cover'd the Siege, was encamp'd: In ſhort, he found the Beſiegers could not be attack'd without the apparent Loſs of his Army. About this time the Confederates ſuffer'd pretty much by Sea, where three French Privateers took Part of the Engliſh Eaſt-India Fleet very richly laden.

A very conſiderable Enterprize, continues the French Supplementer, had diſtinguiſh'd the Beginning of the Year 1696, if contrary Winds had not hinder'd the Execution. King James II. inform'd by his Friends how much the Engliſh were diſſatisfy'd under the Revolution, was ready to make a Deſcent with ſixteen thouſand veteran Troops aſſign'd him by the French King. But bad Weather kept him in the Harbour, and gave the Prince of Orange time to diſcover and prevent the Attempt. This Prince having ſettled his Affairs in England, ſail'd for Holland, and thence march'd into Flanders, where he found the French King's Army in the Field. There was little done of either Side, the French Generals contenting themſelves to force the Enemy to ſubſiſt their Troops at Home, and ruin their own Country. The Mareſchal de Choiſeul, who had the chief Command of the French Forces in Germany, and the Duke de Vendome, General in Catalonia, manag'd much the ſame Way: But in Italy the Duke of Savoy, after the Demolition of Cazal, turn'd his Thoughts to Peace, and concluding a Treaty with the French King had his Country, conquer'd from him, reſtor'd. And here 'twas agreed that the Duke of Burgundy ſhould marry the Princeſs Mary Adelaide, Daughter to this Duke by a Princeſs who was the French King's Neice. The Duke of Savoy had promis'd to prevail with the Confederates for a Neutrality in Italy: But they refuſing to comply, the Duke joyn'd the French Army, and with Mareſchal Catinat inveſted Valence in the Milaneſe. The Place, after having been batter'd ſome time, and the Works being carry'd on, was in no Condition to hold out: But before 'twas taken the Beſiegers receiv'd Advice that the Emperor and King of Spain had at laſt accepted the Neutrality, and engag'd to draw off the German Troops out of Italy, upon Condition that the French King ſhould countermarch his own into France. The Princeſs of Savoy came into France, and was receiv'd by the King at Fountainebleau October 6. This Treaty with Savoy being a Sort of Introduction to a general Peace, was not a little ſerviceable to France: The Confederates were ſenſible of the Advantage, and the vaſt Armies the French King ſent into the Field in 1697, brought 'em to a nearer Diſpoſition for an Accommodation: And thus, when the War went on with a vigorous Appearance, Plenipotentiaries met at Delf and the Hague, and held their Conferences at the Caſtle of Ryſwick. In the mean time Mareſchal Catinat, who had come up with his Army near Germany, made a Countermarch, and turn'd ſhort upon Aeth in Flanders, and beſieg'd it. The Siege was cover'd by Mareſchal Villeroy on one Side, and Mareſchal de Boufflers on the other. The Prince of Orange and the Elector of Bavaria, who came up to raiſe the Siege, thought fit to wave the Attempt, and ſee it taken. After this Siege, there was little or nothing done this Campaign, each Side keeping themſelves upon the defenſive, and waiting the Iſſue of the Conferences. In the mean time the Duke of Vendoſme preſſing the Advantages already gain'd in Catalonia, came up to Barcelona, and had now beſieg'd it about two Months. All Europe ſtood at gaze, which Way the Siege would terminate; it being one of the moſt remarkable Attempts of this Kind, which had been undertaken a long time: For the Garriſon, conſiſting of eleven thouſand regular Troops and four thouſand Militia, made an incomparable Defence, diſputed the Ground by Inches, and retook the Works which had been loſt ſeveral times. The French Army but thirty thouſand at firſt, was reinforced by nine or ten thouſand of the Militia of Languedoc, and was likewiſe ſupported by the French Fleet, which, under the Command of the Count d'Eſtrees, block'd up the Harbour of Barcelona. The Beſieg'd at laſt being reduc'd to great Extremities, the Viceroy of Catalonia, who ſcour'd the Field with two or three Detachments, reſolv'd to attack the Beſiegers Lines: But the Duke of Vendoſme broke the Spaniſh Meaſures; for receiving Advice by a Spy of what was intended, he mov'd before Day, and fell upon the Viceroy's Camp ſo unexpectedly, that this General had much ado to get off in his Shirt. The French cut thoſe in pieces who made Reſiſtance, and got a conſiderable Booty. Farther, the Count d'Uſſon diſlodg'd another Body of Spaniſh Troops, who had poſted themſelves upon the Hills: However, theſe Advantages did not ſink the Courage of the Beſieg'd: For about a Week after, when a Breach had been made in two Baſtions, they received the Aſſault with incredible Bravery. At laſt, perceiving the keeping the Place was impracticable, they capitulated upon the 10th of Auguſt, and had very honourable Conditions. This Siege coſt the Spaniards ſix thouſand Men, and the French four thouſand; and the Duke of Vendoſme on one Side, and Prince Heſſe-Darmſtadt on the other, who commanded the Garriſon, came off with great Reputation. The Joy for this Succeſs of the Beſiegers was encreas'd by the taking of Carthagena in America, which News was brought to the French Court at the ſame time. Mr. de Pointis, who undertook this Expedition, ſet Sail with ſeven Men of War, three Frigats, two Pinks, and a Bomb Galliot: He was likewiſe reinforc'd at St. Domingo with fifteen hundred Buccaneers, who did extraordinary Service in attacking the Forts of this Town: One of theſe was taken by Storm, and the other had been loſt the ſame Way, if the Garriſon had not capitulated. The Plunder taken at Carthagena amounted to more than nine Millions of Livres in Coin and Ingots, beſides a Million in Jewels, Gold-Plate, and above an hundred Braſs Cannon.

Theſe Advantages being ſomewhat more than was look'd for, the Confederates preſs'd heartily for concluding the Peace: They were now pretty much tir'd with the Decay of Trade, and the other ill Conſequences of the War. As for the French, they never appear'd in ſo proſperous a Condition: They had three hundred and fifty thouſand Foot, and ſeventy thouſand Horſe upon the Muſter-Roll, without reckoning the Marines. However, the French King ſtop'd the Progreſs of his Conqueſts for the Repoſe of Chriſtendom, and conſented to a general Peace. The Treaty was ſign'd at Ryſwick with Spain, England and Holland September 2, 1697; and ſix Weeks after with the Emperor and Empire. Strasbourg, which occaſion'd this Delay in Germany, was yielded to the French King, with the Territory belonging to it. The Rhine was to be the Barrier between France and Germany. The French King kept what he was ſeiz'd of on this Side the River, and reſtor'd what he had conquer'd beyond. The Elector of Treves was repoſſeſs'd of his Capital, and the Duke of Lorrain, who afterwards married the Duke of Orleans's Daughter, had his Country return'd him. At this Treaty the French King rais'd his Style for the Engliſh Revolution, and own'd William King of England, whom he had all along hitherto call'd the Prince of Orange; which is the Language I have tranſlated from the French Supplementer printed in Holland. As for the Spaniards, they recover'd what had been taken from them ſince the Treaty of Nimeguen, which almoſt through every Article ſerv'd for a Regulator of that at Ryſwick.

Thus a Period was put to this War, the Obſtinacy and Length of which Conteſt ſerv'd only, as the Paris Narrative goes on, to throw new Luſtre upon the French King, and diſcover him impregnable againſt the Confederacy. Some of the Allies, diſſatisfied with the Peace which they went into unwillingly, made uſe of this Interval of Quiet to form new Deſigns, which afterwards broke out in the Conteſt for the Crown of Spain. The French King in the mean time was wholly taken up in making his ſubjects Senſible of the publick Tranquillity. Aſace was the firſt Province, which felt the Effect of this Prince's Generoſity. Here he leſſen'd the Burthen of the Taxes which the War had before made neceſſary: And here upon the Bank of the Rhine, over againſt Old Briſac, he built New Briſac, and granted the Burghers large Privileges. October 13, 1698 the Marriage between Leopold-Joſeph, Duke of Bar and Lorrain, with Elizabeth Charlotte of Orleans, Daughter to Philip of France Duke of Orleans, was ſolemniz'd at Fountainebleau. She was attended with a great Retinue into Lorrain, where ſhe was receiv'd with a ſuitable Regard. An Ambaſſador from the the King of Morocco arriv'd in France the Year following, and had his Audience of Leave without obtaining what he came for. Some Months forward there was a Change in the French Miniſtry; for Mr. Pontchartrain was made Chancellor of France upon the Death of Mr. Boucherat, and Mr. Chamillart Intendant of the Finances (and who was afterwards Secretary of State) was preferr'd to the Place of Comptroller General. The Beginning of the Year 1700 was pretty barren of Buſineſs: But the Death of Charles II. King of Spain, which happen'd the firſt of November following, gave Occaſion to a Conteſt in which all Europe has been concern'd. This Prince, as the French Gentleman reports, conſulting Conſcience, Equity, and the Welfare of his Subjects, more than Humour and cuſtomary Averſion, by his laſt Will and Teſtament deviſed the Crown of Spain to Philip of France Duke of Anjou, and ſecond Son to the Dauphin; and in caſe he dy'd without Iſſue, to Charles Duke of Berry his Brother; and this Line failing to Archduke Charles, Son of the Emperor Leopold; and upon a Failure here, to the Duke of Savoy. Soon after this Diſpoſition, the French King receiv'd Advice of it; and the Regency of Spain ſent the Marquiſs de Caſtel dos Rios Ambaſſador to Verſailles, to entreat his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty to give 'em the Duke of Anjou for their King, and accept the Nomination made by Charles II. This Requeſt being without Difficulty granted by the French King, the Duke of Anjou was immediately proclaim'd by the Name of Philip V. A Month after, this Prince ſet forward to take Poſſeſſion of his Dominions. He was convey'd to the Frontiers by his Brothers the Duke of Burgundy and Berry; and being magnificently entertain'd by all the Towns of France in his Paſſage, he came to Madrid, and made his publick Entry there April 14, 1701; while the Spaniards were entertain'd with the Satisfaction of an accompliſh'd Prince, and flattering themſelves with ſeeing Spain reſtor'd to her ancient Luſtre, the Ambition of ſome Potentates of Europe, who ſeem'd to grudge 'em their Happineſs, began to trouble the Water, and apply to practiſing and Intrigues. The Emperor, who thought himſelf diſappointed of the Spaniſh Dominions; and too weak to conteſt the Point with France and Spain, drew moſt of the Princes of the Empire into the Quarrel, but could not prevail with the Electors of Bavaria and Cologne. And waiting till Opportunity ſhould come forward in other Places, he order'd the March of his Army into Italy, under the Command of Prince Eugene of Savoy; which oblig'd the French King to ſend Forces againſt him: And here he might have ſurpriz'd the German Troops in the Trentin, before they had any conſiderable Numbers drawn together: But his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty being reſolv'd not to break in upon the Treaty of Ryſwick, ſuffer'd his Enemies to be the Aggreſſors, and to loſt the Advantage of taking 'em unprovided. Prince Eu ene hoping to be receiv'd in ſome Towns of the Milaneſe, was advanc'd as far as the Oglio. The French Army, commanded by the Duke of Savoy and the Mareſchals Villeroy and Catinat, paſs'd this River, and came up to the Enemy with a Reſolution to fight 'em. The Germans were entrench'd in the Village Chiari belonging to the Venetians, and the French Detachment commanded upon the Attack, were forc'd to retire, after having ſtood two Hours againſt a terrible Fire of Muſquets and Cannon. About this time the Death of James II, King of England, happen'd, and ſome Months before, Philip Duke of Orleans, Lewis the Great's only Brother, departed this Life. Soon after a Conſpiracy was diſcover'd at Naples for aſſaſſinating the Viceroy, and engaging the whole Kingdom in a Revolt to the Emperor. The Miniſters of this Prince, who form'd and carry'd on the Deſign, had the Mortification to ſee it ſtrangled in the Birth. The Rebels were ſcatter'd, and their Chiefs forc'd to fly for it: However ſome of 'em were taken and beheaded. The Dutch in the mean time practis'd by the Emperor, and reſolving to make ſomething of the Diſturbances in Naples and elſewhere, pretended themſelves alarm'd, for a Colour to demand farther Securities: And having a cloſe Correſpondence with England, they apply'd to the Parliament Houſes for Aſſiſtance; but at firſt could not procure ſufficient Supplies to declare themſelves openly. In the mean time Spain and France were not altogether unactive: Being reſolv'd to defend themſelves and not to attack, they drew a conſiderable Army together in Flanders, made a League offenſive and defenſive with the Portugueſe, who afterwards ſunk to a Neutrality. However, there was nothing deciſive done either in the Low Countries, or the Chanel, where the Engliſh and Dutch Fleets, rigg'd out at a Millions Expence, came into their Ports without attempting any thing. Five and twenty of their Ships, which had gone cruiſing to meet with the Fleet from New Spain, were forc'd to return to Spithead without doing any thing, but ſuffering conſiderably by a Storm in the Voyage. Part of the French Fleet had better Succeſs, for they carry'd a great deal of Ammunition and Artillery to Cadiz and other Places in Andaluſia, which were threaten'd. And thus all the Paces of the Enemy ſeem'd to make for new Deſigns to be executed in the Year 1702; and to apply to Negotiations, eſpecially through all the Empire, for ſtrengthening their Alliance, and putting it into a Condition to act. In Italy the War continued notwithſtanding the Rigour of the Seaſon. The Germans, who had been receiv'd into Berſello and Mirandola, had block'd up Mantua, where the Garriſon harraſs'd them with frequent Sallies. They believ'd they ſhould quickly have been able to penetrate as far as Milan, upon the Confidence of ſome Intelligence they had in Cremona, where Mareſchal Villeroy was quarter'd. In ſhort, the laſt of January in the Night, being convey'd into the Town by an Aqueduct, they ſeiz'd a Gate, through which they march'd above ſix thouſand Horſe and Foot without Noiſe. Theſe Troops made themſelves Maſters of the moſt conſiderable Poſts, and at firſt kill'd all the French that came in their Way. Mareſchal Villeroy, who came out of his Lodgings to examine into the Tumults in the Streets, was taken Priſoner. Part of the Garriſon, awaken'd with the Noiſe, ſeiz'd their Arms with half their Cloaths on; whereas another Part were beſet in their Houſes where they were aſleep: Thoſe who were at Liberty ran to the Ramparts and the Eſplanade of the Caſtle; and notwithſtanding they were much inferior in Numbers, drove the Enemy from Poſt to Poſt with incredible Bravery, the Officers doing the Part of Soldiers, and the Soldiers, divided into Plottons, doing the Buſineſs of Officers themſelves, where they found no Body to head 'em. During this Action Prince Thomas of Vaudemont was coming with a Body of ten thouſand to Cremona; but the Count de Revel breaking the Bridge over the Po, where Prince Thomas was to paſs, ſtop'd his March, and preſerv'd the Town. And now, the French Troops animated by the Succeſs their Reſolution had given 'em, broke the Enemy, and forc'd 'em to retire, after the Fight had laſted from Break of Day to two Hours within Night; an Action conſidering all Circumſtances hardly to be paralel'd in Hiſtory. And now, the Engliſh having form'd an Alliance, the Prince then at the Helm there, departed this Life March 19, upon which the Princeſs Ann of Denmark ſucceeded him, who following the Steps of her Predeceſſor held firm to the Alliance concluded between that Prince, the Emperor, and the Dutch. Theſe laſt begun the Acts of Hoſtility near Bonn and Antwerp, pretending only to act as the Emperor's Auxiliaries: But this Colour would not paſs upon the French King, who order'd his Troops to fall upon 'em. During this Interval they beſieg'd the ſmall Town of Keiſerwert, which coſt 'em a great many Men, being incomparably defended by the Marquiſs de Blainville, who was the Governor. What they attempted in Flanders was ſtill more unſucceſsful: They miſcarry'd at Namur, which they thought to have ſeiz'd by Treachery; and after having been kept at Bay a great while by the Duke of Burgundy's Army, they were puſh'd at laſt, and forc'd to a diſhonourable Retreat under the Cannon, and within the Retrenchments of Nimeguen, where they ſhelter'd themſelves from an entire Defeat. The reſt of the Campaign their main Army ſeem'd to avoid a Battel, and kept on the defenſive, whilſt another Body of their Troops beſieg'd the ſmall Towns of Venlo, Stevenſwert and Ruremonde, and took 'em. The Duke of Burgundy had left the Army when the Enemy attack'd the Citadel and Monaſtery of Liege, which being ſlenderly for-tify'd, and overpower'd by Numbers, were loſt. Upon the Upper Rhine Prince Lewis of Baden open'd the Campaign with the Siege of Landau, where the Sieur de Melac, a Lieutenant-General, was Governor. The Garriſon, after having defended themſelves vigorouſly for three Months, were oblig'd to ſurrender to the King of the Romans. This Loſs, which coſt the Enemy very dear, was balanc'd by the Neutrality of Cologne, by conveying French Troops into Bonne, Treves, Traerbach, and by ſettling Winter-Quarters in the Palatinate upon the Rhine. To proceed, the Marquiſs de Villars, who commanded the Army upon the Rhine; after having thrown over a Bridge at Hunningen, and paſs'd the River in Sight of the Enemy, who endeavour'd to ſtop his Paſſage, ſeiz'd Newbourg, and gain'd a compleate Victory at Fridlinguen againſt Prince Lewis of Baden, who had three thouſand Men kill'd upon the Spot, and a great many Priſoners taken. This Victory procur'd the Marquiſs de Villars a Mareſchal's Staff, who after having put Newbourg in a Poſture of Defence, repaſs'd the Rhine, and prevented Prince Lewis of Baden from attempting any thing. This Progreſs of the French Arms gave the greater Alarm to the Emperor, upon the ſcore that the Elector of Bavaria, diſconcerted by the Uſage his Brother, the Elector of Cologne had met with from the Confederates, and willing to prevent the Deſigns laid againſt himſelf, ſeiz'd the Towns of Ulm, Kirchberg, Bibrach, Memmingen, Kempten and Crunsbourg, conſiderable Poſts for covering Bavaria, from Tirol to the Danube.

The Blockade of Mantua continued, and gave occaſion to ſeveral Skirmiſhes, where the Germans had frequently the worſt. The King of Spain going aboard the French Fleet at Barcelona arriv'd at Naples in April, and being ſaluted there with great Acclamations and Regard, went off privately in a few Days to put himſelf at the Head of the Army in Italy. The Duke of Vendoſme, who commanded the Army there, immediately upon his coming into Italy, drew the Troops together, paſs'd the Po, drove the Enemy from their Poſts, and made 'em quit what they had ſeiz'd in the Territories of Parma, Placentia, and along the Po. Soon after, when the Spring came on, and the Roads were paſſable, this General croſs'd the Oglio, and came forward through the Venetian Dominions as far as Uſtiano, which the Germans then quitted. Afterwards he took Caneto, paſs'd the Chieſa, ſeiz'd Caſtel-Giufre, rais'd the Blockade of Mantua, beſieg'd Caſtiglione-delle-Stivere, which having ſurrender'd, he forc'd the Poſts of Bozzole, Viadana, &c. and open'd a Communication between Mantua and Cremona. Affairs in Italy were in this Situation, when News was brought that the King of Spain ſailing from Naples to Final, and from thence travelling to Milan, was at laſt come up to Cremona. He joyn'd the Army at Cazal-Maggiore, and after having laid Bridges over the Po, the Taro, the Lenza, and the Croſtolo, he routed the Enemy at Santa-Vittoria. The Conſequence of gaining this Battel brought in the Towns of Reggio and Modena, and rais'd the Blockade of Mantua entirely, which till that time was fac'd by the Enemy on one Side. The French and Spaniards decamp'd from Teſta, and march'd to Luzzara, whither the Enemy intending to draw off their Magazines, had ſent a Detachment, whoſe Way back being intercepted, they were forc'd to lie cloſe there. Prince Eugene reſolving to prevent the Deſign the French had to throw a Bridge for Communication over the Po, advanc'd with his whole Army upon four Columns, before the French and Spaniards could draw up their Forces, and fell furiouſly on their left Wing. From five in the Evening till ten, the Germans made a terrible Fire from their Cannon and Muſquets, which the French Infantry bore with extraordinary Courage; notwithſtanding they were able to form but one Line, and which could not be ſupported by the reſt of the Army, upon the ſcore of the Diſadvantage of the Ground. At laſt, the Night put an End to the Action, in which Prince Eugene loſt about five thouſand, and the French and Spaniards two thouſand: The latter kept the Field of Battel, and the next Day Luzzara was ſummon'd by the King of Spain, and ſurrender'd at Diſcretion: Guaſtalla had the ſame Fortune ſome few Days after. And now, the King of Spain took the Road for Milan, in order to return to Spain; and the Army was put into Winter-Quarters after they had taken Borgo-Forte by Storm.

While the War was puſh'd in Italy, the Engliſh Fleet with fifteen thouſand Soldiers on board, commanded by the Duke of Ormond, appear'd on the Coaſt of Andaluſia near Cadiz, the Prince of Darmſtadt having aſſur'd 'em that great Numbers of Spaniards would declare for 'em. In the mean time they ſummon'd, tho' to no Effect, Don Brancacio Governor of Cadiz, and the Marquiſs of Villadarias, who commanded the Forces upon the Coaſt, and mov'd every where with Fernand de Nugnez to prevent the ill Conſequences of the Deſcent, which was made near Port St. Mary's. The Engliſh attack'd Fort Matagorda, where they loſt five or ſix hundred Men, had three hundred made Priſoners, and five hundred deſerted. After new Attempts by Sea and Land, which prov'd no more fortunate than the firſt, they were forc'd to reimbark, leaving great Numbers of their Dead behind 'em, part of their Powder, and a great many Tools for breaking Ground. This Miſcarriage was very ill News in England, from whence new Convoys were diſpatch'd to the Duke of Ormond, with Orders to try to ſurpriſe the Plate-Fleet, which the Count de Chateaurenaud, Vice-Admiral of France, had brought from Vera Cruz to Vigo in Gallicia. 'Twas impracticable for him to put in at Cadiz according to Cuſtom, becauſe the Enemy was plying thereabouts; and on the other Side he was afraid to awaken the Spaniards Jealouſy in caſe he had ſet Sail for ſome Port of France, where the Ships would have been better ſecur'd. The Count de Chateaurenaud, foreſeeing what might happen, unladed the Silver in the firſt Place, which was carry'd thirty Leagues up into the Country; planted an hundred and fifty Cannon upon Batteries, made a Bomb to bar the Enemy's Entry into the Haven of Redonnelle, and drew up his Squadron of fifteen Ships in a curve Line, to make 'em bear the better againſt the Enemy. The Event prov'd this Precaution no more than neceſſary; for ſome few Days after, the Engliſh Fleet, conſiſting of an hundred and twenty Sail, appear'd before Vigo, and having a favourable Wind bore boldly down upon Chateaurenaud's Ships without being able to break the Bomb. Upon the Miſcarriage of this firſt Attempt, they landed five thouſand Men two Leagues from thence, and coming behind the Spaniards Retrenchments, which being defended only by the Country Militia, they quickly routed 'em, and carry'd their Point: From hence they march'd up to the Batteries, which after being thrice repuls'd they ſeiz'd, and at laſt broke the Bomb. Upon this Chateaurenaud order'd the Captains of the Men of War and Galleons to ſet Fire to their Ships: This Order could not be executed, excepting upon ſix of the French Ships; ſome of the reſt were ſtranded, and ſix fell into the Hands of the Engliſh. According to all Appearance, continues the French Supplementer, they might have taken Vigo, and puſh'd their Conqueſts farther up the Country; but the Reſiſtance they met with made 'em think it the moſt adviſeable to ſet Sail for England, which they did, without bringing the American Silver Home with 'em, which was, it may be, the main Deſign of this Expedition. And thus an End was put to the Year 1702, the laſt Action of which was the taking of Governolo, a conſiderable Poſt upon the Mincio in Italy.

In the Beginning of the next Year, the French King made the following Officers Mareſchals, viz. the Marquiſs de Chamilly, the Count d'Eſtrees, the Count de Chateaurenaud, the Count de Vauban, the Count de Roſen, the Marquiſs d'Uxelles, the Count de Teſſe, the Count de Montrevel, the Count de Tallard, and the Duke of Harcourt. In the mean time the Elector of Bavaria, notwithſtanding the Rigour of the Seaſon, took the Field, and made himſelf Maſter of Newbourg, the Capital of the Palatinate upon the Rhine. On the other Side the Mareſchal de Villars, drawing ſud denly out of his Winter-Quarters, paſs'd the Rhine near Hunninguen, mov'd down the Side of the River, and after having taken all the Forts built by Prince Lewis of Baden, and the Imperial Towns of Offenbourg, Gengenbach and Zell, ſat down before Kell, while Mareſchal Tallard rais'd the Siege of Traerbach. The taking of Kell drew Kenſingen and the Caſtles of Limpourg, pourg, Sponech, and Burken along with it; after which the Troops refreſh'd themſelves a little, in order to joyn the Duke of Bavaria, who had lately routed the Imperialiſts near Soherffenberg, where they had four thouſand Men kill'd. Prince Lewis of Baden, to hinder the French and Bavarians from joyning, had been working two Months upon the Lines of Stolhoffen, five Leagues from Kell.

Mareſchal Villars perceiving it impracticable to force his Paſſage this Way, turn'd off to the Valley of Kintzig, forc'd the Poſts of Bibrach and Gengenbach, took the Caſtle of Haſlach, and ſo open'd himſelf a Paſſage through the Mountains to the Head of the Danube, where he joyn'd the Elector of Bavaria, who had defeated General Stirum in the Palatinate of Neubourg. This Prince having concerted Meaſures with Mareſchal Villars march'd for Tirol; and after having forc'd Kufſtein upon the Inn, which was reckon'd impregnable, he made himſelf Maſter of Inſpruch and all Tirol. In Italy the Duke of Vendoſme carry'd San-Benedetto, and July 27, 1703, Bercello ſurrender'd at Diſcretion, and was quite demoliſh'd. As ſoon as the Seaſon had drain'd the Country, and made the Ways practicable, the Duke of Vendoſme took the Field, intending to inveſt the Enemy, who were now ſhut up in the Neighbourhood of Oſtiglia; but a Dam of the Po being broken by the Enemy made this Project miſcarry by overflowing the Country; and gave the Germans an Opportunity of falling upon Lieutenant-General Albergotti, who was forc'd to quit Final in the Territory of Modena, taken by him ſome time before. But this did not hinder the Duke of Vendome from marching croſs the Mountains in the Trentin, taking ſeveral Caſtles reckon'd impregnable, and bombarding the City of Trent, The Dutch having threaten'd Bonn in Germany a good while, at laſt attack'd it, and took it in a Fortnight.

About the ſame time the French Army in Flanders, commanded by the Mareſchals Villeroy and Bouflers, began the Campaign by ſurprizing two Battalions of the Enemy in Tongres. The Remainder of the Summer was moſtly ſpent in Marches and Encampments; the Engliſh General ſeeming to make it his Buſineſs to avoid a Battel. Beſide the main Army, the French had two ſeparate Bodies in the Field, the one commanded by Prince Tſerclas de Tilly, the other by the Marquiſs de Bedmar and the Count de la Mothe Houdancourt, near Antwerp. On the other Side, the Engliſh and Dutch had two Detachments under General Coehorn, and Baron Obdam, who forc'd the Lines in the Country of Waes, and threaten'd thoſe before Antwerp. The Mareſchals Villeroy and Bouflers receiving Advice of what paſt, Bouflers mov'd with a Detachment of fifteen Squadrons of Dragoons, fifteen Squadrons of Horſe, and fifteen hundred Grenadiers, to put the Marquiſs de Bedmar in a Condition to fight Baron Obdam, who was come up as far as Eckeren. Theſe Troops joyning Bedmar the next Day, almoſt ſurrounded the Enemy, drove 'em from Poſt to Poſt, and forc'd 'em to break through on the Side of Orderen near the Bank of Lillo, where they found Shelter after having loſt four thouſand Men, a great many wounded, five hundred taken Priſoners, leaving ſix Pieces of Cannon behind 'em, four great Mortars, forty little ones, an hundred and fifty Waggon Load of Artillery, Tents, Baggage, Colours, &c. The Enemy were not more lucky upon the Sea: Their Fleet, rigg'd out at a vaſt Expence, hover'd two Months upon the Coaſts of Bretagne, where without being able to make a Deſcent, they were roughly handled by a Storm. During this Interval the Count de Coetlogon, who commanded five French Men of War, attack'd the ſame Number of Dutch, which were a Convoy to an hundred Sail: He fell upon 'em in the River of Lisbon, and took 'em all five.

The Confederates main Fleet putting again to Sea, cruiz'd to little Effect upon the Coaſts of France, Spain and Naples: And in this Expedition they loſt about five thouſand Men that dy'd of Sickneſs.

In Germany upon the Danube at Munderkingen the French defeated a Body of five thouſand of the Emperor's Horſe, and prevented their making a Bridge over the Danube. This Defeat open'd the Way to the Victory, which the ſame French Army gain'd at Hoc-ſtet September 20, under the Command of the Elector of Bavaria, and the Mareſchal Villars. Here four thouſand five hundred of the Enemy were kill'd, and above five thouſand made Priſoners: There were likewiſe thirty three Pieces of Cannon taken, forty three Standards and Colours, with all their Baggage.

The Duke of Burgundy, who commanded the King his Grandfather's Troops upon the Rhine, after ſeveral Marches and Countermarches to amuſe the Enemy, and ſurprize their Lines, ſet down before Old Briſac, and carry'd it in a Fortnight after breaking Ground. After this ſucceſsful Expedition he left the Command of the Army to Mareſchal Tallard, who mov'd to beſiege Landau, and in his March enclos'd a thouſand of the Enemy; of which Number two hundred ſcarcely eſcaping, the reſt were taken or kill'd. Towards the End of this Siege, the Prince of Heſſe came forward to ſuccour the Place; but Mareſchal Tallard marching againſt him gave him an entire Defeat November 15, kill'd him five thouſand Men, took four thouſand Priſoners, two and thirty Colours, ſix Standards, and thirty Pieces of Cannon: The Evening after this Battel the Town capitulated, and the Garriſon march'd out the 18th. On the other Side the Confederates took Huy, Limbourg, and Gueldres, Capital of the Province of Guelderland.

About this time the Emperor gave his Son Archduke Charles the Title of King of Spain: The Ceremony was perform'd at Vienna September 12. That which encourag'd the Emperor to give him this Diſtinction, was the Duke of Savoy's breaking with France, and ſigning a Treaty with his Imperial Majeſty: And beſides, the King of Portugal had lately declar'd for the Confederacy. The French King, who had been a good while acquainted with the Duke of Savoy's unfriendly Intentions, diſſembled his Notice of the Practice: But now he conceiv'd it prudential to check the Motion, and diſarm three thouſand of this Prince's Troops then ſerving in the French Army in Lombardy: And now the French made themſelves Maſters of Chambery and all Savoy, excepting Montmelian, which was block'd up. They likewiſe ſeiz'd the Country of Modena, to correct the Duke of Modena, who had lately own'd the Archduke for King of Spain.

All the Winter of the Year 1704 the Duke of Savoy was ſhut up in Piedmont. Towards the End of the laſt Year General Viſconti endeavour'd to reinforce his Highneſs with two thouſand Horſe, but the Duke of Vendoſme, intercepting him in his March, routed him, inſomuch that not above five hundred of his Men made their Way. This Misfortune made General Staremberg attempt the bringing up a more conſiderable Body. To this Purpoſe he paſs'd the Sechia: But the Duke of Vendoſme lay for him, routed and took above four thouſand Men, and carry'd off about a thouſand Waggons. In one of theſe Actions January 11, General Solari was kill'd in paſſing the Bormia. At laſt, Oſtiglia was quitted by the Imperialiſts, who blew up the Towers of Sarravalle, and retir'd to the Venetian Territories, where the Grand Prior of France, who commanded upon the Po, follow'd 'em, while the Duke his Brother took Verceil, where near ſix thouſand Men were made Priſoners of War; Ivrée and the Caſtles belonging to it had the ſame Fortune September 30; eleven Battalions were made Priſoners there; and the Duke de la Feuillade, after having taken Suza, ſeiz'd all the Valley of Aouſte, and by this means prevented the Swiſs joyning the Duke of Savoy.

On the Side of Bavaria Buſineſs began with a promiſing Aſpect. For the Enemy's Country being ſcour'd in January, had conſiderably alarm'd the Circles of Suabia and Franconia: The Elector, who had taken Ausbourg December 16, now ſeiz'd Paſſaw and Ens, and affrighted the Emperor at Vienna. Mareſchal Tallard march'd to the Elector in May with a Convoy of five hundred Waggons, twelve thouſand Foot, three thouſand Horſe, and a thouſand Officers for Recruits. This Convoy march'd happily enough under the Cannon of Fribourg, through the Valley of St. Peter and the Black Foreſt; and the Elector came to meet it as far as the Head of the Rhine. This ſtrong Reinforcement oblig'd the Enemy to quit Flanders, and move ſpeedily to the Emperor's Aſſiſtance. The Engliſh General of the Confederacy march'd into Germa- ny, and came up to the Danube, where Prince Lewis of Baden joyn'd him. Soon after, they attack'd the Retrenchments at Schellemberg near Donawert, and carry'd 'em July 2. They were defended only by five French and eleven Bavarian Battalions, who ſtood three Attacks, and then retreated, having loſt about fifteen hundred Men; the Enemy loſt ſix thouſand, had almoſt as many wounded, four General-Officers kill'd and Count Stirum, who dy'd a Week after of his Wounds. The Enemy's Superiority oblig'd the Elector to call for more Succours. And now Mareſchal Tallard march'd a ſecond time through the Mountains, while Mareſchal Villeroy mov'd from Flanders to obſerve Prince Eugene entrench'd within the Lines of Stolhoffen: But while Tallard halted before Willingen, which he could not carry, Prince Eugene ſeizing the Opportunity, ſlipt away, and joyn'd Prince Lewis of Baden and the Engliſh General. At laſt, Mareſchal Tallard joyn'd the Elector of Bavaria; and Auguſt 13 the unlucky Battel of Hocſtet was fought: The Right Wing of the French Army was commanded by Mareſchal Tallard, the Left Wing by Mareſchal Marſin, and the Body by the Elector of Bavaria. Marſin charg'd deep into the Enemy's Right, and had conſiderably the better: Tallard was not ſo lucky: The Confederates paſſing a Moraſſe, which was thought impracticable, charg'd the French Right very warmly, and made their Way to the Center: They had fifty Squadrons more than the French; twenty ſeven Battalions and four Regiments of Dragoons of theſe latter were intercepted in a Village, and forc'd to ſurrender. A little before this happen'd Mareſchal Tallard was taken Priſoner, and the Marquiſs de la Baume his Son mortally wounded by his Side: Twelve thouſand French and Bavarians were kill'd or wounded, and above ten thouſand taken Priſoners, with a conſiderable Number of Officers, and thirty Pieces of Cannon. The Victory, as the French Supplementer reports, coſt the Confederates ſixteen thouſand Men. The Elector of Bavaria retreated with the Debris, quitted his Country, repaſs'd the Rhine at Strasbourg, and went to his Government in Flanders. Two thouſand five hundred French, who ſtay'd at Ulm, were beſieg'd, and ſurrender'd upon honourable Terms. The Confederate Army paſſing the Rhine at Philipsbourg beſieg'd Landaw, defended by Lieutenant-General Laubanie: This brave Governor loſt both his Eyes in the Siege, and did not ſurrender till November 25, which was ſeven Weeks after the opening the Trenches. The Caſtle of Traerbach, beſieg'd much about the ſame time, held out four and thirty Days: And to heighten theſe Misfortunes, a Mortality happen'd amongſt the Horſes in Villeroy's Army. This Train of ill Succeſs was ſomewhat alleviated by reducing the Camiſars in Vivarais and Languedoc: From the Year 1702 a Rebellion had been rais'd in this Country by the Hugenots, encourag'd and ſupported by foreign Potentates: Theſe unfortunate People, animated by their pretended Prophets, committed a great deal of Ravage and Barbarity, eſpecially when they met with Churchmen. The Government try'd firſt to recover 'em by gentle Methods, and afterwards made uſe of the Expedient of Correction: But theſe Remedies not proving ſucceſsful, the King was forc'd to ſend regular Troops; who routed 'em in ſeveral Skirmiſhes; and in ſhort, they were quite finiſh'd in the Beginning of the Year 1705.

ny,

On the Side of Spain, King Philip V. put himſelf at the Head of his Army, reinforced with twenty Battalions, and as many Squadrons ſent him from France: He enter'd Portugal, and took a great many Places as ſhall be mention'd under that Article: And the French Fleet conſiſting of fifty Men of War, and four and twenty Gallies, commanded by the Count of Tholouſe, meeting off of Malaga the Confederate Fleet of ſixty eight Men of War and ſeveral Bomb Galliots, engag'd 'em Auguſt 24, and entertain'd 'em ſo warmly that they thought it adviſeable to ſheer off: And here one of their biggeſt Ships was blown up, and three thouſand Men kill'd: The French, who, as the Supplementer reports, came off beſt, had fifteen hundred Men kill'd and wounded

The Confederates bombarded Namur, but did leſs Damage than they receiv'd, the Cannon of the Town having kill'd 'em twelve hundred Men.

The Duke of Vendoſme ſat down before Verrue the latter End of October: The Duke of Savoy encamp'd at Creſcentin, preſerv'd a Communication with the Town: Thus the Siege was drawn out into Length, the French General being willing to looſe as few Men as was poſſible: At laſt, the Town and Caſtle yielded at Diſcretion. His next Enterprize was the Siege of Mirandola, which ſurrender'd May 11, 1705, the Garriſon being made Priſoners of War. The French likewiſe beſieg'd Chevas, which the Duke of Savoy was forc'd to abandon; notwithſtanding a Communication was kept open; and the Duke of Vendoſme advancing to meet Prince Eugene, who was now returned into Italy; this latter attack'd the French Army at Caſſano near the Adda Auguſt 16. Prince Eugene met with ſo vigorous an Oppoſition, that after a Fight of four Hours, he was forc'd to retreat with the Loſs of ſeven hundred kill'd, eighteen hundred taken Priſoners, and four thouſand wounded, of which himſelf was one: To be ſomewhat more particular; the Count de Linange, one of their Generals was kill'd; the Prince of Anhalt, who commanded the Brandenbourg Forces, was loſt; the Duke of Wirtemberg General of the Daniſh Troops, dy'd of his Wounds ſoon after the Battel, and ſo did General Bibrach, and Prince Joſeph the Duke of Lorrain's youngeſt Brother. The Victory coſt the French two thouſand five hundred kill'd and wounded.

In Germany the Confederacy threaten'd no leſs than the taking Thionville, Sar-Lovis, the Three Biſhopricks, and penetrating into Champaign with an Army of above an hundred thouſand Men: For this Purpoſe, they had laid up prodigious Stores at Treves. The French King ſent an Army not half ſo numerous againſt 'em, under the Command of the Mareſchal Villars, who poſted himſelf ſo advantagiouſly at Sirck near the Moſelle, that the Engliſh General, after having try'd every Way to force the Mareſchal's Camp, was oblig'd to go off June 18, and leave moſt of his Proviſions in Treves, which fell into the Hands of the French.

Afterwards Mareſchal Villars took ſeveral ſmall Caſtles garriſon'd by the Germans, and clear'd the Lines of Weiſſembourg. But being oblig'd to ſend off large Detachments for Flanders and Italy he kept Himſelf upon the Defenſive againſt Prince Lewis of Baden, who had paſs'd the Rhine with a numerous Army. However his Campaign was ſpent only in ſeveral Encampments, and Threatning Fort-Lovis with a Siege, which was cover'd by Mareſchal Villars. In ſhort; Prince Lewis atchiev'd nothing more than the taking Haguenau, which the Garriſon, commanded by the Marquiſs de Perry a Genoeſe, quitted in the Night, nine Days after the opening of the Trenches: It ſeems the Governor and the Garriſon thought it better to go off in this Manner, than to ſtay and be made Priſoners of War. The French King approv'd this Turn of Thought, tho' pretty much unpreſidented, and made the Governor a Lieutenant-General.

In Flanders, whilſt the Main Confederate Army was upon the Moſelle, the Elector of Bavaria, who commanded the French Army in conjunction with Mareſchal Villeroy, took Huy, and came in Sight of Leige: Upon This, the Dutch Sollicited the Engliſh General to countermarch into the Low Countries. This being done Huy was retaken and the Electour of Bavaria mov'd within his Lines to prevent the Enemy's making any Sieges. 'Tis true, the Confederate Army broke into the Lines at one Place, and cut off about ſeven hundred Men; but the French Army being encamp'd upon the Dyle, and the Confederate General attempting to paſs that River, met with a Repulſe in his Turn. However, afterwards he made a quick March towards Bruſſels, with a Deſign to miſlead the Elector of Bavaria and the French; but the Strategem not taking, he only fatigu'd his Troops, and loſt a great many Men by Deſertion. This Campaign of 1705 ended creditably enough in Flanders for the French: For they cover'd their principal Towns; and after driving the Enemy from their Camp at Herentals, they forc'd 'em to take up Winter-Quarters in their their own Country; after having ſurpriz'd four Battalions in Dieſt, and as many Squadrons of Dragoons, which made up the Loſs of four hundred and fifty Men which the French had met with in Lewe.

The Duke of Vendoſme, after the Victory of Caſſano, drove Prince Eugene of Savoy from Poſt to Poſt, and puſh'd him at laſt to the Foot of the Mountains, near the Lake di Garda; inſomuch that this General of the Imperialiſts found himſelf leſs forward in the Country, than at the opening of the Campaign. The Reduction of the Fortreſs Montmelian, after a long Blockade, ended the Year 1705. The Caſtle of Nice was forc'd to capitulate in the Year 1706. But this Campaign was not at all fortunate to the French in Flanders; for there they loſt the Battel of Ramilly May 23. This Loſs, continues the French Supplementer, was made up the next Year in Spain in the Battel at Almanza, where the Confederate Army was defeated. About the ſame time the German Lines at Stolhoffen were forc'd; and the Confederates attempting to beſiege Toulon by Sea and Land, were beaten off by the French Troops and the Country Militia. In the Year 1708 the Dauphin commanded in Flanders, and a Battel was fought near Oudenarde, where tho' the Advantage was ſomewhat doubtful, yet the French loſt Liſle at the End of the Campaign. In the Year 1709 the Battel of Malplaquet was by no means lucky for the French, neither were the following Campaigns more favourable till the Year 1712, in which the French Army, commanded by the Mareſchal Villars, after having taken Denain and Marchienne, forc'd Prince Eugene the Confederate General to raiſe the Siege of Landrecy: After this Advantage the French took Doway, Quênoy, and ſat down before Bouchain. At the ſame time a Suſpenſion of Arms was publiſh'd for four Months between France, England, and Spain; and the Plenipotentiaries of the reſpective Countries had a Conference for a general Peace, which April 12, 1713, was concluded at Utrecht between England, Portugal, the King of Pruſſia, the Duke of Savoy, and the States of Holland on one Part, and France and Spain on the other. But the Emperor refuſing to accept the Terms at Utrecht, the French King continu'd the War in Germany: And here the Mareſchal Villars beſieg'd Landau, and took it Auguſt 21, 1713.

The ſame Year the French Army, after having forc'd the German Lines at Roskopf, ſat down before Fribourg the Capital of Briſgaw, which after a vigorous Defence capitulated November 16, 1713. The Emperor and the Empire, after the other Confederates had left 'em, not finding themſelves ſtrong enough to carry the War on againſt France, reſolv'd to enter upon a Treaty: To this Purpoſe Prince Eugene of Savoy and Mareſchal Villeroy agreed upon a Suſpenſion of Arms, and met in Conference at Raſtadt: In ſhort, a Peace was concluded March 6, 1714; the Treaties of Weſtphalia, Nimeguen and Ryſwick being the Ground for regulating the Articles. The Rhine was made the Barrier between the Empire and France; Landau remain'd to the French King, and Old Briſac and Fribourg were return'd to the Emperor, and ſo was Fort Kiel. Hunninguen and ſeveral other Forts were to be demoliſh'd. The French King ſtipulated to reſtore the Members of the Empire every thing that belong'd to 'em by the Treaty of Ryſwick; and 'twas agreed to have a general Congreſs, as ſoon as might be, to treat with the German Princes and the Empire, for concluding a general Peace: This Congreſs was held at Baden in Swiſſerland, and the Peace ſign'd September 6, 1714. Two other conſiderable Occurrences happen'd in France this Year: The firſt is Pope Clement XI's Conſtitution, in which he condemns an hundred and one Propoſitions extracted from Father Queſnel's Moral Reflexions upon the New Teſtament. This Conſtitution had the French King's Approbation, and by his Order was laid before an Aſſembly of the French Clergy: The greateſt Part of the Biſhops comply'd, but the Cardinal de Noailles Archbiſhop of Paris, and ſome others, refus'd to receive it, at leaſt without ſome Reſtriction; neither is that Difference yet accommodated. The ſecond remarkable Occurrence is the French King's Declaration, regiſter'd in the Parliament of Paris, in which he declares his natural Sons capable of inheriting the Crown, in caſe the legitimate Branch happens to fail.

Lewis the Great dy'd in Auguſt 1715. By his Queen Maria Tereſa of Auſtria he had ſix Children; but none of 'em, except the Dauphin, the preſent King's Grandfather, living a Year, they need not be mention'd. Upon the whole Article, the Dutch Supplementer complains the French Reporter has made a partial Narrative and ſuppreſs'd ſome publick and conſiderable Advantages gain'd by the Confederates. Indeed the French Gentleman's Silence cannot be juſtify'd in the following Inſtances: For the Purpoſe, he ſays nothing of the raiſing the Siege of Turin, and the entire Defeat of the French Army which beſieg'd it; which forc'd the French to quit every thing in Italy, where they have never been able to ſet their Foot ſince. He takes no Notice of the raiſing the Siege of Barcelona, which Philip V. beſieg'd with all his Force: This croſs Event had endanger'd all his Dominions, if the Blow had been purſued home: He ſlips over the Victory gain'd upon the ſame Prince near Saragoſſa, in Conſequence of which the Confederates preſs'd up to Madrid, and held it ſome time. To conclude, he gives us nothing of the Confederates taking Aeth, Doway, Tournay, Bethune, Aire, Bouchain and Quênoy, and conquering almoſt all the Low Countries, Namur and Charleroy excepted.

LEWIS (Dauphin) born at the Caſtle at Fountainebleau November 1, 1661; he was made Generaliſſimo for Germany, and took Philipsbourg November 1, 1688. He forc'd Manheim and Frankendal to open their Gates; attended the King his Father at the Siege of Mons in 1691, and at the taking of Namur in 1692: He went with the King into Flanders in 1693; and then march'd at the Head of Part of the Army into Germany, and prevented Prince Lewis of Baden from attempting any thing. He dy'd of the Small Pox at his Caſtle of Meudon Auguſt 14. 1711, being forty nine Years of Age and nine Months. In January 1680 he marry'd Mary-Ann-Chriſtina-Victoria of Bavaria, Daughter to Ferdinand-Mary Elector and Duke of Bavaria, by whom he had Lewis Duke of Burgundy, afterwards Dauphin, Philip Duke of Anjou, now King of Spain, and Charles Duke of Berry born in 1686, and dying in May 1714. * Memoires du Tems.

LEZAT, the chief Town in a ſmall Territory call'd Lezadois: It ſtands in Upper Languedoc upon the Lauriége, four Leagues from Tholouſe to the South. * Maty, Diction.

LIBERATUS (St.) Abbot of the Monaſtery of Capſa in the Byzacene Province of Africk, living in the Vth Century. During the Perſecution under King Hunneric he was ſeiz'd with ſome Clergy and Monks; and upon Refuſal to renounce the Catholick Faith and turn Arians, they were committed to cloſe Impriſonment, where, notwithſtanding, their Friends found means to ſupport 'em. Hunneric perceiving that they could not eaſily be ſtarv'd, order'd 'em to be put on board a Bark full of Faggots, which being ſet on Fire the Boat was put off to Sea; but the Fire going out this Prince order'd their Brains to be knock'd out, which was executed accordingly, and their Corps were thrown into the Sea; but the Waves returning 'em to the Shore, they were taken up and buried by the Catholick Clergy. Theſe Saints ſuffer'd Martyrdom A. D. 483. * Victor Vitenſis, Perſecut. Vandalic. Ruinart, Acta Martyr. Sincer.

LIBERTINES. Some Authors make 'em a Sect of the Jews, deſcended from thoſe which Pompey, Gabinius, Soſius, &c. had carry'd Captive to Rome, and who afterwards recover'd their Liberty: The Children of theſe were call'd Libertini. Now the other Jews, who had never been made Slaves, reckon'd 'em unqualify'd for the Jewiſh Privileges, and refus'd to admit 'em into the Synagogues: This Repulſe made 'em form a Sect. Theſe were they who diſputed with St. Stephen, and occaſion'd his Death. Oecumenius, Gagneius, Hugo de Lira will have theſe Libertines a People who inhabited the Country between Cyrene and Ægypt: They go upon this Suppoſition, that Libertinus is no Greek Word, but an Ægyptian Term, which ſignifies a Sect or Clan. But Dr. Hammond is of Opinion that theſe Libertines are Jews, who had been naturaliz'd Romans, or at leaſt deſcended from Jews who were Burghers of ſome Town which was free of the Roman Republick. Tarſus, where St. Paul was born, who was one of the Acceſſaries to St. Stephen's Death, had this Privilege. * Acts vi. 9. vii. 58.

LICOLA, Lago de Licola; Lucrinus & Baianus Lacus. 'Twas anciently a Lake famous for great Quantities of excellent Fiſh taken there. In the Year 1538 an Earthquake threw a Mountain of Aſhes into it, and turn'd it into a Moraſſe which now produces nothing but Reed. The Remains of a Canal, which Nero began to make from the Gulph of Puteoli to the Town Oſtia, is likewiſe call'd Licola. * Maty, Diction.

LIMA, Ponte de Lima, a Town in Portugal. It ſtands in the Province between Douro and Minho upon the River Lima, four Leagues from Braga to the North. Lima is the Capital of a Diviſion which goes by that Name. * Maty, Diction.

LIMBORCH (Philip de) Divinity Profeſſor amongſt the Remonſtrants at Amſterdam, was born A. D. 1633. His Father Rembert de Limborch was an eminent Lawyer, and had a conſiderable Employment in the Province of Holland. Philip ſtudy'd Divinity under Stephen Curcellæus, who ſucceeded Epiſcopius in the Remonſtrant's Divinity-Chair. Limborch publiſh'd his great Unkle Epiſcopius's Sermons on the 5th of St. Matthew, which were printed A. D. 1657; and having Epiſcopius's Manuſcripts lodg'd with him, he found a great many Letters amongſt 'em, which gave an Account of the Remonſtrant's Affairs. Limborch and Hartſoeker a Remonſtrant Paſtor at Rotterdam, put 'em in Order, and publiſh'd 'em A. D. 1660, with the Title of Epiſtolæ præſtantium & eruditorum Virorum. Afterwards having found a large Collection of other Letters, he publiſh'd a ſecond Edition in Folio much enlarg'd A. D. 1684. There was a third Edition with an Addition of twenty Epiſtles printed A. D. 1704. So that now this laſt Edition comprehends almoſt a complete Hiſtory of the Arminians, from Arminius through the Period which was after the Synod of Dort. In the Year 1675 he printed all Curcellæus's Works. But in Regard neither Epiſcopius nor Curcellæus had Leiſure to finiſh a complete Syſtem of Remonſtrant Divinity, he reſolv'd to perfect what his Predeceſſors had begun: He finiſh'd this Work, notwithſtanding his Avocations, and printed it A. D. 1686. The Performance was well receiv'd in Holland, and has run through four Editions. To return, in the Year abovemention'd 1686, he had a Conference with one Iſaac Orobio a Jew of Seville, who had got looſe from the Inquiſition, and retir'd to Amſterdam, where he profeſs'd Phyſick with Reputation. This Diſpute occaſion'd his writing a Book generally valu'd: 'Tis entitled, Collatio amica de Veritate Religionis Chriſtianæ cum erudito Judæo. In this Work Limborch proves that the Jew can bring no Argument of any Cogency for the Jewiſh Religion, which does not conclude ſtronger for the Truth of Chriſtianity. The Jew, being an obſtinate Man, would not reſign to the Evidence: However Limborch brought him to the Abſurdity of aſſerting that every one ought to keep to his firſt Religion; it being eaſier to confute the Belief of other People than to prove the Certainty of ones own. The Jew went ſo far in his Extravagancy, as to maintain, that in caſe his Parents had taught him to worſhip the Sun, he ſaw no Reaſon why he ſhould have quitted this Religion for any other. In the Year 1692 a Book of the Proceſs of the Inquiſition at Thoulouze, which takes in all the Sentences pronounc'd by that Court from A. D. 1307 to 1333, falling into Limborch's Hands, he reſolv'd to publiſh it, with an additional Account of the Hiſtory of this frightful Tribunal, extracted from the Writings and Records of the Inquiſitors. This Work gain'd Mr. Limborch a great deal of Reputation, and is generally approv'd by all thoſe who have no Intereſt for uſing People in ſo barbarous a manner. In the Year 1700 he publiſh'd a practical Diſcourſe: It goes upon the Subject of Preparation for Death, and lays down Inſtructions for bearing Sickneſs patiently. In 1711 his Commentary upon the Acts of the Apoſtles and the Epiſtles to the Romans and the Hebrews was printed. His Theologia Chriſtiana or Body of Divinity has been thrice printed. He dy'd April 30, 1712, in the ſeventy ninth Year of his Age. * Le Clerc. in his Funeral Oration for Mr. Limborch.

LINANGE (the County of) a ſmall German Territory within the Palatinate of the Rhine, ſome Leagues from Frankendal to the Weſt. The Principal Towns within this Precinct are Linange, Turcheim, Grunſtat, and Lampſheim. * Maty, Diction.

LINCHIANG, A Town in China: It ſtands upon the River Law within the Province of Kiangſi, where it holds the eighth Rank. There are three other Towns within its Precinct and Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

LINDEMBROGE, or Lidembruch (Frederick) flouriſh'd in the middle of the XVIIth Century. He wrote Notes upon Ammianus Marcellinus; the beſt Edition is that of 1681. He likewiſe wrote Notes upon Terence's Comedies, upon the Fragments of the old Poets; upon the Laws of the Burgundians, Germans, Viſigoths, and upon Marculphus's Formulæ. There is likewiſe a Gloſſary of this Author's upon the Laws of Charles the Great, and Lewis the Debonair. * Baillet, jugem. des Sav. ſur les Critiques Gramm.

* LINUS (St.) Biſhop of Rome. There's little or nothing certain to be met with concerning this Pope's Life, or his Death, neither is there any Probability of his being a Martyr. The Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions reports Linus conſecrated by St. Paul, and Clemens by St. Peter; which falls in with Tertullian, who affirms in his Preſcriptions that Clemens was the immediate Succeſſor of St. Peter. Epiphanius relates that St. Peter firſt conſecrated Clemens; but that this Saint declining the Charge, and withdrawing out of the Way, Linus was put in his Place. Ruffinus affirms that Linus executed the Epiſcopal Office while the Apoſtles were living. The Author of the Pontifical goes into this Sentiment; but 'tis by no means likely that St. Peter and St. Paul ſhould conſecrate Biſhops for the See of Rome, during their own Reſidence there; and much leſs that St. Peter ſhould conſecrate one, and St. Paul another: 'Tis therefore moſt reaſonable to ſuppoſe that Linus ſucceeded St. Peter and St. Paul after their Martyrdom, which happen'd June 29 A. D. 65. Euſebius aſſigns eleven or twelve Years to Linus's Pontificate: 'Tis moſt probable, notwithſtanding the different Computation of ſome Authors, that he dy'd A. D. 77. * Epiphan. hæreſ. 27, &c.

* LIVADIA, formerly call'd Achaia: 'Tis a Province of Greece, bounded on the North by Epirus, Theſſaly, and the Gulph of Negropont. The Archipelago waſhes it to the Eaſt, and the Gulph of Lepanto and the Corinthian Iſthmus, divide it from Morea to the South. This Country is ſubdivided into four Territories or Precincts, which lie in the following Order from Weſt to Eaſt: 1. The Deſpotat or Little Greece, 2 Livadia Proper. 3. Stranulipa. 4. The Dutchy of Athens. The principal Towns are Lepanto, Livadia, Thebes, Megara and Athens. * Maty, Diction.

LIWIN (St.) an Iriſh Biſhop, who converted the Country of Brabant in the VIIth Century. He came to Auguſtin the Monk, whom Pope Gregory ſent Miſſionary into England, and put himſelf under his Diſcipline. After Auguſtin's Death he return'd into Ireland, was conſecrated Biſhop there; and having a ſtrong impulſe to preach Chriſtianity to the Infidels, he ſet Sail for Flanders, and preach'd the Goſpel to the Idolaters in Brabant, where he ſuffer'd Martyrdom A. D. 656. * Vita apud Mabillon. Baillet, Vies des Saints, au 12 de Novembre.

LLIRIAS, in Latin Leriæ, a Town in Spain, ſtanding upon the River Guadalaviar, in the Kingdom of Valencia, ſix Leagues above the City Valencia. Some Geographers take this Town for the Village of the old Conteſtani call'd Lauro, Lauron, Laurona, where Cæſar's Army routed Sextus Pompeius. But others affirm this Battel was fought at Laurigue, a Town upon the ſame River, and five Leagues above Llirias. This latter Opinion made Llirias the old Town of the Edetani call'd Leria, Edeta, and Hedeta; which is probable enough. * Maty, Diction.

LOANDA S. PAULO, a Town built in a little Iſland of the ſame Name near the Coaſt of Congo in Africa. This Town which belongs to the Portugueſe, and is the Reſidence of the Biſhop of Angola, has a large Haven. The Town is large and beautiful conſidering the Country: 'Tis ſaid the Europeans have about three thouſand Houſes built with Stone, and cover'd with Tile, and that the Negroes or Congolans Houſes exceed this Number; but are built only with with Earth and thatch'd. There's Abundance of Slaves here: 'Tis ſaid the Jeſuits, who ſupply the Churches here, and teach in the Schools, have ten thouſand belonging to them. There are likewiſe other Orders of Religious in this Place, as the Carmelites, Obſervantines and Capuchins: There's no freſh Water to be got, but from the Rivers in the Continent, which they fetch in Canows. Trade is not carry'd on here with Silver Coin; their ſmall Money is Zimbis, which is a ſort of Congo Shells; and that which they call their large Money is Pieces of Cloth and Negroes. * Maty, Diction.

LOCKE (John) born at Wrington about eight Miles from Briſtol to the South A. D. 1632. His Father was a Captain in the Parliament Army againſt K. Charles I. John had his firſt Education in Weſtminſter School, from whence he remov'd to Chriſt-Church in Oxford, where he was made Canon or Fellow. He had no Reliſh for the Peripatetick Philoſophy, believing it embarraſs'd with Jargon, and ſpent in inſignificant Enquiries: 'Tis true, he had a better Opinion, of Deſcartes's Notions and Syſtem; tho' at length his Sentiments were very different from that Philoſopher. Mr. Locke gain'd an Acquaintance with the Earl of Shaftesbury, who when he was Lord Chancellor, made him his Secretary for drawing up Preſentations to Benefices: And in 1673, when the Broad Seal was taken from this Lord, Locke falling under Diſgrace with him, aſſiſted his Lordſhip in publiſhing ſeveral Pamphlets to heighten the Jealouſy of the Engliſh againſt the Roman Catholicks, and arraign the Government. The Bill againſt the Earl of Shaftesbury being brought in Ignoramus, that Nobleman withdrew into Holland, and got himſelf made a Burgher at Amſterdam, for Fear he might have been demanded by the King of England, for being in a Plot againſt him: Mr. Locke, not believing himſelf ſecure in England, follow'd my Lord Shaftesbury into Holland. Within a Year after his leaving England, he was inform'd againſt at Whitehall for writing ſeveral Pamphlets againſt the Government; but afterwards 'twas known they came from other Hands. When the Duke of Monmouth made a rebellious Deſcent againſt King James II, that Prince by his Ambaſſador demanded eighty four Perſons of the States of Holland, amongſt which Mr. Locke was one; who, as they ſay, was in no concert with the Duke of Monmouth, not reckoning him it ſeems, of ſufficient Capacity for ſuch an Undertaking. And now Locke not thinking himſelf ſafe in Holland, he went to Cleves. In 1689 he return'd into England with the Princeſs of Orange, and was careſs'd and preferr'd by the Court in England. His Eſſay upon Humane Underſtanding was publiſh'd in 1690. This Book ſhews the Author to be a Man of Thought and Style, but the Principles laid down there, have no good Tendency: Here he endeavours to make Matter capable of thinking, which deſtroys the received and undoubted Diſtinction between Body and Spirit, and makes the Soul no better than organiz'd Matter: Tho' at laſt, in his Letter to Biſhop Stillingfleet, he is forc'd in Effect to renounce this ſceptical Principle: For he confeſſes that Matter, quatenus Matter, is incapable of thinking; but then he believes God may ſuperadd a foreign Force to it, and raiſe it to a Capacity of Thought, which is quite giving up the Cauſe. To mention ſome of his other Works, viz. Epiſtola de Tolerantia ad clariſſimum Virum, &c. His Book of Civil Government; Important Conſiderations concerning the lowering of Intereſt, and raiſing the Value of Money; this Tract and ſome others were reprinted in the Year 1696. Of Education; The Reaſonableneſs of Chriſtianity; Three Letters to Biſhop Stillingfleet. Mr. Locke dy'd in October 1704. * La Bibliotheque choiſie, tom. 6.

LOMAGNE, a ſmall Country within Gaſcogne in France: It lies between Armagnac, the County of Gaure and Garonne, which parts it from Agenois. Vic is the principal Town. * Maty, Diction.

LONDON: For the Royal Exchange being erected A. D. 1556 in Morery Vol. I. read 1566.

LONGINUS, a Roman Gentleman, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf extraordinarily under Titus Veſpaſian at the Siege of Jeruſalem. For the Jews having form'd a Body without the Walls, and Arrows and Lances flying thick on either Side, Longinus charg'd through the Enemy's Battalion, kill'd two of the braveſt of 'em, and then made his Way back to the Romans without receiving a Wound. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 5. cap. 22.

LOO. There are two ſmall Places of this Name in the Low Countries: One in Flanders two Leagues from Dixmude to the Weſt; the other in Dutch Gueldrland, about three Leagues from Deventer to the Weſt. William Henry, Prince of Orange, built a fine Country Houſe here; the Place being very convenient for hunting. The Palace belongs at preſent to the hereditary Prince of Friſeland. * Maty, Diction.

LOOTS (the County of) a Precinct within the Territories of the Biſhoprick of Liege. It lies between Hasbaye to the South, and Liegeoiſe to the North, bounded by the Dutchy of Brabant to the Weſt, and that of Limbourg to the Eaſt. This Country had formerly Earls of its own: John, Earl of Loots, annex'd it to the Biſhoprick of Liege A. D. 1302. The principal Town within this Precinct are, Loots the Capital, Tongres, S. Tron, Herck, Haſſelt and Bilſen. * Maty, Diction.

LOP, a Deſart in Great Tartary: The common Maps make it the ſame with Xamo, and place it on the Outſide of China, to the North-Weſt and North of this Empire: But Mr. Witſen in his new Map fixing the Deſart of Xamo to the Weſt of China, places the Wilderneſs of Lop above two hundred Leagues from the other, to the Weſtern Quarter, between the Monguls, Tartars, and the Kalmakes, to the Weſt of the Mountains of Imaus, and to the North-Weſt of the Kingdom of Thibet, and the Head of the River Cheſel. * Maty, Diction.

LOR, LOUR, a Country which muſt not be miſtaken for that of Lar or Lariſtan, which lies along the Perſian Gulph. Lor or Lour is a hilly Country, and was formerly within the Juriſdiction of the Province of Khouziſtan, which is the ſame with the old Suſiana. The Country was afterwards inhabited by a great many Colonies of the Curdes, ſo that now it lies within the Diviſion call'd Curdiſtan, which makes part of Aſſyria. The Country of Lor produces a great deal of all Sorts of Fruits. Berougierd is the chief Fortreſs: This Caſtle ſtands near the Town of Hamadan, and upon the Borders of the Arabian and Perſian Iraques. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

LORCH (Lauriacum) formerly a Town of Conſideration in Germany, within the Archduchy of Auſtria, and near the Mouth of the Ems into the Danube: 'Twas formerly the See of an Archbiſhoprick, which was remov'd to Paſſaw, after Lorch was ruin'd by the Huns A. D. 735. 'Tis now but a Burrough with an Abbey: The Decay of this Place has enlarg'd Ems, which ſtands upon a River of the ſame Name. * Ex. Biblioth. German.

LORETTO. The Account of Loretto in Morery ſhall be melted down and recoin'd in this Article. Loretto, or Lauretto, is a Town within Marca Anconitana in Italy: It ſtands upon an Eminence a League and a half from the Gulph of Venice, and a League from Recanati towards Rome. 'Tis a ſmall Town, but well fortify'd and garriſon'd for Fear of the Incurſions of the Infidels, who might croſs the Adriatick, and plunder the Chapel of Loretto, which, as 'tis there believ'd, was the bleſſed Virgin's Houſe, or at leaſt her Apartment, and brought hither by Angels from Nazareth. The Narrative of this extraordinary Remove is as follows: In the Year 1291, the Chriſtians being driven out of Palæſtine, and in no Condition, without great Hazard and Expence, to viſit the Holy Land, nor particularly the Chapel of Nazareth; this Houſe was taken up by Angels, who, leaving nothing but the Foundation, carry'd the Building to Dalmatia, eight hundred Leagues from Nazareth. Here, at Midnight, they ſet it upon a Hill near the Beach of the Adriatick: Next Day 'twas much admir'd and regarded by the People of the Neighbourhood. The Parſon of St. George of Terſacte had a Revelation that 'twas the Chapel of Nazareth; and Nicolas Frangipani, Governor of Dalmatia for the Emperor, diſpatch'd four Perſons of Character to Nazareth to know the Truth of this Matter: The Perſons ſent upon this Errand reported at their Return, that they had ſeen the Foundation of the Walls of this Chapel, and that the Meaſure anſwer'd exactly, and that the Chapel diſappear'd pear'd at Nazareth the very Day 'twas firſt ſeen in Dalmatia. A. D. 1294, three Years and ſeven Months after the firſt Removal, the Angels took it up again, croſs'd the Adriatick, where the Sea was about an hundred and fifty Miles over, and ſet it down in Marca Anconitana. The Chapel was now lodg'd in a Wood belonging to a religious Lady call'd Lauretta, from whence the Name Loretto. M. Frangipani perceiving the Chapel gone off his Ground, and tranſported into Italy, had another Chapel of the ſame Size and Figure built upon the Place, together with a ſtately Church call'd Notre Dame de Terſacte, now belonging to the Cordeliers Obſervantines. 'Tis ſaid this ſecond Removal was made in the Night, and that ſome Shepherds who watch'd their Flocks ſaw the Prodigy, and made their Report to the Burghers at Recanati. Eight Months after, in the Year 1295, this famous Chapel was once more remov'd by the Angels from the Wood to an Eminence at a League and a half's Diſtance, and near the high Road. This Hill belong'd to two Brothers, who were almoſt ready to come to Daggers drawing for the Property of the Chapel, but it ſeems having ſome Temper, and taking a little time before they came to Extremities, the Ground of the Quarrel was taken away: For about four Months after, the Angels remov'd it the fourth time to another Hill, at about a Bow-ſhot Diſtance, where it ſtands at preſent. Pope Julius II, who held the Chair in 1510, has taken the moſt Pains to fortify the Credit of this Hiſtory: Now this Pope has generally the Character of being a better Soldier than a Biſhop. Paul IV. A. D. 1555 confirm'd Pope Julius II's Bull; and Pius V. has exerted his Character to keep this Story in Credit. Peter-Paul Vergerius oppos'd this Narrative, which was afterwards defended by Rutilius Benzonius, Biſhop of Loretto. This Biſhop endeavours to anſwer Vergerius's Objections, drawn from the Silence of old Authors: For Inſtance, Vergerius argues that Pope Boniface VIII, who held the See when the Chapel was ſaid to be tranſported from Dalmatia into Italy, takes no Notice of this wonderful Removal, and a great many Popes his Succeſſors are wholly ſilent about it: That St. Antonine, St. Vincent-Ferrier, Dante, Petrarch and Boccace relate nothing of theſe Miracles; and that St. Vincent-Ferrier mentions the bleſſed Virgin's Houſe as being ſtill at Nazareth. But it ſeems Pope Urban VIII. did not think the Silence of theſe Popes &c. or the counter Teſtimony of St. Vincent-Ferrier, ſufficient Diſproof; for he has allow'd the keeping of an anniverſary Holyday on the 10th of December, for the miraculous Removal of this Chapel into Italy. If the Reader has a Mind to enquire farther than Vergerius, he may conſult Mr. Miſſon in his Travels into Italy.

The Church of Loretto was begun in the Popedom of Paul II, in the Year 1460, and was afterwards finiſh'd by Pope Julius II: 'Tis a large, magnificent, and high-roofed Building, divided into three Iſles, with a Dome in the middle, under which the bleſſed Virgin's Chamber is directly plac'd: They have made a Chapel of it forty Foot long, twenty Foot wide, and about five and twenty Foot high: 'Tis built with Brick, and fac'd with Marble, embelliſh'd with Baſs-reliefs and Figures of exquiſite Workmanſhip: The Chamber is without Foundations, and the Incruſtation only ſurrounds it without touching the Walls; for this, as they ſay, makes the Miracle of its frequent Removals more apparent. Thoſe who deſire to make their Devotions in the Chapel itſelf, muſt have a Ticket from the Governour, which they are to give to the Veſtry-keeper who ſtands by the Door, where every Body leaves their Sword; the Knights of Malta not excepted, who notwithſtanding have the Privilege of wearing their Sword when they receive the Communion in their own Iſland.

Pope Sixtus Quintus made the Church of Loretto a Cathedral, with one and twenty Canons, four Dignitaries, and a great many Chaplains. Loretto formerly belong'd to the Biſhoprick of Recanati, about a League diſtant; and ſometimes the Pope confers both theſe Sees upon a ſingle Prelate. The Muſick perform'd there is admirable, and every Saturday they ſolemnly ſing the Litanies commonly call'd the Litanies of our Lady of Loretto. There is a Cardinal Protector, who has the Care of the Revenues and Treaſure belonging to the Chapel. This Cardinal nominates ſome Prelate for Governour of the Town: His Palace is a large and noble Structure. The Hoſpital for the Pilgrims is provided for out of the Revenue of the Chapel, conſiſting of large Eſtates and Offerings.

The Treaſure there, it may be, is the greateſt in the World, upon the ſcore of the Preſents made to the bleſſed Virgin. There are always ten Gold Lamps and forty Silver ones burning, which make a very curious and conſtant Illumination: There are likewiſe a great many more not commonly lighted. The Quantity and Value of Diamonds, Pearls, and other precious Stones is almoſt incredible: There are two Chains round the Figures of the bleſſed Virgin and our Saviour ſet with Jewels, with an Emerald Croſs, worth four thouſand Ducats. The Simarre, preſented by Iſabella Archduchеſs of Flanders, is powder'd with two thouſand five hundred Diamonds; and Philip IV. King of Spain preſented our Lady with another Simarre with ſix thouſand three hundred and forty eight Diamonds upon it, valu'd at twenty thouſand Ducats. In 1584 Henry III. King of France offer'd a large Cup made of a Sapphire, with a Cryſtal Cover ſet with precious Stones, and a Golden Angel on the Top holding a Flower-de-luce made of three Diamonds. King Lewis XIII. and Ann of Auſtria his Queen, preſented two Gold Crowns ſet with Diamonds, one for the bleſſed Virgin, and another for our Saviour in the Figure of a Child; and notwithſtanding Pope Julius II. in 1506 had promis'd the Burghers of Recanati that the two Crowns they had offer'd ſhould always remain upon the Heads of our bleſſed Saviour and his Mother; notwithſtanding this Grant, Pope Urban VIII. order'd 'em to be taken off, and the Crowns ſent by Lewis XIII. ſet on. The ſame Prince offer'd an Angel of maſſive Silver holding the Figure of the Dauphin (afterwards Lewis XIV.) in beaten Gold, lying upon a Silver Cuſhion, with this Inſcription: Acceptum a Virgine Delphinum Gallia Virgini reddit; that is, France, who receiv'd the Dauphin from the bleſſed Virgin, returns him to her. There is likewiſe a Silver Plate with another Inſcription, which ſets forth the Form of Thankſgiving which Lewis XIII. put up to God Almighty for the Dauphin which God had ſent him. This Work is admirably perform'd, and valu'd at above an hundred thouſand Crowns. * Turcellin, Hiſt. Laur. Silvio Seragli, Hiſt. Lor. Bouche & Bralion, Hiſtoire de la S. Chapelle de Lorette. Caniſius, lib. 5. de ſancta Maria Turrian, Apol. pro Laur. Rutile Benzoni, de Anno Jubil. lib. 6. Jean Henri de Phlamern, in Merc. Ital. Spondanus, Bzovius & Rainaldi in Annal. Eccl. Voyages d'Italie.

LOVANDO SAN-PAULO, the Capital of the Province of Lovando within the Kingdom of Angola in the Southern Part of Africk. 'Twas built by the Portugueſe A. D. 1578, under the Direction of Paolo Dias de Nevais, the firſt Governor the King of Portugal ſent into this Country. 'Tis a large Town with beautiful Churches: The Cathedral, which is the See of the Biſhop of Angola, is dedicated to the Honour of our Lady: Beſides four other Churches, there's an Hoſpital call'd Miſericordia: The Iſland of Lovando lies near this Town, where they fiſh up great Quantities of Simbos, a ſort of Shells which go for Money, and ſhine much better than thoſe found on the Coaſt of Congo. * Dapper, Deſcript. de l'Afrique.

LOUIS, le Fort-Louis, a good Fort built by Lewis XIV. The Situation as well as the Works make it very ſtrong; for it ſtands in a ſmall Iſland of the Rhine below Strasbourg, between the Towns of Baden and Haguenaw. * Maty, Diction, LOUVENSTEIN, in Latin Loonſtenius Pagus, a County in Germany, it lies within Suabia, excepting at a little Corner which borders towards the North upon the County of Holach in Franconia: This County or Earldom is four Leagues in Length and two in Breadth, but has nothing much remarkable in it, excepting the Caſtle of Loevenſtein, which gives Name to the Country. * Maty, Diction.

LOUWENSTEIN, or Loevenſtein, a ſtrong Caſtle where Priſoners of State are commonly confin'd. 'Twas here where the famous Hugo Grotius was put up, and from whence he made his Eſcape in a Trunk by

by his Wife's Dexterity. The Fort ſtands in the Iſland of Bomel within South Holland, at the Confluence of the Wahal and the Meuſe, a little above the Towns of Gorcum and Worcum. Some Geographers are of Opinion that Louwenſtein was the old Village call'd Levæ Fanum, which others place at Lewen a Village in Guelderland ſtanding upon the Southern Bank of the Wahal, about two Leagues above Tiel. * Maty, Diction.

* LOW-COUNTRIES, or Lower Germany. As to the Denomination of theſe Provinces, it comes from the Situation: For in all the maritime Provinces the Land is almoſt every where two or three fathom lower than the Sea, eſpecially at high Water: 'Tis plain therefore this Country has not always been in the preſent Condition; for had this been ſo, 'twould have been impoſſible to have made the Dykes with the preſent Appearance, and of ſo great a Length: We are therefore to ſuppoſe that this Country were Iſlands at firſt, inhabited by the Batavi, a ſtout and laborious People, who made their utmoſt Effort to put Holland and the neighbouring Provinces into their preſent Condition. The Scheld, the Meuſe, the Rhine, the Iſſel, and ſeveral other Rivers, which fall into the Sea of Holland and Zealand pretty near each other, had at firſt form'd theſe Iſlands and Shelves, which are now to be ſeen in thoſe Places; theſe Iſlands &c. I ſay, were at firſt made by Heaps of Sand, Mud, and Trees torn up by the Roots, which great Rivers naturally drag along with 'em, and which continually encreaſing upon the Courſe of Time, ſettle in the Form of Land. From theſe Cauſes may be aſſign'd the different Mouths of the Rhine: For the main Current being broken into ſeveral Arms, and running with a weaker Stream, the firſt Inhabitants, and afterwards the Romans and thoſe who ſucceeded 'em, had an Opportunity to make ſeveral Dams for ſtopping the Force of the Tides: And of this kind, for Inſtance, is the Dyke on the Side of the Meuſe, and the other againſt the Zuyderzee; and ſo are likewiſe the two other Dams along the Rhine, which River formerly fell into the Sea at Catwick Op-Zee, where the Romans formerly built a Fort call'd Arx Britannica, the Ruins of which are ſtill ſometimes ſeen in the Sea. There were afterwards Dams of the ſame kind thrown up in Frieſland, Zealand, Brabant, and the Weſtern Part of Flanders, and eſpecially at the Mouths of Canals and Rivers. As for that Part of the Country which fronts the Ocean, 'twas ſufficiently ſecur'd by the Sand, which the Wind and Tide drove aſhore, and which ſettled in Dunes and Mountains of Sand now to be ſeen.

Under the Shelter of theſe natural and artificial Ramparts, the Inhabitants were ſecur'd in the Land and Paſture enclos'd between theſe Cauſways or Dams; but the Sand and the Mud, of which the Land was made up, receiving no more Encreaſe, and being continually melted by Rain-Water, and the Sea and Rivers ouzing in, ſunk by Degrees, chok'd the Channels where the Rhine and the Tides us'd to run, and turn'd the Face of things into vaſt ſmooth Plains, which ſinking ſo conſiderably might reaſonably be call'd the Low Countries. From this time forward the People of theſe Quarters have almoſt always been buſy either in gaining Ground from the Sea, ſurrounding the higheſt Banks of Sand with ſtrong Moles or Dams, or in repairing the Damages by the overflowing of the Sea and the Rivers, or in ſtrengthning their Dams to prevent the Inundations with which they are threaten'd. Theſe Inundations are moſt formidable when the North-Weſt Wind drives violently upon the Coaſt, when the Rivers overflow their Banks, and when the high Tides at the new or full Moon happen at the ſame tme, when theſe three Circumſtances happen to unite and ſwell the Waters, the Country is in Danger of being quite loſt.

The firſt Inundation happen'd A. D. 860, when the Force of the Tempeſt was ſo great, that the Rhine looſing the greateſt Part of its Current in the Waal, the Iſſel, and ſeveral other Channels, the Sand choak'd the Mouth of this River to that Degree near Catwick, that having not Force enough to make its Way into the Sea, the Waters were preſs'd back and overflow'd the Country, broke the Dykes on the Side of the Meuſe, and form'd a River call'd the Leck, through which at preſent the greateſt Part of the Rhine falls into the Sea. In the Year 1170 Holland, Zealand, and even North-Flanders, as far as Bruges, were lay'd under Water by a great Storm. In the Year 1421 an Inundation of the ſame kind parted the Town of Dort from the Iſland of Voorn; the Water drowning all the Country of Bies-Bos lying between Gertruydemberg, Gorcum and Dort: Above an hundred thouſand People were loſt in this Inundation, and ſeventy Villages lay'd ſo deep under Water that the Spires of ſome of the Steeples were the only viſible Remainders, and which are ſtill ſtanding Monuments of that terrible Calamity.

In the Year 1532 another Inundation ruin'd half the Iſland of Zealand: North-Beveland was entirely drown'd; and South-Beveland, the biggeſt Iſland of 'em all, loſt three of her Towns, one of which was Borſele the capital; a great Number of Villages and above half the Country was likewiſe ſwallow'd up; a good third of which lies ſtill under Water. In the Year 1551 Part of North-Flanders was drown'd in the ſame Manner: And in 1570 there was another which did great Damage.

And laſtly, in the Year 1682 an extraordinary Tempeſt happening January 26, and ſtriking in with the Tides of the full Moon, after a very rainy Winter, which made the Rhine overflow, and the greateſt Part of the Rivers which fall into it; theſe concurrent Cauſes, I ſay, broke the Dykes in ſeveral Places in Flanders, Brabant, Zealand and Holland: The Towns of Oſtend and Newport ſuffer'd very much, the Damage amounting to above four Millions. The Water in theſe Towns came up to the ſecond Floor; the Canal call'd the Sclick, which went from Oſtend to Bruges, and had coſt a great many Millions, was ruin'd; the Fort, which ſecur'd it, was almoſt quite deſtroy'd, and twenty five neighbouring Villages drown'd; above half the Iſland Caſandt was lay'd under Water, and all the Country round from Sluſe to the Gates of Bruges, together with the Fort of Middlebourg, had the ſame Fate. The Fort of Sas was drown'd, and the Fort of Moerſpuier was waſh'd away with the Flood, together with the Garriſon and Cannon. This Inundation ruſh'd over all the Country of Waes, and broke upon all North-Flanders from the Scheld to the Sea, with almoſt incredible Damage: The Towns of Dendermond and Antwerp, Old and New Doel, Melſe, and all the Country over againſt Antwerp on the left Side of the Scheld were drown'd, with great Loſs of Men and Cattle: The Iſlands which make the Province of Zealand were terribly diſtreſs'd: Middlebourg and Fluſhing ſuffer'd great Loſs, and had it not been for the Magiſtrates Care in repairing the Dykes of Strangh, and Weſt-Capell, all the Iſland of Walcheren, of which Middlebourg is the capital, had been loſt: Ziriezee, capital of the Iſland of Schouven, was quite drown'd, and the Town Bommen, fortify'd, and ſtanding at the Northern Quarter of this Iſland, was ſwept away by the Waves with every thing in it, one Tower excepted: The Iſlands of North-Beverland and South-Beverland were almoſt quite buried under Water; and the Town Tolen, one of the moſt conſiderable in Zealand, was entirely all under Water, excepting the Tops of the Steeples: The Deſolation was no leſs frightful in Holland; Part of the Country was under Water; and at Dort the Water was four Inches higher than it had been in any Inundation in former Ages: Great Part of the Dykes were ruin'd, almoſt all the Betaw was drown'd, and the Dunes or Sand-hills which cover Holland from the Sea were ſo much raked, that whereas before they had only a gentle Slope, they were now waſh'd almoſt as ſteep as a Precipice: Part of the Village of Catwick near Leyden and that of Terheid was ruin'd, and the Sandhills upon which they were built ſo ſhaken and diſabled that all Holland was in Danger of being loſt beyond Recovery: For if this Barrier had been forc'd, as 'twas very near, almoſt all the Country had lain five and twenty Foot under Water.

In fine, the Damage ſuſtain'd in the Provinces of the Low Countries was ſo great, that the loweſt Computation came up to an hundred Millions, and ſome mounted it to an hundred and thirty: The Prince of Orange alone loſt an Eſtate of fifty thouſand Crowns per Annum: The Damage in many Places ſeem'd without Remedy, insomuch that 'twas debated whether 'twas not more adviseable to leave the Country of Ter-Tolen under Water, than endeavour the laying it dry; because the Charge would exceed the Value of the Ground to be recover'd. * Memoires du Tems. Temple's Netherlands.

LOW-COUNTRIES. Archbishopricks and Bishopricks of the Low Countries founded by Paul IV. in 1559.

The Archbishoprick of Cambray.

Suffragan Bishopricks.

Arras and St. Omers now belonging to the French, Tournay and Namur.

The Archbishoprick of Mechlin in Brabant.

Suffragan Bishopricks.

Antwerp, Bruges, Ghent, Ypres, Ruremond and Bois-duc; which last has a great while since belong'd to the Dutch.

The Archbishop of Utrecht within the United Provinces.

Suffragan Bishopricks.

Deventer, Groningen, Harlem, Lewarden, Middlebourg, all under the Dutch. * Guichardin, Description of the Low Countries, Ortelius, Valerius Andreas, Pontus Heuterus, &c.

LU, King of Cheuxan, an Island upon the Eastern Coast of China. This Prince was of the Family of Thamin; and Lovan King of China being put to Death by the Tartars A. D. 1645, the Chinese elected Lu for his Successor. He only took the Style of Preserver of the Empire, and at first was fortunate in his Enterprizes; but afterwards he was forc'd to quit the City Xaoking, and retire into the Island of Cheuxan. This Island, which formerly was inhabited by none but Labourers and Fishermen, was quickly improv'd to a considerable Kingdom; and Abundance of Chinese withdrawing thither, the King was in a few Years Sovereign of seventy two Cities built in Cheuxan, and had a great Number of Ships well equip'd * Martini Jesuite, Hist. de la Guerre des Tartares contre la Chine.

LUBIN (Augustin) an Augustinian Monk, Geographer to the French King, was born at Paris in 1629. He took the monastick Habit very early, and went through all the Offices in his Order, having been a Provincial of France, and Assistant general of the French Augustinians at Rome: He was a Person of great Worth and Learning, and particularly knowing in that Part of Learning which relates to the Benefices in France, and the Abbies in Italy: He wrote upon the Roman Martyrology, and upon the Places mark'd there; a Notitia of the Abbies in Italy; Orbis Augustinianus, or a Survey of all the Abbies of his Order, with a great many Maps formerly graven by himself: He likewise wrote Notes upon Usher's Chronology; a Description of Lapland; a Geography of all the Places in the Bible; and Notes upon Stephanus de Urbibus. He dy'd in the Convent of the Augustin Fryars in the Fauxbourg of St. Germain at Paris A. D. 1695. being seventy two Years of Age. * Memoires du Tems.

LUBLIN (the Palatinate of.) This Polish Palatinate lies between Marzovia, Red Russia and the Palatinate of Sendomir. This Situation gives it the middle of Poland, and by Consequence 'tis well cover'd from the Incursions of the Tartars, to which the Frontier Provinces are much expos'd. And being most secure, 'tis one of the most considerable Provinces of the Kingdom; especially if we add to this Remark, that 'tis one of the largest and most fruitful Divisions. Lublin the Capital has the highest Court in the Kingdom: 'Tis a sort of Parliament, but more considerable than those of France; because 'tis the only one for all Poland, excepting the great Dutchy of Lithuania, which has independent Courts of Justice belonging to it. * Baudrand. Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

LUCIUS, Bishop of Adrianople in the fourth Century, in the Year 335 succeeded Eutropius, who was call'd into Gaul to govern that Church, and dy'd in Banishment for the Catholick Faith. Lucius was quickly expell'd his See in the Reign of Constantine, but return'd after the Death of this Prince: He was banish'd again in the Reign of Constantius, and retir'd to Rome as Socrates and Sozomen report. 'Tis generally believ'd he assisted at the Council of Sardica, and being afterwards restor'd to his Church, made a vigorous Opposition against the Arians, who got him expell'd a third time, and sent him loaden with Irons into Banishment, where he dy'd. * Athanas. Epist. ad solitariam vitam agentes. Apolog. de Fuga sua. Apolog. 1. Apolog. 2. Hilar. fragment. Socrat. lib. 2. cap. 15 & 26. Sozom. lib. 3. cap. 8. lib. 4. cap. 2.

LUDOLPHUS (Job) was born at Erfort, the Capital of Thuringia A. D. 1624. Several of his Ancestors were Senators and Persons of Condition. He had his Education at the University of Erfort, and was tinctur'd with all the Sorts of Learning studied there: His Inclination lay mostly for Languages: He understood Hebrew, Arabick, and Ethiopick: He travell'd into France, Rome, and Sweden; at his Return Home he had a publick Post, and assisted as Counsellor at the Diets, where there had been a long Contest between the Dukes of Saxony and the Archbishops of Mentz. At last, he retir'd to Frankfort, where spending the Remainder of his Life he retouch'd and methodiz'd what he had written. His most considerable Work is his History of Æthiopia. * Junckerus Commentarius de Vita, scriptisque, &c. Jobi Ludolphi.

LUPUS (Christianus) a Monk of the Order of St. Augustin, wrote Commentaries upon the History and Canons of the Councils both General and Provincial: He wrote likewise a Book of Appeals to the See of Rome: He makes no Scruple to follow the Sentiments of the Italians, and the high Pretensions of the Court of Rome. He has publish'd short Notes upon Tertullian's Book of Prescriptions: His Treatise upon Contrition is esteem'd both solid and devout. He has publish'd a Collection of Letters and other Remains relating to the Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon: The Life and Epistles of Archbishop Becket is another of Lupus's Performances. He dy'd in the Year 1681. After his Death Father Vinance has printed several of Lupus's Dissertations: Amongst the rest there is a Discourse upon the Doctrine of Probability; another upon the Christian Warfare; a third upon the Rights and Privileges of the Regulars; and a fourth upon Processions, &c. * Memoires du Tems. M. Du Pin, New Eccles. library, Cent. XVII.

LUXEMBOURG. See Montmorency.

LYDDA, a Town in Palæstine in the Western Quarter of the Tribe of Ephraim. It lies ten Miles from Joppa to the West, and thirty from Jerusalem. 'Twas a considerable Place in the time of the Maccabees. 'Tis likewise mention'd in the Acts of the Apostles. 'Twas call'd Diospolis in St. Hierom's time. Afterwards 'twas call'd St. George of Lydda, because that Saint was beheaded and buried there. The Emperor Justinian built a magnificent Church there in Honour of St. George. At present there is nothing but part of the Choir standing: The Greek Monks of St. Basil's Order who live there, shew this Martyr's Head. Lydda was burn'd at the Beginning of the Jewish War by Cestius Gallus, who, when he enter'd the Town, found but fifty Men in it, and put 'em all to the Sword. The Rest of the Burghers were gone up to Jerusalem to the Feast of Tabernacles: Some time after Lydda was rebuilt. In the Year 1099, the Christians being Masters of most of the Towns in Palæstine, and marching from Ptolemais to Lydda, the Saracens, who garrison'd the Place, despairing to hold out, and being apprehensive that Justinian's great Church, which stood without the Walls, might serve the Christians for a Fort, or that they might make use of the Timbers, which were prodigious both for Length and Girt, pull'd down the Church and burn'd the Wood-Work. * Maccab. lib. 1. cap. 2. Acts, cap. 9. Joseph. de Bello Judaic. lib. 2. cap. 37. Baudrand. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

M.

MABILLON (John) a Benedictine Monk of the Congregation of St. Maur, one of the moſt learned Men of the ſeventeenth Century, was born in the Dioceſe of Rheims November 25, 1632. He was profeſs'd in the Abby of St. Remigius of Rheims in the Year 1654. His Life was a continu'd Courſe of Study, for which the Commonwealth of Learning is very mnch oblig'd to him. He began to bring himſelf into Notice in the Year 1666, by putting out St. Bernard's Works, of which afterwards he publiſh'd a ſecond Edition. Some little time forward the Congregation of St. Maur engag'd him to publiſh the Acts of the Saints of the Order of St. Bennet: He went through the five firſt Centuries of the Benedictines, and publiſh'd 'em in ſeveral Folio's; to which Thierry Ruinart has added a ſixth: That which is moſt conſiderable in this Work, is not ſo much the voluminous Collection ſetting forth the Lives and Actions of the Benedictine Monks, as the learned Prefaces in which he gives an Account of the Doctrine and Diſcipline of every Century, and his critical Notes upon ſeveral hiſtorical Facts; the whole Work ſtretches to nine Volumes, which reach to the ninth Century of Chriſtianity, In the Year 1675 he wrote a Latin Diſſertation concerning the uſing unleaven'd Bread in the Holy Euchariſt, in which Diſcourſe he maintains againſt Cardinal Bona, that the Latin Church made uſe of no other. The Book which gain'd him moſt Reputation is his learned Performance de re diplomaticâ, printed A. D. 1681. He publiſh'd four Volumes of Analecta; to which we may add his Book de Liturgiâ Gallicanâ & de Curſu Gallicano. In 1685 he made the Tour of Italy at the French King's Charge, and after having examin'd the beſt Libraries there, and copy'd a great many unpubliſh'd Curioſities, he printed a Relation of his Travels, with a great deal of what he had tranſcrib'd, in two Volumes 4to, entitled Muſeum Italicum. To paſs over ſome Diſputes manag'd between him and the Benedictines of the Province of Burgundy, and the Canons regular of that Province, about Privilege and Precedency; and likewiſe his Conteſt with the Abbot of la Trape, concerning the Employment of Monks, and whether they ought to ſtudy or not; where Mabillon maintains the affirmative Side of the Queſtion: To paſs over theſe, and proceed to the Year 1698, in which he publiſh'd a Latin Letter under the Name of Euſebius Romanus, &c. The Deſign of this Diſcourſe is to diſcourage the Worſhip of Saints not well vouch'd. His viewing the Catacombes at Rome put him upon this Subject, which drew a Storm of overbelieving Monks upon him. He publiſh'd Animadverſions in Latin upon the Anſwer to the Diſſertation of Father Delfau, concerning the Author of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; and another Latin Diſſertation upon the Monaſtick Life of Gregory the Great: To theſe we muſt add his Benedictine Annals publiſh'd in four Volumes, which take in the Hiſtory of that Order from its firſt Beginning to the Year 1066. The fifth Tome was finiſh'd and the ſixth very forward when he dy'd. Towards the End of his Life he had a Diſpute with Father Germon a Jeſuit, in Defence of his Book de re diplomaticâ: To maintain this learned Performance, he wrote a Supplement to it, in which he replies to all the Objections of his Adverſary. This learned Benedictine, generally belov'd and valu'd, dy'd at Paris in the Abby of St. Germain des Prez December 27, A. D. 1707. His extraordinary Learning appears ſufficiently in his Works; and as for his moral Qualifications they were exemplary and engaging; for he was a Perſon of a modeſt and obliging Temper, and remarkably religious: And as to his Style 'tis maſculine, correct, clear and methodical, without Affectation and unneceſſary Ornament; and in ſhort, ſuch as was moſt ſuitable to the Subjects he wrote upon. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MACAO or Amacao, Amacaum, a Town in China in the Peninſula of the Iſland Gaoram or Lion, upon the Coaſt of the Province of Kantung: This Rib of Land is joyn'd to the reſt of the Iſland only by a very ſmall Slip, where a Wall is built to part it from the Iſland. The Town ſtands upon an Eminence ſurrounded with Mountains, upon which the two Caſtles of St. Mary de la Guia and St. Francis are built: The Houſes of Macao are built after the European Faſhion, but a little lower: The Air is ſomewhat like that in the Indies; the Chineſe here are more numerous than the Portugueſe, tho' theſe latter pretend to be Maſters of the Place: They have a Governor there, but then the Chineſe have a Mandarin there too, who has the Juriſdiction of all the Country. Macao is a ſtrong Town both by Works and Situation, and well provided with Cannon: The Largeneſs and Safety of the Haven makes it a Place of great Trade. The Portugueſe have a Biſhop there, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Goa. * Relations de la Chine.

MACARIUS MAGNES, an Author cited by the Iconoclaſts as living in the ſecond Century, which muſt be let down to the fourth. Nicephorus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and thoſe who appear'd in Defence of Images, found a Manuſcript written by this Magnes, in which he is ſtyl'd a Biſhop, and painted as ſuch. The Deſign of his Work addreſs'd to Theoſthenes was to encounter the Heathens, and particularly the Ariſtotelian Philoſophers, who own'd one Sovereign Being with ſeveral other Deities under him, and who wrote againſt the Chriſtian Religion. The Paſſage cited by thoſe call'd Iconoclaſts, is particularly pointed againſt the Pagan Idols: But then the Author ſuppoſes the Chriſtians pay'd no Reſpect to Pictures or Statues. He won't even allow that Angels ſhould be repreſented in corporeal Forms: However he approves the Statue of the Woman whom our Saviour cur'd of the Iſſue of Blood: He affirms the Euchariſt is not the Figure but the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; which, by the Way, does by no means amount to Tranſubſtantiation. Some Criticks pretend to find a Tincture of Arianiſm and Origeniſm in this Diſcourſe. There is a Manuſcript of this Work now at Venice, and there are ſome Fragments of it in the French King's Library, * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent IV.

MACEDONIUS, a Phrygian Martyr of the IVth Century, and who ſuffer'd in the Reign of Julian the Apoſtate: The Occaſion was this; this Macedonius together with Theodulus and Tatian, two Friends of his, got into an heathen Temple at Myra the Night before 'twas to be open'd, and broke the Idols. The Governor, provok'd with this Hardineſs, was going to execute a great many of the Burghers, who were not concern'd in the Matter; but to prevent this Miſtake, Macedonius and the other two came in and inform'd againſt themſelves. The Governor, after having put 'em to ſeveral other Torments, order'd 'em to be laid upon a Gridiron, and broil'd to Death with a ſlow Fire. * Theodoret. Hiſt. lib. 3. cap. 6 Socrat. lib. 3. cap. 15. Sozom. lib. 5. cap. 7.

MACHANIDAS, a Tyrant of Lacedæmon, who ſeiz'd the Government upon the Death of Cleon Son of Leonidas, the laſt King of the Family of the Euryſtenides: This Uſurper being ſoon diſpatch'd was ſucceeded by Nabis, who was expell'd and routed by Flaminius the Roman Proconſul, and by Philopæmen the Græcian General; ſo that now the Lacedæmonians recover'd their Liberty, under the Protection of the Romans. * Polyb. lib. 13. Livy, lib. 34. cap. 26. Florus lib. 2. cap. 7.

MACHERA was a General Officer under Marc Antony: He receiv'd Orders from his General to march with two Legions and a thouſand Horſe to reinforce Herod againſt Antigonus: Machera took a Bribe of Antigonus, and came up with his Body to joyn the Troops of that Prince: But Antigonus it ſeems having ſome Diſtruſt of this Officer, order'd his Men to let fly at him; Machera highly provok'd with ſo unexpected a Welcome, went off to Emaus, and, without diſtinguiſhing between Friends and Enemies, order'd all the Jews he met with in his March, to be cut in pieces ces. At laſt, he got himſelf reconcil'd to Herod, and joyn'd his Troops againſt Antigonus. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 14. cap. 27.

MACHIAN, an Iſland in the Eaſtern Ocean. 'Tis one of the Molucca's, and lies on the Weſtern Coaſt of the Iſland Gilolo, near the Æquatour. 'Tis about ten or twelve Leagues in Circumference, and well inhabited. The Dutch have the Forts of Mauritio, Tafaſſo, Tabillola, and Nahacao or Naffaquia, and get great Quantities of Cloves from theſe Plantations. * Maty, Diction.

MACHMET-KIREY, Cham of the Crim Tartars in the 17th Century, was the laſt Prince of theſe People, who was independent of the Turk. His two Brothers revolting againſt him, and not being ſtrong enough to compaſs their Point, apply'd to Stephen Bathory King of Poland. Machmet-Kirey having demanded 'em ſeveral times of this Prince without Succeſs, requeſted his Confederate Amurath the Turkiſh Emperor to demand 'em himſelf. Amurath prevail'd with King Stephen to ſend theſe two Princes to Conſtantinople, where the Sultan kept 'em, and refus'd to remand 'em home. In the mean time, theſe Princes not being under a cloſe Guard, made their Eſcape, and being aſſiſted with a Body of Tartars and Muſcovites, renew'd the Rebellion againſt their Brother. However, they made no Hand of this Inſurrection, but were driven out of the Crim's Dominions. Machmet-Kirey thinking himſelf ill us'd by the Grand-Seignior, ſet down before Caffa, and preſs'd the Siege ſo cloſe that the Turks reſolv'd to ſurrender, provided they were not reliev'd in two Days. In the mean time, Amurath ſent one Aſlan a Tartar, whom he had kept confin'd a great while, and who paſs'd for natural Brother to Machmet-Kirey: This Aſlan the Sultan declar'd Viceroy of Crimean Tartary, upon Condition he ſhould continue firm to all the Succeſſors of the Ottoman Empire: This Aſlan went aboard a Fleet of forty Gallies, commanded by Admiral Ochiali, and threw Succours into Caffa; and after this, by the Prevalency of bribing, gain'd ſome of the chief Tartars, who murther'd Machmet-Kirey and his two Sons. In ſhort, Aſlan was recogniz'd Cham of the Crim Tartars, who of Friends and Allies of the Ottoman Empire, became now their Vaſſals. * De Hauteville, Relation Hiſtorique de la Pologne.

MADAGASCAR. For fifty Leagues in Morery Vol. II. read five hundred.

MADERUS (Joachim John) was living as far as 1678. He has done conſiderable Service to the learned World, both by publiſhing the Works of the ancients, and being an Author himſelf: To give the Reader a Catalogue of the firſt: He publiſh'd St. Polycarp's Epiſtle to the Philippians in 1652, that of Clemens Romanus to the Corinthians in 1654; that of St. Barnabas in 1656, Chronicon Montis ſeveri in 1665; Chronicon Dietmari Merſpurgenſis in 1667. Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica Adami Bremenſis in 1670; Chronicon Theod. Engelhuſii in 1671; Compendium Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ Haymonis the ſame Year; Gervaſius Tilberienſis de Imperio Romano Germanico in 1673; Onuphrius Panvinius de Triumphis in 1675: His own Works are, Diſputes upon the Councils 1650; a Diſſertation upon St. Laurence in 1656; the Antiquities of Brunſwick in 1661; a Treatiſe of Crowns in 1662; a Book upon Libraries in 1666; a Letter concerning the Antiquity of Schools in 1674. * Konig. Biblioth.

MADRAS, a Town belonging to the Engliſh, a Mile and a half from St. Thomas in the Eaſt Indies. * Carre, Voyages des Indes, &c.

MADURE (the Principality of,) a ſmall Territory upon the Coaſt of Coromandel in the Indian Peninſula on this Side the Ganges. It reaches from Cape Comori to Cape Negapatan, being bounded on the North by the Principality of Tanjaor, and on the Weſt by the Mountains of Gate, which part it from the Coaſt of Malabar, and at other Quarters 'tis waſh'd by the Sea. The Coaſt of this Country, which ſtretches about ſeventy five Leagues in Length, is call'd the Fiſhery Coaſt, becauſe every Year in April there is great Pearl fiſhing; fifty or ſixty thouſand Men being employ'd a Fortnight or three Weeks in this Buſineſs, which makes the Wealth of the Country. The chief Towns of the Naique or Prince of Madure are, Madure the Capital, Manancor, Tutucori, Manapar and Jacancuri. * Maty, Diction.

* MAGDALEN (St. Mary.) To add ſomething to what has been obſerv'd upon this Article in Morery Vol. II. Some Greek Authors, as Modeſtus Biſhop of Jeruſalem, write, that ſhe follow'd St. John and the bleſſed Virgin to Epheſus, and dy'd there. St. Gregory of Tours agrees with this Teſtimony, which is a good Proof that in the ſixth Century 'twas not believ'd that Mary Magdalen dy'd at Marſeilles. In the eighth Century the Relicts of Mary Magdalen had a Reſpect paid 'em at Epheſus, as appears by Guillebaud Biſhop of Aichſtedt in Germany in his Travels to the Levant. The Menæon of the Greeks is another Authority for the ſame Aſſertion. Zonaras reports that the Emperor Leo the Wiſe had Mary Magdalen's Relicts remov'd from Epheſus to Conſtantinople. The Story of Mary Magdalen's coming into Provence is no older than the tenth Century: Since which time, the Monks of the Abby of St. Maximin in Provence, and thoſe belonging to the Abby of Vezelay in Burgundy, pretend to have her Corps. Both Partiesare plentifully furniſh'd with Pope's Bulls; ſome of which affirm St. Mary Magdalen's Corps are at Vezelay, and others at St. Maximin: But 'tis pretty plain none of theſe Inſtruments are to be rely'd on.

As to the Queſtion whether Mary Magdalen be the ſame with her call'd the Sinner, and whether ſhe was Lazarus's Siſter, may eaſily be determin'd by the Goſpels and Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity. Firſt, the Sinner was a common Woman of Nain, her Name is not mention'd in the Goſpel, ſhe ſaw our Saviour but once, when ſhe anointed his Feet, and was ſent away by our Lord with this Expreſſion, Go in Peace; whereas Mary Magdalen was a Perſon of Condition in Galilee, cur'd by our Saviour of Poſſeſſion, and who attended him conſtantly afterwards. Secondly, Mary Magdalen can't be Mary Lazarus's Siſter, for this latter liv'd at Bethany near Jeruſalem, whereas Magdalen dwelt in Galilee. The Evangeliſts always make 'em different Perſons, and call one Mary Magdalen, and the other Mary, Martha's Siſter: Their Actions are likewiſe differently mark'd in the Goſpels. The Fathers before St. Gregory always make theſe three Women different Perſons; no Eccleſiaſtical Writer, before this Pope, affirming the Sinner and Mary Magdalen the ſame. In fine, the moſt conſiderable Writers of the ſeventeenth Century diſtinguiſh theſe three Women, and ſo do the Breviaries lately reform'd.

MAGLIANO, in Latin Manliana, Manlialum. There are ſeveral Towns of this Name in Italy; one in Tuſcany, four Leagues from Orbitello to the North; another in the Patrimony of St. Peter near the Tyber, two Leagues below Rome; a third in the farther Abruzzo to the North of the Lake Calano, and two Leagues from the Town of that Name: To which we may add a ſmall Town in Terra Sabina near the Tyber, over againſt Citta Caſtellana. This ſmall Town is a Biſhop's See, which has Juriſdiction in all the Sabine Territory, and is always fill'd with one of the ſix eldeſt Cardinals. * Maty, Diction.

MAGNI (Valerian) a Capuchin in the Milaneſe, had the Reputation of a conſiderable Divine and Philoſopher in the ſeventeenth Century; of a Divine by his Controverſial Tracts, and particularly by that entitled Judicium de Catholicorum Regulâ credendi, publiſh'd A. D. 1628; and which he defended in ſeveral Anſwers againſt the Proteſtants: And as for a Philoſopher, he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by an open Oppoſition to the Ariſtotelian Philoſophy, and by the Phyſicks written by him: One of his Books in this Science is entitled Atheiſmus Ariſtotelis; here he inſtances in the Torricellian Experiment concerning a Vacuum, and claims it as his own Invention. He has likewiſe printed ſeveral other philoſophical Tracts, viz. at Venice A. D. 1639, a Book entitled, Ocularis Demonſtratio Loci ſine locati Corporis ſucceſſive moti in vacuo, & luminis nulli Corpori inhærentis; At Rome A. D. 1642, De Luce Mentium & ejus Imagine; at Warſaw A. D. 1648, De Peripat. de Logica; de per ſe Notis; de Syllogiſmo demonſtrativo; Experimenta de Incorruptibilitate Aquæ; de Vitro mirabiliter fracto. Father Valerian was very much eſteem'd by his Order, and went through the moſt conſiderable Offices in it. Pope Urban VIII. made him Apo-Apoſtolical Miſſionary for Germany, Poland, Bohemia, Hungary, and head Miſſionary in the North. 'Twas by the Advice of this Capuchin that Pope Urban VIII. ſuppreſs'd the Order of Jeſuiteſſes A. D. 1631. Vladiſlaus, King of Poland, requeſted a Cardinal's Hat for him; but the Jeſuits, with whom he happen'd to claſh, oppos'd that Preferment. The Occaſion of the Miſunderſtanding between the Jeſuits and this Capuchin was his bringing the Landgraves of Darmſtadt and Heſſe over to the Church of Rome, without calling in theſe Fathers to his Aſſiſtance. The Jeſuits charg'd him with Hereſy, becauſe being once eagerly engag'd to prove the Authority of Tradition, he happen'd to let fall that the Primacy and Infallibility of the Pope of Rome could not be prov'd from Scripture; but that Tradition was the only Ground for theſe Privileges. The Jeſuits having delated him for an Heretick, got him impriſon'd: And here, he wrote ſeveral ſmart Tracts againſt the Jeſuits in his Defence: At laſt, he was enlarg'd by the Interpoſition of the Emperor Ferdinand III. Towards the End of his Life he retir'd to Saltzbourg, where he dy'd ſeventy five Years of Age. He wrote an Anſwer to a Book of Commenius's entitled, Abſurditatum Echo, and printed under the counterfeit Name of Ulricus Newſeldius. The Title of the Anſwer is, Echo Abſurditatum Ulrici de Newſeld blæſa, demonſtrante Valeriano magno Capucino, printed at Cracow 1646. * Paſchal. 15 & 16 Lettr. Provinc. Heidegger, Hiſt. Papatus. Baillet, Vie de Deſcartes. Andreas Carolus, memorabilium Sæculi 17. lib. 4. cap. 9. Bayle, Diction. Critique.

MAHAGEM, a Town within the Territory of Jemen in Arabia the Happy, which parts the two Provinces of the ſame Arabia call'd Jemamah and Temamah. It ſtands in a fruitful Plain to the North-Eaſt of the Town Zebid, from which 'tis ſix Days Journey diſtant. The Perſian Geographer places it in the firſt Climate, and reports it ſmall, but populous. Edriſſi, who puts it in the ſixth Diviſion of the firſt Climate, reports it ſeven Days Journey from Sanaa the Capital of Jemen, and eight from Aden, which ſtands upon the Ocean near the Mouth of the Red Sea, and that the little Country call'd Dahes lies between theſe two Towns. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Oriental.

MAHOMARA, a ſmall Town in Barbary, within the Kingdom and Province of Fez, upon the Confines of the Province Aſgor. Mahomara has a very good Haven at the Mouth of the River Suba into the Atlantick Ocean: It belong'd to the Spaniard ſince the Year 1614, but was retaken by the Moors A. D. 1681, and is now in the Emperor of Morocco's Poſſeſſion. * Marmol, de l'Afrique.

MAHARAH, a Town in Arabia the Happy, where the Inhabitants ſpeak a Language quite different from the reſt of the Arabians. It ſtands in the firſt Climate, as the Arabians reckon: The Soil is very barren, having neither Arable nor Wood, excepting the Tree call'd Ban. However, there's Plenty of Camels and Sheep, which feed upon the Berries and Leaves of this Tree, from which they draw Oyl call'd Dehen elban by the Arabians, and which carries a great deal of Trade through all Arabia. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MAHOMET IV. See Staremberg and Vienna in Morery Vol. II. and particularly Charles Duke of Lorrain in Morery Vol. I. where the Siege of Vienna A. D. 1683 is related at length.

MAJESTY. The Title of Majeſty has been formerly given to Popes, Archbiſhops, Kings and Princes. Hugh of Soiſſons and Peter Abbot of St. Remy writing to Pope Alexander III. in the twelfth Century, ſalute him with the Title of Majeſty. Stephen of Tournay addreſſes Lucius III. Alexander's Succeſſor with the ſame Ceremony; and Arnold Liſieux gives the ſame Title not only to Alexander III. but likewiſe to Hugh Archbiſhop of Roan. It does not appear that Biſhops had this exalted Diſtinction: However Bruno Biſhop of Langres was ſo kind as to give it himſelf; for in a Grant after having ſtyl'd himſelf humilis Præſul, he adds, noſtram adiens Majeſtatem, which riſes to an Inconſiſtency humourſome enough. Pope John VIII. in the ninth Century gives the Title of Majeſty to King Charles the Bald; and Ivo Carnutenſis to Philip the Fair in the thirteenth. Hugh, Earl of Champaigne, took the ſame Title in the twelfth Century; for at the End of a Deed made by him he ſets forth, 'twas ſeal'd Sigillo Majeſtatis noſtræ. In the following Centuries the Title of Majeſty was more appropriated and reſtrain'd, which is pretty remarkable; for uſually all great Titles ſink by Degrees to lower Quality, and grow more common. The German Emperors endeavour'd to reſerve this Style and the clos'd Crown to themſelves: 'Twas not before the Reign of Francis I, that the Title of Majeſty was commonly given to the French Kings: At the Treaty of Cambray none but the Emperor has it, who in three Places there is ſtyl'd his Majeſty. At the Treaty of Creſpy, Charles V. has the Addition of his Imperial Majeſty, and Francis I. of his Royal Majeſty: And at the Treaty of Chateau Cambreſis the French King Henry II. is ſtyl'd his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; and Philip II. King of Spain his Catholick Majeſty. In the Year 1641 the Emperor refus'd to receive a Letter from the King of Denmark, becauſe he only gave him the Title of Imperial Dignity; and it had been a long time the Cuſtom for this King to ſalute other Princes with only the Diſtinction of Royal Dignity; tho' his Predeceſſors for more than ſix hundred Years ſince have addreſs'd the Kings of France in the Style of Majeſty. Amongſt the Princes of the Empire, Maximilian, Elector of Bavaria, was the firſt who gave the King of France the Title of Majeſty; which Prince in Return call'd him Brother inſtead of Couſin, which before was the cuſtomary Manner of ſaluting him. The three Eccleſiaſtical Electors us'd the ſame Style with Reſpect to the King of France. The Elector of Brandenbourg agreed to call the King of Poland Majeſty, upon condition this Prince would call him Sereníty: This Elector offer'd the ſame Ceremony to the French King's Plenipotentiaries at Munſter upon the ſame Terms; but the Condition was not accepted. At preſent the Elector of Brandenbourg, and all the reſt of the ſecular Electors, give the French King the Title of Majeſty, and that King calls them Brothers: The Eccleſiaſtical Electors, who are Princes born, are ſaluted with the ſame Diſtinction; whereas if they are Princes only upon the ſcore of their Electorate, he calls 'em only Couſin.

In the Year 1646 there was a Diſpute at Munſter upon a Letter which the Queen of France, Mother to Lewis XIV, deſign'd to ſend to the Emperor Ferdinand III. 'twas a Letter of Condolance upon the Death of the Empreſs: Now this Queen reſolv'd not to write 'till ſhe was aſſur'd ſhe ſhould be treated with Majeſty in the Anſwer. The Court of Vienna pretended that King Henry IV. of France had only been ſaluted with Serenity by the Emperor, notwithſtanding this King addreſs'd him with the Title of Majeſty, and that they muſt be govern'd by the Style of their Chancery; but this Colour would not paſs in France. The Emperor's and the King of France's Plenipotentiaries agreed afterwards that when theſe two Princes wrote to each other with their own Hand, one ſhould be call'd Imperial Majeſty, and the other Royal Majeſty: This was the Form at the Treaties of Weſtphalia, where the Emperor is ſtyl'd ſacra Cæſarea Majeſtas, and the French King and the King of Sweden Sacra Regia Majeſtas. This is the cuſtomary Practice in all the Treaties between the Emperor, France, and Sweden: But with Denmark there's ſomething of Abatement, Regia Majeſtas Dania being the whole Ceremony without Sacra.

'Tis only ſince Charles V. was choſen Emperor that the Kings of Spain have taken the Title of Majeſty, being till this time contented with that of Highneſs.

Henry VIII. was the firſt King of England who took the Title of Majeſty; Grace and Highneſs being the Regal Style of his Predeceſſors.

At preſent the Title of Majeſty is common to every King: The Pope ſalutes 'em all in this manner; and the ſame paſſes interchangeably with each other. The French Ambaſſadors in Poland, during the Interregnum, after the Death of King Ladiſlaus IV, gave the Title of Majeſty to Prince Caſimir his Brother, even before he was elected, upon the ſcore of his Pretenſion to the Crown of Sweden. * Memoires du Tems.

MAINLAND, formerly Romana, an Iſland in the Caledonian Ocean, different from another anciently call'd Pomonia, mention'd in Morery: 'Tis the chief of the Schellantick Iſlands belonging to the King of Denmark: 'Tis about twenty Leagues in Length, and five in Breadth. The Inhabitants formerly dwelt upon the Coaſt, and liv'd only upon Fiſh; but now they go up higher and improve the Ground. * Maty, Diction.

MAJOR, RIO MAJOR, formerly call'd Naſabath and Nabar, a great River in Africk; it riſes in Biledulgerid in the Country of Mezzab, croſſes the Country of Zeb, and after having parted the Provinces of Alger and Bugia in Barbary, falls into the Gulph of Bug, at a Town of the ſame Name. * Maty, Diction.

MAJOUR, the Lake Majour, formerly Verbanus Lacus, is a great Lake in the Duchy of Milan. It lies partly in the Earldom of Anghiera, and partly in the Bailliages belonging to the Swiſs. 'Tis twelve Leagues from North to South, and about two in Breadth; the River Teſin runs through it, and upon the Sides of it are built the Towns Anghiera, Seſto, Arona, Palanza, and Locarno with a great many Villages. * Maty, Diction.

* MAIRES of the Palace. To what is related concerning this Office in Morery Vol. II. may be added the following Liſt. The Kingdom of France being ſubdivided into three independent Monarchies, France, Auſtraſia and Burgundy; there were Maires of the Palace in each Diviſion; of which, for the better underſtanding the Hiſtory of thoſe Reigns, a Liſt ſhall be inſerted.

Maires of the Palace of the Kings of France.

Badegeſilus, who was afterwards Biſhop of Mans, govern'd under Clotaire I.
Gondoland, under the ſame King Clotaire.
Landry, under Chilperic I, and Clotaire II.
Gondoald, under Clotaire II.
Ega, or Eganes, under Dagobert and Clovis II.
Almaric, under Clovis II.
Grimoald, Son to Pepin II.
Erchinoald, or Herginold, under Dagobert and Clovis II.
Leudeſe, or Lieuthere, under Thierry.
Ebroin, under Clotaire Son of Clovis.
Waraton, under Thierry, after Ebroin.
Berthaire, Son in Law to Waraton, under the ſame Thierry.
Nordebert, under Clovis II. and Childebert II.
Grimoald, Son of Pepin the younger under Childebert II.
Theudoald, Son of Grimoald, under Dagobert Son of Childebert.
Ragenfrede, under King Dagobert.
Charles Martel, under Thierry Son of Dagobert.
Pepin, Son of Charles Martel.

Maires of the Palace of the Kings of Auſtraſia.

Chrodin, under Sigebert I.
Gogo, under the ſame Sigebert.
Florentian, under Childebert King of Auſtraſia.
Wulfoad, under the ſame Childebert.
Warnachaire, under Thierri II.
Pepin the Elder, or the Old, under Clothaire I, Dagobert II, and Sigebert II.
Martin, under Sigebert II.
Grimoald, under the ſame Sigebert II.
Adalgiſus, under the ſame King.
Pepin the younger, under Thierry Son of Clovis, and under Clovis.

Maires of the Palace of the Kings of Burgundy.

Warnachaire, under Thierry King of Burgundy.
Berthoald, under the ſame Thierry.
Protade, under the ſame King.
Claude, of a Roman Family, under the ſame Thierry.
Flaochat, under Clovis II.

In the Kingdom of Aquitan Hiſtory mentions Hermaire and Robert under Pepin A. D. 828. Through the Reigns of the Kings of the third or Capetian Race, thoſe who ſucceeded in a reſembling Office to the Maires of the Palace were called Seneſchals or Stewards. * Gregor. Turon. Hiſtor. Franc. Du Cheſne, in Hiſtor. Paſquier, aux Recherches. Andre Favin, Traite des premiers Officers de la Couronne. Mezeray, Hiſt. de France. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latinit.

MAIRET (N * * *) a French Poet living in the middle of the ſeventeenth Century, wrote ſeveral Plays paſſable enough, viz. Sylvia, Sidonia, &c. But his beſt Stage Performance is Sophonisba, which was always acted with great Applauſe, and better receiv'd than Corneille's Sophonisba, tho' he wrote after Mairet. * Charles Sorel, Biblioth. Franc. Traité de la Pöeſie. S. Evremond, Diſſert. ſur la Tragedie d'Alexandre, par Racine.

MAISTRE (Louis Iſaac le) commonly De Sacy, was born at Paris in 1613. He was educated at the College of Beauvais, under Anthony Arnaud Doctor of the Sorbonne, his Uncle. He was a great Genius and apply'd himſelf to the Study of Divinity: His firſt publick Performance was his tranſlating the Office of the Church, or divine Service into French, with the Hymns in Verſe; the whole is commonly call'd les Heures de Port-Royal, that is, the Canonical Hours of Port-Royal. He tranſlated likewiſe in Verſe and Proſe St. Proſper's Poem againſt the ungrateful. When Search was made for thoſe that liv'd in the outward Apartments of the Abby of Port-Royal, whither he had retir'd, he abſconded, and being diſcover'd was put into the Baſtille, where he remain'd two Years and a half: Here he wrote the Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament under the Name of Royamont. Upon his Enlargement he wrote upon the Tranſlation of the Bible, begun by Anthony le Maiſtre his Brother, and liv'd to publiſh Part of it with a literal and allegorical Expoſition. He is likewiſe the Author of a Verſion of the Pſalms from the Hebrew and Vulgate, the Canonical Hours upon the 119th Pſalm, Beati Immaculati; and St. Chryſoſtom's Homilies upon St. Matthew: The Tranſlation of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt printed under the Name of the Sieur de Beuil was done by this Maiſtre. After his Death his Poem upon the Euchariſt was printed. He dy'd January 1684, ſeventy one Years of Age. * Memoires du Tems.

MAKHAN, or Mahan, a Town which gives Name to a great Plain, ſtretching between the Towns of Bavard and Meru in Khoraſan: 'Tis the Birth-Place of Soliman Schah, Father of Ortogrul, and Grandfather to Othman, Founder of the Dynaſty of the Othmanides or Ottomans. Sultan Babur deſcended from Tamerlan, gave the Government of the Towns Mahan and Meru to Mirza Sangiar his Kinſman, in the Year of the Hegira 895. Some Turkiſh Hiſtorians, who give an Account of Othman's Genealogy, ſet this Town in the Tranſoxan Province, thinking it an Advantage it ſeems, to draw the Original of their Princes from a more diſtant Country. * D' Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

MAKHUL (Abu Abdallah Alſchami) a famous Mahometan Divine and Lawyer. He was born in that Part of the Indies which the Arabians call Send, that is to ſay on this Side the Ganges on the Bank of the River Indus. When the Arabians conquer'd this Province, Makhul was taken Priſoner, and made a Slave. But his Ingenuity and Improvement in the Arabian Learning procur'd him his Liberty; and ſoon after he was made Mufti of Damaſcus: Three other Perſons of Quality having the ſame Poſt at Medina, Baſſora, and Cufa, which at that time were the four Metropolitical Seats for Muſulmaniſm. Theſe three other Muftis were Maſſiab, Haſſan Albaſri, and Schaabi. Makhul dy'd in the Year of the Hegira 118: 'Tis ſaid of him, that he never made any Deciſion without prefacing theſe Words; 'Tis an Opinion, and all Opinion is ſubject to Miſtake, for there is no Certainty or Truth but only in God Almighty. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

* MALACCA. Under this Article in Morery Vol. II. for three thouſand Men read thirty thouſand.

* MALACHY. To ſay ſomething by way of Addition to Morery concerning the pretended Prophecies of this Archbiſhop of Armagh. 'Tis certain that no Author has ſo much as mention'd theſe Prophecies before Arnold de Wyon: This Wyon was a Flanderkin of Deway, and the Country growing troubleſome by the War between the Dutch and Spaniards, he retir'd into Italy, and enter'd himſelf in the Congregation of St. Juſtina of Padua: Here he wrote two Books; the firſt is a Genealogy of the Family of the Anicii, from whence whence he draws St. Bennet's Deſcent; the other is a Hiſtory of the eminent Men of his Order. Theſe two Books are entitled Lignum Vitæ, and dedicated to Philip II. King of Spain in 1595. In his ſecond Performance he mentions St. Malachy a Monk of Benchor, and Archbiſhop of Armagh: He inſerts the Prophecy of this Saint, becauſe, as he obſerves, 'twas never yet printed; and that the Sight of it was much deſir'd as a Curioſity: Thoſe, who believe Malachy's Predictions ſpurious, take Notice that Arnold de Wyon had great Reaſon to affirm 'twas never before printed, for the Prophecies, in all likelihood, were never extant either in Print or Manuſcript till 1590. Thus, whatever is predicted before Gregory XIV. is made ſince, and 'tis eaſy to propheſy of what's paſt. And for this wiſe Reaſon Malachy's Prophecies upon the Birth-place, Profeſſion, or Coats of Arms of the ſucceeding Popes, hold well enough till this Period; but thoſe that come after Gregory XIV. are very much forc'd. Farther; 'tis obſerv'd that St. Bernard, who wrote St. Malachy's Life, and mentions his ſlendereſt Predictions, takes no Notice of theſe Prophecies; and which is more, no Contemporary Author ſays any thing of them; neither Otho Friſingenſis, nor Johannes Sarisburienſis Biſhop of Chartres, nor Peter the Venerable, Abbot of Cluni: To which we may add, that a great many others who have wrote upon the Popes ſince Malachy's Death, ſay nothing on't: For Inſtance, the Continuator of Marianus Scotus, Bordini, Platina, Papyrius Maſſonus, Onuphrius Panvinius, and Joannel who wrote in 1570, are wholly ſilent: Even the Iriſh, who have taken ſo much care to record the Miracles of the Saints of their Country, and have publiſh'd the Lives of St. Patrick, of St. Columbanus the Abbot, and St. Bridget under the Character of three of their Prophets, with particular Mention of their Revelations, deliver nothing of this ſupernatural Foreſight of St. Malachy. Thomas de Meſſingham an Iriſhman, at the End of his Lives of the Iriſh Saints publiſh'd in 1624, adds the Hiſtory of St. Patrick's Purgatory, and St. Malachy's Prophecy. Robert Ruſca has inſerted the ſame Prophecy in his Hiſtory of the Ciſtercians: But Angelus Manricus who wrote the Annals of this Order, holds the Prophecy ungenuine. Baronius, Spondanus, Bzovius and Raynaldus make no mention of theſe Predictions in their Eccleſiaſtical Annals; neither does Ciaconius ſpeak of 'em in his Lives of the Popes and Cardinals, Thus this Silence of four hundred Years amongſt Authors of ſo conſiderable Character, is a violent Preſumption that this Prophecy is no better than Romance: 'Tis over and above remark'd that there are Miſtakes and Anachroniſms in theſe Predictions: That eight Antipopes are intermix'd with the Popes fairly elected, if the Interpretation annex'd is to govern; viz. Victor IV. Calixtus III. Paſchal III. Nicholas V. and Clement VIII. that here the Chronology or Order of time is diſturb'd and miſmark'd, Victor IV. Calixtus III. and Paſchal III. being ſet in theſe Predictions before Alexander III. who was their Predeceſſor. Thus Clement V. Benedict. XIII. and Clement VIII. Antipopes, are put before Urban VI. who was crown'd at Rome on Eaſter-Day A. D. 1378. As to the Explanation of the Ænigmatical Terms in this Prophecy, Arnold. de Wyon makes Ciaconius a Dominican the Author, who liv'd to the Year 1595. But 'tis obſerv'd by the Learned, that Ciaconius ſays nothing of this Explanation in his Lives of the Popes, and that thoſe who have examin'd Ciaconius's Works even to his looſe Papers, ſay nothing of theſe Prophecies nor their Interpretation.

To underſtand the Remarks upon this famous Prophecy, 'twill be proper to give a Sketch of it here in Latin, adding the Popes Names, the Explanation in Engliſh, together with the time of their reſpective Elections, as follows.

Years of Election.	Prophecies.	Popes Elected.	Explication.
1143.	Ex Caſtro Tiberis. From the Caſtle of Tiber.	Celeſtin II.	Born at a Caſtle upon the Tiber.
1144.	Inimicus expulſus. The Enemy expell'd.	Lucius II.	Of the Family of Caccianemici, of Bolonia.
1145.	Ex Magnitudine Montis. Of the Greatneſs of the Hill.	Eugenius III.	Born at a Caſtle near Piſa, call'd Grandmont.
1153.	Abbas Suburranus. The Abbot of Suburra.	Anaſtaſius IV.	An Abbot call'd Conrad Suburri.
1155.	De Rure albo. Of the white Field, or the Field of Alba.	Adrian IV.	Born at St. Albans in England, Abbot of St. Ruf, of the Order of Canons Regular, (who wear white Habits) afterwards Biſhop of Alba.

This may be ſufficient to give the Reader an Idea of the whole prophetical Series, which is carry'd down to 1692. when Innocent XII. was elected. I ſhall conclude with obſerving, that the Explanation of theſe myſtical Predictions is drawn from the Countries of the reſpective Popes, their Names, Coats of Arms, Titles of their Cardinalate, the Condition of their Birth, their Profeſſion and other Circumſtances, which may give ſome Hints for explaining the Emblem. * Le P. Meneſtrier, Traité ſur les Propheties Attribuées a S. Malachie.

MALAMOCCO, in Latin Medoacus Portus, Methamaucum, a Town with a good Haven: It ſtands in a ſmall Iſland in the Gulph of Venice, about two Leagues from Venice. There was formerly an Epiſcopal See in this Iſland, but the Sea gaining Ground the Biſhop's Seat was remov'd to Chioggia. * Maty, Diction.

MALATIYAH, in Latin Melitene, Melitine, Melita, a Town of Turky upon the Euphrates: It ſtands five or ſix Leagues above Maraſch: 'Tis an Archbiſhop's See. * Maty, Diction.

MAL-CONTENTS, a Faction ſo call'd in France, in the Reign of Charles IX. At this time there were three conſiderable Parties in France; viz. the Faithful, the Novelliſts, and the Mal-contents: Theſe laſt were diſguſted for being overlook'd, and not preferred ſuitable to their Quality and Deſert: The Faithful were ſo call'd becauſe they continu'd firm to the Proteſtant Religion: The Novelliſts were thoſe that went to Maſs after the Maſſacre on St. Bartholomew's Day. De la Noue and de la Tour, Viſcount of Turenne, and ſome others, were in the Claſs of thoſe call'd the Faithful: The King of Navarre and the Prince of Conde went under the Denomination of the Novelliſts: And almoſt all the Lords were diſſatisfy'd with the Management of the Queen-Mother, who govern'd by the Advice of two or three Foreigners. Theſe Lords choſe the Duke of Alençon the King's Brother for their Chief. * Mezeray under Charles IX.

* MALDONAT (John.) By way of Addition to this Article in Morery Vol. II. We may obſerve that the Univerſity of Paris which held the Immaculate Conception as a Point of Faith, delated Maldonat to Peter de Gondi their Biſhop; and the Faculty of Divinity being conſulted by this Prelate, were divided upon the Queſtion; ſome of 'em holding the Opinion of the Immaculate Conception an Article of Faith, and others carrying it no farther than an wholeſome Doctrine. The Biſhop of Paris declared for Maldonat, and pronounc'd him abſolv'd January 17, 1575. The Aſſembly of the Faculty of Divinity determin'd on the contrary, that 'twas neceſſary to believe the Immaculate Conception as a Point of Faith. The Biſhop of Paris, provok'd with this Deciſion, excommunicated the Dean and the Syndic, who appeal'd from this Sentence to the Parliament; where, after the Caſe was argued, the Court order'd that theſe two Doctors ſhould be abſolv'd ad Cautelam. Upon this Maldonat retir'd to the Jeſuits College at Bourges, where, for about a Year and a half, he ſpent his time in putting his Works now printed in Order. As to his Character racter he must be own'd an extraordinary Person: He was a good Linguist, Philologer and Divine; understood Greek and Hebrew; spoke Latin with a great deal of Elocution, and was well vers'd in Ecclesiastical Antiquity: He had a clear and methodical Head, and express'd himself with Ease and Spirit: And tho' he was no streight-lac'd Divine, his Judgment was generally sound; tho' sometimes he seems not to be without an Alloy of Prejudice and Prepossession. * See the Authorities for this Article in Morery Vol II.

MALEBRANCHE (Nicholas,) Priest of the Oratory, Son of Nicholas Malebranche the King's Secretary, and Catherine de Lauson, was born at Paris August 6, 1638. He apply'd himself to the Study of Physics and Metaphysicks upon the Cartesian Principles: And in the Year 1673 printed the first Volume of his Book, entitled la Recherce de la Verite, or the Search of Truth: This Book was receiv'd with general Approbation: The Niceness and Solidity of his Sentiments and Remarks, express'd in a genteel entertaining Manner, made him valu'd by every Body of Capacity and Genius. The next Year Malebranche publish'd his second Volume, and his Explanations which make a third. Afterwards he publish'd a New Edition enlarg'd to four Volumes, in which there are a great many Improvements with Respect to Physics and Metaphysics. This excellent Performance sufficiently discovers the Force of Malebranche's Genius, and makes him justly admir'd by the greatest Philosophers of the Age. Afterwards he engag'd himself in the Controversy concerning Grace, and in his Book of Nature and Grace delivers a new System, to reconcile the different Opinions of Divines upon this Subject. The famous M. Arnold, who was one of his Friends, could not go into his Sentiments concerning Grace; nor into his Notions, of our knowing all things we know, immediately in God. M. Arnold, who was a Man of Learning and Spirit, snatch'd his Pen and wrote against P. Malebranche. This Father made a quick Return, and wrote an Answer to Arnold's Tract of true and false Ideas; three Letters by way of Animadversion upon Arnold's Defence against the Answer to the Book of true and false Ideas; an Answer to Arnold's Dissertation concerning the Miracles wrought under the Mosaic Institution; several Letters by way of Answer to the philosophical and theological Remarks of M. Arnold against the Treatise of Nature and Grace, in two Volumes: Four Letters in Reply to them of M. Arnold: An Answer to a third posthumous Letter of Arnold, upon the Subject of Ideas, and the Sensation of Pleasure, wherein he lays down some Rules by way of Precaution against Prejudice. Some time after he publish'd his Tracts upon Metaphysicks and religious Subjects, with an Enlargement of three Discourses upon Death: Some People suspecting Malebranche drew towards the Bishop of Cambray's System sur le Pur Amour, or Pure Love, he wrote a little Tract upon this Subject to make himself better understood. P. Francis Lamy a Benedictin, attack'd Malebranche upon this Argument, and charg'd him with Inconsistency; Malebranche reply'd in a Tract concerning the Love of God. Being desired to write something to assist the Conversion of the Chinese, by reforming their Idea of the sovereign Being, and disentangling them from their Pagan Mistakes upon this Argument, he drew up a Conference between a Christian and a Chinese Philosopher: To conclude with his Works; at the End of his Search of Truth he has added some Rules concerning the Laws of Motion; together with an Answer to M. Regis touching Ideas and the Pleasure of the Senses. When the Academy of Sciences was reform'd, P. Malebranche was chosen an honorary Member. His Probity and Piety are said to be no less commendable than his Learning, Genius and Judgment: He went a great Way in Mathematics and Metaphysics, and is notwithstanding a very polite and Gentlemanlike Author. * Memoires du Tems.

MANAHEM, an Essen. Josephus gives him the Character of a Person of great Probity and Reputation, and one who was suppos'd to have the Gift of Prophecy. This Manahem happening to see Herod (afterwards the Great) studying at School, he foretold that he would one Day be King of the Jews, and at the same time declar'd to him that he was likely to prove an irreligious and unjust Governor, and gave him good Advice, which was lost upon Herod: 'Tis true he did not much mind the Prediction at that time; but when he succeeded so far as to mount the Throne, he sent for this Essen, and ask'd him whether his Reign would last ten Years: Manahem assur'd him 'twould reach to thirty, but determin'd nothing about any longer Period. Herod being highly pleas'd with this Answer dismiss'd him with Marks of Esteem, and afterwards us'd all the Essens kindly upon his Account. * Joseph. Antiquit. lib. 15. cap. 13.

MANAHEM, Son of Judas Galilæus, who, when Cyrenius or Quirinus was Governor, reproach'd the Jews that, instead of living under the Sovereignty of God alone, they were so cowardly as to own the Romans for their Masters: Manahem, this Judas's Son, drawing in some Persons of Quality, a great many Highwaymen, and other desperate People who had nothing to lose, sat down before the Fort Massada, plunder'd King Herod's Magazine, then lately dead, furnish'd his Faction with Arms, and having encreas'd his Troops, march'd to Jerusalem, carry'd the Place, expell'd the Romans, and got himself proclaim'd King. After this he went to the Temple to offer Sacrifices, and return God Thanks for his Accession to the Throne: And his next Step was the Murder of the High-Priest Ananias and his Brother Hezechias. But his Prosperity was but short-liv'd; for one Eleazar, a Person of great Wealth and Interest, provok'd with this Insolence and Barbarity, prevail'd with the People to rise upon this Manahem and his Adherents. In short, they kill'd a great many of 'em, and Manahem running of, and absconding in a Place call'd Ophlas was discover'd next Day, and dragg'd to Execution. * Joseph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 2. cap. 32.

MANAO, one of the Ladrone Islands; it lies in the Indian Ocean, between the Island Chemocoa and the English Island. * Maty, Diction.

MANAR, an Indian Town beyond the Ganges; 'tis the Capital of a Territory belonging to the Kingdom of Pegu; it stands upon the River Menan, upon the Confines of the Kingdom of Siam. * Maty, Diction.

MANASSES, the forty second Jewish High-Priest, and the tenth after the Captivity. He succeeded Eleazar II. and held that Station three and twenty Years. This Manasses married Nicasis Sanballat's Daughter a Cuthæan, and Governor of Samaria for Darius King of Persia: Sanballat pitch'd upon Manasses for his Son in Law, because Jerusalem was a Town of great Consideration, and because he concluded this Match would gain him the Affection of the Jews: But this Project did not altogether succeed; for the Jewish Nobility would not endure Manasses's marrying a Foreigner; this being a Violation of the Mosaic Law, and corresponding too much with idolatrous Nations, which had been partly the Cause of their Captivity, together with a great many other Calamities brought upon 'em. They mov'd therefore that Manasses should either send his Wife Home, or not come near the Altar; and Jaddus, press'd close with these Remonstrances, forbad him the executing his Office. Manasses, chaf'd with this Opposition, complain'd to his Father in Law who liv'd at Sychem. Sanballat promis'd him that, upon Condition he would live with his Daughter, he would build him a Temple upon Mount Gerizim; and by this means the High-Priesthood would not only be secur'd, but he might rise to be Prince of Judæa; for the Jews in all likelihood would desert the Jerusalem Worship, and come over to his Temple. Sanballat's Promise came to pass in some Measure; for after Alexander the Great had routed Darius, and sat down before Tyre, Sanballat left his old Master, went into Alexander's Interest, and joyn'd him at the Head of eight thousand Men, which was a seasonable Reinforcement: By this Service he easily procur'd Alexander's Permission to build this Temple, and make his Son in Law High-Priest. Josephus (who relates this History in his Antiquities lib. 12. cap. 7.) says nothing of Manasses's being at the Head of the sacerdotal Order at Jerusalem, but only that he was a Priest, and that Jaddus his Brother and High-Priest forbad him officiating at the Altar: 'Tis Tirinus in the forty second Chapter of his Chronologia sacra who sets him him at the Head of Religion in Jeruſalem, and gives him three and twenty Years Pontificate. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

MANDEB, a Cape which leads into the Red Sea on the Side of Æthiopia: And here the Shore being mountainous, the old Eaſtern Geographers pretend 'tis all Loadſtone, and draws Ships to it which have any conſiderable Quantity of Iron in their Building, which is juſt as true as the reſembling Story they tell of Mahomet's Tomb: 'Tis this Mountain which gives Name to the Streight of Babel-Mandeb, commonly written Babel-Mandel. The Entry into this Sea is ſo narrow, as ſome Authors report, that a Man upon the Coaſt of Jemen may ſee another who ſtands at the Foot of the Mountain Mandeb. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MANDOE, Manoe, an Iſland in the Northern Ocean: It lies upon the Coaſt of the Duchy of Sleſwick, near the Town Rypen: This Iſland belongs to the King of Denmark; the old Geographers call it Mana or Manda. * Maty, Diction.

MANDRANEL, an Indian Town beyond the Ganges. It ſtands upon the River Pegu, about an hundred Leagues from the City Pegu. 'Tis the Capital of the ſmall Kingdom of Mandranel. * Maty, Diction.

MANEAS, a Jew the Son of Lazarus: He had a military Poſt in Jeruſalem when Titus Veſpaſian beſieg'd it; and being tir'd with the tyrannical and barbarous Management of Simon and John, he went over to the Roman General. He told Titus that from the 14th of April to the 1ſt of July, there were an hundred fifteen thouſand eight hundred and fourſcore dead Bodies carry'd out at the Gate where he commanded; adding withal, that he had only reckon'd thoſe whoſe Number he was oblig'd to know, upon the ſcore of diſtributing Proviſions to the Quarter where he was concern'd: As to the reſt, the Neighbours had the Care of burying them, that is, of carrying 'em out of the Town, for they had no other Interment. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 5. cap. 38.

* MANETHO, an Ægyptian Prieſt mention'd in Morery Vol. II. The Hiſtory of Manetho is divided into three Parts; the firſt takes in the Hiſtory of the Gods, the ſecond takes in that of the Kings of Ægypt and Demi-Gods, and the third comprehends the thirty one Dynaſties, which end with Nectanebus the laſt King of Ægypt, who reign'd fourteen Years before that Country was conquer'd by Alexander. Theſe 31 Dynaſties are extracted from Africanus, and mention'd by Euſebius in his Chronicon, and by Syncellus; but here nothing more than the Names of theſe Princes, and the Years of their Reign are mention'd; which Reigns are not to be reckon'd by Succeſſion, becauſe they belong to Princes of different Cantons in Ægypt, whoſe Government was independent and concurrent. * Joſeph. Antiquit lib. 1. cap. 3. contra Apion. lib. 1. Plutarch, de Iſide & Oſiride. Tertullian. Apol. cap. 19. Euſebius, Præpar. Evang. lib. 1. Scaliger in Not. ad Euſeb. Voſſius, de hiſt. Græc. lib. 1. cap. 14.

MANFALOUT, or Mancalout, a Town in the Upper Ægypt, ſtanding within the Diviſion of that which the Arabians call Middle Thebais; it ſtands upon the Nile. The Perſian Geographer obſerves that this Town has a Moſque reckon'd one of the moſt conſiderable in Ægypt. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MANGATE, a Town in the Peninſula of Indus, on this Side the Ganges; it ſtands in Malabar near Canara and the Mountains of Gate, and is the Capital of a Realm under the Sovereignty of the Kingdom of Calecut. * Maty, Diction.

MANGU CAAN, commonly call'd Mangu Caa and Monga Caa; he was Son to Tulikhan fourth Son to Ginhizkhan, and fourth Emperor of the Moguls or Tartars: He ſucceeded Kajuk Khan his Couſin German. This Prince favoured the Chriſtians and Mahometans, and perſecuted the Jews. He reign'd thirteen Years and dy'd in the 657th Year of the Hegira. Mangu Caan had ſeven Brothers, of which the two eldeſt and moſt known were Coblai and Holagou. Coblai commanded in Cathay; and 'tis ſaid that the Town Khanbaleg, now call'd Cambalu, was built by this Prince: Holagou, the other Brother, had the Government of Perſia, Meſopotamia and Syria: 'Twas he who took Bagdat, and extinguiſh'd the Caliphate of the Abaſſides in the 65th Year of the Hegira. * D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

MANHARTZBERG. 'Tis the Northern Diviſion of the Lower Auſtria; 'tis parted from Wienner-Wald the Southern Canton, by the Danube, and bounded on the Weſt by Upper Auſtria; on the North by Bohemia and Moravia, and on the Eaſt by Hungary. This Country, according to its Situation upon the Danube, is divided into the Upper and Lower Manhartzberg: The Upper lies to the Weſt; and here Krembs, Stain and Thyrſtain are the principal Towns: The Lower ſtands to the Eaſt; and here Corneubourg, Laba and Retz are the moſt remarkable Places. * Maty, Diction.

MANICAPATAN, a Town in the Indian Peninſula on this Side the Ganges; it ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Golconda, and is taken by ſome Geographers for the old Minagara. * Maty.

MANILIUS (Marcus) a Latin Poet, wrote a Treatiſe of Aſtronomy in Verſe, and liv'd in the Reign of Auguſtus, according to Scaliger, tho' more probably in that of Tiberius; tho' others bring him as low as Conſtantine the Great. Thoſe who make him the ſame with Manlius Theodorus, who flouriſh'd under Theodoſius the Great, have nothing of Ground for their Opinion: Manlius did not work to the End of his Scheme; and beſides, that which he has done is ſome of it loſt in the Conveyance. He promis'd two Parts of his Aſtronomica; the firſt for the fix'd Stars, and the ſecond for the Planets: This latter Part was never done, and of the ſix Books which he wrote upon the fix'd Stars, we have but five remaining, the laſt of which too is not entire. Some will have it that Manilius was rather a plain Verſificator than a real Poet. The beſt Edition of his Aſtronomica is that publiſh'd by Joſeph Scaliger. * Gevartius, in Not. Stat. lib. 3. Syl. cap. 3. Voſſius, de Poet. Lat. de Scient. Math. Baillet, Jugem. des Sav. ſur les Poets anciens.

MANSOURAH, or Manſourat, a Town in the Country of Sind, that is, in that Part of Indoſtan on this Side the Ganges, and near the River Indus. Some ſay that Mahmoud, Son of Sebectteghin, gave it this Name upon taking it: Others will have it built by Abougiafar Almanſor, ſecond Caliph of the Line of the Abaſſides, who likewiſe begun the Caliphate of Bagdat. Manſourah lies ſo exceſſively hot that no Trees will grow there, excepting Palm Trees and Sugar Canes: There's a Sort of Dates in this Country almoſt as big as an ordinary Apple, and which grow upon Bunches, but are not ſo ſweet as the common Dates. Manſourah has a little Province of the ſame Name, which borders upon Perſia, and of which the City Manſourah is the Capital: 'Tis plainly the ſame Town call'd Soret in the Maps, and by no means that Sourat or Suratte in the Kingdom of Camboya, much better known by Merchants and Travellers. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MANTO, Tireſias's Daughter; ſhe was taken at Thebes, and carry'd with ſome other Priſoners to Delphos, and preſented to Apollo: She made her Eſcape from hence, and retir'd to Claros, where ſhe built that pretended Deity a Temple: She marry'd Rhatius, and had a Son call'd Mopſus by him. Diodorus Siculus relates that Tireſias's Daughter's Name was Daphne, that ſhe was ſent to Delphos, and deliver'd a great many Oracles there. Virgil makes Manto an Italian Propheteſs, and obſerves that Mantua had its Name from her. Pauſanias reports, that when he travelled to Thebes, and view'd the Porch of a Temple there, he ſaw a Stone upon which Manto us'd to ſit when ſhe ſpoke Oracles, and which was call'd Manto's Chair. * Pauſan. lib. 7. & 9. Virgil. Æneid. lib. 10. Diodor. Sicul. Biblioth. lib. 5.

MAON, or Porto Mahon, in Latin Mago, a ſmall Town ſtanding on the Eaſtern Coaſt of the Iſland of Minorca, eight Leagues from Citadella. Port Mahon is a very good Haven, and has the Citadel of St. Philip for its Defence. 'Twas taken by the Confederates in the laſt War, and yielded to the Engliſh by the Peace at Utrecht A. D. 1713. * Maty, Diction. Memoires du Tems.

MAPPALICUS, an African, who ſuffer'd Martyrdom A. D. 250 in the Dioclefian Perſecution. St. Cyprian commends him for his Fortitude, and the African Church kept his Feſtival on the 19th of April, but now the Martyrologies ſet it to the 17th. * St. Cyprian. Epiſt. 10. Tillemont, Mem. de l'Hiſt. Eccles.

MARAFINIOTI (Jerom) a Calabrian, flouriſhing in the Beginning of the ſeventeenth Century: He wrote a little Book of the Art of Memory, and a Chronicle of the Antiquities of Calabria. * Wadding. in S O. M. pag. 171.

MARAKAH, a Sea-Port Town in the Country of Berberah, upon the Coaſt of Cafreria or Zanguebar in Afric: 'Tis diſtant ninety Miles from Cape Khakouni to the North, and four Days Journey from the City Nagia to the South. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MARAMARUS, a ſmall Town in the Upper Hungary upon the River Maramarus or Ugog; nine Leagues from the Town Ugog to the North-Eaſt. Maramarus is the Capital of a County or Earldom of the ſame Name, which lies by the Side of Mount Crapack near the Theiſſe: This County has been united to Tranſylvania. * Maty, Diction.

MARASCH, in Latin Maraſia; a Town in Aſia upon the Euphrates, about five or ſix Leagues below Malatiyah. 'Tis large, populous, and the Capital of the Beglerbeg of Maraſch, otherwiſe call'd Bozoc; and which lies between the Mountains Taurus, and the River Euphrates. * Maty, Diction.

*MARCA (Peter de.) To what Morery Vol. II. relates concerning this celebrated Archbiſhop, may be ſubjoyn'd, that M. de Marca's principal Performance in Print is his Book de Concordia Sacerdotii & Imperii: He publiſh'd the firſt four Books of this Work during his Life A. D. 1641. Baluzius printed another Edition after de Marca's Death A. D. 1665, with the Enlargement of four other Books; the ſixth and ſeventh, and Part of the eighth of which Baluzius tranſlated from de Marca's French Original: He printed 'em again 1669, with a Supplement to the fifth Book concerning the Pope's Legates. And laſtly, in 1704 he publiſh'd another Edition more correct than the former, and with new Notes.

M. de Marca, in the Beginning of this Book, relates, that a Libel of one Optatus Gallus was the Occaſion of his writing it: His Deſign is to prove againſt this Author that the Liberties of the Gallican Church rightly explain'd are ſo far from breeding Diſſenſion between the ſpiritual and temporal Powers, that on the other Side, they are ſerviceable Expedients to preſerve Peace and good Correſponcence between 'em; in Regard that which frequently cauſes the greateſt Difference among great Men, is the Miſtakes about the Limits of their Juriſdiction: And here he gives an Inſtance in the Schiſm between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches; which he pretends took its Riſe from the Emperor Leo Iſauricus's Warmth to correct the Revolt of the Italian Provinces; that his Reſentment upon this Provocation carry'd him ſo far as not only to deprive the Church of Rome of her patrimonial Eſtate in Sicily and Calabria, but likewiſe to tranſfer the Juriſdiction ſhe claim'd within the Provinces of Thrace, Illyricum, Epirus, Achaia, and Macedonia, upon the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. Adrian I. complain'd of this Diſpoſition, and Nicolas I. demanded 'em back, tho' to no Effect. Ignatius, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, notwithſtanding his Obligation to Pope Adrian II. for being reſtor'd, was ſo far from returning Bulgaria to the Pope, that he got this Province adjudg'd for him by the Commiſſioners of the three other Eaſtern Patriarchs, notwithſtanding the Remonſtrances of his Holineſs's Legates: In ſhort, Adrian was ſo much diſguſted with this Deciſion, that he threaten'd Ignatius with an Excommunication unleſs he reſtor'd Bulgaria. After Ignatius's Death, Photius was re-admitted to the See of Conſtantinople, even with the Conſent of Pope John VIII, upon Condition that he ſhould return Bulgaria to the Church of Rome; but he dextrouſly contriv'd that the Synod, who reſtor'd him, ſhould refer this Affair to the Emperor Baſilius, who gave the Pope fair Words in a Letter, and told him he might have Bulgaria: But the Effect did not follow; for the Biſhops ſettled in that Province by the Patriarch of Conſtantinople were not recall'd; and beſides they prevail'd with Michael King of Bulgaria to acquaint Pope John that his Pleaſure was, that the Churches in his Dominions ſhould be govern'd by the Biſhops in Poſſeſſion. This Diſappointment puſh'd John VIII. to excommunicate Photius, and occaſion'd a Rupture between the Greek and Latin Churches. M. de Marca inſtances farther in the Weſtern Diſputes between the Popes and Emperors for the Claim of Inveſtitures. And here he commends the French for cutting the Line exactly between the Pontificate and Regale, and always maintaining their Rights without ſeparating from the Church of Rome; tho' upon ſome occaſions they were prepared to venture an Excommunication rather than deliver up their Privileges.

M. de Marca afterwards ſets forth the Deſign of theſe Diſſertations, and declares his Buſineſs is to prove three things: Firſt, that the Liberties of the Gallican Church ſuppoſe for a Principle and Baſis, that the French are bound to own the Authority of the Apoſtolical See, and to pay all due Submiſſion to it: Secondly, that the Exerciſe of the Pope's Juriſdiction has always been manag'd with ſuch Temper and Moderation, with Reſpect to the Churches of France, that the Privileges of the Kingdom and Church could receive no Damage from thence: and that the French Kings have taken Precaution that no Exceſſes or Strains of Juriſdiction ſhould be preſs'd upon 'em: Thirdly, that France has ſo religiouſly practis'd by theſe Maxims, that the holy See has no Reaſon to charge her with any Failure in this Matter. And this may be ſufficient to give the Reader a Taſte.

M. de Marca was a throughly learned Prelate, had a very beautiful Genius, and an admirable Faculty of turning things to his Purpoſe: He was a great Stateſman, a good Lawyer, a learned Divine, and a judicious Critic: He writes ſometimes with an Air of Partiality to the Court of Rome, and upon other Occaſions is a ſtout Champion for the Privileges of the Church and Kingdom of France. He ſeems to float a little in his Principles, and approaches towards complementing the Juncture: He endeavours to bend the Facts to his Deſigns, and the Views before him; inſtead of adjuſting his Deſigns to the Nature of the Facts: His Style is maſculine, ſufficiently correct, and without Affectation or Obſcurity. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

* MARCELLINUS. 'Tis ſaid that this Pope wanting Courage ſacrific'd to Idols; and that after this unhappy Miſcarriage three hundred Biſhops met at Sinueſſa, a ſmall Town near Rome, and otherwiſe call'd Rocca de Mondragone; that Marcellinus appearing there own'd his Fault, and requeſted Correction; but that the Prelates return'd him this Anſwer, Prima Sedes à nemine judicatur: Tu Reus, Tu Judex, ex Ore tuo juſtificaberis, & ex Ore tuo condemnaberis, &c. 'Tis ſaid likewiſe that after this the Pope went voluntarily to the Court of Juſtice, made a bold Confeſſion of his being a Chriſtian, and recover'd himſelf by Martyrdom: But the Acts of the Council of Sinueſſa are certainly ſpurious, and by Conſequence all this Story is mere Fiction: The Proof lies open thus; 1. This Narrative is not ſupported by the Teſtimony of any old Author. 2. St. Auguſtine, in his Book againſt Petilian cap. 16, juſtifies Marcellinus againſt the Donatiſts, who charg'd him with ſacrificing to Idols. 3. What Likelihood is there that three hundred Biſhops could meet together, when the Church lay under the moſt violent Perſecution. 4. The Style of theſe Acts is barbarous, and belongs to an Age of much leſs Antiquity. 5. That which is reported of Marcellinus is contrary to the Diſcipline of thoſe times; and the Biſhops are ſuppos'd to addreſs him with Language extremely foreign to the Plainneſs and noble Freedom of the Primitive Chriſtians. Laſtly, the Perſon who forg'd theſe Acts tells us, that Diocleſian receiv'd Advice of Marcellinus's being condemn'd to Death, when he was engag'd in the War againſt the Perſians: Now 'tis certain this War was ended before the Diocleſian Perſecution; and this may be ſufficient to prove the Council of Sinueſſa a Forgery. Beſides, 'tis not certain that Marcellinus ſuffer'd Martyrdom: Theodoret only ſays that he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf worthily during the Perſecution. The Year of his Death neither is not very certain: If he ſat no longer than nine Years, his Death muſt happen A. D. 304, which is the Year to which Bucherius reckons it. Euſebius lengthens his Pontificate to A. D. 308, and allows only a Year, ſeven Months, and twenty Days to his Succeſſor Marcellus. His Death ſtands in moſt of the Calendars at the 26th of April, and in that of Bucherius rius at the laſt of June. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. III. & IV.

MARCELLUS (St.) an African Martyr in the third Century: He was Captain of a Company of an Hundred in the Trajan Legion, when Diocleſian and Maximian were Emperors. He publickly declar'd himſelf a Chriſtian, and threw up his Commiſſion at a Feſtival held in Honour of the Emperor July 21. He was ſeiz'd by the Soldiers, and carry'd before Anaſtaſius Fortunatus Commander of the Legion, who ſent him to Agricola, Lord Lieutenant under the Præfectus Prætorio of Gaul. And here, upon Queſtions put to him concerning his Belief, he own'd himſelf a Chriſtian, and that he had quitted his Poſt; upon which Confeſſion he was ſentenc'd to Death, One Caſſian, a Clerk of the Court, told the Judges openly that the Sentence was unjuſt: However 'twas executed, and Marcellus was beheaded at Tangier in Mauritania October 30, A. D. 298. Caſſian was likewiſe put in Priſon, and ſome time after ſentenc'd to Death. * Ruinart, Acta Martyrum ſincera.

MARCELLUS, Biſhop of Ancyra, a Town of Galatia A. D. 314. For he ſubſcrib'd the Council of Ancyra which was held this Year; he likewiſe, according to St. Athanaſius and Theodorit, aſſiſted at the Council of Nice, notwithſtanding Pancratius's Name is enter'd upon the Subſcription Roll inſtead of Marcellus. He appear'd there with great Vigour againſt the Arian Hereſy; inſomuch that the Prieſts of Rome, who repreſented the Pope at the Synod, gave him an honourable Character at their Return. Afterwards A. D. 335, he appear'd at the Council of Tyre, and oppos'd the condemning St. Athanaſius; he was likewiſe at the Council of Jeruſalem, where he refus'd to have any Share in admitting Arius to Communion. His Reſolution made him ſtand ill with the Arians, who perſecuted him furiouſly; eſpecially after he wrote againſt the Sophiſt Aſterius: This Book, as we learn from St. Hilary, is entitled, de Subjectione Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti. The Hereticks depoſed him at Conſtantinople A. D. 336, and put Baſilius in his Place, who had the Character of a fine Speaker: And now Marcellus was baniſh'd. 'Tis poſſible he might be reſtor'd after Conſtantine's Death, but then he was expell'd again, when St. Athanaſius was driven from Alexandria. He went to Rome to Pope Julius: Here he gave in an Expoſition of his Faith, related by St. Epiphanius, and which, in this Father's Opinion, was no full Juſtification of Marcellus; however he was admitted to Communion, and declar'd Orthodox at the Council of Rome, and reſtor'd by that at Sardica A. D. 347, but the Eaſtern Biſhops condemn'd him. He return'd to Ancyra, but enjoy'd no Repoſe there, becauſe Baſilius of Ancyra kept Poſſeſſion of the See. What became of him is not certainly known. St. Hilary and Sulpicius Severus affirm that St. Athanaſius, having diſcover'd his warping towards Photinus, refus'd to admit him to Communion, and that Marcellus finding himſelf cenſur'd by ſo great an Authority, forbore coming into a Church; but the Credit of this Story is deſtroy'd by the Teſtimonies of St. Athanaſius and St. Baſil, and by the Confeſſion of Faith Marcellus ſent to Athanaſius A. D. 372, a little before the Death of that Saint. Marcellus dy'd A. D. 374: After his Death ſome of Marcellus's Adherents were receiv'd to Communion by the Ægyptian Biſhops; and St. Baſil himſelf, who was an Adverſary to Marcellus, made no Difficulty to communicate with 'em, upon Condition they would diſclaim the Errors, of which he ſuppos'd 'em guilty. St. Jerom aſſures us that Marcellus of Ancyra wrote ſeveral Volumes upon different Subjects, but chiefly againſt Arianiſm. We have nothing remaining of this Biſhop, excepting ſome Fragments of his Book againſt Aſterius, reported by Euſebius and Acacius; a Letter which Marcellus wrote to Pope Julius, containing a Form of his Belief, inſerted by St. Epiphanius; and two Confeſſions of Faith given in by his Diſciples. The Catholicks, living Marcellus, were much divided about his Orthodoxy: Pope Julius, St. Athanaſius, the Councils of Rome and Sardica, the Eaſtern Biſhops in Communion with Paulinus, and the Ægyptians and Romans, were ſatisfy'd a great while that his Sentiments were entirely catholick. St. Hilary and Sulpicius Severus, tho' they approv'd of his being acquitted at the Council of Sardica, yet were of Opinion he fell afterwards into Misbelief. Euſebius and the Eaſtern Biſhops in the Councils of Antioch, Conſtantinople and Philippopolis, plainly condemn him for an Heretick: St. Cyril of Jeruſalem, St. Baſil, Meletius, and generally all the Biſhops of Meletius's Communion, go into the ſame Cenſure. After his Death, almoſt all the Greek Writers mention him as an Heretick; and amongſt the Latins St. Jerom, Marius Victorinus and Gennadius joyn him with Photinus; and the Council of Chalcedon, in their Letter to the Emperor Martian, charges him with the ſame Error; If his firſt Writings come in for Evidence, 'twill be difficult to clear him entirely; but if we judge by his own Confeſſion of Faith, and that of his Diſciples, his Tenets will appear ſufficiently Orthodox. Euſebius, Acacius and Apollinarius wrote againſt him, and that which has made him moſt ſuſpected, is his having entertain'd Photinus for his Deacon. * Le P. Pagi, in his Critic upon Baronius's Annals A. D. 347. Athanaſ. Apol. 2. Hilar. adv. Arian. Baſil. Epiſt. 52. Theodorit, hiſt. lib. 2. Socrat. lib. 1. Sozom. lib. 2. & 3.

* MARCELLUS (St.) Biſhop of Rome. That which is deliver'd in this Article concerning the Martyrdom of this Pope is taken from Records of ſlender Credit: The moſt ancient Martyrologies only give him the Title of Confeſſor. Euſebius relates that he ſucceeded Marcellinus A. D. 308, and that he ſat only one Year, ſeven Months and twenty Days: His Memory ſtands in the Martyrologies at the 16th of January.

MARCHIENNES, in Latin Martianæ, a Village with an Abby: 'Tis in Flanders upon the Scarpe, between Doway and St. Amand: 'Tis not the ſame with Marchienne au Pont, which ſtands upon the Sambre, a League above Charleroy. Marchiennes, at the Head of this Article, was taken by the French A. D. 1712, after they had beaten the Confederates at Denain: Here the French took a great deal of Ammunition and Proviſions, and made ſix Battalions Priſoners. Mr. de Bercofer, who commanded at Marchiennes, made a handſome Defence, but was overpower'd with Numbers. * Memoires du Tems.

MARCILLY (Theodore de,) born at Arnhem in Guelderland, and King's Profeſſor of Rhetorick in Paris, underſtood Greek, Latin, and the Buſineſs of a Critick very well. His Latin Works are Orationes de Strena Kalend. Januar. danda, printed at Paris A. D. 1596. an Expoſition upon the Lord's Prayer, and the Angels Salutation; a Diſcourſe upon the Word Nemo, in Imitation of Paſſaratius, who had made an entertaining Copy of Verſes upon Nihil; Marcilly likewiſe wrote Notes upon Martial's firſt Book, that is, upon the Emperor's Amphitheatre and Hunting. The Reader may ſee a full Catalogue of his Works in Valerius Andreas's Bibliotheca Belgica. * Joſeph. Scaliger. in Epiſt. ad Scriver.

* MARCION, an Heretick living in the ſecond Century. Tertullian reports that Marcion was twice expell'd the Church with his two hundred Seſtertia, which he offer'd for a Bribe; that at laſt making his Submiſſion and deſiring to be put under Penance, the Catholicks promis'd to receive him, provided he would bring back all thoſe he had miſled; and that, while he was endeavouring to make this Satisfaction, his Death happen'd. But this Story of Tertullian does not well agree with Marcion, who was never receiv'd into the Communion of the Church of Rome, neither was it in his Power, had he been never ſo willing, to recover the great Numbers he had ſeduc'd, his Hereſy being ſpread almoſt all over Chriſtendom before Eleutherius's Popedom, under which Tertullian places the Fact abovemention'd. This Story may be more probably apply'd to his Maſter Cerdo, who, according to Irenæus, was ſeveral times excommunicated; and being re-admitted after Penance, propagated his Heterodoxies privately, and had but a ſmall Number of Followers at Rome. Marcion, like Cerdo, maintain'd two independent Principles, or Beings; the one juſt and benign, the other unjuſt and wicked; that the World was made, and the Moſaick Law given by the latter, and that the Goſpel was deliver'd by the firſt. Some of the Ancients will have it that Marcion held three Principles; one good one, who is our Saviour's Father; another bad one, which is the Devil; and a third of a middle Nature between both, who made the World: But the oldeſt and beſt inform'd Writers aſſure us that Marcion held but two Principles. Farther; Marcion, in Conjunction with Cerdo, deny'd the Reality of our Saviour's Incarnation, and the Reſurrection of the Body; but then he maintain'd a kind of Reſurrection of the Soul, for thoſe who believ'd his Doctrine. He aſſerts likewiſe that our Saviour, upon his Deſcent into Hell, diſcharg'd Cain, the Sodomites, and all other Wretches that were Enemies to God the Creator; but that he left the Patriarchs, the Prophets, and the juſt Perſons under the Old Teſtament, who had a due Regard for the God of the Law, that he left theſe in Hades where he found 'em. He rejected all the Old Teſtament, and receiv'd nothing of the New, excepting Part of St. Luke's Goſpel, ten of St. Paul's Epiſtles, and thoſe interpolated and falſify'd where the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Old Teſtament, and of God, as the Creator. He wrote a Book call'd Antitheſes, in which he endeavours to ſhew ſeveral Inconſiſtencies between the Old and New Teſtament. He held the Tranſmigration of Souls, and the Eternity of Matter. St. Epiphanius charges Marcion with allowing the Repetition of Baptiſm, and that Women might adminiſter it: But Tertullian, ſpeaking of the Baptiſm of the Marcionites, objects nothing againſt it: He condemn'd Marriage, and baptiz'd none but thoſe who promis'd ſingle Life. Some of his Followers would neither eat Fleſh nor drink Wine; they faſted on Saturday in Oppoſition to the Creator, and notwithſtanding all this hideous Herely, offer'd themſelves to Martyrdom with Hardineſs enough. The Sect of the Marcionites ſpread by Degrees through a great Part of the World: Marcion had Proſelytes in Rome and Italy, in Ægypt, Palæſtine and Syria, and a great many other Countries. His Perſuaſion was ſplit into ſeveral Subdiviſions in Commodus's Reign, as one Rhodon, who then wrote againſt it, teſtifies. The Hereſy laſted a conſiderable time, for A. D. 326, Conſtantine the Great publiſh'd an Edict againſt the Marcionites, and other Hereticks; and Theodoret, Biſhop of Cyrus, as we learn from his own Teſtimony, converted above ten thouſand of 'em in the Year 423. * Tertullian, de Præſcript. & contra Marcion. Iren. lib. 1. & 3. Epiphan. Hær. 42. Euſeb. lib. 3. Vit. Conſtant. Theodorit, lib. 2. Hær. Fab. L. 1. Cod. Theod. de Hæreſ.

World

* MARCULPHUS, wrote two Books of Formulæ, or the Forms of Grants, Diſcipline, Recommendation, &c. cuſtomary in his time: To give one Inſtance in the Form of a Privilege granted to a Monaſtery by the Dioceſan; 'tis directed to the Abbot and the Convent: Here the Biſhop ſets forth, that being deſirous to provide for their Repoſe, and to conform himſelf to the Uſages practis'd in the Monaſteries of Lerins, Agaune, Luxeuil, and a great many others, he has order'd the Regulations following to be obſerv'd by the Monks and the Biſhops his Succeſſors, viz. that the Monks ſhall receive their Orders from the Biſhop; that he ſhall conſecrate the Altars in their Church without taking any thing of 'em, and furniſh 'em every Year with Chriſm upon their Requeſt; that he ſhall conſtitute that Perſon Abbot, who ſhall be choſen by the unanimous Conſent of the Convent; that he ſhall no way intermeddle with their Affairs, their Perſons, nor their Eſtates, either what they enjoy at preſent, or what may afterwards belong to the Monaſtery; that he ſhall take nothing of what may be given them, nor of the Offerings made at their Altars; that it ſhall not be lawful for him to come into their Monaſtery unleſs deſir'd; and that when he ſhall be requeſted to come thither, he ſhall retire after he has conſecrated the holy Euchariſt,, and leave 'em undiſturb'd; that the Abbot ſhall have the Correction of his Monks, and that the Biſhop ſhall not ſuffer 'em to ramble and live in the Town. From hence it appears, that the Exemption of the Abbies from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction is founded in the voluntary Ceſſion, and Grant of the Biſhop. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. VII. & VIII.

MARCUS EUGENICUS, after having taught Rhetorick a conſiderable time, was elected Archbiſhop of Epheſus, and pitch'd on to deliver the Opinion of the Greeks, at the Conferences they had with the Latins in Italy: Here he maintain'd their Cauſe with all the Dexterity and Force they could deſire, and was almoſt the only Perſon who refus'd to ſign the Decree of the Union; and at laſt when the Greeks return'd to Conſtantinople, he was the firſt who declar'd againſt what was done at the Council of Florence, and wrote againſt it. He is commonly known by the Name of Marcus Epheſius, and in the thirteenth Tome of the Councils there are two circular Letters of this Prelate's addreſs'd to all Chriſtendom againſt this Council of Florence. He drew up a Confeſſion of Faith now in Manuſcript in the Vatican, where there is likewiſe a Tract of his concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt againſt the Latins: He wrote a Letter to the Emperor John Palæologus, and another to Georgius Scholarius againſt the Rites and Sacrifice of the Roman Church. There is likewiſe a Tract of his, in which he endeavours to ſhew the Conſecration of the Euchariſt is not completed by the Words of our Lord, commonly call'd the Words of Inſtitution; but that the Invocation Prayer, and Benediction of the Prieſt is likewiſe neceſſary. In the Acts of the Council of Florence, and in the Hiſtory of Scyropulus there are ſome of the Speeches he made at that Council; and in the French King's Library there are ſome other Manuſcript Pieces of this Author; viz. Two Speeches deliver'd at Ferrara; Anſwers to ſome Queſtions propos'd by the Cardinals; a Diſcourſe concerning the Conſecration of the holy Euchariſt; a Solution to two Queſtions propounded by the Emperor, and ſome Epiſtles againſt the Latins. This Marcus Epheſius had a Brother call'd John, who came with him to the Council of Florence, and was of the ſame Opinion: He likewiſe wrote a Diſcourſe againſt this Council, ſome Fragments of which are cited by Leo Allatius in his Book of Purgatory. * Spondan. A. D. 1439, & 1440. Du Pin. New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XV.

* A Liſt of the Mareſchals of France made by Lewis XIV. from the Year 1676.

1676. Gui-Aldoncede Durfort, Duke de Lorges Captain of the King's Guard du Corps, dy'd. 1702.
1681. John, Count d'Eſtrees, Vice-Admiral of France, Knight of the King's Orders. 1707.
1693. Claude, Count de Choiſeul, Knight of the King's Orders. 1711.
1693. Francis de Neuville, Duke de Villeroy, Captain of the King's Guard du Corps.
1693. John Armand, Marquis de Joyeuſe. 1710.
1693. Lewis-Francis, Duke de Bouflers. 1711.
1693. Anne-Hilarion de Conſtantin, Count de Tourville, Captain of the King's Guard du Corps. 1711.
1693. Anne-Julius, Duke de Noailles, Captain of the King's Guard du Corps. 1708.
1693. Nicolas Catinat, Lord of S. Gratian. 1712.
1702. Lewis-Hector, Duke de Villars.
1703. Noel Brunon, Marquiſs de Chamilly.
1703. Victor-Maris, Count d'Eſtrees, Vice-Admiral of France.
1703. Francis Lewis de Ronſſelet, Count de Chateaurenaud, Vice-Admiral of France.
1703. Sebaſtian le Pretre, Lord of Vauban, Great-Croſs of the Order of St. Lewis. 1707.
1703. Conrad de Roſen, Count de Bouluviter, General of the Horſe.
1703. Nicholas Chalon du Blé, Marquiſs d'Uxelles.
1703. Renatus de Froulay, Count de Teſſe.
1703. Nicolas-Auguſtus de la Baume, Marquiſs de Montrevel.
1703. Camillus d'Hoſtun, Count de Tallard.
1703. Henry, Duke d'Harcourt, &c.
1703. Ferdinand, Count de Marſin, and of the Holy Empire. 1706.
1706. James Fitz-James, Duke of Berwick.
1708. Charles-Auguſtus Goyon de Matignon, Count de Gacé, 1709. James Bazin de Bezons, Governor of Cambray.
1709. Peter de Monteſquiou-d'Artagnan, Governor of Arras.

* MARIANA (John.) To what has been ſaid concerning this Spaniſh Jeſuit in Morery Vol. II. may be added, that his Tract de Rege & Regis Inſtitutione, conſiſting of three Books, which he publiſh'd to juſtify the aſſaſſinating King Henny III. of France, is a very ſeditious Performance, and was publickly burnt at Paris. He wrote Poſtils or Notes upon the Old Teſtament, very uſeful to let the Reader into the literal Senſe of the Text. After his Death, a Book treating of the Defects of his Society was printed in Italian, Latin and French. Mariana dy'd in 1624, eighty ſeven Years of Age. * Thomas Thomajus de Vergas, in Vitâ & Apol. pro Mariana. Ribadeneira & Alegambe, Biblioth. Script. Soc. Jeſ. Nicolas Antonio, Biblioth. Hiſp. Miræus, &c.

* MARIANUS (Scotus.) His Hiſtory begins with the World, tho' the firſt Book is imperfect.

MARINELLA Lucretia, a very ingenious Venetian Lady, living in the ſixteenth Century. She wrote ſeveral Tracts, and amongſt the reſt one entitled, La Nobiltà e l' eccellenza delle Donne con diſetti e Mancamenti de gli Huomini, printed at Venice A. D. 1601. In this Tract ſhe endeavours to make good the Preference of her own Sex. She likewiſe wrote a Diſcourſe with the Title of Colomba Sacra. * Bayle, Dict. Crit. 2nd Edit. 1702.

MARINUS, a Martyr in the third Century, was a Perſon of Extraction and Wealth, and an Officer in the Army. Upon his putting in for a Captain's or Centurion's Poſt, his Competitor objected his being a Chriſtian, which Charge he boldly confeſs'd: The Judge, before whom he was brought, gave him ſome time to conſider of what he was doing. Marinus, at his going out of the Court, met Theoctenes, Biſhop of Cæſarea, who confirm'd him in his holy Reſolution: He was quickly ſummon'd to appear before the Bench, and condemn'd to be beheaded; which was executed A. D. 261. The Latins keep this Saint's Day on the 3d of March. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 7. cap. 15.

MARINUS SANUT, or Sanudo, ſurnam'd Torſelle from the Name of an Inſtrument he is ſaid to invent: He was born at Rivo-Alti in the State of Venice. After he had travell'd to the Holy Land, he wrote a Book entitled the Secrets of the Faithful of the Croſs: Here he endeavours to give Meaſures for recovering the Holy Land: His Performance is ſubdivided into three Books: In the firſt he perſuades the Chriſtians not to trade with the Infidels, and that this Interruption of Commerce would weaken the Enemy: In the ſecond he lays down the Manner how to attack 'em, at what Quarter, and with what Proportion of Strength: And in the third Book he gives the Hiſtory of the Holy Land, and of the Cruſades: And here, his Deſign is to point at the Expedients for Succeſs, by avoiding the Faults of ſome Expeditions and Generals, and imitating the Conduct of others. Sanut preſented this Work to Pope John XXII. with Maps A. D. 1321; and afterwards addreſs'd it to the Kings of France, England and Sicily, to exhort 'em to attempt the Conqueſt of the Holy Land: He wrote likewiſe ſeveral Letters upon this Subject to other Princes, to Cardinals and Prelates, printed at the End of his Work, publiſh'd by Bongars in the Collection entitled, Geſta Dei per Francos, printed at Hannover A. D. 1611. * Miræus. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XIV.

* MARIUS (Caius.) To what is related concerning Marius in Morery Vol. II. it may not be improper to add the Speech he made to the Roman Commons, upon his being elected Conſul, and pitch'd on for General againſt Jugurtha: I ſhall tranſlate it from Salluſt.

Countrymen,

" I'm ſenſible 'tis the Cuſtom of a great many to " gain their Poſts of Command by one Sort of Be- " haviour, and then govern by another: Whilſt they " addreſs you for Buſineſs they are remarkably indu- " ſtrious and unpretending; but when the Point is " once carry'd they grow lazy and imperious. This " Conduct is none of my Fancy; for as the Repub- " lick is more valuable than the higheſt Office, ſo we " ought to be more careful to execute for the common " Good, than ſolicit for our own. I am not igno- " rant in what a ſlippery Situation your Favour has " ſet me: To be oblig'd to prepare for a Campaign, " and to ſpare the Exchequer at the ſame time; to " preſs thoſe into the Muſter-Roll whom 'tis your " Intereſt not to diſguſt; to manage every thing at " home and abroad; to do all this where you have " envious, claſhing and mutinous Tempers to deal " with, is more difficult than can well be imagin'd: " Beſides, I lie under particular Diſadvantage. Some " People, when they misbehave themſelves, have the " Luſtre of their Birth, the Bravery of their Ance- " ſtors, wealthy Relations and numerous Dependents " to ſupport and keep 'em from ſinking: As for me, " my Intereſt is all lodg'd in my Perſon, and I have " nothing but Courage, Integrity and good Manage- " ment to depend on: As to other Matters, my Pre- " tenſions are but ſlender. And, over and above " Countrymen, I underſtand there is a general Expec- " tation from me; and that I have the good Wiſhes " of the Beſt and moſt Impartial: For, to ſpeak " clearly, my Services to the publick have been prior " to my Preferment. For all that, the Nobility are " upon the Watch to ſupplant me: I muſt move " therefore with the greater Caution and Vigour, " both that your Bounty may be anſwer'd, and theſe " Men diſappointed in their Malice. My Life from " my Childhood has been ſpent in a conſtant Courſe " of Fatigue and Danger. This Path, which pure In- " clination has hitherto carry'd me through, I think I " ſhan't now ſtep out of, when I am ſo well reward- " ed for my Pains. 'Tis an hard Chapter for thoſe " who put on a Maſk of Probity only to ſerve their " Ambition; 'tis hard, I ſay, for thoſe to baulk their " Humour, when they are mounted to Magiſtracy and " Power: This is not my Caſe: I am ſo much bred " to Modeſty and Juſtice, that Duty and fair Behaviour " is natural to me.

" You have given me a Commiſſion to fight Ju- " gurtha: I deſire you would conſider whether you " have any Reaſon to repent; whether this Choice is " not more promiſing, than if you had pitch'd upon " a Perſon of Quality for the ſame, or a reſembling " Command? A Man of an ancient Family, and no- " bly diſtinguiſh'd by his Anceſtors; but one, who " having never made a Campaign, fails in Reſolu- " tion, hurries and blunders, and is glad to make uſe " of ſome ordinary Commoner to teach him his Bu- " ſineſs. And thus it often happens that the Perſon " you have made Commander in chief, is forc'd to " look out for another General to command himſelf. " I know 'tis the Way of theſe Sparks to get the Con- " ſulſhip firſt, and then read Annals and Greek Books " to inſtruct 'em in military Diſcipline: A moſt pre- " poſterous Method! For certainly in Matters of this " Conſequence Practice ſhould go before Preferment, " and the Skill be older than the Office.

" I confeſs I'me no more than a Gentleman of the " firſt Head; however, I deſire we may come a lit- " tle to the Merits, and our reſpective Pretenſions be " examin'd: Now what theſe haughty Competitors " gueſs only from Books and Hearſay, I know from Ex- " perience and Execution. Their Knowledge comes from " the Cloſet, mine from the Field: And here I leave " you to judge whether reading or Action, Words or " Things are moſt to be regarded. They deſpiſe my " Want of Genealogy, and I value their ſleepy Inſig- " nificancy as little: Private Birth is my Blemiſh, and " Licentiouſneſs their's: Chance is the Diſadvantage on " one Side, and Choice on the other; tho', after all, " 'tis my Opinion Nature is the ſame in every Body, " and common to the whole Kind; 'tis Puſhing and " Behaviour which makes the Diſtinction, and thus " the braveſt Man is the beſt Gentleman. And if " the Queſtion could be put to Al- " bina's and Beſtia's Parents, whe- " ther they had rather have been my " Father than theirs; they would un- " doubtedly have anſwer'd, their Wiſhes lay for " Children of the beſt Deſert.

* The late Conſuls, who commanded in Africk.

" If they think they have any Reaſon to deſpiſe me " they muſt have the ſame Contempt for their own " Anceſtors, who, as I have done, rais'd themſelves " by their Merit. But my Poſt of Honour diſturbs " 'em; pray then let 'em declare againſt my unble- " miſh'd Behaviour, againſt the Fatigues I have gone " through, againſt the Hazards I have run; for 'tis by " theſe Qualities I have gain'd my Diſtinction. But " Pride has blaſted theſe Men's Underſtandings: " They ſeem to ſcorn your Favours by the Lengths " of Licence they go; and yet confidently ſolicit for " Command, as if their Lives where wholly unex- " ceptionable: In earneſt, thoſe People are much miſ- " taken who entertain ſuch unſociable Expectations; " who would fain have the Pleaſure of Lazineſs, and " the Rewards of Virtue and Worth at the ſame time: " And when they make a Speech either to you, or in " the Senate, they run moſtly in Commendation of " their Anceſtors, and fancy the Luſtre of their Ge- " nealogy a notable Advantage: But the Caſe is quite " otherwiſe; for the Bravery of their Family makes " their own Inſignificancy the more remarkable. To " ſpeak clearly, a ſhining Anceſtor draws his Poſte- " rity into Notice, ſets them in a fuller Light, and " won't let their Misbehaviour lie undiſcover'd. " Countrymen, I own I am unfurniſh'd at this Quar- " ter; but then I have ſomething much more honou- " rable to ſuggeſt, that is, ſomething I have perform'd " myſelf. Now pray conſider how unreaſonable " theſe Men are: They value themſelves upon bor- " row'd Merit, and yet grudge me the ſame Privi- " lege for my own; and all forſooth, becauſe my " Quality is lately rais'd, and I have no Heraldry to " hang out: But certainly 'tis more creditable to make " than to ſpoil, to purchaſe a new Eſtate than to ſpend " an old one.

" I am very ſenſible they want no Rhetorick; they " can be ready with a fine Speech, whenever they " have a Mind to reply: But I am not afraid of their " Elocution: And ſince they take the Freedom every " where to play their Satyr upon us, I thought it ne- " ceſſary to ſay ſomething; for Silence might have " been miſunderſtood, and conſtrued to owning the " Charge. As for my ſelf, I don't think any Ha- " rangue can hurt me; for if they ſpeak Truth they " muſt commend me; but if Calumny is deliver'd, " my Conduct is ſufficient Diſproof. But ſince your " Proceedings are arraign'd for putting me into the " higheſt Poſt of Honour and Truſt, I beg you would " throughly examine whether your Choice ought to " be repented. I can make out no hereditary Claim " to Conſideration, I have no Triumphs or Conſul- " ſhips in my Pedigree; but, if Occaſion requires, I " can produce Lances and Colours taken, military " Rewards and Plunder; not to mention the Marks " of many Wounds receiv'd with my Face to the E- " nemy. This is my Heraldry; here lies my Nobi- " lity: Not left me like theirs for a Legacy, but pur- " chas'd by myſelf at the Expence of Labour and Ha- " zard. I have no fine Sentences to recommend me; " I deſpiſe ſuch flouriſhing; Honeſty and Worth ſpar- " kle by their own Light, and are Rhetorick enough " of themſelves: 'Tis foul Practice that wants Art " and Fucus to cover the coarſe Complexion. I un- " derſtand no Greek neither: What ſignifies that? I " don't find that Language makes thoſe that teach it " a jot the better Men; but then I have learn'd what's " much more ſerviceable to the Government: I have " learn'd to ſtrike hard, to beat up the Enemy's Quar- " ters, to fear no thing but Infamy and Baſeneſs, " to bear Heat and Cold with Indifference, to ſleep " upon the Ground, to rub through Fatigue and " ſhort Allowance at the ſame time: This Prac- " tice ſhall be the Elocution I intend to uſe to " my Men; for I don't deſign to treat them rugged- " ly and indulge myſelf; nor fetch my own Pleaſure " out of their Pain; to manage thus is both a " ſerviceable and a civil Exerciſe of a General's Com- " miſſion: For to force the Army upon Duty and " Hardſhip when you live looſely and luxuriouſly " your ſelf, is an arbitrary and ill-natur'd Stretch of " Authority. 'Twas by ſmooth Command and taking " their Share in the Inconveniences, that your Ance- " ſtors rais'd themſelves and the Commonwealth: " Now our Nobility, tho' of a quite foreign Beha- " viour, lay all the Streſs upon their Deſcent from " theſe brave Men, deſpiſe us who imitate their An- " ceſtors, challenge Honour and Command as their " Due, and think themſelves full of Merit only by " being related to thoſe that were ſo. But theſe " haughty Mortals are very much out: 'Tis granted " their Anceſtors left 'em their Eſtates, their Sta- " tues, and their Fame, that is, whatever lay within " their Power; but their Bravery and their Brains " they could not leave 'em: Theſe are things inſepa- " rable from the Perſon, and can neither be ſettled " or bequeath'd. They call me a clumſey ill-bred " Fellow, becauſe I am ſomewhat unfaſhionable in " ſetting out a Treat; becauſe I keep no Buffoon to " make Sport; becauſe I don't give my Cook better " Wages than my Steward. Gentlemen, I willingly " confeſs all this: For my Father and other good " Men have taught me that Curioſities and Niceneſs " are for Ladies, but that Labour becomes Men; " and that all People of Spirit and Probity graſp " more at Glory than Wealth: Suits of Arms, and " not Furniture, are our Finery. But ſince my Court " Competitors are of another Mind, let 'em take their " Fancy, and do always what they like beſt; let 'em " drink and debauch; let 'em live now they're old, " as they did when they were young; let 'em regale " their Palate, and run themſelves out of Breath " with Licentiouſneſs: As for Sweat and Duſt, march- " ing and military Exerciſe, let 'em leave theſe Mat- " ters to us, who reliſh 'em much better than cram- " ming at a prodigal Entertainment. But it ſeems " this won't ſatisfy; for theſe noble Rakes, when " they have gone the laſt Lengths of Scandal, preſs " for publick Poſts, and ſnatch the Rewards of So- " briety and Merit. Thus, againſt all Right and " Reaſon, Luxury and Lazineſs, the moſt diſgracing " Qualities, do theſe Men's Fortune no Diſſervice, " and yet ruin the innocent Commonwealth.

" And now having reply'd to a full Defence, tho' " not ſo far as their Misbehaviour requires, I ſhall " throw in a Word or two concerning the Common- " wealth.

" Firſt, as to the Campaign in Numidia, I deſire " you would be perfectly eaſy: You have remov'd " what preſerv'd the Enemy; that " is, Covetouſneſs, Ignorance and " Pride *. Beſides, the Army there " is acquainted with the Ground, " and in Truth more brave than fortunate: For Ava- " rice or over-hardineſs in the Generals has deſtroy'd " a great Part of the Men. You therefore, my Coun- " trymen, who have not liv'd too long for the Field, " give me your Aſſiſtance, exert yourſelves for the " Publick, and don't let the late Misfortunes, or the " Haughtineſs of our Generals, diſcourage you. I " ſhall always keep with you, and not leave you to " other Men's Direction: When Danger preſents " I'll take my Share; and in every thing we'll fare " both alike: And in earneſt I am perſuaded Matters " are now ripe for Succeſs; Victory, Plunder and " Fame are all within Reach; and were ſuch a Pro- " ſpect either doubtful or diſtant, every Man that is " good for any thing ought to do his beſt for the Com- " monwealth. Lazineſs makes no Body immortal: " No generous Parents wiſh their Children might live " always, but rather that they might ſpend their Days " in Virtue and Honour.

" Countrymen, if I believ'd more Words would " ſignify any thing to Cowards, I ſhould go on far- " ther; for as to Men of Reſolution, I think I have " ſaid enough. * Salluſt. Bell. Jugurth.

* Meaning in the late Roman Generals.

MARIUS, ſurnam'd Æquicola, becauſe he was born in the Country of the Æqui in Italy, flouriſh'd at the End of the fifteenth, and in the Beginning of the ſixteenth Century. He ſtudied natural Philoſophy and Mathematicks in Paris, under the Direction of James le Fevre d'Eſtaples: He was reckon'd one of the Men of Wit at the Court of Mantua, and wrote the Hiſtory of Mantua in Italian, and ſeveral other Tracts in Latin. His Book of the Nature of Love, in Italian, has been printed a great many times, * Leandre Alberti. Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

MARKATHA, a Town in Æthiopia, very populous tho' not large: It ſtands upon a great River, which riſing in the South takes its Courſe between the North and Weſt, and falls into the Nile, near the Town Ilak. Markatha is ſix Day's Journey from the Town Nagiaga, beyond which there is nothing inhabited to the South: The People live upon Barley, Fiſh and Milk-meats, and have no Commerce, excepting with the Town Ilak in Nubia, which is thirty Day's travelling; and 'tis hither that the Merchants of of Zaleg upon the Red Sea carry their Commodities. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MAROGNA, an Archiepiſcopal See in European Turky. It ſtands in Romania upon the Archipelago, ten Leagues from the Mouth of the Marize, and twelve from the Town Eno to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

MAROTH, in Latin Martis Caſtra, an old Town in Lower Pannonia. It ſtands in Sclavonia upon the River Bozwtha, ſix Leagues from the Town Eſſek to the South. * Maty, Diction.

* MARRIAGES (the Jews.) To what has been obſerv'd upon this Article in the Supplement to Morery, we may add that the Iſraelites were not forbidden to intermarry with Foreigners, excepting with thoſe Nations deſcended from Canaan, who were doom'd to Deſtruction. That they were at Liberty in other Caſes, appears by the following Inſtances; for Moſes marry'd a Midianite; Boaz is commended for his matrimonial Engagement to Ruth a Moabiteſs; Abſalom's Mother was the King of Geſhur's Daughter; Amaſa was the Son of an Iſhmaelite by Abigal, David's Siſter; Solomon marry'd the King of Ægypt's Daughter in the Beginning of his Reign, and within that Period of time when he was moſt in the Divine Favour: And therefore his being afterwards blam'd in Scripture for marrying Foreigners muſt be underſtood of his engaging with the Canaanites, and that inſtead of converting thoſe Wives, he was criminally complaiſant to them, even ſo far as to worſhip their Idols.

From hence we may conclude à fortiori, that Intermarriages with any of the Iſraelites was without Reſtraint; i. e. it was not at all neceſſary for 'em to marry within their reſpective Tribes, as ſeveral Writers, and even ſome Fathers of the Church have aſſerted. This Law of confining 'em to their Tribes, was only binding to Heireſſes: The Deſign of this Reſtraint being to prevent Eſtates removing from one Tribe to another. That the Reſtriction goes no farther is evident from David's marrying Michol, Saul's Daughter; for here the Husband was of the Tribe of Juda, and the Wife of the Tribe of Benjamin; and Ahinoam another of David's Wives, was an Jezrelite, that is, of Jezreel, a Town which belonged to the Tribe of Ephraim.

The Iſraelites Marriages were accompanied with Entertainments and ſolemn Rejoycing: The Feaſt laſted a Week. This was the Cuſtom from the time of the Patriarchs, as appears from Laban's Anſwer to Jacob's Complaint (Gen. 29 ℣. 27.) Thus Sampſon, when he marry'd a Philiſtine, kept his Wedding Feaſt a Week; and when Tobias would have ſet forward in his Journey Home, his Father in Law entreated him to ſtay a Fortnight; doubling the uſual time of the Solemnity, becauſe they were never likely to ſee one another again.

But as to religious Ceremonies it does not appear there were any required, excepting the Prayers of the Father, and the Company for the divine Benediction. That the Matter ſtood thus we may collect from Rebecca's Marriage with Iſaac, from Ruth's with Boaz, and from Sarah's with Tobias. There is no Appearance that any Sacrifices were offered upon this Occaſion, that they went to the Tabernacle or the Temple, or that they had any Prieſts ſent for to ſtrengthen the Engagement, and have a Share in the Solemnity; on the contrary, the whole was finiſh'd amongſt Relations and Friends: So that it ſeems it was then no more than a civil Contract. * Exod. 34. 16. Deut. 7. 3. 2 Sam. 3. 3. 1 Chron. 2. 17. 2 Kings 3. 1. Ibid. 1. Num. 36. 7, 8, &c. 2 Sam. 3. 2. Tobit 8. 22. Selden. Ux. Hebraic. lib. 2. cap. 13. Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. cap. 28. Gen. 24. 60. Ruth 4. 11. Tobit. 7. 15. Farther, we may learn from the Canticles, and other Places, that the Bridegroom had young Men to entertain him, and the Bride young ſingle Women. Thus Sampſon had thirty Companions at his Wedding: And in the Goſpels there is mention made of the Bridegroom's Friends, and of the Virgins who went to meet him. The Bridegroom wore a Crown, as the Scripture informs us, and the Jewiſh Tradition gives the ſame Ornament to the Bride. * Jud. 14. 11. St. John 3. 29. Matth. 25. Cant. 3. 11. Iſai. 61. 10. Selden. Ux. Hebraic. lib. 2. cap. 15. M. Fleury, les Moeures des Iſraelites.

MARSI, Il Ducato di Marſi. 'Tis a ſmall Country in the farther Abruzzo; it lies round the Lake Celano, and has kept the old Name of the Marſi. Some Geographers affirm there was formerly an Epiſcopal See near the Lake Celano, at a Town call'd Marſi, and which was afterwards remov'd to Piſcina. * Maty, Diction.

MARSILIUS of Padua, ſurnam'd Menandrinus, was a famous Lawyer, and a ſtout Champion for the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria againſt the Pope: He wrote a large Book A. D. 1324, in which he maintains the Emperor's Prerogative and Regale againſt the Pontificate: 'Tis entitled, Defenſio Pacis contra Juriſdictionem à Romano Pontifice uſurpatam. But being eagerly engag'd in Defence of the Rights of the Empire againſt the Encroachments of the Court of Rome, he falls into the oppoſite Extreme, and writes more like a Lawyer than a Divine. Farther, this Author wrote a Tract concerning the Tranſlation of the Empire; and another call'd a Conſultation upon the Divorce of John, King of Bohemia, and Margaret, Dutcheſs of Carinthia; in which he maintains Marriage a civil Contract, and that 'tis Part of the Prince's Prerogative to give it Force: Theſe three Performances are inſerted in Goldaſtus de Monarchia. His Books are expreſſly condemn'd by Pope John XXII. Several Roman Catholicks have likewiſe written againſt him. * Prateolus. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XIV.

MARSOLLIER (James,) Canon regular of the Cathedral of Uzez, and Prior of St. Victor in the ſame Dioceſe: he is a French Author famous for the Delicacy of his manner. In 1693 his Book entitled the Hiſtory and Original of the Inquiſition was publiſh'd, but without Privilege, or the Author's Name. He afterwards wrote the Life of Cardinal Ximenes, and that of the Abbot de la Trappe, which are look'd on as Maſterpieces in their Kind. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MARSONOWITZ, a large Iſland in the Sea of Muſcovy; 'tis under the Juriſdiction of the Province of Dwina in Muſcovy, from which 'tis parted only by a Canal of five or ſix Leagues: There's nothing conſiderable in it, excepting the Cape of Candenoes, which is the Northern Point of the Iſland, from whence ſome call it the Iſle of Candenoes. * Maty, Diction.

MARSUS, ſucceeded Petronius in the Government of Syria for the Romans: 'Twas he that gave the Emperor Claudius Advice of the extraordinary Fortifications which Agrippa made at Jeruſalem; and upon this Notice that King was forbidden to go on with the Works. From this time Marſus and Agrippa were implacable Enemies, and if upon the Death of this Prince the Emperor had not remov'd Marſus, 'tis very likely he would have taken his Revenge upon Agrippa's Children. He was ſucceeded in his Government by Longinus. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 19. cap. 6. & lib 20. cap 1.

MARTENNE (Edmund.) a Benedictine of the Congregation of St. Maur, born in the Dioceſe of Langres, was profeſs'd in the Abby of St. Remigius at Rheims at eighteen Years of Age A. D. 1672. He afterwards apply'd himſelf in Search of the ancient Cuſtoms of a monaſtick Life, and from thence carry'd his Enquiry into Church Antiquities: He has publiſh'd ſeveral curious and well finiſh'd Pieces upon theſe Subjects: His firſt Work is a Latin Commentary upon St. Bennet's Rule in 4^to^ printed at Paris A. D. 1690. Afterwards he publiſh'd a Tract de antiquis Monachorum Ritibus in two Volumes 4^to^; three Volumes concerning Eccleſiaſtical Rites; and laſtly, a Collection of Writers, and of Moral, Hiſtorical, and Dogmatical Remains concerning Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, Monaſtick Uſages and Politicks, which may paſs for a new Spicilegium, and ſerve for a Continuation of that collected by Dacherius. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

* MARTIAL, (Marcus Valerius,) a Latin Poet. 'Tis uſual to divide Martial's Epigrams into three unequal Parts; the leaſt of theſe three Diviſions is much the beſt; the ſecond takes in what is indifferent, and the largeſt Part is ſtark naught. This is the Poet's own Judgment upon his Compoſitions; and he never hit the Matter better than when he pronounc'd upon his own Works;

Sunt bona, ſunt quædam mediocria, ſunt mala plura.

Martial is reckon'd a Poet who ſpangled his Poem moſt with Points, and brought Gingles into Faſhion: But this Tinſel does not make him a better Epigrammatiſt than Catullus; for Catullus's Wit and Ornament lies all in Thought: The Fancy for Acumens, and the Affectation of Points, began in the Reign of Tiberius or Caligula, and juſtled out true Senſe, which ſhin'd from what was ſolid in Auguſtus's time: This Decay in good ſpeaking appear'd firſt in the Schools where Rhetorick and Law were taught; afterwards it ſeiz'd the Philoſophers and Poets, eſpecially in Nero's Reign; and when Domitian was Emperor, no Body was more tinctur'd with it than Martial. Beſides, his Indecences and rank Language make a great Part of his Works: Theſe Liberties are particularly remarkable at the End of his third Book, in his ſeventh and eleventh. To fence againſt this Miſchief, ſome late Philologers have made a purg'd Collection of Martial's Epigrams, and publiſh'd the leaſt offenſive Part of 'em. As for the Book of Spectacles or the Amphitheatre, which goes under Martial's Name, 'tis now believ'd it does not belong to this Poet. One of the beſt Editions of Martial for the Text, is that of Vincent Coleſſon, a Law Profeſſor: 'Twas done by Lewis XIV's Order for the Uſe of the Dauphin A. D. 1680. * Baillet, Jugement des Savans.

MARTIANAY (John,) a Benedictine of the Congregation of St. Maur, was born at Sever-Cap in the Dioceſe of Aire in Gaſcogny A. D. 1647. He was profeſs'd at Thoulouſe in Auguſt 1668. He apply'd himſelf moſtly to the Study of Greek and Hebrew, and critical Learning upon the Scripture: He has publiſh'd a new Edition of St. Jerom's Works in five Volumes folio: And here he has had ſome Diſputes with Father Simon and ſeveral other Writers of Character. He wrote two French Books againſt Father Pezron, in which he defends the Authentickneſs and Chronology of the Hebrew Text of the Old Teſtament: To go on with him; he has publiſh'd the old Latin Verſion of St. Matthew's Goſpel with French Notes; hiſtorical Tracts to prove the Inſpiration of the canonical Books; a Treatiſe of the Books within the Canon; a Tract for expounding the Holy Scripture; St. Jerom's Life, and three Pſalters of this Father tranſlated into French with Notes; an analytical Harmony of a great many obſcure Paſſages in the Old Teſtament, printed at Paris in 1708; an Eſſay on Tranſlation, or Remarks upon the French Verſions of the New Teſtament, publiſh'd at Paris A. D. 1710; and the New Teſtament with Notes taken wholly from the Scripture in two Volumes 12^mo^, done at Paris 1712. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MARTIGNY, Martinach, a conſiderable Town in the Country of Valais, and Confederate with the Swiſs. Martigny ſtands near the Rhône upon the Dranſe, which divides it in two; which Moieties are joyn'd by a Bridge. There are very good Iron Mines belonging to it. * Maty, Diction.

MARTIN (St.) Biſhop of Braga in Portugal, liv'd in the ſixth Century. He was born in Pannonia or Hungary; he took leave of his Country when young, and travell'd into Palæſtine; from hence he made a Voyage into Galicia, where he converted Theodemirus an Arian Prince; and having been ſome time Abbot of Dumes near Braga, he was promoted to the Epiſcopal Chair, and preſided in the ſecond Council of Braga held A. D. 572, which was the 610^th^ of the Spaniſh Æra. Iſidorus Hiſpalenſis relates that he had read a Book of this Martin's entitled, de Differentia quatuor Virtutum Cardinalium; and a Volume of Epiſtles. The firſt Tract is now in the Bibliotheca Patrum. This Prelate likewiſe made a Collection of five and twenty Canons paſs'd in the Eaſtern Churches: Theſe he preſented to King Ariamirus and the Synod of Braga; they are now in Binius's Collection. * Iſidor. Hiſpal. cap. 22. de Vir. illuſtr. Honorius Auguſtodunenſis, lib. 3. cap. 26. de Lumin. Eccleſ. Baronius. Bellarmin. Ambroſius Morales. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. VI.

* MARTINUS POLONUS. There are ſeveral things added to Martinus Polonus Chronicon, and amongſt the reſt the Hiſtory of Pope Joan: Tis inſerted in the Baſil Edition A. D. 1559; and in that of Antwerp A. D. 1574. But theſe Additions are thrown out in Fabricius a Premonſtrant's Edition, publiſh'd from a Manuſcript of the Author's Age, and printed at Cologne A. D. 1616. Some Writers make him the Author of an Abridgment of the Canon Law, and of a Tract of remarkable things at Rome.

MARTIN, Cabo Martin, anciently Ferraria, Dianium, Artemiſium Promontorium; a large Cape belonging to the Kingdom of Valencia in Spain; 'tis near the Town Denia, and parts the Gulph of Valencia from that of Alicant. This Cape ſtrikes into the Sea with three Points, of which the middlemoſt is call'd Punta de l'Imperador. * Maty, Diction.

MARTINI (Raymond,) a Dominican, and a good Orientaliſt, flouriſh'd in the thirteenth Century. He was born at Sabirats in Catalonia, and was one of thoſe of his Order, who were pitch'd upon at a general Chapter held at Toledo A. D. 1250, for ſtudying Hebrew and Arabick, to qualify them to confute the Jews and Mahometans: He wrote a Book upon this Argument entitled, Pugio Fidei, printed at Paris A. D. 1651, at the Charge of M. Boſquet, Biſhop of Montpelier. Petrus Galatinus a Cordelier has tranſcrib'd pretty much of this Pugio Fidei in his Book de Arcanis Catholicæ Veritatis * Noudæus, in Bibliotheca Politica. Bartholocci, Biblioth. Rabbin. Du Pin, Continuat. de l'Hiſt. des Juifs, depuis Jeſus Chriſt juſqu' à preſent.

MARTINIUS (Matthias,) was born at Freikenhague in the County of Waldec A. D. 1572. He ſtudied at Paderborn under the famous Piſcator: At three and twenty Years of Age he was choſen Preacher at the Court of the Counts of Naſſau-Dillembourg. He taught Hebrew, Chaldee, and Syriac, and was afterwards Paſtor of the Church at Embden; and in 1610 was Rector of the Schola illuſtris at Bremen. Martinius made himſelf particularly famous by his Philological Lexicon or Dictionary, the laſt of which is two Volumes in Folio. In 1618 Martinius had a Deputation from the Magiſtracy of Bremen to the Synod of Dort, in Conjunction with Henry Iſſelburgius and Lewis Crocius. He had pretty near the ſame Sentiments ſince maintain'd by Cameron, Amyraldus, Daille, and others call'd the Divines of Samur; he wholly condemn'd the ſupralapſarian Scheme: He claſh'd ſometimes with Gomarus and other Dutch Divines; however he ſign'd the Acts of the Synod, which ſufficiently diſcovers his Belief. He dy'd in 1630, fifty eight Years of Age. He likewiſe wrote an Abridgment of Divinity printed A. D. 1617.

* MARTYROLOGY. The Martyrologies draw their Materials from the Calendars of particular Churches, where the Feſtivals for preſerving the Martyr's Memories are mark'd. The Martyrologies reckoned to Euſebius and St. Jerom are ſpurious. Bede is the firſt, who, in the Beginning of the eighth Century, compil'd two Martyrologies, one in Proſe, and another in Verſe; but then that which goes under his Name is full of Additions. Florus Diaconus of Lyons living in the ninth Century, enlarg'd Bede's Martyrology, and put it almoſt in the Condition 'tis at preſent. Valdelbertus a Monk of the Monaſtery of Prom in the Dioceſe of Treves, living in the middle of the ninth Century, wrote a Martyrology in Verſe, extracted from Bede and Florus, and now inſerted in the fifth Tome of Dacherius's Spicilegium. About the ſame time Rabanus Maurus, Archbiſhop of Mentz, drew up a Martyrology, publiſh'd by Caniſius in the ſixth Tome of his antiquæ Lectiones: After theſe Ado, Archbiſhop of Vienne, who had liv'd with Vandalbert in the Abby of Prom, compiled a new Martyrology while he was travelling in Italy; for coming from Rome to Ravenna A. D. 857, he ſaw there a Manuſcript of an ancient Martyrology, which had been brought thither from Aquileia. Uſuardus a Monk of St. Germain des Prez, drew up a more correct and large Martyrology than thoſe abovemention'd; and dedicated it to Charles the Bald A. D. 870. This Performance was well receiv'd, and began to be made uſe of in the Offices of the Weſtern Church; and 'tis believ'd the See of Rome clos'd with this Practice. At the End of this Century, or the Beginning of the next, Notgerus, call'd the Stammerer, a Monk of the Abby of of St. Gal in Switzerland, drew up another Martyroly upon Ado's Materials: This Martyrology publiſh'd by Caniſius had not the ſame Succeſs with that of Uſuardus. The Churches and Monaſteries which uſed this laſt, made a great many Alterations or Additions in it: This has occaſion'd a vaſt Number of different Martyrologies during the following ſix hundred Years. At laſt, the Moderns deſirous to reform the Defects of the old Martyrologies, have compil'd new ones. Auguſtinus Belinus of Padua is the firſt who begun this Reform in the fifteenth Century: After him, Francis Maruli, call'd Maurolycus, Abbot of Meſſina in Sicily, drew up a Martyrology, in which he has entirely chang'd Uſuardus's Text. John Vander-Meulen, known by the Name of Molanus, a Doctor of Louvain, reſtor'd it through two Editions, with Alterations and very learned Notes. At the ſame time Galeſinus Apoſtolick Protonotary, drew up a Martyrology, and dedicated it to Gregory XIII; but this was not approv'd at Rome. Baronius's Martyrology, written ſome time after with Notes, was better receiv'd, had the Approbation of Pope Sixtus Quintus, and has ſince paſs'd for the modern Martyrology of the Roman Church. It has been ſeveral times corrected. The late Abbot Châtelain, Canon of Notre-Dame at Paris, tranſlated the Text of the Roman Martyrology into French, with Notes upon it, which was publiſh'd A. D. 1709: He likewiſe begun a large Commentary upon the whole Martyrology, of which one Volume is already printed.

As to the different Narratives in ſome Martyrologies, and the Want of Proofs with Reſpect to ſeveral Facts, this Want of Truth or Evidence may be accounted for from the following Conſiderations. 1. In ſome of the early Ages of the Church, there were ſome Memoirs either ſpurious or interpolated by the Hereticks: Of this Kind are the greateſt Part of the Lives of the Apoſtles. 2. Notwithſtanding the primitive Chriſtians had been careful in collecting the genuine Acts of the Martyrs in the Dioclefian Perſecution, and in the Calamities which happen'd when the Goths, Vandals, &c. invaded the Weſtern Empire; yet the greateſt Part of theſe Narratives ſunk in the Ignorance and Barbarity of following Centuries; and, which was another Misfortune, new Relations were drawn up from counterfeit Records. 3. Sometimes Hereticks made Deletions and Alterations in theſe Remains. 4. In the eighth and ſucceeding Centuries, ſeveral Writers, both of the Greek and Latin Church, compil'd Acts of the Martyrs, and Saints Lives as their Fancy directed 'em, which afterwards crept into the Offices of the Church. Simeon Metaphraſtes, a Greek Author of the ninth Century, had a great Stroke this Way. 5. Some Legendary Writers, who had no diſtinguiſhing Heads, threw all the Romantic written Relations into the Lives of Saints and Martyrs, without ſo much as examining whether they had an Air of Probability about 'em. 6. Thoſe in theſe latter Centuries, who wrote firſt upon the Lives of theſe Martyrs and Saints, tho' they were not without Capacity, yet either through Prepoſſeſſion, or Want of Courage to contradict receiv'd Opinions, have made uſe of a great Part of this fabulous Stuff, and paſs'd counterfeit Coin for Sterling. Bollandus, and thoſe that came after him, have manag'd with a little more Judgment; however they have inſerted a great many ſpurious Pieces in their Collection. 'Tis but a few Years ſince, that ſome good Critics have entirely clear'd the Hiſtory of the Saints from the Fiction: Of this Number we may reckon M. de Launoy Biſhop of Paris, P. le Cointe, D. Thierry Ruinart a Benedictin, M. le Nain de Tillemont, M. Baillet, dans ſes Vies des Saints, and M. Châtelain Canon of Notre-Dame; not to mention a great many Authors, who have written upon particular Facts. * Baillet, Preface à la Vie des Saints. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. IX. & XVIII.

MARVILLE, a Town within the Duchy of Bar in Lorrain; it ſtands upon the ſmall River Oſtain, at the Frontier of Luxembourg, four Leagues from Stenay, and one from Jametz to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

MARULLA, a young Woman of Cochino in the Iſle of Lemnos, then belonging to the Venetians: This Perſon having News brought her that her Father, who was poſted at one of the Gates, was kill'd by the Turks, immediately ran thither; and finding his Corps, drew his Sword, and for ſome time ſtood ſingle againſt the Enemy, and after receiving ſome Aſſiſtance from the Burghers, ſhe drove the Turks to their Ships. Her Courage and Strength was much admir'd by the Officers, and every Captain preſented her with a Crown of Gold. Lauritano, the Venetian General, deſir'd her to chuſe a Husband ſhe lik'd beſt out of all the Officers; promiſing her that the Republick ſhould give her a ſuitable Fortune: Her Anſwer was, that ſhe would enter into no ſuch Engagement till ſhe was well acquainted with the Merit of the Perſon. * Baudier, Hiſt. Generale des Turcs, lib. 7. cap. 4.

MARULLUS (Tacitus,) a Calabrian Poet of the fifth Century, came to wait upon Attila King of the Huns at Padua, and preſented him with a flattering Panegyric: He expected no ſmall Recompence for his Pains; but this Prince underſtanding by his Interpreters that Marullus had drawn him a Pedigree from the Gods, and made a God of him into the Bargain, order'd that the Verſes and the Poet ſhould be thrown into the Fire; but preſently recollecting himſelf that ſuch Severity might diſcourage others from attempting his Commendation, he leſſen'd the Puniſhment. * Callimach. Experienſ. in Vit. Attilæ.

*MARUTHAS, a Meſopotamian Biſhop in the fourth and fifth Centuries. He was preſent at the Council of Antioch, which was call'd againſt the Meſſalians A. D. 390. He aſſiſted at the Aſſembly of the Biſhops, who met at Chalcedon againſt St. Chryſoſtom; but having diſcover'd the Inſincerity and Paſſion of this Biſhop's Enemies, he went over to his Party. It appears by one of St. Chryſoſtom's Epiſtles, that they held a Correſpondence, that Maruthas was impriſon'd, and that St. Chryſoſtom ſolicited his Diſcharge. Maruthas was ſent Ambaſſador by the Emperor Arcadius to Iſdegerdes King of Perſia, who gave him an honourable Reception. This awakening the Magi's Jealouſy, they got a Man conceal'd in a Vault under the Temple: When the King came thither this Man, inſtructed by the Magi, cry'd aloud that his Majeſty would be dethron'd if he continued to ſuffer Maruthas in his Dominions. Maruthas having diſcover'd this Cheat to the King, and the ſame Warning being repeated by the pretended Spirit, Iſdegerdes order'd the Ground to be digg'd: Thus the Impoſture was diſcover'd, and ſeveral of the Magi executed. And now he permitted Maruthas to build as many Churches in his Dominions as he had Occaſion for: 'Twas plainly after his coming off this Embaſſy that he was perſecuted by St. Chryſoſtom's Adverſaries, and kept in Priſon at Conſtantinople. After Arcadius's Death he returu'd into Perſia: And here the Magi gave him new Diſturbances, but he was more in Iſdegerdes's Favour than ever: This Prelate was very ſucceſsful in propagating Chriſtianity in Perſia. King Iſdegerdes's Son being Poſſeſs'd, Maruthas, by Prayer and Faſting, diſlodg'd the evil Spirit: This Miracle gave the Chriſtians a full Toleration; and the King himſelf, like Agrippa, was almoſt converted. Socrates reports that nothing but Death prevented Iſdegerdes from declaring himſelf a Chriſtian; but Theodorit aſſures us that he went backward in his Belief; and that being provok'd by the over-forward Zeal of Abdas a Perſian Biſhop, who ſet Fire to a heathen Temple, and refuſing to build it at his own Charge, gave the King ſo great an Averſion, that he begun a Perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, which was continued and encreas'd to the Year 420 by Varanes his Son and Succeſſor Maruthas was not in Perſia, nor, it may be, in this World at that time; for neither the Year, nor the Day of his Death is known: The Greeks however have pitch'd upon the 4th of December to honour his Memory. * Socrat. lib. 6. cap. 15. & lib. 7. cap. 8. Theodorit, hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 39. Photius, Cod. 52.

MARY of England, Queen of France; for eldeſt Daughter to Henry VII. in Morery Vol. II. read youngeſt Daughter.

MARZA SIROCCO, a ſmall Gulph in the Iſle of Malta; it lies on the South Side. The Turks made a Deſcent there in 1565, when they went to beſiege the Town of Malta: To prevent a like Misfortune, the grand Maſters of Malta built three Forts there; two at the Entry of the Gulph, and a third upon a Point of Land which ſhoots out to the middle of the Gulph, and faces the Entry. * Maty, Diction.

MASANDERAN, or Mazanderan, otherwiſe call'd Tabreſtan, a Province of Perſia; 'tis Part of the old Hyrcania; the Caſpian Sea confines upon it to the North, the Province Chilan lies to the Weſt, Yerack Agemi to the South, and Aſterabat to the Eaſt. This Province is not perfectly known to the Europeans, as appears by their different Accounts; ſome making three Provinces of Maſanderan, Tabreſtan, and Aſterabat; others joyn theſe two laſt Countries, and make Maſanderan a diſtinct Territory; and others part Aſterabat, and joyn Maſanderan and Tabreſtan: And of this Diviſion ſome make the Town Maſanderan the Capital, of which Place, by the way, Tavernier ſays nothing. * Maty, Diction.

MASBATE, an Iſland in the Eaſtern Ocean; 'tis one of the Philippines which belong to the Spaniards: It lies to the South of Manilla, and to the Weſt of Tendaye, * Maty, Diction.

MASCALAT, a Town in Arabia the Happy; 'tis twenty Leagues from the Gulph of Balſora, and about fifty from the Town Labſa to the Eaſt. Maſcalat is the Capital of a Kingdom or Principality, which lies along the Gulph of Balſora, between the Beglerbergley of Labſa, and the Principality of Vodana. * Maty, Diction.

MASCARON (Julius) Biſhop of Agen, and one of the moſt celebrated French Preachers of the ſeventeenth Century. He was born at Marſeilles A. D. 1634. His Father was an Advocate or Barriſter, but left him not much Fortune: He was enter'd very young in the Congregation of the Prieſts of the Oratory, from whence he was ſent off at two and twenty Years of Age to teach Rhetorick at Mans. He was born with extraordinary Furniture for a Perſuaſive Speaker: He had a noble Preſence, an agreeable Voice, and his Geſtures were natural, lively, and well manag'd. This recommending Outſide was aſſiſted with a natural Talent for Elocution, improv'd by Study, and govern'd with Judgment and true Taſte: With this Preparation he mounted the Pulpit at Saumur: The Church was quickly too little to contain the Audience; even the Hugonots flock'd thither; and the famous Tannegui le Fevre could not help valuing him, and was one of the firſt that flouriſh'd in his Commendation. The Biſhop of Mans being deſirous to fix ſo eminent a Preacher at his Cathedral gave him a Prebend; but Paris ſoon ſnatch'd him from the Province. Here Maſcaron made a great Figure in the Church belonging to his Congregation in the Street of St. Honoré: The principal Members of the French Academy, who held a learned Correſpondence with his Father, were charm'd to hear the Son, and very forward in doing him Juſtice: He was ſent for to Court in 1666, and preach'd there Advent and Lent ſix Years together: God, as the French Supplementer goes on, form'd him as it were on Purpoſe to preach before Quality: His Sermons were directed to make Impreſſion upon the Court: He retir'd every Summer to Vendome to make and new model his Diſcourſes, inſomuch that he very ſeldom preach'd the ſame Sermons at the Louvre. The King nominated him to the Biſhoprick of Tulles in January 1671, whither he withdrew immediately after his Conſecration. The Cathedrals of Toulouſe and Bourdeaux had him ſome time in their Pulpits: but the King ſent for him up to preach in Lent in 1675 and 1677. In the Beginning of 1678 his Majeſty preferr'd him to the See of Agen: And here he found Buſineſs enough for his Zeal to work on: His Elocution brought the Hugonots to hear him; his engaging Temper took off their Prejudice; his genteel Manner charm'd 'em; his Reaſoning convinc'd, and his Exemplaryneſs brought 'em over to his own Communion; inſomuch that of thirty thouſand Calviniſts, which he found at his coming, he had the Satisfaction to prevail with eight and twenty thouſand of 'em to renounce their Church: And now he was call'd for to come again to Court, where he preach'd three Advents and one Lent. In 1695 he was pitch'd on by the Clergy, to open their Aſſembly with a Speech: After he had ſatisfy'd this Requeſt, he went down into his Dioceſe, and ſpent his time in the Functions of his Character. He dy'd in December 1703, and went off with the ſame pious Diſpoſition, which he had all along endeavour'd to transfuſe into his Audience. He made the Poor his Heir, whom he had always cheriſh'd as if they had been his Children. There is nothing printed of this great Man excepting a Collection of his Funeral Orations made upon the Queen-Mother, the Dauphineſs, the Duke of Beaufort, the Chancellor Seguier, and upon Mareſchal Turenne. At the Head of this Collection there's a ſhort Life of this eminent Prelate. * Memoires du Tems. Journal. des Savans, tom. 32. pag. 632. Edit de Hollande..

* MASIUS (Andreas,) a Louvain Doctor; he made a Latin Tranſlation of Moſes Bar Cepha's Book touching Paradiſe, written originally in Syriac: He likewiſe tranſlated the Syriac Liturgy reckon'd to St. Baſil, two Profeſſions of Faith of Moſes Mardenes Patriarch of the Jacobites at Antioch, and two Letters of the Neſtorians. Maſius was always particularly careful to ſtick cloſe to the Letter and Terms of his Originals. * Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belgica. Daniel Huetius, de claris Interpretibus. lib. 2.

MASSA DI SORRENTO, in Latin Maſſa Lubrenſis, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples; it ſtands in the hither Principality upon the Cape of Minerva, a League from Sorrento: And tho' Maſſa has the Title of a Principality, and is a Biſhop's See, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Sorrento, 'tis notwithſtanding but an inconſiderable Place. * Maty, Diction.

* MASSADA, the ſtrongeſt Town in Palæſtine, and within the Diviſion of the Tribe of Judah; 'twas built by the High-Prieſt Jonathan to put him in a Condition to reſiſt the Kings of Syria; and was afterwards fortify'd by Herod the Great. The Situation made it impregnable; 'twas built upon a ſteep Rock which was impracticable to climb, and the Way to it was ſo narrow and embarraſs'd, that only a ſingle Man could paſs, and that with a great deal of Danger; for he muſt be forc'd to creep up upon his Hands and Knees. King Herod being apprehenſive of a Revolt, and that the Jews would dethrone him, and ſet up one of the Aſamonean Family; or that Cleopatra, who had the Aſcendant over Marc-Antony, and hated Herod mortally, might play him a ſhrewd Turn with this Roman General; Herod, I ſay, being thus apprehenſive, thought it beſt to ſecure this Poſt, and fortify it in an extraordinary Manner, that in Caſe of a Reverſe of Fortune he might retire thither. And here, beſide the Works, he built a magnificent Palace, with a great many Ciſterns to keep Rain-Water: And beſides he lay'd up Arms and Proviſion enough to arm ten thouſand Men and maintain the Garriſon a great many Years. All theſe Proviſions, viz. Corn, Wine, Oyl, Pulſe and Dates were found, as they ſay, an hundred Years after as undecay'd and ſound as if they had been newly lay'd up: And which is ſtill farther remarkable, at the Top of this Rock there's a fine Plain, which being well improv'd, would be ſufficient to feed all thoſe that retir'd thither. Eleazar, the Chief of the Sicarii or the Aſſaſſins, after Jeruſalem was taken, threw himſelf into this Place, and was beſieg'd by Flavius Sylva: This Eleazar foreſeeing there was no preventing the Place being carry'd by Storm, and falling into the Hands of the Romans, perſuaded the Garriſon to ſet Fire to the Fort, and kill themſelves; which he thought more eligible than living under Contempt and Servitude: This Propoſal was clos'd with, and executed; and he that was laſt alive, perceiving there was no Body to diſpatch, ſet Fire to the Caſtle, plung'd his Sword in his Body, and fell upon the Corps of his Companion. Two Women eſcaping this Maſſacre, and hiding themſelves in an Aquæduct with five Children, made their Report of what paſs'd to Sylva the Day after, which was the 15th of April in the Year after the taking of Jeruſalem, the fourth of Veſpaſian's Reign, and the forty ſecond or forty third of our Lord. Joſephus deſcribes this Siege at length in his Hiſtory of the Jewiſh Wars, lib 7. cap. 31 to 36.

MASSILIARGUES, a conſiderable Town in Lower Languedoc; it ſtands upon the Vidourle, four Leagues from Montpellier to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

MASSUET (Renatus) a Benedictine of the Congregation of St. Maur, was born at S. Ouen de Mancelles celles near Lyre in the Dioceſe of Eureux in 1666. He has publiſh'd A. D. 1710, a new Edition of St. Irenæus, much larger and more correct than the former. And here he conſulted ſeveral Manuſcripts never before examin'd for that Purpoſe, made new Notes and learned Prefaces. The three Diſſertations prefix'd to the Work, ſet ſome things in a clear Light, which, it may be, were never throughly explain'd before, and which over and above, give good Proof of the Author's Judgment and Penetration: The firſt is ſpent upon the Perſon, Character, and Condition of Irenæus, and gives a Detail of the Writings and Tenets of the Hereticks he encounter'd: The ſecond dilates farther upon the Life, Actions, Martyrdom and Writings of this Saint; and the third reports his Sentiments and Doctrine. The Superiors of his Congregation have ſince engag'd Maſſuet to write a Continuation of the Acts and Annals of the Saints of the Order of St. Bennet. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVIII.

MATERNUS, Biſhop of Cologne, in the Beginning of the fourth Century was delegated by the Emperor Conſtantine, with Reticius Biſhop of Autun, and Marinus of Arles to determine, with Pope Miltiades, the Difference between the Donatiſts and Catholicks. He went to Rome and aſſiſted at the Council of nineteen Biſhops, where Cecilian was acquitted, and Donatus condemn'd. He aſſiſted likewiſe at the Council of Arles met for the ſame Buſineſs A. D. 314. * Optat. Milevit. lib. 1. Du Pin, Hiſtoria Donatiſtar. prefix'd to his Edition of Optatus.

* MATTHEW (St.) an Apoſtle and Evangeliſt, Son of Alpheus, and moſt probably of Galilee: He was a Cuſtom-Houſe Officer; notwithſtanding Tertullian is of Opinion, that none but Heathens receiv'd Cuſtoms or Taxes for the Romans, yet there is no doubt of St. Matthew's being a Jew. Clemens Alexandrinus (from the Teſtimony of Heracleon a Diſciple of Valentinus) aſſures us that St. Matthew dy'd a natural Death. Some of the Greek Church are of this Sentiment; but the common Opinion amongſt 'em is, that he was burnt for the Chriſtian Faith. The Latins, ſince the Beginning of the ninth Century, have likewiſe believ'd him a Martyr, but then they have related his Martyrdom from the ſpurious Writings of Abdias and Hippolytus. St. Paulinus reports the Corps of this Apoſtle buried in Parthia: Fortunatus, from Abdias, relates St. Matthew buried in a Town of Æthiopia call'd Naddaver; others will have him dye in Perſia, and this is St. Ambroſe's Opinion. Metaphraſtes tells us he preach'd in Syria; Iſidorus Hiſpalenſis aſſigns him Judæa and Macedonia for his Diviſion; but the beſt Way to prevent being miſtaken is to keep to the Narrative, the moſt ancient Chriſtian Writers give us of this Apoſtle. Now they aſſure us, that St. Matthew having preach'd Chriſtianity ſome Years in Judæa, wrote his Goſpel in Hebrew, that is, in Syriac, before he left this Country: 'Tis not known in what Year he wrote, but that he was the firſt of the four Evangeliſts is on all Hands agreed. The Syriac or Chaldee Original has been loſt a long time; 'twas likewiſe interpolated by the Nazareans or Ebionites. Euſebius reports, that Pantænus travelling to the Indies (that is, into Æthiopia) found the Goſpel of St. Matthew in Hebrew Characters, left there by St. Bartholomew; to which St. Hierom adds that Pantænus brought this Copy to Alexandria; but neither of theſe Relations is very certain. We are not to rely neither upon what Theodorus Lector reports, that in the Reign of the Emperor Zeno the Relicks of St. Barnabas were found in the Iſle of Cyprus, with the Goſpel of St. Matthew upon his Breaſt, written in St. Barnabas's Hand; and that the Emperor Zeno lodg'd it in his Palace Chapel: This Goſpel was written in Greek: St. Jerom acquaints us that he had ſeen in the Library of Cæſarea an Hebrew Copy of St. Matthew's Goſpel, which was the ſame with that of the Nazaræans: 'Tis probable that the Original of St. Matthew's Goſpel was preſerved by the converted Jews who dwelt in Jeruſalem; and that they carry'd it with them to Pella, when they retir'd thither before Jeruſalem was the laſt time beſieg'd. The greateſt Part of theſe Converts retaining ſomething of Judaiſm, form'd a Sect call'd the Sect of the Nazarenes, which afterwards ſunk farther into that of the Ebionites: Theſe Nazarenes kept the Original Goſpel of St. Matthew, but then they added ſeveral Paſſages which they believ'd true. Some old Writers, who had Copies of this Nazarene Goſpel, have preſerv'd ſome of the Interpolations: At preſent the Hebrew or Syriac Copy is not in Being; for the two Hebrew Copies of this Goſpel, one of 'em printed by Munſter, and the other by Tilius, are of a later Age; and the Syriac Verſion, publiſh'd by Widmanſtad, is tranſlated from the Greek. As to the Greek Text which we have at preſent, and which goes for an Original, 'tis a very ancient Tranſlation, and done in the time of the Apoſtles, as St. Jerom and St. Auſtin inform us. Who was the Author of this Verſion is not known; ſome reckon it to St. James Biſhop of Jeruſalem, ſome to St. John, and others to St. Luke; but all this is no better than Conjecture. * Iren. lib. 3. cap. 1. Origen. lib. 3. in Geneſ. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 18. 24, &c. Epiphan. Hær. 29. Athanaſ. in Synopſi. Hieron. Præf. in Evang. Matth. P. Simon, Critical Hiſtory upon the New Teſtament, Book I. Du Pin, Preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible.

* MATHIAS (St.) an Apoſtle. The Relation of St. Mathias's Preaching and his Martyrdom ſtands upon no good ancient Record. St. Clemens of Alexandria reports St. Mathias a zealous Preacher of Mortification, and that his Example was no leſs perſuaſive than his Diſcourſes: His Exhortations were that the Animal Life is to be check'd, the Senſes treated ruggedly, kept under, and carefully reſtrain'd from all Approaches to Senſuality: And that on the other Side, the Soul was to be fortify'd by Knowledge and good Principles. Now tho' this is very good Doctrine, yet 'tis poſſible St. Clemens might have it from the Apocryphal Goſpel of St. Mathias. The ancient Calendars and Martyrologies have no particular Feſtival for this Saint.

MATHIAS III, a Jewiſh High-Prieſt, and Son to Theophilus; he ſucceeded Jeſus Son of Gamaliel A. D. 70. He kept his Poſt but a Year the firſt time, being oblig'd to reſign to Phanaſius. This High-Prieſt perſuaded the People to receive Simon, one of the Heads of the Zealots Faction: The Deſign was to balance John's Authority, Head of the oppoſite Faction, and put a Stop to his Cruelties. But Simon, finding himſelf Maſter of the Town, acted a perfidious Part, forgot the Obligations he had receiv'd from Mathias, got him proſecuted for holding Correſpondence with the Romans, and ſentenc'd him and his three Sons to Death, without giving him Leave to make his Defence. All the Favour Mathias ask'd of him was that he might dye firſt: But this ſavage Wretch refus'd him that Requeſt, and ſo the venerable old Man was forc'd to ſee his Sons murther'd before his own Execution. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 4. cap. 34. & lib. 5. cap. 33. Tirin. Chronol. Sacr. cap 42.

MATHIAS CORVINUS; for Frederick IV. in Morery Vol. II. read Frederick III.

MATHILDA, commonly call'd St. Maud, Queen of Germany, Mother to the Emperor Otho, and Grandmother to Hugh Capet; ſhe was Daughter to Count Thierri, who drew his Deſcent from the famous Witikind, Prince of the Saxons. She was born in Weſtphalia, and bred in the Nunnery of Hereword under her Grandmother Mathilda her Father's Mother, who was Abbeſs there. Mathilda, at the Head of this Article, was marry'd to Prince Henry, call'd the Fowler, Son of Otho Duke of Saxony. Henry was elected King or Emperor of Germany A. D. 919. She had three Sons, Otho the Great, who was Emperor; Henry Duke of Bavaria, and Bruno Archbiſhop of Cologne; and ſeveral Daughters, Gerberge who marry'd Lewis call'd Outremer, and Hedwige who was marry'd to Hugh the Great, a French Duke, by whom ſhe had Hugh Capet. Henry, call'd the Fowler, dying A. D. 936, Mathilda had the Mortification to be maltreated by her Sons: And thus ſhe was oblig'd to retire into Weſtphalia. The Emperor Otho afterwards recall'd her: ſhe aſſiſted him in the Adminiſtration by her Advice, continued her Charities to the Poor, founded ſome Monaſteries and a great many Nunneries and Hoſpitals. She dy'd in the Abby of of Quedlimbourg March 14. A. D. 968. * Mabillon, Siecle V. Benedictin. Baillet, Vies des Saints au Mois de Mars.

MATHOUD (Hugh,) a Benedictine of the Congregation of St. Maur, born at Macon, and dy'd at the Beginning of the eighteenth Century. In the Year 1655 he publiſh'd eight Books of the Sentences of Robertus Pullus, one of the oldeſt School Divines; and five Books of the Sentences of Peter de Poitiers: He has inſerted learned Remarks upon Pullus's Performance, where he handles ſeveral Queſtions in Divinity and Diſcipline: And after having lain by till 1688 he printed a Latin Treatiſe entitled the true Chriſtian Original of the Country of Sens, againſt Mr. de Launoy, to prove that S. Savinianus, S. Potentianus, and S. Altinus were diſpatch'd to Sens by St. Peter; that they preach'd the Goſpel, and form'd a Church there; but the Memoirs he cites to prove the Facts are of ſlender Credit. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MATINES, the Name commonly given to the Roman Catholick Night-Service, conſiſting of three Nocturns. Anciently 'twas the Name of the Office ſaid at Break of Day, call'd Laudes Matutinæ, and commonly the Lauds.

MATIQUE, an American Town in French Florida; 'tis the Capital of the Province Matique, and ſtands upon the River May, near the great Lake where this River riſes. * Maty, Diction.

MATTA, a Mountain to the Eaſt, of Tunis, and near Sfachcki: It affords Plenty of Oyl and Figs: The Inhabitants drive a great Trade in Wool and Berans, which are a Sort of Cloaks worn by the Turks. * Hiſtoir. des Revolut. de Tunis.

MATTHIAS (Chriſtian,) of Ditmarſen a Province of Lower Saxony, flouriſh'd in 1640: He read Lectures of Divinity for ſome time at Aldorph, from hence he went into Denmark, and from thence into Holland. His Works are, Theatrum Hiſtoricum: Syſtema Theologicum: Syſtema Politicum, Ethicum, Logicum: Collegium Antiphotinianum, &c. * Spizelius in Templo Honoris, pag. 203. Thomaſius de Plagio, §. 506. Bartholinus in Danis pag. 26.

MATTHIOLUS (Petrus Andreas,) a famous Phyſician of Siena in Italy. Thoſe who have carefully read Matthiolus's Commentaries upon Dioſcorides, are generally agreed that they are written with great Judgment and Politeneſs, and full of a great many curious and ſerviceable Remarks. * Lipſius, in Chron. Medic. Vander Linden, de Script. Medic. Geſner, in Biblioth, &c.

MATZUMAY, a Country upon the Coaſt of Jeſſo; it lies to the North-Eaſt of the Iſle of Niphon: The Dutch have diſcover'd this Country, but not yet much examin'd it. * Maty, Diction.

MAUBEUGE, a Town of the Low Countries in Hainault, in Latin Malbodium or Malobodium; it ſtands upon the Scheld between Mons and Aveſnes, four Leagues diſtant from each. Maubeuge is not only famous for the Fortifications made there by King Lewis XIV, but likewiſe by the Canoneſſes, who live by the ſame Rule with thoſe at Mons, and like thoſe muſt prove themſelves Gentlewomen to qualify 'em to be receiv'd into the Chapter. * Sanſon. Baudrand.

MAUCROIX (Francis de,) born at Noyon A. D. 1619. He ſtudy'd at Paris and was call'd to the Bar; but not reliſhing this Profeſſion he gave it over, and apply'd himſelf wholly to the Belles Lettres. He was generally much valu'd by the Wits of the Age: He had a great deal of Spirit and Pleaſantry, and his Manner in Converſation was very polite, eaſy and natural: He wrote likewiſe very nicely; and therefore 'tis not without Reaſon that Father Bouhours ſays of him, that without being of the Academy he had all the Merit of an excellent Member of that Society. He dy'd at Rheims ninety Years of Age April 1708. He has made a great many French Tranſlations very much valu'd; amongſt the reſt, St. Chryſoſtom's Homilies ad Populum Antiochenum; the Hiſtory of the Engliſh Schiſm, written in Latin by Saunders; the Lives of the Cardinals Pool and Campegio, both written in Latin, the firſt by Becatellus, the other by Sigonius: Lactantius's Tract de Mortibus Perſecutorum: Petavius's Rationarium Temporum: Demoſthenes's Philippicks; and Tully's Orations againſt Verres and Catiline, &c. * Baillet, Jugemens des Savans ſur les Traduct. Memoires du Tems.

* MAUD, Daughter to King Henry I. of England; for ſhe was marry'd to the Emperor Henry IV. in Morery Vol. II. read Henry V.

MAUDUIT (Michael,) a Prieſt of the Oratory, who dy'd January 1709. He wrote French Analyſes or Expoſitions upon the Goſpels, the Acts of the Apoſtles, the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and the other Canonical Epiſtles, with hiſtorical, critical and moral Diſſertations. This Work is a very learned and pious Performance, and has been well receiv'd. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII. Journal. des Savans, tom. 43. pag. 179. Edit. de Holland.

MAURICE REGAN, a Courtier belonging to Dermitius, Son of Murchard King of Lemſter in Ireland, flouriſh'd A. D. 1171. He wrote an Hiſtory of what paſs'd in his time in Ireland; 'tis faithfully enough written: One of his Friends tranſlated it into French Verſe, and Sir George Carew, Preſident of the Province of Munſter in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, turn'd it into Engliſh. * Waræus, de Clar. Hibern. Script.

MAURICE de Portu, or de Fibely, born near Baltimore in the County of Cork in Ireland, was a Minorite, and much eſteem'd in the ſixteenth Century. Pope Julius II. made him Archbiſhop of Tuam in Ireland. Maurice aſſiſted at the two firſt Seſſions of the Council of Lateran held A. D. 1512; and the next Year returning into Ireland he dy'd at Galloway May 25. This Archbiſhop wrote an Holy Dictionary for the Bible, printed at Venice A. D. 1603, as far as the Letter E inclusively: 'Twas publiſh'd by Matthew Zani, Patriarch of this Town. A Catalogue of his other Works may be ſeen in Sir James Ware. * Franciſcus Gonzaga, de Origin. Franciſcan. Part. 1. Poſſevin. in Appar. Sacr. Binius, tom. 9. Concil. Waræus de Clar. Hibern. Script.

MANRITZLAND, a Country in Southern America: 'Tis Part of Terre del Fuogo, and faces the Streight le Maire: 'Twas diſcover'd by the Dutch A. D. 1616, and carries the Name of Maurice Prince of Orange. * Maty, Diction.

MAURUS (Terentianus,) liv'd in the Reign of Trajan, as ſome will have it, and under the Antonines according to others: He was Governor of Siene, an Iſland upon the Nile in Upper Ægypt under the Tropic of Cancer. He wrote a ſmall Tract upon the Art of Poetry and Verſification: 'Tis not entire, but as far as it goes 'tis written with great Spirit and Delicacy. * Martial. lib. 1. Epigrammat. Voſſius, Inſtitut. Poetic. lib. 1, 2, & 3. Lil. Girald. Dialog. 10. de Poetar. Hiſtor. Tanaquil Faber, in Notis ad Longin.

* MAUSOLUS, King of Caria, is better known by being Artemiſia's Husband, than by any other Diſtinction; notwithſtanding he reign'd four and twenty Years, and was a projecting intriguing Prince. He follow'd the Conduct of his Predeceſſors, and was much more attach'd to the Perſian Intereſt than to that of the Greeks. He was a great Pirate, and perfectly ſubdu'd by Money, would circumvent, break Friendſhip, and engage in any ſcandalous Practice to fill his Coffers: He had a conſiderable Share in the Conteſt call'd the Social or Confederate War, which began in the 105th Olympiad between the Athenians on one Side, and the Rhodians, thoſe of Chios, Cos and Byzantium on the other; 'twas Mauſolus that form'd this Alliance againſt the Athenians. Amongſt other Exploits, he turn'd the Democratical Government of Rhodes into an Ariſtocracy: But neither his Succeſſes, Bravery, nor any thing he did, has immortaliz'd him ſo much as his Queen has done by erecting a magnificent Tomb for preſerving his Memory.

MAXENTIUS (Marc. Aurel) For Depoſition in Morery Vol. II. read Reſignation.

MAXIMUS, Biſhop of Alexandria in the third Century, had been a Prieſt of that Church in the time of Dionyſius who A. D. 249 ſucceeded Heraclas in the See of Alexandria: He was very remarkable for his charitable Aſſiſtance in the Decian Perſecution begun A. D. 254. He took particular Care of the Confeſſors in Priſon when his Biſhop Dionyſius was abſent. He was likewiſe very ſerviceable to thoſe viſited with the Plague: He was baniſh'd with Dionyſius to Kephro, a Village on the Skirts of the Deſarts of Libya, this happen'd in the Valerian Perſecution: From hence he follow'd his Biſhop in a ſecond Baniſhment to Mareotis, where where he continued with him to the End of the Perſecution, which happen'd when the Emperor Valerian was taken by the Perſians A. D. 260. He ſucceeded Dionyſius in the See of Alexandria A. D. 264, and govern'd eighteen Years. * Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 7. cap. 11. & 22. Tillemont, tom. 4. des Mem. Eccleſ. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. III.

MAXIMUS (St.) a Martyr. The Emperor Conſtans II. order'd him to be ſeiz'd and carry'd to Conſtantinople, from whence he was ſent into Baniſhment A. D. 665 to a ſmall Town in Thrace, where Theodorus, Biſhop of Biſias, made him a Viſit in Order to perſuade him to alter his Opinion, and make him a Monothelite: But not ſucceeding in his Diſpute, Maximus was remanded to Conſtantinople, where, after having undergone a great deal of Hardſhip, his Hand and his Tongue were cut off: He was afterwards impriſon'd in a Caſtle where he dy'd Aug. 13. A. D. 662. There are ſeveral Works of St. Maximus extant, publiſh'd by Combefis in two Volumes. This Saint's Life is prefix'd to his Tracts, with authentick Records of the Perſecution he ſuffer'd. To be ſomething particular concerning his Works; he wrote ſeveral Queſtions upon the Scripture; an Aſcetick Diſcourſe; Theological, Devotional, and Moral Maxims, and ſeveral Theological and Polemical Tracts; amongſt the reſt, his Conference with Pyrrhus; a Tract concerning the Soul; Epiſtles; five Dialogues upon the Trinity, wrongly reckon'd to St. Athanaſius; a Myſtagogical Diſcourſe upon the Ceremonies of the Church; a Commentary upon the Works going under the Name of Dionyſius the Areopagite, &c. This Author has a perplex'd Manner, and is very myſtical in his Devotional Tracts. *See the Author of his Life publiſh'd by Morinus Photius, Cod. 192, 193, 194, 195. Anaſtaſius Bibliothecarius, in Collect. Theophanes. Baronius. Bellarmin. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. VII. & VIII, &c.

MAXIMIANOPOLI, a City in Thrace built by the Emperor Maximian; 'tis now only a Town in Romania, twenty Leagues from Adrianople, towards the Frontier of Macedonia and the Gulph Conteſſa. * Maty, Diction.

MAXIMIN (St.) a ſmall Town in Provence, ſituate upon the Hills near the Head of the River Argens, ſix Leagues from Aix to the Eaſt, and eight from Toulon to the North; 'tis famous for the holy Ampoule kept there, and which draws a great many Pilgrims thither. 'Tis pretended that this Ampoule has ſome of the Blood and Water which flow'd from our Saviour's Side, and which by a Miracle moves itſelf every Good-Friday from eleven till twelve a-clock. 'Tis kept in a Gallery guarded by ſix Halberdiers at each Corner, both to prevent Diſorder, and for the Security of ſo precious a Relick: In the middle of the Gallery there's a ſort of Nook, where a Jacobin holds the holy Ampoule: 'Tis a Viall like one of our Hourglaſſes, in which there is a tranſparent Liquor like Rock-Water, with little black Grains ſwimming in it, and which ſeem to ſink to the Bottom, and ſometimes riſe again to the Surface immediately. In the Church to which this Gallery belongs there is Mary Magdalen's Head in a Gold Shrine, and her Body in another. * Baudrand. Voyages Hiſtoriques, lib. 1. cap. 3.

MAYERNE (Lewis Turquet Lord of) liv'd at Geneva A. D. 1586. He wrote the Hiſtory of Spain in two Volumes folio, which he dedicated to Henry III. King of Navarre. He is the Author of another Book entitled, la Monarchie Ariſtodemocratique, which was anſwer'd by Louis d'Orleans in his Plante Humaine, printed at Lyons and at Paris. Turquet publiſh'd a Reply A. D. 1617. * Patin, Lettre 8.

MAYERNE (Theodore Turquet Lord of,) Son of the foregoing, was born in the Neighbourhood of Geneva A. D. 1572, and commenc'd Doctor in Phyſick at Montpellier A. D. 1597. From hence he came to Paris in 1602, and preſcrib'd moſtly in chymical Medicines: He quarrell'd with ſome of the Doctors of his Faculty who refus'd to come into his new Method of Practice. Mayerne publiſh'd a Defence of his Method in the Year 1603: The Phyſick Faculty of Paris declar'd publickly againſt Mayerne; but this Oppoſition did not hinder his being ſent for to Court, and made Phyſician in ordinary to Henry the Great. After the Death of this Prince Mayerne travell'd into England, and was firſt Phyſician to King James, and afterwards to King Charles I. He dy'd at London eighty two Years of Age 1655. He was Baron of Aubonne in the Territory of Vaux in Switzerland. His Works in Phyſick were printed at London in 1700. * See his Life in the Preface to his Works. Patin. Lettre 8. Journal des Savans, tom. 21. pag. 309.

MAYFART (Matthew,) a famous Divine flouriſhing about the Year 1630. He publiſh'd a great many Books, of which the Reader ſhall have the following Catalogue. Antibecanus. Nodus Gordius reſolutus. Suſcitabulum Clericorum. Grawerus Continuatus. Diſtinctiones Theologicæ. Arx Sionis. Abſurda Jeſuitica. Meletemata Theologica. Academica Diſciplina. Tractatus de Pace concilianda inter Evangelicos, &c. * Konig. Biblioth.

MAYOTTE, the Iſlands of Mayotte or Comorra: They are a Knot of ſmall Iſlands in the Sea of Zanguebar, between the Coaſt of Zanguebar and the Iſle of Madagaſcar. They lie in the twelfth Degree of Southern Latitude, and take their Name from Mayotta the moſt Southern of the twelve. * Maty, Diction.

MAZDAC, a famous Perſian Impoſtor ſirnam'd Zendic, that is, the Wicked, who, under Pretence of making every thing common, deſign'd to get other Men's Eſtates for himſelf. He liv'd in the Reign of Cobad, Coſroe's Father, and had ſuch an Aſcendant over this Prince, that he procur'd an Order from him to throw all the Eſtates of Perſia into Hotchpotch, and make a new Diviſion of 'em. This bold Enterprize ſucceeded ſo well that he ouſted moſt of the great Men of the Realm, and put himſelf at the Head of a numerous Mob, and made 'em Sharers in Part of the Plunder. The Nobility finding themſelves thus ruggedly us'd by their Prince's Order, reſolv'd to dethrone him, which they executed accordingly. But Maſdac, ſupported by a ſtrong Faction, had Intereſt enough to get Maſraf, one of his own Party, elected King: However Buzurgemihir, Cobad's firſt Miniſter, underſtanding how to make his Court to the Nobility and Commons, and gain their Affections, diſcover'd Maſdac's foul Practice, and prevail'd ſo far as to get Cobad reſtor'd, upon which Maſdac was forc'd to leave the Kingdom. Some time after, this Impoſtor, who ſtill continu'd to claim the Commiſſion of a Prophet, return'd into Perſia in the Reign of Nouſchirvan, Cobad's Son. But this Prince being better adviſ'd than his Father would never hearken to him; but inſtead of ſhewing him any Favour had him impriſon'd at Buſurgemihir's Suggeſtion, and ſentenc'd to Death. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MAZZOLIN (Sylveſter,) call'd Prierio, becauſe he was born in a Village of that Name, near Savonne in the State of Genoa: He liv'd in the Beginning of the ſixteenth Century, and was rang'd in the firſt learned Claſs of the Dominicans. After having profeſs'd Divinity a great while and preach'd with Reputation, he was preferr'd to the Office of Maſter of the ſacred Palace. He dy'd of the Plague at Rome A. D. 1523. His moſt conſiderable Works are as follow; a Tract againſt Luther; a Summ of Caſes of Conſcience call'd Summa Sylveſtrina; Poſtills upon the Goſpels for the Year, taken out of Thomas Aquinas's Commentaries; a Volume of Sermons entitled Aurea Roſa; Commentaries upon the Maſter of the Sentences, &c. * Antonius Senenſ. & Alphonſus Fernandez, de Vir. illuſtr. Dominic. Sixtus Senenſ. in Biblioth. Sacr. Bellarmin. Geſner. Poſſevin. Raphael Soprani, Li Scritt. della Ligur, &c.

* MEDALLS. For Severus in Morery Vol. II. read Alexander Severus.

*MEDALLS. To what has been ſaid upon this Head in Morery and the Supplement, it may not be improper to lay down ſome Marks for the diſcovering counterfeit Medals.

The firſt Way of counterfeiting, which I ſhall mention, is to make Medals which never had any Originals; and of this Kind we may reckon the Medals of Priam, of Æneas, of Tully, Virgil, the wiſe Men of Greece, and ſome other famous Men, for which the Counterfeiter of Parma, and ſome other modern Workmen, have made Stamps on purpoſe to ſurpriſe thoſe who dote upon Rarities of this Kind.

'Tis the ſame foul Play and Avarice, which has ſtruck uncommon Reverſes to draw the Fancy; and of this kind we may reckon a Julius Cæſar with the Reverſe Veni, Vidi, Vici; an Auguſtus with the Reverſe Feſtina lentè, which was only a Sentence or Motto of the Emperor's, but never deſign'd to immortalize his Memory upon Metal. Now one ſure Way to diſcover the Cheat is, that all theſe Medals are either caſt or ſtruck with the Stamp of a Metal, which ſhews itſelf modern, being neither ſo bold nor ſoft as the antique.

A ſecond Way of Deceit is to caſt pretended old Medals in Moulds or Sands, and then repair 'em ſo dextrouſly, that they ſeem to be hammer'd. The Legerdemain is diſcover'd either by the Grains of Sand, which make an Impreſſion on the Field of the Medal; or by certain ſmall Streaks and Cavities; or by the Edges not being ſufficiently round and poliſhed, as hammer'd Medals are; or by the Inequalities, Holes, or clumſy ſpreading of the Characters, the Strokes being neither ſo lively or well cut. The Falſification may be alſo found out by the Weight, which is always leſs: The Reaſon is, becauſe caſt Metal is rarify'd by the Fire, whereas that that is hammer'd is condenſed, and by Conſequence grows more ſolid and weighty. In fine, when a Medal is caſt in a Mould, there commonly remains ſome Mark of it, which can't be well fil'd off; and the Edges, which muſt be made round, likewiſe leave ſome Strokes of the File's rubbing upon them, which is a certain Sign of their being counterfeit.

A third Way of deceiving the unskilful is to repair decay'd Medals, and make thoſe eaten up with Ruſt and Time appear clear and legible. Thus ſome have the Art to manage their Graver or Burin ſo nicely, as to carry off all the Ruſt, to reſtore the Letters, poliſh the Field, and revive the Figures which were almoſt inviſible.

A fourth Way of falſifying is to make Stamps ſtruck on Purpoſe upon old Medals which are very ſcarce, and theſe they make paſs for Originals, with a greater Probability, becauſe 'tis plain they are neither caſt, nor reform'd by retouching. Medals of this Kind ſtruck at Padua, Parma, and in Holland, come very near the antique Manner: However, though they are nicely finiſh'd, yet they want that bold, noble Air of the old Originals; and beſides the Colour of the Metal is different, and the Weight is always leſs.

A fifth Contrivance for paſſing counterfeit Medals, is by defacing a common Reverſe, and putting another more ſcarce in it's Place, and by which the Value of the Medal is conſiderably raiſed: Thus for the Purpoſe an Otacilla is put upon the Reverſe of a Philip, a Titus upon the Reverſe of a Veſpaſian, and upon a Medaillon of Decius, there is this Inſcription counterfeitly graved, Deciana Cæſarum, Decennalia feliciter.

This Cunning goes to farther Improvement, for that nothing may appear repaired, they ſometimes ſlit two Medals and then, with a Soulder of Maſtick, joyn the Head of the one to the Reverſe of the other; and thus they make one Medal of two, and ſuch a one as never was ſeen before: They have likewiſe the Art to repair the Edges ſo exactly, that Perſons of ordinary Skill are deceiv'd by 'em: The Way to find out the Falſification is to ring them: Beſides, thoſe who know how to examine 'em will find 'em joyn'd, and ſometimes the Difference of the Metal makes a Diſcovery.

When counterfeit Medals are caſt in Sand, there is an Expedient to prevent the perceiving the little Holes, and which cannot be prevented, upon the ſcore of the Grains of Sand not being all of the ſame Size and Figure: Now to hide this being ſeen, they cover theſe Inequalities with a ſort of dark Varniſh, which fill theſe little Holes; and beſides this, they peck the Edges to make 'em ragged; and if they can do all this with a graver without Varniſh, the Cheat is ſtill more artificial: Now to find out the Varniſh the Medal muſt be prick'd or jobb'd with a pointed Inſtrument, and if the Varniſh is modern 'twill be much more ſoft than the antique; and if there is no Varniſh, and the Deceit has been work'd by the graving Tool, the Field of the Medal will appear ſomewhat worn in, and he that has a nice Hand will perceive it unuſually ſmooth and over poliſhed; whereas the antique Medals ſtrike a little more rough and ſtrong upon the Touch. But farther, there is an Art to counterfeit the old Varniſh, which hinders a young Medaliſt from diſcovering Medals that are caſt from old ones hammer'd: Now it is pretty eaſy to fence againſt this foul Play, for the modern Varniſh has neither the Colour, the Luſtre, nor the Smoothneſs of the antique; the Reaſon is, becauſe the Earth 'tis made of is not the ſame: Beſides, as was obſerved, the modern Varniſh is ſofter, and and gives Way to pecking, whereas the antique is as hard as the Metal itſelf.

Another Inſtance of Falſification is by counterfeiting an Accident which happens to old Medals, which are ſometimes crack'd in the hammering; therefore 'tis a Rule with Antiquaries of this kind to conclude that when the Edges are cleft the Medals are certainly hammer'd. Now to diſtinguiſh the antique from the modern, the Cracks muſt be examin'd; and when they are not deep enough, or the Clefts don't look clean and clever, or when they end in little imperceptible Strings; this is a Sign that the Crack was not made by the Stamp, but by Deſign and Artifice.

To conclude, there are two general Principles or Rules for diſcovering falſe Medals: The firſt is received by moſt Antiquaries, who unanimouſly agree that when there are two Medals found of the ſame Stamp, and exactly alike, 'tis a certain Sign that one of 'em, if not both, are counterfeit: But the learned Author of La Science des Medailles, and Mr. Baudelot won't allow this Rule univerſally true.

The ſecond Principle or Maxim for diſcovering counterfeit Medals is laid down by Mr. Patin, who aſſerts, that all Gold Roman Medals, where the Metal has more than ordinary Proportions of Alloy, are counterfeit. To this the Author of la Science, &c. replies, that if Patin means that all Imperial Gold Medals, more alloy'd than the fine, ought to be ſuſpected for Counterfeits: he is of his Opinion, becauſe even in the bas or low Empire 'tis very rare to find the Gold Medals embaſed, notwithſtanding Alloy was allow'd as early as the Reign of Alexander Severus. However, Mr. Patin might have enlarg'd his Rule a little, and taken in the Greek as well as the Roman Medals, for the former are Ducat or fine Gold, no leſs than the latter. As for Gothick and Punick Medals there are ſome of 'em right and of conſiderable Antiquity, which yet are coarſe and overcharg'd with Alloy.

Beſides, it can't be deny'd, that ſince the Reign of Alexander Severus, there are ſeveral Gold Medals with a coarſe Proportion of Alloy, which are notwithſtanding old and uncounterfeited; therefore Patin's Rule, how univerſal ſoever he may think it, won't paſs without Exceptions.

And here ſomething may be added concerning the Antiquity of Medals, and from what Periods 'tis commonly computed: And here we are to obſerve in the firſt Place, that the old Greek and Roman Medals were moſt of 'em the Money and current Coin of the Country. As to Priority of time the Greek are certainly the moſt ancient; for long before the building of Rome, the Greek Monarchies and Commonwealths fabricated very beautiful Money in all the three Metals of Gold, Silver, and Copper: And, generally ſpeaking, the Figures or Effigies upon the Greek Medals have much more Exactneſs in the deſigning Part, more natural Poſtures, more Strength, Delicacy, and Relief, than thoſe done by the Romans.

Amongſt the Latin the conſular Medals are certainly the moſt ancient; for during the Reign of the Roman Kings, there was no ſuch thing as Gold and Silver Money and Medals: The firſt Silver Money that was coin'd at Rome was in the 484th Year of the building of their City: And Gold Coin they had none, till the Year of the ſame Æra 546. And thus the conſular Medals being the firſt, the Sets of Families are the moſt ancient Roman Medals.

Amongſt Imperial Medals they make a Diſtinction between the high and the low Empire; and notwithſtanding, with Reſpect to what we call modern, all the Medals of the Emperors, as far down as the Paleologi, paſs for Antiques, though they come as low as the fifteenth Century; yet the curious value none but thoſe of the high or early Period of the Empire, which which ends with the thirty Tyrants, and begins with Julius or Auguſtus Cæſar; that is to ſay, it commences with the ſeven hundredth Year of Rome, fifty four Years before our Saviour's Nativity, and reaches to the Year of Rome a thouſand and ten or thereabouts, and falls in with A. D. 260.

The low or later chronological Diviſion of the Empire takes in almoſt twelve hundred Years, provided 'tis brought down to the taking of Conſtantinople by the Turks, which happened A. D. 1453. Now this Period may be ſubdivided into two; the firſt from the Reign of the Emperor Aurelian, or of Claudius the ſecond, to the Reign of Anaſtaſius, which makes more than two hundred Years: The ſecond from the Reign of Anaſtaſius to the laſt of the Paleologi, which reaches farther than a thouſand Years.

As to modern Medals, all thoſe come under that Denomination, which have been ſtruck within this laſt three hundred Years: As for thoſe fabricated ſince the Reign of Charles the great, to the middle of the fifteenth Century, thoſe who are good Medaliſts won't give 'em room in their Cabinets, excepting ſuch as complete the Set of the Greek Empire. For thoſe within this Period have nothing of Strength, Beauty, or Ingenuity in 'em: And to ſpeak more preciſely, we are to carry the antique Medals no lower than the Reign of Theodoſius the Great, or to the End of the fourth Century. * Patin, Hiſtoire des Medailles. La Science des Medailles.

* MEDEA. For her Uncle in Morery Vol. II. read his Uncle; and for Daughter read Daughters.

* MEDES, the old Inhabitants of Media, which is a large Country, bounded on the North by the Hyrcanian Sea, on the Weſt by Armenia the Great and Aſſyria, on the South by Perſia, and on the Eaſt by Hyrcania and Parthia, which latter is parted from Media by the Caſpian Mountains. Strabo divides Media into two Parts; Media the Great, of which Ecbatan is the Capital; and the Leſſer, call'd Atropatian: The Country is mountainous, cold and barren, excepting that Part of it near the Caſpian Hills, which is very fruitful. The Medes at firſt were ſubject to the Aſſyrian Monarchy; but Arbaſes, who govern'd the Country for Sardanapalus, made a Revolt, and now the Medes ſet up for themſelves. However, Writers are not agreed either when they began their Independency, or how long it continued; ſome will have it that their Empire laſted three hundred and fifty Years, beginning in the 909th or 910th Year before the Incarnation: But this Æra neither agrees with the Holy Scriptures, nor with the beſt Pagan Writers: Herodotus makes their Empire laſt but an hundred and fifty Years. The Medes, after their Revolt, were without Kings for ſome time: At laſt, they choſe Dejoces in the thirty ſeventh or thirty eighth Year of Nabonaſſar's Æra, and ſeven hundred and ten Years before the Incarnation. Dejoces reign'd fifty three Years; he enlarged his Dominions, and made Acquiſitions upon the Kings of Nineveh and Babylon: His Son Phraortes ſucceeded him in the ninetieth Year of Nabonaſſar's Æra, and ſix hundred and thirty five Years before the Incarnation: His Son Cyaxares march'd with an Army of regular Troops, routed the Aſſyrians, and beſieg'd Nineveh; but a numerous Body of Scythians entering Media at the ſame time, he was oblig'd to raiſe the Siege, and countermarch to that Enemy. But here, his Troops being entirely defeated, the Scythians remain'd Maſters of Media eight and twenty Years: After which Period Cyaxares expell'd 'em, and recover'd his Kingdom: He made War upon the Lydians five Years: He likewiſe ſat down before Nineveh and took it; and dying after forty Years Reign was ſucceeded by his Son Aſtyages: I ſay forty Years, reckoning the twenty eight Years in which the Scythians were Lords of Media. Aſtyages reign'd thirty ſix Years, and had Cyrus for his Succeſſor, who tranſlated the Government from the Medes to the Perſians, in the hundred eighty eighth Year of Nabonaſſar's Æra, and five hundred fifty nine before the Incarnation. * Herodot. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſ. Appian. Juſtin. Cteſiaſ. Prideaux Connection, &c.

MEGACLES of Meſſina in Sicily, was Head of a Party againſt Agathocles, and promis'd a Reward to any one that ſhould kill him. Upon this Provocation Agathocles put himſelf in a Condition to beſiege Meſſina, and ſent to the Burghers to demand Megacles, threatening 'em withal, that unleſs they comply'd he would make Slaves of 'em. Megacles advis'd 'em to deliver him up: This Offer was executed, and Megacles was ſent to Agathocles with a publick Character: And here he ſpoke ſo handſomely that Agathocles pardon'd him, and ſent him back to Meſſina without doing him any Harm. * Polyæn. lib. 5. cap. 2.

MEGASARES, had been a Page to Queen Mariamne; he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in an extraordinary manner when Jeruſalem was beſieg'd by Titus Veſpaſian: This Perſon and two of his Comrades, Taphteas a Galilæan, and an Adiabenian Son of Nabatheus call'd the Lame; theſe three made a vigorous Sally upon the Roman battering Rams planted upon the Terraſſes: They came with Torches in their Hands, lay'd on with their Swords upon thoſe who guarded this Artillery, ſet Fire to 'em, and kept their Poſt till they had burnt 'em. They did great Service to the Jews during the Courſe of the War; neither were there ever ſeen Soldiers of a more daring Reſolution. When they ſet Fire to the Engines abovemention'd, the Romans came up in a Body and enclos'd 'em, to prevent their Retreat: And here Darts and Arrows were let fly in Showers upon 'em: But this did not in the leaſt ſink their Courage; they hew'd their Way back through the Enemy, who were glad at laſt to avoid their Blows, and make 'em a Lane. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 5. cap. 30.

MEGEBOURG, a Temple dedicated to a Goddeſs, who, tho' her Name be not known, was worſhipp'd by the Saxons in the Reign or Charlemain. She is repreſented quite diſrob'd, ſitting in her Chariot drawn by four Swans; ſhe has a Crown of Myrtle upon her Head, a flaming Torch at her Boſom, a Globe in her Right Hand, and three Golden Apples in her Left. In the ſame Chariot ſhe had three Daughters diſrob'd likewiſe, and who took each other by the Hand. The Greeks and Romans painted their Venus almoſt in the ſame manner; and 'tis probable that Druſus, when he was in that Country, introduc'd the Worſhip of this Goddeſs, from whom the Roman Emperors gave out they were deſcended, pretending to draw a Pedigree from Æneas. * Mezeray.

MEHAINE, a River in the Low Countries; it runs by Bonef in the County of Namur, and croſſing a little Part of the Biſhoprick of Liege, falls into the Meuſe ſome Leagues above Huy. * Maty, Diction.

MEIMEND. There are two Cities or large Towns in Perſia of this Name: The firſt is in the Province of Zableſtan or Roſtamdar, the ancient Patrimony and Government of the famous Roſtam. This Town is one of the Dependencies of the Royal City Gaznin or Gaznah. The Soil belonging to this Town is very rich, and well water'd, and produces the beſt Fruit in all Aſia. The other Town call'd Meimend is two Days Journey from the City Shiraz to the South, and has nothing remarkable. * The Perſian Geographer in the third Climate.

MEINUNGEN, Meiningen, a Town of Franconia in Germany; 'tis the Capital of the County of Henneberg; it ſtands upon the Werra; three Leagues from Smalcald to the South. * Maty, Diction.

* MELANCHTON (Philip.) For 1509 in Morery Vol. II. read 1519.

MELANIA, a Roman Lady of the moſt illuſtrious Family of the Antonius's, Granddaughter to Marcellinus, who had been Conſul with Probinus A. D, 341. She was marry'd very young, and loſt her Husband and two of her Sons in one Year: The youngeſt call'd Publicola ſurviv'd, and was Prætor of Rome. She travell'd into Ægypt with Ruffinus a Prieſt of Aquileia, A. D. 366. When ſhe was at Alexandria, and receiv'd an Account from Iſidorus a Prieſt, of the aſcetick and exemplary Lives of the Monks of Nitria, ſhe went with him to viſit 'em, and made 'em conſiderable Preſents. From Nitria ſhe return'd to Alexandria, where ſhe ſaw the famous blind Didymus. Afterwards ſhe declar'd herſelf Protectreſs of the Catholicks, perſecuted by the Arians in the Reign of Valens A. D. 373. 'Tis ſaid ſhe fed five thouſand three Days together, and aſſiſted others. She went along with thoſe that were baniſh'd into Palæſtine, which were about an hundred and twelve, almoſt all Biſhops and Prieſts. Ruffinus, finus, who had an Intimacy with Didymus during the ſix Years of his Stay at Alexandria, and who ſuffering in the common Perſecution had been firſt impriſon'd and then baniſh'd with the reſt, accompany'd Melania into Palæſtine. They travell'd together to Jeruſalem, where they reſided five and twenty Years: Here ſhe form'd a Kind of Society of fifty Virgins, where they ſpent their time in an exemplary manner under the Direction of Ruffinus. In the mean time Publicola, Melania's Son, marry'd Albina, a Perſon of Quality at Rome, and had the younger Melania by her born A. D. 388. Publicola dy'd A. D. 409. Melania the elder, who was return'd from Palæſtine to Rome, went from thence into Sicily with Albina and the younger Melania, when the Goths, commanded by Maricus beſieg'd Rome the firſt time A. D. 410. Ruffinus travell'd with them, and dy'd in Sicily: And the elder Melania ſailing from Sicily to Jeruſalem dy'd there, forty Days after her Arrival. Albina, the younger Melania, and Pinianus her Husband, ſail'd into Africk and liv'd at Tagaſta, where Alipyus was Biſhop: And going to Hippo to ſee St. Auſtin, the People of that Town would have had Pinianus taken Prieſts Orders: Pinianus refus'd to comply, but promis'd that in Caſe he ſhould afterwards go into Orders, he would belong to the Cathedral of Hippo. Theſe noble Strangers built two religious Houſes at Tagaſta, one for Men, and the other for Women: And after having ſtay'd above ſix Years in Africk they went to Jeruſalem, and travell'd thro' Ægypt and Palæſtine. Pelagius would gladly have drawn 'em into his Sentiment, but St. Auſtin, to whom they wrote upon this Subject, kept 'em clear of his Heterodoxy, After Albina's Death Melania and Pinianus parted: Pinianus retir'd to a Monaſtery where he dy'd ſome Years after. Melania ſhut herſelf in a Cell upon the Mount of Olives, where ſhe founded a Nunnery. In the Year 436 ſhe travell'd to Conſtantinople to convert Voluſianus her Uncle by the Mother's Side; from whence ſhe return'd to Palæſtine and dy'd there: The Year of her Death is not certain. * Hieron. Epiſt. 25. Paulin. Epiſt. 10. Ruffin. Invectiva 2. & Hiſt. lib. 2. Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. Auguſt. Epiſt. 124, 125, 126, 249.

MELANTA GRAND, Melonta, a Town in Dalmatia, ſtanding upon the Gulph of Venice ſome Leagues from Cataro to the Weſt. Some Geographers take this Town for that formerly call'd Aſcrivium, Aſcrivion, & Aſcrovion, which others make the ſame with Caſtel-Nuovo. * Maty, Diction.

MELANTHUS, a Prince of Meſſene, Son of Andropontus, and one of Neſtor's Deſcendants: Being baniſh'd from Peloponneſus his Country, he conſulted the Oracle where 'twould be beſt for him to ſettle. The Oracle anſwer'd, that where he found nothing but Heads and Feet to eat, that was his Place. Upon this, happening to travel to Eleuſina in Attica he lodg'd in a Houſe where they had juſt made an Entertainment, and where they had eaten up all except the Heads and Feet of what was kill'd for 'em. This made him recollect the Oracle: When he came into this Country the Athenians and the Beotians were engag'd in War: To take up the Difference a ſingle Combat was propos'd between the Kings of the two Countries, viz. between Xanthus King of Thebes, and Thymetes King of Athens: But this laſt refuſing to fight Melanthus accepted the Challenge, kill'd Xanthus, and for this Exploit was choſen King of Athens. He reign'd ſeven and thirty Years: In the four and twentieth Year of his Reign the Heraclidæ made a Deſcent upon Peloponneſus and conquer'd it. Codrus, the laſt King of Athens, ſucceeded his Father Melanthus 1116 Years before the Incarnation. * Herodot. Marmor. Arundel. Strabo. Pauſan.

MELANTOIS (the Diviſion of) formerly call'd Medenenſenſe Territorium; 'tis a Precinct containing the Caſtelleny of Liſle in Flanders; it lies between the Rivers Marque and Duelle. The principal Towns in it are Liſle, Seclin, and Anappes. * Maty, Diction.

MELCHIOR (Adam,) living in the ſeventeenth Century, was born in the Territory of Grotlaw in Sileſia, and ſtudy'd in the College of Brieg, where the Dukes of Brieg encourag'd the Belles Lettres, and eſpecially the Calviniſts Religion. He was afterwards Rector of a College at Heidelberg; and here in 1615 he publiſh'd his firſt Volume of his Viri illuſtres. This firſt Volume which takes in the Philoſophers, the Poets, the Humanity Writers, Hiſtorians, &c. was follow'd by three others. That which gives an Account of the Divines was publiſh'd A. D. 1619. That of the Lawyers comes next; and that of the Phyſicians cloſes the Work: Theſe two laſt were printed in 1620. All the learned Men whoſe Lives are written in theſe four Tomes in 8vo, liv'd in the ſixteenth Century, or the Beginning of the ſeventeenth, and are Germans or Flanderkins. But there are twenty Divines of other Countries, whoſe Lives Melchior Adam publiſh'd by themſelves in the Year 1618. All theſe Divines are Proteſtants. Notwithſtanding he wrote but a few of theſe Lives, he took ſufficient time for his Undertaking, and beſtow'd a great deal of Pains; for he has abridg'd the Works that furniſh'd his Matter: Thus his Extracts are taken from Funeral Orations, from Queſtions put up for publick Exerciſes, from Prefaces and Memoirs of Families. The Lutherans are by no means ſatisfy'd with him; they charge him with Partiality, and won't allow his Collection a good Rule to take an Eſtimate of the Learning in Germany. He dy'd A. D. 1622, and has written other Tracts beſide thoſe abovemention'd, viz. Apographum Monumentorum Heidelbergenſium. Notæ in Orationem Julii Cæſaris Scaligeri pro M. T. Cicerone contra Ciceronianum Eraſmi. Parodiæ, & Metaphraſes Horatianæ. * Baillet, pag. 177. & 178. du 2 Tome des Jugemens des Savans. Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

MELCK, a Town commanded by a large Caſtle; it ſtands upon a Hill where the Piela falls into the Danube in Lower Auſtria, eighteen Leagues from Vienna. * Maty, Diction.

MELER, a great Lake in Sweden; it lies between Upland, Weſtmania, and Sudermania. This Lake is between twenty, and five and twenty Leagues from Weſt to Eaſt, and about ten Leagues in Breadth: It falls into the Baltick at Stockholm; the Towns upon it are Telge, Stregnes, Torſilia, Arboga and Koping. * Maty, Diction.

*MELCHIOR (Hoffman.) For Weſt-Friſeland in Morery Vol. II. read Eaſt-Friſeland.

MELES, a River in the Neighbourhood of Smyrna: 'Tis ſaid Homer was born near this River, and from thence call'd Meleſigenes. There was likewiſe a Town of this Name in the Samnites Territory. * Herodot. in Vit. Homer. Livy. lib. 27.

* MELITO, Biſhop of Sardis, a Town of Lydia in Aſia, living in the ſecond Century. Beſide thoſe Works mention'd of his in Morery Vol. II. he wrote a Book of the Nature of Man, and of his Creation; of the Submiſſion of the Senſes to Faith; of the Soul, of the Body, and of the Spirit; of Baptiſm; of Truth; of Prophecy; of Hoſpitality; the Key; a Tract of the Devil; upon the Revelations; of God incarnate; and a Collection extracted from the Scripture. Euſebius cites Melito's Liſt of the Canonical Books, which is the ſame with that cited in the 39 Articles of the Church of England: But all theſe Books are ſunk in the Current of time. The Tract de Tranſitu Virginis, or of the Deceaſe of the bleſſed Virgin, ſometimes reckon'd to this Biſhop, is a ſpurious Piece, rang'd by Pope Gelaſius amongſt apocryphal Writings, and rejected by Bede. Melito dy'd before Victor's Pontificate, as may be inferr'd from Policrates Biſhop of Epheſus's Letter to this Pope, where he mentions this Biſhop as deceas'd; What might I not ſay, ſays he, of Melito, whoſe Actions were govern'd by the Direction of the Holy Ghoſt, who lies interr'd at Sardis, where he waits the laſt Judgment, and the Reſurrection. From hence it appears that Melito was in the Sentiment of the Aſiaticks concerning the Day of keeping Eaſter, and that he was look'd on as a Perſon inſpir'd. Tertullian gives Melito the Character of a fine Speaker. The Year when he dy'd is not certainly known: The Martyrologies ſet his Memory at the ſecond of April. * Euſeb. in Chron. A. C. 170. & Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 4. cap. 25. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. cap. 24. Bede, Retract. in Acta cap. 8. Gelaſius, cum Sancta, Diſt. 15. apud Gratian. Valeſ. in Euſeb.

MENAGIUS (Giles,) was born at Angers Auguſt 20, 1613. His Father was William Menage the King's Advocate or Counſel in the ſame Town, Giles, after having having gone through a Courſe of Studies at Angers, remov'd to Paris, where he was call'd to the Bar, and pleaded ſeveral Cauſes; but not being pleas'd with this Profeſſion, he apply'd himſelf wholly to the polite Part of Learning. He was entertain'd in the Family of the Cardinal de Rets, at the Recommendation of M. Chapelain a Member of the French Academy. And here Menagius made himſelf known to Advantage by two Poems; one of 'em entitled the Pedant Montmaur's Metaphorſis into a Parrot; and the other, the Requeſt of the Dictionaries. The Freedom and negligent Airs he took with the Cardinal's Family, made perpetual Miſunderſtandings; for this Reaſon he quitted the Place; and took an Apartment in our Lady's Cloyſter, where every Wedneſday till his Death he had an Aſſembly of learned Perſons. In his Works, which were no ſmall Number, he ſometimes attack'd the Sentiments of other Writers, and had Repriſals made upon him for his own. M. Menage was a very learned Perſon, but a great Talker, which gave Occaſion to Montmaur's Jeſt upon the Poem written againſt him, that 'twas no Wonder ſuch a Tatler as Menage ſhould make a good Parrot. He lov'd People ſhould hearken to him, and was pretty laviſh in his own Commendation: He had a prodigious Memory, and was never weary of tagging his Diſcourſe in Converſation with Greek, Latin, Italian, and French Verſes. The Exceſs of Freedom in ſome of his Expreſſions rais'd him a great many Enemies, with whom he had ſeveral Skirmiſhes. Some of thoſe who encounter'd him were were M. l' Abbe d'Aubignac, M. Boileau. M. Cotin. M. Salo. P. Bouhours & M. Baillet. There's ſcarce any Part of Learning but what Menage was acquainted with, and very often ventur'd upon with very good Succeſs: And of this general Talent there is ſufficient Proof in his Writings. The Titles of his Books are, Opera Miſcellanea, amongſt which there is a diſtinct Book by another Hand, which is only a Collection of Panegyricks upon Menagius; the Original of the French Language; Remaks in Italian upon Taſſo's Amintas; Notes upon Diogenes Laertius; Italian Etymologies; The Delights of the Law; Remarks upon Malherbe's Poems: Remarks upon the French Language: Anti Baillet, &c. Of all his Works his Poems were his favourite Productions; tho' he judiciouſly owns himſelf no better than a bare Rhimer: For notwithſtanding ſome of his poetical Performances are not without Politeneſs, yet none of thoſe beautiful Rambles and Tranſports, peculiar to a good Poet, are to be met with in him. M. Menage was of the Academy de la Cruſca at Florence. He dy'd at Paris Auguſt 23, 1692, ſeventy nine Years of Age. * Journal des Savans de mois d'Août 1692. Mercure Galant de la même Année. Suite du Ménagiana.

MENANCABO, a ſmall Town in the Indies: It ſtands upon the Southern Coaſt of Sumatra, over againſt the Iſland of Naſſau, and an hundred Leagues from the Streight de la Sonde. 'Tis the Capital of a ſmall Kingdom of the ſame Name. * Maty, Diction.

* MENANDER, one of Simon Magus's chief Diſciples: He was a Samaritan and profeſs'd Magick: He ſet up for the Head of a diſtinct Sect by making ſome Alterations in his Maſter's Doctrine. 1. He maintain'd that the ſovereign Virtue, by which he means God, was unknown to all the World; but then he affirms that this ſovereign Virtue was ſent by the inviſible Powers to be the Saviour of Mankind, 2. He pretends with Simon Magus that the Angels, produc'd by the divine Intelligence, made the World; but then ſubjoins, by way of Supplement, that himſelf had taught People to conquer the Angels by the Force of Magick. 3. He gave out that his Diſciples ſhould be made immortal by his Baptiſm, which when they had once receiv'd they ſhould be impregnable againſt Decay and Death. Menander had a great many Followers at Antioch which were farther increas'd in St. Juſtin Martyr's time: Baſilides and Saturninus were two of his Diſciples. * Epiphan. Hær. 2. Baron. in Annal. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library Cent. I.

MENARDUS (N.) born at Tours, Advocate in the Parliament at Paris, was a Perſon of Learning in the ſeventeenth Century. His great Capacity for Buſineſs made him employ'd by the Mareſchal de Baſſompierre, by the Ducheſs of Aiguillon, and by other Perſons of the firſt Quality, to diſentangle their Affairs, and make 'em eaſy. His Inclination for Learning made him diſengage from the Ways and Means for increaſing his Fortune, and retire to a private Life at Tours: Here he ſpent above forty Years in continual Study, and without correſponding ſcarce with any Body except Men of Letters. He dy'd in 1701, ſeventy five Years of Age, much regretted by his Acquaintance for his Parts, Learning and Temper. He printed only two Books, one entitled the Academy of Princes, for the Inſtruction of King Lewis XIV; and another call'd the Agreement of all Chronologers: But then he left other Works ready for the Preſs; and amongſt the reſt, the Lives of the old Philoſophers in four Tomes; Pythagoras's Philoſophy; a Commentary upon Aulus Gellius; The Anthology of the Greek Epigrams tranſlated into Latin Verſe. &c. * Mem. de Trevoux, January and February 1701.

MENCHERES, the thirteenth King of the Memphites in Ægypt, ſucceeded Saphis in the Year 1803 before the Incarnation. Herodotus relates that when his Daughter dy'd he had her Corps put in a wooden Cow gilt, which he plac'd in his Cloſet, and had Incenſe offer'd to her, and Lamps lighted about her every Day: Herodotus likewiſe tells us that this Prince built the third Pyramid, which others reckon to Nitocris; Mencheres reign'd ſixty three Years. * Manetho, apud Euſeb. in Chron. Herodot. lib. 2. cap. 34.

MENDOGES, firſt King of the Lithuanians. Theſe People were but little known before the twelfth Century, and were then ſubject to the Ruſſians and Poles. Mendoges, who had the Reputation of a great General, ſet up for a Prince of the Lithuanians A. D. 1252, and by Force of Arms reſcu'd 'em from the Servitude they lay under. His Succeſſors at firſt reign'd but a ſhort time, but in the Year 1279 a Soldier call'd Vitenen kill'd his Prince, ſeiz'd Lithuania, and reign'd to A. D. 1300. He was ſucceeded by Gediminus, who enlarg'd the Lithuanian Dominions a great Way into Ruſſia, as far as the Black Sea: Theſe conſiderable Acquiſitions gave the Title of Great Dukes to the Princes of Lithuania: His Succeſſor A. D. 1325 was Olgerdes, who had two Sons Jagellon and Skirgellon; the firſt coming to the Crown of Poland, and converted by marrying a Chriſtian, ſuppreſs'd the Pagan Religion, and ſettled Chriſtianity in Lithuania. He would gladly have united Lithuania to the Kingdom of Poland, but his Brother Skirgellon and his Uncle Vidoldes oppos'd his Project, and held the Sovereignty of Lithuania, which continu'd to be govern'd by her Great Dukes till the Year 1501, when Alexander Duke of Lithuania being elected King of Poland compaſs'd this Union. * Georg. Horn. Orb. Imper.

MENDOLIA, a Town in Calabria, about a League from Boña to the Weſt. Some Geographers take this Place for the Old Peripolium, where the famous Statuary Praxiteles liv'd. * Maty, Diction.

MENDRY, Mendris, a Town belonging to the Swiſs Cantons, ſtanding three Leagues from Como to the Weſt. 'Tis the Capital of the Government or Territory of Mendris or Mendriſi. 'Tis the moſt Southern Part of the Swiſs Country in the Milaneſe. 'Tis ſituate between the Lakes Lugano and Como. * Maty, Diction.

MENESTRIER (Claude-Francis,) a Jeſuit who made a conſiderable Figure in Learning in the ſeventeenth Century: He was born at Lyons March 1631, and was profeſs'd a Jeſuit at fifteen Years of Age. According to the Cuſtom of that Society, ſome of his firſt Years were ſpent in reading Lectures of Humanity. Beſides his Proficiency in Languages and old Authors, he apply'd himſelf to ſeveral other Branches of polite Learning: He ſtudy'd Hiſtory, Heraldry, Medals, Inſcriptions, Decorations, and in ſhort every thing that either ancient or modern Monuments could furniſh upon theſe Subjects. 'Twas from his Drawings that the Court of the College of Lyons was painted A. D. 1662. which is ſufficient to diſcover his Taſte in Deſigning: His Memory did him great Service in theſe Studies. Chriſtina, Queen of Sweden, going through Lyons in her Journey to Rome, had a Mind to try whether P. Meneſtrier's Memory was ſo prodigious as was reported. To this Purpoſe her Majeſty order'd one of her Gentlemen to pronounce in Meneſtrier's hearing, and then write three hundred the moſt odd ſounding and extraordinary Words that one could think of: He repeated them all at firſt in the Order they were written, and afterwards in all the Changes and Tranſpoſitions they were deliver'd. He had ſuch a nice Talent in making Draughts for publick Feſtivals, extraordinary Ceremonies and Shews of State, that he was ſought for far and near for the deſigning Part: And here his Imagination was uncommonly rich in making Draughts of Ceremony for the canonizing of Saints, for Funeral Solemnities, for Princes Entry into Towns, or other reſembling Subjects; and in theſe Performances every thing was proportion'd and heighten'd to the utmoſt Degree of Invention and Art: And notwithſtanding he had ſtruck out about thirty Draughts of theſe Decorations, he always took Care to have ſomething of a beautiful Diverſity, ſomething charmingly new in each of 'em. Theſe Drawings were commonly ornamented with a great many Mottos, Inſcriptions and Medals. The Feſtival Shew in the College of Lyons, which the French King grac'd with his Preſence in the Year 1658, gain'd Father Meneſtrier great Credit: For notwithſtanding he was but ſeven and twenty Years of Age, he had the ſole Direction of this Ceremony; and ſo he had likewiſe of the Nuptial Solemnity at Chambery, when the Duke of Savoy marry'd the third Daughter of Gaſton Duke of Orleans A. D. 1663. However theſe Amuſements did not hinner him from making a conſiderable Progreſs in Hebrew and Divinity: And in theſe ſerious Studies he ſucceeded ſo well, that Father St. Rigaud a Jeſuit, made choice of him for his ſecond in the Conferences he was ready to engage in with the Proteſtants at Die, whither they had lately ſummon'd a Synod. Here P. Meneſtrier being well furniſh'd with Learning and Languages; for he ſpoke French, Latin and Greek with Propriety and Eaſe; being thus furniſh'd, I ſay, he overlay'd the Proteſtant Miniſters, who were ſurpriz'd to ſee this young Jeſuit run through their Arguments, and confute their Theſes almoſt extempore. The Proteſtants being thus worſted, as the French Supplementer reports, precipitated their Synod. Meneſtrier having an Opportunity of travelling into Italy, Germany, Flanders and England, clos'd with it: In the Courſe of his Travels he made an Acquaintance with ſeveral learned Men, and made a thorough Search into the Genealogies of the moſt illuſtrious Families in Europe: His Skill in reading the moſt obſcure Remains relating to an Antiquary, put him in a Condition to explain Curioſities of this Kind from the Glaſs Windows in old Churches, from Monuments, Inſcriptions, Arms and Figures upon Town Gates and publick Squares; and by all this Skill and Collections he has clear'd up a great many perplex'd Matters of Fact: And here his Conjectures are extremely judicious and happy. He wrote a great many Books; We ſhall only cite his principal Performances, which are, his Conſular Hiſtory of the City of Lyons; a large Hiſtory of the ſame Town in three Volumes; he was working upon the laſt, which relates to the Church of Lyons, when he dy'd: The Hiſtory of the Reign of Lewis the Great, taken from Medals, Emblems, Devices or Mottos, &c. Several little Tracts upon Mottos, Medals, Tournaments, Carrouſals, Balls, &c. Several other Tracts upon Heraldry, Coats of Arms, Nobility, &c. and upon all theſe Subjects he was in a manner an Original. But theſe foreign Studies did not make him unſerviceable in the Functions of his Character. He preach'd twenty five Years in the chief Churches at Paris, and in the moſt conſiderable Cathedrals of France. He dy'd at Paris January 21, 1705. This Father was not the firſt learned Man in his Family. John-Baptiſt Meneſtrier wrote excellent Tracts upon Medals. Claude Meneſtrier his great Uncle was Pope Urban VIII's Antiquary, and publiſh'd a very good Diſcourſe de Diana Epheſina. * Mercure, Fevrier 1705. Memoires de Trevoux, Avril. 1705.

MENICHOUF, a Village in Poland, a Quarter of a League from the River Piltſa. There's a Brick Church and a Gentleman's Seat in it, which latter, in the Language of the Country is call'd Devour, that is to ſay, the Court. The Poliſh Country Gentlemen, who are abſolute Lords of the Peaſants, have the Vanity to beſtow the ſame Name upon their Caſtle (oftentimes nothing but a thatch'd Houſe) which belongs to a Prince's Palace, or a Court of Juſtice. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

MENIN, a ſmall Town very well fortify'd; 'tis ſituate within the Caſtellany of Ypres in Flanders upon the River Lys, between Courtray and Armentieres. The Dutch and their Allies took it from the French in the War, which was ended by the Treaty of Utrecht, A. D. 1713. * Maty, Diction.

MENIUS, Conſul in the four hundred thirty third Year from the building of Rome. This Conſul having beaten the Latins and the Antiatæ in a Sea-Fight, took the Prows of their Ships, and ſet 'em in the publick Forum or Square, where the People us'd to meet; and from hence the Place where Generals and Orators made Speeches was call'd Roſtrum. * Livy, lib. 8. cap. 14. Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. lib. 34. cap. 5.

MENOPHILUS; an Eunuch belonging to Mithridates, to whom this Prince, before he was defeated by Pompey, truſted the keeping of his Daughter. Manlius Priſcus beſieging this Caſtle where the Lady was kept, and Menophilus perceiving the Place muſt be quickly ſurrender'd, to prevent the Princeſs being made Priſoner by the Romans, he plung'd his Dagger in her Breaſt, and then kill'd himſelf with the ſame Weapon. * Ammian. Marcellin. lib. 16. cap. 7.

MENOUFIA, a Town in the Lower Ægypt; it ſtands in Delta upon one of the Arms of the Nile, ten or twelve Leagues from Caire to the North, 'Tis the Capital of a Caſſilif. * Maty, Diction.

MENTES, Mendes, in Latin Myndus, an old Town of Natolia in Aſia; it ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Archipelago, between Cape Crio and the Town Melazzo. 'Twas formerly a Biſhop's See, but is now the Reſidence of the Governor of Aidinelli. * Maty, Diction.

MENTESELI, formerly Lycia, a Country of Natolia in Aſia; 'tis now Part of Caramania, and is enclos'd with the Mountains of Taurus, between Caramania Proper, Aidinelli, and the Sea of Rhodes. The principal Towns in it are Patera, Strumeta, Lovante, and Fionda, which formerly went by the Names of Patara, Andriace, Myra and Phaſelis. There are ſome Remains to be ſeen of the Old Limyra. * Maty, Diction.

MERBATH, a Town in the Province of Hadhramuth in Jemen, or Arabia the Happy; 'tis in the Hills which ſurround this Town, where the beſt Frankincenſe in all Arabia grows: 'Tis Edriſſi's Remark, who relates likewiſe that the Countries of Schagera, Haſſeck, and Scharmah furniſh a great deal of the ſame Perfume. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MERBES (Bon de,) a Prieſt of Mont Didier, affected a private Life, notwithſtanding he was a Perſon of great Merit. In the latter End of his time he came to Paris to print his Book entitled, Summa Chriſtiana & Orthodoxa de Moribus, extracted from the Fathers and Eccleſiaſtical Writers; 'twas publiſh'd in two Volumes folio A. D. 1683. He dy'd in the College of Beauvais Auguſt 1684, eighty ſix Years of Age. His Morals are ſound, and clear of looſe Caſuiſtry. His Book is written in good Latin, his Principles are ſolid, his Inferences well drawn, and his Reſolutions unexceptionable. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. hiſtory, Cent. XVII.

* MERCATOR (Marius) an Eccleſiaſtical Writer living in the fifth Century, and contemporary with St. Auſtin: He wrote againſt the Neſtorians, Pelagians, &c. His Tract againſt the Pelagians is not extant, unleſs 'tis the Hypognoſticon commonly reckon'd to St. Auſtin. We have his hiſtorical Memoir againſt Celeſtius, which he wrote firſt in Greek, to diſperſe it in Conſtantinople, and which he preſented A. D. 429 to the Emperor Theodoſius the Younger: Another Memoir of his againſt the Pelagians written after St. Auſtin's Death, and ſeveral Tracts againſt Neſtorius are likewiſe extant. Labbé publiſh'd Mercator's firſt hiſtorical Memoirs in his Collection of the Councils from a Manuſcript in the Vatican. Garnerius, a Jeſuit, publiſh'd all Mercator's Works A. D. 1673; but then he plac'd 'em in a different Order, and added long Diſſertations. P. Gerberon, a Benedictine, publiſh'd part of 'em with Notes the ſame Year: Afterwards Baluzius publiſh'd the Text of Marius Mercator, exactly as it ſtands in the Manuſcripts of the Vatican, and in the Library of of the Chapter of Beauvais A.D. 1684. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent V. for Dicere in this Article Morery Vol. II. read Diſcere.

* MERCURY, one of the ſeven Planets and neareſt the Sun, about which it turns, and performs its Circle in about four Months, and is never diſtant from the Sun above eight and twenty Degrees at moſt. According to the Copernican Syſtem now generally receiv'd, Mercury, with Reſpect to us, is ſometimes above the Sun, and ſometimes beneath, and ſometimes on the Side of this great Luminary: From hence it likewiſe follows, that keeping ſo cloſe to this Source of Light, 'tis very ſeldom viſible, being almoſt always buried in the Solar Rays, unleſs when that Luminary is totally eclips'd: 'Tis from this Planet that the Latins call Wedneſday Dies Mercurii. Some of the Ancients call'd the Sun's Intelligence Mercury; and by an Intelligence they meant an immaterial Being or Spirit, which being plac'd in the Center of the Star, inſpected the Condition, govern'd the Motions, and kept it in Repair. Farther, Mercury was taken by the Pagans for the Inſtructor in Wiſdom and Knowledge; thus they make him preſide over Elocution, which is nothing but Thought or Reaſon thrown into Words.

Hezychius tells us the Babylonians call'd Mercury Sechez: Thoſe of Edeſſa call'd him Monimus, and would have it that Mars and Mercury were the two Aſſeſſors, or joyn'd as it were in Commiſſion with the Sun: From whence it appears, that the Eaſtern Nations were very much addicted to the Worſhip of Mercury.

The Weſtern Part of the World were no leſs perſuaded that Mercury was a Star, which had an Aſcendant over Reaſon and Speech. The Gauls, mention'd by Cæſar in his Commentaries, concern'd themſelves more about the fabulous Hiſtory of Mercury, than in examining the Nature of the Star. Mercury's Figure, as anciently repreſented, had neither Arms nor Legs, to give us to underſtand, if Plutarch may be believ'd, that 'tis the Wiſdom and Force of the Mind which brings every thing to paſs, without the Aſſiſtance of of Limbs or Senſes.

The Ægyptian Mercury is the moſt celebrated of all that carry'd that Name. Philo Biblyus, as Euſebius cites him, reports that Sanchoniathon took a great deal of Pains in getting this Mercury's Commentaries, to furniſh him with Matter for writing his Syſtem of Pagan Theology, being well ſatisfy'd that 'twas this Mercury who invented Letters, and who had the different Names of Thoh, Thoyth, and Tautes. Porphyry aſcribes the ſame Invention to Taautus, and Sanchoniathon inſerts his Genealogy amongſt the reſt of the Phœnician and Ægyptian Deities: 'Tis ſuppos'd that the moſt ancient of all the Mercuries, and who invented Letters, is the Phœnician Mercury, and that he travell'd from Phœnicia into Ægypt, and from thence into Greece. Euſebius likewiſe proves from a Paſſage in Diodorus Siculus that the Ægyptians had a Tradition that their old King Oſiris entertain'd a Mercury exactly like him of Phœnicia for his Miniſter of State or Privy Counſellor. Clemens Alexandrinus ſpeaks of this Ægyptian Mercury as a Perſon deify'd after his Death: Tully makes five Mercuries, three Grecians, and two Ægyptians; that which ſets a diſtinguiſhing Luſtre upon the Memory of the Ægyptian Mercury, is his inventing Letters, Sciences, and making Laws, according to Jamblicus. There's ſome Difficulty in reconciling Pliny with the receiv'd and moſt probable Opinion, that the Invention of Letters came from Aſſyria. This Contrariety may be accommodated by this Suppoſition; that Inventions and Arts coming in Reality from Aſſyria, other Nations had the Ambition to make 'em the Product of their own Country: And to go ſomewhat deeper in the Queſtion, 'tis probable Letters were prior to the Flood; that Noah carry'd 'em into the Ark, and handed 'em down to his Poſterity; but that ſome time after the Deluge, when his Family ſpread into different Branches, parted from each other, and ſettled in remote Countries, they diſimprov'd to that Degree, that 'twas neceſſary to get a Revival of all Arts and Sciences, to make 'em emerge from that profound Ignorance in which they were ſunk. It may be affirm'd then that Letters came originally from Aſſyria, for there Noah and his Family dwelt when they came out of the Ark: But in Proceſs of time, when Colonies were diſpers'd over a great Part of the World, the Phœnicians are by ſome ſuppos'd to be the firſt who had Letters taught 'em by Taautus. After the Phœnicians the Invention ſpread to the Ægyptians, who had likewiſe their Taautus or Mercury. Sanchoniathon relates that Mercury was Saturn's Secretary.

The Ægyptians repreſented Mercury with a Dog's Head, which made him ſometimes undiſtinguiſh'd from Anubis: This Figure was an Emblem of his Sagacity. Thus Servius explains Latrator Anubis, Mercurius Capite canino pingitur ideo, quia nihil eſt Cane ſagacius.

Beſides this firſt Mercury who liv'd ſoon after the Flood, there was a ſecond of the ſame Name, the Son of Vulcan, who reign'd a great while after in Ægypt, and wrote Books extracted from Inſcriptions on Pillars, and taken from the Original Writings of the firſt Mercury: Thus Manetho, cited by Syncellus, relates the Matter. Ammianus Marcellinus gives a Deſcription of ſome ſubterranean Apartments in Ægypt, where, for Fear of a ſecond Deluge, the Walls were full of Hieroglyphick Figures, in which the recondite Parts of Learning were preſerv'd for Poſterity. 'Twas this ſecond Mercury who had the Diſtinction of Triſmegiſtus according to Manetho and Syncellus: Clemens Alexandrinus mentions two and forty Books of Mercury's compoſing, which were carry'd in State at the religious Solemnities of the Ægyptians, and which contain'd every thing that Nation knew with reſpect to Learning and Theology; that is, their Hieroglyphicks, Geography, Coſmography, Aſtronomy, together with their Ceremonies in Sacrifices, and other Parts of divine Worſhip.

'Tis plain the Greeks and Romans borrow'd all their Mythological Ornaments with which they have dreſs'd their own Mercuries from theſe Ægyptian ones. For the Greeks not being able to deny but that the Ægyptian Mercury was the moſt celebrated, they have fabulouſly reported him born in Greece; and whereas 'tis undoubted that the Greeks receiv'd their Alphabet from the Phœnicians, they have endeavour'd to perſuade the World that Letters were a Græcian Invention, and tranſported from thence into Phœnicia. And to conclude, there is ſo much Reſemblance between the Ægyptian and Græcian Mercury, that 'tis eaſy to infer the one is but a Copy of the other. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. Clemens Alexand. Stromat. Tully, de Natur. Deor. Euſeb. Præparat. Evangel. Ammian. Marcellin. Walton, Prolegom. in Bibl. Polyglot.

MERDIN, a Town belonging to the Turk in Aſia; it ſtands in Diarbekir near the Tigris, about fifteen Leagues from Moſul to the North. Merdin is an Archbiſhop's See. * Maty, Diction.

MEREC, a ſmall Town in the Duchy of Lithuania; it ſtands in Poleſia where the River Merecz falls into the Niemen, eleven Leagues below Grodno. Merec has a very pleaſant Situation, and is ornamented with a magnificent Caſtle, where Uladiſlaus IV. King of Poland, dy'd in the Year 1648. * Maty, Diction.

MERKEDONIUS, or Mercedonius, an Intercalary Month, added every two Years between the three and twentieth and four and twentieth of February (inter Terminalia & Regifugium) it conſiſted of two Epacts, that is to ſay, of the eleven Days by which the annual Courſe of the Sun exceeded the Lunar Year; and becauſe the Solar Year conſiſted of three hundred ſixty five Days and ſix Hours, according to the Romans, (for this Calculation is not exact, there being really no more than three hundred ſixty five Days, five Hours, forty nine Minutes and ſome ſeconds) every fourth Year they lengthen'd the Month Merkedonius to three and twenty Days, adding the Day made up of four times ſix Hours: This Intercalary Month is commonly reckon'd to King Numa, the Deſign of it being to adjuſt, as well as they could, the Solar to the Lunar Year. Some learned Writers however give the Invention to Tullus Hoſtilius Numa's Succeſſor; and others make the Decemviri the firſt in this Calculation, who, when they drew up the Laws of the twelve Tables, order'd this Intercalation, which laſted till the Calendar was reform'd by Julius Cæſar. * See Julian Year. Plutarch. Vit. Numæ. Petav. Doctrin. Temp.

MERLIN (James,) of the Dioceſe of Limoges, living in the ſixteenth Century: He was Doctor of Divinity of the Faculty in Paris, Curé or Rector of the Pariſh Pariſh of Montmartre, and afterwards Canon of Nôtre Dame at Paris. Merlin is the firſt, who, when he publiſh'd Origen's Works, endeavour'd to reſcue his Reputation from the Errors charg'd upon him: To this Purpoſe he prefix'd an Apology before this Father's Works printed A. D. 1511. He is likewiſe the firſt who undertook the publiſhing a Collection of all the Councils: There are three Editions of 'em; the firſt at Paris A. D. 1524; the ſecond at Cologne A. D. 1530; and a third at Paris A. D. 1535. He likewiſe publiſh'd the Works of Richardus de Sancto Victore, of Petrus Bleſenſis, &c. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library Cent. XVI.

MEROS, an Indian Mountain between the River Indus and Cophes, at the Foot of which, when Bacchus march'd into the Indies, he built the Town Nyſa, from whence 'tis ſuppos'd the Fable took its Riſe, that Bacchus was born of Jupiter's Thigh, becauſe Meros, in Greek Μηρος, ſignifies a Thigh. * Plin. Hiſt. Nat. lib. 6. cap. 21. Curtius, lib. 8. cap. 10.

MEROUVILLE (Charles de,) a Jeſuit, who in the Year 1682 publiſh'd a new Edition of Tully's Orations, to which he added a ſmall Commentary, where he gives a ſhort Explanation of the difficult Paſſages; an Abridgment or Contents of every Oration; and in ſhort, he lets the Reader into every thing remarkable in this Part of Tully's Works. * Merouville Præf. in Orat. Ciceron. Baillet. Jugemens des Savans ſur les Critiques Grammair.

MERRE (Peter le,) King's Profeſſor of Canon Law: He did not apply to this Profeſſion until he had read through the Fathers, and made himſelf Maſter of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory: He wrote a great many excellent Tracts upon the Canon Law, but none of 'em are printed excepting that entitled, a Juſtification or Defence of the Cuſtoms of France concerning Children's marrying without the Conſent of their Parents, printed A. D. 1687. His Deſign in this ſmall Tract is to prove that the Ordonnances of the French Kings which condemn Marriages contracted by Children without their Parents Conſent, do by no means claſh with the Council of Trent, nor imply any Contradiction to the Anathema pronounc'd by that Synod againſt thoſe who deny that clandeſtine Marriages are true Marriages, and affirm that Marriages contracted by Children without their Parents Conſent are null, and that 'tis at their Parents Choice either to let 'em remain void, or make 'em valid; the Author's Deſign, I ſay, is to ſhew that this Anathema is not pointed againſt the Roman Catholick Doctors and Lawyers, who govern themſelves by the Edicts and Ordinances of their Princes. To prove this, he lays it down for an unconteſted Suppoſition, that the Intention of the Council was only to condemn the Errors of the Lutherans and Calviniſts, and that they never meant to make any Deciſion upon Queſtions debated amongſt Roman Catholick Divines. Now the Lutherans, for Inſtance, hold, with reſpect to the Marriages of Children, that both by natural Right, and the Laws of God, Parents are the ſole Judges of the Validity or Invalidity of their Children's Marriages, and by Conſequence are to have the Diſpoſal of 'em. Chemnitius in his Examen of the Council of Trent is of this Opinion, and offers a great many Authorities and Reaſons in Defence of it. And here, le Merre pretends that the Council's Anathema falls only upon this Error, and not upon the Ordinances of the Kings of France: He proves his Propoſition ab Abſurdo, and thinks it very unreaſonable to imagine that the Council ſhould condemn a Uſage ſo conſtantly practis'd for many Ages in the Greek Church, where Childrens Marriage without Conſent of their Parents have been reckon'd no better than Concubinage; a Canon in St. Baſil is directly againſt this Liberty, the Laws of the Greek Emperors are no leſs expreſs, and the Biſhops have executed theſe Regulations: 'Twas done by Alexis Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who declar'd that the Marriage of a Daughter before ſhe was five and twenty Years of Age without her Father's Conſent was void: And upon this Point the Latin Church had no Difference with the Greek, as appears by the ſecond Canon of the firſt Council of Orleans, and by the twenty ſecond of the ſecond Synod held in that City, from the ninety ſixth Chapter of the ſixth Book of the Capitulars, and by a great Number of other Paſſages and Precedents. However, the Laws of France have ſet Bounds to the Parents Authority, by permitting Daughters to marry without their Parents Conſent at five and twenty Years, and Sons at thirty, after having given Notification of their Purpoſe in the Forms requir'd. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MERSBOURG (the Duchy of,) a Country in Miſnia within Upper Saxony; it lies along both Sides the River Sala; the Duchy of Naumbourg being ſituated above, and that of Hall below it. This Territory ſtretches ſeven Leagues from Weſt to Eaſt, and five or ſix from North to South: Mersbourg the Capital, Lutzen, Herbourg, Neumark and Langſtet are the chief Towns. This Country was formerly a Biſhoprick under the Archbiſhop of Magdebourg: John George of Saxony, who was Adminiſtrator of it, and afterwards Elector, left it by his laſt Will to his third Son Chriſtian, whoſe Deſcendants inherit it as an Apannage, as they do likewiſe the Lower Luſatia. * Maty, Diction.

MESCHASIPI, or Miſſiſſipi, one of the great Rivers in Northern America, riſes between the three and fiftieth and four and fiftieth Degree of Northern Latitude, and joyns the River St. Francis at the ſeven and fortyth Degree of Latitude, and the two hundred twenty third of Longitude; it continues its Courſe from North to South, between New Mexico to the Weſt, and Canada and Florida to the Eaſt; it falls through two Arms into the Gulph of Mexico, about eighty or an hundred Leagues from the Bay of Spiritu Santo to the Weſt. This River runs eight hundred Leagues, and is navigable as far up as where it joyns the River St. Francis. The Country all along this River is very fine: Towards the South Coaſt of it there are a great many Fruit-Trees and wild Vines; but the different Clans who inhabit the Country take no Care about Improvement, excepting for ſome Indian Corn. * Hennipin, his new Diſcovery in America.

MESSINA (the Faro or Canal of Meſſina,) in Latin Fretum Siculum; 'tis a famous Streight in the Mediterranean between Sicily and the farther Calabria, having the Tyrrhene Sea to the North, and the Ionian to the South. This Canal is famous for the ebbing and flowing of the Sea every ſix Hours; the Tides being ſometimes ſo rapid, that they drive the Ships from their Anchors, and carry 'em to the bottom. At the Northern Entry into this Streight there's a Rock and a Gulph, which the Ancients call'd Scylla and Charybdis; the firſt, now call'd Capo Sciglio, is a Rock on the Coaſt of Calabria, which ſhoots out in the Form of a Peninſula towards the Cape de Faro in Sicily; 'tis a very dangerous Rock, all the Ships that are carry'd upon it by Wind or Tide are certainly loſt: Charybdis is near Cape Faro in Sicily; 'tis a Vortex of Water, or Whirlpool about thirty Yards Diameter: The Seamen were cruelly afraid of it formerly, but now the Burghers of Meſſina take their Pleaſure upon it in flat bottom'd Boats; and, after letting the Gulph give 'em as many Turns as they have a Mind to, they come off with their Oars. * Maty, Diction.

MESTRATA, or the Coaſt of Droca, formerly Pentapolis, was the Northern Diviſion of Cyrene in Africk; 'tis now the Weſtern Part of the Kingdom of Barca; 'tis water'd by the Rivers Melel and Droca. The Names of the five Towns in Pentapolis may be ſeen in Morery Vol. II. They are now alter'd and call'd Berniche, Taochera, Tolometo, Cayroan, and Bonandrea; to which may now be added the Town Barca, which gives its Name to the Kingdom of Barca. * Maty, Diction.

MESTREZAT (John,) a Miniſter of a reform'd Church at Paris, born at Geneva A. D. 1592. His Father Ami Meſtrezat was chief Syndic in that Republick, which is the higheſt and moſt conſiderable Office. He was bred at Saumur, and had a very promiſing Genius. Happening one time to have a Tryal, and not ſeeming ſatisfy'd with his Counſel's Argument, the Judge told him the Court would allow him to plead for himſelf; he did ſo, and carry'd the Cauſe. He had ſeveral Conferences with the famous Father Veron, in which Diſputes, as his Party gave out, he had much the better: And that Meſtrezat had the Character of an able Controverſialiſt is plain, from his being deputed by a national Synod of the French Proteſtants to appear before Lewis XIII. When he came into the Preſence he anſwer'd three Queſtions which Cardinal Richelieu prompted the King to put to him. 1. Says the King, "Why do you make uſe of the Liturgy of "Geneva? 2. Why do you joyn the Papiſts with Turks "and Infidels in your Prayers? 3. Why do you allow "Foreigners for your Miniſters?" To theſe three Queſtions his Anſwer was, 1. That in Regard they profeſs'd the ſame Religion with thoſe of Geneva, 'twas not at all ſtrange they ſhould make uſe of the ſame Liturgy. 2. That there was no Reaſon to wonder ſince thoſe of the Roman Communion us'd the Proteſtants as the Turks and Pagans had us'd em, that they in return ſhould joyn the Papiſts with theſe Infidels: However, that the Word Papiſts had been ſtruck out in the latter Editions of their Liturgies, even in the Reign of Henry IV; and that if that Word was ſtill remaining in ſome of their Books, 'twas in thoſe which were not printed in France. 3. It were to be wiſh'd that the Italian Monks, who were ſo numerous in France, had as much Zeal for his Majeſty as the Proteſtant foreign Miniſters, who own'd no Body in that Realm for their Sovereign but the King. Upon this Cardinal Richelieu gently touching him upon the Shoulder, See here, ſays he, the boldeſt Miniſter in France. Meſtrezat dy'd A. D. 1657. His Works are, a Treatiſe concerning the Church, printed at Geneva A. D. 1649, 4to. A Tract upon the Holy Scripture, where he endeavours to ſhew the Certainty and Fulneſs of Faith, and its Independence upon the Authority of the Church, printed at Geneva in 8vo A. D. 1632: A Treatiſe of Communion with Jeſus Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, printed at Sedan in 1625, 8vo. &c. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor. Memoires du Tems.

METELLUS CELER (Quintus,) was Conſul in Year of Rome 693. He was Prætor when Cicero was Conſul, and did the Republick good Service by ſtopping Cataline's Paſſage, who would have march'd his Troops into Gallia Ciſalpina. After his Prætorſhip he had the Government of Gaul conferr'd upon him. He was a worthy Perſon but very unhappy in his Wife: She was Clodius's Siſter, liv'd licentiouſly, and poyſon'd her Husband at laſt: 'Tis this Lady that Catullus plays his Satyr againſt under the Name of Lesbia. Metellus dy'd A. U. C. 694. * Plutarch. Salluſt. Cicero pro Cœlio.

METELLUS (Lucius,) was Tribune of the People, when Cæſar march'd his Army into Rome, at the Beginning of the Civil Wars between himſelf and Pompey. This Metellus at firſt had ſhewn more Courage than any of the Magiſtracy; for he was the only Perſon who had the Reſolution to oppoſe Cæſar when he offer'd to ſeize the Treaſure lodg'd in Saturn's Temple. Cæſar made a Jeſt of their citing the Laws againſt his Enterprize, and went ſtraight up to the Money: When he found the Treaſury ſhut, and the Keys refus'd him, he gave Order to break open the Doors; and Metellus ſtanding in his Way and continuing his Oppoſition, Cæſar threaten'd to cut his Throat, telling him withal, young Man, don't you know 'tis eaſier for me to do it than to ſay it: Upon this Menace the Tribune dropt his Reſiſtance, and went fairly off, and Cæſar took as much out of the Exchequer as he had a Mind to: And it may not be amiſs here to obſerve that he repreſents this Paſſage artfully enough in his Commentaries, and takes Care to ſmother the Outrage and Injuſtice: Thus thoſe who write their own Hiſtory frequently make ſuch partial Recitals, and ſtifle the Circumſtances which tarniſh their Character. * Cæſar. Comment. de Bell. Civil. Plutarch, in Cæſ.

METELLUS, upon his being choſen General of of the Roman Army againſt the Carthaginians and Sicilians, offer'd Sacrifices to all the Gods excepting Veſta. Now there was no making Satisfaction for his Neglect of this Goddeſs, but by ſacrificing his Daughter to which he reſign'd: However the Goddeſs relented at laſt, and put an Heifer in her Place. Metellus carry'd his Daughter to Lanuvium, and made her Prieſteſs to the Dragon worſhipp'd there. * Plutarch, Parallel. There was another Metellus ſirnam'd Creticus, upon the ſcore of his conquering Crete. And another call'd Dalmaticus, for his Victories over the Dalmatians. * Plutarch, in Pompeio, Aſconius Pedianus, in Orat. 3. Ciceron. contra Verrem. The Family of the Metelli was but Plebeian; however, 'twas grac'd with ſeveral Poſts in the Magiſtracy. * Livy, lib. 9.

METEMPSYCHOSIS, or the Tranſmigration of Souls from one Body to another. Pythagoras and many other Philoſophers were of Opinion that human Souls after Death remov'd into other Bodies, even into thoſe of Brutes. Plato does not come into this Sentiment without ſomething of Limitation; for he ſuppoſes that human Souls, when diſlodg'd tranſmigrate into no Bodies but thoſe of their own Species. The greateſt Part of the Phariſees amongſt the Jews were of this Opinion. The Belief of a Metempſychoſis has been, and ſtill is commonly receiv'd amongſt the Bramines, Indians and Chineſe: Cæſar reports the old Gauls of this Opinion; but then they believ'd it only with Plato's Reſtriction. The Getæ and old Germans were of the ſame Perſuaſion. * Tertullian, de Anima. Diogenes Laertius, Vita Philoſoph.

*METROPOLIS, a Name anciently given to Towns which ſent out Colonies: This Term was afterwards extended to a farther meaning. St. Athanaſius calls Rome the Metropolis of Romania, and Euſebius calls the Towns of Lyons and Vienne the Metropoliſſes of Gaul. The Roman Emperors, upon their dividing the Empire into ſeveral Provinces, fix'd a Metropolis in each Province, and the Church regulating her Diſtricts upon the Form of the Empire, made the Civil Metropoliſſes Eccleſiaſtical ones. In Africk the Right of a Metropolitan or Primate was not fix'd to the Metropolis in the State, but to the Priority of the Epiſcopal Character; and thus the eldeſt Biſhop in every Province was the Primate or Metropolitan. The Privileges of a Metropolitan in a Province were, 1. To have Precedency of the other Biſhops. 2. To conſecrate the Biſhops of the Province. 3. To call a provincial Council for preſerving Orthodoxy and Diſcipline. However, there were ſome Biſhops who were only nominal Metropolitans, who had neither Biſhops nor Province within their Juriſdiction, their Diſtinction reaching no farther than Name and Precedency. * Du Pin, de antiqua Eccleſiæ Diſciplina. Thomaſſin. Diſcipl. Eccleſ.

METZ (Claude Berbier du,) a Gentleman born at Roſnay in Champagne A. D. 1638. He was bred a Soldier, and diſtinguiſh'd himſelf to the utmoſt Degree of Bravery in a great many Actions: He ſerv'd in the Sieges of Doway, Tournay and Liſle, and afterwards at the Battel of Seneff, at the Siege of Cambray and Valenciennes, where he was the firſt General Officer that enter'd the Place and forc'd the Garriſon to lay down their Arms. Beſides other leſſer Poſts which he went through at firſt, he commanded the Artillery at the Sieges of Ghent and Ypres, and at the Battel of St. Dennis, where, beſides the Wounds formerly receiv'd, he had two Musket Bullets lodg'd in his Thigh. He was afterwards Field Marſhal, Governor of the Citadel of Liſle, of the Town and Caſtle of Gravelines; and in 1688 was made Lieutenant-General. In 1689 he ſerv'd under Mareſchal Humieres; and in 1690 under Mareſchal Luxembourg; this Campaign the famous Battel of Fleurus was fought, where du Metz charging, it may be, with Exceſs of Bravery, and purſuing the Enemy too far, was ſhot through the Head with a Musket Bullet: His Death was extremely regretted by the Centinels and Officers, and the King himſelf. In the 1657, when he had not been long a Soldier, a Cannon Ball giving him a glancing Wipe over the Face, diſguis'd him to that Degree that he was ſcarcely known: Being thus mark'd to Diſadvantage, Madam the Dauphineſs happening to ſee him when the King was at Dinner, whiſper'd his Majeſty and ſaid, Sir, what an ugly Man is there! the King reply'd, I think him very handſome, for he is one of the braveſt Men in my Kingdom. Du Metz being a Perſon of great Affability, Generoſity, and good Temper, was particularly eſteem'd by the Monks, Nuns, and Eccleſiaſticks: Indeed he deſerv'd their Regard, for he did his utmoſt in Flanders to preſerve 'em from the common Calamities of War. He was very regular in his Life, very charitable to the Poor, and particularly ſo to indigent Soldiers: And 'twas obſerv'd, notwithſtanding the Indulgence allow'd in a Campaign, he would never diſpenſe with himſelf ſo far as to eat Fleſh in Lent. * Perrault. les Hommes illuſtres, qui ont peru en France, Tome 2.

MEURSIUS (John,) Son of the learned John Meurſius, was born in Denmark, and flouriſh'd about the middle of the ſeventeenth Century. His Works are, de Coronis; Obſervationes Politicæ; Arboretum Sacrum: de Tibiis Veterum, &c. * Konig. Biblioth.

MEZUME, in Latin Mezuma, Oppidum novum, an old Town in Mauritania Cæſarienſis; 'tis ſtill ſomewhat conſiderable, and ſtands in the Province of Tenez, between the Towns Tenez and Moſtagan. * Maty, Diction.

MEZZAB, a Town in Biledulgerid in Africk; 'tis the Capital of a Country of the ſame Name, and which lies between the Territories of Techort, Zeb, Tegorarin and Saara or the Deſart. * Maty, Diction.

MEZZO (Iſole di Mezzo,) formerly Elaphites Inſulæ. They are three little Iſlands belonging to the Republick of Raguſa: They lie between the Town Raguſa and the Iſle Meleda in the Gulph of Venice; their Names are Calamota, Guipana, and Mezzo. * Maty, Diction.

MICHAEL CERULARIUS, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, ſucceeded Alexis A. D. 1043, and declar'd his Diſſent from the Roman Church in a Letter written in the Year 1053, ſign'd by himſelf and by Leo Archbiſhop of Acrida and all Bulgaria, and directed to John Biſhop of Trani in Puglia, to be communicated to the Pope and all the Weſtern Church. In this Letter he blames the Latins, 1. For making uſe of unleaven'd Bread in the Holy Euchariſt. 2. For faſting upon Saturdays in Lent. 3. For eating Blood and things ſtrangled. 4. For not ſinging the Hymn Hallelujah in Lent. At the ſame time Cerularius order'd the Churches of the Roman Catholicks to be ſhut up at Conſtantinople, and turn'd the Latin Monks out of their Monaſteries, this Letter of Michael being communicated to Pope Leo IX, his Holineſs anſwer'd it. The Emperor Monomachus being concern'd in Intereſt to prevent a Ruptute between the two Churches, wrote to the Pope upon this Subject. Pope Leo IX ſent Legates to Conſtantinople to treat an Union: His Legates were the Cardinals Humbert and Frederick, and Peter Archbiſhop of Melphi, who upon their Arrival at Conſtantinople were well receiv'd by the Emperor. Humbert preſented his Majeſty with an Anſwer to Michael Cerularius's Letter, and to a Diſcourſe of Nicetas Pectoratus a Monk, who had engag'd in Cerularius Cauſe againſt the Latin Church. Nicetas recanted, but the Patriarch refuſing to renounce his Letter, the Pope's Legates went July 16 into the Church of St. Sophia, and upon the great Altar there lay'd a Decree of Excommunication againſt Michael Cerularius, and went out of Conſtantinople the next Day, which was July 17: Two Days after they return'd at the Emperor's Inſtance, and had his Majeſty's Thanks for what they had done: But Cerularius being no Coward, excommunicated the Legates, and made their Cenſure rebound upon themſelves. The Emperor Conſtantine inclin'd to the Legates Side; but his Son Theodorus Porphyrogenitus declar'd for Cerularius; and from hence the conſtant Separation of the Greek Church from the Latin may be dated. Michael Cerularius's Reputation riſing very high, the Emperor Iſaac Comnenus grew jealous, and confin'd him. This Emperor deſign'd to get him depos'd in a Council, but that was prevented by this Patriarch's Death. Michael Cerularius's Letter to John de Trani is extant, and ſo are two others which he wrote to Peter Patriarch of Antioch, in which he exhorts him to joyn with him againſt the Church of Rome. * Baron. Annal. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XI.

MICHEL LOVIE, or Michovie, a Country in Royal Pruſſia; 'tis Part of the Circle of Culm, divided from the reſt of this Circle by the River Dribentz: It takes its Name from the Caſtle Michelow; Lobaw and Lauterberg are the principal Towns within this Diviſion. * Maty, Diction.

MICHIAS, or El-Michias, a ſmall Iſland in the middle of the Nile near Grand Caire in Ægypt; the Name ſignifies a Meaſure or a Plummet; and was thus call'd becauſe at the End of this Iſland there's a little round Houſe eighteen Cubits or twenty ſeven Foot high, where the Nile Water is convey'd by Pipes lay'd in the Ground; and in the middle of this Reſervatory there is a Pillar of the ſame Height divided into Cubits. The Divan or Council of State, diſpatches Officers thither to obſerve the flowing of the River; for when the Water riſes fifteen Cubits upon the Pillar, 'tis a Sign of a plentiful Year. At the other End of the Iſland there's a magnificent Palace with a fine Moſque. * Dapper, Deſcription de l'Afrique.

MINELLIUS (John,) a Dutchman, has wrote very good ſhort Notes upon ſeveral Authors; for Inſtance, upon Terence, Virgil, Horace, Salluſt, Florus, Valerius Maximus, and the five Books of Ovid, de Triſtibus. 'Tis ſaid he has likewiſe written a ſhort Commentary upon Tully's Epiſtles, and has left a great many Manuſcripts of the ſame kind upon other Authors. He is reckon'd one of the beſt Scholiaſts for aſſiſting young Students to underſtand Latin Authors by themſelves; and that almoſt all this Sort of Learning publiſh'd in other Countries is little more than a Copy from Minellius. P. Jouvency wrought upon his Model in his Notes upon Terence, Horace, Ovid, and Martial. Minellius dy'd A. D. 1683. * Vid. Præfat. Ovidii Triſtium, lib. 5. cum Notis Minellii, printed at the Hague in 1684.

MINGRELIA (the Sea of,) anciently Phaſianum Mare; 'tis the Eaſtern Part of the Black Sea, takes its Name now from the Country Mingrelia, as it did formerly from the River Phaſis which falls into it. * Maty, Diction.

MINIHO, a Town in Upper Ægypt; it ſtands upon Eaſtern Bank of the Nile between Girgio and Said, and is the Capital of the Caſſilif or Territory of Minio, which takes in the Eaſtern Part of the Valley of Nile, from the Caſſilif of Chereffi to Nubia. Within this Diviſion beſides Minio there are three other Towns, Aſſuana, Chana, and Jehmina. * Maty, Diction.

MINORCA. For towards the Weſt in Morery Vol. II. read towards the Eaſt of Spain.

MINSKO, (the Palatinate of,) a Province of the Duchy of Lithuania in Poland; 'tis ſituated between the Provinces of Novogrodeck, Wilna, Witepsk, Mſciſlaw, and the Territory of R Obaczow. The Soil of this Province is pretty rich; there are a great many Jews in it who follow Trade and practiſe Phyſick, and enjoy the Privileges of the Natives. The Palatinate of Minsko is divided into two Caſtellanies, that of Minsko, and another of Boriſlow, ſo diſtinguiſh'd from the two chief Towns of thoſe Names. * Maty, Diction.

* MINUTIUS FELIX, a Roman Lawyer: His Dialogue is very entertainingly written; the Style is correct and clear, and work'd up with a great deal of Spirit, Learning, and Elocution. This ſmall Tract, as Lactantius obſerves, is ſufficient Proof that Minutius would have made an excellent Apologiſt for Truth and Chriſtianity, if he had apply'd himſelf wholly to this Study; but that this Performance was rather an Amuſement, or a Refreſhment from more fatiguing Buſineſs, than a Compoſition written upon Thought, Time, and the Stretch. Thus he ſeems to skin the Subject without going to the Bottom, and applies himſelf more to ridicule the Pagans, and confute their Reaſoning, than in the Explanation and Proof of the Chriſtian Faith. He does not appear to be throughly inſtructed in the Myſteries of our Religion, and does not deliver himſelf clearly concerning the Soul's ſubſiſting in a State of Separation. The beſt Edition of Minutius Felix is that publiſh'd by Rigaltius A. D. 1643. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. III.

MIQUENEZ, a Town of the Kingdom of Fez in Barbary; it lies in the Province of Fez, twelve Leagues above the Town of that Name, forty from Salle, and ſixty from Tetouan. Miquenez is neither a large Town nor well built, but very populous, the Inhabitants being reckon'd above ſixty thouſand: This Populouſneſs is owing to Moula Iſmael King of Fez and Morocco, who was born there, and makes it his Reſidence: His Palace is almoſt as big as the whole Town, and ſtands upon an Eminence which commands it. The Palace is ſurrounded with ſeveral high Walls of a conſiderable Thickneſs, and look white as if they were fac'd with Marble; 'tis likewiſe ornamented with a great many Towers and two Moſques, which all together make a fine Proſpect. Mechneſa in Sanſon's Maps is the ſame with this Miquenez. * S. Olon. Rélation de l'Empire de Maroc.

MOADHAM, Al-Malek, Al-Moadham Son of Al-malek

malek Alſaleh, the laſt King or Souldan of Ægypt of the Line of the Aioubites, or the Poſterity of Saladin; 'twas he who defeated King Saint-Louis at Manſoura, and took him Priſoner: This Sultan having treated about ſetting the King of France at Liberty, without acquainting the Mamalukes with the Matter; the Mamalukes, I ſay, who had then a great Intereſt in Ægypt, for they had the chief Command in the Army; and having thus the Aſcendant over the Troops, they revolted againſt Moadham, and forc'd him to retire to a wooden Tower upon the Bank of the Nile. The Mamalukes beſieg'd this Fort, and at laſt ſet Fire to it, which forc'd the Sultan to throw himſelf into the River, where theſe Rebels let fly their Arrows, and ſhot him to Death. This happen'd in the Year of the Hegira 688. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MOCLAH, Ebn Moclah, is the Sirname of Abow Ali Mohammed Ben Ali Ben Aſſan. This Moclah invented the modern Arabick Characters, which are now made uſe of inſtead of the old ones call'd Couſiques, and which were very coarſe ones; 'tis for this Reaſon they give him the Title of Vadhe Khath, that is to ſay, the Author and Inventor of Writing. He was made Vizier by the Caliph Moctader in the 316th Year of the Hegira, but was diſgraced and roughly handled not long after. He tranſcrib'd the Alcoran thrice, which three Copies were made the Standard for fine writing, and admir'd for ſeveral Ages for the Beauty of the Character, but at laſt it ſeems one Ebn Bauvab outdid them. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

* MOGUL. For the River Ganges to the South in Morery Vol. II. read to the South-Eaſt.

MOISES, a Prieſt of Rome, and Martyr in the Reign of Decius; a great many others of the Clergy and Laity were impriſon'd A. D. 249 for the Chriſtian Religion, and underwent ſeveral Kinds of Torture. They wrote a joynt Letter to St. Cyprian and the Confeſſors at Carthage, to diſſuade 'em from granting Communion upon ſuch eaſy Terms to thoſe who had fallen into Idolatry. The Confeſſors at Rome being enlarg'd A. D. 250, ſome off 'em went off to Novatian and Novatus's Party, but Moiſes continu'd firm, and refus'd to join the ſchiſmatical Communion. He was apprehended again and impriſon'd A. D. 251, and at laſt ſuffer'd Martyrdom. The other Confeſſors recollected themſelves, own'd their Fault, and return'd to Cornelius's Communion. * S. Cyprian Epiſt. Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 6. Tillemont. Mem. Eccleſ. tom. 3.

MOLA, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples, in the Province of Lavoro upon the Coaſt of the Tuſcan Sea, four Miles from Gaieta to the North, towards Capua, and upon the Road to Naples. This Town was built out of the Ruins of the old Formiæ or Phormiæ; 'twas demoliſh'd by the Saracens A. D. 840; after which Calamity the Biſhop's See there was remov'd to Gaieta; 'tis ſaid there are ſome of the Ruins of Tully's Houſe to be ſeen there. * Deſcription de l'Italie. Baudrand.

MOLINA, a ſmall Town in New Caſtille; it ſtands upon the River Molina, fourteen Leagues from Siguenſa to the South-Eaſt; 'tis the chief Town within the Lordſhip or Honour of Molina, of which the King of Spain carries the Title. This Seigneury has ſeventy five Pariſhes within its Juriſdiction: Some Geographers make Molina the ſame with the Old Mediolum, a ſmall Town of the Celtiberians. * Maty, Diction.

MOLINA (Lewis) a Spaniſh Jeſuit born at Cuença in New Caſtille, was profeſs'd A. D. 1553. He ſtudy'd at Coimbre, and read Divinity Lectures twenty Years in the Univerſity of Evora in Portugal. He dy'd at Madrid October 1600, ſixty five Years of Age. His Works are, Comment. in 1 Partem D. Thomæ. tom. 3. De Juſtitia & Jure: De Concordia Gratiæ & Liberi Arbitrii; & Appendix ad eandem Concordiam. His Book of the Conſiſtency of Grace with Free Will has given Occaſion to the Diſputes upon the Subject of Grace and Predeſtination, which made ſo great a Noiſe in the ſixteenth Century, and are not yet altogether lay'd aſleep. This Book was publiſh'd at Lisbon A. D. 1588, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of the Dominicans, who argu'd vigorouſly againſt it in their Theſes, and preferr'd an Information againſt it to the Inquiſition at Valladolid, and to the ſame Tribunal in the Kingdom of Caſtille. The Cauſe was afterwards carry'd to Rome, where Pope Clement VIII. erected the Congregation de Auxiliis A. D. 1597. After ſeveral Meetings of the Cardinals and others call'd in for Conſultation, where the Dominicans and Jeſuits were heard before the Pope and Cardinals. After theſe Hearings the Diſpute continu'd to the Pontificate of Paul V. The Divines call'd in for Advice being by no means favourable to Molina's Doctrine, a Bull was drawn up againſt it: But Pope Paul V. being unwilling to come to any Deciſion refus'd to ſign it: And thus the Diſputants, &c. were diſmiſs'd, after his Holineſs had acquainted 'em that he would publiſh his Deciſion when he thought proper, prohibiting the Parties in the mean time from cenſuring or ſtigmatizing each other, and enjoyning the Superiors of both Orders to puniſh thoſe ſeverely who ſhould contravene this Prohibition. This Decree was made by Pope Paul V. Auguſt 31, 1607. * Maurolicus, lib. 5. Ocean. Relig. Beyerlinck, in Chron. Miræus, de Script. Sæc. XVI. Ribadeneira & Alegambe, de Script. Societ. Jeſu. Thuan. l. 131, &c. Hiſtoire de la Congregation de Auxiliis, par le P. Lemos, Seri, Aletophilus, & Autres.

MOLLERUS (Daniel William,) of Presbourg in Hungary, was born in 1643, and read Lectures upon Hiſtory and Metaphyſicks at Aldtorph in 1678. He publiſh'd ſeveral little Tracts, amongſt which thoſe that follow are upon very particular Subjects: Modeſta Refutatio novæ Logicæ Eliæ Schnegaſii: Juſtiſſima Retorſio ad Criminationes Schnegaſii: Ædificatio Evæ: Bohemicum nihil Alchymiſticum: Pedis admiranda: Meditatio Stoica de Conditione Temporis præſentis: Meditatio de prodigioſis Inſectis Hungaricis: Schediaſma de Mulieribus Hominibus: Meditatio Quæſtionis num S. Pauli Caput primum ad Romanos ſine prophanorum Auctorum, maximè Petronii, cognitione intelligi queat? Curriculum Poeticum: Metaphyſica du Valiana: Diſſertatio de Salamandra: Oratio de Confuſione Linguarum Babylonica. * Konig. Biblioth.

MONETARIUS, an Officer of the Mint, who coin'd the Money: All the Money of the Romans had the Name of the Monetarius upon it, and that either in Words at length, or in the initial Letters. The Triumviri had formerly the Direction of the Mint. They call'd 'em Triumviri Monetales, which Office was erected a little before Tully's time; their Commiſſion was comprehended in theſe five Letters, A. A. A. F. F. Ære, Auro, Argento, Flando, Feriundo, that is, their Buſineſs was to melt, hammer and coin Braſs, Gold, and Silver. * Antiquit. Græc. & Lat.

MONGUL, Mongal, a vaſt Country in Great Tartary; 'tis commonly ſuppos'd ſituated along the Northern and Eaſtern Oceans, where the River Tartar runs, from whence Tartary, as ſome will have it, takes its Name. From this ſingle Circumſtance one may eaſily judge that this Country is not plac'd where it ſhould be: For what Probability is there that Tartary ſhould be denominated from the Tartar, which, according to the Situation given this River, muſt have been the laſt thing diſcover'd there? M. Witſen, in his great Map of Tartary, gives Mongul a quite different Situation: He calls it Mugalie, in Latin Mugalia, and bounds it on the Weſt by the Mountain Altay, which is the Imaus of the Ancients; on the South by Turqueſtan, Tangut, and China; and on the North by the River Amur or Ghamas, which parts it from Dauria, the Gilikes, and other People but little known. This Geographer makes Mongul take in the Deſart of Xamo, to the North of which he aſſigns the Courſe of the River Tartar, which before it falls into the Sea, takes the Name of Schingal and Quantung; and upon this River where the Name is chang'd Witſen places a great many Towns. P. Avril in his Voyage to China agrees partly with this Map; for from the Lake of Baycal (which is near to the Head of the Amur or Yamour) as far as China he plants the Country with none but Tartars, Monguls. He deſcribes 'em a travelling, moving Sort of People, wealthy in Cattel, good humour'd and peaceable, and who correſpond with the Muſcovites that border upon 'em on the Side of Siberia. They have a great many petty Princes, and three very powerful Chams of the ſame Family, and who make no uſe of Fire-arms. But Avril gives the Name of Monguls to thoſe Tartars only that live to the Weſt of the River Schingal; and calls thoſe Bogdoi Niuchi or Eaſtern Tartars who dwell to the

East

East of this River; all which are comprehended under Mugalie by M. Witsen. * Avril, Voyage a la Chine. Maty, Diction.

*MONICA (St) St. Austin's Mother, was born of Christian Parents in the 332nd Year after the Incarnation. She was marry'd to a Burgher of Tagasta in Numidia call'd Patricius, whom she afterwards prevail'd with to turn Christian: She had two Sons by him, and one Daughter; St Austin was the eldest. After her Husband's Death she pray'd constantly for St. Austin's Conversion, who took too much Liberty, and was over and above a Manichean. She was extremely troubled at his going to Rome, and went after him to Milan A. D. 384; where she had the Satisfaction of hearing St. Ambrose preach. St. Austin's Conversion follow'd upon the Prayers and Tears of his holy Mother. They both went from Milan in order to return into Africk; and being come up to Ostia, where they were to embark, she fell sick and dy'd there A. D. 387. Notwithstanding her Memory was much honour'd by the Church, yet she had not the publick Respect of a Saint till the Popedom of of Alexander III, in whose time 'twas pretended her Corps were found at Ostia: Others affirm that this Discovery was not made till Pope Martin V. A. D. 1430. Her Festival in the Martyrologies stands at the 4th of May. * Augustin. Confess. Baillet, Vies des Saints, au mois de mai.

MONNOYE (Bernard de la,) born at Dijon June 16, 1641, was Comptroller in the Chamber of Accounts at Dijon A. D. 1672, and held this Business till 1696. He understood Greek, Latin, Italian and Spanish throughly; and was a good Critic and Poet. His Poem du Duel Aboli or Duelling abolish'd carry'd the Prize of the French Academy in the Year 1671, which was the first given by that Society: He likewise gain'd the Academy Prize in the Years 1675, 1677, 1683, and 1685. He wrote a great many poetical Performances, work'd up with great Delicacy and Spirit. He is the Author of Benignus's and St. Mammet's Hymns which are sung in the Church at Langres (which are the only Latin Verses he has printed.) He made critical Remarks upon several Passages in Bayle's Dictionary, which are inserted in the second Edition. His Integrity and regular Life were no less remarkable than his Learning and Politeness; Qualities which don't frequently meet in the same Person. The Subjects of his Performances which gain'd the Prize are as follow: For the Year 1675, the Glory of Arms and Learning under Lewis XIV; for the Year 1677, the Education of Monsiegneur the Dauphin; for the Year 1683, the great things done by the King for the Advantage of Religion; for the Year 1685, the Glory acquir'd by the King in giving the Cause against himself. An Ode to the King upon the Conquest of the Franche Comté in the Year 1674. The Author had the Honour to present it to his Majesty the same Year. An Ode to Monsiegneur the Dauphin upon the taking of Philipsbourg in the Year 1688. An Idyllium upon the taking of Mons A. D. 1691; a Translation of three Latin Odes, one upon Burgundy, another upon Champaign, and a third upon Syder, &c. M. de la Monnoye wrote the following Epitaph for himself and his Wife:

Bernardus placidâ compostus Pace Moneta
Conditur hic, Artes cui placuere bonæ;
Cui tribuit crebras Academia Gallica Lauros;
Qui Latias etiam Cecropiasque tulit:
Felix, ni Fluctus incautum egisset in altos.
Vexare ingenuum Fraus meditata Caput.
Hæc attrivit Opes, Studiorum hæc Otia rupit:
Forsan & hinc Mors est aspera visa minus.
Communem sensit Conjux dilecta Dolorem,
Hic prope dilecti quæ cubat Ossa Viri.
Non his Ambitio, non sedit Pectore Livor,
At simplex Probitas & sine Labe Fides.
Credibile est Animas adeo Virtutis amantes,
Ad quos hæc abiit, nunc habitare Locis.

MONSERRAT MONTANNES (Michael,) liv'd in the seventeenth Century: He was a Spaniard who left the Church of Rome came into the Protestant Communion, and publish'd some small controversial Tracts; one of 'em is entitled, Aviso Sobre les abusos de la Iglesia Romana. In this Discourse he cites a great deal of Scripture. In the Conclusion he exhorts the Spanish Nation to turn Protestants, and declaims against the Licentiousness in Spain by the Restraints of Celibacy; and observes, amongst other things, that the Confessors allow the Nuns scandalous Liberties in some Cases. And here he cites a great many Scripture Passages in Commendation of Marriage. He wrote another Spanish Tract publish'd in 1631 entitled, the Pope is Antichrist. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

MONT-QUIRINAL, a Mountain in Rome so call'd, because there was a Temple there dedicated to Romulus, otherwise call'd Quirinus. Numa enclos'd it within the Walls; 'tis now call'd Monte Cavallo, because of the Figures of two Horses in Marble plac'd there; one done by Phidias, and the other by Praxiteles, both representing Bucephalus, with the Statues of two Men on Foot breaking the Horse, one on the Right Side, and the other on the Left; 'tis suppos'd that these Figures represent Alexander the Great. The Popes have their common Residence in this Palace: Sixtus V. bought it of the House of Este, and made considerable Additions, which were farther enlarg'd by Paul V. The Jesuits Noviciate Church stands in the Place where Romulus formerly had a Temple. * Dion. Halicarnass. Antiquit. Rom. lib. 2.

*MONTANUS, an Heresiarch of the second Century, born at Ardaban a Town of Mysia confining upon Phrygia; he turn'd Christian, as 'tis said, in Hopes of Preferment in the Church: He pretended to Inspiration, and gave out the Holy Ghost had instructed him supplementally to what was deliver'd by the Apostles. Priscilla and Maximilla, two Phrygian Enthusiastick Women, possess'd with the same Spirit of Delusion, became his Disciples: In a short time he had a great Number of Followers. The Bishops of Asia being met condemn'd his new Prophecies, excommunicated those who dispers'd 'em, and wrote an Account of what had pass'd to the Western Churches. The Confessors and Faithful in Gaul wrote back to their Asiatick Brethren, condemn'd these pretended Prophecies, exhorting 'em withal to use gentle Methods for the Recovery of those misled. The Montanists finding themselves under Censure form'd a Schism, and sat up a distinct Society under the Direction of those who call'd themselves Prophets: Montanus, in Conjunction with Priscilla and Maximilla, was Head of the Sect. The first Montanists made no Alteration in the Creed; they only held that the Holy Spirit had made Montanus his Organ for delivering a more perfect Form of Discipline than what was settled by the Apostles. They for ever refus'd Communion to those who were guilty of notorious Crimes, and believ'd that the Bishops had no Authority to reconcile 'em: They believ'd it utterly unlawful to fly in time of Persecution. They were divided into two Branches, one of which were the Disciples of Proclus, and the other of Æschines: These last lie under the Imputation of following the Heterodoxy of Praxeas and Sabellius concerning the Trinity. * Euseb. Hist. Eccles. lib. 5. cap. 16, 17 & 18. S. Epiphan. Hæres. 48 & 51. Tertull. de Fug. in Persec. Theodorit. Fabull. hæret, &c.

MONTAUBAN (John Lord of,) Counsellor, and of the King's Bedchamber, Mareschal of Bretagne, follow'd the Duke of Bretagne into the Field, when he joyn'd the French King's Troops for the Conquest of Normandy: Montauban was at the taking of Caen, Cherbourg, and all the other Places of that Province, then in the Hands of the English. The Duke of Bretagne gave him the Command of his own Troops, which he march'd into Guienne for the gaining that Province likewise from the English A. D. 1453. And King Lewis XI. at his coming to the Crown made him great Master of the Forests and Admiral of France. He dy'd at Tours in 1466, his Death being very much regretted by the King. He was descended from a considerable and ancient Family in Bretagne. * P. Anselme.

MONTALT (Philip,) extracted from a considerable Family in Bigorre: Philip was Duke of Navailles, Peer and Mareschal of France, Knight of the King's Orders, Seneschal or Steward of Bigorre, Governor of the Towns of Rochel, Brouage, and the Country of Aunis, Captain Lieutenant of two hundred Light Horse

Horſe of the Guards. He commanded the French King's Army in Italy under the Duke of Modena in the Quality of Captain General A. D. 1658; and the next Year after the Death of that Duke he commanded in chief, and was Ambaſſador extraordinary to the Princes in Italy. The French King made him General of his auxiliary Army, which he ſent into Candia to ſuccour the Venetians in the Year 1669. In the Year 1673 he commanded the Troops in Lorrain, Alſace, Champaign and Burgundy, and drove the Enemy out of this laſt Province, where they had taken Beaune, and attack'd the Suburbs of Dijon: He afterwards took Gray, which pav'd the Way for the Conqueſt of the Franche Comté in the Year 1674. The ſame Year he ſerv'd in Quality of Lieutenant General under the Prince of Condé, and commanded the Left Wing at the Battel of Seneff; and the next Year 1675 was made Mareſchal of France. And now he was ſent into Catalonia to take the Command of the Army, where he made himſelf Maſter of Figuieres in the Year 1676, and in 1677 beat a Party of the Troops commanded by the Count de Montery; took Puycerda in the Year 1678, and ſerv'd in that Poſt till the Peace at Nimeguen concluded the ſame Year. He dy'd ſuddenly at Paris February 5, 1684, ſixty five Years of Age. * P. Anſelme.

MONTE CHRISTO, a ſmall Iſland in the Tuſcan Sea between the Iſland Corſica and the State delli Preſidi upon which it depends. This Iſland, tho' it looks but like a Rock in the middle of the Sea, has a good Town and Fort belonging to it. * Maty, Diction.

MONTE FOSCOLO, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples; it ſtands in the farther Principality, two Leagues from Beneventum to the South. This Town is the common Reſidence of the Governor of the Province. * Maty, Diction.

MONTE MAJOR, a Spaniſh Town in Andaluſia, five Leagues from Corduba to the South: This Town is ſuppos'd to be the Old Ulia or Ulla, which in Julius Cæſar's time was a very ſtrong Place. * Maty, Diction.

MONTE DI S. ANGELO, in Latin Mons S. Angeli, Mons Garganus, a City within the Kingdom of Naples; it ſtands in the Capitanata upon Mount Gargan, a League and a half from Manfredonia: This City is an Archbiſhop's See to which that of Manfredonia is united: There are a great many fine Churches in it; the Cathedral is dedicated to St. Michael, and famous for the Pilgrims who reſort thither. * Maty, Diction.

MONTE SARCHIO, a Town and Caſtle with the Title of a Principality; 'tis in the farther Principality of the Kingdom of Naples, three Leagues from Beneventum to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

MONTE SPERELLO, a fortify'd Town; it ſtands in the Territory of Perugia, which belongs to the Eccleſiaſtical State in Italy; 'tis ſituate upon a Hill between the Lake and Town of Perugia. * Maty, Diction.

MONTFAUCON (Bernard de,) a Benedictine of the Congregation of St. Maur, extracted from a Gentleman's Family of Roquetaillade in the Dioceſe of Alet, and a great Maſter in Eccleſiaſtical and Pagan Antiquities. This learned Perſon in 1688 joyn'd with P. Loppin in publiſhing a Collection of Greek Remains entitled Analecta; he printed a new Edition of St. Athanaſius Works A. D. 1697; and ſome time before he publiſh'd a Tract upon the Hiſtory of Judith. In the Year 1698 he travell'd into Italy, where he collected a great deal of Matter for an Antiquary: After his Return he publiſh'd two Volumes of the Greek Fathers never yet printed: The moſt conſiderable Part of 'em is Euſebius of Cæſarea's Comment upon the Pſalms, mention'd by St. Jerom. He has ſince publiſh'd his Palæographia Græca, or a Tract concerning the Original Form and Progreſs of the Greek Alphabet, where he ſhews the different Shape and Manner of writing Greek in different Ages: This Performance is full of Learning and Curious Remarks: He has likewiſe publiſh'd a new Edition of Origen's Hexapla, and tranſlated Philo de Vita contemplativa into French with Notes upon it, to prove the Therapeutæ were Chriſtians. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MONTMORENCY (Francis Henry de,) Duke of Piney-Luxembourg, Peer and Marſhal of France, Knight of the King's Orders, Count de Bouteville de Luxe, &c. Captain of his Majeſty's Guards du Corps, Governor of Champaign, Brie and Normandy, Son to Francis de Montmorency, Count de Bouteville, &c. by Elizabeth Angelica of Vienne, was born January 8, 1628. He made his firſt Campaign in 1647 under the Prince of Conde in Catalonia; and his ſecond under the ſame Prince in Flanders in 1648. He was at the Siege of Ypres, and at the famous Battel of Lens: The great Regard he had for the Prince of Conde's Perſon made him run that Prince's Fortune, and go into all his Meaſures; thus he ſtay'd at Paris during the Barricades; he was at the Action of Charenton, which was a very hot and dangerous Puſh. When the Prince of Conde was ſeiz'd and carry'd Priſoner to Bois de Vincennes, this Montmorency rais'd a Company of an hundred Gentlemen at his own Charge, and marching 'em to Nancy joyn'd Monſieur de Longueville and Monſieur de Turenne, and ſerv'd this Campaign under the latter againſt the Mareſchal de Hoquincour: He was wounded and taken Priſoner at the Battel of Rhetel. After the Enlargement of the Princes of Conde and Conti, the firſt re-imbroiling himſelf at Court, Luxembourg, now Count de Bouteville, who was but five hundred ſtrong, held Bellegarde againſt Mr. d'Eſpernon then Governor of Burgundy, who ſat down before this Town with fifteen thouſand regular Troops, five and twenty Pieces of Cannon and two Mortars; and notwithſtanding this Inequality of Force he held out a Month after the Trenches were open'd, and did not ſurrender without honourable Terms. The Reputation he had gain'd in the Field brought him to the Poſt of Lieutenant General in the Army order'd into the Franche Comté in 1667; and here he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in all the Functions belonging to his Station: Afterwards, he was commander in Chief in the War declar'd againſt Holland A. D. 1672; and was ſucceſsful in all the Enterprizes he was order'd to undertake: He maintain'd the conquer'd Towns and Country till the Retreat he made through the Enemy's Army much more numerous than his own: He did likewiſe great Service in the Army the King commanded in Perſon in the Franche Comté in 1674; and the ſame Year forc'd the Prince of Orange to raiſe the Siege of Charleroy, and ſerv'd under the Prince of Conde at the Battel of Seneff. In the Year 1675 he was made Mareſchal of France: Two Years forward he was at the Battel of Mont Caſſel under the Duke of Orleans, and commanded in chief at the Battel of St. Dennis fought Auguſt 14, 1678, where he gave the Prince of Orange a Repulſe, who attack'd his Army, notwithſtanding the Peace had been ſign'd at Nimeguen the 10th of that Month. In the ſecond War maintain'd by France againſt moſt of the Force of Europe, he beat General Waldeck at the Battel of Fleurus July 10, 1690; the next Year he routed the Confederates at Leuſe, gain'd another Victory at Steinquerque Auguſt 4, 1692, and a fourth at Nerwind July 29, 1693, and ſoon after took Charleroy. In the Year 1694 he broke the Confederates Deſign upon ſome Towns belonging to France near the Sea, by a long and unexpected March which he made in the Face of the Enemy from Vignamont to the Scheld near Tournay; ſuch a Courſe of Reſolution, Conduct and Succeſs made the French Troops rely entirely upon his Direction, ſo that they were always ready to march with Pleaſure where ever he led 'em; inſomuch that he ſeems to deſerve the Character a foreign Author gives him, which is, that his Valour, his Activity, his inſatiable Vigilance, and his particular Genius for forming and executing great Undertakings, will always preſerve him the Character of an extraordinary General: His Courage particularly could face the greateſt Danger without Fear; his Head was cool and his Heart hot; the Tumult and Confuſion of the warmeſt Action gave him no Surprize, nor made any Impreſſion upon his Temper; ſo that he always was in a Condition to obſerve the Advantages and Diſadvantages of the Battel, and to give Orders proper for the Caſe in Hand. He dy'd of a Baſtard Pleuriſy at Verſailles January 4, 1695, ſixty ſeven Years of Age: His Funeral Oration was ſpoken by P. de la Rue a Jeſuit. In 1661 he marry'd Magdalen Charlotte-Bonne Thereſe de Clermont, de Luxembourg, Ducheſs of Piney, Princeſs of Tingri, &c. ſole Daughter and Heir of Charles-Henry de Clermont, Duke of Luxembourg, in Right of Margaret Charlotte of Luxembourg, Ducheſs of Piney, Counteſs of Ligny, &c. who reſign'd her Duchy in Favour of her Daughter, upon Condition that her Husband ſhould take the Name and Arms of Luxembourg. By this Ducheſs the Duke of Luxembourg had Charles-Francis Frederick, Peter-Henry Thebault, and Paul Sigiſmond. * P. Anſelme.

* MONYMA, of Miletus, King Mithridates's Queen, famous for her Reſolution and preſerving her Honour. This Princeſs, when ſhe ſaw her Husband's Affairs deſperate, took her Diadem, which was then a Ribband ſet with Jewels, and hang'd herſelf in it; but the Weight of her Body breaking the String, ſhe threw her Diadem upon the Ground with a contemptuous Sentence, and ſpit upon it, and afterwards made one of her Eunuchs ſtrangle her. * Plutarch in Lucullo.

MORAVE, in Latin Moravus, Morava; 'tis a great River in European Turky; it has two Springs, both of 'em riſe upon the Frontiers of Albania; the moſt Eaſtern one goes by the Name of the Great Morave, or the Morava Bulgaria; the other is call'd the Little Morave, or the Morave of Servia, and in ſome Maps the Ibar; theſe two Rivers joyn above Razena, and fall into the Danube about five and twenty Leagues below Belgrade. Some take the Morave for the Margus or Margis of the Ancients; and others will have it the Old Ciabrus. * Maty, Diction.

MORAVE, anciently Morus and Marus, a great River in Germany; it riſes in the Confines of Bohemia and Sileſia, croſſes all Moravia, runs by Olmutz and Hoadiſſe, and taking in the Teya at the Confines of Upper Hungary and Lower Auſtria, parts theſe two Countries as far as the Danube into which it falls. * Maty, Diction.

MORGIAH, the Name of an Arabian Clan, and a particular Mahometan Sect, who believe that Faith alone without good Works is ſufficient. Theſe Solifidians are glanc'd at by the famous Doctor Schabi, where he bids his Diſciples be afraid of the Threatnings of God Almighty, and don't behave your ſelves like thoſe who defer doing any thing that is good, and hope to be ſaved notwithſtanding. Gazali, another Mahometan Doctor, tells us the Morgians expect God ſhould work every thing in 'em, and affirm that Sin hurts no Believer, and that Works without Faith ſignify nothing. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

MORHOF (Daniel George,) was born at Wiſmar in the Duchy of Meckelberg A.D. 1639. He underſtood Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Mathematicks, Phyſicks and Poetry. After his Travels into Holland and England, Albert, Duke of Holſtein, invited him to Kiel, where this Prince had lately founded an Univerſity: Here Morhof read Lectures upon Poetry and Rhetorick, and at laſt was Hiſtory Profeſſor: His Motto was, Pietate, Candore, Prudentia; and 'tis ſaid he exemplify'd theſe Virtues in his Conduct. He dy'd at Lubeck in the Year 1691, fifty three Years of Age. His principal Work is his Polyhiſtor, which has run thro' ſeveral Editions; the Title of the laſt printed at Lubeck 1708 in two thick Volumes 4^to^ is as follows: Danielis Georgii Morhofi Polyhiſtor in tres Tomos; Literarium (cujus Soli tres Libri priores hactenus prodiere, nunc autem quatuor reliqui a Viro in Academia Lipſienſi erudito reviſi atque aucti, e MSS. accedunt) Philoſophicum & Practicum (nunc demum editos primoque adjunctos) diviſus, &c. a Joanne Mollero. * Journal des Savans. Tom. XLIV. pag. 484. Edit. de Hollande.

MORINUS (John Baptiſt,) Phyſician and King's Mathematick Profeſſor at Paris, was borne at Ville Franche in Beaujolois February 23, 1583. M. Claude Dormy Biſhop of Boulogne, ſent him into Hungary in queſt of Metals and Minerals, which gave Occaſion to the writing his firſt Book printed in the Year 1619, and entitled Mundi ſublunaris Anatomia. After his Return into France he apply'd himſelf wholly to judicial Aſtrology: Several of his Predictions were anſwer'd in the Event, as the Death of the King of Sweden, the Cardinal de Richelieu, and the Marquiſs de Cink-Mars, and the Impriſonment of the Biſhop of Boulogne, &c. But beſides his being groſly miſtaken in predicting the Fortune of M. Chavigny, Secretary of State, ſeveral learned Men of his time, and particularly the famous Gaſſendus, prov'd ſo many Miſtakes upon him, that we have Reaſon to believe that when he was right in his Prognoſtications, 'twas, like other Aſtrologers, only by chance, he publiſh'd ſeveral Books, viz. Aſtronomicarum Domorum Cabala detecta. Trigonometriæ Canonicæ libri tres. De vera Cognitione Dei ex ſolo Naturæ Lumine. Famoſi Problematis de Telluris motu vel quiete hactenus optata Solutio: And here he declar'd againſt the Syſtem of Copernicus, which drew a learned Anſwer upon him from the illuſtrious Gaſſendus; and here they had a warm Diſpute upon the Subject of Atoms and a Vacuum: His favourite Performance, entitled Aſtrologia Gallica, and which coſt him thirty Years Pains, was not printed till after his Death. He pretended to have found out the Longitude in a Book entitled Longitudinum terreſtrium & cœleſtium nova & hactenus optata Scientia. He dy'd in 1656, ſeventy four Years of Age. * Morin. Aſtrologia Gallica. Abregé de la Philoſophie de Gaſſendi. Guy Patin, Lettr. 65, &c.

MORINUS (Peter,) was born at Paris in the Year 1531. His Inclination for the Belles Lettres made him travel into Italy, which was then the Seat of Learning. He taught Greek and Coſmography at Vicenza, from whence he was call'd to Ferrara by the Duke of that City. In the Year 1559 his Father recall'd him into France, where he refus'd to undertake any Buſineſs, and after his Father's Death return'd into Italy, where he arriv'd in the Year 1565; having travell'd ſome time he went into the Family of Cardinal Navager, Biſhop of Verona, was very much valu'd by Charles Borromée, and and employ'd by the Popes Gregory XIII. and Sixtus V. in the Edition of the Septuagint and the Vulgate. He was Secretary to the Academy conſiſting of ſix Perſons call'd Scholaſtici, who had the Direction of the Vatican Preſs, and reviſ'd the Books by collating 'em with good Manuſcripts. Pope Gregory XIII. order'd him to collect all the Greek Scholias, which he had extracted from the Catena Patrum or Greek Commentaries lodg'd in the Vatican. He informs us in his Epiſtles that to be more exact he had Recourſe to the Hebrew Text, and for ſome Books conſulted the Syriac, Æthiopick, and Arabic Verſions. He did great Service to Cardinal Baronius in tranſlating ſeveral Greek Paſſages and Records into Latin, which the Cardinal has inſerted in his Annals. Some of Morinus's Epiſtles are in Muretus's Collections: Father Quetif a Dominican printed ſome of this learned Author's Works in the Year 1675; and amongſt the reſt a Tract ſhewing the right Uſe of Learning; a Paræneſis or Exhortation to the Greeks to ſerve for a Preface to the Council of Florence, and a great many Epiſtles. Morinus wrote politely, was a great Linguiſt, and well vers'd in Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity; he thought nicely, and dreſs'd well: And to conclude his Character, there was no Perſon in that Age, who was more remarkable for Learning and a beautiful Manner. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII. Richard Simon, Lettres choiſées.

MORINUS (John,) Father of the Oratory; his poſthumous Works were printed at Paris A.D. 1703. In 1628 he printed a new Edition of the Septuagint with the old Latin Verſion publiſh'd by Nobilius: His Hiſtory of the Church's Deliverance by the Emperor Conſtantine, and the Grandeur and temporal Sovereignty beſtow'd upon the Church of Rome by the Kings of France, printed at Paris in the Year 1629, is not written in the beſt French, and gave great Diſguſt to the Court of Rome: He declar'd too ſtrongly againſt the Hebrew Text in his Exercitations upon the Bible, and drew a great many learned Pens upon him, who had the better in the Conteſt: His hiſtorical Commentary upon Penance is an admirable Collection; but his Book de Ordinationibus is full and exact beyond Improvement: Here he has inſerted a great many curious Remains with very learned Diſſertations. The Tracts publiſh'd ſince his Death are three; the firſt concerning the Expiation of the Catechumens; the ſecond upon Confirmation; and the third upon the Subject of Contrition and Attrition: In fine, Father Simon, under the Title of the Antiquity of the Eaſtern Church, has publiſh'd a Collection of Morinus's Epiſtles, which afford a great many remarkable Paſſages in Criticiſm and Hiſtory: And to cloſe his Character, Morinus was certainly one of the learneſt Men of his time: He is the firſt who has begun to diſcourſe upon the Sacraments with diſtinguiſhing Solidity and Judgment; ment; and it may be fairly ſaid of him that he has gone to the Bottom of this Argument. Bernier, Hiſtoire de Blois. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

MORIN (Simon) a Fanatick living in the ſeventeenth Century, born at Aumale, and had been Clerk to M. Charron, Paymaſter General to the Army: He was an ignorant Fellow, and having a conſiderable Share of Enthuſiaſtick Heat, rambled into great Errors. He was not contented to diſperſe his Whimſies privately, but threw a great many of 'em into a Book which ſtole through the Preſs in 4^to^, 1647, and was entitled Penſées de Morin dediées au Roi, or Morin's Thoughts dedicated to the King: This Book is a Medley of Dotage and Ignorance, and contains the moſt remarkable Errors afterwards condemn'd in the Quietiſts: Tho' it may be he runs a greater Length of Extravagance than any of thoſe Sectaries; for he maintains directly that the greateſt Sins don't make a Man fall from the State of Grace, but that they are rather ſerviceable to knock down Pride: He affirms that God has a Remnant of the Elect in every Sect and Nation: He gave out that there would quickly be a general Reformation in the Church, and that all People would be Converts to the true Faith. He pretended this great Revolution would commence at the ſecond coming of Jeſus Chriſt in his State of Glory; and that Morin would be ſublimated, and, as it were, incorporated into this glorious Condition; and that to qualify him for the executing thoſe great things to which he was pre-ordain'd, he was to be attended with a numerous Train of perfect Souls, admitted to a Participation of our Saviour's Grandeur, which for that Reaſon he call'd the Combatants of Glory. The Sieur Jean des Marets Saint Sorlin, who was himſelf a great Viſionary, pretended to be Morin's Diſciple, and by this means diſcover'd all his Fanaticiſm. Morin having been ſome time confin'd, was diſcharg'd as a crazy Fellow; but Des-Marets preferr'd an Information, and came in Evidence againſt him: In ſhort, Morin was brought to his Tryal, and condemn'd to be burnt, which Sentence was executed March 1663. 'Tis ſaid ſome of his Diſciples were ſent to the Gallies. He gave out he would riſe again the third Day, which made a great many of the Mob gather together at the Place where he was burnt: 'Tis ſaid that when Monſieur the Preſident de Lamoignon ask'd him whether 'twas written in any Part of the Scripture, that the great Prophet or new Meſſiah ſhould paſs through the Fire; to this Morin, now condemn'd, cited this Verſe in the ſeventeenth Pſalm by way of Anſwer, Igne me examinâſti, & non inventa eſt in me Iniquitas, that is, thou haſt try'd me with Fire, and no Wickedneſs is found in me. Morin dy'd with remarkable Reſolution, and 'twas then thought the Judges had gone too far in their Rigour, and that the ſending him to a Mad-houſe had been Puniſhment enough: The Judges defended themſelves by alledging that Morin own'd a great many wicked Tenets; and that not in ſudden Starts and Fits of Heat, but in cool Blood, and with the greateſt Obſtinacy imaginable: But then the Queſtion is, whether a Fool ought to be capitally puniſh'd for any Opinion or Degree of Stubborneſs. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

MORLIN (Joachim,) a rigid Lutheran, born in 1514. He executed his Miniſtry in ſeveral Places, and particularly at Aruſtad, from whence the Magiſtracy expell'd him A. D. 1543, becauſe they conceiv'd his Zeal over-ran his Diſcretion. He was invited to Conigsberg in Pruſſia to be Divinity Profeſſor there; and here he oppos'd Oſiander, who held a new Doctrine upon the Head of Juſtification: He attack'd this Novelty with great Vigour both in his Writings and Sermons; but ſunk notwithſtanding under his Adverſary, who got him chas'd out of Pruſſia A. D. 1552. He withdrew to Brunſwick, where he was made Collegue to the famous Chemnitius: He had a Share in the Diſputes of thoſe times, and was in almoſt all the Controverſies where the Articles of free Will, and the Neceſſity of good Works, &c. were debated. He return'd into Pruſſia in the Year 1566, and was there made Biſhop of the Province of Sambia by Sigiſmond Auguſtus King of Poland, and by Albertus Duke of Pruſſia, who was now no longer manag'd by Oſiander. Morlin dy'd A. D. 1571. His Works, as Melchior Adam gives a Recital, are theſe; Pſalmorum Davidis Enarratio; Catechiſmus Germanicus; Poſtilla & Explicatio ſummaria Evangeliorum Dominicalium; Refutatio Mendacii Theologorum Heidelbergenſium, de Luthero; De Vocatione Miniſtrorum, & quatenus Magiſtratui fas ſit eos ab Officio removere; Defenſio adverſus accuſationem novorum Wittembergenſium Theologorum; De Peccato Originis contra Manichæorum Deliria. Epiſtola ad Oſiandrum. * Melchior Adam, in Vit. Theolog. Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

MOROSINI (John-Francis,) a Cardinal born at Venice A. D. 1537. After having been that Republick's Ambaſſador in Savoy, Poland, Spain and France, he was ſent to Conſtantinople with the ſame publick Character to Amurath III, where he behav'd himſelf with great Reſolution. Some private Venetians having us'd ſome Turks at Corfu in a barbarous manner, the Grand Seignior reſolv'd to have his Revenge: The Grand Vizier went ſo far as to threaten Moroſini to cut off his Head, to which he boldly anſwer'd, that if he did it, his Republick would exert their whole Strength to return the Uſage upon himſelf: However, he omitted nothing to pacify the Sultan, and carry'd his Point by promiſing that the Podeſtat or Magiſtrate, who conſented to the ill Treatment complain'd of, ſhould be puniſh'd. Moroſini upon his Return Home took Orders, and was made Biſhop of Breſcia: Afterwards Sixtus V. hearing him commended for a Man of Courage, ſent him Nuncio into France, and made him Cardinal during his Stay there A. D. 1588: At the ſame time he promoted him to the Diſtinction of Legat a Latere, to make up the Differences between the Guiſes and the King. He was very acceptable to the French Court; and follow'd Henry III. to Blois, where he was when the Duke of Guiſe and the Cardinal of Lorrain his Brother were ſlain; he was charg'd with being privy to this Deſign, and to have a Share in it: Upon this Imputation the Pope recall'd him, but he juſtify'd himſelf ſo well that his Holineſs made him Cardinal Protector of Germany and Hungary. He was very much Philip Nerio's Friend: He dy'd January 1596, in the fifty ninth Year of his Age, and left all his Eſtate to the Poor. Father Stephen Coſmi printed Memoirs for the Life of this great Cardinal A. D. 1676. * Ciaconius. Cabrera, Petramelus, &c.

MOROSINI (Francis,) Doge of Venice, and one of the greateſt Generals that Republick ever had, was born in the Year 1618 his Father was Peter Moroſini, and his Mother Mary Moroſini: At twenty Years of Age, being on board one of the Venetian Gallies, he ſignaliz'd himſelf againſt the Turkiſh Pirates, who cruiz'd in the Archipelago; and here he behav'd himſelf with ſo much Courage and Conduct, that the General Marino Capelli foretold that he would one Day make an extraordinary Soldier. In the Year 1645 he had his Share in the Attack of four Sultanas laden with Ammunition to Canea; and here he diſtinguiſh'd himſelf to that Degree of Bravery, that the Senate gave him the Command of one of their beſt Gallies, with which the next Year he gave chace to ſeveral Turkiſh Gallies near Retimo. In the Year 1647 he purſu'd theſe Infidels into the Port of Scio, burnt their Ships there, did the ſame Service at Napoli di Romania, and a little after beat ſixteen of their Gallies in the Streight of Gallipoli. The next Year the Turks having inveſted Candia, Moroſini landed there, charg'd 'em, and beat 'em off the Walls. This Train of Succeſs diſpos'd the Senate to make him Admiral of the Gallies A. D. 1650, and truſt him with the Guard of the Gulph of Venice: In this Quality he ſerv'd in the Sea Fight when the Venetians attack'd the Turks between Paros and Naxis, in the Archipelago; the Engagement was very obſtinate, and the Venetians, after the Loſs of Mocenigo, who was kill'd in the Action, had in all likelihood been worſted, if Moroſini had not fallen upon the Enemy's Rear, and made 'em ſheer off. Thus the Venetians gain'd a complete Victory, and a Renegado born in Friuli, who commanded the Ottoman Fleet, deſign'd to make an unexpected Deſcent upon Candia, was taken with the greateſt Part of his Ships; and the reſt, who endeavour'd to get away, were daſh'd in Pieces upon the Rocks.

This complete Victory promoted the brave Moroſini to the Command of the Fleet A. D. 1651, which put him in a Capacity of doing a great many very conſiderable things: He quaſh'd a Sedition at Corfu, and near Nicopoli defeated a Convoy of Troops and Ammunition embark'd for Canea; and in 1653 gave chace to another Fleet near Rhodes, and the next Year made a Deſcent upon the Iſland Ægina, and took thirteen of the Enemy's Ships. Generaliſſimo Mocenigo falling ſick and dying, Moroſini perform'd his Functions, and carry'd Malvaſia notwithſtanding the Turks Reſiſtance, and the Strength of the Place. In the Year 1655 he was no leſs ſucceſsful, took the Town Ægina and demoliſh'd it; Vollo in Theſſaly and Scyatho had the ſame Fate, which oblig'd the neighbouring Iſlands to ſubto Contribution. Generaliſſimo Foſcarini ſucceeded Mocenigo, butſurviv'd him but a ſhort time: This Accident put the chief Command the ſecond time into Moroſini's Hands, who, after Lazaro Mocenigo had beaten the Turks, ſeiz'd the Opportunity and took Megara: And now the Ottomans beſieging Candia with great Reſolution, the Senate gave the Government of the Place to Moroſini, who arriv'd there in 1656. The Affairs of the Republick quickly recover'd in this Iſland under his Direction; he forc'd the Turks to retire into the Places they were Maſters of, and after having beaten the Infidels at Sea, and kill'd ten thouſand, he took Tenedos and Lemnos from 'em. Theſe Diſgraces puſh'd the Grand Vizier Amurath Cuperli upon great Preparations, and made him exert himſelf the Year following. This Vizier retook the two Iſlands abovemention'd; and the Generaliſſimo Lazaro Mocenigo being kill'd in a Sea Fight near the Dardanells, the Senate thought they could not ſupply his Place better than by putting Moroſini into it. This new Generaliſſimo put to Sea in 1658, but after having taken the Iſland Charcia, he met with a violent Storm in which the whole Fleet was in Danger of being loſt. When the Tempeſt was over he gather'd up the Debris, and being joyn'd by the Pope's Gallies, and thoſe of Malta and Tuſcany, he gave the Infidels chace ſeiz'd Claron, and plunder'd Samos. The next Year he march'd into the Morea and took ſeveral Towns, and afterwards returning into Candia with a Reinforcement of four thouſand French A. D. 1660, he carry'd the Fort di Santo Venerando Sword in Hand, beat the Turks ſeveral times, and ſeiz'd new Candia, which they had built for a Blockade upon the old one.

near

Moroſini having gone through the cuſtomary Term for Generaliſſimo reſign'd his Poſt to George Moroſini, and towards the End of the Year 1661 retir'd to Venice. Here he had the Mortification to ſee himſelf charg'd for Mal-Adminiſtration by thoſe who grudg'd him his Reputation: But this Cloud being quickly diſpell'd his Innocency ſhin'd out, and his Proſecutors were puniſh'd. And now the Grand Vizier Mahomet Cuperli, who ſucceeded his Father, coming in Perſon before Candia, the Senate apply'd to Moroſini to undertake its Defence, which he did accordingly. And here his Conduct and Bravery during the Siege, which laſted two Years and four Months, can hardly be expreſs'd: He ſuſtain'd more than fifty ſix Aſſaults, fought the Enemy forty times under Ground, and deſtroy'd their Mines above four hundred and ſixty times: In this Siege the Turks loſt more than a hundred and twenty thouſand Men, and the Venetians above thirty thouſand. The Grand Vizier attempted to bribe this noble Governor, but to no Purpoſe: He refus'd the Offer of being immediately made Prince of Walachia and Moldavia, and notwithſtanding the Wound he receiv'd in the Beginning of the Year 1669, he did not flag nor lie by in the leaſt, but gave his Orders with the ſame Vigilance, and manag'd with the ſame Activity as formerly. And now notwithſtanding the French Succours which arriv'd were too feeble for Buſineſs; notwithſtanding the Pope's Gallies went off he refus'd to drop his Sword, and with the ſmall Remainder of the Garriſon ſtood a general Aſſault, and receiv'd the Enemy ſo warmly, that he made 'em retreat from a Part of the Walls which they had made themſelves Maſters of: However, a Capitulation being abſolutely neceſſary, the Grand Vizier having a great Value for ſo brave a Perſon, gave him all the Articles demanded.

At his Return to Venice he was very well receiv'd at firſt, but ſoon after was put under an Arreſt, the Senate thinking themſelves oblig'd to this Rigour by a warm Harangue which Francis Corrario made againſt Moroſini; but the Procurator Sagredo and Michael Foſcarini undertaking his Defence, his Conduct was juſtify'd, and the Poſt of Procurator of St. Mark confirm'd to him, into which he was choſen a little before the Surrender of Candia; the Senate now declaring that no Perſon had ever ſerv'd the Republick better than himſelf. However, his Exploits hitherto are nothing in Compariſon of thoſe that follow. The War recommencing againſt the Turks upon the Alliance made between the Venetians, the Emperor, and the King of Poland, Moroſini, near being choſen Doge after the Death of Contarini, was again declar'd Generaliſſimo. With this Commiſſion he ſet Sail for Greece June 8, 1684, and at firſt made himſelf Maſter of the Iſland and Town of Santa Maura, where he found an hundred and twenty Pieces of Cannon. This Succeſs was follow'd with the taking a great many other Iſlands, which made the Turks apprehenſive of a Famine at Conſtantinople: Coron, notwithſtanding the Succours with which the Beſieg'd were conſtantly reinforc'd, was carry'd by Storm, the Town fir'd, and the Garriſon put to the Sword A. D. 1685; and the next Year, beſides ſeveral other Advantages, Lavarino and Modon fell into Moroſini's Hands: In the Year 1687 he gain'd a complete Victory at Sea near the Dardanells; after which the Infidels loſt Petras, Lepanto, &c. This Succeſs gave ſuch Satisfaction to the Senate, that they honour'd Moroſini with the Title of Peloponneſiacus, and what had never yet been done for any Perſon while living, they ſet up his Statue in Braſs with this Inſcription Franciſco Mauroceno Peloponneſiaco adhuc viventi Senatus poſuit 1686.

Moroſini loſing no time in puſhing his Conqueſts, took Corinth, Sparta and Athens; from which laſt Town he ſent to Venice ſome very beautiful Figures of Lyons, which the Republick ſet at the Entrance to their Arſenal, with a very honourable Inſcription for their Generaliſſimo, who took theſe Figures out of Minerva's Temple. The Doge Juſtiniani dying in 1688, Moroſini was elected into his Poſt April 3, the ſame Year, with the general Satisfaction of the People; the Army likewiſe receiv'd the News with the greateſt Demonſtrations of Pleaſure. However, he was forc'd this Year to raiſe the Siege of Negropont, his Troops being very much leſſen'd by the Sallies of the Garriſon, and by the Enemy in the Field: In ſhort, the Fatigues he underwent threw him into a Sickneſs, which forc'd him to return to Venice A. D. 1689. The next Year Pope Alexander VIII. ſent him an Headpiece and a Sword, which he receiv'd with the cuſtomary Ceremony from the Nuncio in St. Mark's Church. But the War continuing ſtill in the Levant, the Doge's being upon the Spot of Action was thought neceſſary: And thus tho' ſeventy five Years old he was the fourth time declar'd Generaliſſimo. He went upon this Service in 1693, and made the Turkiſh Fleet ſheer off ſeveral times; but being worn out with Action and Age, he fell ſick, and dy'd, univerſally lamented, at Napoli di Romania January 6, 1694. His Corps was carry'd to Venice, where the Senate ſet up a Monument for him with this Inſcription; FRANCISCO MAUROCENO PELOPONNESIACO SENATUS POSUIT ANNO M. DC. XCIV. * Jean Gatien, lib. de Geſtis, Franciſci Mauroceni, & C. Patarii 1698.

MOSCABEANS, in Arabic Moſchabbehoun, a Mahometan Sect who believe that God is literally what the Alchoran deſcribes him in ſeveral Places: They are Anthropomorphite Mahometans: They ſeem to have borrow'd from the Rabbies all that fanciful Diſcourſe about the Pain of the Eyes, and the roaring of the Lyon, which is apply'd to the Deity in the Talmud; 'tis certain there are a great many Mahometans ignorant enough to imagine that God has Hands, Feet, Eyes and Ears; and even ſome of 'em hold that he has a thick black Beard, with a great many other imaginary Attitudes. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

* MOSQUES in Morery Vol. II. ſee Medina ibid.

MOSUL, in Latin Mauſilium, Nova Ninus or Nineveh; a City within Diarbeker in Aſia; 'tis the Capital of the Beglerbeglie of Moſul, and ſtands upon the Tigris about forty Leagues above Bagdat. This Town has a Citadel, and is conſiderably large; 'tis built with the Ruins of Old Nineveh, ſome Remains of which are ſtill to be ſeen over againſt Moſul on the other Side of the Tigris. * Maty, Diction.

MOSUL (the Beglerbeglie of,) is one of the Provinces of Diarbeker in Turky; it lies between the Provinces of Proper Diarbeker, of Rika, Bagdat and Schereſul. Moſul, Teskrit, and Zerbit, are the principal Towns within it. * Maty, Diction.

MOSYNIANS, or Moſynoeciens, the Name of certain Mountaniers, who dwelt upon Trees or Stacks of Wood in the Neighbourhood of the Euxine Sea: Their Cuſtoms were ſo counter to thoſe of other Nations, that they behav'd themſelves like Brutes without any Senſe of Decency or Shame: Their higheſt Heap of Wood was their King's Palace, who had but a miſerable Poſt of Royalty; for 'twas Part of his Buſineſs to try all their Cauſes, and if he happen'd to miſtake in giving Judgment they ſent him to Goal immediately, and made him reign there without Victuals. The Crown was elective, and their Prince was always in Chains, and under a Guard: They fed upon Acorns, and what they took in hunting: Their Cuſtom was to lay Ambuſcades for Travellers, and uſe Strangers very ill. Zenophon in his fifth Book of the Expedition of Cyrus the Younger gives a Detail of their Arms, Eating, &c. And amongſt other things he obſerves that they us'd to talk, laugh and dance when they were alone, as much as if they had Company. * Apollonius. Pomponius Mela. Strabo, &c.

MOTECUMA, or Montecuma, a King or Emperor of Mexico, loſt his Crown and Liberty by receiving the Spaniards into his Capital, having firſt try'd to keep 'em at a Diſtance by Propoſals and Ambuſcades, but to no Purpoſe. Ferdinando Cortez, who commanded only four hundred Spaniards, prevail'd with the Clans, who were Enemies to the Mexicans, and border'd upon 'em, to come into his Alliance: With this Reinforcement he march'd up to the City of Mexico, and oblig'd the King to capitulate. Soon after, the Spaniards put this Prince under an Arreſt to make a Diſcovery where he had hidden Part of his Treaſure: The Mexicans perceiving their Emperor thus ill us'd, came up in a Body and beſieg'd the Palace where he was kept Priſoner. Motecuma being forc'd by the Spaniards to ſhew himſelf at a Window to quiet the Tumult, was wounded with the Blow of a Stone, of which Hurt he dy'd ſome few Hours after. * Hiſtory of Mexico.

* MOUPHTI, or Mufti, High-Prieſt, or Head of the Mahometan Religion. Notwithſtanding the Mufti makes a great Figure in the State, and that 'tis neceſſary to apply to him when there happens a Debate about depoſing the Sultan; yet he is liable to be depos'd himſelf in caſe he falls under the Grand Seignior's Diſpleaſure. Of this we have an Inſtance when the Turks Affairs were embarraſs'd in 1686. Mahomet IV. being at a Loſs on whom to lay the Blame of the ill Succeſs of his Arms in Hungary and the Morea, depos'd the Mufti, reproaching him with being the Occaſion of all the Misfortunes in his Empire by his over Complaiſance to the Grand Vizier Cara Muſtapha, at whoſe Inſtance he ſign'd the Ferva or Order for beginning the War, without repreſenting to his Prince the Conſequences that were likely to follow, as by his Station he was oblig'd to have done. The Sultan afterwards baniſh'd him to Burſa, and made Huſſem-Effendi Mufti in his room, who was before Cadilesker of Rumelia, or Sovereign Judge of the Ottoman Forces in Europe: And when the Sultan put him into this Poſt, he gave him a Charge not to conceal any thing from him, which he believ'd neceſſary to the Publick Good. * Memoires du Tems.

MOURNING (the Iſraelites or Jews manner of.) The Ancients did not only put themſelves in Mourning for the Death of their Relations, but always when any great Misfortune happen'd: Neither did their Mourning conſiſt only in the different Shape or Colour of their Clothes. Their Occaſions for Mourning were, either publick Calamities, as a Mortality, a general Scarcity, an Invaſion or hoſtile Incurſion; or elſe for private Misfortunes, as the Death of a near Relation or Friend; or if ſuch were dangerouſly ſick, in Captivity, or charg'd with any great Crime. The Signs of Mourning with the Iſraelites were tearing their Clothes as ſoon as they heard any bad News, or when they happen'd to be preſent at any irreligious Inſolence, as Blaſphemy, or any other outragious Impiety: The other Signs of Mourning were beating their Breaſts, clapping their Hands upon their Head, pulling off their Head-Clothes, and throwing Duſt or Aſhes upon it inſtead of the Perfumes they had there upon Feſtival Occaſions: They us'd likewiſe to ſhave their Beard and their Head; whereas the Romans on the contrary, whoſe Cuſtom was to go ſhaved, let their Beards grow during the time of Mourning.

The Iſraelites, while their Mourning laſted, neither waſh'd nor anointed themſelves, but wore their Clothes torn and dirty, or elſe put on Sackcloth; that is, ſtrait Clothes without Pleats and Folds, and which by Conſequence muſt look unhandſomly: They call 'em Sackcloth, becauſe they were made of the coarſeſt Camels Hair, or of ſome other rough reſembling Stuff; their Feet were likewiſe bare as well as their Head, but their Face was covered; ſometimes they threw a Cloak about it, as being unwilling to ſee the Light and diſcover their Tears. Mourning was always attended with Abſtinence, i. e. they either eat nothing, or elſe faſted to Sun-ſet, and then their Diet was nothing but Bread or Pulſe, and their Drink only Water.

Farther, they kept themſelves retired, ſitting upon the Ground, or lying in Aſhes, deeply ſilent, and never ſpeaking except in Complaints, or in Songs to heighten their Sorrow. The time of mourning for the Dead was commonly a Week, and ſometimes 'twas lengthen'd to a Month, as was done for Aaron and Moſes; and ſometimes it laſted threeſcore and ten Days, which was the Interval of Reſpect paid to the Patriarch Jacob: But then there are Widows who have mourn'd all their Life-time, as appears from the Inſtances in Judith, and Anna the Propheteſs. Thus their Mourning was not like the modern, which is little more than Mode and Ceremony, and which is throughly obſerved by none but the wealthy: But the Iſraelites Mourning had all the Signs and Circumſtances of inward and real Grief: Neither were they ſingular in this matter; for the other Eaſtern Nations the Greeks and the Romans a long time after, practis'd with the ſame Signs of Solemnity, Sorrow, and Self-Denial: The Deſcription St. Chryſoſtom gives of the Mourning in his time has a reſembling Appearance with that already mention'd.

Now, generally ſpeaking, the Iſraelites, and all other ancient Nations, were more natural than theſe modern Ages in the Expreſſion of their Paſſions: They ſung and danc'd when their Hearts were merry; when they were ſad they broke out into Tears and loud Lamentation; when they were afraid they made no Scruple to ſquall, and when they were angry they ſcolded heartily: Homer and the Tragick Poets afford Inſtances of all theſe Kinds: Thus Achilles lamented Patroclus's Death to a great Exceſs; and in Sophocles's, Oedipus and Philoctetes, the Signs of Grief are very ſtrong and affecting. Theſe extravagant Degrees and Exceſſes were afterwards corrected by Philoſophy and the Chriſtian Religion: Thoſe eſpecially who have Education and Breeding are practis'd from their Youth to more Compoſure and Sedateneſs: However a great many who refuſe to take Pains with themſelves, are moderate only on the outſide; they make a ſhift to conceal their Paſſions; but either out of Sloth or wrong thinking, ſtop ſhort of ſubduing 'em. * 2 Sam. 13. 19. Jerem. 2. 37. Ezech. 24. 17. Lament. 2. 10. 1 Sam. 31. Eccluſ. 22. 12. Numb. 20. 29. Deut. 34. 8. Gen. 50. 3. Chryſoſt. ad Demetr. de Compunct. Fleury, les Mœurs des Iſraélites.

MOUSTIERS, or Monſtiers, in Latin Monaſterium or Munſterium, ſo call'd becauſe 'twas originally a Monaſtery; 'tis now a City in Provence within the Dioceſe of Riez, where the Counts of Provence had formerly a Court Royal and a Bailliage; and in 1541 Francis I. made it a Viguerie, and put Riez, Valenſole, and three and twenty other Towns and Villages under its Juriſdiction. The Deputies of this Town have the tenth Place in an Aſſembly of the States of the Province; which Aſſembly conſiſts of ſix and thirty Corporations, who have a Right to ſend Repreſentatives thither every Year. When Provence was diſputed between Lewis I. Duke of Anjou, adopted by Queen Jane, and Charles of Duras Nephew to this Princeſs, whom he kept Priſoner A. D. 1380, and put her privately to Death two Years after in a Caſtle of the Kingdom of Naples; when this happen'd the Burghers of Mouſtiers not being ſatisfy'd that Queen Jane was dead, and refuſing to recognize either of the Claimants, were roughly us'd by both: Beaudiſner, Commander in chief for the Duke Duras, demoliſh'd Part of the Town; and ſoon after Trians, Viſcount Tallard, Captain General for Queen Mary, Widow to Lewis I. Duke of Anjou, ſeiz'd the Town and plunder'd it. In 1386 the Burghers took an Oath of Allegiance to King Lewis II. Duke of Anjou: During the Civil Wars carry'd on by the Leaguers, Mouſtiers was always for the King: This Town ſtands at the Foot of a very high Mountain, from whence there comes a plentiful Spring: Upon the Top of the Hill there's a Free-ſtone Chapel dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin, and which has been a long time famous for the Reſort of Pilgrims: A little below the Chapel the Mountain ſplits into two Parts, which are joyn'd together by an Iron-Chain ſtretch'd through the Chaſm, two hundred and fifty Paces in Length: This Chain is ſuppos'd to be a Preſent vow'd by a Knight of Rhodes of the Family of Blacas, who was miraculouſly reſcu'd from Captivity by the Interceſſion of the bleſſed Virgin. In the Year 1684 Part of the Town was waſh'd away by an Inundation. * Sidon. Apollinar. Carmine Euchariſt. ad Fauſt. Reienſem. Noſtradamus Hiſt. de Provence. Archives de Lerins, de Mouſtiers & de Riez.

MOUTIQUE, a Town upon the Peninſula of India on this Side the Ganges; it ſtands upon the Coaſt of Malabar, between Calicut and Cananor, and is the Capital of a ſmall Kingdom which belongs to the King of Calicut. * Maty, Diction.

MUFTI; ſee Mouphti.

MUGELLO (the Valley of,) a fine Country in Tuſcany; it lies along the Banks of the River Sieve, between Mount Appenin and the River Arno. The Town Fieſole, and Part of Florence are within this Valley, which takes its Name from the Village Magello, formerly call'd Muciallia. * Maty, Diction.

MUICHEU, a City in China; it ſtands near the River Kiang, within the Province of Suchuen, where 'tis only reckon'd in the tenth Claſs, notwithſtanding 'tis one of the principal Towns in the Province. Maty, Diction.*

* MUIS (Simeon de,) born at Orleans, Archdeacon of Soiſſons, and made King's Hebrew Profeſſor at Paris A. D. 1614. He was reckon'd one of the moſt learned French Men in that Language: And beſides his Skill in this Part of Learning, he was a Perſon of great Judgment and Penetration; had a correct and eaſy Style, and was thoroughly acquainted with Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, and Points of Divinity: In ſhort, he had all the Qualifications requiſite to make an excellent Expoſitor of Scripture: His Commentary upon the Pſalms is eſteem'd by all learned Men as the beſt Explanation of that inſpir'd Book; his Commentary upon the Canticles is annex'd to it, where he explains the literal Senſe of that Book: He likewiſe wrote a Book entitled Varia Sacra, which is made up of Notes or Explanations of the moſt difficult Paſſages in the Old Teſtament from Geneſis to the Book of Judges. All his Works were printed at Paris A. D. 1650 He dy'd A. D. 1644. M. Simon. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent.* XVII.

MULBERG, in Latin Molyberga, a ſmall Town in Upper Saxony; it ſtands in the Territory of Miſnia upon the Elbe, between Meiſſen and Torgaw, ſix Leagues from the firſt and three from the latter. Mulberg is famous for the Victory Charles V. got there againſt the Proteſtant Princes A. D. 1547. * Maty, Diction.

MULERIUS (Nicholas,) born at Bruges A. D. 1564, and dy'd 1630: He was an excellent Phyſician and Mathematician; he publiſh'd Tables for calculating the Motion of the Sun and Moon; two Books of Aſtronomical Inſtitutions; a Book upon the Jewiſh and Turkiſh Year; a Roman Calendar with an Introduction, which G. J. Voſſius calls a learned and accurate Work. * Auctor Vitarum Profeſſ. Groningen. pag. 65. & 113.

MULLER (John,) a celebrated Preacher at Zurich, and living in 1678: He publiſh'd ſeveral Works; the Titles of the moſt conſiderable ones written in Latin are as follow; Quæſtiones Miſcellaneæ de Muhammedanorum Deo; Perſico Tawaſi Pentateucho; De Sadducæis in 1653 & 1654; Dyas Quæſtionum de Nomine Jeſu & Verſione Æthiopica in 1659; Diſputationes de Hiſtoriæ Definitione; De ſacris Scriptoribus in Genere in 1660; De Evangelica Magorum Hiſtoria; De Scriptis S. Matthæi in 1672; Heptas Quæſtionum de Nativitatis Chriſti Feſto in 1673; Vindiciæ Locorum Vet. Teſtam. Geneſ. 1. 3. 11. Geneſ. 17. 11. He likewiſe publiſh'd Decas Concionum; Horologium Pœnitentiale; Tuba Joëlis; Speculum Pœnitentiale; Tractatus de Monachatu & Euchariſtia. * Konig. Biblioth.

MUNGHOA, a City in China; 'tis the ſixth in Rank within the Province of Junnan. * Maty, Diction.

MUNIA, a conſiderable City in Upper Ægypt; it ſtands upon the Weſtern Bank of the Nile, within the Caſſilif or Diviſion of Ebenſuef, fifteen Leagues above Ebenſuef: Some take Munia for the Old Lycopolis, and others will have it the Phylace Thebaica. Maty, Diction.*

* MUNSTERBERG, a City belonging to the Kingdom of Bohemia in Upper Sileſia with the Title of a Duchy, and ſtands ſeven or eight Leagues from Breſlaw. Munſterberg belong'd formerly to the Dukes of that Name, deſcended from George Poderbrach, elected King of Bohemia A. D. 1458; whoſe Poſterity poſſeſs'd the Duchy 'till the Year 1647; when Charles Frederick laſt Duke of Munſterberg of the Poderbrach Family dying, the Emperor Ferdinand III. in Right of his Kingdom of Bohemia, re-annex'd this Duchy to that Crown; and afterwards made a Grant of it to John Wiſcard Prince of Averſperg and of the Holy Empire, his Majeſty's privy Counſellor, and Lord Chamberlain, hereditary Marſhal of Carinthia, Knight of the Golden Fleece, &c. in whoſe Family the Duchy ſtill remains. * Ritterſhuſius Imhoff. Notitia. Imper. &c.

MUSCULUS (Andrew,) a Lutheran Author and Divinity Profeſſor at Francfort upon the Oder, and Superintendant of the Churches within the Marquiſate of Brandenbourg: He was born at Schneberg in Miſnia, and dy'd in 1580; he was a warm Champion for the Doctrine of Ubiquity, and explain'd his Opinion in a very bold manner: He maintain'd that the Aſcenſion of our bleſſed Saviour means nothing more than the ceaſing of the Viſibility of his Fleſh: He aſſerts that his human Body is ſtill in the Clouds where it diſappear'd to the Apoſtles, and that according to the Scripture Style, and the Propriety of the Terms to Aſcend and Deſcend, we are not to imagine any Change of Place in our Saviour's Aſcenſion: This whimſical Fancy may be ſeen at large in Hoſpinian's Hiſtory of the Euchariſt, part 2, pag. 492, ad An. 1561. Muſculus printed a great many Books, the Titles of which are inſerted in the Epitome of Geſner's Bibliotheca. He was ſtrongly perſuaded that there would be great Revolutions in Germany in a ſhort time, and that the End of the World was not far off, which made him write upon this Subject with an Air of Demonſtration, as if he had got a Key to the Oracles of the Old and New Teſtament. * Bayle, Diction. Hiſtor.

* MUSICK; the Art which teaches how to form Concords, and bring agreeable Sounds to the Ear; or to ſpeak more diſtinctly, the Skill which teaches how to ſtrike low, high, and middle Notes with due Proportion, and part 'em by juſt Intervals of Silence, ſo as to give an awakening and ſtrong Pleaſure to the Ear. Some reckon this Invention to Apollo, and others to Mercury: The Ancients diſtinguiſh'd Muſick into ſix Kinds, the Rhythmick, the Metrick, the Organick, the Poetick, and the Hypocritick, which comprehends the Rules for Dancing, Pronunciation, playing upon Inſtruments, Verſification, together with the Geſtures of the Pantomimes; and laſtly, the Harmonick, which lays down Rules for ſinging; theſe ſix things taking in the ſix Kinds of Muſick, according to Porphyry's Diviſion upon Ptolomy's Harmony. Ariſtoxenes a Philoſopher, and one of Ariſtotle's Scholars, has left us three Books of the Elements of Harmonick Muſick: Theſe Books have given him the Diſtinction of the Head of a Sect in Muſick call'd Ariſtoxenians, in Contradiſtinction to the Pythagoreans: Theſe two Muſical Clans went upon different Principles; the latter making Proportions, or the Mathematical Part of Muſick, the only Rule for judging or examining Notes; whereas the former were of Opinion that the Ear ought to be call'd in to the Deciſion; it belonging principally to that Senſe to pronounce upon Muſick. * Danet. See Morery Supplement under Article Muſick.

* MUSTAPHA II, Emperor of Turky, Son of Sultan Ibrahim, ſucceeded his Uncle Achmet II. To what is ſaid upon this Prince in Morery Vol II. may be added, that after his Army had been entirely routed at Zanta by Prince Eugene of Savoy in 1697, and his Fleet beaten by the Venetians the Year following, he turn'd his Thoughts to a Peace, which was finiſh'd at Carlowitz January 1699; by Virtue of this Treaty a Truce was concluded between the Emperor and the Sultan, for twenty five Years; during which Term all Acquiſitions made by his Imperial Majeſty were yielded by Muſtapha, together with that Part of Tranſylvania which was in the Emperor's Poſſeſſion: As for the other Diviſion belonging to the Fort of Temeſwaer, that was to continue the Grand Seignior's; as to Poland the Peace was perpetual; and here, one Article was that the Turks ſhould reſtore Caminieck, and the Poles what they had taken in Moldavia: The Truce ſign'd with the Republick of Venice was turn'd into a Peace without Limitation of time A. D. 1701; and by this Agreement the Venetians were to remain Maſters of the Morea, as far as the Ruins of the old Wall in the Corinthian Iſthmus; they were likewiſe to continue in Poſſeſſion of all the Iſland of Leucade with the Fort Santa Maura, of the Iſland Egina, and the Forts of Clin, Ciclut, Caſtelnuovo, &c. In Dalmatia, Between the Turks and Muſcovites there was only a Truce for two Years, which was lengthen'd to thirty Years the Year following, the Czar remaining in Poſſeſſion of his Conqueſts. Theſe Treaties were confirm'd by reciprocal and ſplendid Embaſſies: The Sieur Ferriol the French King's Ambaſſador at Conſtantinople A. D. 1700 moving for his firſt Audience of the Grand Seignior, the Turkiſh Court order'd him to lay by his Sword during that Ceremony; but he deny'd Compliance with a great deal of Spirit, tho' he was then almoſt in the Sultan's Preſence, and even threaten'd with Violence for his Refuſal: He ſupported his Character very bravely, order'd his Preſents to be carry'd back, and went out of the Seraglio, chooſing rather to have no Audience than to ſink in his Repreſentation. The Ambaſſadors of other Crowns appear'd with leſs Reſolution, eſpecially the Emperor's. After this Muſtapha went from Conſtantinople, and reſided at Adrianople: And here, while he indulg'd himſelf, ſome of the Forces at Conſtantinople roſe upon the Government for not being paid, and murther'd the Treaſurer. The Janizaries and Spahis joyn'd theſe Mutineers; their Pretence was that the Sultana Validé and the Mufti had too much of the Adminiſtration, and prevail'd with the Grand Seignior to live from his Capital, that they might govern the more abſolutely: Theſe Rebels increaſing to an hundred and fifty thouſand Men, forc'd the Seraglio, carry'd off Mahomet's Standard, and then mov'd to Adrianople: The Grand Vizier march'd againſt 'em with twenty thouſand regular Troops, but this Body deſerted to the Rebels: Thus the Vizier was forc'd to fly with Mauro Cordato; the Mufti and his Son were ſeiz'd, and the unfortunate Muſtapha was depos'd in the Beginning of September 1702. His Brother Achmet was ſet in his Seat: This Achmet when he left Adrianople made his Brother ride before him in a cloſe Coach, and in this Figure they came to Conſtantinople. The Mufti and his Son were executed, having been firſt put to the Queſtion to diſcover their Treaſure: And to conclude, this Revolution, take it all together, is reckon'd one of the greateſt Revolts that ever happen'd in the Turkiſh Empire.
* Memoires Hiſtor.

NADER,

N.

NADER a great City in the Mogul's Empire, between Seronge and Agra. The greateſt part of the Houſes are thatch'd and only one Story high, the beſt being no more than two. Three Sides of the Town are water'd by a River, which falls into the Ganges. * Tavernier.

NANGATO, the capital of a Kingdom, or rather ſmall Province, of the ſame Name. It ſtands upon the weſtern Side of the River Jamaiſtero, in the Iſle Niphon. Maty, Diction.*

NANGUNDI, a great River in the Indian Peninſula on this Side the Ganges. It Riſes in the Mountains of Gate, runs by the City Biſnagar, and croſſing the Kingdom of the ſame Name, falls into the Gulph of Bengale at Maſulapatan, which belongs to the Kingdom of Golconda. * Maty, Diction.

NANTEUIL (Robert,) was born at Rheims in the year 1630. He had from his Infancy a great Genius for Drawing: Inſomuch that after he had ſtudied Philoſophy two years, he Deſign'd and Engrav'd the Theſis maintain'd by him. He grew famous in a ſhort Time, and that which help'd particularly to make him ſo, was a Print which he made of the French King in little, for which his Majeſty gave him an hundred Loüis d' Or. Afterwards he engrav'd him in his natural Bulk, or to the Bigneſs of Life; which had never been done with Succeſs by any Engraver. The King was ſo well ſatisfied with this Performance, that he made him the Deſigner and Engraver for his Cloſet, and erected an Office on Purpoſe for him, ſettled an annual Salary of a thouſand Livers with very honourable Letters Patents. Before this time the beſt Engravers thought it next to impoſſible to repreſent all the Colours, requir'd in a large Picture, with nothing but the white of Paper, and the Black of Ink; 'Tis true when the Print is ſmall, the Imagination of thoſe that view it can eaſily ſupply theſe Circumſtances: But in Nanteuil's large Print of the King one would think he ſaw the natural Complexion, the Vermilion of the Cheeks, and the Redneſs of the Lips; whereas in other Prints of the ſame Bigneſs the Complexion looks Leaden, the Cheeks Livid and Lips of a Violet Colour; ſo that the Men look rather as if they were drown'd, than living. He afterwards ingrav'd in the ſame manner the Portrait of the Queen, Mother of Lewis XIV. Cardinal Mazarine, the Duke of Orleans, Maréſchal Turenne, and ſome others, all which have acquir'd him an immortal Reputation. Carlo Dati in his Life of Zeuxes mentions Nanteuil in the following ſtrain of Commendation; "The Words of Apollonius, ſays he, make me reflect "upon the prodigious Exquiſiteneſs of the Prints of "of our modern Engravers, where all things are re"preſented with ſo much Nature and Life: For, inſtance, "the Drapery, the Fleſh Colour, the Beard, the Hair "and the Powder upon it; and which is more extra"ordinary, the Age, the Air, and peculiar Reſem"blance of the Perſon: This, ſays he, is very won"derful, conſidering that 'tis all brought about with "nothing elſe but the Black of Ink, and the white of "Paper, which don't only make the differences of Light "and Shade, but produce the effect of all the Colours." The great Duke of Tuſcany ſet Nanteuil's Print, done by himſelf, in his Gallery, which was ornamented with the Portraits and Drawings of the moſt eminent Painters and Gravers, eſpecially when they were done by themſelves. Manteuil dy'd at Paris 1678, forty eight years of Age. * Perrault, les Hommes Illuſtres, qui ont paru en France. Vigneul-Marvill, Mélanges d' Hiſtoire, pag. 182.

* NAPLES. For Henry IV. in Morery Vol. 2. read Henry VI.

NATIVITY (The Feſtival of the bleſſed Virgin's). This Feſtival is not near ſo old as that of the Nativity of our Saviour and St. John Baptiſt. Pope Sergius I. who was choſen Biſhop of Rome A. D. 687, is the firſt who plac'd the Nativity amonſt the Feſtivals kept in Memory of the Bleſſed Virgin; For the Natalitium or Birth-day of the Bleſſed Virgin, kept in Winter, was the Feſtival of her Aſſumption, and which was likewiſe far from being any primitive Solemnity. The Feſtival of her Nativity was afterwards put into the Martyrologies, and into Gregory the Great's Sacramentary. 'Twas not obſerv'd in France till the Reign of Lewis the Debonair; and has been ſince inſerted into the Martyrologies compil'd by Florus, Ado Viennenſis and Uſuardus. Walter Biſhop of Orleans introduc'd it into his Dioceſe, and Paſchaſius Radbertus mentions it in his Book de Virginitate Mariæ. Thus, thoſe who affirm 'twas not ſettled till the ninth Century, are miſtaken. However, 'twas no Holiday generally in France and Germany till the tenth Century. The Greeks and Eaſtern Chriſtians began to keep it no ſooner than the twelfth Century, but then they do it with great Solemnity. Baillet, vies des Saints.*

NAVAGERO, or Nanger (Andrew), a Noble Venetian and Senatour, and a good Latin Poet. He was ſent Ambaſſadour by the Republick to Francis I, and dy'd at Blois A. D. 1516, forty ſix years of Age. He wrote a Book of Epigrams, and ſome Latin Eclogues and Elegies. There is a great deal of Delicacy in his Poems, and if they had been written in the Age of Auguſtus, they would have paſs'd well. He likewiſe exercis'd his Talent in the Italian, with no leſs Succeſs than in the Latin Language. * Julius Cæſar Scaliger, Hypercritic. lib. 6. poet. cap 4. Paulus Jovius, Elog. Hieronym. Fracaſter, in Dial. de Art. Poet. in nomem Naugerius, &c.

* NAVARRE. For Ferdinand ſeiz'd that Kingdom ann. 1523. in Morery Vol. II. read ann. 1512.

NAZARENES: a Name given generally at firſt to all the Chriſtians, becauſe our Saviour was commonly thought to be born at Nazareth. 'Twas afterwards the Name of a Sect of Chriſtians, who with their Chriſtianity retain'd Circumciſion, with the Ceremonies of the Moſaick Law. 'Tis ſaid they believe our bleſſed Saviour to have been only a mere Man. St. Epiphanius reports that this Sect began when the Chriſtians retir'd from Jeruſalem to Pella, before the laſt Siege of Jeruſalem. He obſerves there was a great many of 'em in Beræa, in Cælo-Syria, in Decapolis, in Bazanitidis, and near Pella or Pera; from whence they were call'd Peratici according to Clemens Alexandrinus, and Symmachiani, as Fauſtus informs us, becauſe they made uſe of the Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament done by Symmachus. They had likewiſe a Goſpel in Hebrew. Acts xxiv. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 9. Theodorit, de Hær. fab. lib. 2. Baron. in Appar. & Annal. A. C. 9. & 74.

NECHEPSOS, King of Ægypt of the third Dynaſty of the Saites, began to Reign 698 years before the Incarnation. Stephinates was his Father and Bocchoris his Grandfather. He reign'd ſix Years. There was a famous Ægyptian Aſtrologer of this Name, whether 'twas this Prince or ſome other Perſon, 'tis uncertain: The Poet Auſonius mentions him thus;

Quique Magos docuit Myſteria vana Nechepſos.

Julius Firmicus reports him a King of Ægypt and a good Aſtronomer, and affirms that he had made a Collection of ſigns for predicting the Misfortunes that were to happen to every one, which Misfortunes he believ'd were brought upon People by different and contrary Powers.

NECHO II, call'd in Scripture Necho and Pharaoh Necho, Son of Pſammitichus King of Egypt. He ſucceeded his Father in the Year of the World three thouſand three hundred and eighty eight, and Six hundred and Sixteen before the Chriſtian Æra: This Prince in the beginning of his Reign endeavour'd to draw a Canal from the Nile to the Red Sea: But here, having loſt an hundred and twenty thouſand Men, he was forc'd to give over the undertaking before 'twas half finiſh'd. Some time after he engag'd ſome Phœnician Sailers to make the Tour of Africk by Sea. They embark'd upon the Arabian or Red Sea, from whence they fell into the Ocean, doubled the Cape of Good Hope, cut the Line upon the Coaſt of Guinea, ſail'd up to the Streights of Gibraltar, enter'd the Mediterranean, and three Years after their ſetting out, return'd that way to Ægypt, in the Year of the World 3394, and 610 before the Incarnation. Necho engag'd in a War againſt the Babylonians, who had invaded the Aſſyrian Empire. Joſiah King of Judah unadviſedly marching againſt this Prince, was defeated and kill'd in the Valley of Megiddo, upon the Frontier of the Tribe of Manaſſes. Necho's Expedition againſt the Aſſyrians was very ſucceſsful: Three Months after his Countermarching his Forces through Judæa, he depos'd Jehoaaz whom the Jews had ſet up for King, and put his Brother Eliakim in his Place: But he enjoy'd his Victory againſt the Babylonians but a little while; For Nabopalaſſar King of Babylon provok'd with the Revolt of Lower Syria and Phœnicia, ſent his Son Nebucodonoſor with a powerful Army againſt the Ægyptians. This young Prince defeated 'em the Year following, carried his Conqueſts from Euphrates to the Nile, and ſhut up Necho within the Limits of Ægypt. He dy'd after having reigned ſixteen Years, in the Year of the World 3404 and 600 before the Incarnation. Kings* 2 chap. 23, 24. Herodot. lib. 2. cap. 139. lib. 4. cap. 142. & 158.

NEERCASSEL (John de,) Biſhop of the Roman Catholicks in Holland, was born at Gorkum, and conſecrated A. D. 1662. with the Title of Biſhop of Caſtozie, and was the Pope's Vicar General in Holland. He had been of the Congregation of the Prieſts of the Oratory: He acquitted himſelf in his Epiſcopal Function with great Zeal and Application. He dy'd June 1686 ſixty Years of Age. He has three Latin Tracts extant much commended by Du Pin for Unction and Argument. His firſt Tract inſtructs how the Scripture ought to be read, and points at the Judge that is to interpret it: His ſecond Book entitled, Amor Pœnitens, ſhews the Love of God a Neceſſary requiſite in the Sacrament, as he calls it, of Penance: His third Book is de Cultu Dei & ſanctæ Virginis. * Du Pin. new Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

NEERDA, a City in the Province of Babylon upon the Euphrates. 'Twas well fortify'd, and for that reaſon the Jews, who liv'd in Meſopotamia, lodg'd their Money there, which they dedicated to God, and ſent to Jeruſalem with a good Guard, for fear of being robbed by the Parthians who were then Maſters of Babylon. * Joſeph Antiquit. lib. 18. cap. 12.

NELEUS, Son of Neptune and the Nymph Tyro, Daughter to Salmoneus; who being chas'd out of Theſſaly by his Brother Pelias, retir'd into the Territory of Lacedæmon, where he built the Town Pylos. He married Chloris Daughter to King Amphion of Orchomene, by whom he had twelve Sons: He kill'd eleven of 'em, and if Neſtor the twelfth had not been out of the Way by Chance, he had ſhar'd the ſame Fate. * Ovid. Metamorph. lib. 12.

NEMESIANUS (St.) and his Colleagues, the Biſhops, Confeſſors, and Martyrs in Africk, made a noble Profeſſion of their Faith before Aſpaſius Paternus Proconſul of Africk: 'Twas in the Year of our Lord 257 during the Perſecution under Valerian. 'Twas to theſe Confeſſors that St. Cyprian directs his ſeventy ſeventh Epiſtle; moſt Part of 'em had aſſiſted at the Council of Carthage held the Year before, where St. Cyprian's Sentiment concerning rebaptizing Hereticks was approv'd. It appears by St. Cyprian's Letter that many of theſe Confeſſors had gone through a glorious Martyrdom, and that the reſt condemn'd to the Mines, Quarries, or impriſon'd, expected the ſame Exit. Nemeſian wrote three Letters by Way of Anſwer to St. Cyprian. Theſe holy Confeſſors are ſet to the firſt of September in the Martyrologies. In an old African Martyrology there is one Nemeſianus plac'd at the 20th of December; but ſome are of Opinion that this Nemeſianus is an infant Martyr mention'd by St. Auſtin in his 286th Sermon. * Cyprian Epiſt. 77, 78, 79, & 80. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

* NEMESIUS, a Philoſopher. There's a Book of his extant de Naturâ Hominis; here he confutes the Manichæans, the Apollinarians and the Eunomians; but then he maintains Origen's Sentiment concerning the Preexiſtence of Souls: This Tract has been tranſlated from the Greek into Latin by Valla and Ellibodius. The Original and Verſion are inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

NEOCULA, Daughter to Lycambis the Theban: Her Father had promis'd her in Marriage to the Poet Archilochus, but afterwards repented the Engagement and broke his Word: Archilochus, by Way of Revenge, play'd his Satyr in Iambicks hard upon him, and teaz'd him to Death. * Horat. de Art. Poet. Hofman. Lexic. Univerſ.

NEPENTHES. There's ſcarce any Thing more talk'd on and leſs known than Homer's Nepenthes. Some take it for the Plant Helenium, and pretend that Helen made uſe of it to divert the Melancholy of thoſe who entertain'd her. Pliny allows it the ſame Quality, and reports it good for diſpelling Grief when taken in Wine. Euſtathius upon Homer obſerves that the Poet has given an hyperbolical Deſcription of this Plant; and therefore we are not to ſtrain him up to the Letter, where he tells us that Nepenthes will blunt the Edge of the ſharpeſt Anguiſh, and take out the Sting of any Calamity; ſo that a Man may ſee his Father or Mother dye without the leaſt Regret, and his Children murthered without ſhedding a Tear. Some are of Opinion that Nepenthes is only a poetical Fiction of Homer, and when you come out of the Allegory it means no more than that Helena ſeaſon'd the Meat and the Wine with diverting Stories at Table, which help'd her Landlords &c. to forget the Miſchiefs ſhe had done them. Plutarch, Athenæus, Macrobius and Philoſtratus are of this Opinion: And Euſtathius himſelf, tho' he does not deny but that Homer may be hiſtorically underſtood, yet he prefers the figurative or allegorical Senſe. But Theophraſtus, Diodorus Siculus and Juſtin Martyr are poſitive that Nepenthes is a Plant; Diodorus reports that in his time, that is in the Reign of Auguſtus, when the Romans were well acquainted with the Ægyptian Cuſtoms; this Hiſtorian, I ſay, reports that the Women of Thebes in Ægypt made uſe of this Plant for the Purpoſes abovemention'd. Theſe Sort of Plants are at preſent more common among the Ægyptians and eaſtern People, than in the Weſt. However; there are ſome Plants in Europe, as Bugloſs and Saffron, which have this reviving Quality. Arec, which the Arabians call Faufel, throws a Gayety into the Mind, even to Extravagance, and which ſometimes mounts to a Sort of Madneſs; for which Reaſon in the Mogul's Country the uſe of it is not generally allow'd. The Plant Dutroa, famous in America, produces a Grain or Seed like that in Melons, which being infus'd in Wine, makes People fooliſhly merry, and laugh violently a great while together. This Effect has Reſemblance to what Diodorus Siculus reports of the prodigious Inſenſibility of certain Æthiopian Troglodites, who as he tells us, ſtood like Stocks when any Stranger accoſted 'em, and that without giving the leaſt Sign of taking care of themſelves. For they would take Blows and Cuts without giving any Indication of Pain: This might poſſibly be the Effect of ſome Nepenthes which theſe ſtupid People had taken. Now, Travellers, who met with none of 'em but thoſe who liv'd upon the Coaſt, fancy'd the whole Country ſtock'd with ſuch ſort of Blockheads. We are to obſerve further that Nepenthes, in Greek Νηπενθὲς, is not the proper Name of this Plant, but an Epithet which ſignifies a Remedy againſt Grief and Pain; and thus the true Name being not diſcover'd, 'tis hard to know this exrtaordinary Plant ſo much magnify'd by Homer: The Reader ſhall have one Verſe of his flouriſhing upon it Odyſſ. Δ.

Νηπενθὲς τ' ἀχολόντε, κακῶν ἐπίληθον ἁπάντων.

that is, this Plant chaſes away Grief and Melancholy, and makes a Man forget all his Misfortunes. * Diſſertat. de Mr. Petit ſur le Nepenthes en 1689.

NEPOTIAN, an Italian Prieſt, one of St. Jerom's Friends, was bred by his Uncle Heliodorus Biſhop of Altino. St. Jerom wrote a Letter to him, where he lays down Rules how the Clergy ought to behave themſelves; all which were practis'd by Nepotian to a great Exactneſs. He dy'd very young about the End of the fourth Century; his Memory ſtands at the 11th of May in the Martyrology. * Hieron. Epiſt. ad Nepot.

NERIUS, Duke of Athens after Antonios Acciaioli, natural Son to Rainiero Acciaioli, a Genoeſe, who was expell'd by Chalcondylas. His Brother Antonio Nerio ſucceeded him; after whoſe Death another Nerio govern'd, Antonio leaving an Infant under his Mother's Guardianſhip: The Mother falling in Love with a noble Venetian, Son to Piero Palmerio Governor of Napoli, now call'd Napoli di Romania, prevail'd with him to part with his Wife, promiſing withal to marry him, and make him Maſter of the Duchy of Athens. This wrong Step embroyl'd Matters very much, and was the Occaſion of a great deal of Murther; becauſe Francus Acciaioli, Couſin to the Minor, pretended a Right to be his Guardian, and by Conſequence to be Governour of Athens during his Minority. This Francus finding himſelf an Overbalance, expell'd the Venetian, and in the Year 1451. had the Title of Duke granted him by Mahomet II. Son of Amurath II. But the Grand Seignior being afterwards inform'd that this new Duke held a private Correſpondence with the Prince of Bœotia, he order'd Omar Governor of Theſſaly to march againſt Francus: Omar making himſelf Maſter of Athens, put a Gariſon in the Citadel, and from this Time the Town has remain'd in the Turks Hands. * Chalcondylas, lib. 9. pag. 299, 300. Franc. Roſſeus, Archeol. Attic. &c.

NETHENIMS, were a ſervile Clan amongſt the Iſraelites, whoſe Buſineſs it was to draw Water and hew Wood for the Tabernacle and Temple. They were neither Levites nor Iſraelites, but Deſcendants from the Gibeonites, who had circumvented Joſhua, making him believe they came from a remote Country, when they liv'd in the Neighbourhood: Their Name is deriv'd from the Hebrew Nathan, as much as to ſay, Deſtin'd or Appointed; their Buſineſs being to ſerve the Levites and Prieſts in the loweſt Offices. In the Reigns of David and Solomon, more of the conquer'd Canaanites joyn'd 'em for the ſame Employment: Their Buſineſs was very mean, as appears by this Paſſage in Deuteronomy, where after the beſt Ranks and Diſtinctions of the Iſraelites are mention'd, 'tis added, the Stranger which is in thy Camp, from the Hewer of thy Wood unto the Drawer of thy Water. They took the Name of Nethenims in David's time, and under this Denomination they are always mention'd in Eſrah and Nehemiah: They were forbidden to intermarry with the Iſraelites, by an Order, as 'tis ſaid, made by Joſhua, and reviv'd by David; the Reaſon why this King made the Prohibition perpetual, was partly, as 'tis ſuppos'd, to puniſh 'em for their cruel Demand, that ſeven of Saul's Family might be executed, which was done accordingly. * Deuter. 29. 11. Joſhua 9. 22. Selden, de Jure Nat. & Gent. Godwin, de Ritib. Hebr. cap. 5. Burman. Expoſit. in Joſh.

NETTANCOURT. The Family of Nettancourt, which is that of the Counts of Vaubecourt, is one of the moſt ancient noble Families in Champagne, and has produc'd Perſons of great Figure in the military Profeſſion: They take their Name from the Town and Caſtle of Nettancourt, which has been five hundred Years in the Family: It ſtands four Leagues from Barle-Duc, upon the ſmall River Chel, which parts Champagne from the Territory of Bar.

I ſhall only mention one of this Family, that is, Lewis-Claude de Nettancourt, Count de Vaubecourt, &c. The Count de Vaubecourt his Father order'd him to make his firſt Campaigns with the King's Houſhold; and in the Year 1677 the French King gave him the Regiment of Foot which had been commanded by his Anceſtors. He was Inſpector or Comptroller General of the Infantry 1687, Brigadier in 1688, Field Marſhal in 1692, and his Majeſty Lewis XIV. made him Lieutenant General in 1696: He began to ſignalize himſelf at the Head of his Regiment at the Siege of Fribourg in 1677. The next Year he was dangerouſly wounded in the Head by a Muſket Bullet at the Siege of Liecktemberg, where his Brother the Chevalier de Vaubecourt was kill'd. In the Year 1684 he behav'd himſelf with great Bravery at the Siege of Luxembourg, where he charg'd in the Aſſault, and mounted the Ramparts ſeveral times at the Head of his Regiment. In the Year 1688 he was wounded in the Head with a Muſket Ball at the Siege of Philipsbourg: He had his Share in the Sieges of Mons, Aeth and Valence: In the Year 1693 he was at the Attack of the Poſt of Zueveghinberg, where having the Command of a Body of Grenadiers to ſupport thoſe who went upon the Attack, and ſeeing theſe begin to ſtagger, and not bear the Enemy's Fire, he threw himſelf at the Head of 'em, rally'd 'em up to the Paliſade and forc'd it: In this Action he was wounded by the burſting of a Grenadoe, had his Foot diſabled, and one of his Aides de Camp kill'd by him. The War recommencing in 1700, he was ſent into Italy with Mareſchal Catinat in 1701; and the King of Spain taking the Command of the Army after the Battel of Luzara in 1702, this Count had the Direction of the Siege of Guaſtalla, where he manag'd to great Satisfaction, and made himſelf Maſter of the Place in ten Days: The ſame Winter he commanded at Carpi in the Territory of Modena, took the Poſt of Bondanelle Sword in Hand, tho' lately fortify'd by the Enemy: He was at the Siege of Verceil in the Year 1704, where he ventur'd his Perſon ſeveral times, and had one Aide de Camp kill'd by his Side, and another dangerouſly wounded. After the Surrender of the Town the King made him Governor of it, and of the Country within its Juriſdiction. The Duke of Vendôme afterwards ſitting down before Verue, which held out a long time, ſent for the Count de Vaubecourt and order'd him to attack a Fort upon the Pô, which keeping a Communication open between the Duke of Savoy's Army and the Town, made the carrying it impracticable: And here this Count behaving himſelf with extraordinary Bravery took the Fort, which Succeſs was follow'd with the Surrender of Verue in 1705. The ſame Year the Duke of Vendôme returning to the Army in Lombardy, left the Command of the Forces in Piedmont to Vaubecourt: This Count receiving Advice that a great Detachment of the Enemy had penetrated into the Milaneſe, march'd from Verceil at the Head of a Body of Troops to intercept 'em; and coming up with the Enemy at the Teſine near Vigevano, he gave a briſk Onſet; but being enclos'd and overlaid with Numbers, he was kill'd May 17, 1705, and his Corpſe carry'd to Verceil, where he lies buried in the Barnabites Church: His Family had his Heart carry'd to Vaubecourt, where his Anceſtors are interr'd. * Archives des Ducs de Lorraine. Paris Supplement to Morery.

* NEUFCHASTEL, in Highdutch Newembourg, in Latin Novocomum. This Town ſuffer'd very much by a Fire in 1714, which lay'd a great part of it in Aſhes. The Earldom of Neufchâtel lies between the Franche-Comté, the Canton of Berne, and the Lakes of Neufchâtel and Bienne: The Extent is but ſmall, but the Country is Populous and the Soil very good. Philip only Son to Rodolphus Count of Nufchâtel left Iſſue by Mary of Savoy, Daughter to Amadeus the Happy Duke of Savoy and Yoland of France, Jane, who brought the Earldom of Neufchâtel to Lewis of Orleans Duke of Longueville whom ſhe married in 1504. Francis Son to Lewis dying without Iſſue 1551, Leonor of Orleans his Couſin and Marquis of Rothelin ſucceeded him. James of Savoy Duke of Nemours, deſcended from Philip and Charlotte of Orleans, Siſter to Lewis Duke of Longueville, claim'd a Moiety, of this Earldom: Leonor upon ſome Conditions conſented that James ſhould be veſted in a Moiety: But the Eſtates of the Country refus'd to agree to this Grant, excepting with a Proviſo that there ſhould be but one Chief Lord. This Condition not being perform'd in the Year 1557, the States ſummon'd the Dukes of Longueville and Nemours before the Council of Berne, to oblige 'em to execute the Condition upon which the Moiety was granted: And here, the Proviſo being prov'd, the whole Earldom of Neufchâtel was adjudg'd to the Duke of Longueville. The Duke of Nemours having by Way of Compenſation an Allowance of two thouſand Livres per Annum, and two thouſand Crowns in Money; ſome Lands in the Duchy of Burgundy being charg'd for the Payment of the firſt, and the Town of Neufchâtel for the other. Leonor by Mary of Bourbon had Iſſue Henry I, who by Catherine of Gonzaga had Henry II, who dying in the Year 1663, left Iſſue by his firſt Marriage with Loviſa of Bourbon, Daughter to Charles of Bourbon, Count of Soiſſons, Mary of Orleans, married to Henry of Savoy, Duke of Nemours, who in the Year 1657 renounc'd in his Marriage Articles all Right and Claim under his Father and Brothers, upon the Conſideration of five hundred thouſand Livres, to which his Father added ninety thouſand Livres. This Henry II. after the Death of his Ducheſs marry'd Ann-Genivieve of Bourbon, Daughter to Henry of Bourbon Prince of Condé; by whom he had John-Lewis Charles, and Charles-Paris: The firſt in the Year 1668 made a Grant of the Earldom of Neufchâtel to his Brother, upon Condition, that in Caſe he dy'd without Iſſue all the Right and Emoluments of the Earldom ſhould revert to him. This Caſe coming up in 1672 he enter'd upon the whole; the Ducheſs of Nemours his Siſter claim'd to ſucceed him in the Earldom of Neufchâtel: The Cauſe was brought before the States of the Country, who ſetting aſide her Claim, adjudg'd the Sovereignty to her Brother, in virtue of the Renunciation ſhe had made, and likewiſe upon the ſcore of the Clauſe of Reverſion, ſpecify'd in the Grant; and becauſe the Sovereignty is indiviſible, and that the Iſſue Male are to ſucceed in Excluſion of the Females. John-Lewis-Charles of Orleans dying January 4, 1694, Mary of Orleans, Ducheſs of Nemours, ſucceeded him, and enjoy'd this Principality till ſhe dy'd, without leaving Iſſue, June 16, 1707. She made Lewis-Henry de Bourbon Soiſſons her Couſin, call'd the Prince of Neufchâtel, her ſole Heir: But the King of Pruſſia has ſince claim'd as Heir to William Count of Naſſau and Prince of Orange. The States of the Country have given Judgment in his Favour, and having enter'd upon the Premiſſes, his Poſſeſſion has been confirm'd by the Peace of Utrecht. The County of Neufchâtel is an hereditary Sovereignty and impartible; and the Females ſucceed only in Default of Iſſue Male; and the younger Brothers have only an Appennage or an Annuity; but formerly they had ſome Lands aſſign'd 'em, which they held of the Earl by Fealty, and Homage. Some Authors are of Opinion that this Earldom held formerly of the Empire; their Evidence is a Deed or Inſtrument dated 1294, in which Rodolphus Lord of Neufchâtel declares himſelf within the Fealty and Homage of the King of Germany: But this Proof is not ſufficient to make the Earldom a Fief of the Empire; and beſides there is ſome Reaſon to believe the Record may be forg'd; the Prince at his coming to the Sovereignty ſwears that he will inviolably obſerve the Uſages and Cuſtoms of the Country Written and Unwritten: And after this Oath he is oblig'd to ask Inveſtiture of the States. He is an Ally of the Cantons of Berne, Lucerne, Fribourg and Soleurre: And ſince the Year 1406 there has been a Treaty as it were of Incorporation between the Counts of Neufchâtel, and the Canton of Berne, by virtue of which the Counts of Neufchâtel have referr'd all the Differences which may ariſe between themſelves and the Burghers of Neufchâtel, to the Arbitration of the Council of Berne. The ſupreme Court of Juſtice is lodg'd in the three Eſtates, who determine in the laſt Reſort concerning the Titles of all real Eſtates: They conſiſt of twelve Judges, who receive their Commiſſion from their Prince, and take particular Oaths to him: Four of 'em repreſent the Nobility, four the Officers, and four the third Eſtate. They had formerly only a limited Power, and there lay an Appeal from their Deciſion to the General Audiences: But ſince the Suppreſſion of the Audiences their Power is abſolute. Theſe Audiences were general Aſſemblies made up of the Nobility, the Officers and Burghers, and four Bannerets, which made 'em reſemble the States General of other Countries: At theſe Meetings they debated all Affairs relating to the publick Good, made Laws and try'd Cauſes without Appeal: They had no ſtated times for convening; all the Vaſſals, or who held of the Earl, had a Right to aſſiſt there, and they were ſummon'd by their Sovereign. But it being impracticable for 'em to meet without great Expence; and becauſe ſince the Alteration of Religion, and the Nobleſſe refuſing to allow the four Bannerets to repreſent the Canons, and the Commonalty diſagreeing upon this Head, theſe Audiences were ſuppreſs'd by an Act in the Year 1618; where it was enacted that the Prince ſhould be empower'd to convene 'em for Legiſlation; and that the Body ſhould be made up only of thoſe the Prince ſhould think fit to ſummon; and that for the future the States ſhould judge all Sorts of Cauſes without Appeal, which has ſince been exactly obſerv'd. The Earldom of Neufchâtel is made up of the Caſtellanies of Thielle, Landeron, and Boudry, and the Mayoralties of Neufchâtel and Rochfort. Neufchâtel is a ſmall City, but handſomly built; 'tis fortify'd with a Caſtle ſituate on the Top of a Hill: The Earldom of Valengin holds of that of Neufchâtel; 'twas diſmember'd from it by Ulrick Lord of Neufchâtel, who made a Grant of it to his youngeſt Son; it fell afterwards into the Hands of the Houſe of Arberg, from whence it paſs'd to the Counts of Montbeliard, who in the Year 1592 ſold it to Mary de Bourbon, Ducheſs of Longueville, Mother and Guardian to Henry I. Valengin is a ſmall Town, but gives Name to a large Caſtellany. * Audiffret, Geographie. Memoires du Tems.

NICAISE (Claude), was extracted from a good Family in Dijon capital of the Duchy of Burgundy. He choſe to be an Eccleſiaſtick imagining that Profeſſion would ſuit beſt with his Inclination for Study; He made a conſiderable Progreſs in Books, and had a Character of Diſtinction in the Commonwealth of learning. He apply'd himſelf particularly to the Buſineſs of an Antiquary, for which purpoſe he travel'd to Rome and liv'd there many Years: And here he had the Eſteem and Friendſhip of ſeveral learned Perſons of the firſt Rank, with whom he held an Epiſtolary Correſpondence after his Return to France. The Cardinals Barberigo and Noris wrote ſeveral Times to him, and ſo did Pope Clement XI. before his Promotion to the Pontificate. All the Letters he wrote and receiv'd, would make a very beautiful and curious Collection. In 1689 he printed a Latin Diſſertation at Lyons de Nummo Pantheo which he dedicated to Mr. Spanheim. the ſame Yaer he publiſh'd an Explanation of an old Monument found in Guienne in the Dioceſe of Auſch: And in 1691 he printed a Diſcourſe concerning the Form and Figure of the Syrenes, where, according to the learned Huetius's Opinion, he makes it appear that the Syrenes were Birds, and not Fiſhes or Sea Monſters. Somewhat before this Time he tranſlated Mr. Bellori's Italian Book into French, in which a Deſcription is given of the Pictures in the Vatican: And here, the Tranſlator has added a Diſcourſe upon the School of Athens, and upon Parnaſſus, which are two Paintings of Raphaël's. He likewiſe wrote a ſmall Tract of the Muſick of the Ancients: And dy'd while he was working upon the explaining an old Inſcription, MINERVÆ ARNALIÆ, his Life is ſaid to have been very unblemiſh'd: He dy'd in October 1701. ſeventy eight Years of Age. * Memoires pour l' Hiſtoire des ſciences & des beaux Arts. Janv. & Fevr. 1702 pag. 38. Edit. de Holl. Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, Avril, 1702. pag. 472.

NICEPHORUS (St.) a Martyr of Antioch during the Perſecution rais'd by the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus A. D. 260. The Acts of his Martyrdom report him a Plain Layman, and that he had made a friendly Acquaintance with one Sapricius a Prieſt. They happening to fall out, Nicephorus did his utmoſt to make up the Breach, but could not compaſs it. The Perſecution breaking out, Sapricius was ſeiz'd for his Religion, put to the Queſtion, and having gone through Variety of Torture with commendable Reſolution, was condemn'd to be beheaded. Nicephorus, as they were leading the Prieſt to Execution, came to him and intreated him to be reconcil'd, which reaſonable Requeſt was unhappily refus'd by Sapricius: I ſay unhappily, for mounting the Scaffold in ſo uncharitable a Diſpoſition, he renounc'd the Chriſtian Religion. Nicephorus did what he could to make him perſevere, but to no Purpoſe: However, being ſenſibly afflicted for his Apoſtaſy, he declar'd himſelf a Chriſtian. The Governor underſtanding that Sapricius was willing to ſacrifice to the Gods, but that there was another who endeavour'd to diſſuade him, and who had openly declar'd himſelf a Chriſtian, gave Sentence that if this latter refus'd to ſacrifice, he ſhould loſe his Head. And thus Nicephorus gain'd the Crown of Martyrdom, which Sapricius loſt for want of Charity. * Acta apud Ruinart. Tillemont, Mem. Eccleſiaſtick. Baillet, Vies des Saints au 9 Fevrier.

NICEPHORUS BLEMMIDAS, a Prieſt and Monk of Mount Athos, refus'd the Patriarchate of Conſtantinople and flouriſh'd in the thirteenth Century. He leaned towards the Latin Communion, and was more enclin'd to an Accommodation than any of the Greeks of that Age. 'Twas with this View that he wrote two Tracts concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt; one of 'em dedicated to James Patriarch of Bulgaria and the other to the Emperor Theodorus Laſcaris. Here, he argues againſt the Sentiment of thoſe who maintain that that we ought not ſay the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Father by the Son. Theſe two Tracts are printed in Greek and Latin in Allatius's Græcia Orthodoxa. Allatius has likewiſe publiſh'd an Epiſtle of Blemmidas's, written after Marcheſima the Emperor John Ducas's Wench was expell'd the Church of Nicephorus's Monaſtery. There are a great many other of Blemmidas's Works in the Vatican Library. * Geſner, in Biblioth. Poſſevin. in Appar. Sacr. Spondan. in Annal. Leo Allatius, Græcia Orthod. & de conſenſu Eccleſiæ Orient. & Occid.

NICETAS, ſirnam'd Seidus, ſuppos'd to live in the beginning of the eleventh Century, wrote a Tract againſt the Latins, the Deſign of which is to prove that old Rome upon the Score of her Antiquity, has no better claim to Regard than new Rome, that is, Conſtantinople. Leo Allatius cites ſeveral Fragments from this Tract. * Allatius, de Eccleſ. Orient. & Occident. Conſens Du Pin, new Eccleſ. library, Cent. XI.

NICIAS, Phyſician to Pyrrhus King of Epirus, made Fabricius the Roman General a Viſit, and promiſs'd him to poiſon Pyrrhus; but Fabricius abhorring ſo baſe a Piece of Treachery, gave Pyrrhus notice of what paſs'd, and bid him have a Care of his Phyſician. This Nicias is mention'd in Theocritus, and Stobæus cites a Book of his upon precious Stones. He liv'd in the 125th Olympiad, and 280 Years before the Incarnation. * Plutarch. Hofman, Lexic. univerſ.

NICOLAI (John) born at Verdun, took the Habit of a Dominican at 16 Years of Age, and after having gone through the cuſtomary Courſe of Study at Paris, he took the Degree of Doctor in Divinity there in 1632. He publiſh'd an Edition of Thomas Aquinas's Summes at Lyons in the Year 1669. He wrote Diſſertations upon ſeveral Points of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline againſt M. de Launoi; the firſt concerning a general or plenary Council, whoſe Deciſion St. Auſtin reports concerning the Baptiſm of Hereticks, which Nicolai pretends was the Council of Nice, and not that of Arles; two Diſſertations upon the Sacrament of Baptiſm, in the firſt of which he pretends 'twas not ſolemnly adminiſter'd in any Part of the ancient Church, excepting at Eaſter and Whitſontide; in his ſecond he proves that Jews and Infidels ought not to be forc'd to have their Children baptiz'd: He is likewiſe the Author of two Diſſertations, in which he contradicts Launoi's Sentiment upon Faſting, where he pretends that Fleſh eaten in Caſe of Neceſſity amounts to a Diſpenſation; in his other Diſſertation he defends ſome Paſſages cited by Thomas Aquinas in the Catena aurea: * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XVII.

NICOLAS D' OTRANTO, flouriſh'd at Conſtantinople in the Beginning of the thirteenth Century. He was Interpreter at the Conferences which Cardinal Bennet ſent to Conſtantinople by Pope Innocent III, had with ſome of the Greek Church upon the Points of Diſference between 'em: He wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt the Latins; amongſt others, a Diſcourſe concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt againſt Hugo Etherianus; a Tract to prove that our bleſſed Saviour made uſe of leaven'd Bread at his laſt Supper; another concerning the Faſt upon Saturday, the Marriage of Prieſts, and the other Differences between the Latin and Greek Church. Theſe Books are cited by Allatius, who has made ſome Extracts out of 'em. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XIII.

NICOLAS WALSH, born in Ireland in the ſixteenth Century, was ſent to the Univerſity of Cambridge, where he made an extraordinary Progreſs. He was choſen Chancellour of Sr. Patrick's Church at Dublin, and ſoon after was promoted to the See of Oſſory A. D. 1577. four Years before, he began a tranſlation of the New Teſtament into Iriſh. His Deſign was afterwards executed by William Daniel Doctor in Divinity and Archbiſhop of Tuam, who publiſh'd this Tranſlation from the Greek Text A. D. 1623. An unhappy Accident hinder'd Walſh from finiſhing this Verſion. For having ſummon'd one James Dullard into his ſpiritual Court for Adultery; this Man out of Revenge came to Kilkenny, and aſſaſſinated the Biſhop in his Palace, A. D. 1585. He has buried in the Cathedral of Kilkenny under a Marble Tomb. * Jac. Waræus, de clar. Hibern. Scriptor. lib. I.

* NICOLE (Peter.) In his firſt ſtudies he apply'd himſelf to the Belles Lettres, and ſucceeded ſo far as to come up to a cloſe Imitation of the beſt Latin Authors. He afterwards exercis'd his Pen in French, and wrote very politely in that Language. His Logick was generally good upon the Argument. Afterwards turning his Thoughts to Divinity, he wrote ſeveral Pieces in Latin in Defence of Janſenius. He tranſlated Paſchal's provincial Letters under the Name of Guilelmus Wendrokius, which is reckon'd a Maſterpiece, and comes up to the Original: To this he ſubjoyn'd very curious Notes, ſince tranſlated into French by Mademoiſelle Joncourt. Afterwards he wrote a great many French Tracts upon the Diſputes relating to Janſenius; and amongſt the reſt, one entitled les Lettres imaginaires & Viſionaires, which gain'd him a great Reputation. He dy'd at Paris November 16, 1695. I ſhall mention ſome few of his anonymous Works.

The Perpetuity of the Faith of the Catholick Church concerning the Euchariſt, with a Confutation of a Tract written by the Miniſter Claude.

I. II. and III. Tomes of the great Perpetuity of the Faith; the two laſt of which are entirely Nicole's.

A general Anſwer to a new Book of M. Claude's.

A Conference between the Devil and Luther, and an Examination of four Paſſages in Claude's laſt Book.

The pretended Reform'd convicted of Schiſm.

Of the Unity of the Church, or a Refutation of the Miniſter Jurieu's new Syſtem.

A Refutation of the chief Errors held by the Quietiſts.

Theological and moral Inſtructions upon the Lord's Prayer, the Angel's Salutation, the holy Maſs, and other Prayers of the Church, &c.

NICOMEDES III, Son of Nicomedes Philopator, was declar'd Heir to the Kingdom of Bithynia by the Romans, and quickly dethron'd by his elder Brother Socrates, ſirnam'd likewiſe Nicomedes and Chreſtus. Upon his being diſpoſſeſs'd he retir'd for Protection to Rome, and was reſtor'd by Manius Aquilius and Maltinus: The ſame Year, which was the eighty ninth before the Incarnation, the Romans oblig'd Nicomedes to make an Incurſion into Mithridates's Territories, from whence he brought off a great deal of Plunder, and by their Intereſt was for ſome time cover'd from the Revenge of this Prince, who had not yet come to an open Rupture with Rome: But 'twas not long before being routed by Mithridates's Troops, he loſt all his Baggage and fled into Paphlagonia; Bithynia in the mean time being over-run by the Enemy; but by the Treaty, which ended the firſt War between the Romans and Mithridates, eighty four Years before the Incarnation, Nicomedes was reſtor'd to his Dominions. Three Years forward Julius Cæſar was order'd by M. Thermus, Prætor of Aſia, to go into Bithynia, and bring ſome Shipping from thence: Cæſar ſtay'd ſome time there, and after his Return was reproach'd with being Nicomedes's Catamite. This Prince dy'd without Iſſue ſeventy nine Years before the Incarnation, and by his laſt Will left the Roman Republick Bythinia, which was reduc'd to a Province, * Juſtin. lib. 38. Appian. in Mithridat. & Bell. Civil. lib. 1. Sueton. in Julio, &c.

NIDDA (the Earldom of,) a ſmall Territory in Heſſia; it lies between the Earldoms of Solmes and Iſenbourg, and has nothing conſiderable in it, excepting the Town Nidda; it belongs to the Landgrave of Heſſe-Darmſtat. * Maty, Diction.

NIDER (John,) a German of the Order of the Fryars Prædicants, Inquiſitor in Germany, flouriſh'd at Vienna, and was one of the Repreſentatives of that Univerſity at the Council of Baſil, and by that Synod diſpatch'd to invite the Bohemians thither. He dy'd at Nuremberg A. D. 1438. He wrote ſeveral little Tracts upon moral and religious Subjects, viz. the Conſolation of a timorous Conſcience: An Exhortation to a Chriſtian Life, by way of Dialogue: A Commentary upon the Decalogue: The Art of living well: Three Books for reforming the Monks: A Diſcourſe concerning Buying and Selling: Sermons for the whole Year: Two Letters to the Bohemians; and ſome other Pieces in the Acts of the Council of Baſil. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. library, Cent. XV.

NIEMECZ, Nimiec, a ſtrong Town in Moldavia, it ſtands upon the Confines of Tranſylvania, between Soczowa and Cronſtat, ten Leagues from each: The Poles made themſelves Maſters of this Place in the Year 1691, but yielded it up by an Article of the Treaty at Carlowitz. * Maty, Diction.

NIGER, one of the braveſt Jews in his Time. He commanded in the Province of Idumea in the beginning of the War with the Romans, and diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in ſeveral Actions, eſpecially againſt Ceſtius Gallus at Gabaon and Askelon. And tho' he was always worſted he may be ſaid to have always had the better, becauſe had he been ſeconded, as he deſerv'd, Victory would never have fail'd him. He ſunk at laſt under the Barbarity of thoſe for whom he had ſo often hazarded his Life, and receiv'd a great many Wounds. Simon and John having uſurp'd the Government in Jeruſalem, and treating the People with unheard of Cruelty, would not endure any Body who could tax 'em with Inhumanity; and thus to skreen themſelves from Cenſure, were more violent againſt honeſt Men than againſt the Romans. Niger was one of the firſt they attack'd; they charg'd him with holding Correſpondence with the Romans, inſulted him with all Sorts of Outrage, and at laſt dragging him without the Walls of Jeruſalem, they had him ſton'd to Death, without allowing him the Liberty of making his Defence: All that he could do was to upbraid 'em with the Services he had done his Country; he ſhew'd 'em the Wounds he had receiv'd in the Courſe of the War, and perceiving they would refuſe him Burial, he lifted up his Hands to Heaven, and beg'd that the Romans might revenge his Blood; and that Famine, War, Peſtilence and mortal Diviſions, might puniſh their enormous Wickedneſs. Theſe Imprecations fell upon 'em effectually a little time after. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 14. cap. 20.

NIGROPOLI, a Town in the leſſer Tartary. It ſtands upon a River of the ſame Name about eight Leagues from it's falling into the Gulph of Nigropoli. At preſent the Town is almoſt quite ruin'd. This Gulph of Nigropoli is part of the black Sea. 'Tis about fourty Leagues long from South to North, and is ſurrounded by the Country of the Nagayan and the Crim Tartars, who are all under the Cham of Leſſer Tartary. * Maty, Diction.

* NILE (the,) a great River in Africk, call'd Nilus in Latin, and by the Natives Taneus or Abanhi, riſes in the upper Ethiopia in the Abyſſinian Dominions. In the middle of the Kingdom of Gojan, which lies in the twelfth Degree of the Southern Latitude to the Weſt, and in the Province of Sacahala inhabited by the Agaus, in a Field of a moderate Extent ſurrounded with Mountains, there's a little Lake a Stone's Throw in Diameter, full of Shrubs ſo cloſe twiſted together, that in Summer one may walk upon 'em: In the middle of this Lake there are two great and very deep Springs at a ſmall Diſtance from each other, from whence there iſſues a very clear Water, which runs under theſe Shrubs by two different Courſes to the Eaſt; and after having paſs'd the Length of a Musket Shot turns to the North. About half a League from theſe Fountains or Springs the Water is conſiderably increas'd, and makes a moderate River, which receives ſeveral other leſſer ones: After having run fifteen Leagues farther, the River Géma comes into it: A little beyond this it bends towards the Eaſt, and takes in the Kelti and the Branti, two other Rivers, near which it has its firſt Caſcade or Cataract; and continuing its Courſe to the Eaſt, it falls into the Lake of the Abyſſins call'd Bahr Dembea, or the Sea of Dembea: After having made its way through this Lake, it receives ſeveral other Rivers of conſiderable bigneſs, and amongſt the reſt the Tekezé near Ægypt. As ſoon as the Nile has got clear of the Lake of Dembea it turns to the South Weſt, leaving the Kingdoms of Beg to the Eaſt, and to the South the Kingdoms of Ambara and Voléca; then turning towards the South, it leaves the Kingdom of Suava to the South-Eaſt; and now taking a new Turn to the North-Eaſt, it leaves Ganz, Gafata and Bizamo to the South-Weſt, then paſſes forward by the Territories of Gonga and Gafre, and from thence advances through the Country of Faſcalo; and from thence into Funch or Nubia, and from thence into Ægypt. The Nile after its laſt Caſcade or Cataract near Iſvan runs from South to North with a very ſlow Stream, but full of Windings, dividing itſelf a little below Boulac in two great Arms, one of which falls into the Sea at Roſetta, and the other at Damietta: This laſt Arm at Sciobret, a Village ſtanding on the Weſtern Bank of the Nile between Grand Caire and Damietta, forms another Arm, which falls into the Mediterranean at Brullos. Beſides theſe three Streams there is a fourth artificial one, which is not full of Water more than thirty Days in the Year: This Arm begins at the Village Laiſ, which ſtands on the Weſtern Side of the Nile towards Roſetta, thirty Miles from Alexandria, and running to this latter City falls into the Sea there. At preſent there is no Appearance of any more Arms of the Nile than theſe four; tho' Herodotus, Strabo, and the Scripture itſelf (Iſaiah 11.) aſſure us there were ſeven: But the Face of Ægypt is ſo much chang'd from what 'twas formerly, that neither the Names, nor the Places where theſe ſeven Streams fell into the Sea, nor the ſeven Towns which ſtood by 'em can be recover'd. The Nile is call'd the Preſerver of the Upper Ægypt, upon the ſcore of its overflowing; and the Father of the Lower, becauſe of its Mud. Some are of St. Iſidore's Opinion that the Nile is the ſame with Gihon mention'd in Geneſis for one of the four Rivers of Paradiſe. This River overflows commonly in the Heat of Summer, when other Rivers are loweſt: This uncommon Swelling is neceſſary for the Subſiſtence of Ægypt, becauſe there is little or no Rain there. The Land is ſown immediately after the Decreaſe of the River: Both the Ancients and Moderns have aſſign'd ſeveral Reaſons for explaining this wonderful Phænomenon. Some will have it that the Eteſian Winds blowing conſtantly at the ſame time of the Year, and preſſing againſt the Courſe of the Nile, make it ſwell over the Banks: Others will have it, that the Overflowing comes from a Communication with the Sea: A third Opinion makes the Sand heap'd up at the Mouth of the River the Cauſe of this extraordinary Appearance; and others fanſy that the nitrous Quality of the Ægyptian Soil produces this Effect: But the moſt probable Solution of this Difficulty is, that the Rain, which falls in great Quantities in Æthiopia during the Months of June, July and Auguſt, ſupply more Water than the Channel of the Nile can receive. The Pagan Ægyptians believ'd their God Serapis was the Author of this ſurprizing Overflowing, and therefore when it happen'd to ſtop, or flow in a lower Degree, they us'd to ſacrifice one of the handſomeſt young Women they could find, and having dreſs'd her richly, threw her into the River as a Victim to make their pretended Deity propitious. This barbarous Worſhip was ſuppreſs'd, as the Arabian Hiſtorians report, by the Caliph Omar, who threw a Letter into the River, the Contents of which was to order the Nile to overflow if God ſo pleas'd. * Herodot. Ptolemy. Pliny. Strabo. Ortelius. Solin. Voſſius, de Nili Origine. Thevenot. Kircher, de Origine Nili. Ludolphus, Hiſt. Æthiop. P. Tellez, Hiſtor. Æthiop.

NILUS, Metropolitan of Rhodes, the Barlaamites Antagoniſt, liv'd in the fourteenth Century: He finiſh'd his abridg'd Hiſtory of the general Councils, with the Council of Conſtantinople, held under the Preſidency of Iſidore againſt Barlaam: This Work has been publiſh'd with Photius's Nomo-Canon by Juſtellus in his Bibliotheca Juris Canonici, and in the laſt Edition of the Councils. Allatius has printed a Diſcourſe of this Author, written by way of Panegyric upon a Lady in the Iſle of Chio. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIV.

NIMIROUF, in the Maps Niemirow, a large City of the ſecond Rank in Poland within the Palatinate of Ruſſia; 'tis all Timber-built, and has a conſiderable Pool, in the middle of which there's an Iſland with an old Caſtle; 'tis nine Leagues from Leopol. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

NINGIVE, a Town of China in the Province of Leoantung, upon the Confines of the Province of Peking, and of Great Tartary. * Maty, Diction.

NISSIN ABU-ALPHARAGIUS, Father of William de Moncada a converted Jew of the Arabian Family of Abu-Alpharage, who ſet up a Sadducean Sect in Spain, and wrote a Book againſt the Synagogue, the Ceremonies and Traditions of the Jews, mention'd by Harrawad in his Book of the Cabala. Niſſin Abu-Alpharagius was a great Caballiſt; he wrote upon a Square Plate of Gold, nine Letters in three Columns, each Column of which taken from the top to the bottom, and from the Left Hand makes fifteen, like the Name of God Jah. * Bartolocci, Biblioth. Rabb. Hiſt. des Juifs depuis J. C. juſqu' à préſent. Edit. Pariſ. in 12mo. 1710. p. 284.

NIXAPA, a Country of the Province of Guaxaca in New Spain; it has the South Sea to the South, and the Valley of Guaxaca to the North; the Town Nixapa is the Capital: It ſtands up in the Country upon a River; the Dominicans have a Convent there, but the Burghers both Spaniards and Mexicans are not above eight hundred: However, 'tis a wealthy Town, on account of the great Quantity of Indigo, Cochenille, Sugar, Cacao and Achiote, furniſh'd in the Country belonging to it. * Maty, Diction.

NOAILLES (Lewis-Antony de,) Cardinal with the Title of St. Mary Minerva, Archbiſhop of Paris, Commander of the King's Orders, Proviſor or Patron of the Houſe and Society of the Sorbonne, Superior of that of Navarre, a Prelate no leſs remarkable for his Exemplary Piety, than his illuſtrious Extraction. He perform'd his academical Exerciſes to great Commendation, and commenc'd Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris March 1676. In 1679 the King nominated him to the Biſhoprick of Cahors; he was tranſlated to Châlons upon the Marne in 1680; and in both theſe Dioceſes gave good Proof of his Vigilance and paſtoral Affection: When the Archbiſhoprick of Paris was void 1695 by the Death of Francis de Harlay, the King preferr'd him to that metrapolitical See. Upon his coming to Paris, he apply'd himſelf wholly to the Government of his Dioceſe, and made excellent Regulations for reforming the Clergy. He has the Character of being eaſy of Acceſs, and engaging in Converſation, and receives both Poor and Rich with the ſame good Nature and Affability, making it his Buſineſs to relieve the Indigent. He thought himſelf oblig'd to appear vigorouſly againſt the growing Fanaticiſm of the Quietiſts, which might otherwiſe have been attended with diſmal Conſequences, eſpecially in his Dioceſe. And having already cenſur'd theſe Errors at Châlons, he continu'd to ſuppreſs 'em when he was Archbiſhop of Paris. This being done firſt by Way of Deciſion, was further purſu'd by Inſtructions, in a Diſcourſe publiſh'd in 1697 and entitled; a paſtoral Inſtruction touching Chriſtian Perfection and the inward Life, againſt the Deluſions of the pretended Myſtiques, in which he lays down very prudent Rules for Directions in Devotion. He was no leſs zealous againſt Janſeniſm. To this purpoſe, he publiſh'd an Inſtruction upon the Queſtions debated concerning Predeſtination and Grace, giving his Clergy Precaution on one Side againſt the Errors condemn'd by the Popes, and on the other dilating upon the manner how theſe myſterious Points ought to be believ'd, according to St. Auſtin's Principles, and the Fathers who follow'd him: This was done in an Ordinance or Injunction, which he publiſh'd againſt a Book entitled, an Expoſition of the Faith touching Grace and Predeſtination. He likewiſe gave particular Inſtructions for ſettling the French Proteſtants brought over to the Roman Communion. P. Simon having printed a Tranſlation of the New Teſtament A. D. 1702 at Treavoux, in which there were Explanations and Notes, which might poſſibly prove ſhocking, the Archbiſhop of Paris, who was created Cardinal June 1700, thought himſelf oblig'd to forbid the reading it. The Reſolution of a Caſe of Conſcience drawn up by ſeveral Doctors of Divinity in Paris, in which mention is made of the Diſtinction between the Fact, and the Right, in Janſenius's Affair; this Reſolution, I ſay, having made a great Noiſe A. D. 1703, the Cardinal de Noailles cenſur'd it in an Order ſet forth the ſame Year. This Prelate, before he was made Cardinal, was pitch'd on to preſide in the Aſſembly of the Clergy held A. D. 1700; in which Aſſembly ſeveral Propoſitions relating to Belief and Morality were condemn'd. He has ſince preſided in all the ordinary and extraordinary Aſſemblies of the French Clergy. He likewiſe aſſiſted at the Conclave held 1700 when Clement XI. was choſen Pope. As to his Opinion and Conduct touching the Popes Conſtitution againſt P. Queſnel's Tranſlation of the New Teſtament, and moral Reflections upon it, the Recital of this Matter not only exceeds the Period of this Work, but is likewiſe too long for this Article. * Mem. du Tems.

NOBILIS & Nobiliſſimus; Charlemain's Children took the Title of Nobiliſſimi, which was likewiſe given to Bela King of Hungary. At preſent the Pope and College of Cardinals give the Diſtinction of Nobilis to Dukes and Princes, who don't carry a Regal Title, viz: To the Duke of Savoy, of Modena, Mantua and Parma, to Princes at Rome; to Dukes and Peers of France; and to thoſe of the ſame Quality in other Kingdoms. The Pope gives the Title of Nobilitas to the Doge of Venice; and to all Princes, Dukes and other Perſons of great Quality, to whom he gives the Diſtinction of Nobilis, * Mem. du Tems.

* NOETUS, an Hereſiarch, deſtroy'd the Diſtinction between the Nature and Perſons of the Trinity, and deny'd our Saviour's Divinity. Sabellius was his Scholar. Noetus dwelt at Epheſus or Smyrna, and publiſh'd his Heretodoxy in that part of Aſia in the beginning of the third Century. Upon his being ſummon'd before the Clergy, he retracted his Miſperſuaſion; but relapſing afterwards he was expell'd the Church, and ſet up a Sect. He took the Name of Moſes, and called a Brother of his Aaron; and both of 'em dy'd ſoon after their Revolt from the Church. * See Sabellius. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. III.

NOIR (John le,) Son of John le Noir Counſellor in the preſidial Court of Juſtice at Alençon, and Grandſon to another John le Noir, chief Clerk to the ſame Court. John in this Article was born at Alençon in December 1622; he was a Doctor in Divinity, and Prebendary of Seez in 1652: He preach'd with great Reputation at Paris, la Flêche, Beleſme, and ſeveral other Cities: He had afterwards a great deal of Trouble upon the ſcore of his Merit, and might have ſaid with Tully, non nos Vitia, ſed Virtutes afflixerunt: The firſt Diſturbances given him were at Argentan; this was done by a Company of Fanaticks, in Concert with thoſe of the Hermitage at Caën. The Extravagancies of theſe ſolitary People were very remarkable; their Cuſtom was to run about the Streets in great Numbers, and cry there was no Chriſtianity in France; they were expell'd Caën by a Sentence from the Bench; but then ſome of this Cabal went on in the ſame Dotages at Argentan, when John le Noir preach'd in Advent and Lent there. They ſet up an Image of the bleſſed Virgin in an open Place of the Town, before which Figure they ſung Litanies in the Evening, throwing this Sentence into their Devotion, Virgo Extirpatrix Janſeniſtarum. Under the Feet of this Image they put a large black Snake, whom they call'd the Theologal or Chapter-Preacher of Seez: Neither did they ſtop here, but coming in a Body on Whitſun Eve they went in Proceſſion with one Boirel a Batchelor in Divinity at the Head of 'em: This Boirel having two Stones in his Hand knock'd one of 'em againſt the other, crying aloud this is the Way to Paradiſe; and being follow'd with ſome enthuſiaſtical Women, they came to Seez in this manner, ſome Eccleſiaſticks going before, and the Women coming after: When they got into the Town they ſung, by way of Litany, Lord deliver us from the Janſeniſts, the Women anſwering, Good Lord deliver us. They ſaid they were going to look for Jeſus Chriſt in Canada, ſince he was not to be met with in France. Some of theſe whimſical People were confin'd in the Biſhop's Priſon, and the reſt diſpers'd: The Priſoners had Penance enjoyn'd 'em by the Official; and amongſt the reſt the Sieur Hardy their Ringleader and Director, was order'd to wait upon the abovemention'd Theologal of Seez, and ask his Pardon, which was accordingly done. But thoſe who under hand abetted this Faction, found means to make a Miſunderſtanding between le Noir and his Biſhop, Francis Rouxel de Madavy, who had hitherto always valu'd and protected him: And tho' the Official of Seez went to Argentan by this Prelate's Order, to take away the Serpent, yet the Harmony between the Biſhop and le Noir grew leſs and leſs, till at laſt they came to an open Breach: The Biſhop's Deſign to make a conſtant Demand of Annates upon the Cures belonging to the Chapter, gave the firſt Occaſion to the Rupture. Le Noir oppos'd this Claim vigorouſly, and encourag'd the Chapter in a Reſolution never to conſent to it: Other Diſputes likewiſe happen'd relating to the temporal Concerns of the Cathedral of Seez, in which this Theologal acted with the ſame Vigour for the Rights of the Chapter: Now it being the Privilege of the Biſhops of Seez to be Governors of the Town M. de Madavy gave the Strolers Liberty to act their Farces there; which Permiſſion they abus'd ſo far as to build a Stage before the Cathedral, and drag the People together whilſt the Theologal was preaching: This Affront made him put the Audience in mind how ſcandalous it was for them to leave the Sermon and run after thoſe Buffoons. John le Noir's Enemies made this Reprimand be conſtrued an Invaſion upon the Biſhop's Authority, which made his Lordſhip reſolve to ſend him off: Thus in 1663 he was as it were baniſh'd to Fougéres in Bretany. Another Claſh happening two Years after made 'em irreconcileable. Some indefenſible Propoſitions appearing in the Biſhop's Mandate publiſh'd in 1665 for ſigning the Formulary, the Theologal requeſted this Prelate to diſown the Order, and take off the Scandal, the unuſual Terms couch'd in it had given: He likewiſe requeſted him to provide a Remedy againſt ſome other Scandals relating to Points of Doctrine, which ſome private Perſons, who abus'd his Authority, had occaſion'd in his Dioceſe: To give an Inſtance; the Sieur Enguerran Chevalier had publiſh'd a Catechiſm, where, amongſt other Heterodoxies, 'twas expreſſly aſſerted that there were five divine Perſons, which ought to be the Subject of the Faithful's Devotion, viz. Jeſus Chriſt, Mary, St. Joſeph, St. Anne, and St. Joachim: That our Lord is in the Sacrament of the Altar, as a Chicken is in the Shell of an Egg, &c. The Biſhop of Seez's Refuſal to ſatisfy this Requeſt, provok'd the Theologal to bring an Information againſt this Prelate for abetting theſe Errors: He preſented a Petition to the French King, and brought in a Charge of ſeveral Propoſitions, either heretical, or ſtuff'd with intolerable Miſperſuaſions. The Biſhop continuing ſilent, and making neither Retractation nor Defence, le Noir put in a Caveat againſt his taking Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhoprick of Roan, the King having nominated him to this See upon the Tranſlation of Mr. Francis de Harlay Chanvalon to the Archbiſhoprick of Paris. He had likewiſe excepted to the Conduct of this Archbiſhop his Metropolitan, as if he had been partial in his Proceedings againſt the Biſhop of Seez; and thus Harlay was brought under the ſame Imputation of Hereſy, and charg'd with Colluſion and private Concert with the other: The King's Council referr'd this Buſineſs to the Eccleſiaſtical Judges, before whom it remain'd without coming to Judgment ſeveral Years: The Biſhop of Beauvais was commiſſion'd either to give Sentence upon the Conteſt, or at leaſt bring it to an Accommodation. And now an End of ſo important a Diſpute being expected, the Theologal or Chapter-Preacher of Seez foreſeeing how much the Aſſembly of the French Clergy in 1682 was likely to embroil 'em with the Court of Rome, remonſtrated againſt Mr. Harlay's being Preſident there, alledging that this Archbiſhop having not purg'd himſelf from the Charge of Hereſy, he was incapable by the Canons to preſide in this Aſſembly: This Provocation puſh'd Harlay upon taking farther Notice; inſomuch that the next Year the Theologal was ſeiz'd and ſent to the Baſtille, where the Lieutenant de Police and the Bench belonging to the Châtelet of Paris, were commiſſion'd to try the Cauſe, and bring it to an Iſſue: And here no Regard was had to a Caſe eccleſiaſtically privileg'd, and where a main Branch of the Church's Diſcipline was ſo deeply concern'd: But this Matter being overlook'd or overrul'd upon the reading of ſome Papers which the Court declar'd Libels, tho' part of 'em were neither penn'd, nor the Contents of 'em own'd by the Theologal; however, theſe Papers being declar'd defamatory, le Noir was ſentenc'd April 24, 1684, to make an Amende honourable (a very infamous Puniſhment) before the Cathedral of Paris, and then to be ſent to the Gallies for Life. The next Day a Paper was poſted up at the Gates of the Rolls of the Châtelet of Paris, inſtituted a Complaint and Appeal to the Church againſt the Judgment given, which was ſaid to be illegal, becauſe by this Sentence the Theologal was diſabled to proſecute the Parties accus'd according to the Canons, which Parties ought to have purg'd themſelves in an Eccleſiaſtical Way: Beſides, 'twas objected this Sentence had call'd the Proſecution in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts a defamatory Proceſs, whereas Lay-Judges had no Cognizance of this Matter; this Paper was likewiſe affix'd to the Cathedral Doors at Paris and elſewhere: However, ſome Days after John le Noir was brought to the Châtelet, and from thence convey'd in his Shirt to the Cathedral Door, to make his Amende honourable. This Sight drew Tears from all the People; but le Noir, inſtead of being dejected by this Uſage, appear'd with an undiſturb'd reſolute Air, refus'd to read what he was order'd, proteſted the Nullity of the whole Proceedings, and requir'd he might be remitted to the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, who were his proper Judges: The Penalty of the Gallies was forgiven, and chang'd to perpetual Impriſonment. The Theologal was impriſon'd firſt at St. Malo's, afterwards at Breſt, and laſtly at Nantes, where he dy'd in 1692. Some of his printed Works are as follow; The indiſputable Advantages the Church had over the Calviniſts in the Conteſt between Mr. Arnaud and the Miniſter Claude, dedicated to the French King, and printed at Paris 1673. New politick Lights, or the new Goſpel of Cardinal Palavicini reveal'd by him in his Hiſtory of the Counil of Trent: In this Work he endeavours to diſprove and ridicule this Hiſtory, which hinder'd its being tranſlated into French. A Letter to the Ducheſs of Guiſe, complaining the Biſhops overſtrain'd their Character upon the ſecond Order. Some Days after the Sentence was pronounc'd againſt John le Noir, the following Latin Satyr was diſpers'd; Elogium magnanimi Viri Johannis le Noir, in Eccleſia Sagienſi Canonici Theologi, qui Die 24 Aprilis, Anno 1684. contra jus faſque multatus ignominiâ, & damnatus ad Triremes, adhuc in Cuſtodia habetur, perpetuis, ut creditur, vinculis damnatus.

Heu! Sagienſem Theologum, atrum Nomine
Solummodo, at candidum Animo & ſanctiſſimum
Præſul Tyrannus carcere indigno premit.
Illi & probrum ingeſſere pravi Judices.
Sed quis laborat inde plus infamiâ?
Illumne Præſul, an magis ſe perculit
Famâ minutum facinore hoc turpiſſimo?
Nam præter æquum, Juris & normam, potens
Audet hominem, qui ipſum arguebat, perdere.
Proinde, vera ſi nobis loqui licet,
Niger reclamans ſuſtinuit opprobrium,
Quod indomita viri eluit virtus ſatis.
Harlæus at at improvidè omninò imprimit
Labem ipſe ſibi, quam nulla delebit dies;
Dum violat Eccleſiæ improbus leges ſacras.
Quæ Sagienſi Theologo ingens gloria eſt
Pati vim eandem, quæ ſacris eſt Juribus
Illata, nec poſſe, niſi damnari impiè.

N. F. N.

* NONIUS MARCELLUS, a Grammarian and Peripatetick Philoſopher. The beſt Edition of his Works is that publiſh'd at Paris 1614. Nonius has nothing conſiderable in him either with Reſpect to Learning or Judgment; and is only valuable upon the ſcore of his citing Fragments of old Authors not elſewhere to be met with: There is no Compariſon between him and Feſtus in giving the Signification of Latin Words. * Joan. le Mercier, Præf. Edit. ſuæ. Voſſius, de Philolog. cap. 5.

NONIUS, a Roman Senator, was outlaw'd for Treaſon by Mark Antony, becauſe he had a precious Stone of a vaſt Value, which Antony could neither prevail with him to give or ſell him. Nonius left his Houſe and Eſtate and run away with this Ring, which by Pliny's Report might be equal to Mr. Pitt's Diamond. There was another Nonius at the Battel of Pharſalia in Pompey's Army, who after the Battel was loſt, animated Pompey to try his Fortune once more, putting him in mind there were ſeven Eagles firm which were capable of facing the Enemy; to which Tully made this rallying Anſwer, They would do very well if they had nothing but Jays to fly at. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. lib. 37. cap. 6.

NONNIUS LUDOVICUS, a learned Phyſician of Antwerp. He wrote an excellent Tract entitled Diæteticon, ſive de Re cibaria, or a Regimen for Diet. There are a great many ſerviceable Explanations of the Latin Poets in it, particularly of Horace, Juvenal and Martial, who in laſhing the Roman Luxury mention ſeveral Diſhes then in faſhion. He reinforces the Sentiment of the old Phyſicians, who wrote de Salubri Piſcium Alimento: And endeavours to prove that Fiſh is a very wholeſome wholeſome Diet to thoſe who live a ſedentary Life, to old Men, Patients and People, of a weak Conſtitution, becauſe it makes the Cratis of the Blood of a moderate Conſiſtence, which is proper for ſuch Sort of Bodies. Nonnius complains very much of the Arabians who in their Tranſlations of Greek Authors have omitted what was ſaid about Fiſh in the Originals, becauſe there was very little of that Food eaten in the Parts of Arabia where they liv'd, the Country being over hot, and little Water in it. * De Vigneul-Marville, Mêlangers d' Hiſtoire.

NONNUS, a Greek Poet born at Panopolis in Ægypt, wrote two Books of a very different Kind. He flouriſh'd in the fifth Century according to Suidas, and wrote a Poem in heroick Verſe entitled Dionyſicorum lib. 48. Gerard Falkemburg took the Manuſcript from Sambucus's Library and printed it at Antwerp A. D. 1569. afterward 'twas tranſlated into Latin by Ekhard Lubin Profeſſor at Roſtock, and reprinted with Notes at Hannover in 1610. Nonnus likewiſe wrote a Paraphraſe in Verſe upon St. John's Goſpel, publiſh'd in Greek by Aldus Manutius at Venice A. D. 1501. afterwards 'twas tranſlated into Latin, of which Verſion there are ſeveral Editions with Nannius, Daniel Heinſius, and Sylburgius's Notes upon it. This Paraphraſe is likewiſe inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum. Nonnus's Dionyſiaca is a very irregular Poem both with Reſpect to Contrivance, Method, Thought, and Expreſſion. It was nothing natural or reſembling Homer's Genius: It has not that free unembarraſs'd Manner nor that entertaining Plainneſs of the firſt times. His Paraphraſe upon St. John's Goſpel is ſtill worſe and written more untowardly. * Suidas. Sixtus Senenſis, Biblioth. Sacr. Poſſevin, in Appar. Sacr. Baillet, Jugement des Sav. ſur les Poëtes Latins.

NORBERT (St.) Founder of the Premonſtrants, was born at Santein in the Duchy of Cleves A. D. 1080. his Father Herbert Earl of Gennep was related to German Emperors and Princes, and his Mother Herwige was deſcended from the Houſe of Lorrain. He was bred under Frederick Archbiſhop of Cologne, and afterwards invited to the Emperor Henry V's Court. Having made Choice of the Profeſſion of a Churchman, he was made Canon of Santein, and afterwards Almoner to Henry V, who offer'd him the Archbiſhoprick of Cambray, which Norbert refus'd. This Court made ſome little Impreſſion upon his Way of living; but he withdrew and liv'd retir'd. About the Year 1118 he reſign'd all his Preferments, ſold his paternal Eſtate, gave it to the Poor, and went preaching from one great Town to another. The Pope approv'd his Conduct; and 'tis ſaid he wrought Miracles. Bartholomew Biſhop of Laon made an Acquaintance with this new Preacher at the Council of Rheims, whither Norbert went to deſire Pope Calixtus II. would confirm the Privileges his Predeceſſors had granted him. And here Bartholomew prevail'd with Norbert to go with him into his Dioceſe. St. Bernard to ſecond Bartholomew gave Norbert a ſolitary Valley call'd Prémontré, whither he retir'd A. D. 1120, and there founded the Order of Canons regular call'd Premonſtratentes, afterwards confirm'd by a ſucceeding Pope. He was call'd off to Antwerp to encounter the Heretick Tanchelin. Afterwards taking a Journey into Germany he was forc'd to accept the Archbiſhoprick of Magdebourg A. D. 1127. and ſending for his Canons hither, their mortify'd Way of living frighted the Canons of Magdebourg: And the Archbiſhop projecting to bring 'em up to his pitch of Auſterities they mutiny'd for ſome time, but came to at laſt. The Schiſm occaſion'd by Peter Leon diſturbing the Repoſe of Germany, Norbert, notwithſtanding he had been oblig'd by this Antipope, made no ſcruple to declare againſt him, and prevail'd with the Emperor Lotharius to go over to the right Side. The Buſineſs of the Council of Rheims brought Norbert into France, where he ſtay'd ſome Time, And after having had the Satisfaction to ſee his Monaſtery at Prémontré ſtock'd with five hundred Monks, he return'd to his Archiepiſcopal See and dy'd there June 1134. Pope Gregory XIII. canoniz'd him in the Year 1582: He is ſaid to have written ſeveral Tracts; amongſt others three Books of Viſions, and ſeveral Sermons: There is likewiſe a ſmall moral Diſcourſe of his addreſs'd by way of Exhortation to thoſe of his own Order. * Einſeingrenius, in Catal. Teſt. Verit. Baronius, in Annal. Valerius Andreas, Biblioth. Belg. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XII. &c.

NORCIA (Nurſia,) a City of Italy: The Burghers of this Town have ſuch great ancient Privileges, that it may paſs in ſome Meaſure for an independent Commonwealth: They make their own Laws, and chooſe their Magiſtrates: But they have one extraordinary Cuſtom which is obſerv'd with great Strictneſs, that is, that no Body who can write or read is capable of any Office; inſomuch that the Magiſtracy is always in the Hands of four unbooklearn'd Men, whom they call li Quatro Illiterati. * Leandre Alberti.

NORRIS (Henry,) Cardinal, and one of the greateſt Ornaments of the Auguſtinian Hermits in the ſeventeenth Century, was born at Verona A. D. 1631. His Family is originally Iriſh; James Norris was one of his Anceſtors, who being ſettled in the Iſle of Cyprus was Governor of the chief Town in that Iſland, and retir'd from thence to Verona, when Sultan Selim II. made himſelf Maſter of Cyprus A. D. 1570. Alexander was the Cardinal's Father, an Author well known, particularly for his Hiſtory of Germany. His Son Henry Noris gave an early Diſcovery of his ſtrong Genius for Learning: He took the Auguſtinian Habit in the Convent of Rimini, and quickly brought himſelf into Notice for a learned Perſon: The General of the Auguſtinians carry'd him to Rome for farther Improvement: He commonly ſtudy'd fourteen Hours a Day, and continu'd that Cuſtom till he was Cardinal: Here he began his Hiſtory of Pelagianiſm when but twenty ſix Years of Age: This was his firſt publick Performance; 'twas printed at Florence A. D. 1673: Here he juſtifies the Cenſure paſs'd by the fifth general Council againſt Origen and Theodorus Mopſueſtenus, the firſt Authors of the Pelagian Heterodoxy. Here, he ſubjoyns a Deſcription of the Aquileian Schiſm, and a Defence of St. Auſtin's Books againſt the Pelagians and Semi-Pelagians. This Performance, which rais'd the Author's Reputation to a great Pitch, made ſeveral ſuſpect his Orthodoxy; not a few Tracts came out againſt him, and Noris not being wanting in his Replies, the Quarrel grew warm and the Buſineſs was carry'd to the Inquiſition. The Book delated was examin'd there with the utmoſt Rigour, and came off without the leaſt Blemiſh; and the Author was honour'd by Pope Clement X. with the Title of Qualificator of the Holy Office. His Adverſary's Spleen, it may be, being thus ſtir'd, rally'd againſt the Pelagian Hiſtory, and brought it again before the Inquiſition in the Year 1676, where it came off with the ſame Succeſs as before. And now P. Noris had ſixteen Years Quiet, and read Lectures upon Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory at Piſa: He likewiſe wrote upon Medals, and publiſh'd ſeveral Tracts of Chronology; the moſt learned of which is that of the Syro-Macedonian Epochaes; 'twas printed in 1689, and follow'd by a Diſſertation upon the Paſchal Cycle of the Latins. He had ſtill more Rencounters, but always acquitted himſelf with Reputation. And at laſt Pope Innocent XII. made him Cardinal A. D. 1695. He was likewiſe made Library Keeper of the Vatican and nominated by the Pope in 1702 for reforming the Calendar. He dy'd at Rome 23. February A. D 1704. ſeventy three Years of Age. His Works are; Hiſtoriæ Pelagianæ, Libri Duo; Diſſertatio Hiſtorica de ſynodo quinta Oecumenica; Vindiciæ Auguſtinianæ; Diſſertatio de uno ex Trinitate paſſo; Apologia Monachorum Syriæ ab Anonymi Scrupulis vindicata; Anonymi Scrupuli circa veteres Semi-Pelagianorum Sectatores, evulſi ac eradicati; Reſponſio ad Appendicem Auctoris Scrupulorum; Janſeniani Erroris Calumnia ſublata; Somnia Franciſci Macedo. Epochæ Syro-Macedonum; Paræneſis ad Joannem Harduinum; Thraſo, ſeu Miles Macedonicus, Plautino Sale perfrictus. Cardinal Noris is reckon'd one of the moſt learned Men of the laſt Century, and wrote very politely. * Memoires du Tems. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII & XVIII.

NORTH Sea (the,) makes a great Part of the Atlantick Ocean; it waſhes the Eaſtern Coaſt of Northern America, and part of that of the Southern: It's call'd the North Sea in Contradiſtinction to the Pacifick, which runs along the Weſtern Side of America, and goes by the Name of the South Sea. The chief Parts of this Diviſion viſion of the Atlantic are the Seas of Canada, Mexico, the North Sea particularly ſo call'd, and that of Brazil, * Maty, Diction.

NORTSTRAND, an Iſland in the German Sea near the Duchy of Sleſwick over againſt the Town Huſon. 'Twas parted from the Continent by the force of the Sea which drown'd the Land round about it in the Years 1300, 1532, 1612, 1618, and 1634. This laſt Inundation deſtroyed ſix thouſand People and above forty thouſand Head of Cattle. 'Tis now but four Leagues in Length, and two in Breadth. It belongs to the King of Denmark: And as for Places inhabited there's nothing to be ſeen in it but a great many Villages. * Maty Diction.

NOURRY (Dom Nicholas le) of Dieppe, a Benedictin of the Congregation of St. Maur, was Profeſs'd at eighteen Years of Age A. D. 1665. from this Time he apply'd himſelf to the Study of Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity, and made a great Progreſs in it. He aſſiſted P. Garet in publiſhing Caſſiodore's Works. He wrote Caſſiodorus's Life together with the Prefaces and Indexes of this Edition. Afterwards coming from Roan and ſettling at Paris, he aſſiſted P. James de Friſches in ſetting out St. Ambroſe's Works, the firſt Volume of which was publiſh'd in 1686, and the ſecond in 1691. P. Friſches began afterwards to prepare a new Edition of St. Gregory Nazianzen, and dy'd March 15, 1693. P. Nourry in the mean time work'd upon the Authors in the Bibliotheca Patrum printed at Lyons. He printed three Volumes 8vo under the Title of Apparatus ad Bibliothecam Patrum: Theſe were afterwards thrown into one Volume Folio printed at Paris, A. D. 1703, and end with Clemens Alexandrinus. This Work takes in a great many curious and learned Diſſertations upon the Lives, Writings and Opinions of the Fathers, where he likewiſe explains a great many difficult Paſſages. In 1710 P. Nourry likewiſe publiſh'd Lucius Cæcilius de Mortibus Perſecutorum, which he pretends was not written by Lactantius: He lays down the Reaſon of his Opinion in a Diſſertation annex'd, where he likewiſe clears up the meaning and diſentangles ſeveral Difficulties in this Tract, and makes the Author's Sentiments very intelligible. This learned Monk goes on with the ſame Application for the Improvement of learning as formerly. As to his Style, 'tis plain, correct and eaſy. There's a great deal of eccleſiaſtical and pagan Learning in his Works. He is exact in his Citations, cool and candid in his Criticiſms, and happy in his Conjectures. * Du Pin, new Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. & XVIII.

NUMIDICUS (St.) a Prieſt of Carthage, and a Confeſſor of the third Century: When the Emperor Decius rais'd a Perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, he took a great deal of Pains to keep 'em fortify'd and firm; St. Cyprian in his Abſence left the Care of the Church of Carthage with this Numidicus and Rogatianus another Prieſt. Thus by their Biſhop's order they excommunicated the Prieſt Feliciſſimus. Numidicus encourag'd a great many Chriſtians to ſuffer Martyrdom; ſaw his Wife burnt at a Stake by his Side, and was half burnt himſelf upon an Heap of Stones. His Daughter coming to look for his Corps, and finding him breathing, carried him off and preſerv'd him. The Roman Martyrology ſets Numidicus and ſome other African Martyrs, who were burnt, at the ninth of Auguſt. Theſe Executions happen'd A. D. 251. * St. Cyprian, Epiſt. 35, 38 & 40. Tillemont, Mem. Eccleſ. Tom. III. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

NYBOURG, Nubourg, a Town of Denmark in the Iſle of Fionia or Funen, ſtands upon a Gulph on the Eaſtern Side of the Iſland four Leagues from the City Odenzee. Nybourg has formerly been the Reſidence of the Kings and Parliament of Denmark; 'tis at preſent well fortify'd next to the Sea; but on the Land Side the Works are ruin'd. * Maty, Diction.

NYSLOT, that is to ſay, the new Fort, is a Town with a good Caſtle in the Savolaxia within Livonia: It ſtands in the middle of a great Moraſs about twenty Leagues from Wyborg to the North. * Maty, Diction.

O.

OBOLLAH, a ſmall City but ſtrong and populous, ſtanding upon one of the Arms of the Tigris drawn like a Canal about ſeven or eight Leagues in Length: Upon the two Sides of this River there's a long Row of Gardens and Porticoes, which anſwer one another with admirable Proportion. The eaſtern Geographers ſet this Place in the third Climate with eighty four Degrees of Longitude, and thirty Degrees fifteen Minutes of northern Latitude. In ſhort, they reckon it one of the four moſt delicious Places in all Aſia, and which they call the four Paradiſes. * D. Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

OBRECHT (Ulric) born at Strasbourg July 1646. his Family which was originally of Scheleſtat was ennobled, or made Gentlemen, in his great Grandfather by the Emperor Rodolphus II. A. D. 1604. he receiv'd his firſt Education at Strasbourg, Montbeliard, and Altorff; he was born with his Anceſtors Inclination for Letters, who had all made an handſome Figure either in the Univerſity or Senate of Strasbourg: Latin, Greek and Hebrew were eaſily got over in his Childhood; and the learning French, Spaniſh, and Italian were little more than Diverſion to him: He was eſteem'd ſo good an Orator at fifteen Years of Age, that he was appointed to make and deliver a Latin Speech publickly; for which Performance he was univerſally applauded. By his Maſter's Directions he read none but old Authors, and went to the Spring Head for Elocution; that is, to Demoſthenes, Tully, Hermogenes, Quintilian, Longinus, &c. He work'd upon the ſame Plan in his Courſe of Philoſophy: Plato, Ariſtotle, with the Remainders of the Pythagorean Philoſophy, were the Authors he ſtudy'd.

But his Inclinations and Time were ſpent moſtly upon Law and Hiſtory: He excell'd in both theſe Faculties, and read upon 'em in the Univerſity with great Reputation. This great Variety of Learning did by no means entangle his Ideas, or make his Head grow muddy: His Learning lay all methodically ſorted, and drawn up with Order and Diſtinction; inſomuch that People were leſs ſurpriz'd with the prodigious Compaſs of his Improvement, than with the admirable Perſpicuity and Conſequence with which he deliver'd himſelf upon every Subject. He gave an Account of the foregoing Ages as if he had liv'd in 'em all; and read upon all the Laws as if he had been at the making of the whole Body: Beſides, he diſcours'd, where he was perfectly Maſter of the Argument, with ſuch unpretending Modeſty, as if his Deſign was rather to inform himſelf than pronounce upon the Queſtion.

He travell'd to Vienna and Venice, where his main Buſineſs was to look into the learned Libraries: He had already at nineteen Years of Age publiſh'd a ſort of Commentary upon Somnium Scipionis, and a Diſſertation upon the Principles of civil and political Prudence. At his Return from Italy to Strasbourg he marry'd the Daughter of Mr. Boecler the famous Rhetorick and Hiſtory Profeſſor, and afterwards ſucceeded him in the Chairs, and made a Collection of his beſt finiſh'd Manuſcripts; and amongſt others he publiſh'd Boecler's Animadverſiones in Diſſertationem de ratione Statûs in Imperio, &c. 'Tis a very ſhort Critic upon a Book which made a great Noiſe in Germany under the borrow'd Name of Hippolite de la Pierre. The Houſe of Auſtria, whoſe Greatneſs was repreſented as fatal to the Liberty of the Empire, and in a near Diſpoſition to make the Imperial Crown hereditary; the Houſe of Auſtria, I ſay, declar'd themſelves oblig'd to M. Obrecht for furniſhing the Publick with Matter to repel ſo injurious an Imputation.

Mr. Obrecht, tho' his Time was taken up moſtly in reading Lectures of Law and Hiſtory to young Gentlemen, yet found ſome Leiſure for the Preſs: And having the Character of a great Medaliſt, a Preſent was made him of a very ſcarce Domitian, on the Reverſe of which a Goddeſs was repreſented, whom he ſuppos'd to be Iſis: He publiſh'd his Conjectures upon this Subject in a Letter printed in the Year 1675, with the Title of Epiſtola de Nummo Domitiani Iſiaco; he afterwards publiſh'd a new Edition of the Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ Scriptores, with very ſignificant Notes. In 1680 he printed his Prodromus Rerum Alſaticarum; 'twas an Eſſay or Specimen of a large Work which he was writing upon Alſatia; where he made Enquiry into the Original, the Boundaries, the Privileges and Cuſtoms, the Wars and Revolutions, &c. a very conſiderable Work, which he was oblig'd to break off, and had not Leiſure to finiſh. He wrote likewiſe a Tract de Vexillo Imperii, or of the Right to carry the Standard of the Empire;. a Privilege which the Republick of Strasbourg claim'd a Share in with the Dukes of Wirtemberg, who were then in Poſſeſſion of it: To theſe may be added two other, viz. de Imperii Germanici ejuſque Statuum Fœderibus, that is, concerning the Treaties which the States and Princes of the Empire had concluded in their own Name, or by their own Authority; the other de Jure Belli & Sponſoribus Pacis.

Hitherto M. Obrecht profeſs'd the Proteſtant Religion; but the French King making himſelf Maſter of Strasbourg, and coming thither with his whole Court; Mr. Peliſſon, who was one in the Attendance, and well appriz'd of Obrecht's Reputation, made him a Viſit, and had ſome Conferences with him upon the Subject of Religion: The Jeſuits, whom Lewis XIV. ſettled ſoon after at Strasbourg, finiſh'd what was begun by Peliſſon; inſomuch that in 1684 he abjur'd his Religion at Paris before the Biſhop of Meaux: At his Return to Strasbourg he re-aſſum'd the Law Chair, and wrote Notes upon Grotius's Book de Jure Belli & Pacis. In 1685 the French King gave him a Commiſſion to preſide in his Name in the Senate of Strasbourg, with the Diſtinction Préteur Royal; and from this time Obrecht turn'd all his Thoughts to publick Affairs. The Judges of Strasbourg had a Cuſtom (according to the Principles of the reform'd) to diſſolve Marriage in Caſes of Adultery, and allow the injur'd Party to marry again: To break this Cuſtom Obrecht tranſlated St. Auſtin de Conjugiis Adulterinis into High Dutch, and procur'd an Order from the King not to tolerate or ſolemnize the Marriages of Perſons parted for Adultery, on Pain of Death: This Prohibition was publiſh'd in 1687. The next Year Obrecht publiſh'd an High Dutch Tranſlation of a Book written by P. Dez, firſt Rector of the Jeſuits at Strasbourg, and which is entitled, la Réunion des Proteſtants de l'Egliſe de Strasbourg à l'Egliſe Catholique.

Notwithſtanding his Poſt could ſpare him little time, he publiſh'd the Hiſtory of the Trojan War, reckon'd to Dictys Cretenſis, but which is more commonly believ'd, and that upon the Evidence of ſome Manuſcripts, to have been written by Lucius Septimius: This Edition was printed in 1691. He afterwards intended to publiſh a more correct Edition of Quintillian by the Help of an excellent Manuſcript he had recover'd. This Matter was finiſh'd, and he was preparing Notes upon the Author in 1698: But now having a Deputation from the Town and Senate of Strasbourg to ſolicit their Affairs at the French Court, the King ſent him Envoy to Frankfort, with Inſtructions touching the Succeſſion of the Ducheſs of Orleans: Afterwards he undertook a very knotty Buſineſs upon the Subject of the Duke of Anjou's Right to the Crown of Spain. Mr. Obrecht engag'd to make a Collection from Lawyers and Hiſtorians of all the Tracts in which the Right of Succeſſion to the Spaniſh Monarchy was ſettled or limited; and this with a view to prove the Pretenſions of the Houſe of Auſtria ill founded: The Title of this Performance is, Excerptorum Hiſtoricorum & Juridicorum de Natura Succeſſionis in Monarchiam Hiſpaniæ, Menſe Decembri, 1700. Excerptorum Continuatio, &c. in 4^to^. Obrecht had drawn up the Plan of a Tract concerning the Succeſſion of the Duchy of Milan, which he deſign'd to print after the Publication of the Emperor's Manifeſto. He likewiſe publiſh'd about this time the Life of Pythagoras, written in Greek by Iamblicus: And at laſt being overfatigu'd with Study dy and Buſineſs he dy'd Auguſt 1701. His Works, beſide thoſe already mention'd, are, Diſſertatio de Abdicatione Caroli V. Imperatoris. De Electione Imperatoris Romano-Germanici. De Unitate Reipublicæ in ſacro Romano Imperio. De Clenodiis S. Rom. Imperii. De Legibus Agrariis Populi Romani. De vera Philoſophiæ Origine. De Philoſophia Celtica. De extraordinariis Populi Romani Imperiis. De Ratione Belli. Sacra Termini. De Cenſu Auguſti. De Legione Fulminatrice M. Antonini Phil. Imperatoris. Hoſtis Deditius. De Expeditione Romana. De Communione. Exercitationes tres ad Severin. De Monzambano. De Statu Imperii Germanici, lib. 1. cap. 1. & 2. Paræneſis de conjungendis privati & publici Juris Studiis, duabus Orationibus comprehenſa. Diſcurſus in Inſtrumentum Pacis Weſtphaliæ, 1695. Wezler. Mémoires concernant la ſureté publique de l'Empire, in 12. Notæ in Pollucis Onomaſticon. Canis ſub fuſtem miſſus, contra Schurz-Fleiſch. Pro J. Henrico Bœclero. Præfatio ad Inſtitutiones Juris Juſtinianas, cum Notis Georg. Davidis Locameri, &c.

Obrecht likewiſe made Remarks upon the Emperor's Letter to the Pope concerning the Inveſtiture of the Kingdom of Naples, dated January 19, 1701. * Mémoires pour l' Hiſtoire des Sciences, & des Beaux Arts, Novembre & Decembre, 1701.

OCBARA, a City in Chaldæa, or as the Arabians call it, in Babylonian Irac. It ſtands upon the Tigris above Bagdat, from which 'tis diſtant about twenty Leagues. This Town, notwithſtanding 'tis ſmall, has been the Reſidence of ſeveral Caliphs of the Line of the Abaſſides. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

* OCHUS, King of Perſia, &c. The Story of this Prince's being ſo very covetous that he would not go into the City is ſomewhat imperfectly told in Morery Vol. II. We are to underſtand then that the City which this Prince refus'd to paſs through, was Paſargada, near which Place Cyrus the Great's Army was routed by Aſtyages King of the Medes. Upon this Accident the Women of Paſargada, who had their Sons in the Army, came out of the Town, and upbraiding their Cowardice made 'em return to the Charge and gain the Victory: For this Exploit Cyrus made an Order that whenever any Perſian Prince made his Entrance into that City, he ſhould give every Woman a Crown in Gold. But Ochus, it ſeems, not being willing to go to this Expence, us'd to march on the back Side of the Town. * Quintus Curtius.

ODESCHALCHI (Marc-Antony,) a Gentleman of Como in the Milaneſe, took Prieſt's Orders. Cardinal Bennet Odeſchalchi his Couſin German, and afterwards Pope Innocent XI. prevail'd with him to come to Rome: But here, notwithſtanding his Merit was well known, he refus'd to receive any eccleſiaſtical Preferment or Diſtinction. He ſpent all his time in Works of Piety, and chiefly in relieving the Poor: He allow'd a creditable Subſiſtence to ſeveral poor Families: He provided Work for thoſe that were able to get their living, and took particular Care of the Sick and Diſabled. Notwithſtanding the great Number of Hoſpitals at Rome for receiving People of all Countries; this charitable Gentleman obſerv'd they were not ſufficient to entertain all Strangers, who were oftentimes forc'd to lodge at Church Gates, and in the Porches of Palaces. This Conſideration made him turn his Houſe into an Hoſpital, to receive Strangers of all Nations, without Diſtinction, and poor People who came out of the Country: This was done in 1650. He likewiſe bought ſeveral neighbouring Houſes to make his Hoſpital more capacious; and within a little time he provided a thouſand Beds, where every poor Man had one to himſelf. He ſerv'd 'em himſelf, inſtructed 'em, and employ'd Taylors to mend their Clothes, and make 'em new ones as often as they had Occaſion. He frequently rode through the Town in the Evening to look for poor People, and if he found any he took 'em into his Coach and carry'd 'em to his Hoſpital. He continu'd theſe charitable Offices till his Death, which happen'd A. D. 1670. He left all his Eſtate to this Hoſpital, of which Cardinal Odeſchalchi took particular Care after his Couſin's Death. This Hoſpital adjoyning to the Church of St. Mary in Portico, that Church was annex'd to it; 'tis call'd St. Gale becauſe, as 'tis pretended, this Saint formerly built an Hoſpital in the ſame Place. When Cardinal Odeſchalchi came to the Papal Chair he rebuilt it from the Foundation very magnificently, and now it makes above three thouſand Beds for the Poor. * Mémoires du Tems.

* ODMAN: See Rhodes in Morery Vol. II.

OENEUS, King of Calydon, Son of Parthaon, who by Althea Pheſtius's Daughter had Meleager, Tydeus, and Deianira married to Hercules. Oeneus offering Sacrifices to all the pretended Deities excepting Diana, this Goddeſs by way of Revenge ſent a wild Boar to deſtroy the Country. This Calydonian Boar was kill'd by Meleager. Oeneus after his Son Tydeus's Death, was diſpoſſeſs'd by Agrius, but his Grandſon Diomedes reſtor'd him. Apollon. Scholia in Ariſtophan. Acharn. There is a River in Lyburnia formerly call'd Oeneus, but goes at preſent under the Name of Fiume di Carnero: It riſes in Carniola, and running between Croatia and Iſtria falls into the Adriatick.

OLDENBURG (Philip Andrew,) printed under the Name of P. A. Burgoldenſis a Notitia or preſent State of the moſt remarkable Things of the Empire of Germany, and a Tract of the Elements of Law; and in 1677 he printed a Diſcourſe concerning the Ways and Means to keep a Commonwealth in a ſtate of repoſe. * Konig. Biblioth.

* OLIVA (Peter John,) a Minorite dying about the latter End of the thirteenth Century. He wrote a Commentary upon the Revelations, where diſcourſing upon the Church he maintain'd ſhe would quickly be more perfect than ever, that the Holy Ghoſt would furniſh her with new Illumination, and that the old Church would ſink to make room for a better enlighten'd and more unblemiſh'd Society. This Book was brought into Italy by a Minorite call'd de Bodicis, and receiv'd there as a fifth Goſpel by the Beguards and Fratricelli. Some of the Franciſcans attempted to chooſe a Pope for this new Church upon the Strength of this Prediction. They elected a General, and ſubaltern Superiours for themſelves, built new Monaſteries, wore a ſtreight Habit, and declaim'd againſt the Church of Rome. Theſe Errors were condemn'd by twelve Doctors of Divinity nominated by Cardinal Nicolas Biſhop of Oſtia whom Pope John XXII. had commiſſion'd for the direction of this Affair. The Pope cenſur'd the Book and the Authors Memory, for now he was Dead. This Author wrote ſeveral other Works, and amongſt the reſt a Tract concerning Poverty, in which he entirely condemns all Property, both with reſpect to private Perſons and Communities; and this having nothing of one's own he calls the higheſt evangelical Perfection. He was likewiſe charg'd with Errors condemn'd by the Council of Vienne; that is, that Children receive neither Grace nor any virtuous Quality by their Baptiſm; that the Soul is not the Form of the Body; and the divine Eſſence engenders and is engendred. Pope John XXII. order'd Peter Oliva's Bones to be burnt. The Minorites made Apologies for him, pretended him unjuſtly accus'd, and that he wrought Miracles after his Death. * Wadin. in Annal. Minor. Sixtus Senenſis. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent XIII.

OLONE, a Town in France on the Coaſt of Poictou: It has a large Haven and is nine Leagues diſtant from Luçor to the Weſt. This Town has a large Suburb call'd les Sables d' Olone, in Latin Arenæ Olonenſes. The Burghers here are good Seamen. * Maty, Diction.

OLYMPUS. Plutarch in his Book of Muſick mentions two of this Name. The moſt Ancient is the Mylian Olympus, Marſyas's Eleve. He lived before the Trojan War, and 'tis ſaid that he wrote Songs, Elegies and Hymns in Honour of the Gods. Plato, Ariſtophanes, Ariſtotle, and Ovid quote ſome of his Muſical Airs. the other Olimpus was a Muſician of Phrygia, and flouriſh'd according to Suidas in Midas's Reign. * Du Pin. Bibliotheque Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

ONSPACH. For Eichſtadt to the North in Morery Vol. II. read to the South.

OPICI, a mix'd Multitude who coming from ſeveral Parts ſettled in Campania, and whoſe Language was a Compoſition or Hodge-podge; inſomuch that they ſpoke neither good Latin nor good Greek, which were both the two neighbouring and beſt poliſh'd Languages. Ariſtotle obſerves they were likewiſe call'd Auſonii. They dwelt near the Tuſcan Sea. Afterwards Opicus became a Name of Reproach, and ſignify'd the ſame with Clumſey, Clowniſh, and Ignorant. Thus Cato in Pliny complains that the Greeks call'd the Romans Opici by way of Contempt. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. lib. 29. cap. 1. & Har- duin.

duin. in loc. Martini Lexicon Philologicum. Daniel le Clerk, Hiſtoire de la Medicine. part. 2. lib. 3. cap. 1.

* OPTATUS, Biſhop of Milevis in Numidia within Africk: He liv'd in the fourth Century in the Reign of Valentinian and Valens; and about the Year 370 wrote his Books againſt Parmenian a Donatiſt Biſhop, in which he gives an Account at large of that Schiſm. As to the Life of this Author, little or nothing is come down. However St. Auguſtin, St. Jerom, and Fulgentius, mention him with Commendation. In St. Jerom's Time his Work was divided into ſix Books. And that now call'd the ſeventh, is made up of Additions which Optatus had put to his other Books: Not to mention ſeveral of the firſt Editions, Gabriel Albaſpinæus Biſhop of Orleans publiſh'd a new Edition at Paris with his own and Balduin's Notes, A. D. 1631. the ſame Year Meric Caſaubon printed Optatus Text at London with critical Notes. The laſt and beſt Edition is that publiſh'd by Du Pin 1700, in which he has reſtor'd the Text from four good Manuſcripts; he has put ſhort Notes at the Bottom of the Pages with the different Readings, and after the End of the Book there are Balduin's, Albaſpinæus's, Caſaubon's, Barthius's, &c. Notes, with a Collection of all the Acts of the Councils and Conferences, Biſhop's Letters, the Emperor's Edicts, the Records of the Proconſul's Proceedings, and the Acts of the Martyrs, which have any Relation to the Hiſtory of the Donatiſts; and all this diſpos'd in a chronological Order from the Beginning, to the time of Gregory the Great: To this Edition there is prefix'd an Account of the Life, Works and Editions of Optatus together with two Diſſertations; the one dilates upon the Hiſtory of the Donatiſts, and the other gives an Account of the Geography of Africk: Optatus's Style is noble, warm, and ſomewhat laconick; and by his Performance it appears he was well furniſh'd both with Genius and Learning. He dy'd in the Year 380. * Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. cap. 110. Auguſtin. de Doctr. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 40. contr. Parmen. &c. Honorius Auguſtodunenſis, de Lumin. Eccleſ. Baron. in Annal. &c.

* ORAN: For taken from the Spaniards A. D. 1509. in Morery Vol. II. read 1507.

ORSINES, a noble Perſian of Darius's Court, deſcended from one of the ſeven Princes who aſſociated againſt Smerdis. He was one of the Perſian Generals at Arbela, where the laſt Darius was routed by Alexander. It ſeems he was afterwards in the Conqueror's Hands; for being charg'd by the Eunuch Bagoas with plundering Cyrus's Tomb, Alexander order'd him to be executed. * Quint. Curt. lib. 10.

ORTHAGORAS, follow'd Alexander in his Expeditions, and wrote a Hiſtory of India cited by Ælian, who tells us from this Author that in the Indian Ocean there were Whales half a Furlong long, which threw Water out of their Noſtrils with great Force and ſurprizing Quantities. Upon the Credit of this Author and another call'd Nearchus Strabo deſcribes the Situation of the Iſland Tinna, the Tomb of King Erythræus, and the Reaſon why the Red Sea was ſo call'd. * Ælian. de Animal. lib. 16. & 17. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Græc. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſe des Hiſt. Prof.

OSSUNA; 'tis the Title of a Spaniſh Duke, ſome of which Diſtinction have been very extraordinary Men.

OTHO (St.) Biſhop of Bamberg in Franconia, call'd the Apoſtle of Pomerania, was born in Suabia in the Year 1069. He was Son to Otho and Adelaida Perſons of private Condition. Some time after he had taken Orders the Emperor Henry IV. pitch'd upon him for Chaplain to his Siſter Judith, whom he marry'd to Boleſlaus Duke of Poland. After the Death of this Princeſs he return'd into Germany, where the Emperor made him his Chancellor and Miniſter of State; and the See of Bamberg happening to be void in 1100, the Emperor made Otho the next Succeſſor: He govern'd his Dioceſe with great Application and Prudence, and in the Year 1123 Boleſlaus Duke of Poland prevail'd with him to turn Miſſionary in Pomerania; and having Pope Calixtus II's Permiſſion for this Undertaking, he went thither, and converted Duke Wratiſlaus, and a great many of his Subjects; and having founded a great many Churches in Pomerania he return'd to Bamberg: But afterwards receiving Advice that the Towns of Stetin and Julin had renounc'd their Chriſtianity, he went back, and did his utmoſt to deſtroy the Remains of Paganiſm. Being recall'd to Bamberg by the Emperor Lotharius, he aſſiſted at the Council of Mentz A. D. 1131, and dy'd June 1139. * Baillet, Vies des Saints, au 2. de Juillet.

* OVID (Publius Ovidius Naſo.) a Latin Poet: To what has been ſaid upon this Article in Morery Vol. II. it may not be improper to add ſome of the Criticks Sentiments upon the Remainder of his moſt conſiderable Performances.

I. Ovid's Metamorphoſis is eſteem'd one of the moſt remarkable and ingenious Poems of all Antiquity; they have been valu'd in all Ages, and tranſlated almoſt into all Languages where Learning has had any Credit: It ſeems Ovid was pretty well conceited of this Work by his telling us at the Concluſion, Jamque Opus exegi, quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignis.

Nec poterit ferrum, nec edax abolere vetuſtas.

However, notwithſtanding the good Opinion he might have of his Metamorphoſis when his Fancy was warm with writing, he chang'd his Mind afterwards and reckon'd this Work no better than a youthful Eſſay, which wanted to be retouch'd: And which is more, he thought it ſo faulty and unworthy himſelf, that he deſign'd to throw it into the Fire: And indeed he did ſo at his going off into Baniſhment, but then the Execution came too late, for ſeveral Copies were in the Hands of his Friends. Thus the Poem has been preſerv'd and valu'd notwithſtanding the Author's Rigour: 'Tis true, the Style is not ſo much rais'd as in ſome of his other Works, but then it can't be deny'd being correct; the Stories are very entertainingly told; the natural Eaſineſs of his Style always ſupported with Art, and taking in the whole Compaſs of Mythology affords a very diverting Amuſement; and it may be none of the Poets has embelliſh'd the greateſt and the ſlendereſt Subjects, with more Ornament: To which we may add, that the Fables of Antiquity are link'd together with extraordinary Contrivance: To ſpeak clearly, one can't help admiring this uninterrupted Connexion and tacking together ſo many different Relations of Matters of Fact, and romantick Intermixtures from the Beginning of the World, to his own time.

II. Ovid's Faſti were written when he was more advanc'd in Age: the Style is flowing and muſical. There is a great deal of old Learning in this Performance. And tho' his Matter is not always capable of Ornament, yet he often refines upon the Argument, heightens it with his Pencil, and gives beautiful colouring to a dry Subject. But then he has not always kept within the Rules of Decency and Reſerve. However, ſetting aſide his licentious Excurſions, this Poem is the moſt Judicious, and beſt finiſh'd of all his Works.

III. The Elegiacs: under this Diviſion the four Books de Triſtibus and the four de Ponto are comprehended. And here, the charming Eaſineſs of his Manner has prevail'd with the Learned to ſet him at the Head of the Elegiac Poets, and prefer him to Propertius and Tibullus: The Reaſon is, becauſe he is more natural, ſtirs the Paſſions better, and ſeems to have underſtood the Genius and Turn of this ſort of Poetry farther than other Poets.

IV. Ovid's Epiſtles: call'd Heroides may be ſet in the fourth Claſs. Now all theſe Epiſtles which carry the Name of ſome Heroine are not Ovid's Compoſition, tho' they ſtand among his Collection. He owns himſelf that Penelope, Phillis, Canace, Hypſipyle, Ariadne, Phædra, Dido, and Sappho were his own. And Scaliger adds that Briſeis, Ænone, Hermione, Deianira, Medea, Laodamia, and Hypermneſtra belong likewiſe to him, and that the reſt were either written by Aulus Sabinus, or are ſpurious and of latter Date. Some modern Critcks, as Julius Scaliger, Roſtreau, & Rapin, pretend that Ovid's Epiſtles are wrought up with more Spirit and Delicacy than any of his Works, tho' they want that Perfection of Judgment, which is Virgil's diſtinguiſhing Talent. It muſt be granted the Style or Language is without Exception as to Propriety, but ſometimes 'tis ſomewhat too rank; and notwithſtanding his deſcription of the Paſſions is natural and lively, yet ſometimes he brings the Images too cloſe, and throws Infection into the Entertainment.

V. Ovid's Books de Arte Amandi deſerve no Mention

tion, unleſs for Cenſure and Diſgrace. Theſe Compoſitions help'd to debauch Julia Auguſtus's Daughter, and poiſon'd the beſt diſtinguiſh'd and moſt polite Part of that Prince's Court; and it may be, their being convey'd down to the preſent Age is no ſmall Misfortune. His Book de Remedio Amoris, tho' none of the beſt Preſervatives, has grave Sentences, and not ſo coarſe a Complexion. * L. Seneca, Quæſt. Nat. lib. 3. cap. 27. M. Seneca, Controv. 10. Velleius Paterculus, lib. 2. Euſeb. & Hieron. in Chron. Jul. Cæſar Scaliger, Hypercrit. Voſſius. Rapin, Reflections upon Poetry, &c.

* Ovid: The main Reaſon of Ovid's being baniſh'd by Auguſtus ſeems to have been his Misfortune rather than his Crime; at leaſt if his own Word in his de Triſtibus may be taken, where he gives the following Hints in his Juſtification.

Hei mihi! quid vidi, cur noxia lumina feci;
Cur inſperato cognita Cauſa mihi eſt?
Inſcius Actæon vidit ſine veſte Dianam,
Præda ſuis canibus nec minus ipſe fuit:
Scilicet in Superis etiam Fortuna luenda eſt,
Nec veniam læſo Numine Caſus habet.

OXYLUS, a one-ey'd Man, whom the Heraclidæ ſet at the Head of their Expedition in their ſecond Attempt upon Peloponneſus, becauſe the Oracle had told 'em that if they expected Succeſs they muſt take a third Eye along with 'em: Thus meeting with this Man they march'd with him; and after having made themſelves Maſters of Peloponneſus, they gave him the Town and Territory of Elis according to Articles. Iphitus, who inſtituted the Olympick Exerciſes and Solemnities, was deſcended from this Oxylus. * Pauſanias, in Arcad.

OZANAM (N) a famous Mathematician of the Royal Academy of Sciences, born in the Principality of Dombes A. D. 1640. He went through a Courſe of Humanity, Philoſophy and Divinity; but his Genius lying moſtly for Mathematicks, he preferr'd that Study to the reſt, and attain'd to a very great Degree of Improvement. He wrote a great many ſerviceable Tracts in this Science, moſt of which are deſign'd for Practice; viz. a Tract upon making Dials: Practical Geometry, or an eaſy Method to meaſure all ſorts of Superficies: New Trigonometry: The Uſe of the univerſal Inſtrument, teaching a ready and moſt exact Reſolution of all the Problems of practical Geometry, without any Calculation: A Courſe of Mathematicks, comprehending all the Parts of this Science: Mathematical and phyſical Recreations: The Uſe of the Compaſs of Proportion explain'd and demonſtrated in an eaſy and correct Method: New Elements of Algebra: A Tract concerning Conical Sections: A Mathematical Dictionary, or the general Idea of the Mathematicks; all written in French. * Memoires du Tems.

P.

PACEM, a City within a Kingdom of the ſame Name in the Iſland Sumatra, in Latin Pacemum. It has a large Fort and three Avenues, where they come up to it by a Point of Land to the North. The Sea Ebbs and Flows there almoſt every ſix Hours. Mandeſlo reports that the King of Achim has annex'd the Realms of Pacem and Pedir to his own Dominions, together with the greateſt Part of the northern Side of Sumatra, which was formerly divided into ten Kingdoms: He adds that thoſe who ſail'd thither have only made a Diſcovery of the Coaſt without penetrating up into the Country, where they might have met with a great deal of Wealth unknown to the Inhabitants of the Coaſt Towns. He continues that the Portugueſe mention only two Kingdoms in the middle of the Iſland, viz. Andrigidan and Arvan, taking Notice likewiſe only of the Kingdom of Achim, Pedir, Pacem, Camparam, Zaude, and Manancabo, which are all on this ſide the Line, and upon the Sea Coaſt.. But the Dutch have diſcover'd the Kingdom of Palimbam beyond the Æquator, which affords a Convenience for carrying on their Trade in the Iſland of Java, where they have a very conſiderable Settlement. The Kingdom of Pacem is fourſcore Miles from that of Manancabo, and four Degrees from the Æquator.

PACIFICK SEA (the,) or the South Sea. 'Tis a very large Part of the Ocean. It reaches from North to South, from the Country of Jeſſo to the Tropic of Capricorn, which parts it from the Magellanick Sea, having America to the Weſt, and the Ladrones to the Eaſt. They call it the South Sea, becauſe the Spaniards diſcover'd it at a Place which lies South to the Northern Ocean; and 'twas afterwards call'd the Pacifick Sea, becauſe 'tis ſo little ſubject to Storms, that the Ships which ſail from Acapulco (a Seaport of Mexico) for the Philippines frequently arrive there without being forc'd to ſhift their Sails. 'Tis divided into four Quarters, diſtinguiſh'd by the Names of the Sea of Jeſſo, of California, the South Sea, and the Peruvian Sea. There are a great many Iſlands diſcover'd in this Sea, of which thoſe call'd Solomon's Iſles, and the Country of Quir are the moſt conſiderable. * Maty, Diction.

PAGAN (Blaiſe Francis Count de,) born in Provence A. D. 1604. He engag'd in the military Profeſſion very early, and was at the Siege of Caën at ſixteen Years of Age. He behav'd himſelf with great Courage and Conduct upon ſeveral Occaſions. In 1642 King Lewis XIII. made him Field Marſhal in Portugal; in which Year he loſt his Sight by a violent Sickneſs. He had a ſtrong Genius for Mathematicks, made a great Progreſs in this Science, particularly in that part of it which relates to Fortification. He likewiſe made Morals, Politicks, Hiſtory, and Geography his Study; and in ſhort, was one of the moſt accompliſh'd Gentlemen of his time. Lewis XIII. us'd frequently to ſay that the Count de Pagan was one of the beſt bred, handſomeſt, moſt dextrous and braveſt Men in his Kingdom. When the Loſs of his Sight had diſabled him for the Field, he re-aſſum'd the Study of the Mathematicks with more Application than formerly; and in 1645 publiſh'd his Treatiſe of Fortification. Now all thoſe who underſtand moſt of this Matter, agree that nothing ſo ſerviceable and fine, had hitherto appear'd upon this Subject; and that the new Diſcoveries and Improvements made ſince are little more than Concluſions drawn from Pagan's Principles. In 1651 he publiſh'd his Geometrical Theorems, which give ſufficient Proof of his being Maſter of all the Parts of Mathematicks. In 1655 he printed a French Paraphraſe of a Spaniſh Deſcription of the River of the Amazons, done by P. Chriſtopher de Rennes a Jeſuit; and notwithſtanding his being blind, 'tis ſaid for certain that he gave Directions for making the Map of this River and the neighbouring Country, which ſtands prefix'd to this Work. In 1657 he publiſh'd his Theory of the Planets unembarraſs'd with the Lumber of Eccentricks and Epicycles, which the old Aſtronomers had invented to explain their Motion; whereas this Count deſcribes their Courſe by Ellipſes, and thus the true Place and true Motion of the Planets is ſettled with great Eaſe and Exactneſs. This Performance made him no leſs famous among the Aſtronomers, than he was before among the Engineers for his Tract upon Fortification. In 1658 he publiſh'd his Aſtronomical Tables done in a very ſhort and clear Method. But as 'tis hard for great Men not to have ſomething of Foibleſſe, his Failing lay in giving too much Credit to judicial Aſtrology. And therefore it muſt be ſaid what he wrote upon this Subject is by no means ſerviceable to his Memory. He was eſteem'd and viſited by all Perſons of Quality and Learning. He dy'd November 18, 1665, at ſixty one Years of Age. * Perrault, les Hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France pendant ce Siécle.

PAGI (Antony,) a Franciſcan born at Rognes a ſmall Town in Provence near Aix in 1624. he took the Habit in the Convent of the Cordeliers at Arles, and was Profeſs'd there in the Year 1641. and after having finiſh'd his Courſe of Philoſophy and Divinity, he preach'd for ſome time with Reputation, and was more than once Provincial of his Order. His Buſineſs did not hinder him from ſtudying Chronology, and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; and here, he ſucceeded ſo far as to become one of the beſt Critics of his Age in this kind of learning. He has publiſh'd a learned Diſſertation upon the Conſulſhips, and a Critic upon Baronius's Annals, which not only furniſhes a great many Corrections, but is likewiſe Supplemental to the Cardinals Hiſtory. The firſt Tome of this Work was printed by him at Paris A. D. 1689. and ſince his Death the whole has been printed in four Volumes Folio in 1705. he has invented, in Imitation of Scaliger, a new Period which he calls the Greek Roman and which he makes uſe of for adjuſting all the Epochaes. He dy'd at Aix in Provence June 1699. To conclude his Character in a Word; he was a very learned Perſon in Hiſtory and Chronology, a judicious Critic, ſmooth and inoffenſive in his Manner: His Style is plain and unornamented, and well ſuited to Chronological Diſquiſitions. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* PALAMEDES, Son to Nauplius: Euripides, as cited by Diogenes Laertius, gives him the Character of a learned Poet. And Suidas aſſures us that his Poems were ſuppreſs'd either by Agamemnon, or by Homer. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. cap. 7. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſe des hiſt. Prof.

PALEPHATUS, an Athenian, Son of Acteus and Bio according to ſome Writers; tho' others will have it that Diobleus was his Father, and Metanira his Mother: Suidas ſets him in the Liſt of the Poets prior to Homer. He is cited by Chriſtodorus in the Anthologia as an old Poet. Suidas makes him the Author of a Poem call'd Coſmopœia conſiſting of five thouſand Verſes; of the Generation of Apollo and Diana, in three thouſand Verſes; of a Diſcourſe between Venus and Cupid, five thouſand Verſes long, and of a Compoſition, where Latona was the Subject. Suidas reckons the Ionicks to him, which others aſſign to an Ægyptian or Athenian Grammarian of a later Age; the firſt Book of which is cited by Harpocration and Stephanus Byzantius. Suidas likewiſe makes him the Author of five Books of incredible Things. And there is now extant a Tract with this Title under Palephatus's Name printed with Æſop's Fables and which appears to be of conſiderable Antiquity; that which St. Jerom in Euſebius's Chronicon, which Euſtathius, Tzetzes and ſome others have cited from Palephatus, may be ſeen in the Book now extant: 'Tis divided into fifty one Chapters. There was another Palephatus of Abydos, who liv'd in the Time of Alexander the Great, and wrote the Hiſtories of Cyprus, Delos, Attica, and Arabia. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſe des Hiſt. Prof.

* PALENTIA: For Clement VII. in Morery Vol. II. read Clement VI.

* PALILIA, a Feſtival in Honour of the Goddeſs Pales.

les. Upon this Holiday they made Bonfires in the Towns with Stubble and Beans, at the bottom of which they threw ſome Ox's Blood and the Aſhes of a Calf burn'd. In the Country they were very early in lighting up a great Fire, made of Olive Branches, of Pine and Lawrel; they threw Sulphur into it, and drove their Cattle round it; the People danc'd about it, offer'd Milk, burnt Wine, and Millet, which Sacrifice was attended with Devotions for preſerving their Cattle, and making 'em fruitful. * Ovid. Faſt. lib. 4. Greek and Roman Antiquities.

* PALLAS, the Emperor Claudius's manumis'd Slave, had the biggeſt Shareſt in the Adminiſtration under this Prince, and was Lord Treaſurer. He had formerly been Antonia's Slave, Tiberius's Siſter in Law, and was truſted with the delivery of a Letter where this Lady gave the Emperor advice of Sejanus's Conſpiracy. 'Twas this Pallas who perſwaded Claudius to marry his Niece Agrippina, after the Death of the infamous Meſſalina; and who afterwards prevail'd with him to adopt Nero, and appointed him his Succeſſor, to the diſheriſon of his Son Britannicus. 'Twas ſuſpected that Agrippina had bought Pallas's Favour at the Expence of her Honour; and it ſeems Claudius, tho' particularly heavy, was apprehenſive of this ſcandalous Correſpondence; and one Day when he was warm with a Glaſs of Wine, he ſpoke out his Jealouſy aloud, and threaten'd revenge. However, Agrippina and her Favourite were too quick for him, and procur'd Locuſta to poiſon him in a Plate of Muſhrooms. Notwithſtanding Nero was indebted to Pallas for the Empire, he ſoon took check at the inſolent Humour of this manumis'd Upſtart, and diſcharg'd him from managing his Revenues. This Diſgrace affected Agrippina very ſenſibly: However, Pallas kept himſelf eaſy with the Intereſt which kept with him, and the immenſe Riches ſtill in his Hands. But this very Wealth afterwards ruin'd him; for Nero, who had a mind to his Eſtate, took his Life ſeven Years after he had turn'd him out of the Miniſtry. * Sueton. Tacit. Annal. 12, 13, 14. Dion. Caſſius, lib. 60.

PALMA (Aulus Cornelius,) one of Trajan's Favourites who ſet up a Statue for him. He was Conſul A. D. 99. and 109. Before his ſecond Conſulſhip when he was Governor of Syria, he made Arabia Petræa a Province of the Empire, which for a long time before had been govern'd by independent Princes. Palma's Intereſt expir'd with Trajan; and all the publick Service he had done could not prevent his falling a Sacrifice to Adrian's Reſentment: Thus he was deſtroy'd by the unrelenting Emperor A. D. 119. * Dion. Caſſius, lib 68. Euſeb. Chronic.

PALMA, a Town of Spain in Andaluſia. It ſtands at the Confluence of the Guadalquivir and the Xenil, one or two Leagues below Ecija. * Maty, Diction.

PAMPHUS, or Pampho, an Athenian, contemporary with Linus: He made Hymns which were ſung with thoſe of Olenus and Orpheus at Ceres's Feſtivals. Pauſanias reports he had read 'em, and cites thoſe written by Pamphus upon Ceres, Neptune, Diana, Cupid, Proſerpine, the Graces, and upon Linus's Death. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

* PAN, a pretended Deity of the Ægyptians, who worſhipp'd him in the Figure of an He Goat: They call'd him likewiſe Mendes, becauſe that Word ſignifies a Goat in the Ægyptian Language. Euſebius reporting Porphyry's Sentiments in that Philoſopher's Terms, tells us that Pan was one of the good Genii much devoted to Bacchus, who ſometimes appear'd to Labourers in the Country, and put 'em into ſuch terrible Frights, that many of 'em dy'd under the Conſternation. Here Euſebius turns ſhort upon Porphyry, and convicted him of Inconſiſtency, for affirming Pan a good Genius, and yet frighting honeſt People out of their Lives. 'Tis granted Pan was worſhipp'd in Ægypt in the Figure of an He Goat, for the Devils frequently aſſum'd that Shape. The Scripture often calls evil Spirits Piloſi, or hairy ones. The Hebrew Word Sehirim ſignifies hairy ones, or Goats: Even ſo early as Moſes this kind of Idolatry was common, and had got footing among the Iſraelites, who were forbidden to ſacrifice to theſe hairy ones, and as the vulgar has it non ſacrificabunt amplius Sacrificia ſua Piloſis, poſt quos fornicati ſunt. Herodotus reckon'd Pan amongſt their eight Deities which were prior to their other twelve; and that at the Town Mendes they had an holy He-Goat, after the Death of which Beaſt all the Country went into mourning; as they did in other Places of that Country at the Death of the Apis, or Mnevis. Diodorus Siculus reports that the Ægyptian Prieſts conſecrated themſelves in the firſt Place to Pan, and painted him in their Temples in the Form of an He-Goat, pretending that the meaning of this Repreſentation was no more than returning the Gods Thanks for the prolific Virtue of Nature, and the Fertility of their own Country.

The religious Hiſtory of Pan came but late to the Greeks. Herodotus affirms 'twas not above eight hundred Years before his time, and that the Greeks ſuppos'd him the Son of Mercury and Penelope. Now, if Ulyſſes's Penelope was Pan's Mother, his Worſhip could not begin earlier than the Trojan War.

Pauſanias relates, that in the Reign of Pandion II. King of Athens, the Exerciſes call'd Lupercalia Lycæa were inſtituted in Arcadia by Lycaon King of that Country: Theſe Spectacles and Diverſions were near Pan's Temple, tho' perform'd in Honour to Jupiter Lycæus. When Evander remov'd from Arcadia into Italy, he carry'd the Lupercalian Solemnities along with him. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus deſcribes theſe Solemnities, and takes notice they were continu'd in his time. But then Pauſanias and this Author differ in one Circumſtance: For Pauſanias aſſures us that Lycaon dedicated theſe Diverſions to Jupiter Lycæus, and Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus reports 'em kept in Honour of Pan. But this ſeeming Diſagreement may be reconcil'd by conſidering that 'tis probable the Arcadians made Jupiter and Pan the ſame: That this was the Caſe may be evinc'd from the Hiſtorian laſt mention'd, who aſſures us that Pan was reckon'd the greateſt and moſt ancient Arcadian God. Now Arcadia being a mountainous Country, and thick ſet with Foreſts, 'tis no wonder they ſhould make the God of the Mountains and Groves the ſupreme Deity. Beſides, Ovid in his Faſti informs us that Pan's Prieſt was call'd Flamen Dialis, as belonging to Jupiter. Thus 'tis plain that Jupiter and Pan were much the ſame. * Antiquit. Græc. & Rom.

PANDARE, Pandore, or Pandere, for they are written theſe three different ways in ſeveral of Pliny's Manuſcripts: This Hiſtorian reports 'em Indians dwelling in Valleys or Savannahs, and living two hundred Years; and that their Hair, which was white in their Youth, grew black when they grew old. * Plin. Hiſt. Nat. lib. 7. cap. 2.

PANHAPEL, a ſmall Town in the Peninſula of India on this Side the Ganges. 'Tis within Malabar, and ſtands upon the Mountains of Gate, ſeven Leagues from the Town Angamale to the North. Panhapel is the Capital of a ſmall Country, and has a Prince of it's own. * Maty, Diction.

PANNON (Janus Pannonius,) a Biſhop of Quinq-Eccleſiæ, or five Churches in Lower Hungary. He liv'd in the Reign of Matthias Huniades, in the beginning of the ſixteenth Century. He was the firſt of his time who reviv'd the polite part of Learning in Italy, and afterwards in Hungary. 'Tis ſaid he ſpoke and wrote Greek and Latin with great Readineſs, Propriety and Elegance. He wrote Elegies and Epigrams, which acquir'd him Reputation, at leaſt in his own time. Some will have it that he exceeded himſelf in his Annals of Hungary, which he wrote in heroick Verſe. * G. Matth. Konigius, Biblioth. Vet. & Nov. Joſeph Pierius. Valerian, de Infelicitate Litteratorum.

PANTHEON, a Temple in Honour of all the Gods, built by M. Agrippa, Auguſtus's Son in Law. The Figure of it was round, Brick without, and fac'd with Marble of ſeveral Colours within. There were Niches round it where the Statues of the Gods were plac'd; particularly Minerva's in Ivory, done by the famous Statuary Phidias, and that of Venus who had Pendants made of Queen Cleopatra's extraordinary Pearl: Auguſtus had this Pearl ſplit in two, there being never a one to match it, becauſe that Ægyptian Queen, who had another of the ſame Bigneſs and Value, is ſaid to have diſſolv'd it at an Entertainment with Marc-Antony, and ſwallow'd it down. Venus's Pearl weigh'd half an Ounce, and was reckon'd worth ten Millions of Seſterces, which amounts to ten Millions, eighteen thouſand, five hundred and fifty four of French Livres. The Gates of this Temple were Braſs, the Beams were plated with Braſs gilt, and 'twas cover'd with Silver Slates or Tiles, which Conſtantine brought to Conſtantinople. 'Twas dedicated to Jupiter Vindex, or the Revenger. The Emperor Adrian built a Temple of much the ſame Figure and Magnificence at Athens, in Honour of all the Gods. 'Twas ſupported with an hundred and twenty Pillars of Phrygian Marble, to which he added a Library and a Gymnaſium for Fencing and other Exerciſes, ornamented with an hundred Pillars of Lydian Marble. * Danet.

PAOKING, a Town in China; 'tis a ninth Rate City in the Province of Huquam, and has four other Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

PAPEBROCHIUS (Daniel,) a Jeſuit who joyn'd with Bollandus and Henſchenius in making a complete Collection of the Saints Lives: Papebrochius travell'd to Rome with Henſchenius, and publiſh'd the Month of March in three Volumes. Henſchenius afterwards falling into a Palſie, Papebrochius was at the Head of the Undertaking, and printed the following Months of April, May, and June. He had a Conteſt with the Carmelites who wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt him and his Partners. However, theſe latter defended themſelves, and Papebrochius for his Share wrote a Diſcourſe printed at Antwerp A. D. 1696 againſt Sebaſtian of St. Paul a Carmelite. The Carmelites notwithſtanding had Intereſt enough to get the Lives of the Saints publiſh'd by Bollandus and Papebrochius, put into the Index Expurgatorius. Papebrochius dy'd in the Beginning of the eighteenth Century. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* PAPINIAN. For Antony, Caracalla, in Morery, Vol. II. read Antoninus Caracalla.

PAPINIUS (Sextus,) a Roman Nobleman who with Belienus Baſſus was put to the Queſtion and cruelly whipt in the Emperor Caligula's preſence, not for any Crimes he had committed, but only to divert that Prince's barbarous Humour. 'Tis not probable this Papinius was the ſame with him who was afterwards Captain of Caligula's Guards; and an Accomplice with Cherea the Head of the Conſpiracy for murdering this worthleſs Emperor. * Seneca. Tacit. lib. 4. cap. 68.

PARANIMPHI, thoſe who attended the Bridegroom and Bride on their Marriage Day. The Jews and Greeks had their Paranimphs at nuptial Solemnities. There is mention made of theſe Paranimphs at Chriſtian Weddings in the decretal Epiſtles reckon'd to Evariſtus and Soter: But theſe are ſpurious Records. In the fourth Council of Carthage held A. D. 398 'tis decreed that the Bride and Bridegroom ſhould be convey'd by their Relations or Bridemen to receive the Prieſt's Bleſſing. Regino, Burchardus and Gratian have inſerted this Canon in their Collections. The ſame cuſtom is ſettled in the capitulars of Charlemain, and by the Laws of the Lombards. The Greeks mention Paranimphs in their Eucologia. The Term Paranimph is us'd in the Faculty of Divinity in Paris at the Ceremony of giving the Degree of Batchelor in Divinity: Here the Orator is call'd a Paranimph, whoſe Buſineſs it is to make a Speech in Commendation of thoſe admitted to that Degree. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Hofman, Univerſal Dictionary.

PARPALLOTS: a Name formerly given in France to the Hugonots or Calviniſts. Before the Edict of Nantes they call'd the Proteſtants Parpaillots, becauſe Francis Fabricius Serbellon a Kinſman of the Pope's had caus'd Mr. John Perrin Lord of Parpaille to be beheaded at Avignon Auguſt 8. 1562. and from hence came the party Name of Parpaillot, which was reviv'd at the Siege of Montauban, and ſtill continues in France amongſt the Mob. This is the Original of the Name if we may give credit to a Letter written by a Calviniſt upon the Death of the Marquis de Saint Privas, printed at the End of a Diſcourſe entitled Politique du Clerge de France &c: The ſecond Edition á la Haye, A. D. 1681.

* PARTHENAI, a ſmall Town in France in the Province of Poicton within the Juriſdiction of the Preſidial of Poictiers. It ſtands upon the River Toüe, about nine Leagues from Poictiers to the Weſt. 'Twas often taken and retaken in the ſixteenth Century, during the civil Wars of France. The Proteſtants retreated thither after the Battle of Moncontour; but not believing themſelves in a Condition to maintain their Poſt, they quitted it at the approach of the Duke of Anjou's Troops. They had made themſelves Maſters of it the Year before, and ventur'd to hang Malo the Governor of the Caſtle, becauſe he had been ſo bold, as they called it, to hold it out againſt the Army. D' Aubigné's Hiſtory informs us that in the Year 1588 the Proteſtants miſcarried more than once in their attempts upon this Town. Parthenai is the Capital of a ſmall Country of Gaſtine and of the Duchy of Meilleraye. The Lords of Parthenai have the Title of Lords of St. Martin of Tours. But now the Lordſhip of Parthenai is eſcheated to the Crown by the deceaſe of John l' Archevêque Lord of Soubize who dy'd without Iſſue Male. The Family of Parthenai, an ancient and conſiderable Houſe, took the Surname of l' Archevêque, or Archbiſhop becauſe they were deſcended from an Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux. 'Tis ſaid that this Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux was Joſſelin de Parthenai, who dy'd in 1086; and that William de Parthenai, who took the Surname of Archbiſhop in the Year 1100, was his Son. But Du Cheſne will have Archambald Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux Joſſelin's Predeceſſor, the Head of this Family. * Bayle, Diction. Critic.

PASOR (Matthias,) Profeſſor of Divinity at Groninguen, was George's Son, Divinity and Hebrew profeſſor likewiſe at Herborn, and afterwards Greek Profeſſor at Franeker. Matthias born at Herborn within the Earldom of Naſſau April A. D. 1599, ſtudyed firſt at Herborn, afterwards at Marpourg; from whence he return'd to Herborn, and from thence return'd to Heidelberg, where he was choſen Mathematic Profeſſor A. D. 1620. the War within the Palatinate made him travel into England, where he ſettled after having made ſomewhat of the Tour of France. He was made Profeſſor of the oriental Languages in the Univerſity of Oxford, and held the Chair till 1629. when being invited to Groninguen he ſettled there the remainder of his Life, and was ſucceſſively Philoſophy, Mathematick, and Divinity Profeſſor at that Town He dy'd in 1658 without publiſhing any Works but his Father's which he carefully revis'd. His Fathers Chief Performance is his Lexicon upon all the Greek Words of the New Teſtament. * Matth. Paſor. in vit. ſua. Bayle, Diction. Critic.

* PASSAW, a City of Germany in the lower Bavaria. The Reader may pleaſe to obſerve that Charles V. gave John Frederic Duke of Saxony and Landgrave of Heſſe their Liberty ſome Time before the Treaty at Paſſaw. * Sleidan. Comment. See Morery, Vol. II.

PASTOR, a Roman Gentleman who had the Misfortune to fall under the Emperor Caligula's diſpleaſure, who reſolv'd to execute him becauſe he was too genteely dreſſed; when his Father came to beg his Son's pardon Caligula ordered him immediately to be carried to the Scaffold. And to make his Barbarity ſtill more inſulting, he invited the Father to dinner the ſame Day, who durſt not excuſe himſelf becauſe he had another Son Living: And here the old Gentleman was forc'd to ſettle his Face, to wear a Crown, and receive the Perfumes cuſtomary at great entertainments; and in ſhort, was forced to counterfeit all the Marks of Pleaſure under the Exceſs of Grief, to preſerve his ſecond Son; tho' he could not procure the Liberty to bury the firſt. Suetonius reports another Circumſtance; and that the Emperor was ſo exceſſively Inhumane as to make the Father a Spectator at the Son's Murther. * Seneca, de Ira, lib. 2. cap. 33. Sueton. lib. 4. cap. 27.

PASTOS, in Latin Paſtorum Regio, a Country in Southern America. It lies upon the ſouth Sea, and borders upon Popayon and Quito. There is no Account of any Town in this Country; but one of the Mountains in it is a Vulcano, and throws up a great deal of Smoak and Flame. * Maty, Diction.

PATALENE, in Latin Pallena & Patalena, formerly Phlegra & Caſſandriæ Peninſula. A ſmall Peninſula in Macedonia. It lies between the Gulph of Salonichi and that of Ajomama. The Towns Mendin, Caſſandria and Canipro, which is the old Pallene, are within it. * Baudrand.

PATERIUS, Pope Gregory the great's Scholar, a Notary of the Church of Rome, flouriſh'd in the latter End of the ſixth, and the beginning of the ſeventh Century.

Century. He made a Collection of the Explanations of difficult Paſſages in the Old and New Teſtament extracted from the Works of the Pope abovemention'd. Of theſe at firſt there were three Books, two of the Old and one of the New Teſtament: But at preſent there's only the firſt and the laſt extant, which are printed with Gregory the great's Works. P. Ouden is poſitive that he has ſeen a Manuſcript of the ſecond Book in the Library of the Celeſtin Monks at Paris. 'Tis ſaid that Paterius was at laſt Biſhop of Breſcia. * Cave, Hiſt. Liter. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. VI.

PATERNUS, Biſhop of Vannes in the VIth. Century, and born in that Dioceſe A. D. 490. he travell'd into England to preach Chriſtianity there, and turn'd Monk in that Iſland. He afterwards went to Paleſtin with St. David and St. Telio, and was conſecrated by the Patriarch of Jeruſalem John III. Upon his return into England he perform'd the Functions of his Character in the County of Cardigan. The Burghers of Vannes afterwards requeſted him for their Biſhop, which offer he accepted, and dy'd A. D. 555. * Baillet, vies des Saints.

PATERNO, formerly call'd Hybla major, a Town with the Title of a principality. It ſtands in the valley de Dæmona in Sicily at the Foot of Mount Gibel near the River Jaretta, ſix Leagues from the Ruines of Catania to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

PATERNUS (Tarruntius,) Secretary to the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, was diſpatch'd by this Prince to the Cotii a German Clan, who promis'd to joyn the Marcomanni and be Auxiliaries to the Romans: But they fail'd in their Word, and treated Paternus very ill; for which Perfidiouſneſs they were afterwards ſeverely corrected. Paternus commanded the Roman Army in Germany A. D. 179, and gain'd a great Victory againſt the Marcomanni, the Quadi, and the Hermonduri. He was afterwards Præfectus Prætorio under the Emperor Commodus, who put him to death ſome few Days after he had made him a Senator, and given him a conſular Habit. 'Twas at the Inſtance and Impeachment of Perennis: The Pretence was that he had engag'd in a Plot to depoſe the Emperor, and ſet Salvius Julianus in his Place. * Dion. Caſſius, lib. 71 & 72. Spartian. Vit. Commod

PATIZITHES, one of the Magi to whom Cambyſes left the Direction of his Affairs in Perſia, when he march'd into Ægypt: But he prov'd falſe to his Truſt: He ſeiz'd the Opportunity of Smerdis's Death, who was little known, and ſet up his Brother Oropaſtes for the true Smerdis; for it ſeems they were very like in Shape, Features and Complexion. The Counterfeit Smerdis being thus ſet upon the Throne, Patizithes diſpatch'd Heralds to the Perſian Army in Ægypt to recognize this new Prince, and ſolicit a Revolt from Cambyſes. Upon this News, Cambyſes countermarch'd his Troops, in order to puniſh the Magi: But receiving a mortal Wound by his Sword ſlipping out of the Scabbard when he mounted his Horſe, Smerdis continued poſſeſs'd: But it was not long before ſeven of the principal Nobility in Perſia having diſcover'd the Impoſture, kill'd the Counterfeit Smerdis, his Brother Patizithes, and the other Magi, and choſe Darius Hyſtaſpes King, five hundred twenty one Years before the Incarnation. Herodot. lib.* 3. Juſtin. lib. 1.

PATNA, a Kingdom within the Mogul's Empire in Aſia. It lies to the South of the Kingdom of Pitan, between the Ganges and the Perſely, near their Confluence. The Town Patna which ſtands upon the Perſely, is the only remarkable Place in it. * Maty, Diction.

* PATRIARCHATE, the patriarchal Privileges. The Patriarchs have a Privilege of Honour and Juriſdiction. The privilege of Honour is Precedency with Reſpect to the other Metropolitans. The Privilege of Juriſdiction is a Right to ordain the Metropolitans within their Patriarchate; to convene Councils of Biſhops as far as their Patriarchate reaches; and to have a general Inſpection over all the Provinces which depend upon it. * Du Pin, de Antiq. Eccleſ. Diſcipl.

PATRICA, a Town in the eccleſiaſtical State within Campania di Roma towards the Coaſt, three Leagues from Oſtia to the Eaſt. Half a League from this Town there is a Hill call'd Monte de Livano, where 'tis ſuppos'd the Old Lavinium ſtood, which was built by Æneas: And the Tradition goes that the Church of St. Petronella upon this Hill, is the ſame with the old Temple of Anna Porenna which ſtood in the Town of Lavinium. * Baudrand.

PATRICII, a new Honour created by the Emperor Conſtantine according to Zoſimus, was only bare Title without Juriſdiction. The Patricii were ſo call'd becauſe they were look'd upon as it were Fathers to the Emperors; but notwithſtanding the Luſtre of their Diſtinction the Conſuls always took Place of 'em: Julius Conſtantius Conſtantine's Brother, and Optatus ſuppos'd to be his Brother in Law, receiv'd this Honourable Title from his Majeſty, which commonly run for Life. The Conſtantinopolitan Emperors gave the Title of Patricius to the Governours of great Cities in Italy, Sicily, and Africk. They likewiſe gave it to ſome Kings and foreign Princes, becauſe this Dignity was look'd upon as ſuperior to the Reſt. Pepin the Short, Charles and Carloman Kings of France were call'd Patricians of Rome by the Popes; and Pope Adrian I. gave Charlemain the Title of Roman Patrician before he had that of Emperor. This Diſtinction of Patrician was given in France in the Reign of the Burgundian Princes, who call'd their firſt Miniſters of State their Governors of Provinces &c. Patricians, and gave 'em the Precedency of Dukes. Their great Officers had the ſame Power with the Mayers of the Palace at the French Court. This Title is ſtill continued in ſome Towns of the Low Countries, where the moſt conſiderable Families, and which for ſeveral Ages have held the firſt Rank both for Quality and Office, are call'd Patrician. Thus, at Bruſſels there are ſeven Noble or Patrician Families, who enjoy great Privileges. Erycius Puteanus, Divæus and Andrew de la Roque, in his Tract of Nobility, obſerve that the ſeven Noble Patrician Families of Bruſſels have a grant of their Privileges from the Sovereign A. D. 1306: Which Patent ſets forth that the Burgomaſters and Echevins of Bruſſels ſhall always be choſen out of the ſeven Patrician Families. This Regulation has been, and is ſtill always obſerv'd by the Governours of the Low Countries. The Original Patrician Families of Bruſſels were thoſe of the Gerhuigs, Serroëloffs, Suwers, Caudenberg, Sleeus, Stenweghe, Roodenbecke. Moſt of theſe being extinct for want of Iſſue Male, their Privileges have been carried by Heireſſes into other Noble Families, as into that of Bliteſwick, Joquec, Farvaques, &c. There are likewiſe Patrician Families at Louvain, where the Tradition is that the Count de Louvain who had ſeven Daughters, married 'em to ſeven Noblemen or Gentlemen of this Town, to whom he granted the Diſtinction and Privileges of Patrician. * Cod. Theod. Zoſim. Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latin. Juriſprudentia Heroica printed at Bruſſels A. D. 1668. Erycius Puteanus, Bruxella Septenaria. La Roque, Traite de la Nobleſſe.

PATROCLUS, a Greek Hiſtorian who travell'd into the Indies in the Reigns of Seleucus Nicanor, and Antiochus. Strabo looks upon him as a Perſon of the beſt Credit, becauſe he had not only view'd the Places he deſcribes like Nearchus and Oneſicritus, but had likewiſe govern'd theſe Provinces; and beſides, he underſtood Mathematicks, took Pains for the beſt Information, and made uſe of Treaſurer Xenocles's Memoirs, which were reckon'd the beſt. * Pliny, Hiſt. Nat. lib. 6. cap. 17. Strabo, Geograph.

* PAUL (St.) To what has been obſerv'd in Morery Vol. II. concerning this Apoſtle, may be ſubjoyn'd a ſhort Account of his Writings, and particularly with reſpect to the time. We have fourteen of St. Paul's Epiſtles; all which have his Name expreſs'd; excepting that directed to the Hebrews. But then they are not all rang'd in the New Teſtament according to the Order of time. Thoſe written to whole Churches ſtand firſt; and then thoſe addreſs'd to particular Perſons follow; the firſt of the firſt kind is the Epiſtle to the Romans written from Corinth A. D. 57. or 58. The firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians written from Epheſus about Pentecoſt A. D. 57. The ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians was written about the middle of the ſame Year. The Epiſtle to the Galatians was written at the latter End of the Year 56. The Epiſtle to the Epheſians was written when St. Paul was Priſoner at Rome: The Epiſtle to the Philippians was written at the end of the Year 61, or the beginning of the Year 62. The Epiſtle to the Coloſſians ſent by Tychicus and Oneſimus was written in the Year 62. The firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, which was the firſt in time, was written after he was expell'd that Town A. D. 52. The ſecond Epiſtle to the ſame was written ſome time after. The firſt Epiſtle to Timothy, ſent to him after St. Paul had left him at Epheſus, was written in the Year 58. The ſecond Epiſtle to the ſame was written by St. Paul when Priſoner at Rome. The Epiſtle to Titus was written after his Return from Rome into Aſia, in the Year 63. The Epiſtle to Philemon was written from Rome in the Year 61. As to the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, ſome of the Ancients have doubted whether 'twas written by St. Paul. And notwithſtanding ſome have reckoned it to St. Clement, St. Luke, or St. Barnabas, yet there are Circumſtances in it, which determine it to St. Paul and no other. The Ancients, as St. Jerom obſerves, believ'd it written originally in Hebrew; and if ſo, it might be poſſibly tranſlated by St. Luke or St. Clement: But let this be as it will, 'tis certainly St. Paul's Epiſtle. As to the Chronological reſpect, it was written at Rome either when St. Paul was Priſoner there, or ſoon after his Diſcharge, that is in the beginning of the Year 63. As to the Acts of St. Thecla, they are certainly ſpurious; and a Prieſt of Aſia was convicted by St. John the Evangeliſt of forging 'em. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Hieron. Ambroſ. Chryſoſt. Auguſtin. Baron. in Annal. Godeau, Vie de St. Paul, & Hiſt. de l'Egliſe. Petav. Scaliger & Riccioli, Chron. Reform. Du Pin, preliminary Diſſertat. upon the Bible.

PAUL III. For the Duke of Modena refus'd his City to be the Seat of the Council in Morery Vol. II. read the Duke of Mantua; and for Platina read Onuphrius.

* PAUL I. Patriarch of Conſtantinople. For the Emperor Conſtance in Morery Vol. II. read Conſtantius.

* PAUL, of Burgos. For a Jew by Religion in Morery Vol. II. read a Jew by Birth.

PAUL, Biſhop of Emeſa, aſſiſted at the Council of Epheſus A. D. 431; and was Acacius of Beroea's Proxy. After this Council broke up, he procur'd an Accommodation between the Eaſtern Biſhops and St. Cyril of Alexandria, and the reſt of the Ægyptian Churches. He drew up a Confeſſion of Faith to be ſign'd by both Parties, and made two Homilies upon the Subject of the Union: They are extant in the Acts of the Council of Epheſus. There is likewiſe a Letter of this Paul to Anatolius in Lupus's Collection. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

PAUL, a Deacon of Aquileia, call'd Winfride from the Name of his Family, was Secretary to Deſiderius the laſt King of the Lombards. This Prince being made Priſoner by Charlemain in the Year 774, and his Kingdom entirely deſtroy'd, this Paulus Diaconus fell into the Conqueror's Hands, who treated him very generouſly. But his Inclination to his Prince being viſibly warm, he was ſuſpected of being in a Plot, and baniſh'd to the Extremity of Italy, upon the Gulph of Venice: From whence making his Eſcape to the Duke of Beneventum, Deſiderius's Son in Law, he ſoon after turn'd Monk at Mount Caſſin, where he dy'd in the beginning of the ninth Century. This Author wrote the Hiſtory of the Lombards in ſix Books. He is likewiſe reckon'd, but without Truth, the Author of an Abridgment of the Roman Hiſtory, extracted from ſeveral Writers: For notwithſtanding he wrote an Addition to the Abridgment of Eutropius, he is not the Author of this Collection, which rather belongs to Anaſtaſius Bibliothecarius. He wrote an Epitome of the Hiſtory of the firſt Biſhops of Metz, tranſcrib'd by the French Hiſtorians, and inſerted in the laſt Edition of the Bibliotheca Patrum. The firſt Ages of this Hiſtory, which he runs up to the Apoſtles, are entirely romantic. He wrote theſe Lives, as he tells us himſelf, in his Hiſtory of the Lombards, at the inſtance of Angilramus Biſhop of Metz. Sigebert aſſures us that he wrote the Life of Gregory the Great, printed in the laſt Edition of this Pope's Works. 'Tis ſuppos'd that the Hymn Ut queant Laxis is his Compoſition. To conclude with him; this Paulus Diaconus, by Charlemain's Order, wrote a Book of Homilies or Leſſons for all the Days in the Year, extracted from the Fathers: This Book was printed at Spire A. D. 1472 by Peter Drach, with a Letter of Charlemain's prefix'd to it. This Letter with ſome Extracts of the firſt Homilies was reprinted by Mabillon. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VII. & VIII.

PAULUS, a Spaniard, and Secretary to the Emperor Conſtantius, made himſelf famous by his Barbarities: He had the Sirname of Catena upon the ſcore of his Dexterity to tack Articles of Impeachment one to another, till he had made a ſort of a Chain of 'em. He was ſent into Britain A. D. 353, to bring off the Commanders of Legions, and other Officers tax'd for having a Share in Magnentius's Conſpiracy; tho' their Crime was only obeying his Orders, as being in no Condition to reſiſt. However, if they went this length they exceeded the Bounds of Duty: But this Failure apart, Paulus executed his Commiſſion with great Inhumanity, and made little Diſtinction between the innocent and the guilty. Martinus Governor of the Iſland, and who had a Regard for Juſtice, proteſted againſt this Uſage, and declared he would rather throw up his Command than ſee things puſh'd to ſuch Exceſſes. But Paulus threaten'd him hard on the other ſide, and that he would inform againſt him as having a Share in the Revolt, and carry him loaden with Irons to Conſtantius. Now being proſecuted and convicted of high Treaſon was almoſt the ſame thing in this Prince's Reign: Inſomuch that Martinus driven to Deſpair, drew and tilted at Paulus, but happening to wound him but ſlightly, he plung'd his Sword in his own Body, and ſo dy'd. This Accident, tho' unreputable to Conſtantius, gave no Abatement to his Rigour; for thoſe whom Paulus drag'd away were put to the Queſtion, moſt of 'em baniſh'd, and ſome executed. Libanius mentions leaden Balls with which Paulus beat one Ariſtophanes to death. This inhumane Miniſter of State was burn'd alive in the next Reign. * Ammianus Marcellinus, lib. 14. Liban. Orat. 9. Tillemont, Hiſtoire des Empereurs.

PAULINUS, Biſhop of Treves, and Succeſſor to St. Maximin in the middle of the fourth Century. He maintain'd the catholick Faith boldly againſt the Arians. When St. Athanaſius was ſent back to Alexandria, he travell'd to Rome, and carry'd Urſacius and Valens's (two Arian Biſhops) Recantation to Pope Julius. This Paulinus was the only Biſhop that held firm for Athanaſius in the ſecond Council of Arles A. D. 353, and for this Reſolution was baniſh'd into Phrygia, where he dy'd in the Year 358. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV.

PECTORAL, or Breaſtplate part of the Habit of a Jewiſh High-Prieſt. 'Twas a piece of Cloth doubled, of a Span ſquare, in which twelve precious Stones were ſet in Gold Sockets, with the Names of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael cut upon 'em: This Breaſtplate fix'd to the Ephod, or upper Veſtment of the High-Prieſt's Robes, was worn at his Breaſt on all ſolemn Occaſions. In this Breaſtplate, as the Scriptures inform us, the Urim and Thummim were put. By this Urim and Thummim the divine Oracles were given: But what they were, or in what manner the Anſwers to the Queſtions ask'd were given, is not eaſy to determine. Some will have them to be the Tetragrammaton, or the ineffable Name of God, which being written or engraven in a myſterious manner, and put by Moſes into the Pectoral, gave the oracular Power to it; but this looks very unlikely. As to the Names of Urim and Thummim; 'tis probable they were given to ſignify the Perſpecuity and Infallibility with which theſe oracular Reſponſes were always deliver'd; for Urim ſignifies Light, and Thummim Perfection. For theſe Anſwers were not, like the heathen Oracles, wrap'd up in Ambiguities, but were always clear in the Senſe, and certain in the Event.

The Uſe of the Urim and Thummim was to ask Counſel of God in Caſes of Difficulty and Concern, and which related to the publick Intereſt. For the High-Prieſt was not to apply for Reſolution and Advice for any private Man. He was only to conſult this Oracle for the King, for the Preſident of the Sanhedrim, for the General of the Army, or ſome other Iſraelitiſh Prince or Governor. The Place where he preſented himſelf for Direction was before the Ark of the Covenant, not within the Vale of the Holy of Holies (for there he never appear'd but once a Year on the great Day of Expiation,) but without the Veil in the Holy Place near the Altar of Incenſe. In this Situation the High-Prieſt ſtood with his Robes and Breaſtplate on, and his Face turn'd directly towards the Ark and the Mercy-Seat over it: For here the Schechinah or divine Preſence reſted. The Prieſt ſtanding in the Place laſt mention'd, propos'd the matter to be reſolv'd. To which we may add that the Perſon for whom the Counſel was ask'd, ſtood directly behind the High-Prieſt, probably at the Temple Door, expecting the Anſwer given: I ſay, at the Temple Door; for none but the Prieſts were permitted to go into the Holy Place or firſt Diviſion, ſtrictly ſo call'd. But which way the Anſwer was given is much controverted. The Opinion generally receiv'd among the Jews is, that the Anſwer was deliver'd by the ſhining and protuberating of the Letters engraven on the twelve Stones in the High-Prieſt's Breaſtplate. Joſephus and Philo Judæus affirm the Reſponſes given in this manner, and ſeveral of the Fathers go into this Sentiment. But againſt this Solution, as the learned Dr. Prideaux obſerves, there are unanſwerable Objections. For 1ſt all the Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet are not compriz'd within theſe twelve Names of the Tribes, Heth, Teth, Zaddi and Koph being out of the Number. To diſengage from this difficulty, the Rabbins have added the Names of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob to the Breaſtplate. And becauſe the Letter Teth is ſtill wanting they apply to another ſupplemental Expedient, and throw in theſe Words, Col elleh Shilte Iſrael, i. e. All theſe are the Tribes of Iſrael. But this way of diſentangling the matter is not only without Scripture Ground, but rather irreconcileable with it. For the Scripture Deſcription of the parts of the Breaſtplate being very preciſe and particular, ſeems plainly to exclude every thing unmention'd Secondly, thoſe who maintain this Opinion don't inform us in what part of the Breaſtplate theſe ſupplemental Words were plac'd. Indeed had they offer'd any thing of this kind they would have found themſelves inexplicably embarraſs'd: That theſe additional Words could be written or engraven upon the Breaſtplate is impracticable; for this Pectoral was only a piece of Cloth. They muſt therefore be engraven either upon ſome of the twelve Stones, or elſe on ſome others ſet there for that purpoſe. That this was not done on any of the twelve Stones is clear, becauſe they had nothing cut upon 'em but the Names of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael: And that they could not be cut on other Stones is no leſs apparent, for the Scriptures are ſufficiently plain that there were no other Stones than theſe twelve upon the Breaſtplate. Thirdly, thoſe who hold this Opinion are forc'd to have Recourſe to miraculous Aſſiſtance: They aſſert the High-Prieſt furniſh'd with the Spirit of Prophecy to qualify him for the right combining or putting together the ſhining and protuberating Letters, which were to form the oracular Anſwer: Now this is a precarious Suppoſition, and without Authority. Fourthly, ſome Anſwers given were of ſo great a length, that all the Letters in the Breaſtplate, together with the ſupplemental ones abovemention'd, are too ſhort to furniſh 'em.

and

In ſhort, not to mention any other Opinions for explaining the manner; it ſeems plain from Scripture that when the High-Prieſt appear'd before the Veil to ask Counſel of God, the Anſwer was given him by an audible Voice from within the Holy of Holies. There it was that Moſes went to conſult God, and from thence he receiv'd the Anſwer in a diſtinct intelligible Voice. And that the High-Prieſt receiv'd his oracular Reſponſes in this manner is evident from ſeveral Scripture Inſtances (Judges 1. 1, 2. 20. 18, 23, 28. 1 Samuel 10. 22. 23. 2, 4, 11, 12. 2 Samuel 2. 1, 19, 23. Joſhua 9. 14.) But we may obſerve farther that either the High-Prieſt or another Prieſt in his room, went always into the Field with the Iſraelitiſh Troops to ask Counſel of God by Urim and Thummim in all difficult Caſes. Thus Phineas march'd with the Army againſt the Midianites with the Holy Inſtruments, (Numbers 31. 6.) i. e. as the Jewiſh Commentators interpret, with the Ephod and the Breaſtplate; which, as they ſay, were put in an Ark or Coffer made for that purpoſe. And of this Ark they expound that Text where Saul ſays to Ahiah the High-Prieſt, Bring hither the Ark of God (1 Sam. 14. 18.) Now this could not be the Ark of the Covenant, for that was then at Kirjath-jearim: 'Tis plain therefore the Ark which Saul call'd for could be no other than the Coffer in which the Ephod and Breaſtplate were carried. And thus the Texts 1 Sam. 14. 18. 2 Sam. 11. 11. are to be expounded.

To qualify the Prieſt ſent into the Army for this oracular Buſineſs, 'twas neceſſary for him to be conſecrated with the holy anointing Oil, as the High-Prieſt was; for which reaſon he was call'd the anointed for the Wars. But how the Anſwer was given is ſtill a Difficulty: For there was no Mercy-Seat in the Camp, before which the Prieſt was to appear; and yet that God gave oracular Anſwers in the Camp is clear from ſeveral Places in Scripture (1 Sam. 23. 1. Sam. 30. 8. 2 Sam. 2. 1.) 'Tis moſt probable therefore that the Prieſt anointed for the Wars had a Tent in the Camp ſet up for this uſe: That this Tent was divided into two Apartments by a Veil or piece of hanging between 'em: That when the Prieſt ask'd Counſel of God in the Camp, he ſtood before this Veil, as the High-Prieſt did before that in the Tabernacle; and that the Anſwer was given from behind it in the inner Apartment, tho' no Ark or Mercy-Seat was there.

Tho' this way of conſulting the Deity was frequent during the Tabernacle, and continu'd no doubt till the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Chaldæans; yet we have no Inſtance of it in Scripture in the firſt Temple, and 'tis certain 'twas wholly wanting in the ſecond. (Ezra 2. 63. Nehemiah 7. 65.) This Obſervation occaſion'd a Saying amongſt the Jews that the Holy Spirit ſpake to the Children of Iſrael during the Tabernacle by Urim and Thummim, and under the firſt Temple by the Prophets, and under the ſecond by Bath-Kol. * Dr. Prideaux, Connection of the Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament. Part 1. Book 3. Pag. 151. & deinc. See Urim and Thummim in Morery Vol. II.

PELLEGRINI TIBALDI, was born at Bologna in Italy: His Father was an Architect at Milan. Pellegrini had a ſtrong Genius for Painting and Architecture. He gave the firſt Proof of his Capacity at Rome, eſpecially for painting. But here notwithſtanding his Merit was underſtood, he had no Succeſs: for whether he work'd at too low a Price, or was profuſe in his Expences, 'tis uncertain: That he was much diſſatisfied is clear by the following Story. For one Day Pope Gregory XIII. going out at the Porta Angelica to take the Air, and ſtriking from the great Road, he heard a complaining Voice behind a Buſh; and drawing near to the Sound he ſaw a Man lay at the bottom of a hedge; and perceiving 'twas Pellegrin he ask'd what made him ſo diſconſolate; to this Pellegrin anſwer'd, " you ſee a " man, quite in deſpair. I love my Profeſſion, and " have refus'd no Pains to make my ſelf a Maſter. " I work upon the ſtretch with all imaginable Applica- " tion; and yet I can't get a competent Livelihood. " I am determin'd therefore to endure theſe Diſap- " pointments no longer; for which Reaſon I come " hither to ſtarve my ſelf to Death." The Pope having reprimanded him for this ſtrange Reſolution, bid him recover his Spirits, and promis'd him Countenance and Aſſiſtance. And in regard Painting had hitherto prov'd very inſignificant to Pellegrin, the Pope advis'd him to turn his Hand to Architecture; and aſſur'd him he ſhould be employ'd in his Buildings. Pellegrin took this advice, and became both a great Architect, and a great Engineer; had the Direction in building magnificent Structures, and was anſwer'd in the returns of intereſt to his Satisfaction. Upon his going back into his own Country, Cardinal Borromeo order'd him to build the Palace della Sapienza at Pavia. He was likewiſe pitch'd on by the Milaneſe to have the Direction of the building in their Cathedral. From thence he was call'd into Spain by Philip II. to work in painting and Architecture in the Eſcurial. Here he perform'd a great deal, and pleas'd his Prince to that degree, that he gave him an hundred thouſand Crowns, and made him a Marquis. Pellegrin thus loaded with Honour and Wealth, return'd to Milan, and dy'd there in the beginning of the Pontificate of Clement VIII. about ſeventy Years of Age. * De Piles, Abrégé de la Vie des Peintres.

* PELOPONNESUS: To what has been ſaid upon this Article in Morery Vol. II. may be ſubjoyn'd a more particular Account of the Situation and Frontiers of each Subdiviſion of Peloponneſus, according to the old Geography.

I. Achaia Proper was bounded with the Gulph of Corinth

rinth to the North; with the Ionian Sea to the Weſt; with Elis and Areadia to the South; and with Sicyonia to the Eaſt, Patras was the Capital.

II. Sicyonia, the narroweſt of theſe Provinces, took it's Name from the Capital Sicyon. 'Twas bounded to the Eaſt by the Territories of Corinth; to the Weſt with Achaia Proper; to the North with the Gulph of Corinth; and with Arcadia to the South.

III. The Corinthian Precinct ſituate in the Northern Part of Peloponneſus border'd upon Sicyonia to the Weſt; upon Argia to the South and Eaſt, and was parted from the Great Achaia by the Gulph and Iſthmus of Corinth, and by the Saronique Gulph.

IV. The Territory of Elis, had Achaia Proper to the North; Arcadia to the Eaſt; Meſſenia to the South, and the Ionian Sea to the Weſt. The Capital was Elis.

V. Meſſenia, ſtood in the Southern Quarter between Laconia to the Eaſt, and Elis to the Weſt. 'Twas bounded by Arcadia to the North, and ſtretch'd to the South between the Meſſeniaque and Cypariſſian Gulphs. Meſſene was the principal Town.

VI. Laconia, reach'd to the Meſſeniaque and Laconian Gulph to the South; and to the Argolic Bay to the Eaſt; was bounded by Argia on the North; and by Arcadia and Meſſenia to the Weſt. Sparta or Lacedæmon was the Capital.

VII. Arcadia lay in the middle of the Terra Firma. It's Eaſtern Frontiers were Argia and Laconia; Elis lay to the Weſt; Achaia Proper to the North; and Meſſenia to the South. Megalopolis was the chief Town.

VIII. The Country of Argos, was bounded on the Eaſt by the Argolic Gulph; on the Weſt by Arcadia; on the South by Laconia; and on the North by the Saronique Gulph. Argos was the Capital of this Province.

PENISCOLA, a Mountain in the Kingdom of Valencia in Spain upon the Mediterranean: 'Tis almoſt ſurrounded with Water. There's a large Plain upon the Top of it, where there ſtands a very ſtrong Citadel now grown to the largeneſs of a Town. On two Sides of this Mountain, which are waſh'd by the Sea, Ships are well ſhelter'd from Storms and the Enemy; the Citadel being a Protection againſt the latter. At the foot of the Rock there are great Caverns where the Sea finds a Paſſage, and carries a great many Fiſh along with it. However, there are Springs of freſh Water in the Mountain. Peter de Luna the Antipope, who took the Name of Bennet XIII, retir'd hither for Security. Here he built a magnificent Palace and a large Church, held up his Character, and dy'd in the Schiſm, A. D. 1424. * Nieremberg, Hiſt. Nat. lib. 1.

PENANCE, call'd Thejouvtha by the Jews. They made the main of it conſiſt in the Love of God attended with good Works. They made a Confeſſion upon the Day of Expiation, or ſome time before. They had ſtated Degrees of Penance in Proportion to the Crimes committed, and Penitentiaries to aſſign 'em their Diſcipline, when they came to Confeſſion. Confeſſion was Part of Penance, and annex'd to the Ceremonies of ſin Offerings. He that offer'd the Sacrifice in the ſin Offering, confeſs'd his Sin, and lay'd it upon the Victim. They held a Place for the Purification of the Soul after Death, and offer'd Sacrifices for the Dead; but now they go no further than Prayers for them. Thus they diſtinguiſh Sin into two Kinds; one of which are pardon'd in the other World, and the other never. Joſephus informs us that the Phariſees had a ſingular Opinion upon this Head: They maintain'd the Souls of good People, when they quitted one Body, went into another; but that the Wicked, when they died, went directly to Hell. Herod the Tetrarch tinctur'd with this fancy, believ'd St. John Baptiſt's Soul tranſmigrated into our Saviour. * Morinus de Pœnitentia. P. Lamy, Introduction à l'Ecriture Sainte.

PENITENTIARY, a Prieſt aſſign'd for hearing Confeſſions and impoſing Penance. Socrates and Sozomen report this Penitentiary was ſettled in the Eaſtern Churches in the Decian Perſecution, and that the Office continued till Nectarius Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople ſuppreſs'd it, A. D. 385. However, there is no mention of this Penitentiary in the Canons, or the Writings of the ancient Fathers: And beſides, 'tis pretty plain that the Biſhops generally impos'd Penance, and granted Abſolution both in the Eaſt and Weſt. The Penitentiaries now in moſt part of the Weſtern Church and the Roman Communion, began no earlier than the twelfth Century. Soon after, the Council of Lateran held A. D. 1215, order'd all the Biſhops to have a Penitentiary. The Council of Trent has likewiſe farther ſettled this matter: The chief Buſineſs of this Penitentiary is to abſolve in caſes reſerv'd to the Biſhop. * Morinus, de Pœnitentiar. Thomaſſin. de Eccleſiæ Diſciplina.

PENNA DE FRANCIA, formerly call'd Lancia Oppidana. 'Tis a Town within the Kingdom of Leon in Spain, nine Leagues from Ciudad Rodrigo to the Eaſt. 'Tis very well known upon the ſcore of the Pilgrimages made thither to a Church dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. * Maty, Diction.

* PEQUIN, or Pekin, a City in a Province of the ſame Name, and ſignifies the Court of the North; whereas the City Nankin ſignifies the Court of the South. Pekin has been the Capital of China ever ſince the Year 1404. 'Tis ſituated in the fourtieth Degree of Northern Latitude in a fruitful Plain, and not far diſtant from the Great Wall. The Town is perfectly ſquare, and was formerly only four great Leagues in Circumference; but ſince the Irruption of the Tartars, the Chineſe having Orders to lodge without the Walls, they built a new City call'd the Chineſe Town; and theſe two together make ſix great Leagues in Circumference; each of which Leagues conſiſts of three thouſand ſix hundred Paces. And thus Paris, which is at moſt but ten thouſand Paces in Circumference, makes no more than a Quarter of the Circuit of Pekin. But then we are to obſerve that the Streets in Pekin are much larger than thoſe in Paris; and the Prince's Palace takes in a vaſt Compaſs, and is thinly inhabited. There are likewiſe large Warehouſes and Squares, and the Houſes are only one ſtory high: All theſe things conſider'd, Pekin has no more room for lodging than Paris, tho' 'tis much more populous; becauſe twenty People in Pekin lodge in as little room as ten at Paris. The Chineſe reckon the Inhabitants of Pekin ſix Millions; but this is a great Stretch, and exceeds the truth about two thirds. The Streets are almoſt all perfectly ſtreight; the largeſt are about an hundred and twenty Foot broad, and a good League long; almoſt all of 'em Tradeſmen's Houſes, where the Shops ornamented with Silk, China, and Varniſh make a handſome Shew. The Houſes however are neither well built, nor of any beautiful Height; and beſides, the Streets have generally a great deal of Dirt or Duſt in 'em. The Emperor's Palace has nine large Courts upon a level and the ſame Line, without reckoning the Wings for Offices and Stables: The Gates which open from one Court into another are Marble, with large Flanks built in the Gothick manner; the Wings of the Courts are clos'd either with Galleries or little Buildings; the Emperor's Apartment is ornamented with Porticoes ſupported with large Pillars; the Stairs are black Marble; the top is cover'd with gilt Tile, and the inſide embelliſh'd with Sculpture, Varniſh, Gilding, Paintings, with a Marble or Porcelain Floor. All this, with a great many other different Buildings belonging to this Apartment, ſufficiently ſhews that a great Prince lives there: But yet thoſe who underſtand Architecture, Painting, &c. find great Faults in it. There are a great many Courts of Juſtice in the Town; the outſides of which are beautiful and vaſt; but then there's neither Magnificence nor Neatneſs within. The Idols Temples are very numerous and richly ornamented; there's a handſome Obſervatoire for Aſtronomical Obſervations, but falls ſhort of the Magnificence with which 'tis commonly deſcrib'd; there are very fine mathematical Inſtruments, which P. de Verbieſt a Jeſuit, and Director of this Obſervatoire, furniſh'd. The Gates and Walls in Pekin are the moſt magnificent Obſervables; the Walls are ſo high that thoſe without the Town can't ſee the Houſes, and ſo wide that they mount the Guards upon 'em; they are fortify'd at proper diſtances with ſquare Towers or Baſtions; they are likewiſe ſurrounded with a dry Ditch, large and deep. As to the Gates, they are neither ornamented with Figures, nor Baſs Reliefs, like other publick Buildings in China; they are two large Pavilions or Maſſes of Stone of a vaſt Height; the Back of each half being ſet againſt that of the other, and the Flanks joyn'd to a thick high Wall: And

And thus in the middle there's an Eſplanade or Place of Arms, wide enough for drawing up above five hundred Men. The firſt Pavilion which looks like a Fort, opens to the Country, and faces the high Road; there's no Door in it, but they go into the Eſplanade by the Wall on the Flank or Side, where the Gate is large, tall, and well proportion'd; then you turn to the Right, where the ſecond Pavilion which commands the whole Town, has another Door in the Front of the ſame bigneſs with the firſt: But then 'tis ſo deep that the Paſſage is dark and ſomewhat troubleſome. Within this they keep guard, and have a kind of ſmall Arſenal to furniſh the Troops upon occaſion; there's always a numerous Garriſon in the Town, as if they were apprehenſive of ſome Siege. There are ſeven wonderful Bells in Pekin, caſt about the end of the fourteenth Century, in the Reign of the Emperor Youlo, each of which weighs an hundred and twenty thouſand Pound; the Brims are eleven Foot Diameter, fourty Foot in Circumference, and twelve Foot high, without reckoning the Handle which is three Foot high; but the Sound is very dull, clumſey, and far from being muſical; and it may be one reaſon is, becauſe inſtead of iron Clappers, they ſtrike 'em only with a wooden Hammer. As for their bigneſs there's no doubt of it, for the Dimenſions were exactly taken by P. de Verbieſt. * P. le Comte Jeſuit, Memoires de la Chine, Lettre 3.

PERCEE, the Iſle Percee; 'tis a ſmall Iſland in the Gulph of Canada. It lies at the Mouth of the River Canada near the Coaſt of Acadia. * Maty, Diction.

*PEREGRINUS. For Mark Antony in Morery Vol. II. read Marcus Antoninus.

PERGA, a Town of Aſia Minor in Pamphylia upon the River Ceſtrus or Ceſtrius; 'twas the Metropolis of the ſecond Pamphylia within the Exarchate of Aſia; 'tis now no more than a Village, twelve Miles diſtant from Sattalia, whither the Archiepiſcopal See was remov'd about the eleventh or twelfth Century. This Town is mention'd in the Acts, and Diana had a Temple near it. * Acts 13. 14. See Baudrand and de Commanville's Geographical and Chronological Tables of all the Archbiſhopricks, &c.

PERLE; Pearls are found in a ſort of Oyſters catched in ſome Parts of the Eaſtern Ocean. The beſt are thoſe taken near Arabia, the Red Sea, and upon the Coaſt of Perſia. The ſhells in which the Pearls are produc'd are almoſt like Oyſter Shells; and when the Seaſon riſes Prolifick, they open, and lying gaping in the Night fill themſelves with a Dew which is the ſeminal Principle of Pearls, and which are form'd according to the Quality of this Dew. If the Dew they ſuck in is fine and limpid, the Pearls are admirably white and Orient; But if the Dew is diſturb'd, and heterogeneous, the Product is miſty and dim. If they get a good Draught of Dew, the Pearls are very large, but if they are pinch'd in the Quantity, they are but ſmall. The Thunder makes an Impreſſion upon theſe Nacres, for ſo they are call'd; and when the Clap comes they lock themſelves up very cloſe. Thus, ſome of theſe Nacres are full of Wind with little Subſtance. The Pearls under Water are ſoft and tender, but grow hard when taken out of that Element. Some will have it that the largeſt Pearls command the Reſt, and direct 'em as the Maſter-Bee does the Hive; and for this Reaſon the Divers look out for the leading or governing Nacre; and when they have found her, they know the reſt of the Company are all their own. As ſoon as they get 'em they cover 'em with Salt in ſome earthen Veſſel; this Contrivance is to eat off all the Fleſh of the Nacre, and when this is done, the Pearls fall clean to the bottom of the Veſſel. Pearls are commonly divided into eaſtern and weſtern; the oriental are counted the beſt, and particularly thoſe that are white, ſmooth, round, weighty, tranſparent, and without Spots; the weſtern are not ſo valuable, they are found in Bohemia and Sileſia, and have more Nacre or Fleſh than the reſt. Thoſe who are not of Pliny's Opinion, and don't believe the Shells open, and conceive by ſwallowing the Dew, affirm that Pearls are produc'd from an excrementitious Humour of a ſort of Oyſters in the eaſtern Ocean; and that they ſtick to their Body like the Meaſles to Hog's Fleſh, and that they are form'd of the ſuperfluous Nouriſhment of theſe Shell-Fiſh. * Morery de Paris. The Dutch Supplementer believes the Pearls are only the Nacres Excreſcencies, ſomewhat like the Warts upon human Bodies.

PERNES, a good Town in the Low Countries; 'tis in Artois; it ſtands upon the little River Clarence, three Leagues from Aire to the South. * Maty, Diction.

PEROUSE, a conſiderable Town in Piedmont. It ſtands at the Head of the Valley of Perouſe, upon the River Cluſon, two Leagues above Pignerol. About a Mile from this Town upon an Eminence there was a good Fort; but 'twas demoliſh'd in the late War. * Maty, Diction.

PERPETUA (St.) and St. Felicitas, ſuffer'd Martyrdom in Africk in the Reign of Septimius Severus A. D. 203, or 205. Perpetua was a Gentlewoman of Condition, and about two and twenty Years of Age when ſhe was apprehended in Carthage by the Proconſul Minatius's order; Revoatus, St. Felicitas, Saturninus and Secundulus were ſeiz'd with her. Perpetua's Father did his utmoſt to perſuade her to renounce Chriſtianity, but in vain. She was baptiz'd in Priſon, and had a Viſion there acquainting her with the manner of her Death. She was examin'd with the reſt of her Company, and had more Viſions during her Impriſonment. Secundulus dy'd in Priſon: In ſhort, theſe Priſoners had wild Beaſts let looſe upon 'em, which wounded 'em terribly, but ſhort of Death. One Saturus, who joyn'd 'em voluntarily at their being apprehended, was diſpatch'd at the firſt Puſh of the wild Beaſts: As for St. Perpetua, St. Felicitas and the reſt, the Gladiators run 'em through. The Memory of theſe Martyrs was famous in Tertullian's and St. Auguſtin's time, and their Feſtival ſtands at the ſeventh of March. * Auguſtin. Serm. 281. & 282. Ruinart, Acta Martyrum ſincera. Tillemont, Memoires pour l'Hiſt. Eccle.

* PERPIGNAN. For Benedict XIII. in Morery Vol. II. read Benedict XII.

PERRAULT (Claude,) of the Royal Academy of Sciences, and Phyſician of the Faculty of Paris, flouriſh'd in the ſeventeenth Century. His Father was Peter Perrault of Paris, Advocate or Barriſter to the Parliament. Claude diſtinguiſh'd himſelf by ſeveral ſorts of Writings, not only relating to his Profeſſion, as his Eſſay upon Phyſicks in four Volumes, and his Memoirs upon the natural Hiſtory of Animals, form'd upon the Diſſections made in the Academy of Sciences, but likewiſe upon the Subject of Architecture, in which he excell'd. His Tranſlation of Vitruvius undertaken by the French King's order, furniſh'd with learn'd Notes, and printed the ſecond Time in 1684, was extremely ſerviceable to his Reputation: For by this Performance he let the World know that he perfectly underſtood all thoſe learned and ingenious Improvements mentioned by Vitruvius; that is, Painting, Sculpture, Muſick, Hydraulics, Machines, and every thing that belongs to the learned Part of Mechanicks. Perrault had a wonderful fine Hand in drawing Models: All the Draughts engraven upon Plates in his Verſion of Vitruvius, were done by him: And here, the deſigning Part was more valued than the Plates themſelves, tho' they were particularly Beautiful. Afterwards he wrote an Abridgement of Vitruvius for the benefit of Beginners in the ſtudy of Architecture: And in the Year 1683 he printed a Book entitled, Ordonnances des cinq eſpéces de Colonnes, ſelon la Method des Anciens, or, Rules for making the five different Sorts of Columns, according to the Antique Manner: Where he ſhews the true Proportions of the five orders of Architecture. 'Twas upon Perraults Draughts that the admirable Façade or front of the Louvre was built, the great Model of the triumphal Arch at the end of the Fauxbourg St. Antoine, the Obſervatoire, and the Chapel de Sceaux. Notwithſtanding he practis'd in his Profeſſion only for his Family, his Friends and the Poor, the Phyſic Faculty had ſuch an eſteem for him, that after his Death they ſent ſome of their Body to his Executors for his Picture, and hung it up in the publick Schools with Fernelius, Acakia, Riolanus and others, who had been moſt eminent in that Society. He dy'd at Paris October 1688, ſeventy five Years of Age. In the Year 1700 there was a poſthumous Work of his printed, which contains a Collection of ſeveral Machines and Inſtruments of his Invention. His Eſſays in Phyſics fics being very ſcare, a Word or two concerning 'em may not be improper. In the firſt Volume he treats of the Gravitation of Bodies, of their Spring or Elaſticity, and their Hardneſs. He is of Opinion that the elaſtic Force of Bodies is a general Principle, to which the greateſt part of the Phænomena in Nature may be reckon'd. In the ſecond Volume he diſcourſes concerning the Periſtaltick Motion, the Circulation of the Sap in Plants, of a new Inſertion of the Ductus Thoracicus, and of a new Conveyance for the Choler. In the ſecond Tome of this Volume he treats of Noiſe, which Word he prefers to that of Sound, as being more general; and here he pretends that the elaſtic Force and Gravitation of Bodies are the Cauſe of it. In this Tome he likewiſe mentions the Muſic of the Ancients: And proves that 'twas very imperfect with reſpect to ours, the Harmony not being ſo much vary'd and compounded for different parts in Conſort.

The third Volume contains a Tract of the Mechaniſm of Animals. And here he gives a Deſcription of a great many Organs in Brutes, which had not before been obſerv'd, with an Explanation of the manner and uſes of thoſe which are particular to theſe Animals. 'Tis divided into three parts; the firſt explains the Functions of Senſation; the ſecond thoſe of Motion; and the third goes upon the Heads of Nouriſhment and Generation.

The fourth Volume contains ſeveral curious Remarks upon Senſation, and furniſhes very uncommon Explications of the Tranſparency of Bodies, of the Reflexion of Motion, of the congealing of Liquors, and the Generation of ſome parts, which grow again in ſome Animals after being diſmember'd. The three firſt Volumes of this Work were publiſh'd in 1680, and the fourth in 1688. M. Perrault was particularly happy in the Extent of his Genius and Learning: His Mind was, as it were, a Collection of thoſe Improvements which lay ſingle with other People,

> ——— Sparguntur in omnes,
> In te miſta fluunt, & quæ diviſa beatos
> Efficiunt collecta tenes.

M. Perault had three Brothers, Peter the eldeſt, who was Receiver general of the Finances of the Generality of Paris, and who in 1674 wrote a Tract of the Origin of Fountains, and tranſlated Taſſo's la Secchia rapita, printed in 1678. Nicholas Perrault the ſecond Brother was Doctor of Divinity of the Sorbonne, and printed a Book of Moral Theology in the Year 1667. * Journal des Savans, tom. 17. pag. 122.

PERRAULT (Charles,) youngeſt Brother to him in the laſt Article. He promis'd a great deal in Poetry very early: His Dialogue between Love and Friendſhip, and his two Odes, one upon the Pyrenean Treaty, and the other upon Lewis XIV's Marriage, made ſomething more than ordinary expected from him. His great Capacity for Arts and Sciences, farther recommended by the Probity and Candor of his Temper, gain'd him the Eſteem and a Confidence with M. Colebert. This great Miniſter pitch'd upon him for the Sub-Director of the Buildings, of which himſelf was the chief Surveyor. M. Perrault was afterwards Comptroller General in this Employment, which gave him an inſight into every thing relating to the King's Buildings, and the Ornaments belonging to 'em. But all the uſe he made of the Intereſt of this Poſt was to promote the Improvement of Arts and Sciences. Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, natural Philoſophy, Rhetorick, Poetry, and the more recondite parts of Learning, were all ſupported, encourag'd and rewarded at the Expence, and by the Intereſt and Application of M. Perrault. He had nothing more at Heart than carrying on the Progreſs of the polite parts of Arts and Sciences, ſo peculiarly encourag'd by the King and his Miniſter M. Colebert. He drew up Memoirs and Plans upon which the Academies for Painting, Sculpture and Architecture were form'd; and he had the Honour to be one of the firſt Members of the Academy of Sciences, and that of Inſcriptions. Upon M. Colebert's Death Perrault was diſmiſs'd from his Employment; and now being perfectly at leiſure, and at his own Diſpoſal, he ſpent moſt of his time in poetical Performances.

The firſt I ſhall mention is his Poem upon Painting; that upon St. Paulinus, and another upon M. de la Quintinie, Director of the King's Kitchin-Gardens; the next was his Poem upon the Creation of the World, upon Griſelidis, together with ſome Fables; and in all theſe Productions the Deſcriptions were ſurprizingly exact; no Poet went more to the bottom of Nature, and made more natural and lively Deſcriptions; and even ſometimes upon dry Subjects, which were difficult to work and entertain. Almoſt every Day when the meeting of the Academy was more than ordinary, he diverted thoſe learned Gentlemen with ſome Compoſition of his own. M. Perrault's Poem call'd the Age of Lewis the Great, publiſh'd in the Year 1687, engag'd him in a Conteſt, which carry'd him a great way. Here he endeavour'd to ſhew that in this Monarch's Reign the creditable Arts and Sciences were carried to ſo high an Improvement, that in ſeveral inſtances of Learning the Moderns had exceeded the Ancients; thoſe who were ſmitten with Antiquity, and warm with the Acknowledgments for what they had borrow'd from remote Ages, look'd upon this truth as a Paradox, and declar'd againſt it. M. Perrault, to ſtand his ground and maintain what he had advanc'd, publiſh'd four Tomes entitled, a Parallel between the Ancients and Moderns in the Years 1692, 1693, and 1696; where without leſſening the Regard due to the Ancients with reſpect to Arts and Sciences, and not thinking we ought to puſh our Admiration to ſuch a , pitch of Superſtition and Idolatry, as to imagine 'em exempt from human Miſtake and Imperfection; he gives Inſtances of a great many Faults, Negligences, and Littleneſſes, which had eſcap'd theſe great Men: But then he reckons theſe Failings to the want of Politeneſs in the Ages when they liv'd: And on the other Side he flouriſhes upon the beautiful Productions, and ſhining Paſſages of the Moderns; and by the Inſtances given, endeavours to ſhew that if in ſome Paſſages they were inferior to the old great Models, in Nature, Truth, and the Sublime, they came up to 'em, and even exceeded 'em in a great many others. Thoſe of our Moderns, whom M. Perrault had moſt oblig'd in their Character and Buſineſs, wrote againſt him with Smartneſs and Heat; to theſe he reply'd with great Genteelneſs and Temper; and at laſt ſacrific'd part of his Parallel to revive Friendſhip and Peace. He ſtop'd himſelf in the Courſe of the Controverſy, to put an end, as he ſpeaks, to a civil War, with which the Commonwealth of Learning began to be diſturb'd, and that he might ſquabble no longer with ſuch learned Men as his Adverſaries, and whoſe Friendſhip could not be purchas'd too dear. This Overture ſucceeded, and both Sides lay'd down their Pens: And here, to ſpeak truth, each Party had puſh'd the matter a little too far; and indeed they ſeem'd not to have had a mind to underſtand each other; for when their Prejudices were lay'd down, and their Mettle cool'd, they came nearer each other's Sentiments, and the Articles were eaſily ſettled. M. Perrault afterwards apply'd himſelf to the writing his hiſtorical Panegyrick upon part of the great Men who flouriſh'd in the ſeventeenth Century: And upon this Subject he publiſh'd two Volumes, one in the Year 1697, and the other in 1700. He dy'd at Paris May 1703, ſeventy ſeven Years of Age. He has the Character of a true Friend, a modeſt genteel Perſon, and a good Chriſtian. * Recueils de l'Academie, & Mem. Hiſtor.

* PERSIA. For where 'tis ſaid that the Provinces to the North of theſe Mountains are very Hot, but the others that lie Southward are of a temperate Air in Morery Vol II; in ſtead of this, read, that the Provinces to the South of theſe are very Hot, but the others that lie Northward are of a temperate Air.

PERTUIS, a good Town of Provence upon the Durance four Leagues from Aix to the North. There's a great Corn Market every Week at Pertuis, where abundance of Grain is bought for Aix and Marſeilles. * Maty, Diction.

PERTUS (Le Col de Pertus,) in Latin Pertuſæ Fauces, a Paſſage through the Pyrenean Mountains. It lies between Rouſſillon and Catalonia, at the Head of the little River Llobregat, a League above Jonquera, and half a League from Bellegarde to the Eaſt. This Paſſage, which takes it's Name from the Village Pertus, was call'd by the the Ancients ad Pyrenæum, Trophæa Pompeii, and parted Gallia Narbonenſis from Hiſpania Tarraconenſis * Maty, Diction.

PERU. See Potoſi in Morery Vol. II.

* PESCENNIUS NIGER; for Euphrates in Morery Vol. II. read Orontes.

PESCHERIE, a Coaſt of the Peninſula on this Side the Ganges over againſt the Iſland of Ceylan, between Cape Comorin and the Canal de la Croux near Negapatan: It ſtretches through a dry burning Country. Upon this Coaſt there are about thirty little Towns, all within the Juriſdiction of Naïque and Madure. The Place is famous for Pearl fiſhing, from whence it has it's Name. This Fiſhing is carried on at a great Expence, both becauſe it laſts three Months without Intermiſſion, and becauſe ſometimes an hundred and fifty thouſand Men are employ'd in the Buſineſs. This Pearl Fiſhing always begins upon the 15th Day of March. There are ſometimes three thouſand Boats upon the Water, the Complement of each being between fifty and ſixty Men. Each of theſe Boats has twenty Divers with two aſſiſtants to every Diver. All this Fleet convoy'd by two Dutch Pinnaces (which are well paid for their Pains) put to Sea till they come to ſeven, eight, and ten fathom Water. When they caſt Anchor, every Diver ties faſt under his Belly a Stone ſix inches thick, a Foot long, and cut like an Arch or Bow on that Side next his Skin. Beſides this, they tie another heavy Stone to one of their Feet, which carries 'em immediately to the Bottom, and is then pull'd up into the Boat. And becauſe the Nacres or Oyſters often ſtick to the Rocks, the Divers bind their Fingers with a great many leathern Thongs, for fear of hurting themſelves in pulling away the Nacres. Some of 'em make uſe of iron Forks for the ſame Purpoſe. In ſhort every Diver carries a large Net made up like a Sack, and ty'd to his Neck with a long Rope, one End of which is made faſt to the Boat. The Buſineſs of the Sack is to receive the Nacres or Pearl Oyſters; and the Cordage is to draw up the Fiſhermen when their Sack's full.

In this Equipage they plunge into the Sea, ſometimes to the Depth of about ſixty Foot, and having no time to loſe, as ſoon as ever they touch the Bottom, they run round upon the Sand, and the points of the Rocks, and ſnatch the Oyſters which come in their Way. And let the Depth be never ſo great, they can ſee every thing with as much Eaſe and Diſtinction, as if they were upon Land. The greateſt Hazard they run is from ſome great Fiſhes of the Nature of Sharks, which deſtroy many of 'em, notwithſtanding all they can do either by diſturbing the Water, or running away to preſerve themſelves. Your good Divers will commonly keep half an Hour under Water; and a quarter of an Hour is the time of thoſe leſs expert: They keep their Breath all the time without making uſe of Oyl, or any other Liquor for that purpoſe; mere Cuſtom and Nature, it ſeems, has given 'em that force which all the Skill of Philoſophy could never furniſh the Europeans with.

As ſoon as they find themſelves tir'd, they draw the Rope to which their Sack is tied, and clap faſt hold of it themſelves. Upon this, their two Aſſiſtants in the Boat ſnatch 'em up into the Air and unlode 'em, ſometimes of five hundred Pearl Oyſters; ſometimes their Cargoe is but an hundred Oyſters, and ſometimes only fifty, according as their Fortune happens. Some of theſe Plungers will reſt a Minute to recruit their Breath; but others without taking the leaſt repoſe, plunge immediately into the Sea again, and continue this violent Exerciſe without Intermiſſion; taking no Meat or Refreſhment excepting in the Morning before they dive, and in the Evening when Night forces 'em to give over.

The Boats being all unladen upon the Shore, the Pearl Oyſters are carried into a great many little Pits, dug between four or five Foot ſquare in the Sand. The Heaps of Nacres they throw in here riſe about a Man's Height above the Top of the Pit. In this condition the Pearl Oyſters are left till the Rain the Wind and the Sun, force 'em to open and gape; and when they do this, they die ſoon after. Then the Fleſh putrifies and dries; and thus the Pearls which fall all into the Pit as faſt as the Nacres are taken away, are eaſily gather'd: Theſe Nacres or Shells are like common Oyſters on the out-Side, but more ſilver'd and ſhining within. The largeſt are almoſt as big as a Man's Hand, and the Meat is exceeding fine. When the Pits are clear'd of the fouleſt Part of the Putrefaction, they ſift the Sand ſeveral times to part it from the Pearls. But notwithſtanding all their Care a great many are commonly loſt.

As to the Nature of the Pearls, the Paravas, or Natives of the Coaſt, give the following account of 'em. They find 'em ſpread through all the Subſtance of the Oyſter, and generally in all the Muſcular and more fleſhy Parts. The Number of 'em is uncertain. Oftentimes all the Fleſh is powder'd with 'em; but there are very ſeldom above two of any conſiderable Bigneſs. There is commonly one Pearl bigger, and, if we may ſay ſo, more nicely finiſh'd: But this Pearl has no fix'd Situation in the Nacre. Sometimes 'tis found in one Place, and ſometimes in another; and ſometimes the Pearl is ſo large that the Nacre can't ſhut down cloſe. And when this happens, the Oyſter dies and putrefies The Pearls are all ſhiningly white according to the quality of the Nacre.

And now a Word or two concerning the Formation of theſe Oyſters. In the rainy Seaſons, the Land-Floods pouring down all along the Coaſt, drive almoſt two Leagues upon the Surface of the Sea, without mixing with it. This Water ſwimming thus upon the Superficies of the Ocean for ſome time, preſerves it's Freſhneſs and Colour; but afterwards growing thick by the heat of the Sun, ſettles in a kind of Light and tranſparent Cream; this Conſiſtence ſoon after ſplits into abundance of ſmall parts, each of which ſeems animated, and moves in all Quarters like to many little Inſects. The Fiſh as they ſwim along ſometimes chop at ſome of 'em, but not finding 'em palatable give over the chace. Whatever the Nature of theſe ſmall Animals may be, 'tis certain they grow upon the Surface of the Water; their Skin thickens and becomes hard, and at laſt they are ſo heavy that their own Weight carries them to the bottom of the Sea; and 'tis there, as the Paravas aſſure us, they are form'd in the Figure of an Oyſter. And this Syſtem which Experiment has diſcover'd to the Indians, deſtroys the Opinion of the Ancients, who believ'd the Oyſters came up in the Mornings to the Surface of the Water, and then open'd their Shells to take in the Dew which was the Pearl's ſeminal Principle. But to ſhew the Miſtake of this old Hypotheſis, theſe modern Fiſhermen are poſitive that they never ſaw any Pearl Oyſters float, or ſo much as peep upon the Surface of the Water, proteſting withal that they find 'em at the bottom claſping faſt about the Rocks. They obſerve farther, that the Places where the Landfloods fall into the Sea, are the only Quarters where the Pearls are to be met with, and that rainy Years are the beſt for Pearl-Fiſhing. * P. le Comte, Memoires de la Chine, tom. 2. However, this Account does not exactly agree with what Daviti and Tavernier report upon this Head. Daviti, Hiſt. de l'Aſie. Tavernier, Voyage des Indes. See Perle.

PESCHEURS (l'Iſle des) a ſmall Iſland belonging to China; it lies upon the Coaſt of the Iſland Formoſa. The Dutch were formerly Maſters of it, but the Chineſe have it at preſent. * Maty, Diction.

PESEGUIRO, or Peſeguero, anciently Petanium and Petanius, a ſmall Iſland of Portugal. It lies upon the Coaſt Alentejo, near the Town Villa Nova de Milrontes. There are four or five little Iſlands near this commonly call'd the Iſlands of Peſegueiro. * Maty, Diction.

PESSIER (John le,) of Tournay, was born in 1596. He publiſh'd three philoſophical Orations upon the Moon. In the firſt he examines whether the Moon is habitable. In the ſecond whether there are Mountains and Valleys in it. And in the third, what ſort of Country the Moon is; what Degrees of Inequality of Night and Day there are there; and with what Planters and Animals ſhe is furniſh'd. * Alegambe, pag. 263.

PETER, King of Portugal. See Alphonſus Henry in Morery Vol. I.

PETER D' ALCANTARA, a Monk of the Order of St. Francis, was born at Alcantara a Province of Eſtramadura in Spain A. D. 1499. He was Son to Alphonſo Garavito a Lawyer and Governour of this Town and of Murcia. Having gone through a Courſe of Humanity and Philoſophy he was ſent to Salamanca to ſtudy ſtudy there, and afterwards was profeſs'd a Franciſcan. After having gone through ſeveral Degrees of Promotion in the Monaſtic Society he was choſen Provincial in the Year 1538, four Years forward he retir'd with ſome Monks of his Order to the Mountain Arabida in Portugal, near the Mouth of the Taio: Where he begun a Reform, which was afterwards approv'd by Pope Julius III. A. D. 1554. This Reform was a new Congregation of St. Francis's Order; and Peter d' Alcantara prevail'd with a great many Convents to receive it. They were diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt by the Name of Conventuals or new Obſervantines. Peter dy'd in 1562. He was beatify'd in 1622 by Gregory XV; and canoniz'd in 1669 by Clement IX. * The Life of Peter d' Alcantara by John Sainte-Marie, by Martin Saint-Joſeph, by Antony Huart, and by P. Courtot.

PETER (Nicholas,) Surnam'd du Boſc, Rhetorick Profeſſor in the College of Liſieux at Paris. He was eſteem'd by Blondel, Picard, Caſſini, and moſt of the learned. He underſtood the learned Languages, the polite Part of learning, old and new Philoſophy, Divinity, and the Mathematicks. Being ſatisfied with a Reputation gain'd by his Lectures and Converſation, he was not ſolicitous about giving himſelf the trouble to write Books. However, an Author cited at the Bottom of this Article ſaw ſome Manuſcripts of his in his Friend's cuſtody; viz a Critic in Latin upon Homer's Works, a Tract upon Rhetorick, a French Tranſlation of Ariſtotle's Poetry, and ſome looſe Papers upon ſeveral Subjects: Among the reſt Horace de Arte Poetica, where he endeavours to ſhew that this Performance was written with a great deal of Art and Method. He had a particular Opinion concerning Comets, which ſhall be laid before the Reader: He explains 'em thus; 'Tis certain a great deal of Matter exhales continually from all Parts of the Earth, and moves upward towards the middle Region of the Air, condenſing and falling down afterwards in Rain, Snow &c: And that theſe Exhalations have the Direction of their Motion from the Center of the Earth to the middle Region, and from the middle Region to the Center of the Earth. In like Manner, I ſuppoſe there are Particles drawn off from the Body of the Sun, which have the Direction of their Motion from the Center of the Sun towards the Firmament, and from the Firmament towards the Center of the Sun. And of this the Maculæ obſerv'd in the Sun are ſufficient Proof. I may affirm then, there are conſtant Exhalations ſtreaming from the Sun towards the Firmament; and that when theſe groſſer Exhalations kindle to Flame, let it happen where it will, a Comet is form'd by it; and as a wiſp of Straw fir'd in the Air throws the Flame towards the middle Region, ſo the Solar Matter above mention'd when it flies on Fire, throws the Light to the Firmament. Thus 'tis plain that the Tail of the Comet muſt always appear oppoſite to the Sun; and this Tail frequently appearing a little bent at the End, proceeds from the Motion of the Sun's Vortex. According to this Hypotheſis there may be Comets in all the vaſt Space from the Center of the Sun to the Firmament, though they don't appear to us in this Form. Becauſe the terreſtrial Atmoſphere, and the Solar Matter mix diſagreeably for ſuch a Generation. The Demonſtration pretending to prove there are no Comets above Saturn, does not always hold in my Opinion. Beſides, the Obſervations made uſe of to prove it, are next to impracticable, and ſome of 'em impoſſible. In fine, 'tis eaſy to conceive by this Hypotheſis why the Bulk of the Comets is biggeſt at the firſt, and dwindles upon the Courſe; and that is becauſe they are always retiring to a greater Diſtance from the Earth towards the Firmament. * De Vigneul-Marville, Melanges d' Hiſtoire &c: pag. 211.

PETEROA, a Vulcano or Mountain which throws up Flame; 'tis in Chili between the Andes to the South of the City Mendoça. * Maty Diction.

PETERSHAGEN, a ſmall City in the Circle of Weſtphalia. It ſtands upon the Weſer within the Principality of Minden, two Leagues below the Town of this Name; 'tis fortify'd with a good Caſtle, where the Biſhops of Minden formerly reſided, and where the Court of Chancery for the whole Principality is now kept. * Maty, Diction.

* PETERSON. For Secretary to Guſtavus Adolphus in Morery Vol. II. read Guſtavus Ericus.

PETIGORES, People of Circaſſia in Aſia. They are ſituate to the Weſt of Circaſſia Proper, between the Don, the Sea of Zabache and the Black Sea. They have an independent Prince of their own, and call themſelves Chriſtians, tho' they give but ſmall Signs of being ſo. * Maty, Diction.

PETILIUS (Atteius,) a Roman Tribune of the People: He was puſh'd by Marcus Cato, Scipio's Enemy, to impeach this General for robbing the Commonwealth, and to ſolicit the Senate that he might give an Account of the Money he had levy'd upon the Town of Antioch, and of the Plunder he had taken in the courſe of the War. Scipio, who was preſent when theſe Articles were preferr'd, produc'd the Book where his Accounts were written; and finding his Adverſary inſiſt upon the reading of it, he tore it in pieces, and told the Senate with an Accent of Reſolution, that a Perſon to whom the Republick ow'd their Preſervation, was not oblig'd to give an Account of the Plunder he had taken from the Enemy. Upon which Scipio was acquitted. Aulus Gellius, lib.* 4. cap. 18.

* PETRARCH. To his Works mention'd in Morery Vol. II. add his Tract de Remedio utriuſque Fortunæ.

PETRONIUS, a Senator of Rome, one of the beſt diſtinguiſh'd in his time. Being Governor of Ægypt he gave Herod King of the Jews leave to buy all the Corn he had need of at Alexandria, to relieve his Subjects who lay under the Calamity of a great Famine: And by this Permiſſion vaſt Numbers of the People's Lives were preſerv'd. Upon the Death of Tiberius, Caligula the next Emperor took the Government of Syria from Vitellius and gave it Petronius, who acquitted himſelf very honourably in his Poſt, and was ſo friendly to the Jews that he had like to have loſt the Emperor's Favour for his Generoſity. This Prince order'd him to ſet up his Statue in the Temple at Jeruſalem. Petronius, knowing that the Jews had rather die than ſee the holy Place profan'd in ſo remarkable a manner, refus'd to come to Extremites, and make uſe of force. But this inſtance of good Nature had like to have deſtroy'd Petronius. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 15. cap. 12. & lib. 18. cap. 11.

PETTERSHAUSEN, a ſmall City within the Circle of Suabia. It goes for a Suburb to the City Conſtance, from which 'tis parted only by a Canal, which joyns the Lake of Conſtance to that of Zell. Petterſhauſen is well fortify'd. It has a benedictin Abby, and the Biſhop of Conſtance often reſides there, as well as at Mersbourg. * Maty Diction.

PEYBUS, a great Lake upon the Confines of Livonia and Muſcovy. 'Tis ſaid to be forty Leagues in Circumference. After having taken in a great many Rivers, of which the Welica-Reca is the biggeſt, it falls into the Gulph of Finland through the Chanel of the Narva. * Maty, Diction.

PEZENAS, in Latin Piſcenæ or Pedenatium, a City in Gallia Narbonnenſis according to Pliny, but now in Lower Languedoc. 'Tis a populous and handſome Town and the States of the Province meet there commonly. 'Tis one of the pleaſanteſt Places in the Kingdom, both upon the ſcore of the good Humour and Breeding of the People, and likewiſe becauſe of the Beauty of the Buildings and Situation. When Lewis XIII. went to beſiege Montpellier in 1622, he declar'd that from his March from Paris, he had not met ſo pretty a Town as Pezenas. It ſtands upon an Eminence three Leagues diſtant from Agde to the South, four from the Sea and the Gulph of Lion, nine from Montpellier to the Eaſt, and five from Beziers to the South Weſt. The Town is very well water'd and has every way a very fine Proſpect into Fields, Gardens and Orchards. * Baudrand, & Hiſtoire de Henry II. laſt Duke of Montmorency, lib. 1.

PEZRON (Paul,) a Monk of the Order of the Ciſtercians, Doctor in Divinity, of the Faculty at Paris, and Abbot of Charmoie, was born at Hennebon a ſmall Town in Bretagne A. D. 1639. He was a Perſon of great Learning, and thoroughly acquainted with profane Hiſtory. He endeavour'd to maintain the Chronology of the Septuagint againſt the Hebrew Text, and gives a longer Duration from the Creation than any other Chronologer before him. His Tract upon this Subject is entitled d' Antiquity des tems retablie, or the Antiquity of time reſtor'd, printed at Paris 1690. This Book was attack'd by P. Martianay a Benedictine, and by P. le Quien a Dominican. To this Oppoſition he wrote a Defence in a thick 4to. entitled Defenſe de l' Antiquité des tems. His other Works in French are a Literal and Hiſtorical Commentary upon the Prophets. An Evangelical Hiſtory confirm'd by the Jewiſh and Roman Hiſtory. He likewiſe undertook the making a large Tract concerning the Origin of Nations. That which goes upon the Antiquity and Language of the Celtæ, was printed in 1703. He has left a great many other learned Works fit for the Preſs. He dy'd October 1706 ſixty ſeven Years of Age. As to his Character, notwithſtanding his great Learning, he rely'd too much upon Conjectures and rais'd Hypotheſes, which ſeem not to ſtand upon ſolid Grounds. However, he was a modeſt good natur'd Man, and wrote entertainingly without Peeviſhneſs or Paſſion. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. & XVIII.

Defence

PHANTASIA, of Memphis: Ptolomy Hepheſtion mentions a Woman of this Name Daughter to Nicharchas, and that ſhe wrote the Trojan War and Ulyſſes's Voyages before Homer: And that leaving her Books at Memphis, Homer finding 'em there, tranſcrib'd and put 'em in Order. This is Photius's Account from Ptolomy Hepheſtion; and Euſtathius in his Preface upon Homer, goes into the ſame Sentiment. But notwithſtanding theſe Vouchers the Narrative looks pretty improbable. * Photius, Cod. 190. Du Pin, Biblioth. des Hiſtor. Prof.

PHARPHAR, a River of Syria. It riſes in Mount Libanus or Lebanon, ſeven Leagues from Damaſcus. 'Tis divided into five Streams before it reaches the Town. And after having ſufficiently furniſh'd Damaſcus and the Neighbourhood with Water, falls into a little Lake within that Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction

PHARZAELE, a Town belonging to the Tribe of Benjamin and ſtanding to the North of Jericho. 'Twas built by Herod the great in Honour of his Brother Phazaël: The Soil was extreamly barren and unpromiſing: But ſoon after the Town was built and ſtock'd with Inhabitants, they improv'd the Soil with ſo much Induſtry, that they made it the moſt delightful Spot in all Judæa.

There was a very fine Tower of the ſame Name in Jeruſalem built by Herod in Honour of his Brother abovemention'd. 'Twas not at all inferior in Height, Beauty, or Magnificence to the Pharos at Alexandria. Titus Veſpaſian having made himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem, would not ſuffer this Tower nor that of Hippicos and Mariamne to be demoliſh'd; becauſe exceeding every Thing of that kind in bulk, magnificence and ſtrength, he was willing to leave 'em as Monuments to Poſterity. And that after Ages might have Proof of the extraordinary Bravery and military Skill of the Romans, who were able to take a City ſo prodigiouſly fortify'd. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 17. cap. 9. De Bell. Judaic. lib. 7. cap. 1.

PHERORAS, fourth Son to Antipater and Brother to Herod the great. He was a Man of great Fineneſs and Falſehood, and brought a great deal of tragical Calamity into the Family by his malicious Reports. He was the Death of Alexander and Mariamne, and of Herod's two Sons Alexander and Ariſtobulus. Herod had oblig'd him very much, for all which Favors he was extreamly ungrateful. He went into Antipater's Conſpiracy, and kept a Box of Poyſon that Parricide gave him to diſpatch his Father when Occaſion offer'd. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 17. cap. 5. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

PHILAMON, of Delphos, Son of Apollo and the Nymph Chione, was the firſt that ſettled the Chorus in Muſick. Pauſanias reports that at the firſt ſolemn Spectacles or Diverſions, they ſung Hymns to the Harp in Honour of Apollo; and thoſe who perform'd beſt, were gratify'd with a Reward. The firſt who got the Prize was Chryſothemis Son of Cramanor. Philamon was the next; and after him his Son Thamphas; but it ſeems neither Orpheus nor Muſæus were willing to enter the Liſts. * Euſeb. Chron. Pauſan. Deſcript. Græc.

PHILIP (St.) Biſhop of Heraclea and Martyr in the Diocleſian Perſecution; tho' ſome will have it that he ſuffer'd under Julian. When the Chriſtians at Heraclea were apprehended by Baſſus the Governour's order, Philip being one of the Number declar'd he was the Biſhop the Governour was in queſt of. Baſſus commanded him to deliver up the Holy Scriptures and the Gold and Silver Plate which were in his Cuſtody, his Anſwer was that he ſhould make no difficulty to put the Plate into his Hands, becauſe the Chriſtians did not think the Richneſs of the Metal made the Worſhip of our Saviour the more acceptable; but as for the Holy Scriptures, 'twas neither fit for him to deliver 'em, nor for the Governour to receive 'em. The Governour immediately put him in the Executioner's Hands, and had a Prieſt call'd Severus, apprehended with Philip, examin'd. Baſſus having put Philip to the Torture ſeiz'd the conſecrated Plate and the Bible, and order'd Philip and Hermes one of his Deacons to be brought into the publick Square. The Church was afterwards uncover'd, and the Holy Scriptures burnt; and Philip and Hermes were preſs'd to Sacrifice to the Gods, or at leaſt to the Emperors. Upon their refuſal they were remanded to Priſon. When Baſſus's Government was determin'd, Juſtin, who ſucceeded him, had Philip brought into his Court, order'd him to Sacrifice, and being refus'd, had him drag'd through the Town by the Heels. The Saint after being torn and wounded all over, was brought back to Priſon. The ſame time Severus and Hermes being carried into Court, behav'd themſelves with the ſame Reſolution. Upon this, they were convey'd with Philip to Adrianople, where they continued no leſs firm and impregnable. Philip and Hermes were condemn'd to the Stake, and Severus was likewiſe executed. The Memory of Philip and Hermes's Martyrdom is ſet to the 22nd of October A. D. 304. * Mabillon, Analect. tom. 4. Ruinart, Acta Martyrum Sincera.

PHILIP V. Duke of Anjou, ſecond Son of Lewis Dauphin of France by Mary Ann Princeſs of Bavaria, was born at Verſailles November 19. 1683. He made an early diſcovery of a ſtrong Inclination for Study and Religion; inſomuch that the Duke de Beauvilliers his Governour, us'd to ſay that he never had any Occaſion to reprimand him. He came to the Crown of Spain in Right of his Grandmother Maria Tereſa of Auſtria, and by the laſt Will and Teſtament of Charles II. King of Spain. Philip was declar'd King of Spain at Fountainebleau November 16, by his Grandfather King Lewis XIV, and proclaim'd at Madrid the 24th of the ſame Month 1700. In February the Year following he was receiv'd in Spain with all the Marks of a general Welcome and Reſpect, after having been convey'd to the Frontiers by the Dukes of Burgundy and Berry his Brothers. On the 14th of April he made his publick entry into Madrid, where the Spaniards furniſh'd their Part with extraordinary Magnificence. The 5th of May he receiv'd the great Collar of the Golden Fleece put on by the Duke de Monteleone as being the oldeſt Knight of that Order. The 8th he went to St. Jerome's Church of Buen-Retiro, and took the Cuſtomary Oath, in which the Kings of Spain promiſe to maintain the Catholick Faith, and the Laws and Privileges of the Nation; and at the ſame time receiv'd the Addreſſes of the Nobility, and of the Repreſentatives of the Towns and Commonalty. He was no ſooner upon the Throne but his Regard for Religion, the Benigneſs of his Temper, and his indefatigable Application to Buſineſs, made him admir'd by all his Subjects. And notwithſtanding (as the French Supplementer goes on) his Right to the Crown of Spain was indiſputable. Notwithſtanding he had been own'd King by the Pope, by the Court in England, by the King of Portugal, by the Northern Crowns, by the Republicks of Holland and Venice, and by all the Princes of Italy; the Houſe of Auſtria jealous of the Proſperity of France, play'd all her Politicks to make an Allyance with England, Holland, and the Princes of the Empire; and all to dethrone King Philip: In all which attempts for a Confederacy they ſucceeded except with the Electors of Cologne and Bavaria. This ſtrong Confederacy againſt Philip oblig'd him to engage with France, Portugal, and with the Dukes of Savoy and Mantua. The 5th of September he went from Madrid to take Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of Arragon, and to convene an Aſſembly of the States of Catalonia at Barcelona. The 11th by his Proxy at Turin, he married Mary-Louiſa-Gabrielle Princeſs of Savoy, Daughter of Victor-Amadeus II. Duke of Savoy by Ann-Mary of Orleans, Daughter of Monſieur Lewis XIV's. only Brother. The Marriage was conſummated at Figueras in Catalonia November 2. In April the next Year he embark'd at Barcelona for Naples, to ſettle his Affairs in that Kingdom, embroil'd by the Emperor. From whence he went to Milan to take Poſſeſſion of that Duchy, and to put himſelf at the head of the Spaniſh and French Armies, the latter of which was commanded by the Duke of Vendôme. The 20th of July he routed the Imperial Army, commanded by Prince Eugene of Savoy, at Santa-Vittoria; and the 15th of Auguſt following he gain'd the Battel of Luzara; the Conſequence of which Advantage was the taking of Luzara and Guaſtalla. And his Catholick Majeſty not coming up to Santa Vittoria till the Fight was almoſt over he had not the Opportunity he wiſh'd for to ſhew his Courage; but at the Battel of Luzara he appear'd in all the hotteſt Danger, and gave illuſtrious Proof of his Intrepidity, expoſing himſelf to the Fire of Musket and Cannon; and 'twas obſerv'd that for eight and fourty Hours he neither undreſs'd himſelf nor ſlept, nor ſcarce ſo much as eat. The gaining theſe two Battels made good the Expectation generally had of him, and gave the Emperor to underſtand that he had occaſion enough to ſtrengthen his Alliances, to enable him to face ſo warlike a Prince; this put him upon another Trial to draw the King of Portugal and the Duke of Savoy into his Intereſt, which he effected. As ſoon as King Philip underſtood theſe two Princes had diſengag'd themſelves from the Treaty made with himſelf, and with the French King his Grandfather; and that the King of Portugal had receiv'd Archduke Charles in his Dominions, his Catholick Majeſty declar'd War againſt him in 1704, and putting himſelf at the Head of his Troops, enter'd Portugal, where he took ſeveral Towns, ſome Sword in Hand, and others ſurrender'd at Diſcretion. But whilſt he was conquering here, the Engliſh ſurpriz'd Gibraltar, which the Spaniards endeavour'd to recover the next Year, but without Succeſs. Prince Darmſtad who had been Viceroy of Catalonia in the late Reign of Charles II. and keeping private Correſpondence with the Malcontents there, march'd up to Barcelona September 1705, and by the Aſſiſtance of the Revolters form'd the Siege. Don Franciſco de Velaſco, Viceroy and Captain General of that Province, defended the Place with great Bravery; but finding himſelf betray'd by the Burghers, and receiving no Succours, he capitulated to preſerve the Garriſon, which was conducted to Alicant. Soon after the taking of Barcelona, Lerida, Girone, and almoſt all Catalonia were loſt. The Kingdoms of Arragon and Valencia alſo gave way, and ſunk under the Arms of the Archduke. The large Detachments, which the Spaniards were forc'd to make from their Army in Eſtremadura, to prevent the Enemy's penetrating into Caſtille, gave the Portugueſe a ſufficient Superiority for attempting the Siege of Badajos, which the Mareſchal de Teſſé made 'em quit with Diſgrace enough, having only eight thouſand Men with him, and moſt of 'em Horſe, whereas the Portugueſe were above eight and twenty thouſand ſtrong. The King of Spain perceiving the Frontiers of Eſtremadura, and Old Caſtille ſecur'd againſt the Incurſions of the Portugueſe, ſet down before Barcelona, where the Siege promis'd well at firſt; the Fort Montjoui, which was reckon'd almoſt impregnable, ſurrender'd, and the Body of the Place was attack'd with ſuch Vigour, that the Beſiegers were ready to go upon the Aſſault: But the Garriſon receiving a Reinforcement of ſeven thouſand Men by Sea, and the Enemy's Army by Land being encreas'd by the coming in of above twenty thouſand Miquelets, they found themſelves ſtrong enough to come up to the Trenches, and charge the Beſiegers: This unexpected turn made the Council of War adviſe the raiſing the Siege. None but the King and the Marquiſs de Legal diſſented from this Reſolution: But all the General Officers ſuggeſting the Danger of continuing the Siege, and putting his Majeſty in mind that he was in a Country full of Revolters, and where 'twas impracticable for him to receive any Reinforcement, he gave in to their Reaſons, made an honourable Retreat, and countermarch'd into Caſtille. The undertaking this Siege was fatal to Spain, becauſe all the Forces of the Kingdom being drawn down into Catalonia, and by conſequence in no Condition to reinforce the Duke of Berwick, who commanded a ſmall Body in Eſtremadura: Matters lying thus, there was no ſtopping the Portugueſe, who were more than thirty thouſand effective Men, from penetrating into Caſtille through the Mountains of Guazdazama: Upon this Approach of the Enemy the King left Madrid June 21. A. D. 1706, and rode to his Army, where he continued expecting to be joyn'd by the Troops deſign'd for the Siege of Barcelona. The Enemy, whoſe Buſineſs it was to intimidate the Spaniards, and fright 'em from adhering to King Philip, ſpread a Report that his Majeſty was ready to abandon his Dominions, and retire into France. It muſt be confeſs'd the Appearances of things gave ſome Credit to this Calumny; the King having but a ſlender Body of Troops, and his Exchequer being quite exhauſted: But his Majeſty's making a Declaration at the Head of his Camp, that he was reſolv'd to loſe the laſt Drop of his Blood rather than leave his loyal Subjects; this Proteſtation, I ſay, quickly re-aſſur'd the Spaniards, and made 'em ſee through the falſe News that was ſpread; and within ſome few Days a Reinforcement coming up from France, King Philip offer'd the Enemy Battel, which, notwithſtanding their Superiority of Numbers, they durſt not accept. And ſoon after finding themſelves harraſs'd on all Sides, they retreated to the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Valencia, where the next Spring the Duke of Berwick attack'd 'em at Almanza, and gave 'em an entire Defeat: The Recovery of the Kingdoms of Arragon and Valencia were the Conſequences of this Battel. Lerida and Tortoſa in Catalonia were regain'd by the Duke of Orleans. In the Year 1710 the King heading his Army in Arragon, made ſome encouraging Progreſs at firſt; but Count Staremberg having ſtole a March from the Marquiſs of Bay, who commanded under his Catholick Majeſty; Staremberg having thus given the Marquiſs of Bay the go-by, attack'd him near Saragoſſa, and gain'd the Battel: The King thus worſted, was forc'd to draw off to Valladolid with the Debris of his Army, where ſome time after he was joyn'd by the Duke of Vendome. In the mean time the Enemy ſeiz'd Madrid, and fortify'd themſelves at Toledo, from whence the King's Army forc'd 'em to decamp in Diſorder. The Archduke of Auſtria not thinking it adviſeable to ſtay for the King's coming up with him, quitted Caſtille, and retir'd to Barcelona; Staremberg in the mean time doing his utmoſt to check the Progreſs of the Spaniſh Arms; but all to no Effect; for five thouſand of his Men which he had left in Brihuega being made Priſoners of War, his Catholick Majeſty attack'd him at Villa-Vicioſa, gave him a total Defeat, and forc'd him to retire with Precipitation into Catalonia, whither the Duke of Vendome perſuing him cloſely, oblig'd him to move farther, and retreat to Saragoſſa; where he was in no condition to ſtay long, but was forc'd to repaſs the Ebro. Afterwards Gironne was beſieg'd by the Duke de Noailles, who made himſelf Maſter of it January 31, 1711; after which Succeſs he drove the Enemy out of the Kingdoms of Valencia, Caſtille, Arragon, the County of Ribagorça, and part of Catalonia. And from this time the King of Spain went on purſuing his Point againſt his rebellious Subjects; and a Peace between the Court in England, Portugal, the States General, the Duke of Savoy, and all the Confederates, excepting the Archduke, being concluded at Utrecht in 1713; in virtue of which Philip was own'd King of Spain: This Treaty being thus concluded, the Engliſh evacuated the Places they had in Catalonia, and recall'd their Troops. But the Catalans, perſiſting in their Rebellion, refus'd to ſubmit. 'Tis to be hop'd, continues the French Supplementer, they won't hold out long againſt the Forces of Spain, ſupported by thoſe of France; thus far the Paris Article. But here, the Dutch Gentleman obſerves very well, that the French Author ſhould not have forgotten, that by the Treaty between Spain and England, the firſt yielded Gibraltar and Port-Mahon to the latter: That the Town of Barcelona being abandon'd by their Allies, was forc'd to ſurrender at Diſcretion, after having made a deſperate Defence againſt the joynt Troops of Spain and France: To this he ſubjoyns that the Peace between Spain and Holland was ratify'd in 1714: And that between Spain and Portugal in the beginning of 1715. The Queen of Spain dying February 14. 1714. King Philip V. marry'd the Princeſs of Parma, which new Queen, as ſoon as ſhe came into Spain, oblig'd the Princeſs Urſini, who had the the Aſcendant in the late Queen's time, to depart the Kingdom * Memoires du tems.

PHILIP, Duke of Orleans, of Valois, of Chartres, and of Nemours, Montpenſier, &c. Peer of France, Son of Philip of France Duke of Orleans by Elizabeth-Charlotte of Bavaria, was born Auguſt 2. 1674. He made his firſt Campaign in 1691, where he ſerved at the Siege of Mons under his Unkle Lewis XIV: The reſt of that Summer he ſpent with the Duke of Luxembourg General of the French Forces in Flanders. In 1692 he made another Campaign in Flanders, and was at the Battel of Steinkerque, where he commanded the Reſerve. In 1706 he commanded the Army in Italy, and was dangerouſly wounded at the raiſing the Seige of Turin. In 1707 he moved into Spain to take the Command of the French and Spaniſh Troops. Here he took the Town and Caſtle of Lerida, and reduc'd the Kingdom of Arragon; and in 1708 he made himſelf Maſter of Tortoſa and ſeveral other Places in Catalonia. He is ſaid to be a knowing Prince, and to have a good Genius for Arts and Sciences. In February 1692 he married Frances-Mary of Bourbon natural Daughter to King Lewis XIV, but legitimated by Letters Patents: By whom he has Iſſue Lewis Duke of Chartres and ſeveral Daughters. * P. Anſelme.

PHILIP, Governour of Jeruſalem, Antiochus Epiphanes's Foſter-Brother. He did the Jews a great deal of Miſchief. He had the Government of the Kingdom of Syria and was Protector to Antiochus Eupator: But revolting againſt his Prince, and getting himſelf Crown'd King of Antioch, he loſt his uſurp'd Crown and his Life in a great Battel againſt Lyſias and Eupator. He was taken in the Purſuit and puniſh'd as he deſerv'd. This Philip had the greateſt Share of Confidence with Antiochus Epiphanes; for that Prince finding himſelf at the Point of Death put his Crown his Ring and his Royal Cloak in Philip's Hand to carry 'em to his Son, charging him withal to take great Care of his Education and Dominions, till he came of Age to govern himſelf. Epiphanes's Eyes were no ſooner clos'd, but this Wretch of a Miniſter wore all theſe Diſtinctions of Royalty and ſet up for himſelf. But it ſeems he was not equal to the Poſt he had ſeiz'd: And thus bungling in his Uſurpation he was diſpatch'd by the Executioner. * 2 Maccab. 13. ℣. 23. Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 12. cap. 14. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

PHILIP, a converted Jew living in the 17th Century. He made a Latin Tranſlation of the thirteen Ways of interpreting the Pentateuch written by R. Iſmaël. He likewiſe tranſlated the Book Pirke Avoth into Latin. He wrote a Book containing fifteen Queſtions extracted from Jewiſh Books to confute their Religion, printed at Paris A. D. 1620: An Hebrew Talmudic-Rabbinical Dictionary printed at Paris A. D. 1629: And a Tranſlation of a Book entitled l' Examen du Monte. * Bartholocci, Bibliothec. Rabbinique. Du Pin, Hiſtoire des Juifs depuis JESUS-CHRIST juſqu' à preſent.

PHILIPPOPOLI, a Town in European Turkey. It ſtands in Romania upon the River Mariza, four and twenty Leagues above Adrianople. The Town is an Archiepiſcopal See, conſiderably large but unwall'd. * Maty, Diction.

PHILONOMUS and Gallias, two Brothers of Catana in Sicily: They are famous for preſerving their Father's Life, and carrying him upon their Shoulders through the Eruption of Ætna. 'Tis ſaid the Flames paid them a reſpect and made a Lane for them as they paſs'd. * Stobæus, ex Æl.

* PHILOPONUS (John,) a Grammarian of Alexandria, flouriſh'd at the End of the ſixth and the beginning of the ſeventh Century. He was Head of the Tritheites, when Johannes Scholaſticus was Patriarch of Conſtantinople. He liv'd to the Year 608, as appears by his writing a Tract upon the Hexameron, at the inſtance of Sergius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who was promoted to this See no ſooner than this Year. He wrote a Tract upon Eaſter; another upon the Reſurrection, wherein he denies the Reſurrection of the Body: He likewiſe wrote againſt the Council of Chalcedon; a Refutation of Johannes Scholaſticus Biſhop of Conſtantinople upon the Subject of the Trinity; and a Tract againſt Proclus, who maintained the Eternity of the World. This Author, as Photius obſerves, was no leſs correct and entertaining in his Style, than wicked in his Opinion and Reaſoning. Leontius the Monk, Ephrem Biſhop of Theopolis, and George Piſides wrote againſt Philoponus. * Photius, Cod. 21, 42, 43, 55, 57, 215, 216, & 240. Suidas, in Lex. Baronius, A. C. 535. N. 75. & ſeq. Godeau, Hiſt. Eccleſ. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VI. & VII.

* PHILOSOPHY, according to Etymology is the Love of Wiſdom. 'Tis a Name of Pythagoras's coining, who call'd that Philoſophy, which thoſe before him call'd plain Wiſdom; and which, to ſpeak ſtrictly, was the Religion of Men of Learning and Education, as the Mythology of the Poets was the Belief and Rule of Life for the Populace. The occaſion of changing the Name was this; Pythagoras happening to be at the King of the Phliaſians Court, this Prince ask'd him what his Profeſſion was; to whom he modeſtly anſwer'd that he pretended to no Profeſſion; and that he was no Sophos, or Sage, but only a Philoſopher, that is, an Admirer of Wiſdom. From this time thoſe who formerly went under the Name of Sages were call'd Philoſophers, and their Doctrine and Sentiments Philoſophy.

Philoſophy may be divided into two kinds, or to ſpeak more cloſely, two different things are underſtood by this Word: One may be term'd Habitual Philoſophy, that is to ſay, a Habit or Faculty of reaſoning upon every thing from clear and evident Principles, and living by the Maxims of right Reaſon: The other is Syſtematick Philoſophy, which comprehends a Body of ſeveral Sciences acquir'd by Application and Study.

Philoſophy is farther divided into Theoretick and Practical: Theoretick is that which concerns itſelf only to reach the Knowledge of it's Object; and under this Kind we may range Natural Philoſophy, which teaches us only to know natural Bodies, but not how to make 'em. As for Practical Philoſophy, the Deſign of this is to inſtruct us in the moſt ſerviceable way of acting: Thus Morality, which ſets Rules for the Conduct of Life, is one part of Practical Philoſophy. But without dilating upon this over general Diviſion, Philoſophy may be conſider'd under ſix Heads. 1. Logick, which is the Art of thinking and reaſoning. 2. Metaphyſicks, a Science which treats of Being in general, and of the Properties common to all Beings. 3. Pneumatology, which treats of Spirits, as far as they can be known by the Light of Nature. 4. Phyſicks, which teaches us to penetrate the Nature and Attributes of Bodies. 5. Mathematicks, which are canton'd into ſeveral Subdiviſions, and which in general have Bulk or Quantity for their Object, that is to ſay, every thing capable of being diminiſh'd or encreas'd. 6. Morality, which lays down Rules for the Government of Life, and which is ſubdivided into three Branches. 1. The Monaſtic part, which inſtructs how to behave under ſolitary and unrelating reſpects. 2. Politicks, which informs a Man how he is to manage, whether Sovereign or Subject. 3. Oeconomicks, which lays down the Duty of Fathers and Children, Maſters and Servants, Husbands and Wives.

As to the firſt Seat of Philoſophy, 'tis generally taken for granted 'twas in the Eaſt. But then the Eaſtern People themſelves are not agreed who were the Inventers of Philoſophy. The Ægyptians maintain that the firſt Philoſophers were their Countrymen; and that Philoſophy travell'd from them into Chaldæa with an Ægyptian Colony who remov'd thither: But notwithſtanding this Pretenſion, and how well it may be grounded as to other Branches of Learning, 'tis generally ſuppos'd that Aſtronomy was a Chaldæan Invention, and that the Magi of that Country were the firſt who obſerv'd the Courſes of the Stars, and ſo far at leaſt, antiquiſſimum Doctorum Genus, as Tully ſpeaks, or the moſt ancient Philoſophers in the World.

But let that be as it will, this Philoſophy was ſo imperfect that it ſcarce deſerv'd the Name. It may more properly be call'd a ſuperſtitious ſort of Theology, for in Ægypt 'twas reckon'd a part of Religion, and deliver'd in Emblems and Myſtery for a more ſolemn Appearance; and amongſt the Chaldæans it turn'd moſt upon ſuperſtitious Obſervations and Pagan Divinity. They talk'd of almoſt nothing but Spirits, and made the immaterial World the Machines for producing the Phænomena of Nature. The Reader who deſires to ſee more more upon this Subject, may read Stanley's Hiſtory of Philoſophy, &c. 'Tis tranſlated into Latin with Notes by Le Clerc.

'Twas from the Chaldæans and Ægyptians abovemention'd the Greeks receiv'd their firſt Tincture of Philoſophy; but then they refin'd upon their Maſters, and went much beyond 'em. To ſpeak properly, 'twas the Greeks who firſt threw their Reaſoning into Method and Exactneſs; inſomuch that they may fairly be call'd the firſt Founders of the old Philoſophy. Thales and Pythagoras were the firſt who openly profeſs'd this Faculty.

Anaximander, Thales's Scholar, improv'd upon his Maſter, and founded the Ionick Sect, which was ſo call'd becauſe Thales and Anaximander, the Heads of this Clan, were of Miletus a City in Ionia. Anaximander makes the Earth the Center of the Univerſe, which he believ'd to be round. It muſt be ſaid, he was the firſt that botch'd up a Syſtem of the World. He held the Sun as big as the Earth, from whence we may conclude that this Philoſopher's Obſervations were made upon narrow and defective Principles, in regard it has ſince been demonſtrated that the Sun is many hundred times bigger.

The moſt celebrated Philoſophers of the Ionick Sect were Anaximenes, Anaxagoras and Archelaüs. They apply'd themſelves moſtly to Phyſicks: Anaximenes held that Air and infinite Space was the Principle of all things. He aſſerted that the Stars did not move over the Earth but round it; which ſhews that he had no very diſtinct Idea of the different Situation of the Stars with reſpect to the different parts of the Earth, according to which different Poſition the Stars may be ſaid to move upon the Earth and round it too. Anaxagoras made Matter and Mind or Spirit, (ὕλω καὶ νῶν) the Principle or Cauſe of all things. He believ'd that at the beginning all things were in Confuſion, and that an Hylarkick Spirit diſentangled the Chaos, and put every thing in the preſent Order. He aſſerted that the Elements of the Univerſe were only little Parts of an Homogeneous Whole, and that Bones, for example, were form'd of little Bones; that the Earth conſiſts of ſmall terreſtrial Particles; that Fire and Water, and every thing in Nature has no other Principles, but ſmaller Subdiviſions and Crumblings of their own Body ſet together. He ſpent his whole time in aſtronomical Reſearches, and believ'd the Moon was inhabited, and had Mountains and Valleys in it. He held the Sun was a red hot piece of Iron, ſomewhat bigger than Peloponneſus in Greece; and that a Comet was nothing but a Cluſter of little Stars run together; that the Inequality of their Motion made 'em ſometimes fall foul and ſtick together; that this accidental Rendezvous made 'em viſible; and that the Comet diſappear'd when this Body of Stars diſengag'd from their united Situation, took a particular rout, and detach'd from each other. This Hypotheſis, tho' ingenious enough, won't hold upon Examination. Archelaüs maintain'd that Heat and Cold were the two Principles of Generation: That all Animals, Mankind not excepted, were produc'd from Mud. He held the Sun the biggeſt Star. This Archelaüs travell'd from Ionia to Athens, where he was Socrates's Maſter.

Pythagoras founded a Sect call'd the Italick, becauſe he liv'd in that Part of Italy then call'd Magna Græcia, and which now makes Part of the Kingdom of Naples. He had a myſterious Way of teaching which he learned from the Ægyptians; this ænigmatical Manner is far from being a recommendation of his Philoſophy. His Sentiments are diſguis'd under the Emblems of Numbers, which he makes uſe of in every Thing he delivers: And lays it down for a fundamental Maxim that Unity is the Principle of all Things. To theſe Numbers he added a ſupplemental Harmony, which he throws in as an Auxiliary to finiſh and perfect every Thing. According to him Virtue, Health, the Soul, and God himſelf, were nothing but Harmony: And 'tis well known 'twas this Phloſopher was the firſt that ſtruck up the Muſick of the Spheres. Tully makes a handſome Deſcription of it in his Somnium Scipionis. Pythagoras held that Fire, Water, Earth, and Air, by different rencounters of Motion and Figure, ſettled in a World, which he imagin'd animated, intelligent and round. He fancy'd the Sun, Moon and other Stars were ſo many Deities. He aſſerted a divine Providence for the Conduct of human Affairs, but that there was a certain Fate (Εἱμαρμένη) which manag'd and overul'd all events. He believ'd the Soul immortal, tho' at the ſame time he held it no more than a warm Exhalation, and that 'twas inviſible no otherwiſe than Air is ſo. He imagin'd the Air was thick planted with Souls or Spirits; and that theſe intelligent Beings form'd Dreams in Peoples Heads, and did a great deal of other common Buſineſs. Pythagoras being ſomewhat at a Loſs what turn the Soul took after ſhe was diſlodg'd from the Body, ſet up a Metempſychoſis, that is, that the Soul after Death travell'd from one Body into another; and in Conſequence of this Opinion he declar'd againſt killing any thing living for Diet, or ſo much as for ſacrificing to the Gods. Pythagoras's Syſtem of Morality is crude and unform'd, no leſs than that of Thales: It conſiſts only of Maxims without any Baſis or Principle. But that which is moſt valuable in this Part of his Inſtructions, is that he laid down no Rules but what he practis'd exactly himſelf. The moſt Part of his moral Maxims are Emblematick and Myſtical. For inſtance, to hold forth a Leſſon that great People ſhould not be provok'd, he tells us that we are not to unrake the Fire with the Sword. Another of his Inſtructions is not to take a Swallow into your Houſe, as much as to ſay, we ſhould avoid a great Talker or a counterfeit Friend, who viſits us when we have Spring, and takes his Leave when our Winter approaches. Not to ſit upon a Buſhel, that is, to avoid Idleneſs, nor let the preſent have ſuch an Aſcendant over us as to make us forget the future. Not to eat the Heart, that is, not to be penetrating and ingenious to plague our ſelves. Not to return when we have taken leave, that is, not to count upon Life, nor claſp meanly about it when we are at the Brink of Death; nor to part unwillingly with the Pleaſures of this World when we are in no condition to keep 'em. The Reader may meet with a great many more of Pythagoras's dark Maxims in Plutarch, Diogenes Laertius, and Porphyry.

The Italick Sect flouriſh'd to a conſiderable Degree, and made a much greater Progreſs than that of Thales and Anaximander. Pythagoras's moſt celebrated Diſciples were Ocellus of Lucania, Archytas of Tarentum, Philolaüs of Crotona, Parmenides and Zeno both of Elea or Velia, and Meliſſus of Samos. Ocellus, Archytas, and Zeno work'd upon Logick, of which Zeno was the Inventor. Parmenides, Philolaüs, and Meliſſus apply'd themſelves to natural Philoſophy, rang'd their Diſquiſitions under Principles, but without varying much from their Maſter's Scheme. Parmenides taught that the Origination of Mankind was immediately owing to the Heat of the Sun, and that this Planet was Hot and Cold, becauſe he fancy'd that Heat and Cold were the Principles of all Things. He likewiſe held that we ought to judge by the Direction of Reaſon, and not by the Information of the Senſes, which are often unſafe Guides to rely on. Meliſſus believ'd the World infinite, unmoveable, unchangeable, and every where full, without either congregated or interſpers'd Vacuum. That there's no ſuch thing as Motion, but only an Appearance of it. He aſſerted that People ought not to be dogmatical concerning the Gods, becauſe we have no certain diſtinct Knowledge of their Nature. Philolaüs believ'd that Harmony and inevitable Neceſſity were the Maker of all things. He was the firſt who maintain'd the Earth mov'd round upon her Axis; tho' ſome ſay Nicetas of Syracuſe was the firſt in this Hypotheſis.

We have already obſerv'd that Thales, Pythagoras and their Clans ſpent moſt of their time in natural Philoſophy, Geometry and Logick. Socrates, who came after 'em, turn'd almoſt all his Thoughts to Morality. He began at firſt to reduce the confus'd Notions of his Predeceſſors into Method, which makes Tully ſtyle him the Father of Philoſophy. He had a lively inventing Genius, together with great Judgment and Penetration. His Method for recommending his own Sentiments, and confuting thoſe of others is admirable. He form'd his Diſcourſe by Way of Dialogue, or Queſtion and Anſwer. Here, in the firſt Place he propos'd his own Opinion as doubtful, which he endeavour'd to clear up by giving a right State of the Queſtion: After that, he made all the ſignificant Objections which could be offer'd, with Solutions apply'd; and explain'd his Thoughts by ſuch familiar cogent Comparitons, that Truth and Conviction was convey'd with great Perſpicuity, and made almoſt an Object of Senſe. He never deliver'd his Thoughts with a magiſterial Air, as if the Audience were bound to take 'em upon Content: No; his Manner was to inſtruct without Poſitiveneſs and Deciſion, and leave his Hearers the Pleaſure to convince themſelves; for 'twas not his Way to pretend to Infallibility, and ramm his Notions down People's Throats. When he deſign'd to confute any Body, he confeſs'd to him at firſt that he did not well underſtand the Thing in Queſtion, and deſir'd further Information. By this Means he gain'd ſomewhat upon the Fancy of his Antagoniſt, ſweetned his Humor, and prevented Eagerneſs in the Diſpute, which was no inconſiderable Service. For when People's Tempers are ruffled they commonly think of nothing ſo much as maintaining their own Opinion, without a due regard to the Reaſons in counterbalance. Socrates having fully learn'd his Adverſary's Opinion, deſir'd him to explain it farther, and ſet it in the beſt Light he could, pretending that his Apprehenſion was not quick enough to underſtand the Argument without a farther Explanation. Thus he got clear of the Ambiguity of the Terms, which are the Occaſion of almoſt all Diſputes, and which the Philoſophers in Socrates's time retreated to as their beſt Covert. And by chopping a little Logick, and wrangling upon Words, they could prate upon every thing, without underſtanding any thing. His next Advance was to ſhew his Adverſary the untoward Conſequences of his Opinion; and thus, leading him Step by Step from one Abſurdity to another, he made him ſenſible at laſt of his being miſtaken. This was all Socrates's Logick; and it muſt be ſaid of it that 'tis much more ſerviceable to teach the Art of Reaſoning and clear a Man's Head, than all the Inſtructions and Rules commonly given by Logicians. In almoſt all theſe Queſtions Socrates thought it ſufficient to confute the Opinions of other People, without ſettling any thing of his own. No Philoſopher was ever more reſerv'd and diffident, and ſtood farther from deciding than himſelf: He us'd to ſay that he knew only one thing, and that was that he knew nothing; and thus having no Reliſh for Phyſicks upon the ſcore of the Uncertainty and Inconcluſiveneſs of what was advanc'd upon this Branch of Philoſophy; and being likewiſe convinc'd that all the Diſcoveries in ſpeculative Sciences brought little Benefit along with 'em, he exerted himſelf to teach People the Art of living well, which muſt be confeſs'd is the only piece of Knowledge worth the drudging for. Socrates is the firſt who rang'd the Precepts of Morality under ſome method, and ſettled 'em upon a right bottom. He lays it down for a thing which muſt be granted, that a Man can't be perfectly happy in this Life, whilſt the Soul and Body, whoſe Intereſts ſometimes claſh, ſtick together. He believ'd likewiſe that after Death Men would be puniſh'd or rewarded, in proportion to their good or bad Behaviour. After having laid down ſuch ſolid Principles, he could ſcarcely miſs his way in reaſoning upon practical Duties, and the Vices oppoſite to 'em: In conſequence therefore of theſe Maxims he always dilated upon the Topicks of Sincerity, Moderation, Juſtice, Temperance, Humility, and Diſengagement from the World. Give him his due, he was ſo ſtrongly perſuaded of the Serviceableneſs of his Precepts, that he was the firſt that copy'd 'em in his Life, teaching no leſs by his Example than by his Doctrine. His Honeſty was Proof againſt all the Solicitations of Intereſt, and his Mind was ſufficiently fortify'd to maintain any Truth, which he thought ſerviceable to the Publick. In ſuch Caſes no Dangers could fright him, nor any Preſents from great Men bribe him to Silence. His Life was a good Model of Frugality, Moderation, and Patience. In ſhort, he was none of thoſe Pretenders to Probity, who always let fall the Mask when their Honeſty and their Intereſt happen to claſh. No, Socrates's Virtue was conſtantly equal and uniform, and held out to his laſt Breath. Every Body knows that he was proſecuted for maintaining irreligious Tenets; becauſe he taught that properly ſpeaking, there was but one God, whom he call'd the ſupreme Being: And when he was condemn'd to die, he drank of his poiſonous Hemlock with as little Concern as if he had been at an Entertainment; diſcours'd of the Immortality of the Soul, and of the Happineſs he expected after this Life. Juſt the Moment before he expir'd, he expreſſes himſelf thus: I have, ſays he, through the whole Courſe of my Life endeavour'd to live up to the beſt of my Capacity and Knowledge: Whether upon this ſcore I have made myſelf acceptable to the Gods or not, is more than I can certainly tell: But if the living up to that which one judges the beſt, is the way to pleaſe the Deity, I hope not to be unacceptable to him.

be

Socrates obſerving a ſtronger and better Genius in Plato than in the reſt of his Diſciples, took particular Care of him. Plato anſwer'd the Peculiarity of his Maſter's Regard: For of all the great Men who made part of Socrates's Audience, Plato was without doubt the beſt qualify'd for his Maſter's Chair. He ſet up his School, or Place for Inſtruction, in the Academus, a Field without the Town of Athens, from whence his Followers were call'd Academicks. His manner of teaching was much the ſame with Socrates's. He threw his Diſcourſe into the Form of a Dialogue: He thought this method the beſt to ſtate the Caſe, and examine the Bottom of the Matter, which he did by way of Queſtion and Anſwer: Thus in one of his Dialogues entitled Cratylus he tells us that he is the moſt accompliſh'd Logician, who underſtands how to ask Queſtions and return Anſwers with Skill and Cogency. He commonly made uſe of Definition and Diviſion to give Evidence and Conviction to what he advanc'd. He took more Pains, like his Maſter Socrates, to pull down other Peoples Structures than to build any himſelf. His conſidering things only with reference to their Ideas, made him ſeldom pronounce poſitively, or come to any deciſive Affirmation. This Diffidence being lay'd down for a general Maxim in Plato's Philoſophy, 'twill be neceſſary to inſtance in ſome Particulars, that the Proceſs of this Philoſopher's reaſoning may be the better underſtood.

And here, we are to obſerve firſt, according to Plato, human Souls are a Ray of the Divinity: That this divine Particle when united to it's Principle, whence it ſprings, knew all things; but afterwards incorporating as one may ſay with a Body, the Soul contracted Ignorance and Impurity by ſo cloſe and diſagreeable a Correſpondence. Upon this Principle he affirm'd that the Senſes gave the firſt Notices and Diſtinctions of Truth and Falſhood; but then he maintain'd that 'twas the Soul's Buſineſs to examine the Caſe, and give Sentence; and that we ought to ſtand to her Award; becauſe ſhe did not ſtick in the Superficies of things like a Fly in a Cobweb, but drove deep through the Subſtance, and reach'd the bottom, which he call'd the eternal and unchangeable Idea. Thus, according to Plato, a Philoſopher muſt only graſp at the Knowledge of things in their Principles and firſt Originals, by the way of Ideas; that is in other Words, he ſhould conſult the eternal Wiſdom, which is the Source and Cauſe of all theſe Ideas; this is the Reaſon Plato calls Philoſophy an ardent Deſire to fathom the divine Wiſdom, ὄρεξιν τ θείας σοφίας; to explain farther what is meant by Ideas, we may obſerve that Tully giving an Account of the Doctrine of the Stoicks upon this Head, takes notice their Opinion was that the Soul ſhould pronounce upon things; that we might ſafely depend upon her Deciſions, becauſe ſhe knew things in their original uncompounded Nature; and that this Nature remote from Compoſition, was what they call'd an Idea. From hence we may perceive, that, ſtrictly ſpeaking, Plato's Diſciples muſt profeſs to know nothing. For by explaining things by theſe uncompounded, eternal and unchangeable Ideas, they conſider'd 'em in the condition in which they fanſy'd they ought to be, and not in that in which they really are. For Matter made into a World, is diverſify'd into a great many Attributes and Modifications foreign to that uncompounded Nature and original Model, lodg'd in the divine Mind, and under which Conſideration theſe Philoſophers view'd created Beings.

Farther, Plato did not overlook natural Philoſophy ſo entirely as Socrates. He concern'd himſelf in a great many Queſtions relating to this Science. He held two Principles of all things, God and Matter. He makes Matter an indigeſted unform'd Principle, and that it ſerves for the Compoſition of all Bodies when under a proper Direction. He ſuppoſes this Matter mov'd itſelf at firſt at random, and without any Order; that God drew the Maſs of Matter into a proper Place, furniſh'd it with a regular Motion, and by this means ſtruck out the four Elements of Fire, Air, Water and Earth; out of which he made the World, and every thing in it. That God gave all things their Form, that is, an unblemiſh'd Participation of the Idea. He believ'd the World animated; his Reaſon is, becauſe that which is living is better than that which is not. He aſſerts there is but one World, becauſe the Model upon which 'tis made is only ſingle. He believes 'tis finite and of a ſpherical Figure. He makes it eternal à parte poſt; becauſe, as he argues, that which is once ſomething can never be nothing. 'Twas likewiſe part of his Belief that the World was under the Conduct of divine Providence. Time, according to Plato, means nothing more than the Motion of the Heavenly Bodies, that it began with the Creation, and that God has given the Sun a luminous Body to make it inſtrumental for dividing the parts of Time, and ſerving, as it were, for a Regulator to adjuſt the Hours. This Philoſopher planted the Moon above the Earth, aſſigning the Sun a higher Situation than all the other Planets. He believ'd the whole Univerſe was powder'd with Souls; and particularly that the Stars were furniſh'd with Intelligencies to take care of 'em. He held that the Earth was created to ſettle the Viciſſitudes of Day and Night, and for this Reaſon he ſuppos'd ſhe mov'd.

PLATO, believ'd only one ſupreme, ſpiritual and inviſible God which he calls the Being, or Being Itſelf, Goodneſs itſelf, the Father and the Cauſe of all Beings. Under this ſupreme Deity he ranges another inferior Being which he calls Logos, or the Reaſon: To this he aſſigns the Adminiſtration of every thing Preſent and Future, and makes this Being the Creator of the Univerſe. He likewiſe own'd a third Being, which he calls the Mind or Soul of the World. He aſſerts that the firſt was the Father of the ſecond, and that the ſecond produc'd the third. Plato, as 'tis ſuppos'd, durſt not ſpeak out all he thought upon this Subject, for fear of provoking his ſuperſtitious Countrymen. But ſome of his Sect in after times carry'd their Enquiry a great way into the Nature of theſe three Principles. This Doctrine having a ſtrong Reſemblance with the Article of the Trinity, made a great many of the Ancients and Moderns conclude this Myſtery was not unknown to the Philoſophers, and that Plato had extracted it from the Books of the Old Teſtament, when he was in Ægypt, where a great many Jews were ſettled. To theſe three Principles Plato added ſome Claſſes of inferior Divinities, as Dæmons, Heroes, &c.

He had another Opinion which made a great Noiſe amongſt the Chriſtians. He believ'd Souls pre-exiſted in ſome Regions above the Moon; and that upon miſbehaving themſelves they were baniſh'd thoſe happy Manſions, and forc'd into Bodies differently condition'd in proportion to the Degree of their Crimes; but that at laſt they return'd to their former Station. This is pretty near Origen's Opinion, who maintain'd that the Devils and the Damn'd ſhould not be eternally unhappy, but that after a certain Period of Torment God Almighty would be reconcil'd to 'em.

Plato's Syſtem of Morality is the ſame in Subſtance with that of Socrates; but then 'tis better form'd and digeſted, and not ſo looſe and immethodical. Plato makes the end of human Actions the firſt Principle in his Morality. The end every Man's Actions, ſays he, aim at, is his Good or Advantage; and the laſt end of all his Actions is his ſovereign Good, the Poſſeſſion of which is ſufficient to anſwer all his Deſires. This ſovereign Good is God the ſupreme Being, who is an entire Collection of every thing good and deſirable; that Virtue is the only way which can lead us to the Fruition of this ſovereign comprehenſive Good; and that, to ſpeak more particularly, the means for attaining this Happineſs is to check the Paſſions, which carry us out to exceſſive Purſuits of little and incommoding Satisfactions. From hence he proceeds to enter upon a Detail of thoſe Offices and Duties we owe to God and Man; and the uſe we ought to make of the different Conditions of Advantage or Diſadvantage we meet with in the World. He gives us to underſtand that the Advantages of Health, Strength, Quickneſs of the Senſes, Wealth, Intereſt, Quality, and Fame, ſerve only for an Encouragement and Support of Virtue when we make good uſe of 'em; but then he aſſerts that a wiſe Man may be happy without all theſe things. But then this Happineſs is not to be complete till after Death. In his Dialogue call'd Gorgias he makes God the ſovereign Judge, and that after this Life Rewards and Puniſhments will be adjuſted in proportion to what People have deſerv'd.

Amongſt all the new Sects form'd by Plato's Diſciples, that founded by Ariſtotle is indiſputably the moſt conſiderable. But there being a long Article in Morery upon the Life and principal Tenets of this Philoſopher, there's no Neceſſity of ſaying much upon thoſe Heads. However, to offer ſomething by way of Addition in a Word or two; it muſt be confeſs'd that Ariſtotle is the firſt who drew the ſeveral Parts of Philoſophy together, to make a complete Syſtem of 'em No Body before him had divided this Science into it's reſpective Branches, and proſecuted it by Principles and Conſequences drawn from 'em. He did not look upon Logick as any part of Philoſophy, but only as an Aſſiſtant or preliminary Preparation to qualify the Mind the better for the Diſcovery of thoſe Truths contain'd in Philoſophy. For this Conſideration he makes Logick the firſt thing that is to be learn'd by a Philoſopher. Ariſtotle has improv'd this Science more than any other part of Philoſophy, and refin'd very much upon his Predeceſſors: And we may venture to ſay, that even to our Times this part of Learning has been little enrich'd ſince Ariſtotle: For the Logick now taught in the Univerſities is much the ſame with that Philoſopher's.

Ariſtotle's Ethicks are without Contradiction, the beſt finiſh'd of all his Works. There's Perſpicuity, Connexion, Force and Copiouſneſs in 'em. His Principles are not very different from Plato's. The Difference there is, and indeed which is eſſential, is that Ariſtotle's Morality moves within the Limits of this Life, and propoſes no Happineſs but what may be expected here; whereas Plato carries his Proſpect into the other World, as we have already ſeen. Ariſtotle places the true Happineſs of Man in his laſt End, and defines this Happineſs to be a Satisfaction deſir'd by every Body, deſir'd for Itſelf, and for the Sake of which every other Advantage is deſir'd. According to him there's no reaching this Satisfaction without Virtue. And as for Virtue, 'tis nothing elſe but an Habit of good Practice, and lies as it were at a middle Diſtance between two vicious Extremes.

This Definition he afterwards applies to Fortitude, Juſtice, Prudence and Temperance; which are the fundamental or cardinal Virtues in his Syſtem of Morality; and to theſe he referrs all the reſt. He holds that Virtue alone can't make us happy, when ſhe comes ſingle and ſolitary: For this purpoſe, ſhe muſt be attended with the Advantages of Body, Mind and Fortune, which are as it were the requiſite Inſtruments or Tools to make us Happy. But then on the other Side, that Vice of itſelf was ſufficient to make a Man miſerable, tho' his Health, his Mind and his Fortune were in the beſt Situation imaginable. According to him Virtue is not gotten at a Heat, nor any inſtantaneous Accompliſhment; and that thoſe who have acquir'd the higheſt Attainments, are not ſo much above the Reach of Paſſion, as not to be ſometimes ſenſible of ſlight Impreſſions.

As for Ariſtotle's Phyſicks, they are ſo well known, and beſides ſo abſtracted and unſerviceable for explaining the Phænomena of Nature, that 'tis not worth the while to dilate upon 'em. And juſt to mention his Methaphyſicks; they are only a Heap of Maxims and Enquiries laid together in a very abſtracted and confus'd Manner.

Ariſtotle was not the only Diſciple of Plato, who deſerted from the Sentiments of that great Man. There were others beſides who ſet up for Heads of Sects. Arceſilaüs, who taught even in Plato's School, was the Author of a Sect which they call'd the Middle Academicks. He held there was no ſuch thing as Certainty or Truth; and that we might fairly maintain the affirmative tive or negative Side upon all Sorts of Queſtions. Thus, he would have no Body determine upon any Point, but ſuſpend his Judgment. He reviv'd Socrates's Method of diſcourſing by Queſtion and Anſwer, which was almoſt grown into Diſuſe.

Lacydes, who taught in the ſame School ſix and fifty Years after Arceſilaüs, was the Head of another Sect call'd the New Academy. He granted ſome things had a Face of Probability; but that no Body could be fully aſſur'd that any thing was abſolutely true.

About the time of Arceſilaüs, Pyrrho rais'd a new Body of Philoſophers; and appear'd at the Head of 'em. He refin'd upon the Academicks; for whereas theſe Men held they were certain they knew nothing certainly, Pyrrho carried the doubt further, and queſtion'd even the Certainty of his own Diffidence. He believ'd there was no ſuch thing as Truth, and that any thing might equally be affirm'd of every thing. He pretended that there was nothing properly ſpeaking honourable or diſhonourable, juſt or unjuſt, decent or indecent; but that the Cuſtoms and Laws of every Country were the ſtandard and Regulators of Practice. Pyrrho's Sovereign good, or laſt Object of Deſire was to live in a Condition of Security and Indifference, where he might ſtand clear of all Paſſions, and be perfectly eaſy and compos'd both with reſpect to his Underſtanding, and his Will. His Followers were call'd *Sceptick*s, becauſe they were always Queſting without being able to ſpring, or at leaſt to ſeize any Game. But for a further Detail, I ſhall refer the Reader to the Article Pyrrho.

About the ſame time two other Sects ſtarted up, founded upon directly oppoſite Principles. Zeno was the Chief in one, and Epicurus in the other. Theſe Clans were firſt very famous at Athens, and afterwards almoſt all the learned World over.

Zeno was of the Town of Citium in Cyprus. He taught in the Piazzaes of Athens, from whence his Diſciples were call'd Stoicks. He had a very full School, becauſe he admitted all ſorts of Perſons; for according to him, every Body was capable of Philoſophy. He was one of Crates's Audience, who taught in Plato's School before Arceſilaüs abovemention'd. Zeno (poſſibly to make himſelf more taken notice of) declar'd againſt all the Philoſophers that went before him; and yet at the ſame time held almoſt all their Sentiments, and often differ'd from 'em no further than in the Manner of Expreſſion. He divided Philoſophy into three Parts, Logick, Ethicks, and natural Philoſophy. There was no Sect better practis'd in the Quirks of Logick than the Stoicks. Beſides the Aſſiſtance which Ariſtotle had given 'em, they skirmiſh'd with the Legerdemain and entangling manner of the Sophiſts. They made uſe of a Set of ſhort puzling Queſtions, which 'twas pretty difficult to get clear of. Their Terms were generally equivocal, and us'd in a foreign Senſe to that commonly receiv'd. Their Language and Expreſſion were as it were pointed, like ſo many Quills ſhot from a Porcupine. In ſhort, they were the moſt famous for Chicane and Wrangling of all the Philoſophers; tho' the Sophiſts at that time, give 'em their due, were very dextrous at giving a Colour to falſe Reaſoning.

The Stoicks made uſe of all this extraordinary refining upon Logick, to ſupport their extravagant Ethicks, and conceal their Defects in Solidity with Jargon and embarraſſing Diſcourſe. Nothing kept up the Credit of their Opinions ſo much as their fencing in the Forms of Logick. Zeno's main Principle for Ethicks was, to live conformably to Nature; and according to this Philoſopher to live conformably to Nature is to live by the Rules of Reaſon: Becauſe Reaſon is a Preſent Nature has made Mankind to aſſiſt 'em in the Conduct of Life: And then to live by the Rules of Reaſon according to him, was to keep cloſe to Virtue, which is the only thing that deſerves our Value and Purſuit. Zeno adds that Virtue, independently of every thing elſe, has Force enough within herſelf to make a Man entirely happy. He held that Reaſon and Virtue move within as narrow a Compaſs as Truth; and that as every thing oppoſite to Truth is equally falſe, ſo every Practice counter to Reaſon and Virtue is equally unreaſonable and vicious, and by conſequence that all Vices were equal. He held likewiſe that the whole Set of Virtues were ſo cloſely connected to each other, that he who was ſeized of one, was in Poſſeſſion of all the reſt; and that a wiſe Man could never loſe his Virtue; 'tis true ſome unfriendly Exhalations might diſturb his Brain, and make him a little craz'd; but this Interruption was to be reckon'd to the Weakneſs of Nature; and not to any Failing in Reaſon, which was always the ſame: So that it ſeems, according to Zeno, the Stoicks wiſe Man kept his Ground, and held his valuable Qualities, when out of his Wits.

Upon theſe Principles, which had nothing but a counterfeit Luſtre, they form'd their romantick Idea of a wiſe Man. They repreſented him perfectly indifferent to every thing without him, that is according to them, to every thing which has no Reference or Alliance to Virtue. This wiſe Man by conſequence was above all the Impreſſions of the moſt raking Pain, and incapable of being affected with any unwelcome Paſſion. When a Slave at the Gallies, he could turn his Oar into a Sceptre: He govern'd the State without being in a Poſt of Honour or Truſt, and was a Monarch under all Conditions. There was never a Poet, Orator, Patriot, or true Friend, worth a Farthing but himſelf. Though he had never a good Feature in his Face, nor any Proportion in his Limbs, he was the handſomeſt Man alive for all that: He was the only wealthy Man, tho' in the greateſt ſeeming Indigence; and the beſt Gentleman, tho' he could not tell who was his Father; and no Body but himſelf knew any thing that was properly Learning. Being arm'd Cap-a-pe with Virtue he was Proof againſt all Misfortune; and in ſhort, could command farther than Jupiter himſelf. But ſuch a wiſe Man as this had never any Being, except in the Fancy of theſe Philoſophers; and all the fine Flouriſhes they made upon Virtue, ſerv'd only to dazzle the People, and feed their own Vanity. But then a Man thus qualify'd was not to ramble into a Deſart, and live by himſelf; no, to make his Example more ſignificant, Zeno tells us he is to appear publickly, and keep Gentlemen Company.

His natural Philoſophy had nothing new but the Expreſſion. According to him, God and Matter were the two univerſal Principles of all things. Matter was quite out of Shape and incapable of acting; and that God and eternal Reaſon made uſe of it for the Production of all things. The Stoicks believ'd there was but one God, who went under ſeveral Names with reſpect to the Diverſity of his Attributes; and that this ſovereign Being had the ſame Lines and Features in his Face which Men have: They aſſerted that at the beginning, when God was the only intelligent Subſtance, he turn'd all the Maſs of Matter into Water, to bring it to a nearer Diſpoſition to receive Form and Perfection. That God at firſt made the four Elements, Fire, Air, Earth and Water; that he gave Fire the uppermoſt Situation, which they call'd the Æther; to this they fanſy'd all the fix'd Stars were faſten'd without Motion, and under theſe they aſſign'd a Place for the Planets. The Air was rang'd immediately under the Fire; the Water came next; and thus the loweſt Place, which they made the Center of the World, was allotted to the Earth. They believ'd God govern'd the World, and yet inconſiſtently held that he depended upon Deſtiny, and wanted Strength to break the Chains of Fate, which over-rul'd the divine Will, and arbitrarily diſpos'd of all Events.

The Stoicks imagin'd the World a great Animal, and that God, who was the Soul of it, pervaded every Part. They believ'd there was no ſuch thing as a Vacuum within the World; but on the outſide of the Creation there was a vaſt unfurniſh'd Void, and which was capable of receiving Matter. They believ'd the World corruptible; becauſe all the Parts of it are plainly ſo. They ſuppos'd the Earth without Motion, and much leſs than the Sun: That the Moon receiv'd all her Light from the Sun; that ſhe was eclips'd when the Shadow of the Earth came between her and the Sun; and that the Sun was eclips'd by the Interpoſition of the Moon between the Sun and Earth. They affirm'd the Sun was kept in repair by drinking Sea Water; that the Moon drank Rivers; and that the Stars ſubſiſted upon Exhalations drawn from the Earth. Their Circles of the Sphere, and particularly the the Zones, were well enough deſcrib'd, abating that they held the frigid and torrrid Zones uninhabitable. Theſe Philoſophers, notwithſtanding they held the Soul corporeal, believ'd ſhe ſubſiſted after Death, tho' ſubject to decay and falling into nothing. Tho' ſome amongſt 'em were of Opinion that the Soul of their wiſe Man was proof againſt the Force of Accidents and Time, and had a peculiar Privilege of Immortality.

The other Sect which flouriſh'd contemporary with Zeno's, and was directly oppoſite to him, was that of the Epicureans, ſo call'd from their Founder Epicurus.

He began to teach Philoſophy publickly at Athens at the Age of two and thirty. His main Aim was to diſpel the Cloud in Peoples Heads as he fanſy'd, to deliver 'em from the Prejudices of Education, from chimerical Opinions which threw 'em into Frights, and kept 'em in perpetual Anxiety; and by thus clearing their Brains of Fables and Rubbiſh, he hop'd to make 'em as happy as 'twas poſſible to be in this Life.

Having laid this for a Foundation, he diſcharges all the Subtilty and Chicanry of Logick, which ſignify'd nothing in the Reſearches after Truth. For Enquiries of this Nature he made uſe of his Senſes, and by reflecting upon the Evidence of their Report. He held that the Senſes could not deceive us, becauſe the Notices they gave could not be Miſtakes. For inſtance, when one ſees a Tower 'tis certain his Eyes are ſtruck with an Impreſſion proper for ſeeing that Object, and that a Man can't deceive himſelf in ſaying that he ſees in the manner his Sight repreſents it. But then Epicurus ſubjoins that the Reaſon or Concluſion the Mind draws from this Impreſſion, may be falſe. For example, when one ſees a ſquare Tower at an hundred Paces Diſtance, if he happens not to ſee the Angles, he'll fall into a Miſtake, if he judges the Tower has no Angles, but is perfectly round. Epicurus having ſettled theſe Principles, which rightly underſtood are ſufficiently ſolid; having ſettled this Baſis, I ſay, he adds for a Superſtructure that the Judgment we form upon Senſation is true, provided it comes with irreſiſtible Evidence, and that 'tis falſe when ſuch Evidence is wanting. From theſe Maxims he draws the different Reaſonings of the Mind, form'd upon the Correſpondence between the Soul and the Senſes. He made uſe of Definition as the only ſure Method we have of reaſoning upon clear and diſtinct Notions; and makes a great Part of the Art of Reaſoning to conſiſt in the Perſpicuity of the Terms; and ſolv'd all Sophiſms and falſe Argument only by explaining the Words: And thus the Reader has all his Logick.

As Ethicks are a Science which govern the Conduct of Life, and teach the People the Secret of living happy in this World; the View and Pretenſions being thus ſerviceable and ſignificant, Epicurus made this Part of Philoſophy his principal Purſuit, and with Subordination to this he directed all his Studies.

Epicurus's moral Precepts had a pretty good Complexion, at leaſt at firſt Sight, and ſeem'd as well adjuſted to the Nature of Man, as thoſe of Zeno were contrary. From hence the Stoicks took occaſion to aſperſe Epicurus's moral Syſtem, as if it favour'd Licentiouſneſs and Diſorder, and upon their Teſtimony the Populace condemn'd it without going to the bottom. But thoſe who refus'd to cenſure without Enquiry, but look out for the Merits, paſs a more favourable Sentence. Thus ſeveral Stoicks mention Epicurus's Rules of Morality with Commendation. Here Epicurus lays it down for an inconteſtable Maxim, that Pleaſure is the laſt Object of Deſire, or the chief End of human Actions; and that this Pleaſure according to him conſiſts in Exemption from Pain, and having the Mind ſatisfy'd; but notwithſtanding he makes Pleaſure the chief End and fartheſt Aim, he does not aſſert that a Man ought to chop at every Bait of Pleaſure, without choice or diſtinguiſhing; as if every kind of Delight was capable of making People happy. This Aſſertion however is what his Enemies charg'd him with; but the French Supplementer ſuppoſes this Article no better than Calumny, and that Epicurus draws Inferences from his Principle directly counter; at leaſt if we take our Information from his Writings, which appears very reaſonable: Eſpecially ſince his Life and his Precepts are pretty uniform.

The Reader may pleaſe to obſerve how he explains himſelf in a Letter of his written to Meneceus a Diſciple of his, and reported by Diogenes Laertius, lib. 10. "Pleaſure, ſays he, is the Spring and eſſential Ingredient "for a happy Life; but this principal good thing, which "comes directly from Nature, does not leave us in"differently to all Sorts of Pleaſure. Thus, we avoid "ſeveral Satisfactions when we know they will be at"tended with an Overbalance of Pain. The ſame "Caution holds with Reſpect to evil or unacceptable "things; which we prefer when we are convinc'd that "after we have born 'em ſome time, we ſhall be well "rewarded for our Endurance. All Sort of Pleaſure, "being what Nature calls for, and conformable to her "Wiſhes, is ſo far valuable, and yet we ought not "to graſp at every Satisfaction that comes in our Way; "and tho' all Sort of grating Perceptions are natural"ly an evil, yet a Man ought not to avoid 'em all: "No; we ought to look forward to the Conſequences, "and compute the Loſs and Gain, and determine ac"cording to the Serviceableneſs which is like to accrue; "For oftentimes we give a Preference to unacceptable "things, and reject what invites our Fancy.——When "we aſſert that Pleaſure is that which conſtitutes "an happy Life, we don't mean thoſe Sort of Plea"ſures which are furniſh'd by Luxury and the animal "Life." And thus in a Word, according to Epicurus, ſince Pleaſure can never be reckon'd Right, unleſs when there's Satisfaction in the Mind, and indolence in the Body, we ought to lay out for thoſe Pleaſures which put us in this Condition, reject thoſe which ſet us at a Diſtance, and even undergo thoſe Evils, which are Inſtrumental in bringing us to this happy State, which we ſhould always endeavour to graſp at.

In Conſequence of this Principle, Epicurus aſſerts that Prudence ought to have the Aſcendant; for when Prudence governs and concurs with Pleaſure, Life always mantles, and Happineſs is at the higheſt. 'Tis true Pleaſure without Prudence may prove Fatal; but when under the Direction of this excellent Virtue, it muſt of Neceſſity make People happy. So that upon the whole, the Pleaſure recommended by Epicurus is nothing but reaſonable Satisfaction.

If we examine, as the French Supplementer goes on, Epicurus's Inferences more particularly, we ſhall find 'em anſwer up to his Principles. Thus for Inſtance, he makes Frugality a very valuable Quality. "Nature, ſays "he, requires nothing to ſubſiſt her but what may be "eaſily come at; things that are ſcarce and lie com"monly out of reach, may be diſpens'd with, as ſerv"ing only under Vanity and Exceſs. A good Appe"tite makes ordinary Fare go down with Pleaſure; "and beſides, Health finds it's Account in Frugality: "And by this means a Man has his Limbs ſtronger, "more at command, and better diſpos'd for all the "Buſineſs of Life. And which is ſtill more conſide"rable, by this temperate Practice we are not ſolici"tous for fear of the Reverſe of good Fortune; be"cauſe being us'd to live of a little, if Fortune hap"pens to ſnatch Plenty from us, ſhe can't throw us in"to a great Diſappointment." Thus Epicurus ſhews the Vanity of immoderate Deſires by the ill Conſequences which attend 'em. And thus he laughs at People who run eagerly after Wealth, Honour and high Stations; becauſe theſe are things which are often beyond our Power to gain; and when we have 'em, we are not ſure we can hold 'em; this Conſideration draws Anxiety: And ſuppoſing theſe Advantages ſhould always continue with us, Capacity for Reliſh would fall off, and languiſh.

'Tis upon the ſame View that our Philoſopher inſiſts we ought to keep the Laws of our Country, which are made for the ſupport of Society. Juſtice, as he ſpeaks, is nothing in itſelf or irreſpectively conſider'd; 'tis the Uſefulneſs of it to Society which gives it Value in a Commonwealth, where People are agreed upon certain Articles to prevent their Doing or Receiving any Damage. But then we are to keep cloſe to Juſtice with great Exactneſs, becauſe we can't break in upon this Virtue, without making ourſelves unhappy. For when a Man ventures upon foul Practice, if his Injuſtice is diſcover'd, he's forc'd to ſubmit to Penalty, unleſs the Laws have exempted him, or he is too ſtrong for 'em. But in caſe his Character or Power ſets him above Correction rection, he lies expos'd to the Odium of the Generality, and is always apprehenſive the Perſon injur'd ſhould ſnatch an Opportunity for Revenge. And in Caſe his Injuſtice lies conceal'd at preſent, yet he'll always be afraid it ſhould come to light, and this Apprehenſion, ſays Epicurus, is ſufficient to hinder a wiſe Man from being a Knave.

Thus this diſcerning Philoſopher lays out all his Thoughts for a Life of Eaſe and Tranquility: He follows the Suggeſtions of Nature, and ſtretches his Fancy no farther than ſhe directs; being entirely ſatisfy'd that when People drive after Pleaſure without Bounds or Meaſure, they muſt ramble from one Object to another without ever meeting with content; cloy'd with what they have, and teiz'd with hankering after that which lies out of reach. If the Paſſions grow mutinous Epicurus won't endure 'em, but does his utmoſt to ſend 'em packing; he is always for being their Maſter and not their Slave. And farther, he is not ſo vainly nonſenſical as to pretend himſelf happy in the midſt of Torment. He is not aſham'd to confeſs that 'tis impracticable for the Thoughts to run ſmooth, when the Senſes are rak'd, and the Body lies under Execution; and that when the Violence of Pain forces Signs of Complaint, 'tis Folly to talk of being happy. Thus he makes uſe of all the means which contribute to Health, and avoids all the Exceſſes which may ruffle a good Conſtitution: But if, notwithſtanding this length of Precaution, he is ſeiz'd with Pain or Diſturbance, he endeavours to get above it with his Patience, or to ſoften it at leaſt with the Hopes of it's being diſcharg'd.

In fine, Epicurus's Deſign is to make People paſs their time without Diſturbance or Anxiety about what may happen after Death. For Death, which was look'd on as the moſt formidable Evil, is nothing but a Bugbear according to him. For, ſays he, as long as Life holds Death is nothing, for it has not reach'd us; and when it comes Life is gone, and then we know nothing of the matter. So that in ſhort, Death has no Juriſdiction either over the Living or the Dead: The firſt it has not ſeiz'd, and as for the latter Non-Exiſtence ſhelters 'em from feeling any Harm; ſince therefore Death is incapable of giving us any Anguiſh, 'tis ridiculous to afflict ourſelves about it's Approach.

This Reaſoning of Epicurus goes upon the Suppoſition of the Mortality of the Soul, which is ſufficient to make us reject the Syſtem of his Ethicks. The Inferences, 'tis true, follow pretty naturally from his Principle; but then his Principle being apparently falſe, it ought to be diſcharg'd; and if Epicurus had follow'd his own Directions, he would have perceiv'd this Hypotheſis very improbable, as we ſhall ſee preſently when we come to his Phyſicks. And thus if the moral Branches of this Philoſopher are cloſely conſider'd, we ſhall find great Miſtakes in 'em.

Firſt, his moral Syſtem aiming no farther than procuring a Life of Pleaſure and Indiſturbance in this World, we can be oblig'd to follow his Maxims no farther than preſent Advantage ſuggeſts. Now this being once laid down for a Ground, if a Man ſhould happen to live in a Country where Vice was rewarded and Virtue puniſh'd, we muſt either deſert from Epicurus, or prefer Vice to Virtue. Neither did this Philoſopher make any Scruple to practiſe by this Liberty. For tho' he look'd on the Religion eſtabliſh'd by Law at Athens, to be no better than ſuperſtitious Whimſy, and deſtructive to the publick Intereſt; yet he made no Scruple to run through the Ceremonies, and comply with the Practice: Becauſe open Diſconformity and reſolute Oppoſition, would have been ſo far from doing him any Service, that on the contrary it would have brought him in Danger of loſing his Life.

A ſecond Fault in Epicurus's Morals is, becauſe by his Rules no Vices are prohibited excepting thoſe which bring an Overbalance of Miſchief after 'em. Now, who doubts but there is a conſiderable deal of foul Practice, which falls under this Claſs; that is, ſuppoſing there was nothing after Death either in Reality, or Apprehenſion. There are ſeveral Vices upon this Suppoſition where the Inconveniences would not exceed the Conveniences, and yet if Licence without Reſtraint might be indulg'd, the publick would be much embarraſs'd by ſuch a Latitude.

Thus, we may fairly pronounce that there is ſomething good and ſomething bad in Epicurus's Moral Syſtem.

He is quite in the wrong for laying it down as a Principle, that a Man ought to bound his Happineſs with this Life, and look no farther: But if you grant him this Principle, the Conſequences he draws from it can hardly be deny'd. And in Regard he owns there is a Neceſſity for making Laws, and that every Member of a Society is oblig'd to obſerve 'em ſtrictly, if he liv'd in a Place where there were good Regulations for ſecuring the publick Intereſt, his moral Rules would do no Harm in ſuch a Society.

'Tis a Maxim in Epicurus's Ethicks that we ought to ſtudy natural Philoſophy, in Order to reſcue our Mind from Fear and Diſturbance, occaſion'd commonly by the Ignorance of the Powers of Nature. 'Tis impoſſible, ſays he, that a Man, who is aſtoniſh'd at the Appearance of Prodigies, and takes an Alarm at almoſt every unforeſeen Event, ſhould be ever unembarraſs'd with Fear. To procure his Repoſe, he muſt look through the vaſt Extent of things, and not ſuffer his Imagination to be hagg'd with ridiculous and Romantick Impreſſions. The Body of Nature muſt be turn'd over, in order to preſerve our Minds ſedate, and prepare us for Pleaſure without Alloy. And elſewhere he declares he values Phyſicks no otherwiſe than with regard to the Conduct of Manners, and the Benefit of Life. And now 'twill be time to examine how this Branch of Philoſophy is manag'd.

Here Epicurus's Sentiment is that God had no Share in the Formation of the Univerſe: And if his Opinion of the Gods, as they were call'd, is a little examin'd 'twill be eaſy to diſcover that he look'd upon 'em only as romantick Beings, the Product of Ignorance and Superſtition; and that they were kept in Countenance only for Reaſons of State. This lies at the Bottom. However, to ſcreen himſelf from Cenſure and Proſecution, he aſſigns the Gods an human Figure, but which was capable of Diſſolution, when the Atoms, of which it conſiſts, happen to meet in unlucky Rencounters. His Opinion is that theſe Gods have nothing to do with the Government of the World; That they don't concern themſelves about rewarding the Good, and puniſhing the Bad; but that they live in a State of perfect Leiſure and Neutrality, and move only within themſelves. Now, 'tis pretty plain by this extravagant Idea, that Epicurus deſign'd to deſtroy the Belief of the Gods, by proving their Exiſtence, and ſettling their Form and their Buſineſs in ſo untoward a Manner.

But Epicurus's diſcharging the Deity of the Care of creating, and preſerving the World, makes his Syſtem of Phyſicks ſo very abſurd that 'tis impoſſible to examine it with any Attention, without perceiving it the product of a diſorder'd Imagination. He lays it down for a Principle in his Phyſicks, that nothing can be made out of nothing, and that ſomething can never be made nothing; and from hence he infers there are certain eternal and incorruptible Principles of all things, viz, a Vacuum and Atoms. The Vacuum is infinite, eternal and impalpable; and as for the Atoms, they are little, eternal, ſolid, and indiviſible Bodies. According to this Philoſopher, we can have no other Conception of Nature: For as he goes on, when you have carried your Imagination through Exiſtence as far as you can; the thing which exiſts muſt either have Quantity or Bulk, little or great, and ſuppoſing it never ſo ſmall; if 'tis capable of being touch'd, it muſt be rang'd in the Claſs of Bodies: But if 'tis impalpably penetrable, ſo that a Body may drive through it without any Manner of Reſiſtance, then 'tis a Vacuum. This Vacuum he ſuppoſes an occaſional Principle of every thing; becauſe without a Vacuum we can have no Idea of Motion, and without Motion the Atoms muſt be everlaſtingly inſignificant, and could never jumble themſelves into a World. But then, the Queſtion will be, which Way come theſe Atoms by this Motion? have they it from themſelves, and how does he know 'tis eſſential to 'em? If he aſſerts the Vacuum communicates Motion to the Atoms, the Queſtion will return which Way a Vacuum, which includes nothing but Room, and bare Capacity for receiving Bodies, can poſſibly be the Cauſe of any Motion. The moſt that a Vacuum can do, is to ſtand neuter, and not hinder it; but as for the efficient Cauſe of Motion, it muſt come from ſome other Quarter. And here, the Atoms can give no Relief:

For the Idea of an Atom lies in a perfect Indifference between Motion and Reſt, and implies the firſt, no more than the latter: Inſomuch that when an Atom is mov'd it muſt receive this Motion from a foreign Aſſiſtant; and ſince the Vacuum has nothing of this Kind to beſtow, there muſt of Neceſſity be ſome third Being for this purpoſe, diſtinct from Atoms and a Vacuum. 'Tis true, Epicurus endeavours to diſengage himſelf by aſſigning a certain Weight or Gravitation to every Atom; but if he fancies this Heavineſs as ſomething Inherent in an Atom, he has no Idea of what he talks of; and ſuppoſing this Weight or fancied Gravitation was ſomething real, there's no Reaſon why it ſhould carry the Atom on one Side, rather than another; for the Atom is ſuppos'd to lie in an infinite Void, where properly ſpeaking there's neither high nor low, nor any thing to give Determination. Some eternal Cauſe muſt therefore neceſſarily be ſuppos'd, which determines the Atom rather to one Side than another.

Epicurus having laid down theſe Principles aſſigns his Atoms three Sorts of Motions; rectilinear, impulſive, and a Motion of Declination. Democritus, who firſt ſtruck out the atomical Hypotheſis, held only the two firſt Motions: But Epicurus, who was a ſort of Refiner, foreſeeing 'twould be objected that this perpendicular Motion would keep the Atoms always deach'd, and not ſuffer 'em to joyn in a Body, was forc'd to make his Atoms ſlant, and move a little obliquely, that by this means they might meet and claſp about each other. But this Motion of Declination, as Tully obſerves, is altogether unphiloſophical and precarious. Farther, 'twas objected to Democritus, if Bodies mov'd as they were impell'd by other Bodies, or fell perpendicularly downwards, 'twould follow from hence that there could be no ſuch thing as Liberty; that Choice muſt be deſtroy'd, and all things over-rul'd by Neceſſity; now Epicurus thought to get clear of this Difficuly by making his Atoms move obliquely in an imperceptible manner. Beſides, as has been obſerv'd, that this Motion of Declination has no Cauſe aſſign'd for it by Epicurus, and by conſequence is precarious; beſides this, even this Suppoſition can do no Buſineſs in explaining the Eſſence of Liberty; for in fine, a Motion of Declination is nothing elſe but a Motion which goes off from a perpendicular one, and bends to one Side or other: But this does by no means remove the Objection of Neceſſity; for both the oblique and perpendicular Motion are produc'd from ſome Cauſe equally neceſſary, and by conſequence there's no more room for Freedom in one caſe than in the other.

From hence 'tis obvious to conclude, that our Philoſopher had a very wrong Idea of the Nature of the Soul, when he gave this Motion of Declination to preſerve the Liberty of the Will. The Soul, according to him, was nothing but a Rendezvous of certain round Bodies, very ſmall, active and light timber'd; and that when Death came all theſe Atoms unclaſping, the Soul ſunk out of conſciouſneſs, and having loſt all Perception, was reduc'd to the State the Atoms were in, before they combin'd for her Being. Now every Body knows that this Opinion is abſurd to the laſt Degree; for what Reſemblance is there between the Faculty of acting or not acting at our Pleaſure, and Epicurus's Motion and Materials for making a Soul? And what Connexion can there be between the different Agitation of any little Bodies with ſuch or ſuch a Thought, or in other Words, which way can Conſciouſneſs emerge from Matter and Motion?

In fine, the Atoms having mov'd from all Eternity in an infinite Void, and taken a great many Situations to no purpoſe, at laſt met in a lucky Diſpoſition to unite for the Production of a World: But this was not done all at a Heat; at firſt there was nothing but a Chaos; but upon the Courſe things began to refine and ſettle into Form and Order: And thus the Parts of Matter which did not agree together, remov'd to Diſtance, and joyn'd other Parts where they correſponded better, and were more ſerviceable for Uſe and Production; ſo that, according to Epicurus, the World is nothing more than a caſual Concourſe of Atoms. But a Man muſt be pretty blind to fancy that a Work, where there is ſo much Order, Beauty, and regular Variety can ever be the Effect of Chance.

Epicurus afterwards explains the manner of the Formation of the World. He tells us that Maſs of Atoms, which produc'd the Earth, clos'd about the Center, upon the ſcore of their being heavy, and entangled with each other: This Quality made 'em ſink and ſettle low. The Sky, which is made of more round, ſmaller and better poliſh'd Particles, broke from the boſom of the Earth, and mounting to a conſiderable Diſtance, carry'd a great many Particles of Fire with it: Then the Materials which form'd the Sun, the Stars and the Moon, broke looſe, after the Sky was made, and running into globular Bodies, rowl'd in the large Region between the Sky and the Earth, becauſe they were neither light enough to mount higher, nor ſufficiently heavy to ſettle in the lower Parts of the Æther. He aſſigns ſeveral Reaſons for the Motion of the Sun, the Moon, and the other Stars without coming to any Determination. He argues much in the ſame Manner upon the Meteors, but comes to no Deciſion, tho' commonly he gives Reaſons probable enough. He aſſerts that the Earth at firſt was ſo rich and prolifick, as to produce every thing which appears. And even Man himſelf, according to this Philoſopher, ow'd his Original to the Heat and Moiſture of the Ground.

He endeavours to account for the Nature of Bodies and their different Qualities from the different Figures, Impulſions and Combinations of the Atoms. Thus to explain why the Sea is brackiſh notwithſtanding 'tis fluid; he tells us 'tis made moſtly of round ſmooth Particles, which cauſes it's Fluidity; but then there's likewiſe a Mixture of crooked entangling Atoms, which ſtrike diſagreably upon the Palate, and give the brackiſh Taſte. By theſe Principles he explains other different Taſtes. Sweetneſs, for inſtance, comes up in Senſation from round and well filed Particles. He likewiſe maintains that colour conſiſts only in the Motion of certain little Bodies, which Stream from the Object, and ſtrike the Organs of Sight differently according to their Figure and Speed. In a Word; Epicurus endeavours to give a Reaſon of every Phænomenon from his Principles. 'Tis true he is not poſitive that a Man can demonſtrate every thing muſt of Neceſſity be made in the manner he deſcribes; no, he ſays it would be great Raſhneſs to be thus deciſive. But then he would have People believe that all Events are only the Effects of natural Cauſes; and that unleſs we are of this Opinion we ſhall be in Danger of being overſet with a great many chimerical Bugbears.

Thus the Reader has an Abridgment of the Opinions of the moſt eminent Philoſophers in Antiquity: And may eaſily perceive there's too much Contradiction to make all of 'em true: But then their different Schemes would have been very ſerviceable for the Improvement of Philoſophy, if thoſe, who came after 'em, had thrown by the ſhort and miſtaken Part of their Performances, and kept that which was ſound and ſolid for new Diſcoveries in Nature and Truth. But their Succeſſors, by a whymſical Prepoſſeſſion in favour of theſe great Men, thought Refining and Improvement impracticable; and thus every one pitch'd upon the Philoſopher he had moſt Fancy for, thought him next to infallible, and follow'd him without Heſitancy or Reſerve. Thus one ſet up for a Pythagorean, another for a Platoniſt, a third run blindly after Zeno's Syſtem, a fourth was no leſs implicite for Epicurus, and laſtly Ariſtotle, after having laid a long time neglected, had the biggeſt Faction of 'em all.

'Tis true, when Philoſophy began to be firſt taken notice of at Rome, the Romans were ſo wiſe as to examine the Opinions of all the Philoſophers without ſurrendering to any. And even ſo late as Auguſtus's Reign Potamo of Alexandria pick'd what he thought beſt out of all the Philoſophers to make a Syſtem of his own, which for this Reaſon he call'd Eclectick Philoſophy. But whether the Choice was well made or not is ſomewhat difficult to reſolve: However, 'tis certain this Sect had but a very ſmall Party, and moſt of thoſe, who pretended to be of it, were perfect Vaſſals to ſome ſingle Chief or other.

At firſt Plato's Scheme was moſt in vogue: There were a great many celebrated Platoniſts in the Reigns of the Roman Emperors as low as Julian the Apoſtate, who was himſelf a Platoniſt, and before his Acceſſion to the Throne, went on purpoſe to Athens to take the Philoſopher's Habit. Some of the earlieſt Chriſtian Fathers declar'd for Plato's Philoſophy, as Juſtin Martyr, Tatian, Athenagoras, and Origen, who was the the moſt zealous Platoniſt, and the moſt learned of all the Chriſtian Antiquity. But the Hereſies which afterwards came up, drew an Odium upon Plato's Doctrine, becauſe People believ'd, and it may be with good Reaſon, that Heterodoxy took it's Riſe from thence.

to

At laſt Ariſtotle's Philoſophy, after ſome Variety of Fortune, got uppermoſt: And now the Learned were ſo abſolutely reſign'd to this Philoſopher's Authority, that they enquired for Truth no where but in his Writings; being of Opinion that his Works went the utmoſt lengths in Truth and Knowledge, and that the Mind of Man was capable of no farther Diſcoveries. This exceſſive Eſteem for this Philoſopher began about the twelfth Century, at which time the Syſtem of the Schoolmen appear'd. This Philoſophy was brought on by reading the Arabians, who having conquer'd a great Part of the World, communicated their Genius and Way of Reaſoning, not only to their Subjects, but likewiſe to thoſe who maintain'd any Commerce with 'em; that is, to all Europe. For the Arabians having ſtudy'd Philoſophy from the ninth Century ſpread it through their Empire, which at laſt reach'd from the Indies to Spain; and from hence was convey'd into France and Italy; the Spaniards carrying the Commentaries upon Ariſtotle thither, written by Averroës the moſt ſubtle of all the Arabian Philoſophers. And 'tis from the Arabians that the Schoolmen, who all held firm for Ariſtotle, learn'd their quirkiſh and abſtracted manner of Reaſoning, which they made uſe of in all the Parts of Philoſophy, and which has made Ariſtotle more obſcure and unintelligible in the Commentaries written to explain him, than he is in the Text itſelf. But theſe pretended Sages, not contenting themſelves with debauching Philoſophy by their abſtracted Notions and Jargon, made uſe of theſe miſty and miſtaken Ideas for explaining Divinity. Thus, they have made Knots in a Bulruſh, ſtarted a great many imprudent and inſignificant Queſtions, and made Theology look uncouth and barbarouſly to thoſe, who have confin'd their Enquiries to the Scriptures and Fathers, and not run through a Courſe of Scholaſtic Philoſophy. And which is ſtill more deplorable, this Jargon was reckon'd highly ſerviceable, and as it were eſſentially neceſſary for explaining the Myſteries of Religion: Which made a great Man (Father Paul) in the beginning of the ſeventeenth Century ſay, Senza Ariſtotele non haveremmo molti Articoli di Fede; had it not been for Ariſtotle we ſhould not have had many Articles of Faith.

The Philoſophy of the Schoolmen is commonly rang'd under three Periods; the firſt begins with Peter Lombard Biſhop of Paris, commonly call'd the Maſter of the Sentences, becauſe he wrote a Book of the Sententiæ or Opinions of the Fathers upon Points of Divinity, all whoſe Opinions he threw into a Method, but darken'd his Performance by throwing in a great many inſignificant and ſuperfine Queſtions.

The ſecond Period of the Schoolmen's Philoſophy commences with Albertus Magnus Biſhop of Ratisbonne, who was Thomas Aquinas's, and John Duns Scotus's Maſter. Theſe two laſt had Sentiments entirely oppoſite, notwithſtanding their Pretenſions to keep cloſe to Ariſtotle. They form'd two Sects which were very famous in the Schools; one of 'em were call'd Thomiſts, and the other Scotiſts, from the Names of their Chiefs.

The laſt Period of the Schoolmen's Philoſophy may be reckon'd from Durandus de St. Porcian, (who had counter Notions to Thomas Aquinas,) down to Gabriel Biel a German, who liv'd in the fifteenth Century.

About the end of the fourteenth Century the Schoolmen kindled and grew warm to Extravagance with the Diſtinctions of Logick: This Skirmiſhing was carry'd on between the Nominaliſts and the Realiſts: Both of 'em fought under Ariſtotle's Banner. The Nominaliſts had Occham, an Engliſh Cordelier, and one of Scotus's Diſciples at the Head of 'em. They affirm'd that univerſal Natures are nothing but Terms; and the Realiſts, ſupported by Scotus's Authority, held that theſe ſame univerſal Natures were real Entities or Things. Theſe Diſputes broke the Univerſities of Europe into Parties: And thus, no Body of Character ſtanding neuter a great many peeviſh and paſſionate Diſcourſes came abroad. In ſhort, Philoſophy was, as one may ſay, entirely ſpent in Logical and Metaphyſical Cant, rambling upon the Operations of the Underſtanding, in Notions ſo remote from common uſe, that they ſeem'd in a manner abſtracted from Meaning and Senſe; and thus this Branch of Learning was little better than Words and Noiſe, and dwindled to Quidities and Jargon.

The Schoolmen's exceſſive Value for Ariſtotle was the real Cauſe of theſe Miſtakes and Muddineſs in their Heads. They had ſo profound a Veneration for this Philoſopher, that they blindly went into every thing which they fanſy'd his Opinion, tho' never ſo whimſical and abſurd. 'Tis granted, 'twould not be reaſonable to charge Ariſtotle with all the Dotages of his Commentators: But then it may, 'tis thought, be fairly inferr'd that the Writings of this Philoſopher were very obſcure, otherwiſe all the Comments upon him would not have been ſo different and contradicting: So that in ſhort People might have made a better Progreſs in their Reſearches after Truth, if inſtead of throwing away ſo much time upon Ariſtotle, they had conſulted their own Underſtanding, and follow'd Nature's Directions.

In fine, in the ſixteenth Century Philoſophy began to break her Chains, and get clear of this Servitude: And now Precedent and Authority was not thought a ſufficient Warrant for wrong Reaſoning. 'Tis true, Ariſtotle was not deſpis'd, but then 'twas expected he ſhould prove, as well as aſſert: They would not go into his Sentiments any farther than he had Evidence to vouch for 'em. They did not imagine any longer that he knew every thing, but rather endeavour'd to diſcover what lay beyond his View, or at leaſt was not clear in his Writings. Philoſophy being thus enfranchis'd and ſui Juris, arriv'd at a much higher Degree of Improvement, as will appear by giving a ſhort Narrative of the principal Opinions held by the Modern Philoſophers.

Galileus was the firſt who was ſo hardy as openly to differ from Ariſtotle. He was born at Florence A. D. 1564. He had a wonderful Genius for the Mathematicks, which he ſtudy'd with great Application: Now by this ſort of Learning he acquir'd an Habit of Reaſoning only from evident Principles, and not admitting any Concluſions but thoſe which naturally follow'd from 'em. Being thus us'd to cloſe Reaſoning he could not take up with looſe confus'd Notions, upon which the philoſophical Tracts and Diſcourſes of the Schoolmen were generally founded. And here, he apply'd to that Branch of Philoſophy which has the neareſt Reſemblance with Mathematicks, that is, Phyſicks, which he enrich'd with a great many fine Diſcoveries. He proves againſt Ariſtotle's Diſciples that heavy Bodies encreas'd their Speed by the length of their Deſcent, and aſſigns the Proportion of this Encreaſe. He rejects Ptolemy's Hypotheſis as too much embarraſs'd, and declares for that of Copernicus, which is very plain and eaſy to underſtand; and for this the Reader may conſult Morery in the Article Copernicus.

Galileus having invented Teleſcopes of a ſufficient length for viewing the Stars, made a Diſcovery which confirms Copernicus's Syſtem, and entirely demoliſhes Ptolemy's. He takes notice that Venus appears under all the different Phaſes we obſerve in the Moon. For Venus never having the Earth between her and the Sun, as is evident from undoubted Obſervation, this Planet could never appear full to us, according to Ptolemy's Hypotheſis, who places the Sun above Venus's Sphere; 'tis plain therefore that Ptolemy's Hypotheſis is falſe, and that Venus deſcribes a Circle of which the Sun is the Center; ſo that when this Planet is more remote from the Earth than the Sun, her enlighten'd Part being then obverted to us, ſhe appears full; and when ſhe is nearer to us than the Sun ſhe has the Figure of a Creſcent, becauſe then we can only ſee part of her Body enlighten'd. Now this agrees exactly with Copernicus's Hypotheſis, who makes the Sun the Center of the World, Mercury, who turns about the Sun, comes next, then Venus, who takes a bigger Compaſs about the ſame Center; then the Earth, &c.

Galileus was the firſt likewiſe, who by the Help of his his Teleſcopes diſcover'd four little Stars which always attend Jupiter like ſo many ſmall Moons, and are carry'd round the Sun with Jupiter in twelve Years time. During which Period they run round Jupiter at different Intervals according to their being more or leſs remote from this Planet. Galileus call'd theſe the Mediceaan Stars in Honour of his Patron the great Duke of Tuſcany; but they are commonly call'd Jupiter's Satellites. Galileus made a great many curious Obſervations upon natural Philoſophy: But at laſt, to reward him for all his Diſcoveries, he was put up in the Inquiſition for aſſerting the Motion of the Earth by Diſcourſe and Writing: And here, after having been confin'd five or ſix Years and ruggedly treated, he ſolemnly abjur'd this Opinion, notwithſtanding all the Evidence for the Certainty of it.

In the beginning of the ſeventeenth Century Peter Gaſſendus, King's mathematick Profeſſor at Paris, took a new Turn in Philoſophy. He ſtudy'd Ariſtotle's Philoſophy, as 'twas then taught in the Schools, but would not keep entirely to it. In ſhort, after having conſulted the Syſtems of the old Philoſophers he declar'd in favour of Epicurus's Philoſophy, which he improv'd very much. The Faults already obſerv'd in Epicurus's Philoſophy are own'd and rejected by Gaſſendus: He allow'd the Corpuſcularian Syſtem; but then he maintains againſt Epicurus that God has created theſe Atoms, and given 'em their Extenſion, Motion, and Figure, which, without proving it, Epicurus held they had of themſelves from all Eternity. Gaſſendus aſſerts Providence, which Epicurus knew nothing of, and refines the moral Precepts of this Pagan Philoſopher by Chriſtian Maxims. He is one of the firſt of the Moderns who endeavours to ſhew that Epicurus did not let down his moral Inſtructions to ſo looſe a Liberty, as was formerly imagin'd. But notwithſtanding this favourable Opinion, 'tis plain Epicurus's moral Rules were low, looſe, and aim'd no higher than ſenſual Pleaſure, and the Satisfactions of this Life. (See Gataker's preliminary Diſcourſe prefix'd to the Emperor Marcus Antoninus's Converſation with himſelf, tranſlated into Engliſh, and printed at London, 1701.)

Gaſſendus made no great Matter of Logick; but as for Philoſophy, he made a great many Diſcoveries in it unknown to Epicurus and eſpecially upon the Head of Aſtronomy. He wrote a great many Philoſophical Tracts very learnedly inſtructive and entertaining. He ſets almoſt all the Opinions of the old Philoſophers in an admirable Light, either to confute or receive 'em; ſo that it muſt be granted that hitherto no Man had gone ſo far in this kind of Reſearches as himſelf.

Gaſſendus had a great many Diſciples, but none made any improvements upon him excepting Francis Bernier, who publiſh'd an Abridgment of Gaſſendus's Philoſophy in French, in which he has diſcover'd a great deal of Genius and Penetration. It contains a great many curious new Thoughts and Improvements, eſpecially in Phyſicks and Aſtronomy.

Laſtly; about the ſame time Renatus Deſcartes ſtruck a new Light, and diſcover'd a great many more Philoſophical Truths than had been known in all the Ages before him. His little Tract of Method tells the Reader the Way he pitch'd on for the Diſcovery of Truth. As for the Logick commonly taught in the Univerſities, he looks upon it only as a Part of learning, which may be ſerviceable to communicate what we know already, but is abſolutely inſignificant for Invention, and carrying the Mind to a farther Proſpect into Truth. And therefore inſtead of that Multitude of Precepts with which Logick perplexes Peoples Heads, he only propoſes four very plain and intelligible Rules, and which are enough to make us always think clear, and to diſcover recondite Truths, which is the End of right Logick.

The firſt Rule is; that we are to receive nothing for Truth but what affords us a clear and diſtinct Perception, that is to ſay, we muſt avoid pronouncing upon any thing with Precipitation, and be poſitive in nothing but what appears ſo evident to us, that it's impoſſible to doubt about it. This Rule likewiſe teaches us to tye clear Ideas to the Words we make uſe of to expreſs our Conceptions; which takes in one of the fineſt and moſt ſerviceable Logical Inſtructions.

The ſecond Rule is; that the Queſtion to be examin'd muſt be divided into ſo many Parts as are requir'd for the moſt commodious reſolving it.

The third is; that we ought to range our Thoughts in a certain Order ſo as to begin our enquiry with the moſt uncompounded and eaſy things; and then to riſe as it were by Steps to more complicated and difficult Reſearches: And that we ought to throw things into Order and Precedency, which are naturally not Prior to each other.

Fourthly; that the Subject in Queſtion ought to be ſo nicely look'd over, and the Parts of the Diviſion ſo exactly computed, that we may be aſſur'd there is nothing omitted which is neceſſary for reſolving the Queſtion.

Deſcartes begins his Philoſophical Enquiries with Metaphyſicks, that is with things which are moſt general and uncompounded, and by Conſequence eaſieſt to be known. He obſerves at firſt that all Men are liable to Error, and that by their own Confeſſion they are actually deceiv'd in a great many things. Therefore that the Prejudices of Infancy, and the wrong Judgments we have often made and rely'd on, mayn't miſguide us in our Way to Truth; Deſcartes would have us ſet forward by doubting of every thing, till Full and blazing Evidence forces us, as it were, to conſent to the Truth of a Propoſition. And after having prevail'd with us to reckon all our Notions either falſe, or uncertain, and to queſtion whether there's any ſuch thing as a Mind or Spirit; whether there's any Sky; any Earth, &c. And, which is more whether we have any ſuch thing as a Body about us; having brought us thus far into Scepticiſm, he makes us underſtand that whilſt we thus doubt of every thing, and aſſert there's nothing certain, we are forc'd to acknowledge that ourſelves, who doubt, who affirm, and deny, muſt of Neceſſity exiſt, or are certainly ſomething. So that notwithſtanding all our Diſtruſt, and floating in uncertainty, we are forc'd to aſſent to this Principle, I doubt, I think, and therefore I am ſomething. From this firſt point of Knowledge Deſcartes concludes that the Exiſtence of our Soul, or the thinking Subſtance in us, is more apparent than the Exiſtence of the Body; and that we are more certain we have a Soul, than that there's any ſuch thing as Body of what Kind ſoever. We may doubt whether we have any ſuch thing as a Body or not; but this very doubting of the Being of all other things, is a certain Proof of our own Exiſtence; whereas ſhould we lie unconſcious, and a Stop be put upon Thought, we ſhould know nothing of the Truth of our Exiſtence, tho' our own Body, the World, and every thing which may come into our Imagination, had a real Being. From hence Deſcartes infers that this Subſtance of ours, which doubts, denies, imagines, and thinks, is entirely different from Body and extended Subſtance; which Truth was hitherto not perfectly known; tho' the diſentangling a great many Queſtions of Importance in Phyſicks and Morality, depend on this Diſcovery, as Deſcartes has made it evidently appear. His next Step is to look out for a Proof to convince him of the Certainty of this Propoſition, I think, therefore I am, that uſe may be made of it for a further progreſs in Truth: And here, he finds the Motive which commanded his Aſſent, and made him look upon this Propoſition as unqueſtionable was becauſe he moſt clearly perceiv'd 'twas impoſſible that that which thinks, ſhould not exiſt: From whence he concludes it may be ſafely admitted for a general Rule through all his Enquiries, that whatever is clearly and diſtinctly perceiv'd, is undoubtedly True.

The Matter being thus ſettled: our Philoſopher goes on in his Meditation, and endeavours to try if he can find any Being different from himſelf, and in the peruſal of his Mind, he meets with a great many Ideas which repreſent a great many foreign or outlying Beings; as the Earth, the Sky, the Stars, &c. And formerly he concluded theſe Beings actually exiſted on the Outſide of himſelf, becauſe the Ideas, which repreſent theſe Beings, are of various Kinds, and ſeem different from that which he has of himſelf. But now, ſince he ſtands ſo much upon reſerve as not to affirm any thing thing without clear and diſtinct Perception, he contents himſelf with ſaying he has Ideas of all theſe Beings, without inferring from thence that there are foreign Beings actually exiſting, which Anſwer to the Models or Ideas of 'em in his Mind. Indeed Indeed 'tis certain we may have the Idea of a thing, tho' that thing does not exiſt; as Sleep, and ſome Diſeaſes make us ſee things which never were.

But now the Queſtion is, whence can all theſe Ideas come? Deſcartes being at a loſs for the Cauſe of 'em, ſuppoſes at firſt that they may be of his own Growth: And notwithſtanding he has ſometimes ſome Ideas crowding upon him againſt his Will, as when he has the Senſation of Pain, Cold, Heat, &c. yet 'tis poſſible he may have ſome Faculty which produces this Idea of Pain, finding upon Experiment certain Motions within himſelf, which carry him oftentimes upon unſerviceable Practice. Theſe things conſider'd he can't yet be ſure whether there's any Being diſtinct from himſelf which really exiſts.

But Deſcartes ſuggeſts another Expedient for diſcerning whether amongſt all the Ideas lodg'd in our Mind, there is not ſome one, from whence we may conclude the Exiſtence of a Being diſtinct from ourſelves.

Firſt, if we conſider all theſe Ideas as Modes of thinking, we ſhall find no difference between 'em; but if we look upon 'em with regard to the things they repreſent, we ſhall find 'em openly and evidently different: The Idea, for example, which repreſents a Being infinitely perfect, is without doubt widely unreſembling the Notion of a finite bounded Exiſtence. Now, as Deſcartes goes on, 'tis manifeſt by the Light of Nature, that there muſt be at leaſt as much Reality in the efficient total Cauſe as in the Effect; it being impoſſible for a more perfect thing to be the Product of what is leſs perfect. From this Principle then we are to conclude, that perceiving the Idea of an infinitely perfect Being lodg'd in our Mind, we are neceſſarily to conclude, I ſay, from hence, that this infinitely perfect Being actually exiſts, from whom I receive the Idea of infinite Perfection; in regard there muſt be as much Reality in the Cauſe as in the Effect. And ſince by this infinitely perfect Being we mean God Almighty, it follows that we ought to conclude the Exiſtence of a Deity from our own Idea of infinite Perfection. On the other Side, ſuppoſe this infinitely perfect Being does not exiſt, I deſire to know how I came to exiſt myſelf, who have the Idea of this infinitely perfect Being? Can I be the Author of my own Exiſtence? Or can any thing elſe leſs perfect than God Almighty make me? If I had given my ſelf Exiſtence my Power would never have been ſo miſerably ſhort of my Will as I find it; I ſhould have beſtow'd all the Perfections upon myſelf of which I have any Notion; For if I could have ſtruck out my own Being, what ſhould hinder me from enriching it with all the Perfections I could think of? And thus I ſhould have been that infinitely perfect Being we are in queſt of. Farther, I can't have my Exiſtence from another Being leſs perfect than God Almighty; for either this other exiſts by himſelf or by another; if he exiſts by himſelf he is the Deity, as has been already prov'd; and if he derives his Being from another, then 'twill be ask'd whether this other exiſts by himſelf or by another, till we come up to the firſt Author of Being; who being ſelf-exiſtent is furniſh'd with all imaginable Perfections, which the other has not, and by conſequence it muſt be confeſs'd that God exiſts.

Deſcartes being thus aſſur'd of a Being infinitely perfect, and perceiving by his own Idea of infinite Perfections, that himſelf wanted a great many of theſe Perfections, he proceeds to enquire into the Cauſe of his Miſtakes. That God cannot be the Cauſe of 'em is plain, for being infinitely perfect himſelf, 'tis impoſſible he ſhould be willing to deceive us. We are then to look for this Cauſe within ourſelves. Now we don't perceive in ourſelves any more than two Modes of Being, to which all the reſt may be reduc'd, viz. the Underſtanding and the Will. And after having prov'd that the Underſtanding can't miſguide us, becauſe that Faculty is purely paſſive, and does no more than receive certain Ideas preſented to the Mind, without comparing them together; and doing nothing but repreſent, without Compariſon and Deciſion, there can be no Miſtake in the Caſe: For the Underſtanding going no farther, this Faculty cannot perceive theſe Ideas have any References or Aſpects to each other, which they really have not; from hence he concludes that when we judge theſe Ideas have any relations to things, which they have not, 'tis then we fall into Error; and by conſequence that 'tis the Will, whoſe Buſineſs it is to judge, that is the true Cauſe of our Miſtakes. This Ground being laid down, in caſe we pronounce a thing true no farther than we ſee it clearly and diſtinctly to be ſo, 'tis certain we can never miſs the Mark, nor fall into any Error. Thus, by theſe Directions we are fully convinc'd not only of the Exiſtence of our own Mind, and of God Almighty, but of a vaſt number of other Principles: For inſtance, that 'tis impoſſible a thing can be and not be at the ſame time; that the whole is greater than a part of it; to which we may add, all mathematical Truths evident and demonſtrated.

In fine, from this Principle that God can't deceive us Deſcartes concludes that we have a Body, to which our Soul is united, and that we are ſurrounded with a great many other Bodies; and from thence demonſtrates that our Soul and Body are two Subſtances entirely different. And thus the Reader has a Sketch of Deſcartes's Metaphyſicks. And now to proceed to his Phyſicks.

And here, he propoſes to argue only from clear and diſtinct Ideas, no leſs than in his Metaphyſicks. And upon this Ground he proceeds to conſider the Eſſence of Matter or Body in general. By Eſſence we underſtand the firſt Attributes which occur to our Mind about any thing, and without which we can't have any Conception of the thing. From this Poſtulate, which can't well be deny'd, Deſcartes endeavours to prove that the Eſſence of Bodies cannot conſiſt of Hardneſs, Fluidity, Gravitation, Lightneſs, Heat, Coldneſs, Drineſs, Moiſtneſs, or any other ſuch Quality; becauſe no one of theſe things is inſeparable from Matter; but that it conſiſts in Extenſion, becauſe Extenſion is the firſt Attribute which occurs to our Mind, when we think of Matter; and which is ſo inſeparably and neceſſarily tied to it, that whenever we have an Idea of Matter we have likewiſe an Idea of a Subſtance extended into Longitude, Latitude and Profundity; neither is it poſſible for us to part theſe two Ideas, or to have one of 'em without the other. Thus, according to Deſcartes, 'tis impoſſible there ſhould be a Vacuum, that is to ſay, a Space where there is no Matter; becauſe all Space is extended, and Extenſion and Matter are the ſame thing. Neither can there be ſuch things as Atoms, or Parts of Matter abſolutely indiviſible, becauſe 'tis impoſſible to conceive Matter without Extenſion, and where there is Extenſion there muſt of Neceſſity be Plurality of Parts, which are capable of being ſeparated from one another.

From this firſt Attribute which conſtitutes the Eſſence of Matter, Deſcartes draws all the Properties neceſſarily imply'd in Extenſion, that is to ſay, Diviſibility and Figure: But in regard Diviſion made only in the Mind produces no Alteration in Matter, and that all actual Diviſion depends upon Motion, Deſcartes proceeds to a long Diſquiſition upon the Nature and Qualities of Motion.

Upon theſe plain Notions of Extenſion, Figure and Motion, which every Body may eaſily diſcover in the Idea of Matter; from theſe clear Principles, I ſay, this Philoſopher draws all his Reaſonings in Phyſicks. His Book call'd the Principles of Philoſophy may ſatisfy the Reader that there's nothing certain to be diſcover'd in Phyſicks without following his Method; that is, unleſs we reaſon, as he does, from the cleareſt and moſt uncompounded Ideas of Matter; and the Reader may perceive at the ſame time that this Philoſopher's Method has led him to the Diſcovery of a great many Truths, which lay abſolutely conceal'd before; and many others of which the World before had but very obſcure Ideas. For inſtance, no Philoſopher before Deſcartes had given a clear and diſtinct Idea of ſenſible Qualities. 'Tis he who was the firſt that diſtinguiſh'd the Senſation the Soul has from the occaſional Preſence or Impreſſion of an Object commonly ſuppos'd to have Colour or Scent, &c. from that which produces that Senſation. If People had only argued like him upon a diſtinct Idea of Matter, they would never have fanſy'd Colours in thoſe Objects which raiſe a different Senſation of Colour in the Mind, &c. Becauſe no Body could ever clearly perceive that this Senſation could emerge from any Body of what kind ſoever, in which, if we think diſtinctly and to the bottom, we can diſcover nothing farther than Extenſion, Figure and Motion: Therefore had Deſcartes's Method of Reaſoning been purſued, they would have reckon'd this Senſation to the Soul, which is only capable of Perception: And of this every one may ſatisfy himſelf; for by conſulting his Mind he'll eaſily perceive there are ſome little Parts of Matter, which falling upon the Superficies of the Body commonly call'd colour'd, and reflecting from thence to the Eye, produce different Senſations in proportion to the different Motions; and to theſe particular Names are given to diſtinguiſh 'em one from the other: All this Deſcartes ſeems to have evidently prov'd, and that only from the Properties of Extenſion, Figure and Motion.

And now a Word or two upon the Moral Part of this Philoſopher. 'Tis true, as he acquaints us, he has not written any ſet Diſcourſe upon Moral Precepts: His Reaſon is, becauſe Men are oftentimes ſo whimſical and capricious, that they are unwilling to be govern'd by any Directions of other Peoples giving. "And tho' my Thoughts, ſays he, upon this Subject "appear'd very reaſonable to myſelf, I have refus'd "to publiſh 'em. Becauſe I fanſy the generality "would be better pleas'd with Maxims of their own "Invention." But notwithſtanding, this Philoſopher has written no complete Treatiſe upon Ethicks, yet it may fairly be affirm'd that the true Principles of this ſcience may be collected from ſome of his Works. I ſhan't here repeat the four Maxims he lays down for the Conduct of Life; the Reader may ſee 'em in his Tract of Method: But without this Recital, one may venture to ſay that in a few Words they compriſe every thing Neceſſary to live happily, honeſtly and creditably in the World. His Tract upon the Paſſions is without doubt one of the fineſt, moſt Inſtructive, and comprehenſive Diſcourſes upon this Subject: Here, he makes it out that in order to be happy in this World, we ought to look into the Springs and Tendency of all that Variety of Paſſions to which we are liable, and to make a right Uſe of 'em. For the Paſſions are by no Means Evil in themſelves. And where can the Reader find any thing more beautiful or better argued, than what Deſcartes has offer'd upon this Head? he is certainly the firſt who has given a juſt and diſtinct Idea of this Matter. No Body before him made it appear that the Body has a Share in the Paſſions as well as the Soul, nor diſtinguiſh'd their reſpective Functions from each other. All this he has done in ſo nice a Method, with ſuch Exactneſs and Perſpicuity, that nothing is more convincing, or convey'd with better Evidence; nothing more Satisfactory than what he diſcourſes concerning the Original and Riſe of the Paſſions, concerning their Progreſs and Product, and concerning the Remedies and Expedients we ought to apply to for keeping 'em in due Bounds; which is the End, and fartheſt Aim in moral Inſtruction.

And notwithſtanding Ariſtotle was much valued in the Schools when Deſcartes appear'd in the World, this latter ſurmounted the Difficulties of Prepoſſeſſion, and made a great many Proſelytes: And upon ſome Progreſs in time, his Philoſophy was better receiv'd, and not ſo much inſulted by the Old Faction as at firſt. 'Twould be ſomewhat difficult to recite all the Men of Figure and Fame, who have gone into Deſcartes's Syſtem: Some of 'em are dead, and others are ſtill living, who had more or leſs follow'd their Maſter's Principles, according as they believ'd 'em more or leſs conformable to Truth. There have been ſo many new Diſcoveries, eſpecially in natural Philoſophy, made ſince the Death of this great Man, that in Caſe he ſhould return into the World, he could hardly help wondring to ſee his Principles and Method teeming with ſuch Variety of new Productions. 'Tis not to be doubted he would grant that thoſe who have gone off from him in ſeveral Points, had good Reaſon for their Diſtance. But 'tis by no means clear that he would agree with the Sentiments of ſome Philoſophers of Figure, who aſſert that it can't be fully demonſtrated that Matter is uncapable of thinking; nor that the Eſſence of it conſiſts in Extenſion; and that a Vacuum is not ſo impoſſible as he fanſies.

And now tho' this Article has been long already, it may not be amiſs to ſubjoyn ſomething of Lucian's Dialogue between Philoſophy and Jupiter: She addreſſes him thus, "Father, ſays ſhe, I don't complain without "Reaſon: When you ſaw the World overgrown with "Error and Injuſtice you were ſtruck with Compaſſion, and diſpatch'd me to recover Mankind from "their Brutiſh Way of living. For you may remem"ber you ſaid to me, you ſee Child in what a Condition "poor Mortals have brought themſelves by their Ignorance "and ill Humour. Pray go, look after 'em, for 'tis you "that are only capable of making 'em wiſer and better. I did "not, continues Philoſophy, take my firſt Journey to "the Greeks; no; I thought it proper to begin with "the moſt difficult Task, that is to cure the Barbarians. Thus I travell'd firſt to the Indians, a very "numerous People: Theſe I prevail'd with to alight "from their Elephants, and liſten to what I had to "offer; and thus the whole Clan of the Brachmans, who confine upon the Necreans and Oxydraci, "receiv'd my Inſtructions, and now practiſe by 'em. "From India I travell'd into Æthiopia, and from "thence into Ægypt, where I taught the Ægyptian "Prieſts and Prophets the Ceremonies of Religion. "From thence I went into Babylon to inſtruct the Chaldæans and the Magi: My next remove was into Scythia; from whence returning by the Way of Thrace, "I had ſome Converſation with Eumolpus and Orpheus, "and ſent 'em as my Harbingers into Greece; with "Orders to the firſt, to acquaint the Grecians with my "Myſteries; and with a Commiſſion to the latter, to "teach 'em Muſick. And following my ſelf quickly "after, I was receiv'd upon a Foot of indifferenoe "neither courted nor abus'd; however, after ſome "time I gain'd the ſeven wiſe Men.

To return a little to the former Article; and ſo conclude; we are to remember that before Deſcartes my Lord Francis Bacon, Viſcount of St. Albans, and Lord Chancellor, had diſcover'd the Miſtakes in the Schoolmen's Philoſophy, and the unſerviceable Method perſued in that Study. Now, if People would have improv'd his Hints, and manag'd by the Rules he laid down, Deſcartes would not have had all the Honour of demoliſhing the Ariſtotelian Philoſophy. To which we may add, that ſince Deſcartes's Death ſome rough Attacks have been made upon his Philoſophy. 'Tis pretended that his main Argument for the Exiſtence of the ſupreme Being, is no better than a Paralogiſm. And Lock, who has not a few Followers, has aſſerted that the Diſtinction between Soul and Body, is not ſo evident as this Philoſopher believ'd: His Reaſon is, becauſe we have no Idea of Subſtances, and by Conſequence can't be ſure whether one and the ſame Subſtance is not capable of Thought, and Extenſion. But to give a fuller Repreſentation, we may obſerve that Lock, who ſtrains hard for the Privileges of the three Dimenſions, after a great deal of fencing, is oblig'd to confeſs, that Matter, conſider'd as Matter, is altogether ſenſleſs and unconſcious; but then he adds, that God may ſuper-add a foreign Power to Matter, and ſo raiſe it to the force of thinking. But this is plainly to give up the Cauſe: For if the Idea of Matter is compleat without Thinking; if there is no ſuch Faculty to be found about it; if there muſt be a foreign Power ſuper-added, before any thing of Thought can emerge; it follows evidently from Lock's Conceſſion, that a Being capable of thinking, muſt be of a nobler and quite different Kind from Matter and Motion.

As to Deſcartes's Phyſicks they are batter'd as ſome pretend all to Pieces, and that which paſs'd for a Maſterpiece, is prov'd to be no better than a Caſtle made with Cards, which the leaſt breath of Wind is ſufficient to blow down. Some People will have it, that a Vacuum is demonſtrated, and by Conſequence that the Eſſence of Matter does not conſiſt in Extenſion; and 'tis farther remark'd that the greateſt Part of his Laws of Motion are falſe, and contrary to experiment; that his Vortices are impoſſible; that Atteraction is no ſuch chimerical quality as he pretends; that Gravitation or Heavineſs, is eſſential to Matter, and that theſe two Principles are the Cauſe of the moſt conſiderable Phænomena in Nature. His Doctrine about Colours is, as 'tis ſaid, entirely deſtroy'd; and the incomparable Mr. Newton's Syſtem receiv'd inſtead of it. Farther; they they ſay his Rules for the Refractions of Light fall ſhort of Evidence; it ſeems he was deceiv'd in his Calculation by not conſidering that all the Rays, which paſs through a Medium with the ſame obliquity, have not for that Reaſon the ſame Refractions. Some of the learned make a Jeſt of his three Elements, and of the Manner of his explaining the Motion of the Planets. And as for ſubſtantial Forms, where he had the greateſt Advantage, and which for ſome time were thought entirely demoliſh'd; even theſe are brought upon the Stage again, and call'd Plaſtick Powers. As for his Opinion that Brutes have no Senſation either of Pleaſure or Pain, are no better than Automata or Clock-work; there are few now ſo hardy as to maintain it in earneſt. But here we are only Reporters without pretending to decide whether thoſe who attack'd Deſcartes are right or wrong. However, I think it may be ſaid that they are not always miſtaken, and that they have clearly demonſtrated ſeveral things againſt him. * Cicer. de Fin. Quæſt. Academic. de Nat. Deor. Seneca. Plato, Apol. Socrat. Diogenes Laertius, de vit. Philoſoph. Lock's laſt Anſwer to Biſhop Stillingfleet. P. Daniel Voyage du Monde de Deſcartes. Memoires du Tems.

PHILOTAS, Parmenio's Son, charg'd with a conſpiracy againſt Alexander the Great, was ſet upon the Rack, confeſs'd his Crime, and was afterwards ſton'd by the Army. * Q. Curtius, lib. 5. & 6. &c.

PHILOTHEUS, an Abbot of Mount Athos, was choſen Archbiſhop of Heraclea firſt, and afterwards Patriarch of Conſtantinople upon the Expulſion of Calliſtus A.D. 1355. John Paleologus becoming afterwards Maſter of Conſtantinople, he reſtor'd Calliſtus, and Philotheus was forc'd to abſcond till Calliſtus's Death, which happened the Year following; after which Philotheus was repoſſeſs'd of the Patriarchate, which he enjoy'd till his Death, that is to the Year 1371. This Patriarch according to Cantacuzenus was a Perſon of great Piety and Elocution, and wrote ſeveral Tracts, of which but few are in Print. One of his moſt conſiderable Manuſcripts is his Treariſe, of the Subſtance, Operation, Power, and Light of Mount Tabor, divided into fifteen Books, in Anſwer to ten Books of Nicephorus Gregoras. This Book of Philotheus is lodg'd in the Duke of Bavaria's Library, and in that of the Vatican; Homilies upon the Goſpels of the Feſtivals of the Year, in the Duke of Bavaria's Library, and in that of the King of Spain; an abridgment of the œconomy Jeſus Chriſt; and a Panegyrick upon the Martyr St. Demetrius, in the Vatican. His Works in print are, a Tract concerning the Office of a Deacon, in Latin; Panegyricks upon St. Baſil, St. Gregory Nazianzen, and upon St. Chryſoſtom in Greek and Latin, in the Supplement to the Bibliotheca Patrum printed A. D. 1624; two Sermons upon the Croſs; and another upon the third Sunday in Lent publiſh'd in Greek and Latin by Gretſer. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIV.

PHINEAS, Prieſt and Treaſurer of the Temple at Jeruſalem, who, after the Town and Temple were burn'd, being ready to be crucify'd, thought upon an Expedient to ſave his Life: And that was, he diſcover'd to the General Titus that Place where the Prieſt's Veſtments were conceal'd; where the Purple and Scarlet for Veſils, or Portieres of the Temple were lay'd; where the Cinnamon, Caſſia, and other rich Spices, were lodg'd for making Perfumes for the Altar of Incenſe. He likewiſe gave Titus many other things of great Value; ſome of which were Offerings to God, and others Ornaments of the Temple. This Diſcovery procur'd his Pardon and good Uſage. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 6. cap. 41.

PHIOPS, the Twentieth King of the Memphites, reign'd an hundred Years after Meteſuphis. Eratoſthenes calls him him Apophus the Great. He united the Kingdom of the Thebaites to that of the Memphites. He began to reign one thouſand ſix hundred and forty two Years before the Incarnation. Herodotus reports him to have built one of the Pyramids. * Manetho, Marſham, Can. Chronol. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

PHISON, or Piſon, one of the four Rivers in Paradiſe. The Scripture informs us this River runs thro' the Country of Havilah, where there is Gold, Bdellium and the Onyx Stone. Commentators are at a Loſs about the Situation of this River. Some fanſy it the Ganges, but this Opinion can't hold, unleſs 'tis ſuppos'd that Paradiſe reach'd over almoſt all Aſia. Others will have it the Phaſis, a River in Colchis, which falls into the Euxine Sea. Samuel Bochart and Huetius, Biſhop of Avranches, affirm'd it a Branch of the Euphrates which falls into the Perſian Gulph near Baharen. M. le Clerc is inclin'd to think 'tis Chryſorrhoas, which runs near Damaſcus. * See his Commentary upon Geneſis chap. 2. ℣. 11.

PHITHOM, or Pithom, a City in Ægypt built by the Iſraelites during their ſtay there. 'Tis not far from the Red Sea; and 'twas near this Town that a Canal was drawn from the Nile into this Sea. Herodotus calls this Town Patumos. * Herodot. lib. 2. cap. 158. Le Clerc, Commentary upon Exodus, chap. 1. ℣. 11.

PHOCAS, a Martyr of Synope in the Province of Pontus: Aſterius Amaſeus reports him a Gardiner; that being delated to the Emperor for a Chriſtian, his Majeſty ſent Executioners to cut off his Head: Theſe Men coming to his Houſe he entertain'd 'em without knowing who they were, or what they came about; but when they acquainted him they came to execute Phocas, he told 'em himſelf was the Man, and ſuffer'd with Chriſtian Bravery. Aſterius adds that Miracles were wrought at his Tomb; that his Head was carried to Rome; and that he had a particular Regard paid him by Seamen, and thoſe that dwell in maritime Towns. Some will have it that this Phocas was Biſhop of Synope. There's another Phocas, who was a Martyr at Antioch. He is mention'd by Gregory of Tours; and 'tis in Honour of this Phocas that St. Chryſoſtom wrote an Homily. The Emperor Phocas built a Church at Conſtantinople in Honour of St. Phocas. Some Writers place Phocas's Martyrdom under Trajan, and others under Licinius. The Greeks ſet his Feſtival to the 23d of July, and the Latins to the 14th. * Aſterius, Sermone de Sancto Phoca. Gregor. Turon. de Gloria Martyr. lib. 1. cap. 99. Tillemont, Mem. Eccleſ. tom. 4.

*PHORONEUS, ſecond King of Argos, ſucceeded his Father Inachus in the Year of the World two thouſand one hundred fifty two, and one thouſand eight hundred forty two Years before the Incarnation. He reign'd ſixty Years: Apis ſucceeded him, Spartus, Phoroneus's Son, built Sparta. This Phoroneus drew the Argians, who liv'd ſcatter'd in the Country, into the Town Argos, and furniſh'd 'em with Laws. The Deluge call'd the Ogygian happen'd in his time. He is the moſt ancient Grecian King of whom we have any thing certain in Hiſtory. * Euſeb. Chron. Du Pin. Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

PHRAATA, ſo Arrian and Juſtin call it; Plutarch calls it Phraortes. 'Twas a City in Media, which Stephanus de Urbibus calls Phraaſpa and Praaſpa; he places it in Atropatene a Province in Media. Phraata was a City where the Kings of Media reſided, for which Reaſon Plutarch calls it the great City of King Phraortes.

PHRAATES II. Son of Mithridates I. ſucceeded him in the Year 131 before the Incarnation: 'Twas he according to Appian, who married his Siſter Rhodope to Demetrius Nicanor King of Syria, whom his Father had taken Priſoner. 'Tis certain that he maintain'd a War againſt Antiochus Sidetes, who having ſeiz'd the Kingdom of Syria came at the Head of an Army to demand his Brother Demetrius's Liberty. To remove this Enemy from the Parthians Country into which he was march'd, Phraates ſent Demetrius with an Army into Syria, and ſoon after routed Antiochus in a ſet Battel, where this latter loſt his Life in the Year 131 before the Incarnation. Afterwards Phraates made an unſucceſsful Attempt to conquer Syria, and was at laſt ſlain in a Fight againſt the Scythians, after two Years Reign. Artabanus I. his Uncle ſucceeded him. * Juſtin, lib. 38. & 42. Oroſius, lib. 5. Appian. in Syriac.

PHRAATES III. ſirnam'd the God, ſucceeded his Father Sintricus ſixty ſix Years before the Incarnation. Being alarm'd with Pompey's Conqueſts upon Mithridates King of Pontus, and Tigranes King of Armenia, he endeavour'd to treat a Peace with the Romans, but could not make it bear: Upon which Diſappointment he march'd into Tigranes Territories, then the Romans Ally. He had the worſt on't at firſt, but afterwards ſucceeded ſo far in the Conteſt, that Pompey himſelf was ſomewhat afraid of making War openly upon him. In fine, this Parthian King Phraates was murder'd by his Sons Orodes and Mithridates, fifty ſix Years before the Incarnation. * Plutarch in Pompeio & in Craſſo. Appian. in Parthicis. Dion Caſſius, lib. 35.

PHRAATES IV. was declar'd King by his Father Orodes, who dy'd of Grief for the Death of his Son Pacorus, who defeated Craſſus thirty ſix Years before the Incarnation. This Phraates by his rough Adminiſtration made ſome of the beſt diſtinguiſh'd of his Subjects mutiny againſt him: He ſupported the War with Advantage enough againſt Marc-Antony, and oblig'd this Roman General to retreat out of his Territories with conſiderable Loſs. Phraates was afterwards diſpoſſeſs'd by Tiridates, and got himſelf reſtor'd by the Aſſiſtance of the Scythians, twenty three Years before the Incarnation. 'Twas this Prince who return'd the Emperor Auguſtus the Colours and Priſoners taken when Craſſus was defeated. He liv'd upon good Terms with the Romans, and dy'd two Years before the Chriſtian Æra. * Dion. Caſſius, lib. 54. Strabo, lib. 2. Juſtin, lib. 42. Oroſius, lib. 6.

PIASECKI (Paul,) in Latin Piaſecius, Biſhop of Premiſlaw in Poland, liv'd in the ſeventeenth Century. He publiſh'd a fine Hiſtory of all remarkable Occurrences in the Kingdom of Poland, from Stephen Battori to the Year 1646. Amongſt his Narrative of civil Affairs he inſerted an Account of the principal Matters relating to Chriſtianity. M. le Laboureur in his Relation of the Queen of Poland's Voyage mentions this Hiſtory with Commendation; and M. Amelot de la Houſſaie quotes him frequently in his Notes upon Cardinal Oſſat's Letters. * Bayle, Diction. Crit. Edit. 1702.

PICCOLOMINI (Alexander,) Archbiſhop of Patras and Coadjutour of Siena. He ſtands in the Claſs of famous Men in the ſixteenth Century. He was born at Siena, and of the ſame Family with Pope Pius II. He wrote upon a great many Subjects, particularly upon Philoſophy; where his Manner was ſomething new. The Tract he publiſh'd at the Inſtance of Francis de Medicis great Duke of Tuſcany concerning the Reformation of the Calendar was approv'd by the moſt learned Judges. He was a good Mathematician and natural Philoſopher; and, which is a higher Commendation, of an exemplary Life. He was a ſtrong Ariſtotelian and a Member of the Infiammati of Padua. Notwithſtanding the Gravity of his Temper and his Application to Philoſophy, he relax'd ſo far as to write ſeveral Plays, which were much valu'd. He dy'd at Siena in 1578 ſeventy Years of Age. His Works are, La Filoſofia Morale; La Theorica di pianetti; L'Iſtitutione de l' huomo; l' Inſtitutione del Principe Chriſtiano; Della Grandezza dell' acqua e della terra; Paraphraſi ſù la Rettorica d'Ariſtotle; della Creanza delle Donne, delle Stelle Fiſſe; due Comedie cioè l'Aleſſandra e l'Amor coſtante; la Sphera; I Sonetti; Traduzione della Poëtica d'Ariſtotle; &c. * Voſſius, de Scientia Mathemat. Gilini, Teatro d' huomini Litterati, Tom. 1. Thev. Eloges des hommes Illuſtres, Tom. 8.

PICO SACRO, a Mountain of Galicia in Spain. It lies between Compoſtella and Orenſe. It riſes in the Figure of a Pyramid, and 'tis ſaid that formerly there were Mines of Gold in it. * Maty, Diction.

PIERUS, Linus's Father; he is reckon'd amongſt the Poets which were Prior to Homer: 'Tis ſaid 'tis from him that the Mountain Pierus took it's Name, from whence the Muſes are call'd Pierides. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

PIETRA-PILOSA, a ſmall Town in Iſtria. It ſtands upon a Rock near the Head of the Quieſo, and is the Capital of a Marquiſate which belongs to the Republick of Venice. * Maty, Diction.

PIETRA SANCTA, a Town with a Biſhop's See. It lies within the Territories of the Duke of Florence near the Sea, five Leagues from Lucca to the Weſt. 'Tis ſuppos'd to be the ſmall City anciently call'd Feronia or Lucus Feronia, Fanum Feroniæ, upon the Score of the Temple there dedicated to Feronia, whither Slaves, who were enfranchiz'd, went to put on their Cap or Habit of Manumiſſion. * Maty, Diction.

PIGHETTI (James,) of Bergamo in Italy wrote Togatæ Paludatæque Palladis Templum: Animadverſiones in Tacitum: Hiſtoria hujus Seculi. the following Verſes are ſet to his Picture;

Clarus avis, Virtute ſuâ, ſed Clarior hic eſt
Pighettus, latè docta per Ora volans.
De capite orta Jovis Pallas, de Palladis iſte
Mente ſatus, Matrem provocat eloquio.
* Donatus Calvus, pag. 195.

* PIGHIUS (Albertus:) For he dy'd at Utrecht A. D. 1543 Morery Vol. II. read 1564.

PILATE (Le Mont de) or Fracmont. A Mountain in Switzerland upon the Confines of the Canton of Underwald, where it borders upon the Canton of Lucerne, and to the South of the Town Lucerne. This Mountain is famous for the Stories related about it. There's a Lake upon the top on't, from whence there riſes great Miſts, which end in furious Tempeſts, when a Stone is thrown on purpoſe, and not by chance into it. Another pretended Miracle of this Mountain is that Pilate appears there every Year in a Judge's Habit, and that the Perſon, who is ſo unfortunate to ſee him, dies within the Twelvemonth. * Maty, Diction.

PILON, an excellent Architect, was one of thoſe who reviv'd Sculpture and Architecture in France in the time of King Henry II. in the ſixteenth Century, and in the following Reigns. He quitted the clumſy Gothick manner, which was then almoſt every where practis'd. Beſides the Fountain of Innocence, which is a Maſterpiece, there's a S. Francis done by him at Paris in the Cloyſter of the Great Auguſtinians. To which we may add St. Catharine's Chapel, ornamented with very beautiful Figures, Baſs-reliefs in Braſs; and ſome other handſome Performances in other Churches. * Félibien.

PIN (Lewis Ellis du,) Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty in Paris, and formerly King's Profeſſor, born at Paris June 17, 1657, Son of Lewis Lord, or Lord of the Manor, of Du Pin, extracted from an ancient Gentleman's Family in Normandy: His Mother was Mary Vitart, deſcended from a Family in Champagne. He was very promiſing from his Infancy, and diſcover'd an early Genius for Learning. He took his Doctor's Degree in Divinity July 1, 1684. Soon after he began his new Univerſal Library of Eccleſiaſtical Authors, containing the Hiſtory of their Lives, with a Catalogue, Critick and Chronology of their Works, both of what are extant, and what are loſt, a Summary of what's in 'em, Remarks upon their Style and Doctrine, together with an Account of the ſeveral Editions of their Works. His Performance begins with the inſpired Writers, and is carry'd down to the Year 1710, in thirty five Volumes 8vo, enlarg'd in the latter Editions with reſpect to the Hiſtory and Chronological Tables, with five Volumes, containing an univerſal Table of Eccleſiaſtical Authors and their Works, in which he has inſerted a Diſſertation of Directions for the ſtudying Divinity. The next I ſhall mention is a Latin Tract in 4to, entitled de antiqua Eccleſiæ Diſciplina: It takes in ſeven Diſſertations; the firſt treats of the ancient Diſpoſition of the Churches with reſpect to Juriſdiction, where he gives account of metropolitical and patriarchal Privileges; the ſecond Diſſertation dilates upon the Proceſs and forms in Eccleſiaſtical Courts, and concerning Appeals; the third Diſcourſes of Excommunication, and how this Cenſure was anciently executed; the fourth goes upon the Pope's Primacy; the fifth argues againſt the papal Infallibility; the ſixth venture's to prove the Authority of a Council above the Pope; the Buſineſs of the ſeventh is to ſhew that the Popes have no Authority either direct or indirect over Princes in temporal matters. He has diſcours'd almoſt upon the ſame Queſtions in a French Book in 8vo entitled, of Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal Power. He began a Body of Divinity under the Title of Chriſtian and orthodox Doctrine, of which he has publiſh'd a Volume concerning the Principles and Grounds of catholick Doctrine. He publiſh'd the Latin Text of the Pentateuch with Notes in two Volumes. The Pſalms in Latin with the Vulgate, corrected by the Hebrew Text, and with Notes in 8vo; and a French Tranſlation of the Pſalms with Notes in Twelves. This Performance being attack'd by an anonymous Author, he wrote a Defence of it. He publiſh'd a new Edition

Edition in Folio of Optatus, and of all the Records relating to the Donatiſts; to which he has prefix'd an Hiſtory of the Donatiſts, and a Geography of Africk as far as Chriſtianity was concern'd. The Faculty of Divinity at Paris having condemn'd ſome Propoſitions in the Memoirs of China, and in other Writings concerning the Religion of the Chineſe being attack'd by ſome Authors without a Name, he ſupported the Animadverſions in a Book entitled, a Defence of the Cenſure of the Faculty of Divinity of Paris paſs'd October 18, 1700. Farther; he has publiſh'd a new Edition of Gerſon's Works, printed in five Tomes Folio, with a Tract entitled Gerſoniana; in which he handles every thing relating to Gerſon's Life, the Hiſtory of his Time, the Tenets and Lives of Authors contemporary with him. Du Pin is likewiſe ſuppos'd to have written a ſmall Critick in French upon the Hiſtory of Apollonius Tyaneus; a Letter concerning the ancient Diſcipline of the Church relating to the celebrating the Holy Euchariſt; a Tract upon Excommunication; an abridg'd Hiſtory of the Church by way of Queſtion and Anſwer, from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1712; an Analyſis of the Apocalypſe, with ſome other ſmall Tracts. He began a Bibliotheque or Library of Pagan Hiſtorians, of which he has publiſh'd two Volumes. 'Tis to him the Publick is indebted for the new corrected Edition of the Hiſtory of the Jews from our Saviour to our own Times. He had a ſhare in reviewing the French Supplement to Morery printed at Paris A. D. 1714. As to M. Du Pin's Character, his Works are well known, and therefore there needs no length of Commendation upon him. He was without queſtion a Perſon of great Learning, Judgment, and Impartiality; and over and above wrote with a polite entertaining manner. His Death lies beyond the Period of this Appendix. * See his Life in the nineteenth Tome of his new Eccleſiaſtical Library, printed at Amſterdam in the Year 1715.

* PINDAR, one of the moſt celebrated Greek Lyrick Poets. Plato had a great value for his Works, and calls him a very wiſe and divine Perſon. Pindar's Style is very much rais'd, and his Manner is particularly great, inventive, and entertaining. His Figures are bold, his Deſcriptions ſurpriſing, and his Images ſtrong. Horace compares the Force of his Diction to a Land-Flood, which comes rolling down the Mountains and ſweeps every thing which lies in it's way. He obſerves that thoſe who are ſo hardy as to ſoar up to Pindar's Flights, are in Danger of Icarus's Fate, of melting their Wings and flapping into the Sea. He adds that this Poet was admirable in every Part of that Faculty, that his Dithyrambicks were nobly ſwell'd with new Expreſſion, that his Verſification was unconfin'd, ſtruck out of common Meaſure and Cadence, and yet always charming. Longinus ventures to ſay that his Mettle was ſometimes unmanag'd, that he ſtop'd himſelf at full Speed now and then with no good Grace; however, he prefers him to thoſe Lyrick Poets, who, notwithſtanding they move within Rule, fall ſhort of his Sublime. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, ſpeaking of this Poet's Expreſſion, pronounces it muſically grave. Pindar's Odes are remarkable for Sally and Tranſport, the Thoughts are lively and noble; and though they look thrown out at random, there is a great deal of Art in the ſeeming Negligence. He wrote in the Doric Dialect, but mix'd with the Æolick. His Odes are come down to us more genuine and uninterpolated than a great many of the Ancients Works. * Athenæus, Deipnoſophiſt. Dion. Halicarnaſſ. de Eloquent. Demoſth. Horace, lib. 4. Ode 2. Longinus. Quintilian. Inſtitut. Orat. lib. 10. cap. 1. Rapin, Reflections upon Poetry, &c.

PINEMBERG, in ſome Maps Pinnenberg, in Latin Pinneberga, a County in the Duchy of Holſtein within the Province of Stormaren. Part of it belongs to the King of Denmark, and part to the Duke of Holſtein Gottorp. The Country is ſomewhat rough and ragged. The Capital of the ſame Name is only a large Burrough built of Brick and Wood without any Walls. 'Tis five German Miles from Gluckſtad towards the South Eaſt, three Miles from Hambrough, and two Leagues from the Elbe. Altena, a much more conſiderable Place, lies within the Juriſdiction of this County. * Baudrand. Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeau.

PINNEBERG, a ſmall City within the Province of Stormaren in the Duchy of Holſtein. It ſtands upon the River Owe, four Leagues from Hamburg to the North Weſt. Pinneberg is the Capital of an Earldom, which has been a long time in the Hands of the Counts of Schaumbourg; but this Family being extinct in the Year 1640, this County was annex'd to the Duchy of Holſtein, of which it anciently held. * Maty, Diction.

PIONIUS, a Prieſt and Martyr of Smyrna, was apprehended at Smyrna in the Year 250, and carried with Sabinus and Aſclepiades to Polemo, who had the Care of an heathen Temple. A Crowd happening to gather about them, Pionius made a Diſcourſe upon the Subject of the Chriſtian Religion. When the Proconſul came to Smyrna, Pionius, after having been put to the Torture, was burn'd at the Stake with one Meſtrodorus. He ſuffer'd with great Firmneſs and Fortitude. The Greeks ſet his Feſtival to the 11th of March, and the Latins to the firſt of February. * Ruinart, Acta Martyrum Sincer. Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 4. cap. 15. Tillemont, Mem. pour l'Hiſt. Eccl.

PIPERNO, a ſmall City in Campania di Roma in Italy. This Town was formerly the Capital of the Volſci, and afterwards an Epiſcopal See: 'Tis four Leagues from Terracina to the North, to which the Biſhoprick is now united. * Maty, Diction.

PISIDES (George,) Deacon, Chartophilax, and Referendary of the Church of Conſtantinople in the ſeventh Century, flouriſh'd in the Reign of Heraclius and was living to the Year 640. He wrote a Poem in Iambicks upon the Creation of the World. He likewiſe wrote the Life of the Emperor Heraclius; the Perſian War; a Panegyrick upon the Martyr Anaſtaſius; and another Tract entitled Abarica. This Author's Book addreſs'd to Sergius Patriarch of Conſtantinople is tranſlated into Latin, and publiſh'd by Morellus A. D. 1584, with ſome Fragments of the ſame Author extracted from Suidas and others: 'Tis ſince inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum, together with his Poem upon the Vanity of Life. He is a better Poet than a Divine. This George, 'tis ſuppos'd, has written Sermons in Honour of the Bleſſed Virgin, publiſh'd by P. Combefis. The Subject of 'em is the Conception of the Bleſſed Virgin, and that of her Mother, upon the Bleſſed Virgin's Nativity, upon her going to the Temple, ſtanding at our Saviour's Croſs and going to his Sepulcher. Theſe Diſcourſes ſmell rank of Fiction, extracted from a ſpurious Book of the Bleſſed Virgin's Nativity, falſely reckon'd to St. James. In ſhort; theſe Sermons are overcharg'd with Deſcriptions run out into foreign Explanations, and ſwell to Bombaſt: They are full of Words, but barren of things, and fitter for laughing than Inſtruction. * Nicephorus Calliſtus, lib. 18. cap. 48. Suidas. Bellarmin. de Scrip. Eccl. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Græc. lib. 2. cap. 23. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. VII. &c.

PISIDIA, Part of Aſia Minor according to Strabo and Pliny; 'tis parted from Galatia to the North, and from Phrygia the Great by Mount Taurus. Lycaonia lies to the Eaſt of it, and Pamphylia to the South. The Principal Towns in it were Antioch, Segalaſſa and Selga. Leunclavius informs us that this Country is now call'd Verſa Ogli, or Verſa Ogeli. * Baudrand.

PISISTRATUS, King of the Orchomenians, depreſs'd the Nobility, and rais'd the Commons: This Conduct enrag'd the Senate, who reſolv'd to diſpatch him the next time he came into the Houſe. In ſhort; they executed their Plot, and every one carry'd off a Piece of him under their Cloaths. The Commons jealous of what had paſs'd came in a Body up to the Parliament Houſe to revenge their King's Death. But Teleſimachus Piſiſtratus's Son, who had a ſhare in the Conſpiracy, prevail'd with the People to be quiet; aſſuring 'em that his Father was ſeen in a Figure above human Grandeur and driving full Speed to the Mountain Piſeum. * Plutarch. Parallel.

PISO (Cneius,) a Roman of a violent tempeſtuous Temper, after having been Conſul in Auguſtus's Reign, was made Governor of Syria by Tiberius: The Deſign of putting him into this Poſt was to diſoblige Germanicus then in the Levant. Piſo ſeconded by Plancina his Wife, was too punctual in following Tiberius's Inſtructions. For after having provok'd Germanicus to an open rupture, he firſt, as Hiſtorians relate, got him bewitch'd, and then poyſon'd. After Germanicus's Death he ſent his Son Lucius Piſo to Rome before him, and then follow'd with Plancina and a great Train. But the next Day he was impeach'd by Fulcinus Trio, who only had the Liberty to proſecute upon Articles of Miſconduct. But as to the Buſineſs of poyſoning, Veranius and Vitellius Germanicus's Friends, joyning with his Lady Agrippina, charg'd him upon this Head with great Vigour and Evidence. And now Piſo being apparently hated by the Senate and Commonalty, Plancina herſelf having a private Aſſurance of her Pardon from the Empreſs Livia, ſolicited no longer for her Husband, but left him to ſhift for himſelf. This unhappy Man thus deſerted by every Body, was his own Executioner, according to ſome; though others report him diſpatch'd by Tiberius's Order for fear he ſhould produce his Commiſſion for poyſoning Germanicus. * Tacit. Annal. lib. 3. Dion. Caſſius, lib. 57. Sueton. in Tiber.

PISO (Licinianus,) Son of Marcus Licinius Craſſus by Scribonia: As his Birth was great, his Behaviour was grave and regular, ſo that ſome look'd upon him as a Kind of ſingle Remainder of the old Honeſty; whereas others interpreted his Reſervedneſs to Spleen and odd Temper. He was in his Prime when the Emperor Galba, who found himſelf deſpicable upon the Score of his Age, reſolv'd to ſtrengthen his Authority by chooſing a Succeſſor. This Prince at Laco's Suggeſtion pitch'd upon Piſo, who receiv'd this unexpected Honour with decent acknowledgment, but yet without any Signs of being elated or diſturb'd about it. Otho ſupported by Vinius, and expecting to be Emperor himſelf roſe upon Galba and Piſo. The Guards, diſoblig'd with Piſo for not giving 'em a Bounty upon his Election, revolted to Otho; and in the Skirmiſh Piſo was murther'd; tho' one Sempronius Denſus a Captain defended him a great while, and loſt his own Life in the Quarrel. Piſo for his laſt reſerve took Sanctuary in Veſta's Temple, where he lay conceal'd for ſome time; but being at laſt diſcover'd, Otho ſent two Soldiers, who dragg'd him from the Shelter, and diſpatch'd him at the Temple Gate. A. D. 69. * Tacit. Hiſt. lib. 1. Dion Caſſius. lib. 64. Sueton. in Vit. Othon. Plutarch, in Vit. Galbæ.

PISSINI (Andrew,) of Lucca, publiſh'd a Book entitled the Doctrine of Nature or natural things A. D. 1675: And here, after having fallen furiouſly upon Materia Prima, ſubſtantial and accidental forms, and broken almoſt all the old Philoſophers, he ſet up a new Syſtem, and defended it plauſibly enough. This Tract was put into the Index Expurgatorius at Rome. Konig, Biblioth.

PITAN (the Kingdom of:) 'Tis Part of the Territories of the Great Mogul: It lies beyond the Ganges along the River Kanda, between the Provinces of Patna, Canduana, Gor and Siba. There's a Capital of the ſame Name within it, and another Town call'd Camoio. Two Rahias or Princes have Territories within this Province, viz. Rahia Mugh to the South, and Rahia Rodoron to the North. * Maty, Diction.

PITHA, a great River in Sweden. It riſes in the Mountains of Norway, runs through a great Part of Lapland, and falls into the Gulph of Bothnia. * Maty. Diction

PITHECUSA, an Iſland near Campania, and not far from Naples. It takes it's Name from Mythology, becauſe the Poets pretend that Jupiter metamorphos'd the Inhabitants of this Iſland into Apes, to puniſh 'em for their Misbehaviour. Pliny fetches it from another Greek Original, which ſignifies a Tun. 'Tis ſtill ſometimes call'd Ænaria, becauſe, as 'tis ſuppos'd, Æneas's Fleet caſt Anchor here. 'Tis an old Miſtake and a Miſinterpretation of Homer, that the Giant Typhæus was buried here. But Homer only ſays ἐν ἀεἰμοις, from whence the Greeks call'd this Iſland Inarime or Enarime: But this Iſland is not the Place which Homer meant, however Virgil has gone into the Miſtake. * Virgil. Æneid. lib. 9. Ovid. Metam. lib. 12. Pliny, lib. 3. cap. 6. Scholiaſt. Apollonii

PITIUSA, or Pityriſa, a ſmall Græcian Iſland. It lies upon the Northern Coaſt of the Gulph of Napoli, a little to the Weſt of the Town Maria or Hermione. * Maty, Diction.

PIXODORUS, a Shepherd in the Neighbourhood of Epheſus in Aſia Minor, diſcover'd a Marble Quarry when the Epheſians were ſending to Paros and Thaſus to fetch Marble for building Diana's Temple. One Day, as he was feeding his Flock near Epheſus, two Rams running to butt againſt each other, and miſſing their aim, one of 'em ſtruck his Head againſt a Rock, and broke a Piece of it of a very white clear Colour. The Shepherd left his Sheep upon the Mountain, and carried the Piece broke off to Epheſus, and had a very large Reward from the Government: For this Diſcovery they gave him the Name of Evangelos, or a Man that brings good News; and after his Death they order'd him divine Honours, and the chief Magiſtrate went every Month to the Place where he was buried, and ſacrific'd to him with great Ceremony and publick Rejoycing. * Vitruvius, lib. 10. cap. 7.

* PLACIDIA, Daughter to Eudoxia, and Grand-Daughter to Theodoſius the Younger. See Eudoxia in Morery Vol. I. where the Hiſtory of this Placidia is rightly reported.

PLACIDIUS, a Roman Officer under Titus Veſpaſian, and who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf againſt the Jews. He was the firſt who attack'd Jotapat, where he loſt ſeven Soldiers, and had a great many wounded. Having receiv'd Advice that Flavius Joſephus was in the Town, he inveſted it. He was the third Perſon that enter'd the Place. His Bravery was ſo extraordinary, that with only five hundred Horſe he attack'd a prodigious Number of Jews, who retreated to Mount Itaburim or Tabor, and cut 'em all in pieces. Another time coming up to ſuccour his Friends of Gadara, who put themſelves under the Protection of the Romans, and having but five hundred Horſe and three thouſand Foot with him, he routed and kill'd fifteen thouſand Burghers of Bethenabara, where the ſeditious Jews had fortify'd themſelves; I ſay, he routed and kill'd fifteen thouſand beſides a vaſt Number who threw themſelves into the River. Here likewiſe he took two thouſand Priſoners with conſiderable Plunder, and ſet Fire to the Town. From hence he paſs'd over the River Jordan, overbore all Reſiſtance in the Field, took all the Towns beyond this River, and after all theſe Exploits countermarch'd to the Camp before Jotopat. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 4. cap. 25.

Baronius is of Opinion that this Placidius is the ſame with St. Euſtachius, who turning Chriſtian afterwards ſuffer'd Martyrdom in Adrian's Reign, for refuſing to return Thanks to the pretended Gods for the Victory that Prince had gain'd over the Enemies of the Empire. * Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

PLACIDIUS PORCHERON (Dom,) a Benedictine Monk of the Congregation of St. Maur, and Library Keeper of the Abby of St. Germain des Prez at Paris, was a learned Perſon of Figure in the ſeventeenth Century: He was remarkably knowing in Languages, Hiſtory, Geography, Heraldry and Medals. He wrote politely in Latin and French; and in this latter Language he wrote a Book entitled the Education of a Prince. Beſides his having a conſiderable Share in the new Edition of St. Hilary, he publiſh'd a Manuſcript of conſiderable Antiquity upon the old Geography, which he entitled Anonymi Ravennatis, becauſe the Author was of the City Ravenna. He has written very curious and learned Notes upon this Book. He was born at Chateau-Roux in Berry: He dy'd in March 1694, forty two Years of Age. * Memoires du Tems.

PLAGIARY: So the Romans call'd him who bought, ſold or detain'd a free Perſon for a Slave, or ſeiz'd and kept other Peoples Slaves by Force. Thoſe convicted of this Crime were ſentenc'd to be whipt by the Fulvian Law, which they call'd ad Plagas, from whence the Word Plagiary is deriv'd. This Crime was made capital by the Athenians and Jews. * Diction. des Arts.

* PLATINA, an Hiſtorian. His Lives of the Popes are written with a great deal of Freedom, and in a tolerable Style, but not with all the Judgment and Exactneſs one could wiſh. Beſides this Work, he wrote ſeveral Tracts upon the Subject of moral Philoſophy in the Form of Dialogues, viz. de falſo & vero Bono, lib. 3. Contra Amores, lib. 1. De vera Nobilitate, lib. 1. De optimo Cive, lib. 11. In Beſſarionem Cardinalem dinalem Panegyricus. De Pace confirmanda Oratio. He likewiſe wrote a Tract touching the Regimen for preſerving Health, of the Nature of things, and of the Learning of the Kitchen, dedicated to the Cardinal de la Rovere, printed at Bolognia A. D. 1498, and at Lyons 1541. With reference to this Book Sannizarius made the following Epigram upon the Author.

Ingenia & Mores vitaſque obituſque notáſſe
Pontificum, argutæ lex fuit Hiſtoriæ.
Tu tamen hinc lautæ tractas Pulmenta Culinæ,
Hoc Platina eſt ipſos paſcere Pontifices.

PLESSE, a large Town in Lower Saxony near the River Leyne, and half a League from Gottengen. 'Tis the chief Town of a large Barony, which has a great many Eſtates holding of it. It held formerly of the Landgraviate of Heſſe to which it was annex'd in the Year 1571, the Family of it's immediate Lords being then extinct. * Maty, Diction.

PLESSE, a ſmall Town in Sileſia, Capital of the Barony of Pleſſe. 'Tis fortify'd with a good Caſtle, and ſtands upon the Viſtula five Leagues from Teſchen near Poland. * Maty, Diction.

PLETTENBERG (Walter,) great Maſter of the Teutonick Order, was one of the braveſt military Men of his Time. His firſt Buſineſs was to reform the Abuſes which had gain'd footing among the Knights of the Order, and to provide for the Repoſe of Livonia at home and abroad. However, he could not avoid a War with the Muſcovites, who had made Incurſions upon the Country and carry'd Fire and Sword through the Neighbourhood of Narva, Torpat and Riga. The great Maſter reſolv'd not to ſuffer theſe Hoſtilities to go unreveng'd. To this purpoſe he drew a ſmall Body together of about four thouſand Horſe, but all pick'd Men: With this Handful he enter'd Muſcovy, and came up with forty thouſand of the Enemy, moſt of 'em Cavalry. He attack'd this great Superiority of Numbers, broke and purſued 'em three Leagues till Night oblig'd him to halt. Several thouſands of the Muſcovites were kill'd; their Baggage was taken, with great Quantities of Ammunition. He march'd afterwards farther into the Country, took ſeveral Forts, and defeated another Body of the Enemy near Iwanogrod. But his Troops being diſtreſs'd with a great Mortality he was oblig'd to countermarch. He had a violent Sickneſs himſelf, which had like to have carry'd him off: The Ruſſians, ſnatching this Opportunity, enter'd Livonia, and ravag'd a great many Provinces in the moſt inhuman manner imaginable, killing and carrying off above forty thouſand People. As ſoon as Plettenberg had recover'd his Health, he ſummon'd the Nobility of the Country, and reſolv'd upon another Expedition againſt Muſcovy. He rais'd a ſmall Army of about ſeven thouſand German Horſe, and five or ſix thouſand Foot of Courland: With this ſmall Number he enter'd Ruſſia, where he receiv'd Intelligence from two Priſoners near Pleskow that the Muſcovites drew near with a formidable Army, which had receiv'd Orders from the Czar to incloſe Plettanberg, and bring him and his Men like Sheep to Moſcow. This Advice from the Priſoners gave the great Maſter time to put his Men in a Figure of Advantage, and march in Order: The Enemy had divided their Forces into twelve Bodies: When they came within Diſtance for giving the Onſet, Plettenberg, after a ſhort Speech, diſcharg'd his Field-Pieces, which the Muſcovites were then little us'd to; and then coming to a cloſe Fight and falling on with extraordinary Fury, the Conteſt grew obſtinate and doubtful. The great Maſter having but a comparative Handful was eaſily ſurrounded by the Ruſſians, but breaking through 'em thrice he forc'd 'em at laſt to retreat, and kill'd vaſt Numbers in the Purſuit. But his Men being tir'd with killing, and their Horſes in no condition to carry 'em, they could not purſue very far. The great Maſter ſtay'd three Days upon the Field of Battel, to ſee if the Muſcovites were hardy enough to attack him a ſecond time. All Writers agree that the Victory was great, tho' they differ ſomewhat in the Number of the Dead. Thoſe who ſet the Account loweſt report the Muſcovites loſt forty thouſand Men; and that the Livonians had but one Knight of the Teutonick Order, one Captain, a Lieutenant, an Enſign, and four hundred Centinels kill'd. This Victory gain'd in the Year 1500 oblig'd the Muſcovite to conclude a Peace with the great Maſter. * A New Deſcription of Livonia.

POINTS (Hebrew Vowel:) That theſe Points now in the Hebrew Bibles were added by Ezra to the Chaldee Alphabet was generally believ'd, till Elias Levita a German Jew contradicted this Opinion about the middle of the ſixteenth Century. Buxtorf the Elder endeavour'd to confute his Arguments. But Cappellus a French Proteſtant and Hebrew Profeſſor at Saumur has anſwer'd Buxtorf with great Learning and Solidity. To this, Buxtorf the Son return'd an Anſwer, which fell ſhort of giving Satisfaction. I ſhall give a brief Report of what the learned Dr. Prideaux has offer'd upon this Argument. Firſt, he takes Notice that the Jews, Elias Levita not excepted, are generally agreed that the Points of the Old Teſtament give the true Reading, and are of equal Authority with the Letters. But that this is over-rating the Points and carrying the Matter too far, may be prov'd from the Obſervations following,

1. The Old Teſtament read in the Jewiſh Synagogues have always been, and are ſtill without Points; which, had they been fix'd there by Ezra when he review'd the Canon, would have been continued in the Copies for the Synagogue from that Age to the preſent: There being no probable Reaſon to be given for the Points not being fix'd to thoſe Copies, excepting this, that when the Holy Scriptures were firſt publickly read in the Synagogues, there were no ſuch Marks for Vowels as Points. And thus, the Points being of later uſe, and human Invention, they were not thought fit to be added to thoſe Copies, which were look'd on as exactly agreeing with the Divine Original.

2. The old various Readings of the Holy Text call'd Keri Cetib go all upon the Letters, and none about the Points, which looks like a clear Proof that the Vowel Points were anciently either not known, or elſe not regarded as any authentick Part of the Text. For had it been otherwiſe the Variations of theſe Points would certainly have been mark'd no leſs than thoſe of the Letters.

3. The old Cabbaliſts fetch none of their Myſteries from the Vowel Points, but all from the Letters, which is an Argument that they were either then not in uſe, or not reckon'd Part of the Holy Text.

4. The pointed Hebrew Bibles read the Text in ſeveral Places differently from the Septuagint, from the Chaldee Paraphraſe, from the Fragments of Aquila, Symmachus and Theodoſion, and from the Latin Verſion done by St. Jerom: This is a plain Argument that if there were any pointed Copies when theſe Tranſlations were made, their Authority was little or nothing; for had they been look'd on as Rules for the true reading, the Verſions would certainly have been govern'd by 'em.

5. Neither the Miſhnah, nor the Gemara of Jeruſalem, or Babylon, make any mention of theſe Vowel Points; notwithſtanding in ſeveral Places particular Reaſons occur for doing it; inſomuch that the Omiſſion of the mention of theſe Points can be interpreted to nothing, excepting to their not being, or not being of any Authority. Farther, Philo Judæus and Joſephus, and the Fathers for ſeveral of the firſt Centuries, amongſt which we may reckon Origen, and St. Jerom, both conſiderable Hebricians, are entirely ſilent about 'em.

Theſe are the main Arguments on Capellus's Side, and which indeed ſeem too difficult to deal with: However; the Reader ſhall have a Line or two of what the Buxtorfs have advanc'd to the contrary.

1. They obſerve that the ancient Books Bahir and Zohar, one of which is ſaid to be written a little before, and the other a little after the Incarnation, expreſſly and frequently mention the Vowel Points. Now this Argument, 'tis confeſs'd, would be unanſwerable as far as the Date aſſign'd, provided theſe Books could hold up to the Antiquity pretended. But the learned Dr. Prideaux obſerves that neither of 'em were ever heard of, ſo much as amongſt the Jews themſelves, for above a thouſand Years after the time they are ſaid to be written.

2. Whereas 'tis affirm'd on Cappellus's Side that the Maſorites

Maſorites of Tiberias invented the Vowel Points about five hundred Years after our Saviour's Incarnation, this, ſay the Buxtorfs, looks very improbable. For at that Period all the learned Jews had remov'd from their own Country, and ſettled in the Province of Babylon. Beſides the Buxtorfs obſerve there is no ſufficient Authority to ſupport the Aſſertion; none but Elias Levita and Aben Ezra, which latter is no older than the middle of the twelfth Century. To this Cappellus replies, that in hiſtorical Matters the Silence of the Jews is by no means a convincing Argument: That of all Nations who pretend to any Learning, they have been the moſt negligent in recording Matters of Fact. And that there were Men of Learning at Tiberias in St. Jerom's time is plain, for he tells us he made uſe of 'em: Now this Father liv'd to the Year 420, which is but eighty Years before the time aſſign'd for the Maſorites performance abovemention'd. To this Cappellus and thoſe of his Sentiment ſubjoyn that they don't confine the Invention of the Vowel Points to the time and Place aſſign'd by Elias Levita: They only affirm that it muſt be poſterior to St. Jerom and the Babyloniſh Talmud, for the Reaſons already mention'd. And this Conceſſion muſt carry the Invention of the Points below the five hundredth Year of our Lord: But whether they were then immediately invented, or two or three hundred Years afterwards, whether at Tiberias or elſewhere, they don't pretend to determine. Their whole poſitive Aſſertion is that theſe Points were not ſet to the Text by Ezra, and by Conſequence that they are not of divine Authority.

3. If by the Maſorites who are ſaid to have invented theſe Vowel Points are meant the Authors of the preſent Maſora, which is printed with the great Bibles of Venice and Baſil, 'tis certain they can't be the Inventers of theſe Points. For a great Part of their Criticiſms is upon the Vowel Points, which is an evident Proof they were ſettled long before. For no Authors uſe to turn Criticks upon their own Works: To this 'tis reply'd by Cappellus that there were Maſorites from the time of Ezra, and the Men of the great Synagogue ſucceſſively down to Ben Aſher and Ben Naphthali, who flouriſh'd about the Year 1030: That ſome of theſe invented the Points after the making of the Talmud: That afterwards ſome who ſucceeded 'em, it may be at two or three hundred Years Diſtance, made the Criticiſms and Remarks above mention'd.

4. When the Hebrew Language ceas'd to be the Jews Mother Tongue, as 'tis univerſally agreed it did after the Babyloniſh Captivity; when this happen'd, the Buxtorfs aſſert 'twas ſcarce poſſible to teach that Language without theſe Vowel Points; and this, it muſt be confeſs'd, is their beſt Argument. And now having mention'd the Strength of what is offer'd by Cappellus and the Buxtorfs, I ſhall give a brief Recital of the learned Dr. Prideaux's Opinion.

1. He agrees that the Vowel Points being never receiv'd by the Jews in their Synagogues ſeems a certain Proof that they were never anciently reckon'd as an authentick Part of the Old Teſtament, but only look'd upon as a later human Invention for the eaſier reading of the Text after the Hebrew ceas'd to be the Language of the Vulgar. And the Jews having been the true Church of God till our Saviour's time, to whom the Scriptures were firſt deliver'd, and through whoſe Hands they were tranſmitted to the Chriſtian Church; they were till the Incarnation at leaſt the proper Judges to pronounce what part of the Text is authentick Scripture, and what is not.

2. He thinks 'tis moſt likely theſe Vowel Points were the Invention of the Maſorites a little after Ezra's Time. That the Uſe of the Points were introduc'd ſoon after Ezra's Time ſeems highly probable from the need there was then of 'em, for directing the reading of the Hebrew Text. And that they were the Maſoritick Invention may be reaſonably concluded from the Buſineſs and Profeſſion of theſe Men: The Maſorites Buſineſs was to tranſcribe Copies of the Hebrew Scriptures, to criticiſe upon 'em, and to teach the true reading. And what they obſerv'd and taught in order to this is call'd the Maſora. And, as has been before obſerv'd, when the Hebrew Language ceas'd to be vulgarly ſpoken, the uſe of the Points ſeems abſolutely neceſſary; for how thoſe, to whom Hebrew was not the native Language, ſhould learn it without Vowels is ſcarce poſſible to imagine. And therefore Cappellus in his Arcanum Punctuationis grants that when the Hebrew Language became dead and not vulgarly ſpoken, it could not be learn'd without the Help of Vowels; but then he tells us that anciently the Letters Aleph, He, Vau, Yod, which they call'd Matres Lectionis, ſerv'd inſtead of Vowels. But to this 'tis reply'd, that there are a great Number of Words in the Hebrew way of writing, both in the Bible and other Books of that Language, in which none of theſe Letters are to be found, and ſcarce any in which ſome of the Syllables are not without 'em; and which way then can theſe ſupply the Place of Vowels, and give every where a full Direction for the reading, ſince every where they are not to be found? Beſides, there are none of theſe Letters which have not ſometimes the different Sounds of every one of the Vowels annex'd to 'em; and how then can they determine the Pronunciation of any one of 'em? For inſtance the Letter Aleph has not always the Pronunciation of (a,) but ſometimes of (e,) ſometimes of (i,) ſometimes of (o,) and ſometimes of (u,) according as 'tis found in different Words; and the ſame may be ſaid of all the reſt. Dr. Prideaux obſerves farther, that all the other oriental Languages have thoſe Letters call'd Matres Lectionis in their Alphabets as well as the Hebrew: For inſtance, the Syriac, the Arabic, the Turkiſh, the Perſian, the Malayan, &c. have theſe Matres Lectionis, and yet over and above they have the Vowels to direct the reading. To this 'tis objected, that the Samaritan, tho' now a dead Language, is learn'd without Vowel Points. To this the learned Dr. returns, that the Books in the Samaritan Character brought into Europe are written only with the Letters, without any Marks like the Hebrew Vowel Points, or any others inſtead of 'em. But this, as he continues, does not prove that they have no ſuch Vowels us'd amongſt 'em: For notwithſtanding abundance of Hebrew, Syriac, Arabic, Turkiſh, and Perſian Books are brought from the Levant to the Europæans, all written with the Letters only, without any Vowel Marks; yet this does not prove that they have no ſuch Marks, for 'tis certain they all have 'em, and make uſe of 'em. And therefore by parity of Reaſon the Samaritan Language may have 'em alſo, though all the Books brought into theſe Weſtern Countries are written without 'em.

He argues farther, that the Greeks and Latins, tho' originally furniſh'd with Vowels, invented Accents and other Marks for Pronunciation after their Languages became dead; and therefore we have Reaſon to conclude à fortiori, that when the Hebrew Language was no longer native to the Country, the Jews who had no Vowels, would then apply to the Aſſiſtance of the Points, to govern the Reading, and make the Learning of Hebrew practicable.

3. The learned Dr. Prideaux is of Opinion, that theſe Vowel Points were for many Ages only of private uſe among the Maſorites; but not receiv'd in the publick Schools till after the Compoſing the Talmud. In Proof of this, he takes Notice there were two Sorts of Schools anciently amongſt the Jews, the Schools of the Maſorites and the Schools of the Rabbies. The firſt went no farther then teaching the Hebrew Language, and reading the Scriptures: The latter inſtructed their Scholars in the meaning of the Holy Text, and Gloſſes upon it: And the Maſorites compar'd to theſe Rabbies were reckon'd no better than mere Grammarians. And therefore as long as theſe Vowel Points went no higher than the Maſoritick Schools, the learned Jews took no Notice of 'em. And this is ſuppos'd to be the Reaſon that we find no mention of 'em either in the Talmud, or the writings of Origen and St. Jerom. But ſome time after the making of the Talmud, though the Year or Age cannot be certainly determin'd, the pointing of the Maſorites being approv'd by the Jewiſh Doctors as a neceſſary Expedient for preſerving the true Reading of the Hebrew Scriptures, they pitch'd upon ſome of their moſt learned Rabbies to review, correct, and ſettle the Points, ſo as to make 'em the certain Direction of the Authentick Reading, according as 'twas firſt form'd and pronounc'd by the inſpir'd Writers. * Cappellus, Arcanum Punctuationis. Buxtorfius Pater, in Tiberiade. Buxtorfius Filius, de Antiquitate Punctorum

Punctorum. Waltoni Prolegom. in Bibl. Polyglott. Dr. Prideaux, Old and New Teſtament connected, &c.

POLAKIA, or the Palatinate of Bielsko; a Province of the Duchy of Mazovia in Poland. It lies between Mazovia Proper, Pruſſia, Lithuania, Poleſin, and Upper Hungary. It ſtretches about five and thirty Leagues from North to South, and twelve from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Tis water'd with the Rivers Bug and Narew; and the principal Towns are Bielsko the Capital, Auguſtow, Tycockzin, Drogieſin and Mielnick. * Maty, Diction.

POLE, a Province of Southern Muſcovy. It lies almoſt between the Don and the Doniec; 'tis bounded on the North by the Tartars, Mordwates and the Czeremiſſes, and on the South by the Circaſſians. A great part of this Country is Moraſs, the reſt is almoſt all Foreſt, inhabited by the Tartars Roſdori Donski, Tributaries to the Muſcovites. There's no conſiderable Town in this Country. * Maty, Diction.

POLLET, (Francis,) a Lawyer born at Doway in the Low Countries, he ſtudy'd at Louvain and ſome other Univerſities, where he apply'd himſelf wholly to the Law, which he taught for ſome Years publickly and privately at Paris. He practis'd afterwards in this City at the Bar, and removing from thence ſettled at Doway. He dy'd there at thirty Years of Age in the Year 1547. This Lawyer wrote the Hiſtory of the Bar of the old Romans, which he divided into five Books, in which he takes notice of the Place and Time where and when the Courts of Juſtice were held, and the Solemnity of the Appearance: He takes notice of the Condition and Privileges of Advocates or Barriſters; of the different Kinds of Magiſtrates and Cauſes; of the Circumſtances and Treatment of Criminals and Perſons proſecuted; of the Form of Proceſſes and Judgments; of the Serjeants and Guards, and other Ceremonies anciently obſerv'd at Rome at the Trials of Cauſes and Perſons. He was ſuddenly taken off by Death, before he could finiſh the laſt Book. Philip Broide his Relation added nine Chapters, made Notes upon the whole Performance, and printed it at Doway A. D. 1576. * See the Book.

POLYBUS, King of Corinth, bred Oedipus for his Son, who lay expos'd upon the Mountain Citheron. The Death of this Prince made an unfortunate Diſcovery to Oedipus, who then firſt underſtood he was none of Polybus's Son. Diodorus Siculus will have it that Polybus was no more than a plain Shepherd. * Scholiaſt. ad Sophocl. Oedip. Tyran. See Oedipus in Morery Vol. II.

* POLYCRATES, Biſhop of Epheſus, liv'd towards the end of the ſecond Century, and got a Reſolution paſs'd in a Synod of Aſiatic Biſhops, that Eaſter ſhould be kept on the 14th Day of March, without any regard whether it fell upon Sunday or not. He gave an Account of what paſs'd in a Letter to Pope Victor. Now the Church of Rome having receiv'd a Cuſtom of celebrating the Paſchal Solemnity only upon Sunday, the Pope was diſguſted with the Deciſion of the Eaſtern Biſhops, and proceeded ſo far as to excommunicate 'em, or at leaſt to threaten 'em with that Cenſure. Theſe high Proceedings ſeem not to have been valued by Polycrates, who was ſupported by the Biſhops of Palæſtine, Pontus and Oſroëne. St. Irenæus acted the Part of a Mediator, and ſolicited for an Accommodation. * Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 23, 24. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. II.

POLIXO, born at Argos, and Wife to Tlepolemus King of Part of the Iſle of Rhodes, entertain'd Helena Menelaus's Wife, after ſhe had been expell'd Greece by Megapentes and Nigoſtratus Oreſtes's Sons. This Princeſs afterwards order'd a pracel of Women to counterfeit themſelves Furies and then fall upon Helen and hang her. This Execution was done to revenge Tlepolemus's Death, who was kill'd at the Siege of Troy. * Pauſanias, in Lacon.

POMESANIA, a Country in Ducal Pruſſia. It reaches from Eaſt to Weſt from the River Paſſerg to the Viſtula, between Pruſſia Royal, which bounds it on the Weſt, the North and Part of the Eaſt, and Gallindia which confines it on ſome Part of the Eaſt, and the Palatinate of Ploczko, which lies to the South. Pomeſania is a conſiderable large Country, but full of Lakes and Moraſſes. The principal Towns in it are Holland the capital, Marienwarder, Freiſtat, Libſtat, Salfeld, Eylow, and Hohenſtein. * Maty, Diction.

POMEY (Francis,) a Jeſuit lived in the XVII Century; he wrote ſeveral ſerviceable Books for Colleges, where they learn Humanity; viz. His Book entituled Candidatus Rhetorics, his Tracts of Particles, his Royal Dictionary, his Gradus ad Parnaſſum, his Indiculus Univerſalis, Pantheum Mythicum &c. * Memoires du Tems.

PONCE (Conſtantin de la Fuente,) in Latin Conſtantinus Fontius, from whence they made Pontius, a Doctor of Divinity, and Canon of Seville, lived in the ſixteenth Century, was Preacher to Charles the V. and attended Philip the II. at his return he was proſecuted in the Inquiſition, for Proteſtant Heterodoxy, and put into Priſon, where he died before he made an Act of Faith: But his Effigies was burnt publickly when that Ceremony was to have been gone through. Some report him Charles V's Confeſſor, and that he aſſiſted that Prince at his Death. But this is a Miſtake, for he was impriſoned before the Death of this Emperor. He wrote ſome Books, which the Spaniſh Inquiſition put in their Index Expurgatorius. He had a great Reputation for the Pulpit. He wanted neither Wit nor Elocution, but gave himſelf a great deal of Liberty in rallying, which poſſibly might draw the Diſgrace and Proſecution upon him. * Nicolas Antonio, Biblioth. Script. Hiſpan. Father Paul's Hiſtory of the Council of Trent. lib. 5. Bayle Diction. Critiq. Edit. 1702.

PONDICHERY, upon the Coaſt of Coromandel, is a Place where the French have ſettled a Trade. It ſtands upon the Sea Shore, eleven Degrees and 48 Minutes northern Latitude, 40 Leagues to the South of Mazilipatan, a little diſtant from Madraſpatan where the Engliſh have a Haven and a Fort, and near Meliapour or St. Thomas, famous for the Martyrdom of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, and for the vigorous Siege ſuſtained by Monſieur de la Haye, who commanded the French Garriſon there. There's a Fort, a Seminary for Jeſuits, and another for Capuchins. A hundred and fifty French defended themſelves for ten or twelve Days, againſt above three thouſand five hundred regimented Troops of the Enemy, who came well appointed with Shipping and Artillery; Theſe Troops who attacked the French were Dutch who were forced to grant the French honourable Articles, and give them leave to march out December 3, 1693. However, the Garriſon reenter'd afterwards, and fortified it very well. The Number of Chriſtians is conſiderably encreaſed there. * Memoires du Tems.

PONT AUDEMER, or as it is commonly pronounced Ponteau Demer (Pons-Audomari) a City in the Dioceſs of Liſeux in Normandy, between Roüen and Caën with a Bailliage, Vicomte, an Election with ſeveral Pariſhes and religious Houſes for either Sex. It ſtands upon the Rille, a River which when the Tide comes in brings Boats up to the Town. This Town in the Year 1592 was ſurpriſed for the Leaguers by Andrew de Villars, afterwards admiral of France. While he was fortifying this Town, Boſc-Royce one of his Captains threw himſelf into Feſcamp, and put it into the Kings Hands. In the Year 1279. there was a Council held here for the Reformation of Manners, the Acts of which are extant. * Sanſon. Baudrand.

PONT-L' EVESQUE (Pons Epiſcopi,) a City in France with an Election, and the Seat of the Vicomty and Bailliage of Auge in Normandy, within the Dioceſs of Liſeux, and upon the River Tonque, three Leagues from the Sea and three or four below Liſeux. Pons L' Eveſque is famous for Cheeſe. * Sanſon. Baudrand.

PONTAULT (Sebaſtian Pontault de baulieu,) an Ingineer and Field Marſhal in the French Army. The ſtrong Inclination he had for a military Profeſſion, made him liſt himſelf at fifteen Years of Age. It was at the famous Siege of Rochelle that he began to ſignalize himſelf. Here he diſtinguiſhed himſelf ſo much both for Conduct and Courage that he was made Commiſſary of the Artillery notwithſtanding his Youth. He managed this Poſt at the Siege of Privas in Vivarez at that of Pignarole, and at the Battel of Veillan, where he was wounded with a Muſquet Ball on the Shoulder. The good Service he did under the Duke de Longueville, who commanded the Army in Lorrain preferred him to the Poſt of Comptroller General to the Army in Lorrain. He ſerved at the Siege of Heſden, and the Year following at that of Arras, where in a Fight againſt the Count de Bucquoy, he was run through the Body with a Sword. This Wound raiſed him to the Poſt of provincial Comptroller to the Artillery of Artois. He was afterwards at the Siege and taking of Aire where he behaved himſelf with ſo much Bravery, that Monſieur de la Meilleraye made him Governor of the Place, which he defended to Extremity againſt the Enemy, though at laſt he was forced to ſurrender. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf ſo at the Siege of Perpignan, that the Prince of Condé, then Duke d' Enguien would have him near himſelf, and made uſe of him in the famous Battels of Rocroy, Thionville, and Philipsbourg. In carrying on the Trenches for attacking this laſt Place, he had his Arm taken off by a Cannon Ball. This Misfortune did not hinder him from ſerving in the following Campaigns at the Battel of Nortlinguen, at the Sieges of Courtrai, Bergues, Furnes, Mardike, and Dunkirk, where he alone had the Direction for carrying on the Trenches. From hence he attended this Prince into Catalonia where he fortified Conſtantin and Salau. It may be ſaid of him, that he had a ſhare in all the Fights, Sieges, and military Expeditions, from the very Day he was capable of carrying Arms, to the time he was diſabled, by Age or Wounds, to perform in the Field any longer. And when he was thus forced to lie by, he ſpent his Leiſure in drawing, and afterwards ordering to engrave all the Sieges Sallies, Battels, and, generally ſpeaking, all the military Expeditions within the Reign of Lewis XIV. which he likewiſe explained with inſtructive Remarks, and gave a Detail of the reſpective Enterpriſes. This Undertaking, though it coſt him above ſixty thouſand Livres, and was ſomewhat over proportion'd to his Fortune, was notwithſtanding in ſome meaſure finiſhed at laſt. He died Auguſt the 10th 1674, after having had the Honour of the Order of St. Michael and made marſhal General of the Kings Armies. The Work he was upon was not diſcontinued by his Death. Madam des Roches, his Niece not only had the Work carried on with the ſame Expence and Exactneſs, but likewiſe preſented it with a Dedication to the French King; who to ſhew his Value for the Performance gave her a conſiderable Penſion. Thoſe who are Soldiers enough to underſtand theſe Prints, and have any Taſte for engraveing are all of Opinion that there are very few Performancees of this Kind, which come up to it either for the Bulk of the Undertaking, or for the full and lively Repreſentation of each Event. * Perrault, Les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France. Tom. II.

PONTINE, Palus Pontini, a great Moraſſe in Campania di Roma. It takes it's Name from the old Town Pomptini, and ſtands towards the Sea Coaſt, between the Town Terraincina and Cape Antio. There are ſome Villages within this Moraſſe but thinly inhabited becauſe of the Badneſs of the Air; and there are ſtill ſome remains of the paved Way, made by the Emperor Trajan. * Maty, Diction.

PONT DE ROYAN, a good French Town in Dauphiné. 'Tis the Seat of the Marquiſate of Royanez and ſtands at the Foot of the Mountains, three Leagues from St. Marcelin to the South. Maty, Diction.

POPÆ, were under Officers belonging to the Sacrifices, whoſe Buſineſs it was to furniſh the Cattel neceſſary for that purpoſe, and to cut their Throats after they are knock'd down. They were naked to their Navel, and from thence cover'd to the mid-Leg with a Linen Apron, or the Skin of ſome Beaſt ſacrific'd; they had likewiſe a Crown on their Head which was commonly made of Laurel. Thus their Habit is deſcrib'd upon Trajan's Pillar. They are likewiſe repreſented in other ancient Figures, with a ſort of Albe, which hangs down from their Armpits, and tuck'd backward to the Place where the Knife was faſten'd. This Apron was call'd Simus or Linus, becauſe it had a purple Border twiſted. This Habit is mention'd by Virgil in his twelfth Æneid.

Velati limo, & verbenâ tempora vincti.

* See Servius upon this Place of Virgil. Sueton. in Caligul. cap. 32. Cicer. de divinat. lib. 2. Perſ. Sat. 6, &c.

POPOCATEPEC, a Mountain in Mexico, twelve Leagues from Tlaſcala, towards the City Mexico. 'Tis very high and round like Mount Gibel in Sicily. 'Tis all the Year cover'd with Snow, and at the top there's a Hole half a League broad, made like a Glaſs Furnace, from whence there ariſes continually a thick Smoak, and ſometimes great Quantities of Flame, which diſcharges Cinders and burning Stone as far as the Town Tlaſcala. * Maty, Diction.

POPOLO, a ſmall City in the Kingdom of Naples, ſituate in the hither Abruzzo upon the River Peſcara, two Leagues from Sulmo. Popolo has the Title of a Duchy, and was built upon the Ruins of the Old Corfinium, a ſmall Town of the Old Peligni. * Maty, Diction.

PORCA, the Capital of a ſmall City of the ſame Name. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of Malabar, and has a good Haven between Calicut and Coulan. * Maty, Diction.

PORDENONE, a fortify'd Town in Friuli, ſix Leagues from the Gulph of Venice, and five from Cenneda to the Eaſt. This Place, which formerly belonged to the Patriarchs of Aquileia, has been a long time in the Poſſeſſion of the Archdukes of Auſtria; but the Venetians having made themſelves Maſters of it ſeveral times, Charles V. yielded it up to that Republick A. D. 1529. However, the Emperor of Germany ſtill puts among the reſt of his Titles that of Lord of Pordenone or Portenan. * Maty, Diction.

PORENTRU, or Brondruſt, the Capital of the Biſhoprick of Baſil. It ſtands upon the River Hallen, upon the Frontiers of Suntgaw, ſeven Leagues from Baſil to the Weſt. Porentru has nothing conſiderable unleſs it be the Cathedral Church and the Caſtle, which latter is the Biſhop of Baſil's Seat, who has the Title of a Prince of the Empire. * Maty, Diction.

POROS, an Iſland in the Archipelago within the Gulph of Ægina upon the Coaſt of Morea, over againſt the Town Saronia. This Iſland is not above ſix Leagues in Circumference, but is very well improv'd. Some Geographers take it for the Old Calauria, whither Demoſthenes retir'd and poiſoned himſelf, for fear of being proſecuted by Antipater. However, others make Calauria the ſame with the modern Sidra. * Maty, Diction.

PORQUEROLLES, anciently call'd Prote, a ſmall Iſland in the Mediterranean. It lies near the Coaſt of Provence to the Weſt of the Iſland Portcroſs, to the South of the Town Hiéres; 'tis but four Miles in Length and one in Breadth, and is fortify'd with a Caſtle and three Towers. * Maty, Diction.

PORT DE ST. MARY, formerly Mneſthei Portus, Gaditanus Portus, a ſmall Town with a large Haven, very full of Buſineſs. It ſtands in Andaluſia at the Mouth of the Guadalete in the Gulph of Cadiz, three Leagues from the Town Cadiz, and at the Diſtance from Xeres de la Frontera, and from St. Lucar de Barrameda. * Maty, Diction.

* POSSIDIUS, Biſhop of Calama, a Diſciple of St. Auſtin's, came from the Monaſtery founded by this Father to the See of Calama A. D. 397, where he ſettled a Monaſtery like that at Hippo. He endeavour'd to break the Meetings which the Pagans and Hereticks made in the Dioceſs, contrary to the Emperors Edicts; but the Mob gathering together upon a Holiday, which they kept on the firſt of June, ſet fire to his Church, ſcatter'd the Clergy, and made Poſſidius fly for it, and take Shelter at Hippo; however, thoſe who had been guilty of this Fray, repenting what they had done, were the firſt who intreated his Return. Poſſidius was one of the chief at the Conference at Carthage. The Irruption of the Vandals upon Africk A. D. 428, forced Poſſidius to quit Calama and retire to Hippo, where he was preſent at St. Auſtin's Death A. D. 430, immediately after whoſe Deceaſe the Town was taken by Storm by the Vandals. We have nothing farther certain concerning Poſſidius, excepting that he wrote St. Auſtin's Life, to which he ſubjoin'd a Catalogue of that Father's Works. * Auguſt. Epiſt. 91. & 105. lib. 3. contra Creſcon. cap. 46. Vide Vit. Auguſtini per Poſſidium. Ruinart. Hiſt. Vandalorum. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

POSTDAM, Potztein, a Town where the Elector of Brandenbourgh has a Palace. It ſtands in the middle March upon the River Havel, between Berling and Brandenbourgh, five Leagues from the firſt, and ſix from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

POSTHUMIUS (Lucius,) Conſul after the Battel at Cannæ, marching into Gaul with an Army, was routed by the Boii, and ſlain in the Battel. Theſe Barbarians, cut off his Head and made a Cup of his Skull, lodged it in the Temple and drank in it on Holidays. * Livy lib. 22.

POSTHUMIUS (Spurius,) Poſthumius and Titus Veturius both Conſuls, commanding in the War againſt the Samnites, miſmanaged ſo far as to have their Army encloſed within the Furcæ Caudinæ and were forced to comply with infamous Articles, to diſengage themſelves. One of which was that their Troops ſhould march out of this Ambuſcade, under a Gallows. Poſthumius coming back to Rome, propoſed in the Senate that himſelf and his Collegue ſhould be ſent back, to recover the Honour of the Republick, and diſengage them from conſenting to the ſcandalous Treaty made by theſe Conſuls: His Advice was followed and he was carry'd back to the Samnites, but they refuſed to receive him. * Livy, Florus.

POSTPOLITE. The Ruſſian Poſtpolite being frequently mentioned in Hiſtory and publick Papers, it may not be improper to make an Article upon it. The Word Rech-Poſtpolite in Poliſh ſignifies the ſame with Res-publica in Latin. It comprehends all the Poliſh Nobility and Gentry; for 'tis this Body which properly makes the Commonwealth of that Country. This Nobleſſe is very numerous, and every ſingle Perſon who belongs to this Diviſion, has the ſame Liberty of voting, and the ſame Authority in their Vote; inſomuch that a ſingle Gentleman, though the meaneſt in the Kingdom, may hinder the Reſolution of a whole Diet, and the Election of a King; for in Poland publick Buſineſs is not carry'd by a Plurality of Votes, but a Univerſality, expreſſed by Nemine contradicente. This great Body of the Nobility and Gentry does not meet frequently, becauſe ſo great a Multitude would draw Confuſion on their Debates. They come together only upon two Occaſions, at the Election of a King, and when there is to be a general Rendezvous of the Horſe. This Rendezvous, call'd the Ruſſian Poſtpolite, does not mean the Poſtpolite of Ruſſia, but the marching or mounted Poſtpolite, for the Poliſh Word which is written Ruachenie, ſignifies marching or Motion * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

POTAMO, Biſhop of Heraclea in Ægypt, was apprehended for being a Chriſtian, in the Perſecution raiſed by Maximin, and loſt an Eye in the Priſon. He aſſiſted at the Council of Nice A. D. 325, and maintain'd the Catholick Faith there againſt the Arians. In the Year of our Lord 335 he came with St. Athanaſius to the Council of Tyre, when the Arian Biſhop Gregory ſeized the See of Alexandria A. D. 342. Potamo was ſo barbarouſly baſtinado'd, that he dy'd of the Uſage ſoon after. * Athanaſ. Apol. & Epiſt. ad Solitar. Ruffin. Hiſt. lib. 2 cap. 4. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 68.

* POTENZA, a City in the Kingdom of Naples. To what is ſaid upon this Place in Morery, may be ſubjoin'd, that it was ruin'd by an Earthquake Sept. 8, 1694.

POTOSKI, Generaliſſimo of the Poliſh Forces, ſerved a great while under the famous General Zolkiezwitz, and ſignaliz'd himſelf frequently againſt the Tartars, who made him Priſoner. Having gain'd his Liberty in 1651, he commanded againſt the Coſſacks, and by his Valour and Conduct put a good End to that War; being broken with Age and full of Honour, he died of an Apoplexy in the Year abovemention'd. * Pierre Chevalier's Hiſtory of the War between the Coſſacks and Poles.

POUCHARD (Julian,) was born in Lower Normandy, near the Town Damfront. He was bred to Learning, and underſtood Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Philoſophy and Divinity: When the French King gave a new Form to the Academy for Inſcriptions and Medals, Pouchard was made one of the Aſſiſtants or Aſſociates; and here he had an Opportunity for ſhewing his great Learning and his excellent Talent at Criticiſm. The Speech he made upon the Subject of the Antiquity of the Ægyptians, and ſeveral other Harangues, gain'd him and the Society he belong'd to great Reputation. He had a Share in the Journal des Savans, and ſuperviſed the Impreſſion. It was not long but ſome Authors complained of him for taking too much Freedom in his Cenſure: But he deſpiſed their hard Language, and us'd to ſay, they are angry becauſe I publiſh their Faults, and truly I am ſo too, becauſe they write ſorry Books. He was commonly thought to be too full of Sincerity; and though he did not want good nature for his Friends he had ſtill a greater Value for Truth: The Regard for Perſons of Diſtinction never byaſs'd his Judgment, nor made him paſs Miſtakes without Notice; neither did Intereſt or Fear ever hinder him from making thoſe Writers deſpicable, who he thought deſerved that Character. In the Year 1704 the French King made him his Greek Profeſſor, and in December 1705 he died, being 49 Years of Age. Beſides ſeveral other Works not mentioned, he wrote an univerſal Hiſtory from the Creation to the Death of Cleopatra. The Occurrences are reported in a correct Style with great Perſpicuity and Exactneſs. The Manners, Diſcipline, and Laws of the reſpective Nations are deſcribed in a very ſerviceable and entertaining Way: And notwithſtanding others have work'd ſucceſsfully on the ſame Subject, yet when this Hiſtory ſhall appear, it will make it's Way with Credit, and give publick Satisfaction. * Journal des Savans de 1706. Tom. 34. Pag. 384. Edit. de Holl.

POUGUET (Francis Aimé,) Prieſt of the Oratory, was born at Montpellier; after having commenc'd Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, he enter'd into the Congregation of the Prieſts of the Oratory. He wrote a Book entitled, Inſtructions by way of Catechiſm, where from Scripture, Tradition, and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, he gives a brief Explanation of the Moral Part of Chriſtianity; of the Sacraments; of the publick Prayers, Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the Church; printed at Paris in the Year 1702; and has ſince been tranſlated into Spaniſh, Italian, and Latin. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

POUPART (Francis,) born at Mans. He was the Son of a Burgher who was related to the beſt Families of that Town. He was bred to Learning and ſtudyed Phyſick. He had a particular Inclination for examining Inſects. He made curious Obſervations upon their Way of living and diſſected them with great Niceneſs. Witneſs his Diſſertation upon the Horſe Leech, which furniſh'd ſeveral new Diſcoveries, and was printed in the Journal des Savans, and generally approved. He was made a Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences in the Year 1699, where he read a Diſcourſe on the Hermaphroditical Inſects. This Academy publiſh'd a Volume of their Obſervations every Year, in which Poupart's Hiſtory of the Formica-Leo, that of the Formica-Pulex and his Diſſections of Muſcles are inſerted. He died October 1708. * Hiſt. de l'Academ. des Scienc. de 1709 Pag. 156. Edit. de Holl.

* POUZOL, or Pozzuolo, (Puteoli,) a Town in Italy with a Biſhop's See eight miles from Naples, which has only ſome poor remains of it's ancient Greatneſs. 'Twas built by the Samians in the fourth Year of the ſixty fourth Olympiad, which was the two hundred thirty ſecond of Rome; it was called at firſt Dicæarchia, and Dicarchia. It belonged ſome time to the Burghers of Cumæ, who made uſe of it for their Haven. The Romans making themſelves Maſter of it in the five hundred thirty eighth Year of Rome, ſent a Colony there, twenty Years afterwards, and gave it the Name of Puteoli, either upon the Score of the great Number of Pits, or becauſe of the offenſive Smell of the Waters. This Town which was one of the beſt Havens the Romans had upon this Sea, was very much ornamented with Temples, Cirques, Theatres, and Amphitheatres, of which there are ſtill ſome remains to be ſeen. A great many rich Citizens of Rome, among the reſt Cicero, built Country Seats in the Neighbourhood of Puteoli, with very fine Baths belonging to them. Auguſtus and Nero ſent new Colonies thither. The Emperor Caligula attempted to make a Bridge of three thouſand nine hundred Paces long, which was to reach from thence to Baiæ. Some of the Piles of this Bridge are ſtill to be ſeen, at the End of which this Emperor carried on the Work, with two rows of Ships faſtned with their Anchors and covered with Planks, upon which which he paſſed over, both on Horſeback, and in his Coach. Suetonius obſerves that this Prince work'd upon this Project to imitate Xerxes, to frighten the Germans and the Britons, by going through ſuch an extraordinary undertaking, and to fulfil the Prophecy of an Aſtrologer who in the Reign of Tiberius had predicted (it may be by way of Jeſt) that Caligula ſhould be Emperor, when he rode over this Gulph. This Town was laid in Aſhes by Alaricus A. D. 410, and by Genſericus 45 Years after. About ninety Years forward Totila ſack'd and ſo diſmantled it that it continued uninhabited ſixteen Years. The Greeks having rebuilt the Place it recovered by Degrees; inſomuch that it was reckoned a good Town when Romaldus II. Duke of Beneventum took it A. D. 715. But now 'twas harraſs'd to utter ruin with fire and Sword. The Hungarians plundered it in the tenth Century. In fine, after a great many Traverſes of Fortune and Revolutions, Alphonſus of Arragon King of Naples took it in the fifteenth Century. This Town has ſuffered very much by Earthquakes, particularly that which happened in the Year 1538. There ſtill is remaining an old Temple built in Auguſtus's Reign, now made a Chriſtian Church and dedicated to St. Proclus. * Leandre Alberti. Bayle Diction. Critiq.

PRAIRIES (the River of the Praires or of the Hurons,) a River in Canana in North America. It falls into the River of St. Laurence on the north Side, over againſt the Iſland Mont-Real. * Maty, Diction.

PRAGUE, a Village in Poland over againſt Warſaw, on the other Side of the Viſtula. There was formerly a Bridge of Boats over this River from Prague to Warſaw, which preſerved the Debris of the Poliſh Army routed by Charles Guſtavus King of Sweden, in the Neighbourhood of this Village, in the Reign of King Caſſimer, but the Bridge is ſince broken. However, it is commonly rebuilt againſt the Diets for chooſing a King, to give Paſſage to the Nobility who then appeared in great Numbers. * Memoires du Beaujeu.

PRASSINA, one of the four Diſtinctions of the Roman Charioteers in the Circus or race Ground; they were ſo called, becauſe thoſe of this Fraternity were dreſſed in light Green. The Charioteers ſays Tertullian are idolatrous in the Colour of their Cloaths. They drove only in two Colours at firſt, viz. white and red. The white was in Honour of the Winter and the Red in Honor of the Sun. The Praſſina or Green was afterward added for a religious regard to the Earth, and the blue was worn to pay a reſpect to the Sky or the Sea. The People who met at this Spectacle in the Circus, ranged themſelves under one of theſe four Factions as they were called, which ſometimes turned to quarrels and came to Blows. This Diverſion laſted till Juſtinian, in whoſe Reign a great fight happened between the blue and the green, in which as Zonaras reports almoſt forty thouſand were killed. This barbarous Piece of Diſtraction, made the Emperor ſuppreſs the Sport. * Tertul. de Spectac. Cap. 9 Antiquit. Græc. & Rom.

PRATOMAGNO, formerly Etruſci Campi, a ſmall Precinct in Tuſcany. It lies to the Eaſt of Florence, and is ſurrounded Weſt South and Eaſt by the River Arno. It is one of the fineſt and beſt inhabited Countries in Italy. * Maty, Diction.

PRECONISATION. When the French King has named any one to be Archbiſhop or Biſhop, his Name is given into the Conſiſtory at Rome by a Cardinal, who delivers the Kings Letter, to diſpoſe the Pope to agree to his Majeſty's Choice, and collate the Perſon nominated. The reſpective Shares which the Pope and the French King have in making a Biſhop is as follows. When the Perſon nominated has his Warrant from the Crown, and is furniſh'd with three Letters, one of which the French King writes to the Pope, another to the Cardinal Protector of France at Rome, and the third to his Majeſty's Embaſſador at the Pope's Court: When this is done, there is a Certificate of the Perſon nominated his Life and Behaviour given into the Pope's Nuntio; or in his abſence to the Biſhop of the Place where the elected was born, or elſe to the Biſhop of the Place where he lives: According to the Laws of France and the Arrêts of the Parliament, this always ought to be done before the Biſhop. He likewiſe makes a Profeſſion of his Faith before the Biſhop, and gives in a Schedule of the Condition of the Biſhoprick to which he is nominated. Theſe three Enquiries being made Acts of Court, he ſends them to Rome with the King's three Letters. They are directed to the Banquier for Diſpatches in the Court, of Rome, who immediately carries the Letters to the Ambaſſador. The Ambaſſador puts an Expediatur on that he ſends to the Pope, and the Banquier gives it the Datary who delivers it to his Holineſs; afterwards the Banquier gives the Cardinal Protector the Letter writ to him by the French King: To execute the Contents of which this Cardinal in the firſt Conſiſtory declares that at the next Conſiſtorial meeting he intends to propoſe ſuch a Perſon for ſuch a See, which Declaration is call'd Preconiſation. When the next Conſiſtory is held, the Cardinal Protector makes a Recital of the Condition and Circumſtances of the Biſhoprick, and of the Qualifications of the Perſon nominated by the King; and the Pope after having taken Advice of the Cardinals, orders the engroſſing nine Bulls for the Perſon preconized. The firſt and the moſt conſiderable is call'd the Bull of Proviſion, and is directed to the Perſon nominated. In this Bull the Pope gives the Perſon preconiz'd to underſtand that he aſſigns him ſuch a Biſhoprick. The ſecond called Munus Conſecrationis is the Pope's Commiſſion deliver'd to one or more Biſhops, to perform the Conſecration. In this Bull the Oath is inſerted which the Biſhop ought to make to the Pope at his Conſecration. The third is directed to the King. The fourth to the Metropolitan; and when theſe Bulls are for an Archbiſhop this fourth is directed to the Biſhops of the Province. The fifth Bull is ſent to the Chapter. The ſixth to the Clergy, The ſeventh to the Laity of the Dioceſs. The eighth to the Tenants belonging to the See, and the ninth is a Bull of Abſolution. * Diction, des Arts.

PREFECT, of Rome, was a Poſt of Juriſdiction directed by Auguſtus. Meſſala Corvinus was the firſt nominated to this Office and reſign'd it in a Week's time according to St. Jerom's Chronicon, pretending when he threw it up, it was incivilis, i. e. his Commiſſion was too large, and ſat too hard on the Liberties of the Roman Burghers. But Tacitus reports that Auguſtus turn'd out Meſſala as underqualify'd, and not equal to his Buſineſs. But let that be as it will, as long as the Roman Empire ſubſiſted, there was always Prefects or Lord chief Juſtices of Rome, whoſe Juriſdiction reached a Mile from the City circumquaque.

PREFECTS of the Provinces. Auguſtus call'd thoſe Prefects with whom he entruſted the Government of the Provinces. The firſt and moſt conſiderable was the Governor of Ægypt, the firſt of which was ſent thither after Anthony and Cleopatra had been defeated and dead; he was call'd Præfectus Auguſtalis, and his Name was Cornelius Gallus. This Emperor likewiſe ſent Governours into other Provinces with the ſame Character and Diſtinction: But then as Dion Caſſius obſerves, he us'd not to chooſe Senators, but only Gentlemen into this Employment. * Antiq, Rom.

PREFECT of the Signature of Juſtice at Rome, is a Cardinal Lawyer who peruſes and ſigns the Petitions; but when the Matter of them is queſtionable, he adviſes with the Officers of the Signet before he ſigns them. * Memoires Hiſtoriques.

PREFECT of the Signature of Grace, is likewiſe a Cardinal and a Lawyer, who in Diſpatches of Grace or Favour has the ſame Authority and does the ſame Buſineſs with the Prefect of Juſtice, only with this difference, that his Diſpatches are commonly made in the Pope's Preſence, which is not neceſſary for the other Officer; and in caſe the Pope is abſent, the Inſtruments muſt be ſign'd in the Preſence of twelve Prelates. There is likewiſe a Prefect for the Pope's Reſcripts or Briefs, who is the Head of the College of the Secretaries, where the Diſpatches are ſeal'd with Wax, ſub annulo Piſcatoris, there are likewiſe ſmall Prefects of the ſmall Dates, of Compoſitions, and Vacancies Per obitum. * Mem. Hiſtoriq.

PRESENZARO, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples; it ſtands in the Terra di Lavoro, near the Volturno, two Leagues from Tiana to the North. It appears, by an old Inſcription in this Town, that 'tis the ſame with the Old Rufræ or Rufæ, a ſmall Town in Campania; thus the Precinct about it is call'd Costa Rufaria. * Maty, Diction.

PRESIDI, L'Etat delli Presidi, in Latin, Status Præsidii. It is a small Territory belonging to Siena in Tuscany: It lies round the Gulph of Telamone, and the principal Towns in it are Orbitella, Telamone, Porto Hercole, Porto S. Stephano. The small Islands of Giglio, of Hercole, of Monte Christi, of Gianuti, and of Pianosa; and were formerly Parcel of the Territory of Siena. When the Duke of Florence made himself Master of the Republick of Siena, the Spaniards seiz'd this little Country; and here they kept Garrisons in a great many Places, which made it called l'Etat delli Presidi. * Maty, Diction.

LE PRESTRE (Sebastian,) Lord of Vauban, &c. Knight of the King's Orders, Great Cross of the Order of St. Lewis, Marshal of France, Commissary General of the Fortifications, Governor of Doway, and of the Citadel of Lisle, was Son of Urban le Prestre Lord of Vauban, by Edmée of Carmignolles. He began to carry Arms in the Year 1650, at 17 Years of Age, and having a particular Talent from his earliest Youth for Fortification, he discover'd himself to Advantage this way at the Sieges of St. Menchaut, Stenay, Landrecies, Conde, Valenciennes, &c. To pass over a great many of his Posts of Command, the French King in 1688 made him Lieutenant General; in which Year he had a Share in taking Phillipsbourg, Manheim and Frankendell under the Dauphin, who gave him his choice of taking what four Pieces of Cannon he lik'd best out of the Arsenals of these three Places. In 1689 he commanded in Flanders upon the Coast, serv'd at the Siege of Mons in 1691, and at that of Namur in 1692, and in 1694 and 5 commanded the Land-Forces and the Marines within the four Dioceses of Lower Bretagne, where he disappointed the Enemy's Project, and gave 'em a smart Repulse when they made a Descent at the Bay of Camaret; insomuch that they were forc'd to reimbark with Precipitation. In 1697 he was at the Siege of Ath under Marshal Catinat, where he was wounded; and in 1706 he commanded a considerable Town in Flanders after the Battel of Ramellies, with which he secured the Towns on the Sea-Coast. He dy'd at Paris March 1707, 74 Years of Age. He carry'd the Art of attacking and defending Towns to a greater Degree of Perfection than had hitherto been known. He fortify'd above three hundred Places, and had the principal Direction of fifty three Sieges; at twenty of which the King commanded in Person, and the Dauphin at three others. That which particularly recommends his Memory is the Regard he always had for the publick Interest, which he visibly preferr'd to his own Fortune; insomuch that he was little the richer for his Posts of Command, but laid out almost all his Pay and other Gratifications in the King's Service. He wrote several Tracts on the Subject of Fortification, which are not yet published. * P. Anselme. Histoires des grands Officiers de la Couronne.

PRETORIUM. The Place where the Pretor administer'd Justice; sometimes his Palace was call'd by this Name, and so was the General's Tent where the Council of War met. At Jerusalem the Governor of Judæa's Palace was call'd the Pretorium. It was built close to the Fort Antonia, and, as Adricomius reports, they went up to it by an Ascent of eighteen Marble Stairs, which as it is said after they were stain'd with the Blood of our Saviour, were carried to Rome, and lodg'd in the Church of St. John Lateran, where they are still to be seen. This Pretorium is properly a Hall where Causes and Prisoners were try'd; and it was here our Saviour was sentenc'd first to be scourged, and then to be crucify'd. The Christians afterward turn'd this Pretorium into a Church, and the Apartments belonging to it into Chapels. At present the House is the Residence of those Bashaws, who are Governors of Jerusalem. * Simon, Diction. de la Bible.

PRETORIANS, were the General's or Emperor's Guards. Scipio Africanus was the first who pick'd a Company of his bravest Men and made them his Guards. The Pretorians, to speak more particularly, were settled and divided into several Bodies by Augustus, who made choice of them for his Guards, and assign'd two Officers to command them, call'd Præfecti Prætorio. There was but one Præfectus Prætorio throughout almost all Tiberius's Reign. The Pretorians Pay was double to that of the rest. So that whereas every Soldier had but twelve Asses or Sols per Diem, the Pretorians had twenty four Sols; these Pretorian Guards making about ten thousand, and divided into nine or ten Cohorts, had a great Stroke in all the Revolutions which happen'd. Those who were quarter'd in the City had no Camp there, and the others were lodg'd in the neighbouring Towns. The Pretorian Guards were utterly suppress'd in the Reign of Constantine the Great. * Dion. Cassius, lib. 53. Tacit. Annal. lib. 1. Aurelius Victor. Zozimus. lib. 2.

PREVOST, was formerly a Lord in France, who administer'd Justice in Person, he did the same Business and had the same Jurisdiction in the Prevôtez, that the Bayliffs and Stewards have now in France within their Bayliwicks and Stewardies. The Prevost de Paris is a Magistrate of this Nature; he presides sometimes at the Châtelet, collects the Votes, and has them declar'd by his Deputies. All Judgments and legal Contracts have the Prévost de Paris his Name at the Head of the Instrument: The meeting of the Noblesse within the Prévote of Paris, their meeting, I say, for the Arriereban is held at his House, and he has the Privilege of marching them to the Army. * Morery de Paris.

PREVOST des Marchands à Paris (the,) is a very considerable Magistrate, and has a Jurisdiction upon that part of Trade which is carried on upon the Water. He has the Privilege to examine and tax the greatest part of Commodities which are deliver'd and sold at the Keys, and gives Order for regulating the publick Ceremonies of the Town. This Magistrate is called the Mayor, where there is no Prevosts des Marchands. * Morery de Paris.

PREVOST des Marechaux, a King's Officer reckon'd belonging to the Body of the Gendarmerie. All these sort of Officers are under the Marshals of France, and have Authority to punish Vagabonds, and to try those who rob upon the high Way, and are prosecuted for wilful Murder. They likewise try Clippers and Coiners. There is about a hundred and fourscore of these Prevost des Marechaux in France: He that belongs to Paris is call'd Prevost de l'Isle. * Morery de Paris.

PREVOST de l'Armée, an Officer who looks after Deserters and Soldiers that misbehave; he likewise settles Provisions in the Army, and has a Lieutenant and a Clerk under him, together with a Company of Archers mounted, and an Executioner. The Prevost of a Regiment of Foot has the same Officers with the other, but then he is attended with only six Archers. * Morery de Paris.

PREVOST general de la Marine, an Officer settled for forming the Process of the Marines, who are guilty of any Crime. By an Ordinance made in the Year 1674, himself and his Lieutenant are assisting in a Council of War, where they give an Account of their Proceedings. There's a Prevost-Marinier in every Ship; he has the Prisoners in his Custody, and 'tis part of his Business to see the Ship is kept clean. * Morery de Paris.

* PRIEST. The Word Priest comes from the Greek πρεσβύτερος, which signifies old; because they commonly made choice of People advanc'd in Years for Direction of religious Matters. The Elders of the Israelitish Tribes who administer'd Justice were call'd Elders or Presbyters. There is frequent mention of these Elders or Presbyters in the Old Testament. The College of seventy settled by Moses consisted of these; and we find in the Gospels and the Acts frequent mention of the Elders or Jewish Priests with Marks of Authority. The Name of Priest, with respect both to Age and Character, passed from the Jewish to the Christian Church, where from the beginning of Christianity those who had the Charge of governing smaller Divisions in religious Matters were called Priests. 'Tis said in the 14th of the Acts, that St. Paul ordained Elders or Priests in every Church; and in the 15th Chapter we read that at Jerusalem, besides Apostles, there were Elders or Priests, who were consulted upon the Question concerning the Observation of the Mosaick Law. St. Paul in his Epistle to Titus recommends the ordaining Elders or Priests in every Town; and St James exhorts the Christians when sick to send for the Elders or Prieſts of the Church, that they may anoint them with Oil and pray for them. St. Paul, upon his coming to Miletus, ſent to Epheſus for the Elders or Prieſts of that Church, and cautioned 'em to be vigilant and careful in their Functions, acquainting them withal that the Holy Ghoſt had made them Directors in the Church of God. St. Peter exhorts the Elders or Prieſts, and ſtyles himſelf a Fellow-Presbyter. St. John likewiſe calls himſelf Elder or Prieſt. And notwithſtanding in the beginning of Chriſtianity a Prieſt was ſometimes called a Biſhop, yet their Character and Authority were plainly different. The chief Buſineſs of the Prieſt has always been to conſecrate the Bread and Wine, to offer the Euchariſtick Sacrifice, to baptize, to impoſe Penance and grant Abſolution, to inſtruct the People, to officiate in the publick Service, and to govern in the Church with Subordination to the Biſhop. And here we are to take notice, that giving Orders and Confirmation were peculiarly reſerved to the Biſhop: In ſhort, according to the Diſcipline of the ancient Church the Prieſts were obliged to obey the Biſhop, and act by his Advice in every thing. Prieſts have been allowed to ordain Subdeacons, and other inferior Clerks: Formerly no Prieſt was ordain'd without a Title, or Cure wherein he was to officiate. The Prieſts were anciently diſtinguiſh'd into thoſe who belong'd to the Cathedral, or had Churches in the Town where it ſtood; and rural Prieſts who took Care of the Churches in the Country. Formerly a Prieſt was not ordain'd under thirty Years of Age, but at preſent that Term is ſhorten'd. * Morinus, de Ordinat. Thomaſſin, diſcipl. de l'Egliſe.

The Buſineſs of the Heathen Prieſts was to offer Sacrifices. At Rome they were ſettled by Numa Pompilius and called Sacerdotes. There were two Sorts of them one for the Gods in general, in Latin called Pontifices. Of theſe there were four at firſt, choſen out of the Patricians or Nobility. Afterwards in the Year of Rome 454. there were four others deſcended from the Commonalty added to the former. And when Sylla was Dictator, he encreaſed the Number to ſeven more: The other Diviſion of the Prieſts belonged to particular pretended Deities; for Inſtance the Luperci were for their God Pan; the Sodales Titii belonged to the Gods of the Sabines; the Salii were Mars's Prieſts; the Veſtal Virgins belonged to the Goddeſs Veſta; the Flamines performed the Worſhip aſſigned for Jupiter, Mars or Quirinus; the Galli belonged to Cybele the Mother of the Gods. There were likewiſe certain Magiſtrates or Officers called Epulones, who were a Sort of Major-Domo's who preſided at the Entertainments after the Sacrifices were over: They had likewiſe Rex Sacrorum who governed their religious Ceremonies: To theſe we may add the Fratres Arvales, who had the Charge of the Sacrifices offered for the Encreaſe of the Fruits of the Earth: And the Curiones who were the Prieſts that took care of the Sacrifices in each Curia or Ward. The Prieſts wore Crowns of different Materials. Apollo's Prieſts had Laurel, and Hercules's Poplar Leaves. Some had Crowns of Myrtle, others of Ivy and others of Oak Leaves. The High-Prieſt of Rome was not obliged to give an Account of his Conduct either to the Senate or People, and was the only Perſon who had the Privilege of coming in a Horſe-Litter or Chair to the Capitol: He was at the Head of Religion, and Judge in the laſt Reſort of their holy Ceremonies: He admitted the Veſtal Virgins, and had Juriſdiction over all the ſacrificing Prieſts, with their Temples and Altars: It was likewiſe his Buſineſs to digeſt into Annals all remarkable Occurrences: Numa Pompilius was the firſt Pontifex maximus, or High-Prieſt. After this Prince the Election of the High-Prieſt belonged to the College or Company of Prieſts. Some time forward Cneius Domitius Tribune of the People, transfer'd this right to the Commons, who notwithſtanding had always a Share in this Election, if what Tully reports in his Diſcourſe upon the Agrarian Law is rightly repreſented: The Conſecration of the High-Prieſt was performed with extraordinary Ceremonies. He was obliged to go down into a Ditch with his pontifical Robes; this Ditch was afterwards covered with Planks full of Holes, upon which the Victims being ſacrificed the Blood ran threw the Holes upon the High-Prieſt: And now he rubs his Face, his Mouth and his Tongue with the Blood. The High-Prieſt's Quality was very honourable. When he went abroad a Lictor or Serjeant marched before him, and he was carried in an Ivory Chair or a Sella curulis, and his Gate was ornamented with Laurel Trees. Julius Cæſar, and after him the other Emperors were High-Prieſts, and the ſame Diſtinction went among the Imperial Titles, when the Emperors were Chriſtians. The Prieſts of Mars were ſo much regarded, that none but thoſe deſcended from a Patrician Family, were capable of that Function. The Prieſts at Tyre had precedency next the King, and were dreſſed in Purple. Amongſt the Phœnicians the Prieſts that belonged to the Sun, wore a long Robe with Gold and Purple, and had a Gold Crown on their Head ſet with precious Stones. The Ægyptian Kings were choſen Prieſts, and all their Philoſophers had that Diſtinction. Jupiter's Prieſt, called Flamen Dialis at Rome, had ſo peculiar a privilege that his Word bore the force of an Oath. His Preſence was a Sort of Sanctuary; inſomuch that a Criminal who took Shelter in his Houſe could not be ſeized. The Prieſthood amongſt the Indians is hereditary, as it was formerly amongſt the Jews, ſo that the Son of a Bramin is a Prieſt, and marries into a Family of the ſame Condition. * Antiquit. Græc. & Rom.

PRIMACUS, a Slave in the Iſland of Chio, ran away upon the Mountains, and put himſelf at the Head of all the Fugitives, who came thither as he did for Shelter. The Inhabitants of the Iſland ſent Troops againſt 'em, but after ſeveral Skirmiſhes they were forced to come to Articles with Primacus, to whom they promiſed proviſions at a Price agreed. And on the other ſide, this Commander in Chief, engaged on his part, not to receive any more Slaves, till the Reaſon of their running away was to be examined and proved defenſible. After this Treaty, but few Slaves came over to him, for his Diſcipline was very exact, inſomuch that the leaſt Faults were ſeverely puniſhed. Afterwards the Inhabitants of Chio ſet a Price upon his Head, and promiſed a large Sum to any one that would bring it. Primacus being now very old, and weary with ſeeing himſelf perpetually expoſed to the utmoſt Danger, prevailed with a young Man he had a great Affection for, to cut off his Head, and get the reward promiſed. The Inhabitants of Chio, ſtruck with this inſtance of Generoſity, erected a Statue for Primacus, dubbed him a Hero, and ſacrificed to him, as their Slaves did likewiſe. * Athenæus, lib. 6. cap. 7. Ex Nymphodor.

PRIMATE. A Title formerly given to all the Metropolitans in the Weſt. In the following Ages a Primate was diſtinguiſhed from a Metropolitan, and that Title was given to certain Sees, where the Biſhop claimed a Juriſdicton over the Metropolitans In the Eaſt theſe Biſhops were called Patriarchs or Exarchs; and in the Weſt they took the Name of Primates. Formerly in the Weſt all the Metropolitans were equal, excepting the Biſhop of Carthage who was Primate of all Africk. In latter Ages the Metropolitans of ſome conſiderable Cities aſſumed the Quality of Primate, or gained it by requeſt from the See of Rome. The Popes granted this Privilege firſt to the Biſhops of Theſſalonica. In France the Biſhop of Arles, was the firſt who had a grant of this Favour from Rome. The Archbiſhop of Rheims received the ſame Title from the Popes Zozimus and Adrian I. the Archbiſhop of Sens had it of John VIII. and the Archbiſhop of Bourges ſtyles himſelf Primate of Aquitain. The Primacy of the Archbiſhop of Lyons was either firſt granted or confirm'd by Gregory VII. over the Provinces of Lyons, Sens, Tours, and Rouen. In Spain the Archbiſhops of Seville, Tarragon, and Toledo, take the ſame Title. In Germany the Archbiſhop of Mentz goes by the ſame Diſtinction, and ſo does the Archbiſhop of Canterbury in England. A Primate's Privilege at preſent is to judge of Appeals brought into his Court from the Metropolitan's, which Appeals he may try either by himſelf or his Official. * Thomaſſin de la Diſciplin. de l'Egliſe. Du Pin. De Antiquâ Eccleſ. Diſcipl. Diſſert. Hiſtor.

* PRISCILLIAN, for Maximinus in Morery Vol. II. read Maximus.

PRIVAS, a ſmall Town in France in Vivarez, ſix Leagues from Vivarez to the North. Privas was formerly fortify'd. But Lewis XIII. demoliſhed the Works Works after he had taken the Town from the French Proteſtants A. D. 1629. * Maty, Diction.

PRIULI (Francis,) a Venetian, and as 'tis ſaid very skilful in Aſtrology, if one may be skilful in an Art, which has no Principles or ſolid Ground to go upon. However, 'tis reported that he calculated Pope Leo X's Nativity, and acquainted him with the moſt ſecret Paſſages of his Life, and which no Body knew but himſelf, that he foretold him what would happen in the remaining Part of his Life, and that the Event juſtifyed all his Predictions to a Tittle. This ſtrange reach into Futurity, made the Pope frequently ſay, that Aſtrology which was dead before, came to Life again in Priuli. But after all this extraordinary Proſpect into the Stars, it ſeems Priuli had a very unfortunate End. * Pierius Valerianus, de Infelicitate Literat. Pag. 88.

PROBATICA; the Name of a Pond or Canal at Jeruſalem, or at leaſt of the Gate near it. It is ſuppoſed to be the Pond where the Sheep were waſhed for Sacrifices, or it may be into which the Blood of the Sacrifices was drained. It is called Bethesda in Hebrew, that is to ſay the Houſe of Benevolence and Mercy; it had five Porticos or Galleries. Some believe it the ſame with Solomon's Canal mentioned by Joſephus, de Bell. Judaic. cap. 5, and that the Water which filled it came from the Spring of Siloam. St. John's Goſpel, informs us that the Waters of this Pool had a miraculous Quality, and that an Angel came down into it at certain times and diſturbed the Water, and that the firſt Perſon who ſtept in after this Ruffle was cured of whatever Diſeaſe he had. Some Perſons are of Opinion that this Miracle ceaſed after our Saviour's Crucifixion, becauſe neither Joſephus nor Philo make mention of it. * Joh. Cap. 5. Hammond in loc. Dominic. macer. in Hierolex.

PROCESSION, an Eccleſiaſtical Ceremony or publick appearance where the Clergy and People go to ſome Church ſinging Litanies and other Prayers as they move along. The old Romans when the Empire was diſtreſſed or after ſome Victory, ordered Proceſſions for ſeveral Days together to be made to the Temples, to beg their Gods Aſſiſtance, or to return them thanks: The Jews likewiſe went in Companies to the Temple to ſay their Prayers; and ſo did the Primitive Chriſtians to the Martyrs Tombs. But upon theſe Occaſions we don't find the Prieſts went foremoſt and directed the Proceſſions. The firſt Proceſſions with the Clergy mentioned in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, are thoſe ſet on Foot at Conſtantinople by St. Chryſoſtom, to oppoſe the reſembling Appearance of the Arians. Socrates reports that the Arians of Conſtantinople being forced to hold their Meetings without the Town, went thither Night and Morning ſinging Anthems. In which they had generally ſomething of their own Heterodoxys. St. Chryſoſtom to prevent their perverting the Catholicks, ſet up Counterproceſſions: And at theſe they ſang Prayers in the Night, and carry'd Croſſes with Flambeaus upon them. From this Period the Cuſtom of Proceſſions was introduced among the Greeks, and afterward among the Latins: But they have ſubſiſted longer, and have been more frequently uſed in the weſtern Church, than in the eaſtern. The Cuſtom of the Church of Rome from the time of Gregory the Great, has been for the Clergy and People to go in Proceſſion from one Church to another, ſinging Prayers and Litanies; and when they came to the Church deſigned, they ſang the Service of the Day and the Maſs, and this is that which they called the Station. The Number of Proceſſions has encreaſed from time to time; they make them ſometimes in Towns and in the Country when any publick Occaſion calls for it: And here the Subject of their Devotions is to beg God's Mercy for Peace, Plenty and other temporal Conveniences, and to deliver them from Plague, Famine and other Calamities, which they either feel or fear. The Litanies or publick Prayers perform'd on St. Mark's Day, and thoſe in Rogation Week begun by Mamertus Biſhop of Vienne, are of this kind. In Jubilees and publick Devotions, there are extraordinary Proceſſions. The Proceſſion upon Palm Sunday is very much diſtinguiſhed in ſome Churches. In fine, after Berengarius had declared againſt Tranſubſtantiation, and the Worſhiping the Euchariſt; it was made a Piece of Religion in the Church of Rome, to carry the conſecrated Elements triumphantly in Proceſſion. This Cuſtom began in the fourteenth Century, and was carried to a higher Solemnity after the Lutherans and Calviniſts had openly oppoſed the Church of Rome in this Matter. * Socrat. Hiſt. Eccleſ. Lib. 6. Cap. 8 &c.

PROCESSION (the Leaguers.) This was a very extraordinary Appearance both as to the Solemnity and the Occaſion. It was formed at Paris A. D. 1590 and came up to the Number of thirteen hundred Monks and Clergy. Roſe Biſhop of Senlis and the Prior of the Carthuſians, led them on like Captains, and each of them carried a Croſs in their left Hand and a Halbert in their right, to repreſent the Maccabees, who headed God's People. After theſe Leaders the reſt of them marched four in Front, that is all the Monks of the mendicant Orders, even the Capuchines, the Minims and the Feuillans; but the Monks who had Eſtates either in Town or Country, and were afraid the Premiſſes might be ruffled, kept out of the way and made no Part of the Proceſſion; and amongſt theſe, we are to reckon the Monks of St. Germain des Prez, of St. Victor, of St. Geneviéve, and the Celeſtines. All the Proceſſioners had their Gowns tuck'd up at their Girdle, their Cowles let fall upon their Shoulders, a Helmet upon their Head, a Corſelet or Coat of Mail for Back and Breaſt, and beſides this, ſome of them had Bucklers and Daggers, ſome Partizans, ſome Croſs Bows, and others ruſty Arms very unfit either for Charging, or Defence. The old Monks march'd in the firſt ranks, counterfeiting the Air and Motion of Captains as well as they could. The younger Sort followed, ſhooting every Minute with their Croſs Bows to ſhew their Skill and Courage. One Hamilton, Curé of St. Come, a Scotchman, was one of their Serjeants; all this Body marching through the Streets of Paris with an affected Gravity, halted now and then, and ſung Anthems, with a diſcharge of their Muſquets. The Pope's Legate attended with Panigarolo, Cardinal Bellarmin, and ſome other Italians, countenanced this ridiculous and profane Solemnity by being at it. But it happened that one of his Chaplains was killed in the Boot of his Coach by one of theſe awkward Harquebuſſers who let fly at random: This Accident was very near making a great Diſorder. Upon Aſcenſion Day the ſame Year there was another Proceſſion, (which carry'd a more ſolemn Face) at the Convent of the Auguſtinians; and in this Parade there was the Archbiſhop of Lyons, the Biſhops of Rennes, of Senlis, and Frejus, all the Prelates in the Legate's Train, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, he that had been the Queen of Scot's Ambaſſador, and had then the Title of Archbiſhop of Glaſcow, the Preſident of Ferrara, the Dukes of Nemours and Aumale, with other Princes and military Chiefs, to which we may add the Bench of the Sovereign Courts of Juſtice, together with the Colonels and Captains of the City Militia. After Maſs was ſolemnly ſung, they all ſwore upon the Goſpels never to admit an Heretick for their King, and to diſcover every contradicting Concert or Practice to the Holy Union. * Mezeray Hiſtory of France under Henry IV.

PORCUPIA, an old Town in Upper Moeſia. It ſtands in Servia upon the River Topliza, ſix Leagues from Cratovo to the Weſt, and fourteen from Novibazar to the South. * Maty, Diction.

PRODICUS, a Heretick of the ſecond Century, Head of the Sect of the Adamites, held the Heterodoxies of the Carpocratians. He believ'd human Souls were ſent into Bodies to live at large: And that this Licentiouſneſs was an Inſtance of Homage due to the Angels who created the World. In Conſequence of this Principle he allow'd all ſort of Debauchery, and held that the moſt abominable Impurities were religious Myſtery and Initiation. His Followers bragged they had ſome very ſcarce unpubliſh'd Books of Zoroaſtres, and maintain'd that there was no Neceſſity to pray to God for Aſſiſtance, nor to profeſs the Truth ſo far, as to expoſe themſelves to Martyrdom. * Clemens Alexand. Stromat. lib. 1. Tertull. in Scorpiac. Theodoret. Hæretic. Fabul. lib. 1. cap. 6. lib. 5. cap. 10, 20, & 27.

* PROMETHEUS, Mythology reports that Minerva aſſiſted him in making Men, and 'tis ſaid that it was ſhe that carry'd him up to the Sky, where he lighted a piece of Wood at a burning Wheel of the Sun,

Sun, with which he kindled the Man he had made into Life: The Poets likewiſe tell us that he made a Woman call'd Pandora, to whom Jupiter, to revenge himſelf upon Prometheus, gave a Box where all Misfortunes and Diſeaſes incident to Mankind were ſtuffed. Pandora carry'd it to Prometheus who deſpiſed Jupiter's Preſent, and would have nothing to do with it. Upon this ſhe gave it his Brother Epimetheus, who had no ſooner open'd the Box, but all ſorts of Miſchiefs and Diſtempers flew out and ſeized upon Mortals; Epimetheus would gladly have ſhut it afterwards, but his Underſtanding came too late, for the Venom was flown and diſperſed, and nothing but a little Hope lay at the bottom. How Prometheus was puniſh'd by Jupiter for his Preſumption is related in Morery Vol. II. only it is not ſaid that his Chains were knocked off by Hercules. Thoſe who made it their Buſineſs to draw Hiſtory and Fact from obſcure Fables, tell us that Prometheus obſerv'd the Courſe of the Stars in Scythia, and that he ſtudy'd Aſtronomy with ſo great Application, that he was Night and Day gazing on the Mountain Caucaſus, as if he had been pinned down to it: But Hiſtorians inform us of ſomething more certain which gave Occaſion to the Fable. Diodorus Siculus reports that Prometheus govern'd part of Ægypt, in the Reign of Oſiris. That the Nile overflowing all the Country within Prometheus's Government, if Hercules had not ſtopped the Inundation by raiſing Dams, all had been drowned. The Nile, formerly call'd the Ocean, after this Inundation was call'd the Eagle. Prometheus being vexed to ſee his Country thus overflowed, gave Occaſion to the Poets to feign that his Heart was fed on by an Eagle, till Hercules reſcu'd him. The ſame Hiſtorian elſewhere tells us, that Prometheus's ſtealing Fire from Heaven, as the Poets will have it, means no more than that he invented Tools to make Fire with. Lucian gives a pretty probable Account why Prometheus is ſaid to make a Man; and that is, that he was the firſt that made human Figures of Earth; and that by Minerva's Help he worked with ſo much Art and Niceneſs, that this earthen Ware ſeem'd to have Life and Motion. Appian relates in his Hiſtory of the Mithridatick War, that Pompey when in Pontus had a Mind to ſee Mount Caucaſus where they ſaid Prometheus was chain'd down. Arrian reports that the Macedonians who conquer'd Aſia under Alexander the Great, going into a Cave in the Country of Parapamiſus, pretended that the Country People in the Neighbourhood told him that this was the place where Prometheus was chained, and that Hercules ſhot the Eagle that fed upon his Heart, and ſo gave him his Liberty: But this looks like a Story deviſed to flatter Alexander, and make People believe he had carried his Conqueſt over the Mountain Caucaſus. But ſince it is ſaid Prometheus brought the Worſhip of the twelve Gods into Greece it is moſt probable he was of an Ægyptian Original, and that the Hiſtory or Fable relating to him came firſt into Scythia, and from thence to Pontus and Greece. * Ovid. Metam. lib. 1. Horat. Heſiod. Cicero, Lactantius, &c.

PRONAPIDES, according to Diodorus Siculus, or Proſnotides according to Tatian, or Protænides as Euſebius will have him, is reckon'd by Tatian among thoſe Authors who lived before Homer, and Diodorus Siculus makes him this Poet's Maſter. He adds that he was a celebrated Poet, who in imitation of Orpheus and Linus, made uſe of the Pelaſgian Letters; and Theodoſius the Grammarian, obſerves that he began the Writing from the left Hand to the right, whereas before his time the Græcians wrote from Top to Bottom, or elſe when they had got to the End of a Line from the left to the right, they began another from the right to the left. This Pronapides is ſaid to have written a Book in Verſe entitled the firſt World, or the Formation of the World. * Diodor. Sicul. lib. 3. Du Pin, Biblioth. des Hiſt. Prof.

* PROPERTIUS (Sextus Aurelius,) a Latin Poet. As to ſome part of this Character, he was much a better Poet than a Man. By his Elegies which are come down to us, it is ſufficiently plain that he took little Care to guard his Virtue, and reſtrain his Paſſions. That which is particularly valuable in Propertius, is his working up his Poems with an Intermixture of Fables, which is reckoned as it were the Soul of Poetry; and thus he follow'd the Advice which the famous Corinna gave Pindar; and in this reſpect Propertius had the advantage of Tibullus, becauſe Fable interwoven with Hiſtory, helps to ſwell and keep the Elegy from flagging: Propertius's Diction is very bright and correct.

* PROPHETS, Perſons inſpired by God. In the early times the Prophets were called Roé, i. e. Seers, as we may obſerve in the firſt Book of Samuel chap. 9. v. 9. This Word Seer ſignifies a Perſon ſupernaturally enlightned, who knows things both paſt and future concealed from other Men. It is certain that amongſt the Hebrews, the Name of Prophet was given to all thoſe, who by the Aſſiſtance of Inſpiration reported thoſe things which God had revealed to them. Thus Abraham, Moſes, Joſhua, Samuel, Nathan, Elijah, Eliſha, and ſeveral others are called Prophets, and ſo ſometimes are the Muſicians belonging to the Temple. It is in this Senſe that Joſephus calls thoſe Prophets, who wrote the Canon of the Old Teſtament, though great part of their Writings is only Hiſtory and Matter of Fact: Our bleſſed Saviour gives the general Appellation of Prophets to all thoſe who undertook to inſtruct the People by Commiſſion from God Almighty: And with this reference he bids his Diſciples to take heed of falſe Prophets. In this Senſe St. John Baptiſt is called a Prophet; and in the primitive Church there were ſeveral who had a Claim to this Diſtinction. God made uſe of different Ways to diſcover his Pleaſure to the Prophets, either immediately by himſelf, or by the intervention of Angels. Immediate Revelation may be divided into external and internal. External is when God communicated himſelf to the Prophet with an audible Voice, or made him underſtand his Will, by ſome Signs or Symbols. Internal Revelation is when God communicates his Pleaſure (either with reſpect to his Commands or the Diſcovery of future Events) I ſay, when the ſupernatural Aſſiſtance is communicated in Dreams or extatick Tranſports, or elſe when the Perſon is awake and perfectly Maſter of his own Mind. There are likewiſe ſeveral ways Prophets have made uſe of to acquaint the People with the Contents of their Commiſſion. The firſt and moſt cuſtomary Method is to report by Word of Mouth what God had revealed to them; the ſecond is, by by acquainting People with what was to happen by Signs and Actions which had ſome reſemblance with what was predicted. The third is, by Writings dictated by the Holy Ghoſt; or at leaſt if not wholly ſupernaturally ſuggeſted, yet at leaſt directed and over ruled by the Spirit of God. There was a continued Succeſſion of Prophets amongſt tne Jews from Moſes to Eſdras; there was likewiſe falſe Prophets in the neighbouring Nations, witneſs Balaam, not to mention ſuch impoſtorous Pretenders amongſt the Iſraelites themſelves. The Ægyptians likewiſe had Prophets who were Prieſts and wrote their Hiſtories. Clemens Alexandrinus a very learned Author, tells us that Thales and Pythagoras had ſome Converſation with the Ægyptian Prophets. We have likewiſe a Letter of Porphyry's written to Anebo an Ægyptian, whom he ſtyles a Prophet: And thoſe who wrote the Annals of the Ægyptian Nation, are likewiſe called Prophets by Euſebius, particularly in his Præparatio Evangelica. The Heathen Græcians likewiſe had their Prophets and Propheteſſes, and the Romans had a grat deal of Faith in the Sybils Prophecies and the Predictions of their Augurs. Almoſt all Nations were furniſhed with a Sort of People who pretended to prognoſticate. And ſince Chriſtianity, the Spirit of Prophecy ſubſiſted till the third Century; the Montaniſts had ſeveral falſe Prophets and Propheteſſes, but what they delivered was rejected by the Church. The modern Rabbies have ſtrangely refined upon the different Degrees of Prophecy: Maimonides in his More Nevokim, mounts the Diſtinction to eleven, and diſcourſes upon all theſe Degrees with great Metaphyſical Subtilty. But his Reaſons being drawn only from Philoſophy without any Foundation from Scripture, there is no Occaſion to recite them. 'Tis probable the Rabbins rely on theſe imaginary Principles, when they ſtrike Daniel out of the liſt of the Prophets. For in their Bibles they do not allow him this Quality. However, Joſephus, and the Jews contemporary with him, make no Scruple to give Daniel this Title; and even the Rabbins, who who refuſe him this Diſtinction don't deny but that there are Prophecies in his Books. * Clemens Alexand. Stromat. lib. 1. P. Simon, Hiſt. Crit. de l'Ancien. Teſtament. Du Pin Diſſert. Preliminaires ſur la Bible.

PROPHETS, a Sect of Chriſtians in Holland, called Propheſyers. They meet from all Parts of the Province at Warmont near Leyden the firſt Sunday in every Month, and ſpend the Day in reading the ſcriptures, every one propoſing their Difficulties, and uſing the Liberty of propheſying, or rather expounding upon the Text; as to other Matters, they pretend not to differ from the Remonſtrants, unleſs in one Point relating to War, which they condemn without Exception. Moſt of them ſtudy Greek and Hebrew. * Sorberiana.

* PROSA or PRORSA, a Heathen Goddeſs. Certain Hymns are likewiſe called Proſa, in the latter Centuries: They conſiſt of Verſe without regular Feet but tagg'd with Rhimes, and are ſung after the Gradual, from whence they are called Sequences. There are four of them chiefly taken notice of; The Veni Sancte Spiritus for Whitſontide, ſuppoſed to be made by Robert, King of France in the eleventh Century; the Lauda Sion, done by Thomas Aquinas, for the Feſtival of Corpus Chriſti or the Holy Sacrament; the Victimæ Paſcalis laudes, made by an unknown Author for Eaſter; and the Dies iræ, Dies illa, reckoned by ſome to Pope Gregory the Great, and by others to St. Bernard, but the true Author is Humbert General of the Dominicans; and it was compoſed for the Service ſaid for the Dead. In Imitation of theſe Proſa's a great many others have been drawn up for Feſtivals kept at particular Places, which are all expunged in the late Reformations of the Breviaries and Miſſals.

PROSLAVIZA, Chinſtange, formerly called Iſtropolis, Iſtros, Iſtria a Town of Bulgaria. It lies in the Tartars Country upon a Southern Arm of the Danube two Leagues from the Black Sea, and about nine from Temiſwar to the North. * Maty, Diction.

* PROTAGORAS, a Philoſopher of Abdera, Son of Artemon a wealthy Perſon of Thrace, who entertained Xerxes at his Houſe and made him large Preſents, which gave Occaſion to the Opinion that Protagoras was inſtructed by the Magi. But how this Story of the large Circumſtances of his Family, can agree with the other Relation of his being a Porter, is more than can be eaſily reconciled. But let this be as it will; Democritus inſtructed him in the Art of putting Colours upon things, and chopping Logick to a great Degree. He taught at Athens, ſome ſay in Euripides's Houſe, and others in the Lyceum. It is reported of him that one Evatlus, a young Man of an Eſtate, coming to be one of his Scholars agreed with him for a large Sum, of which he had half in Hand, with a promiſe to pay the other Moyety as ſoon as he carried the firſt Cauſe at the Bar. And after having been a great while in Protagoras's School, without ſo much as offering to try his Talent in pleading, his Maſter commenced an Action againſt him, for the half of the Money unpaid: And when they came to be heard in the Court, and Evatlus defending himſelf by alledging that as yet he had gained never a Cauſe; Protagoras replied upon him with this Dilemma; if I carry my Cauſe you muſt pay me by an award from the Court; but if you caſt me, I muſt have the Money by your own Agreement. Evatlus who it ſeems had been very well taught, rejoined with this Dilemma, if the Verdict paſſes for me, I am diſcharged by Authority of Law; but in Caſe I loſe the Cauſe, I owe you nothing by your own Articles. Theſe Dilemma's perplexed the Court to that Degree that they left the Matter undecided. In ſhort, Protagoras was more a Sophiſt than a Philoſopher, and worked his Brain to perplex an Argument, and ſurpriſe the underſtanding of the Judges, rather than to abide by Truth and ſolid Reaſoning. It ſeems he had the confidence to poſt up a Paper, that he would teach any Body to baffle Juſtice and carry a foul Cauſe. Plato has written a Dialogue againſt him; and to conclude with him, one of his Books were burnt for Scepticiſm, for he was openly a Free Thinker. * Diogen. Laert. lib. 9. Aulus Gellius lib. 5. Athenæus. Menagius in Nat. in Diogen. Laert.

PROVERBS, are common Sentences which hold out ſome ſignificant Truth under a figurative Expreſſion. the Old Proverbs were taken, either from the Oracles, from the Maxims of ſome eminently wiſe Men; from Hiſtory, from Mythology, or from ſome comick Poet. Ariſtotle ſet a great Value upon theſe ſort of Proverbs, and the Ancients us'd them for ſerviceable Purpoſes. They were collected from a Body of Experiments, and the reſult of long Obſervation: And thus like Eſſences and Spirits, were drawn off from a great deal of good Matter, and reckoned the Wiſdom of a Nation. * Eraſmus in Præfat. ad Adag. Voſcius de Philologia.

PROVERBS, the Name of one of the Books of the Old Teſtament written by Solomon King of Iſrael. It is called Miſle in Hebrew, or as St. Jerom pronounceth it Maſaloth. A Term which ſignifies a Parable or an Allegory, and which may extend to all ſorts of figurative Expreſſions. The Greeks have tranſlated it Parables, and the Latins Proverbs, but which in Engliſh may rather be termed Sentences or Maxims. The Ancients called this Book the Wiſdom of Solomon, and frequently cite it under this Name, as Euſebius obſerves. (Eccleſ. Hiſt. lib. 4. cap. 15.) This Book contains a great many Inſtructions and moral Maxims for the conduct of Life. Neither do they all turn upon the Worſhip of God, or the Innocence and Regularity of Behaviour; no; beſides Precepts of this Kind, there are Rules laid down for humane Prudence with Reſpect to Politicks and Oeconomy. Some of them are wrapt up in Emblem and others hold forth a plain and open Meaning; but then they are all written in a noble, ſublime, and Poetical Manner. The nine firſt Chapters, are ſpent in an Exhortation to the Study of Wiſdom. The reſt of the Book conſiſts of moral Sentences upon different Subjects, thrown in without much Order or Connexion.

It is not at all queſtioned but that this Book was written by Solomon; his Name is prefixed to it, with this Title, The Proverbs of Solomon the Son of David. In the twenty fifth Chapter it is ſaid, that the following Proverbs are likewiſe Solomons, but that they were collected by Perſons appointed by Hezechiah for that Purpoſe. The thirtieth Chapter begins thus, the Proverbs of Agur the Son of Jakeh, and the laſt Chapter is entituled, the Proverbs of King Lemuel. Theſe different Titles have made ſome learned Men believe that the twenty four firſt Chapters were Solomon's Original writing, that the five following were extracts or a Collection of ſome of his Proverbs, made by Hezechias's Order, and that the two laſt Chapters have been ſince added; and that they are written by two different Authors though unknown; for neither this Agur, or King Lemuel, who ſome pretend to be Hezechiah, are mentioned in any other Place of Scripture. But let this be as it will it is plain the two laſt Chapters are of an after Date, and written in a different Style from the reſt.

As to the time when this Collection was made it is hard to determine upon the Score of the three different Parts wherein it conſiſts. As to the firſt Part of it which is Solomon's Original, the time of it may be fixed within a ſmall Compaſs. For here the Queſtion is only whether he wrote it young or old; the Reſolution of which ſignifies very little. The Jews ſay he wrote the Canticles in his Youth, the Proverbs in the Strength of his Years, and the Eccleſiaſtes toward the End of his Life. The Character or Manner of theſe Books, ſeem to ſuit theſe three different Periods of Life; and this is plainly the only Ground the Rabbins go upon. Others who only conſider the matter, are of Opinion that the Proverbs were Solomon's firſt Work, Eccleſiaſtes the ſecond, and the Canticles the third: This ſeems to have been St. Jerom's Sentiment, as we may collect from what he remarks in his Commentary upon Eccleſiaſtes, where he tells us that the Proverbs are for young Peoples reading, Eccleſiaſtes for thoſe of mature Age, and the Canticles for thoſe who are old. * See Du Pin's preliminary Diſſertation on the Bible lib. 1. cap. 3.

PROVIDENCE, the antients made a Goddeſs of Providence, as we may learn of Tully, in his Book de Naturâ Deorum. They repreſent her in the Figure of a Roman Lady, with a Septer in one Hand, and pointing with the other to a Globe which lies at her Feet, to give us to underſtand that ſhe governs the World like a good Miſtreſs of a Family. The Emperor Titus had her engraved with a Rudder and Globe her Hands. Maximian repreſented her in a Medal by two Ladies, who held Ears of Corn in their Hands with this Legend, PROVIDENTIA DEORUM, Quies AUGUSTORUM. Alexander Severus repreſents Providence in the Figure of a Goddeſs, holding a Cornucopia, and having a large Veſſel full of Ears of Corn at her Feet. An Ant with three Ears of Corn in her Mouth, is an Emblem of Providence. * Danet.

PROVINCES (Free) called Friey Ambter by the Swiſſes. It is a ſmall Country in Switſerland, which ſtretches along the weſtern Bank of the River Ruſs. It is ſaid that Meyemberg, Richenſee, and Argow, which are now the chief Villages, were formerly large Towns, with great Privileges; and which is the Reaſon the Country was called the Free Provinces. But let this be as it will, this ſmall Territory is now a Baylywick which belongs in common to ſeveral Cantons: The Bayliff reſides at Murci, which is a large Abby well built. * Maty, Diction.

PRUTH, in Latin Prutha, Hieraſus, Geraſus. A great River which riſes in the Carpathian Mountains, croſſes part of the Palatinate of Lembourg in Ruſſia, and afterwards running through all Moldavia, falls into the Danube, a little below Axippoli. * Maty, Diction.

PRZIPIEG, Pripecz, Prepice. A great River in Lithuania. It riſes in the Confines of upper Volhynia, traverſes Poleſin, and runs by the Town Pinsk; by Petricowicze in the Palatinate of Novogrodek; by Mozir in the Territory of Rzeczick by Czernobel in lower Volhynia, and ſome Leagues below this laſt it falls into the Boriſthenes. * Baudrand.

PSALMS, in Hebrew Tehillim, and in Greek ψάλμοι, are in the general Signification Hymns; but this Name is particularly given to a Book of the Old Teſtament, called, the Book of Pſalms, and which conſiſts of one hundred and fifty Pſalms, called David's; though it is certain, as St. Jerom obſerves, that they were not all compoſed by David; but in regard the greateſt Part of them have David's Name in the Title, and ſome that have not, may reaſonably be reckoned to him; upon theſe Conſiderations the whole Collection goes under David's Name. The ninetieth Pſalm was ſuppoſed to be written by Moſes, ſeveral of them have Aſaph's Name at the Head; and others have the Title of Corah, Idithon, Eman, and Ethan. But whether the Pſalms were compoſed by theſe Perſons, or that they only ſet the Muſick to them is ſomewhat uncertain. Some of them were plainly written ſince the Captivity; for Inſtance the ſixty fourth and the hundred and thirty ſeventh. This Cuſtom of returning God thanks with religious Hymns, frequently joyned with inſtrumental Muſick, is as old as the Iſraelitiſh Commonwealth, and was begun by Moſes, and held on till the Captivity. When the Jews returned, and Eſdras reviewedthe inſpired Writings, he made a Collection of the hundred and fifty Pſalms which are now the whole Book. In this Collection neither the Authors, nor the Time, nor the Matter are ranged according to Order. The Pſalms are a poetical Performance; but it is hard to give an Account of the Hebrew Verſification. Some have thought it reſembling Greek and Latin Poetry, and that the Verſes conſiſted of a certain Number of Feet; others pretend it lay chiefly in rhiming; but upon a cloſe Enquiry, it will be hard to find either of theſe in the Pſalms. But then nothing is more eaſy than to diſcover a noble poetical Turn through the whole Book. The Inſtruments of Hebrew Muſick mentioned in the Title of the Pſalms, are no better underſtood than their Poetry. * Du Pin's preliminary Diſſertation on the Bible.

PTOLEMY, a leading Heretick in the ſecond Century, believed the Eons Beings diſtinct from God; whereas Valentinus ſuppoſed them only Thoughts and Modifications in the divine Mind. He held that the Law of Moſes was not compoſed by a ſingle Author; that Part of it was written by God himſelf, Part of it by Moſes, and Part of it by the Jews: That it contained three Sorts of Precepts, ſome entirely good, as the Decalogue; others partly juſt, and partly exceptionable, as the Lex Talionis, or like for like; and a third ſort were typical and ſymbolical, as the ceremonial Laws. His Followers were call'd Ptolemaites. * Du Pin New Eccleſ. Library Cent. III.

PUENTE DEL ARCOBISPO: A Town with a Bridge over the Taio. It ſtands in New-Caſtile in Spain. The Archbiſhop of this Town built it to the preſent Condition A. D. 1395. * Maty, Diction.

PUENTE DELLA RYENA, a good Town of the Kingdom of Navarre in Spain; it ſtands upon the River Agra, four Leagues from Pampeuna to the South. * Maty, Diction.

PUFENDORF (Samuel,) Hiſtoriographer to the King of Sweden, and a Perſon of great Abilities for Hiſtory and Politicks: He wrote ſeveral valuable Books in Latin, i. e. his Introduction to the Hiſtory of the principal Kingdoms and States in Europe; the Hiſtory of Sweden; eight Books of the Laws of Nature and Nations. Of this Tract the Duty of a Man and a Subject, is the Abridgement: There is likewiſe a Tract reckoned to him of the preſent State of Germany, publiſhed under the Name of Severinus à Monzambano. Pufendorf died in October 1694 being 63 Years of Age. * Memoires du Tems.

PULO-TYMON, a ſmall Iſland in the Indian Ocean, to the Weſt of the Iſland Borneo: The Mountains are thick ſet with Trees; the Valleys are fruiful, fine, and well watered. Here the famous Plant Betel grows, which is of ſuch common uſe in India, that there is ſcarce any Man or Woman in that large Country, who does not chew ſome of it in a Morning, after Meals, and as they walk in the Streets. But becauſe this Plant is bitter, they mix Wood of Aloes, Muſk, and other aromatick Ingredients with it. The Indians believe Betel ſweetens the Breath, ſtrengthens the Gums, and helps Digeſtion. It is a Plant that grows up like Hops, and the Leaf is larger and more pointed, than that of an Orange Tree. When it is chewed, it makes the Spittle red like Blood at firſt, and therefore they ſpit it out, but the ſecond Spittle is ſwallowed. The Merchants of Java, freight their Boats with it at Pulo-Tymon. * Ambaſſade des Hollandois au Japon.

PULO-WAY, one of the Iſlands of Banda ſtanding in the Archipelago of the Moluccas, to the South of that of Ceram. The Dutch are Maſters of Pulo-Way and have built the Fort Revenge there. * Maty, Diction.

PULTASK, a ſmall City or Town within the Kingdom of Poland. The Biſhop of Plocsko; who commonly reſides there is chief Lord of the Place; it ſtands in the Palatinate of Czersko in Mazovia, thirteen Leagues from Warſaw to the North. * Maty, Diction.

PUNHALI, a City in Malabar within the Peninſula of India on this Side the Ganges. It is the Capital of a ſmall Kingdom of the ſame Name, which lies near the Mountains of Gate to the Eaſt of Coulan. * Maty, Diction.

*PURGATION, for being aboliſhed by Ferdinand II. in Morery Vol. II. read by Frederick II.

* PURIFICATION. The ſettling of this Feſtival cannot reaſonably be dated any higher than the ſixth Century; for before this time we do not find any Sermons preached upon this Day. That diſcourſe reckoned to Methodius Biſhop of Tyre who lived in the third Century, is much more modern. Theophanes aſſures us, that this Holiday was firſt kept A. D. 542, in the Reign of the Emperor Juſtinian and in the Popedom of Vigilius. The weſtern Church followed the precedent of the eaſtern. However it is pretended that Pope Velaſius I. had ſettled this Feſtival before in the Church of Rome, in Order to ſuppreſs the Superſtition and Licentiouſneſs practiſed at the Lupercalia which were kept by the Pagans on the fifteenth of February. The Cuſtom of lighting up wax Candles and carrying them in Proceſſion, began both in the Eaſt and Weſt in the ſeventh Century; though ſome refer the Riſe of this Ceremony to Pope Sergius I. who died in the firſt Year of the eighth Century, though it is clear by the Teſtimony of Ildephonſus of Toledo, that the Uſage was Prior to this time. It is the firſt Holiday belonging to the bleſſed Virgin, upon which it was ordered not to work. It was kept in France in King Pepin's Reign. * Bollandus. Baillet. Vies des Saints au mois de Fev.

PUY (Alexander du,) Lord of St. André Montbrun, Captain General of the Forces of the Republick of Venice, was born in 1600 at Montbrun in Dauphiné, and at ſeven Years of Age was Page of Honour to the Dauphin

Dauphin of France. His Inclinations lay ſtrongly for a military Profeſſion. He took Service at fourteen under the Marſhal de Leſdiguieres, who gave him a Company in his own Regiment. When the French Proteſtants ran to Arms, and fought the Government, his Father the Marquis de Monthrun, and his two eldeſt Sons, left the Huguenots, but the youngeſt, our Marquis de St. André, kept with them. The Duke of Rohan the Head of the Proteſtant Faction, made him Field Marſhal, and Governor of Montauban, which he held againſt the King's Army. Afterwards he threw himſelf into Privas, and encouraged the Inhabitants to hold out againſt the King. The Marquis de Gordes was diſpatched from his Majeſty, to offer him a hundred thouſand Crowns, and a conſiderable Poſt in his Court, provided he would ſurrender the Place. The Marquis de St. André's Anſwer was, that neither his Honour nor his Conſcience would give him leave to part with the Place with which he was entruſted. Thus ſome People can run blindly into Rebellion without Qualms or Scruple, but neither Duty nor Money can draw them out of it. They can break through Juſtice and Allegiance, but ſcorn to be bribed back to the Conſtitution. They love to be falſe to the right Side, but unalterably true to the wrong, as if their Honour oblig'd them to abide by a wicked Engagement, and ſtand firm to the Devil. The Marquis de St. André, after the Garriſon diſtruſted him, was glad to ſurrender to the King, and a Council of War ſetting upon him, they were ſomewhat divided about their Sentence. However, he was confined, till they ſhould come to a Reſolution: But in the mean time he made his Eſcape, and got to Venice, ſerved ſome time in Italy, and afterwards went to Guſtavus King of Sweden, then with an Army in Germany. This Prince being killed at the Battel of Lutzen, the Duke of Weimar then elected Generaliſſimo of the Swediſh Army, kept the Marquis de St. André with him, and made him Governor of Pomerania. After ſome Traverſes of Fortune he returned to the French Court, and was kindly received by Cardinal Richelieu, and the French King ſent him to ſerve in the Valteline, and afterwards in Piémont. Upon his return to France he was made Field Marſhal; and upon the Death of Lewis XIII, the Queen Regent ſent him to ſerve in Italy under Prince Thomas. When the civil Commotions in France were over, King Lewis XIV. deſign'd to make the Marquis de St. André Marſhal of France. But Cardinal Mazarin told him he could not receive that Honour unleſs he changed his Religion: which Articles St. André refuſing to comply with, and deſpairing of ſucceeding in the French Court, retired into Italy, and ſerved in the French Army under the Duke of Modena and Prince Thomas. But the Campagne not going to his Mind he deſired to quit, and had his diſcharge. Some time after Juſtiniani the Venetian Embaſſador offered to make him General of that Republick's Land Forces, which he was to command in Candia. This he durſt not accept at firſt, for fear of diſobliging the French Court: But Cardinal Mazarin's Death removing the Obſtacle, the French King commended the Republick for their Choice, and gave the Marquis de St. André leave to go upon this great Enterpriſe. He immediately went for Venice, and from thence embarking on a Man of War, arrived at Tramate June the 21ſt 1688. And before he would go into the Houſe prepared for him, he viewed all the Poſts of the Town and found them in an ill Condition. The next Day he muſtered the Garriſon, which made no more than four thouſand five hundred Men. At a Council of War, he propoſed ſo many Ways to repulſe the Enemy that he was admired by the whole Board. At the firſt Attack the Turks made, he received three Wounds, which were ſix Weeks in curing. Generaliſſimo Moroſini being afraid the Place might be carried by Storm, propoſed the calling a Council of War, to debate whether they ſhould capitulate. The Marquis rejecting this Propoſal, reply'd, I'll give you notice a Fortnight before there is any Occaſion to ſurrender; but at preſent we have nothing to do but to repel the Enemy. In ſhort, he made good his Word, beat the Turks off, repaired the Breaches, and told the Generaliſſimo, they need fear nothing for a Month. While he was overſeeing the making good ſome Part of the Fortifications, a Muſquet Bullet drove through his Shoulder Blade. While he kept his Bed, the Succours commanded by the Duke de la Feuillade arrived. And ſoon after another French Reinforcement arrived under the Duke of Beaufort, which made them reſolve upon a Sally. The Duke while he endeavoured to rally the Troops in Diſorder, was killed upon the Spot; his Body was ſeized by the Enemy, and carried three Days in Triumph through the Streets of Conſtantinople, as a Proof of the Chriſtians being beaten. The Buſineſs was ſo rugged, that of three thouſand French lately landed there was ſcarce five hundred fit to do Duty. Mr. de Navaille thought it adviſeable to draw off, and ſave this Handfull. When the Turks underſtood the French were gone, they made three Aſſaults with little Intermiſſion. Generaliſſimo Moroſini propoſed ſurrendering again to the Marquis de St. André. But his Anſwer was, that he had rather be buried under a Baſtion than capitulate without Orders from the Republick of Venice. The Generaliſſimo however, by the Advice of the chief Officers, and without acquainting the Marquis, put out the white Flag, and capitulated. And here it muſt be ſaid the Articles were punctually kept. The Marquis de St. André wrote to the Pope, to the French King, and to almoſt all the Chriſtian Princes, to let them know how uneaſy he was for being forced to quit the Defence of a Place with which he had been entruſted. When he returned to the Court of France, the King received him very kindly. A Year after, ſome Malecontents in Poland, having formed a Faction againſt King Michael, and propoſing to elect the Count of Saint Pol in his Place; the Prince of Condé engaged the Marquis de St. André to attend the Count: But the Conſpiracy happened to be broken, the Rebels againſt King Michael were ſeized and condemned, and the Count of Saint Pol died in paſſing the Rhine. And now the Marquis de St. André, who thought of nothing but Eaſe and Retirement, was ſeized with a Dropſy, which carried him off at 73 Years of Age. * Hiſtoire du Marquis de St. André Montbrun, à Paris, in 12, 1698.

PUYSAYE, a ſmall Precinct within Gâtinois in France. It is upon the Confines of Berry and Nivernois. Saint-Amand en Puyſaye and Saint-Fargeau are the principal Towns. * Maty, Diction.

* PYGMIES: The blind and the lame whoſe Soul David is ſaid to hate in this Article, Morery Vol. II. The blind and the lame, I ſay, ſome learned Men will not conſtrue in a litteral, but a figurative Senſe: and that the meaning is not levelled againſt Criples and People who have loſt their ſight; but that the Figures of the Jebuſite's Idols ſet upon the Walls for Defence, are ſignified by this Expreſſion; and theſe David had reaſon to hate and not the other.

PYRRHO, a famous Sceptick Philoſopher; who held there was no exact Criterion, for the Knowledge and Diſtinction of things. And therefore believing Truth and Falſhood miſmarked, he ſuſpended his Aſſent, and declined pronouncing upon the Nature and Quality of any Thing; and over and above indulged his Whimſies, to a very dangerous Degree; For having no Regard to the Information of his Senſes, he would not ſtep out of the Way, for a Cart or a Coach, nor avoid a Precipice or a mad Dog. I ſhall juſt mention the Reaſons of this extravagant Diſtruſt, of all Appearances and Senſations. His firſt Argument is drawn from the different Senſe of Pain and Pleaſure, of Convenience and Inconvenience, obſerved in Animals. From hence he collects outward Objects don't affect them in the ſame Manner. And from this Diverſity of Impreſſions, he concludes the Senſes fallible; for Inſtance in this Caſe, he takes notice that ſome Animals are produced out of the common Method of Generation; that ſome would live in the Fire, as the Phœnix, and ſome Inſects &c. That they differ very much upon the Compariſon of Senſation; for ſome of them, as Hawks, and Eagles, ſee to great Diſtance and Exactneſs: And ſome Dogs are no leſs remarkable for ſmelling. From hence it follows, that Objects impinge differently upon their Eyes and Noſtrils, which gives a different Notice to the Brain. Thus Browſe is pleaſant Nouriſhment to a Goat, but bitter and inſignificant to a Man. The Juice of Hemlock though rank Poiſon to a Man, will make a Quail fat; A Hog will feed upon Ordure, which a Horſe will not touch. His ſecond Topick for Doubting, is drawn from the different Conſtitutions and Tempers of People. Demophon, Governor of Alexandria, grew warm in the Shade, and was ready to ſhake in the Sun. Andro, a Burgher of Argos, as Ariſtotle relates, would travel through the ſandy Deſarts of Lybia without ſuffering for want of Drink. One Man's Fancy lies for the Study of Phyſick, another for Husbandry, and a third for Merchandice. And the ſame things oblige the Conſtitution of one Perſon, which are unfriendly to another: Therefore we ought not to let our Belief looſe, nor determine about Matters; which Caution appears reaſonable in the third Place, from the different Frame and Report of the Senſes. For the Purpoſe, an Apple appears pale to the Sight, ſweet to the Taſte, and fragrant to the Smell; the Notice varies, and the Pleaſure is diverſified in the reſpective Senſes. To which he adds, that the Repreſentation of things, comes up in ſeveral Figures, according to the make of a looking Glaſs. From hence he concludes, that the Appearances of Objects, have no fixt Conſiſtence, nor are more one thing than another. His fourth Argument turns upon the different Affections, and Alterations in Paſſions and Perceptions: For Example, Objects don't ſtrike the Senſes and Imagination in the ſame manner in Health and Sickneſs, in gay Humour and Melancholy, in Youth and old Age, when a Man is aſleep, and when he is awake; they do not make the ſame Impreſſion upon Courage and Cowardice, upon a full and an empty Stomach, upon Wealth and Poverty, upon Friendlineſs and Averſion, upon Heat and Cold; and thus things ſeem different purely upon the ſcore of different Diſpoſitions in the Mind or Body. And here it muſt not be objected, that mad People act contrary to the Courſe of Nature, any more than we do. For there ſeems to be great Miſtakes, and irregular Starts on both Sides. For don't we fancy the Sun ſtands ſtill. The Stoick Theon uſed to walk in his Sleep, and a Servant of Pericles upon the ſharp Ridge of a high Building. His fifth Topick is drawn from different Cuſtoms in Education and Legiſlature, from the Belief of Romantick Stories, from Diverſity in moral Rules, and Philoſophick Opinions. And to this Head, he reckons People's different Sentiments concerning Honour and Ignominy, Truth and Falſhood, the Being and Perfections of the Gods; and the Proceſs of Nature in Generation and Corruption: Thus that Practice which is reckoned juſt in one Country, is unjuſt in another, and the ſame by Conſequence may be affirmed of Good and Evil. For inſtance the Perſians don't think it a Fault to marry, and cohabit with their Daughters, which is counted an outragious Licentiouſneſs by the Greeks. The Maſſagetes (as Eudoxius reports) have no perſonal Property in Marriage, but the Greeks abominate this having their Wives in common. The Cilicians brag of their Talent, and practice in Thievery, which the Greeks are aſhamed of. Thus ſome have one Opinion about the Gods, and ſome another; ſome own their Preſidency and Providence, and ſome deny it. The Ægyptians embalm their Dead the Romans burn them, and the Pæonians threw them into a Pond. For this Reaſon we muſt avoid coming to any Deciſion about Preference and Certainty. ſixthly, things are always viewed and perceived under Mixture and Combination, thus nothing ſtands ſingle and uncompounded to the Senſe, it comes up with ſomething of Train and Attendance. Thus Air and Light, liquid and ſolid, heat and cold, Motion and Effluvia, with various Powers and Qualities, come jumbl'd together. Thus Purple for inſtance, appears of one Colour when view'd in the Sun, of another by Moon Light and Candle. Indeed the Colour of human Bodies appear differently at Noon from what it does in the Evening. And the ſame Body ſeems light in the Water, and heavy in the Air; from hence we muſt conclude ourſelves ignorant of the ſolitary Properties of things; as it's impracticable to point out the Particles of Oyl in a Compoſition of Oyntment. Seventhly, The Situation of Objects, and the Places from whence they are viewed, is another Cauſe of Ignorance and Confuſion. Thus ſome Bodies of conſiderable Magnitude appear ſmall, a ſquare Figure comes up round, a plain Surface with Prominence and Projection; Objects that are ſtrait look broken, and thoſe that are pale, of a different Colour. Thus the Sun upon the ſcore of it's Remoteneſs looks no more than two Foot Diameter, and Mountains at a great Diſtance appear flat and cloudy; but when you draw near them, they look ſteep and ragged. Farther, the Sun has a different Face when he riſes, from that he ſhines with in the Meridian, neither does a Body in a Wood, appear juſt the ſame as when ſtanding, or lying in an open Field. The Poſition of things makes a conſiderable Alteration, as appears by the Neck of a Pidgeon, which varies by the Bending of her Motion. Now in regard theſe things can't be abſtracted from Situation, their Nature muſt by Conſequence lye in the Dark. The eighth Ground for Scepticiſm, turns upon Quantity and Degree, with reference to Heat or Cold, Slowneſs or Speed, Paleneſs or other Colours. For Exanple, Wine moderately drank gives Strength and Spirits; but when much indulged beyond Temperance and Proportion turns the Brain, and other Diſadvantages though not of the ſame kind reſult from exceſſive Eating. Ninthly, the conſtant Operations and Effects of Nature, or the Novelty, and ſeldom Appearance of things, is another Reaſon for Scepticiſm, becauſe it produces different Paſſions in the Mind. Thus Earthquakes where they happen frequently, are not at all wondred at, nor the Sun for the ſame Reaſon, becauſe it riſes every Day. Tenthly, another Cauſe which perplexes the Senſes, and makes the Judgment uncertain, riſes from mutual Reference and Compariſon of things: For inſtance, of the Reſpect of heavy Bodies to thoſe that are light, of Strength to Weakneſs, of Maghitude to Littleneſs, of upper and lower. Thus Nature makes nothing either of the right, or of the left Hand: Theſe Diſtinctions, are purely the Creatures of Compariſon. For if you take away the left Hand Situation, the right is of courſe loſt with it. Theſe are Pyrro's ten Reaſons for Scepticiſm, to which Agrippa, as Laertius thinks, added five more, viz. that which ariſes from Diſparity, that which carries the Proof through infinite Mediums; that which wants Company to make it certain, that which ſuppoſes conteſted Principles certain, and that which depends upon reciprocal Help. The firſt which ariſes from Diſparity, is when a Philoſopher ſtarts a Queſtion, which contradicts vulgar Notion, and common Belief. This Diverſity makes a great deal of Miſt and Claſhing. That which proceeds from Infinity, as he calls it, is, when the thing in Queſtion can't ſtand upon it's own Credit, but requires a Voucher, that Voucher a ſecond Security, and ſo on without Stop or giving Satisfaction. That which can't appear alone with any Air of Certainty, but depends upon Reference and Combination. From hence he collects things hidden and imperceptable in their ſingle Properties. Fourthly, when the Hypotheſis ſtands upon a weak precarious Bottom; and Men take the Riſe of their Reaſoning from Principles ſuppoſed unqueſtionable, when the Contradiction to them may be eaſily aſſerted. Laſtly, when the Argument proceeds upon falſe Mediums, and that which is brought for a Proof, wants Evidence it ſelf. Farther they pretend to argue againſt the Faculty of Judging, or the Criterion for diſcovering Truth, in this manner. Either the Criterion has been examined or paſt the Teſt, or not? if not, why ſhould we depend on it; and reſt our aſſent there? but if it has ſtood the Tryal of Reaſon, then it will be one of thoſe things, which paſs under Examination: And at this Rate it will be both Judge and Party. And that Faculty which pronounces upon the Faculty of judging, will require another Faculty to try the laſt Sentence: And this laſt Tryer will call for another: And at this Rate, the Proceſs muſt be infinite, without ever coming at any certain Concluſion.

drawn

The Difference between the Academicks and the Pyrrhonians was chiefly this; the Academicks maintain'd there was no reaſon to doubt of their doubting; and that they were certain they knew nothing certainly. But the Pyrrhonians were too ſhy to come thus far; they would not ſo much as aſſert that Propoſition was true, or ſo much as probable, which deny'd all Certainty in every thing elſe.

Theſe Sceptick charg'd the other Philoſophers with Folly, who pretended to any ſound Bottom for Knowledge; but Ariſtotle and Epictetus returned the Imputation upon them. Ariſtotle proves their reaſoning againſt Reaſon inconcluſive in the Similitude they bring for it. Their Illuſtration is this, as purging Phyſick is diſcharg'd with the Humours and morbid Matter, ſo Reaſon, which proves every thing uncertain, deſtroys it's own Force by mixing with the reſt, and being one of the Number: To this Ariſtotle returns, that if Reaſon confutes her ſelf, the Man's an Oaf that pretends to uſe it. Let theſe Men therefore lie ſtill upon this Point, and not ſo much as whiſper Nonſenſe: Beſides, their Purge will do their Argument no good, whatever it may do their Head if they took it: For the Purge is ſo fully carry'd off as not to remain in the Body; but Reaſon ſticks by us, and always remains rivetted in the Mind: This is that which we muſt always apply to for Satisfaction, becauſe according to theſe Scepticks it furniſhes us with Motives to ſuſpend our Aſſent. Epictetus, who comes next, both rallies and reaſons againſt them with Strength enough; 'tis in Arrian's firſt and ſecond Book upon Epictetus. If any Body, ſays he, will be ſo hardy as to contradict firſt Principles and ſelf evident Propoſitions, the Man's loſt, for there's no Argument can reach him to make him wiſer. Neither does this Misfortune proceed either from the Defect of his Faculties, or from the Weakneſs of his Inſtructor: For when a Man is petrify'd to what purpoſe ſhould any Body argue or chop Logick with him. Now there are two ſorts of Petrification, one proceeds from Fear, and the other from Whimſy: When a Man is ſo ſingularly obſtinate, as to ſtand off from the cleareſt Evidence on one hand, and ſeems ſomewhat inclin'd to cloſe with Repugnancy and Contradiction on the other. And elſewhere Epictetus asks the Sceptick a Queſtion, whether when he is at Dinner he uſes to put his Hands to his Mouth or to his Eyes? Whether, when he goes to the Bath, he thinks one Way will bring him to it as well as another? Whether it is his Cuſtom to make no Diſtinction between a Diſh and a Pot, or a Spit and a Spoon? Were I one of his Servants, ſays Epictetus, I'd plague him to purpoſe, though I was ſoundly drub'd for it. Boy, ſays my Maſter, throw ſome Oil into the Bath; what would I do, ſaith he, but get ſome Gravy and Pickles, and pour it upon his Head: What's that for, ſays my Maſter, is the Fellow mad? In good Faith, Sir, would I reply, the Repreſentation and Similitude of Ideas deceive me; for to my Apprehenſion Oil and Gravy reſemble each other ſo much, that it's impoſſible to diſtinguiſh them; come try if you can mend your Hand, give me ſome Ptiſane; upon this I'd bring him a Diſh of Oxymel: Did not I ask you for Ptiſane? Yes, Sir, and here you have it; far from it, ſays my Maſter, prithee ſmell and taſte it, if you are ſo dull as not to know it otherwiſe: But what am I the nearer for this Trial, if, as your Philoſophy ſays, our Senſes deceive us: Now if I had three or four Fellow Servants to ſecond me, I would either make my Maſter hang himſelf or drop his Scepticiſm. To conclude, Ariſtotle, as cited by Euſebius in his Præparatio Evangelica, affirms theſe Scepticks little ſhort of Diſtraction; that they fall foul upon their own Principles; and by bidding other People ſtand clear of all Opinion, are not aware that they recommend and diſſuade at the ſame time; for they pronounce in ſome meaſure upon things, when they ſay nothing is to be affirm'd about them. * Diog. Laertius. lib. 9. Epictetus, apud Arrian. lib. 1. cap. 5. & lib. 2. cap. 20.

PYLA, or Schneidemuhl, in Latin Pyla; a Town in Poland upon the River Neta, within the Palatinate of Poſnania, twelve Leagues from the Town Poſnania to the North. * Maty, Diction.

PYRMONT, a Town famous for Mineral Waters; it ſtands in the Circle of Weſtphalia, ſix Leagues from Lemgow to the Eaſt. Pyrmont is the Capital of a County of the ſame Name, and lies to the Eaſt of the County of Lemgow; it belongs to Count Waldeck, excepting the ſmall Town Ludge, where the Biſhops of Paderborne are Lords. * Maty, Diction.

PYTHONISSE, or the Witch of Endor. The Scripture frequently mentions Perſons who had familiar Spirits, and whom the Iſraelites were forbidden to conſult. The moſt remarkable Perſon of this Kind is the Witch of Endor, to whom Saul apply'd in his Diſtreſs. The Woman's Name is not mention'd, but the Hiſtory is reported 1 Sam. 28. and needs not be recited. The Jews, as St. Jerom informs us, have an old Tradition, that ſhe was Abner's Mother, the General of Saul's Army: But this Story is without Foundation. The Holy Scripture acquaints us that this Witch brought up a Perſon in the Shape of Samuel; now the Queſtion is whether this was really Samuel's Spirit which came up and ſpoke with Saul, or whether this was done by the force of Enchantment, or whether it was only a Phantom, or whether Saul's Imagination being overſet with Melancholy form'd this Appearance in his Head; or laſtly, whether it was only an Impoſition of this Woman's Contrivance. Juſtin Martyr, Origen, Sulpicius Severus and Anaſtaſius Sinaita, and a great many other Commentators believe it was really Samuel's Spirit. St. Auſtin though he delivers nothing deciſively, yet he expreſſes himſelf in ſuch a manner as diſcovers he believ'd it no more than a Phantom, St. Eucherius Biſhop of Lyons, Bede, Anſelme, Rabanus Maurus, and ſeveral other Commentators, go in to St. Auguſtin's Sentiment: Theodoret believ'd it was an Angel, or Samuel's Likeneſs: Euſtathius of Antioch plainly condemns Origen's Opinion, and pretends this Apparition was nothing but a diabolical Illuſion. This is likewiſe the Opinion of Tertullian in his Book de Anima, of the Author of the Queſtions to the orthodox reckoned to Juſtin Martyr, of Methodius and St. Baſil, of St. Gregory Nazianzen, and St. Gregory Nyſſen, of St. Jerom, and St. Cyril of Alexandria. Philaſtrius Biſhop of Breſcia went ſo far in this Sentiment, that he believ'd thoſe Hereticks who maintain'd this Pythoniſſe had Power to call up Samuel's Spirit. Moſt of the modern Commentators follow Euſtathius, and ground themſelves chiefly upon this Suppoſition, that it is not to be imagined that the Spirits of good People ſhould be ſo far within the Devil's Power as to be viſibly brought back to this World, when he has a mind to it: But on the other Side, the Scripture mentions this Apparition as Samuel's Spirit; Saul owns it for Samuel, they diſcourſed together, and Samuel foretells the Event of the Battel, which happen'd accordingly. Now thoſe who affirm that all this was not done by the Strength of Necromancy, but by a particular permiſſion from Almighty God, and obſerve that the Witch herſelf was ſurpriſed when ſhe ſaw Samuel appear; thoſe I ſay who argue in this manner, get clear of the main Difficulty, which otherwiſe bears hard upon thoſe who believe the real Spirit of Samuel appeared to Saul. And as God ſometimes permits falſe Prophets, as Balaam, to predict and deliver Truth; ſo he might ſuffer the Witch of Endor to bring Samuel's Soul for a Moment or two into the World again. The Text ſeems to favour this Expoſition more than the reſt. * Euſtath. de Engaſtrimytho. Leo Allatius, in Syntagmate de Engaſtrimytho. The Commentators upon the 28th of the firſt of Samuel.

Q.

QUATRE OFFICES, call'd by the Flanderkins Vier Ambachten, [which ſignifies the ſame thing. It is the Eaſtern Part of Dutch Flanders; it lies between the Country of Waes and the Weſtern Mouth of the Schelde, and takes in four Territories or Precincts, which are Bochoute, Aſſennene, Axel and Hulſt. The principal Places are le Sas de Gand, Hulſt, Axel, Terneuſe, and Fort Philippine. * Maty, Diction.

QUESNEL (Paſquier,) was born at Paris July 14, 1634. After having gone through a Courſe of Divinity at the Sorbonne, he enter'd into the Congregation of the Oratory in 1657, and was ordained Prieſt two Years forward. He apply'd himſelf wholly to Eccleſiaſtical Learning: The moſt conſiderable of his Works are his Moral Reflexions upon each Verſe of the New Teſtament; Father Queſnel begun this Book at Paris for the uſe of the young Fraternity of the Oratory. At firſt it was no more than ſome pious Reflexions upon the Words of our Saviour: The Marquis de Laigue, and ſome other religious Perſons, being particularly pleaſed with this Eſſay, prevailed with him to make reſembling Remarks through the whole Text of the four Evangeliſts. The Author executed what was ſuggeſted happily enough, and the Marquis de Laigue mentioning the Book to Mr. Fœlix Vialart, Biſhop of Châlons upon the Marne, this Prelate, who had a great Character for Piety and Penetration, read this Work very carefully, and finding it, as he declares himſelf, very ſerviceable for the Inſtruction and Edification of his People, he deſigned it for the uſe of his Dioceſs, and recommended it to the Clergy and Laity in a Paſtoral Letter November 9, 1671.

Afterwards Father Queſnel ſet forth a new Edition of Pope Leo the Great; it was reviſed upon an old Manuſcript brought from Venice, formerly belonging to Cardinal Grimani, and which had been preſented to the Oratorians of Paris by P. Beuzian; it is the beſt Edition extant of Pope Leo's Works. For over and above the Text being nicely reviewed, it is likewiſe improv'd with Notes and learned Diſſertations. It was publiſh'd at Paris in 1675 in two Tomes 4to. And the Author in his Notes and Diſſertations having vigorouſly defended the Tenets of the Gallican Church againſt the Pretenſions of the Court of Rome, it was not at all ſurpriſing to ſee this Performance condemn'd the next Year at Rome by a Decree of the Inquiſition dated June 22, 1676. However, a ſecond Edition of it was publiſhed in Folio at Lyons in 1700.

The particular Friendſhip and Regard P. Queſnel had always ſhewed for P. de St. Marthe General of the Oratory of France made him ſtand ill with M. de Harlai, Archbiſhop of Paris. This Prelate, who had got St. Marthe baniſh'd, made uſe of the French King's Name to force P. Queſnel to remove out of the Dioceſs of Paris: And having the Liberty to ſettle elſewhere as he lik'd beſt, he fix'd at Orleans in November 1681. At M. Nicole's Inſtance before he left Paris, he begun to write Moral Reflexions upon the Acts of the Apoſtles and St. Paul's Epiſtles, of the ſame kind with thoſe which he had publiſh'd upon the Goſpels. He went on with this Work at Orleans, but an Emergence forced him to leave France; 'twas a ſort of Teſt put to him in the Congregation of the Oratory.

At a general Aſſembly of this Congregation held at Paris A. D. 1678, a Syſtem of Doctrine was drawn up with ſeveral Miſtakes in Philoſophy and Divinity. At another Aſſembly held in 1684, all the Members of this Congregation were obliged to ſign the Propoſitions above mentioned. P. Queſnel knowing his Conſcience would not give him leave to ſet his Hand to this Formulary, and eaſily foreſeeing that after his Refuſal he could not continue ſafely in France, he retir'd into the Spaniſh Low Countries in 1685, and coming to Bruſſels lived with M. Arnauld. Here he finiſhed his Moral Reflexions upon the Remainder of the New Teſtament, which were firſt printed in 1687. His Reflexions on the four Goſpels abovemention'd being very ſhort, he reviſ'd and enlarged them to make 'em better proportion'd to what he had lately perform'd on the Acts, the Apoſtle's Epiſtles, and the Revelations; and in this Condition the Work was firſt printed in 1693.

M. D' Urſe, Biſhop of Limoges, being ſenſible how much good this Book had done in his Dioceſs, but finding it too dear for the Curés, deſired the Author to print his Reflexions only of the Epiſtles and Goſpels for Sundays and Holidays by themſelves, that ſo the Book being leſſen'd, the Country Clergy might more conveniently buy it. He anſwered the Biſhop's Requeſt, and added ſome Reflexions upon the Epiſtles or Leſſons taken out of the Old Teſtament, and inſerted in the Roman Miſſal: But the Manuſcript being loſt between Bruſſels and Paris, and the Author having never another Copy the Deſign miſcarried.

In 1695 the Cardinal de Noailles, then only Biſhop of Châlons upon the Marne, looking upon thi Work, approv'd by his Predeceſſor as a Collection full of Light and Unction, and an Extract of the moſt beautiful and affecting Remarks made by the Fathers upon the New Teſtament, read it over again; and after having made ſome Alterations, gave it his Approbation, and recommended it in 1695 to his Clergy and People, letting them know in his Mandate that it was ſuited to the Capacities and Benefit of all ſorts of Perſons. This Prelate was this Year tranſlated to the archiepiſcopal See of Paris, where Queſnel's Reflexions had been well receiv'd, even by the late M. Harlai. The Jeſuits diſguſted at the new Archbiſhop upon the ſcore of a Diſcourſe touching Predeſtination and Grace, which he publiſhed in 1696, and puſh'd on by other Motives, attack'd this Prelate for giving his Approbation to Queſnel's Reflexions, and printed the famous Eccleſiaſtical Problems at Bruſſels in 1698. But this Libel was order'd to be burnt by an Arret of the Parliament of Paris in January 10, 1699.

In the mean time the Archbiſhop of Paris ordered ſome eminent Divines, whom the Jeſuits had no reaſon to ſuſpect of Partiality, to examine this Book with all imaginable Exactneſs: This Prelate review'd it himſelf ſo far as the Buſineſs of his Dioceſs would permit. M. Boſſuet, Biſhop of Meaux, took a great deal of Pains in this Affair, and wrote a Book againſt the Jeſuits Problem, entituled, a Juſtification of the Moral Reflexions, afterwards publiſh'd in 1710. Queſnel's Book being thus re-examin'd was printed at Paris in 1699.

In 1703, after the Noiſe made in the famous Caſe of Conſcience, which gave occaſion to revive the Diſputes concerning the ſigning the Formulary, and the Argument relating to Grace; after this, M. Humbert de Precipiano, Archbiſhop of Malines, cloſely engag'd with the Jeſuits, procuring an Order, as it is ſaid, from the King of Spain, got Queſnel arreſted at Bruſſels, and conveyed to that Archbiſhop's Priſon: At the ſame time they ſeized all his Papers, abundance of Letters from his Friends, a great many excellent Manuſcripts of M. Arnauld and others, which were in his Cuſtody, and which are now moſt of them in the French Jeſuits Hands. The Archbiſhop, though excepted againſt as a competent Judge by Queſnel, began to proſecute, but Queſnel unexpectedly made his Eſcape out of Priſon September 13, of the ſame Year, and happily got clear of M. de Malines and the Jeſuits. He lay conceal'd at Bruſſels till the ſecond of October, when he went to Namur with an Intention to go farther; but here M. de Ximenes, Governour of Namur, not knowing him, ſtop'd him; having an Order from the French King not to let any body paſs but P. Queſnel; however a Perſon of Diſtinction giving his Word for him he had leave to move: From Namur he went to Huy, where the Dutch Governour not liking his Paſſport, ſtop'd him; but after having been under an Arreſt ſome Days, and procured a fuller Paſs, he had his Liberty.

And now he printed his Motif de Droits, in which he publiſh'd his Reaſons for refuſing to be try'd by M. de Malines and his Court, and return'd an Anſwer to ſeveral Articles charged againſt him in a Placard publiſhed by a Proctor belonging to the Eccleſiaſtical Court of Malines; however this Defence did not ſtop the Archbiſhop from proceeding to ſentence againſt Queſnel November 10, 1704.

to

Queſnel perceiving himſelf not ſafe elſewhere, retired into Holland April 1704: And in the Beginning of the next Year he publiſhed a Juſtification of himſelf, and ſet forth the Nullity of M. de Malines Sentence; this was done in two Tracts; the firſt is call'd, a general Idea of a Latin Libel, called the warrantable proceedings of the Eccleſiaſtical Court of Malines, &c. The other is entituled, an Anatomy of the Judgment given by the Lord Archbiſhop of Malines.

One would have thought after all this, that the Jeſuits being Maſters of Queſnel's private Papers and thoſe of his Friends, would have play'd this Ammunition upon him: For here, if any where, they might have found Proofs of his Caballing, of his Sedition, Hereſy, and other Crimes of which they accuſed him. But it is pretty plain his Papers could afford no Evidence upon theſe Heads, ſince they dropt this Part of the Impeachment, and faſtned only upon his Book of Moral Reflexions. After having publiſhed ſeveral Libels with the Titles of Father Queſnel a Heretick, P. Queſnel ſeditious, they procured a Decree againſt him from the Pope Clement XI, who was ſomewhat diſguſted with the Zeal the Cardinal de Noailles had ſhewn for the French Biſhops Juriſdiction at an Aſſembly of the Clergy in 1705. This Decree or Bull of the Popes, dated July the 13th 1708, condemned Queſnel's Book in general with very rugged Expreſſions; but without pointing upon any particular Propoſition. The next Year a ſmart Confutation of this Cenſure was printed with the Title of Entretiens ſur le Decret de Rome, contre le Nouveau Teſtament de Châlons, accompagné de Réflexions Morales 1709. This Book was ſuppoſed to be written by P. Queſnel.

And here we are to obſerve that this Pope's Decree, could neither be owned or publiſhed in France upon the Score of the Cuſtoms of the Realm: Here therefore it ſignified little, excepting that the Biſhops of Lucon, Rochelle, and Gap, condemned Queſnel's Book in their Mandates, but without making mention of any Decree from Rome to ſupport their Cenſure.

The Jeſuits in the mean time carried on their Buſineſs, and exerted themſelves to engage the French Biſhops to condemn Queſnel's Book, and to write to the French King againſt the Cardinal de Noailles. A Letter intercepted in July 1711 which the Abbot Bochard de Saron a Jeſuit, wrote to the Biſhop of Clermont his Uncle, diſcovered Part of this Myſtery; inſomuch that the Cardinal de Noailles thought himſelf obliged to ſuſpend a great many of theſe Jeſuits from preaching, and taking Confeſſions. The French King after ſeveral Inſtances, not prevailing with the Cardinal to get them reſtored; his Eminency proteſting with great Reſpect, that his Conſcience would not give him leave to take off that Reſtraint; his Majeſty I ſay not prevailing this way, revoked the Privilege granted for printing and ſelling Queſnel's Book, and deſired a Conſtitution in Form from the Pope, wherein it might be condemned, and that the Propoſitions deſerving Cenſure might be particularly ſpecify'd. This Application was made in November 1711. The Pope being well aſſured that the French King after having earneſtly deſired a new Bull, would exert his Authority, to get it received without demurring or exception; called a Congregation of Cardinals, Prelates, and Divines June 1712, to expedite this Affair. P. Queſnel likewiſe writ a Letter on this Subject to his Holineſs, which was ſent to Rome July 22 following; and another of September 22 of the ſame Year, but the Pope returned him no Anſwer.

At laſt the famous Conſtitution Unigenitus Dei Filius appeared, dated September 8 1713. This Conſtitution condemned Queſnel's Book of Moral Reflexions, and a hundred and one Propoſitions drawn out of it: There are four or five and twenty hard Names expreſſed in the Cenſure, but then the Pope did not apply them to any particular Propoſition. His Holineſs likewiſe condemned all Papers and Prints already publiſhed or that ſhould be publiſhed hereafter in Defence of this Book. The Engliſh Tranſlation of this Bull is pretty common, but the original Latin being ſomewhat ſcarce ſhall be inſerted for the Reader.

Unigenitus Dei filius pro noſtra, & totius Mundi ſalute filius hominis factus, dum Diſcipulos ſuos doctrinâ veritatis inſtrueret, univerſamque Eccleſiam ſuam in Apoſtolis erudiret, præſentia diſponens, & futura proſpiciens, præclaro, ac ſaluberrimo documento Nos admonuit, ut attenderemus a falſis Prophetis, qui veniunt ad Nos in veſtimentis Ovium; quorum nomine potiſſimum demonſtrantur Magiſtri illi mendaces, & in deceptione illuſores, qui ſplendidâ pietatis ſpecie prava dogmata latenter inſinuantes, introducunt ſectas perditionis ſub imagine Sanctitatis; utque facilius incautis obrepant, quaſi deponentes lupinam pellem, & ſeſe Divinæ Legis ſententiis, velut quibuſdam Ovium velleribus obvolventes, Sanctarum Scripturarum, adeoque etiam ipſius novi Teſtamenti verbis, quæ multipliciter in ſuam, aliorumque perditionem depravant, nequiter abutuntur; Antiqui ſcilicet, à quo progeniti ſunt, mendacii Parentis exemplo, ac magiſterio edocti, nullam omnino eſſe ad fallendum expeditiorem viam, quàm ut ubi nefarii erroris ſubintroducitur fraudulentia, ibi divinorum verborum prætendatur authoritas.

His Nos verè divinis monitis inſtructi, ubi primùm, non ſine intimâ cordis noſtri amaritudine, accepimus, Librum quendam Gallico idiomate olim impreſſum, & in plures Tomos diſtributum, ſub titulo——Le Nouveau Teſtament en Francois, avec des reflexions, morales ſur chaque verſet, &c. A' Paris 1699; Aliter vero——Abregé de la morale de l' Evangile, des Actes, des Apoſtres des Epiſtres de St. Paul, des Epiſtres Canoniques, é de l' Apocalypſe, ou penſees Chretiennes ſur le Texte de ces Livres Sacrez, &c. A' Paris 1693, & 1694, tametſi aliàs a Nobis damnatum, ac revera Catholicis veritatibus pravarum doctrinarum mendacia multifariam permiſcentem, adhuc tamen tamquam ab omni errore immunem, à pluribus haberi, Chriſti fidelium manibus paſſim obtrudi, ac nonnullorum nova ſemper tentantium conſilio, & operâ ſtudioſe nimis quaquaverſum diſſeminari, etiam latine redditum, ut pernicioſæ inſtitutionis contagium, ſi fieri poſſit, pertranſeat de gente in gentem, et de Regno ad populum alterum: Verſutis hujuſmodi ſeductionibus, atque fallaciis creditum Nobis Dominicum Gregem in viam perditionis ſinſim abduci ſummopere doluimus: Adeoque Paſtoralis non minus curæ noſtræ ſtimulis, quam frequentibus Orthodoxæ Fidei Zelotarum querelis, maxime vero complurium Venerabilium Fratrum, præſertim Galliæ Epiſcoporum, literis, ac precibus excitati, gliſcenti morbo, qui etiam aliquando poſſit in deteriora quæque proruere, validiori aliquo remedio obviam ire decrevimus.

Et quidem ad ipſam ingruentis mali cauſam providæ noſtræ conſiderationis intuitum convertentes, perſpicue novimus ſummam hujuſmodi Libri perniciem ideo potiſſimum progredi, et invaleſcere, quod eadem intus lateat, & velut improba ſanies, nonniſi ſecto ulcere foras erumpat; cum Liber ipſe primo aſpectu legentes ſpecie quadam pietatis illiciat: Molliti enim ſunt ſermones ejus ſuper oleum: Sed ipſi ſunt jacula, & quidem intento arcu ita ad nocendum parata, ut ſagittent in obſcuro rectos corde. Nihil propterea opportunius, aut ſalubrius præſtari a Nobis poſſe arbitrati ſumus, quam ſi fallacem Libri doctrinam generatim ſolummodo a Nobis hactenus indicatam, pluribus ſingillatim ex eo excerptis Propoſitionibus, diſtinctius, & apertius explicaremus, atque univerſis Chriſti fidelibus noxia Zizaniorum ſemina e medio Tritici, quo tegebantur, educta, velut ob oculos exponeremus. Ita nimirum denudatis, & quaſi in propatulo poſitis, non uno quidem, aut altero, ſed plurimis, graviſſimiſque, tum pridem damnatis, tum etiam nove adinventis erroribus, plane confidimus, benedicente Domino, fore ut omnes tandem apertæ jam, manifeſtæque veritati cedere compellantur.

Id ipſum maxime e re Catholica futurum, & ſedandis præſertim in florentiſſimo Galliæ Regno exortis ingeniorum varie opinantium, jamque in acerbiores ſciſſuras protendentium diſſidiis apprime proficuum: Conſcientiarum denique tranquillitati perutile, & propemodum neceſſarium, non modo præfati Epiſcopi, ſed & ipſe in primis cariſſimus in Chriſto Filius noſter Ludovicus Francorum Rex Chriſtianiſſimus, cujus eximium in tuenda Catholicæ Fidei puritate, extirpandiſque erroribus Zelum ſatis laudare non poſſumus, ſæpius Nobis eſt conteſtatus; repetitis propterea vere piis, & Chriſtianiſſimo Rege dignis officiis, atque ardentibus votis a Nobis efflagitans, ut inſtanti animarum neceſſitati prolata quantocius Apoſtolici cenſura Judicii conſuleremus.

Hinc adſpirante Domino, ejuſque cœleſti ope confiſi, ſalutare tare opus ſedulo, diligenterque, ut rei magnitudo poſtulabat, aggreſſi ſumus; ac plurimas ex prædicto Libro, juxta ſupra recenſitas reſpective editiones, fideliter extractas, & tum Gallico, tum Latino idiomate expreſſas Propoſitiones, a compluribus in Sacra Theologia Magiſtris, primo quidem coram duobus ex Venerabilibus Fratribus noſtris Sanctæ Romanæ Eccleſiæ Cardinalibus accurate diſcuti: Deinde vero coram Nobis, adhibito etiam aliorum plurium Cardinalium conſilio, quam maxima diligentia, ac maturitate, ſingularum inſuper Propoſitionum cum ipſomet Libri textu exactiſſime facta collatione, pluries iteratis Congregationibus, expendi, & examinari mandavimus. Hujuſmodi autem Propoſitiones ſunt, quæ ſequuntur, videlicet,

1. Quid aliud remanet animæ, quæ Deum atque ipſius gratiam amiſit, niſi peccatum, & peccati conſecutiones, ſuperba paupertas, & ſegnis indigentia, hoc eſt generalis impotentia ad laborem, ad orationem, & ad omne opus bonum?

2. Jeſu Chriſti gratia, principium efficax boni cujuſcunque generis, neceſſaria eſt ad omne opus bonum; abſque illa, non ſolum nihil fit, ſed nec fieri poteſt.

3. In vanum, Domine, præcipis, ſi tu ipſe non das quod præcipis.

4. Ita Domine; Omnia poſſibilia ſunt ei, cui omnia poſſibilia facis, eadem operando in illo.

5. Quando Deus non emollit cor per interiorem unctionem gratiæ ſuæ, exhortationes, & gratiæ exteriores non inſerviunt, niſi ad illud magis obdurandum.

6. Diſcrimen inter Fœdus Judaicum, & Chriſtianum eſt, quod in illo Deus exigit fugam peccati, & implementum legis a peccatore, relinquendo illum in ſua impotentia: in iſto vero Deus Peccatori dat quod jubet, illum ſua gratia purificando.

7. Quæ utilitas pro homine in veteri fœdere, in quo Deus illum reliquit ejus propriæ infirmitati, imponendo ipſi ſuam legem? Quæ vero felicitas non eſt admitti ad fœdus, in quo Deus nobis donat, quo petit a nobis?

8. Nos non pertinemus ad novum fœdus, niſi in quantum participes ſumus ipſius novæ gratiæ, quæ operatur in nobis id quod Deus nobis præcipit.

9. Gratia Chriſti eſt gratia ſuprema, ſine qua confiteri Chriſtum nunquam poſſumus, & cum qua nunquam illum abnegamus.

10. Gratia eſt operatio manus Omnipotentis Dei, quam nihil impedire poteſt, aut retardare.

11. Gratia non eſt aliud, quam voluntas Omnipotentis Dei, jubentis, & facientis quod jubet.

12. Quando Deus vult ſalvare animam, quocumque tempore, quocunque loco effectus indubitabilis ſequitur voluntatem Dei.

13. Quando Deus vult animam ſalvam facere & eam tangit interiori gratiæ ſuæ manu, nulla voluntas humana ei reſiſtit.

14. Quantumcunque remotus a ſalute ſit Peccator obſtinatus, quando Jeſus ſe ei videndum exhibet lumine ſalutari ſuæ gratiæ, oportet, ut ſe dedat, accurrat, ſeſe humiliet, & adoret Salvatorem ſuum.

15. Quando Deus mandatum ſuum, & ſuam æternam locutionem comitatur unctione ſui Spiritus, & interiori vi gratiæ ſuæ, operatur illam in corde obedientiam, quam petit.

16. Nullæ ſunt illecebræ, quæ non cedant illecebris gratiæ, quia nihil reſiſtit Omnipotenti.

17. Gratia eſt vox illa Patris, quæ homines interius docet, ac eos venire facit ad Jeſum Chriſtum; quicumque ad eum non venit, poſtquam audivit vocem exteriorem Filii, nullatenus eſt doctus a Patre.

18. Semen verbi, quod manus Dei irrigat, ſemper affert fructum ſuum.

19. Dei gratia nihil aliud eſt, quam ejus omnipotens voluntas: hæc eſt idea, quam Deus ipſe nobis tradit in omnibus ſuis Scripturis.

20. Vera gratiæ idea eſt, quod Deus vult ſibi a nobis obediri, & obeditur; imperat, & omnia fiunt; loquitur tanquam Dominus, & omnia ſibi ſubmiſſa ſunt.

21. Gratia Jeſu Chriſti eſt gratia fortis, potens, ſuprema, invincibilis, utpote quæ eſt operatio voluntatis Omnipotentis, ſequela, & imitatio operationis Dei incarnantis, & reſuſcitantis Filium ſuum.

22. Concordia omnipotentis operationis Dei in corde hominis, cum libero ipſius voluntatis conſenſu, demonſtratur illico nobis, in Incarnatione, veluti fonte, atque Archetypo omnium aliarum operationum miſericordiæ & gratiæ, quæ omnes ita gratuitæ, atque ita dependentes a Deo ſunt, ſicut ipſa originalis operatio.

23. Deus ipſe nobis ideam tradidit omnipotentis operationis ſuæ gratiæ, eam ſignificans per illam, qua Creaturas e nihilo producit, & mortuis reddit vitam.

24. Juſta idea, quam Centurio habet de Omnipotentia Dei, & Jeſu Chriſti, in ſanandis corporibus ſolo motu ſuæ voluntatis, eſt imago ideæ, quæ haberi debet de omnipotentia ſuæ gratiæ in ſanandis animabus a cupiditate.

25. Deus illuminat animam, & eam ſanat æque ac corpus, ſola ſua voluntate; jubet & ipſi obtemperatur.

26. Nullæ dantur gratiæ, niſi per Fidem.

27. Fides eſt prima gratia, & fons omnium aliarum.

28. Prima gratia, quam Deus concedit Peccatori, eſt peccatorum remiſſio.

29. Extra Eccleſiam nulla conceditur gratia.

30. Omnes, quos Deus vult ſalvare per Chriſtum, ſalvantur infallibiliter.

31. Deſideria Chriſti ſemper habent ſuum effectum; pacem intimo cordium infert, quando eis illam optat.

32. Jeſus Chriſtus ſe morti tradidit ad liberandum pro ſemper ſuo ſanguine Primogenitos, id eſt, Electos, de manu Angeli exterminatoris.

33. Proh quantum oportet bonis terrenis, & ſibimetipſi renuntiaſſe, ad hoc, ut quis fiduciam habeat ſibi, ut ita dicam, appropriandi Chriſtum Jeſum, ejus amorem, mortem, & myſteria, ut facit Sanctus Paulus dicens: Qui dilexit me, & tradidit ſemetipſum pro me.

34. Gratia Adami non producebat niſi merita humana.

35. Gratia Adami eſt ſequela creationis, & erat debita naturæ ſanæ & integræ.

36. Differentia eſſentialis inter gratiam Adami, & ſtatus innocentiæ, ac gratiam Chriſtianam eſt, quod primum unuſquiſque in propria perſona recepiſſet: Iſta vero non recipitur, niſi in Perſona Jeſu Chriſti reſuſcitati, cui nos uniti ſumus.

37. Gratia Adami, ſanctificando illum in ſemetipſo, erat illi proportionata, Gratia Chriſtiana nos ſanctificando in Jeſu Chriſto, eſt omnipotens, & digna Filio Dei.

38. Peccator non eſt liber, niſi ad malum, ſine gratia Liberatoris.

39. Voluntas, quam gratia non prævenit, nihil habet luminis, niſi ad aberrandum; ardoris, niſi ad ſe præcipitandum; virium niſi ad ſe vulnerandum; eſt capax omnis mali, & incapax ad omne bonum.

40. Sine gratia nihil amare poſſumus, niſi ad noſtram condemnationem.

41. Omnis cognitio Dei, etiam naturalis, etiam in Philoſophis Ethnicis, non poteſt venire, niſi a Deo, & ſine gratia non producit, niſi præſumptionem, vanitatem & oppoſitionem ad ipſum Deum, loco affectuum adorationis, gratitudinis, & amoris.

42. Sola gratia Chriſti reddit hominem aptum ad Sacrificium Fidei; ſine hoc nihil, niſi impuritas, nihil, niſi indignitas.

43. Primus effectus gratiæ baptiſmalis eſt facere, ut moriamur peccato; adeo ut ſpiritus, cor, ſenſus, non habeant plus vitæ pro peccato, quam homo mortuus habeat pro rebus Mundi.

44. Non ſunt, niſi duo amores, unde volitiones, & actiones omnes noſtræ naſcuntur; Amor Dei, qui omnia agit propter Deum, quemque Deus remuneratur; & Amor, quo nos ipſos, ac Mundum diligimus, qui quod ad Deum referendum eſt, non refert, & propter hoc ipſum fit malus.

45. Amore Dei in corde Peccatorum non amplius regnante, neceſſe eſt, ut in eo carnalis regnet cupiditas, omneſque actiones ejus corrumpat.

46. Cupiditas, aut Charitas, uſum ſenſuum bonum, vel malum faciunt.

47. Obedientia legis profluere debet ex fonte; & hic fons eſt Charitas. Quando Dei amor eſt illius principium interius, & Dei gloria ejus finis, tunc purum eſt quod apparet exterius; alioquin non eſt, niſi hypocriſis aut falſa Juſtitia.

48. Quid aliquid eſſe poſſumus, niſi tenebræ, niſi aberratio, & niſi peccatum, ſine Fidei lumine, ſine Chriſto & ſine Charitate?

49. Ut nullum peccatum eſt ſine amore noſtri, ita nullum eſt opus bonum ſine amore Dei.

50. Fru-

50. Fruſtra clamamus ad Deum, Pater mi: Si ſpiritus Charitatis non eſt ille, qui clamat.

51. Fides juſtificat, quando operatur; ſed ipſa non operatur, niſi per Charitatem.

52. Omnia alia ſalutis media continentur in fide, tanquam in ſuo germine, & ſemine; ſed hæc fides non eſt abſque amore & fiducia.

53. Sola Charitas Chriſtiano modo facit (actiones Chriſtianas) per relationem ad Deum, & Jeſum Chriſtum.

54. Sola Charitas eſt, quæ Deo loquitur, eam ſolam Deus audit.

55. Deus non coronat, niſi Charitatem, qui currit ex alio impulſu, & ex alio motivo, in vanum currit.

56. Deus non remunerat niſi Charitatem, quoniam Charitas ſola Deum honorat.

57. Totum deeſt Peccatori, quando ei deeſt ſpes, & non eſt Spes in Deo, ubi non eſt amor Dei.

58. Nec Deus eſt, nec Religio, ubi non eſt Charitas.

59. Oratio impiorum eſt novum peccatum, & quod Deus illis concedit, eſt novum in eos judicium.

60. Si ſolus ſupplicii timor animat pœnitentiam, quo hæc eſt magis violenta, eo magis ducit ad deſperationem.

61. Timor non niſi manum cohibet, cor autem tamdiu peccato addicitur, quamdiu ab amore juſtitiæ non ducitur.

62. Qui a malo non abſtinet, niſi timore pœnæ, illud committit in corde ſuo, & jam eſt reus coram Deo.

63. Baptizatus adhuc eſt ſub lege, ſicut Judæus, ſi legem non adimpleat, aut adimpleat ex ſolo timore.

64. Sub maledicto legis, nunquam fit bonum, quia peccatur, ſive faciendo malum, ſive illud non niſi ob timorem evitando.

65. Moyſes, Prophetæ, Sacerdotes, & Doctores legis mortui ſunt abſque eo quod ullum Deo dederint filium, cum non effecerint niſi mancipia per timorem.

66. Qui vult Deo appropinquare, nec debet ad ipſum venire cum brutalibus paſſionibus, neque adduci per inſtinctum naturalem, aut per timorem, ſicuti Beſtiæ, ſed per fidem, & per amorem ſicuti filii.

67. Timor ſervilis non ſibi repræſentat Deum, niſi ut Dominum durum, imperioſum, injuſtum, intractabilem.

68. Dei Bonitas abbreviavit viam ſalutis claudendo totum in Fide, & precibus.

69. Fides, uſus, augmentum, & præmium Fidei, totum eſt donum puræ liberalitatis Dei.

70. Nunquam Deus affligit innocentes, & afflictiones ſemper ſerviunt, vel ad puniendum peccatum, vel ad purificandum peccatorem.

71. Homo ob ſui conſervationem poteſt ſeſe diſpenſare ab ea lege, quam Deus condidit propter ejus utilitatem.

72. Nota Eccleſiæ Chriſtianæ eſt quod ſit Catholica, comprehendens, & omnes Angelos Cœli, & omnes Electos, & juſtos terræ, & omnium Sæculorum.

73. Quid eſt Eccleſia niſi cœtus Filiorum Dei manentium in ejus ſinu, adoptatorum in Chriſto, ſubſiſtentium in ejus perſona, redemptorum ejus ſanguine, viventium ejus ſpiritu, agentium per ejus gratiam, & expectantium gratiam futuri Sæculi?

74. Eccleſia, ſive integer Chriſtus, incarnatum Verbum habet ut Caput, omnes vero Sanctos ut membra.

75. Eccleſia eſt unus ſolus homo, compoſitus ex pluribus membris, quorum Chriſtus eſt caput, vita, ſubſiſtentia, & perſona; unus ſolus Chriſtus, compoſitus ex pluribus Sanctis, quorum eſt Sanctificator.

76. Nihil ſpatioſius Eccleſia Dei, quia omnes Electi, & Juſti omnium Sæculorum illam componunt.

77. Qui non ducit vitam dignam Filio Dei, & membro Chriſti, ceſſat interius habere Deum pro patre, & Chriſtum pro capite.

78. Separatur quis à Populo Electo, cujus figura fuit Populus Judaicus & caput eſt Jeſus Chriſtus, tam non vivendo ſecundum Evangelium, quam non credendo Evangelio.

79. Utile & neceſſarium eſt omni tempore, omni loco, & omni perſonarum generi ſtudere, & cognoſcere ſpiritum, pietatem, & myſteria Sacræ Scripturæ.

80. Lectio Sacræ Scripturæ eſt pro omnibus.

81. Obſcuritas ſancta Verbi Dei, non eſt Laicis ratio diſpenſandi ſe ipſos ab ejus lectione.

82. Dies Dominicus à Chriſtianis debet ſanctificari lectionibus pietatis, & ſuper omnia ſanctarum Scripturarum. Damnoſum eſt velle Chriſtianum ab hac lectione retrahere.

83. Eſt illuſio ſibi perſuadere, quod notitia myſteriorum Religionis non debeat communicari fœminis lectione ſacrorum librorum. Non ex fœminarum ſimplicitate, ſed ex ſuperba Virorum ſcientia, ortus eſt ſcripturarum abuſus, & natæ ſunt hæreſes.

84. Abripere è Chriſtianorum manibus novum Teſtamentum, ſeu eis illud clauſum tenere, auferendo eis modum illud intelligendi, eſt illis Chriſti os obturare.

85 Interdicere Chriſtianis lectionem ſacræ Scripturæ, præſertim Evangelii, eſt interdicere uſum luminis filiis lucis, & facere ut patiantur ſpeciem quandam excommunicationis.

86. Eripere ſimplici Populo hoc ſolatium, jungendi vocem ſuam voci totius Eccleſiæ, eſt uſus contrarius praxi Apoſtolicæ, & intentioni Dei.

87. Modus plenus ſapientia, lumine, & Charitate, eſt dare animabus tempus portandi cum humilitate, & ſentiendi ſtatim peccati, petendi ſpiritum pœnitentiæ, & contritionis, & incipiendi, ad minus ſatisfacere juſtitiæ Dei, antequam reconcilientur.

88. Ignoramus quid ſit peccatum & vera pœnitentia quando volumus ſtatim reſtitui poſſeſſioni bonorum illorum, quibus nos peccatum ſpoliavit, & detrectamus ſeparationis iſtius ferre confuſionem.

89. Quartus decimus gradus converſionis Peccatoris eſt, quod, cum ſit jam reconciliatus, habet jus aſſiſtendi Sacrificio Eccleſiæ.

90. Eccleſia authoritatem excommunicandi habet, ut eam exerceat per primos Paſtores, de conſenſu, ſaltem præſumpto, totius Corporis.

91. Excommunicationis injuſtæ metus, nunquam debet nos impedire ab implendo debito noſtro: Nunquam eximus ab Eccleſia, etiam quando hominum nequitiâ videmur ab ea expulſi, quando Deo, Jeſu Chriſto, atque ipſi Eccleſiæ per Charitatem affixi ſumus.

92. Pati potius in pace excommunicationem, & anathema injuſtum, quam prodere veritatem, eſt imitari Sanctum Paulum: Tantum abeſt, ut ſit erigere ſe contra authoritatem, aut ſcindere unitatem.

93. Jeſus quandoque ſanat vulnera, quæ præceps primorum Paſtorum feſtinatio infligit, ſine ipſius mandato; Jeſus reſtituit, quod ipſi inconſiderato zelo reſcindunt.

94. Nihil pejorem de Eccleſia opinionem ingerit ejus inimicis, quam videre illic dominatum exerceri ſupra fidem fidelium, & foveri diviſiones propter res, quæ nec fidem lædunt, nec mores.

95. Veritates eo devenerunt, ut ſint lingua quaſi peregrina pleriſque Chriſtianis, & modus eas prædicandi eſt veluti idioma incognitum; adeo remotus eſt a ſimplicitate Apoſtolorum, & ſupra communem captum fidelium; neque ſatis advertitur, quod hic defectus ſit unum ex ſignis maxime ſenſibilibus ſenectutis Eccleſiæ, & iræ Dei in Filios ſuos.

96. Deus permittit, ut omnes Poteſtates ſint contrariæ Prædicatoribus veritatis, ut ejus victoria attribui non poſſit, niſi divinæ gratiæ.

97. Nimis ſæpe contingit membra illa, quæ magis ſancte ac magis ſtricte unita Eccleſiæ ſunt, reſpici, atque tractari tanquam indigna ut ſint in Eccleſia, vel tanquam ab ea ſeparata; ſed Juſtus vivit ex fide, & non ex opinione hominum.

98. Status perſecutionis & pœnarum, quas quis tolerat, tanquam hæreticus, flagitioſus, & impius, ultima plerumque probatio eſt, & maxime meritoria, utpote quæ facit hominem magis conformem Jeſu Chriſto.

99. Pervicacia, præventio, obſtinatio in nolendo, aut aliquid examinare, aut agnoſcere ſe fuiſſe deceptum, mutant quotidie quoad multos in odorem mortis id, quod Deus in ſua Eccleſia poſuit, ut in ea eſſet odor vitæ, V. G. bonos libros, inſtructiones, ſancta Exempla, &c.

100. Tempus deplorabile, quo creditur honorari Deus, perſequendo veritatem, ejuſque Diſcipulos. Tempus hoc advenit——Haberi & tractari a Religionis Miniſtris, tanquam impium, & indignum omni commercio cum Deo, tanquam membrum putridum, capax corrumpendi omnia in ſocietate Sanctorum, eſt hominibus piis morte corporis mors terribilior. Fruſtra quis ſibi blanditur de ſuarum intentionum puritate, & Zelo quodam Religionis, perſequendo flamma, ferroque viros probos, ſi propria paſſione eſt excæcatus aut abreptus aliena, propterea quod nihil vult examinare. Frequenter credimus ſacrificare Deo impium, & ſacrificamus Diabolo Dei Servum.

101. Nihil Spiritui Dei, & Doctrinæ Jeſu Chriſti magis opponitur, quam communia facere juramenta in Eccleſia, quia hoc eſt multiplicare occaſiones pejerandi, laqueos tendere infirmis, & idiotis, & efficere, ut nomen, & veritas Dei aliquando deſerviant conſilio impiorum.

Auditis itaque tum voce, tum ſcripto Nobis exhibitis præfatorum Cardinalium, aliorumque Theologorum ſuffragiis, divinique in primis luminis, privatis ad eum finem, publiciſque etiam indictis precibus, implorato præſidio; omnes & ſingulas Propoſitiones præinſertas, tanquam falſas, captioſas, male ſonantes, piarum aurium offenſivas, ſcandaloſas, pernicioſas, temerarias, Eccleſiæ, & ejus praxi injurioſas, neque in Eccleſiam ſolum, ſed etiam in Poteſtates ſæculi contumelioſas, ſeditioſas, impias, blaſphemas, ſuſpectas de hæreſi, ac hæreſim ipſam ſapientes, nec non hæreticis, & hæreſibus, ac etiam ſchiſmati faventes, erroneas, hæreſi proximas, pluries damnatas, ac demum etiam hæreticas, variaſque hæreſes, & potiſſimum illas, quæ in famoſis Janſenii Propoſitionibus, & quidem in eo ſenſu, in quo hæ damnatæ fuerunt, acceptis, continentur, manifeſte innovantes, reſpective, hæc noſtra perpetuo valitura Conſtitutione declaramus, damnamus, & reprobamus.

Mandantes omnibus utriuſque ſexus Chriſti fidelibus, ne de dictis Propoſitionibus ſentire, docere, prædicare, aliter præſumant, quam in hac eadem noſtra Conſtitutione continetur; ita ut quicumque illas, vel illarum aliquam conjunctim, vel diviſim docuerit, defenderit, ediderit, aut de eis, etiam diſputative, public, aut privatim tractaverit, niſi forſan impugnando, Eccleſiaſticis cenſuris, aliiſque contra ſimilia perpetrantes a Jure ſtatutis pœnis ipſo facto, abſq; alia declaratione ſubjaceat.

Cæterum per expreſſam præfatarum Propoſitionum reprobationem alia in eodem Libro contenta nullatenus approbare intendimus; cum præſertim in decurſu examinis complures alias in eo deprehenderimus Propoſitiones illis, quæ, ut ſupra, damnatæ fuerunt, conſimiles, & affines, iiſdemq; erroribus imbutas: nec ſane paucas ſub imaginario quodam, veluti graſſantis hodie perſecutionis obtentu, inobedientiam, & pervicaciam nutrientes, eaſque falſo Chriſtianæ patientiæ nomine prædicantes; quas propterea ſingulatim recenſere, & nimis longum eſſe duximus, & minime neceſſarium, ac demum, quod intolerabilius eſt, Sacrum ipſum novi Teſtamenti Textum damnabiliter vitiatum compererimus, & alteri dudum reprobatæ verſioni Gallicæ Montenſi in multis conformem: a vulgata vero editione, quæ tot Sæculorum uſu Eccleſia probata eſt, atque ab Orthodoxis omnibus pro authentica haberi debet, multipliciter diſcrepantem, & aberrantem, plurieſque in alienos, exoticos, ac ſæpe noxios ſenſus, non ſine maxima perverſitate detortum.

Eumdem propterea Librum, utpote per dulces ſermones, & benedictiones, ut Apoſtolus loquitur, hoc eſt, ſub falſa piæ inſtitutionis imagine, ſeducendis Innocentium cordibus longe accommodatum, ſive præmiſſis, ſive alio quovis titulo inſcriptum, ubicumque & quocumque alio idiomate, ſeu quavis editione, aut verſione hactenus impreſſum, aut in poſterum (quod abſit) imprimendum, autoritate Apoſtolica tenore præſentium iterum probibemus; ac ſimiliter damnamus; quemadmodum etiam alios omnes, & ſingulos in ejus defenſionem tam ſcripto, quam typis editos, ſeu forſan (quod Deus avertat) edendos libros, ſeu libellos, eorumque lectionem, deſcriptionem, retentionem, & uſum omnibus, & ſingulis Chriſti fidelibus ſub pœna excommunicationis per contra facientes ipſo facto incurrenda, prohibemus pariter, & interdicimus.

Præcipimus inſuper Venerabilibus Fratribus Patriarchis, Archiepiſcopis, & Epiſcopis, aliiſque locorum Ordinariis; necnon hæreticæ pravitatis Inquiſitoribus, ut contradictores, & rebelles quoſcumque per cenſuras, & pœnas præfatas, aliaque Juris, & facti remedia, invocato etiam ad hoc, ſi opus fuerit, brachii ſecularis auxilio, omnino coerceant, & compellant.

Volumus autem, ut earundem præſentium tranſumptis, etiam impreſſis, manu alicujus Notarii publici ſubſcriptis, & ſigillo perſonæ in dignitate Eccleſiaſtica conſtitutæ munitis, eadem fides prorſus adhibeatur, quæ ipſis originalibus literis adhiberetur, ſi forent exhibitæ, vel oſtenſæ.

Nulli ergo hominum liceat hanc paginam noſtræ declarationis, damnationis mandati, prohibitionis & interdictionis infringere, vel ei auſu temerario contraire. Siquis autem hoc attentare præſumpſerit, indignationem Omnipotentis Dei, ac Beatorum Petri, & Pauli Apoſtolorum ejus ſe noverit incurſurum. Datum Romæ apud Sanctam Mariam Majorem Anno incarnationis Dominicæ Milleſimo ſeptingenteſimo decimo tertio, ſexto Idus Septembris, Pontificatus Noſtri Anno Decimo tertio.

J. Card. Prodatarius.

F. Oliverius.

Viſa de Curia L. Sergardus.

Loco ✠ Plumbi.

Regiſtrata in Secretaria Brevium.

L. Martinettus.

Anno a Nativitate Domini Noſtri Jeſu Chriſti milleſimo ſeptingenteſimo decimo tertio, Indictione ſexta, die vero decima Septembris, Pontificatus Sanctiſſimi in Chriſto Patris, & Domini noſtri Domini Clementis Divina providentia Papæ XI. Anno decimo tertio ſupradictæ Literæ Apoſtolicæ affixæ & publicatæ fuerunt ad Valvas Eccleſiæ Lateranen. Et Baſilicæ Principis Apoſtolorum, Cancellariæ Apoſtolicæ, Curiæ Generalis in Monte Citatorio, in Acie Campi Floræ, ac in aliis locis ſolitis, & conſuetis Urbis per me Petrum Romulatium Apoſtolicum Curſorem.

Antonius Placentinus Magiſter Curſorum.

Forty Biſhops of the Aſſembly of the Clergy held at Paris in 1713 and 1714, and afterwards a great many others, declared themſelves willing to receive this Bull, unconditionally and in it's full length, though at the ſame time they explain'd the Senſe of it in a paſtoral Letter. The King's Letters Patent for the Publication of this Bull, dated at Verſailles February, 14 1714 were not regiſtred in the Parliament of Paris without ſeveral Modifications and Reſtrictions.

The Cardinal de Noailles and ſeveral other Biſhops, looking through the Conſequences of this Bull, and not thinking the Explications in the paſtoral Inſtruction, a ſufficient Guard, refuſed to accept the Conſtitution, till the Pope had explained himſelf in ſuch a Manner upon it that the Doctrine, Diſcipline, Points of Morality, Liberties of the Gallican Church, Privileges of the Univerſities, and Rights of the Biſhops might be all well covered and ſecured.

In this Condition the Buſineſs ſtood in the Year 1715, when the French King not being able to bring the Cardinal de Noailles and the other Biſhops of his Sentiment, to compliance, ſent to the Pope to deſire his Holineſs either to approve Explications made by this Cardinal, or elſe to furniſh others, which might put an End to this great Affair.

P. QUESNEL who was on the wrong Side of fourſcore in 1715 publiſhed four Memoirs by way of Animadverſion upon the firſt fifty cenſured Propoſitions, and promiſed to continue his Remarks upon the remainder. He likewiſe wrote a Letter dated January 5, 1714, addreſſed to the Cardinals Archbiſhops and Biſhops aſſembled at Paris and another of the 15th of the ſame Month directed to the Biſhops of the aſſembly.

P. QUESNEL wrote ſeveral devotional Books, viz. An Idea of the Prieſthood, the three Conſecrations; the Happineſs of dying like a Chriſtian; Prayers and Practices of Piety &c. There are ſeveral other Books reckoned to P. Queſnel, but without certainty; as, the Hiſtorical Apology of Louvain and Doüay; four Volumes of the Tradition of the Church of Rome printed under the Name of M. Germain; a Collection entituled Cauſa Arnaldina, or the Juſtification of Mr. Arnauld &c. Voiez le* 1. le 4. & 6. Tomes de l'Hiſtoire du Cas de Conſcience; le Motif de Droit du Père Queſnel; l'Explication Apologétique du même; la Rélation du Différent entre M. le Cardinal de Noailles, & les Evèques de Luçon, & de la Rochelle; la Préface Hiſtorique dún Livre in quarto publié contre la Conſtitution ſous la Titre d'Hexaples, & autres Mémoires des Tems.

QUESNOIS, a ſtrong ſmall Town with a Caſtle. It ſtands in Hainault, between Landrecy and Valenciennes two Leagues from the laſt, and three from the other. The Confederates againſt France and Spain took it in 1712, 1712, but being afterwards ſurpriſed and beaten at Denain, the French retook Queſnois, Bouchain and Doüay, with great Quantities of Ammunition and Proviſions in the Camp at Denain. * Baudrant. Memoires du Tems.

QUIERZY, a ſmall Town in the Province of Picardy in France: It is famous for ſeveral Councils held there in the ninth Century under Hincmar Archbiſhop of Rheims. It ſtands upon the River Oyſe in the Precinct of Noyon, two Leagues from the Town Noyon. The Kings of France had formerly a Palace here.

* QUIGNONES, (Francis) a Spaniſh Cardinal, Biſhop of Cauria, was Son to Diego Fernandez de Quignones, firſt Earl of Luna. He entered himſelf a Franciſcan when young, and was made General of that Order in 1522. The Emperor Charles V was much pleaſed with Quignones Promotion, and made him a Councellor of his Council of Conſcience. This Quignones was at Aſſiſe, a Town in Italy when he heard of the ſacking of Rome by the imperial Army. Upon this, he waited upon Pope Clement VII then a Priſoner in the Caſtle of St. Angelo. His Holineſs underſtanding the Intereſt Quignones had with the Emperor ſent him to treat a Peace. He finiſhed this Negotiation to the Pope's Satisfaction, who gave him a Cardinal's Cap the the ſame Year. He was afterwards made Biſhop of Cauria, Legat in Spain and in the Kingdom of Naples, and died at Veruli A. D. 1540. This Cardinal attempted to reduce the Breviary, to three Pſalms for every Canonical Hour, and three Leſſons for the Mattins; and ordered the Matters ſo that the Pſalter might be gone through every Week. Clement VII. and Paul III. approv'd this Breviary, and it was printed at Rome A. D. 1536, and afterwards elſewhere. The ſhortneſs of it, or rather the docking of a great many apocryphal or ſpurious Narratives, made ignorant People cry out againſt it; inſomuch that ſince the Council of Trent Quignone's Breviary lay ſuppreſs'd, and is now only to be met with as a Curioſity in great Libraries. It is ſaid the Preface is very fine, and well worth the reading. The Title ſtands thus, Breviarium Romanum ex S. potiſſimum Scripturâ & probatis Sanctorum Hiſtoriis confectum, Studio Franciſci Quignonii. * Wadinge in Annal. Minor. Ughel. Ital. Sacr. Aubery, Hiſt. de Cardinaux, Nicholas Antonio, Biblioth. Hiſp. De Vigneul Marville. Melanges d'Hiſtoire, &c. See Quinones in Morery Vol. II.

QUINAULT (Philip,) a French Poet, much valued, notwithſtanding the Abatement Boileau gives him in the two following Verſes, Satyr 2.

Si je penſe exprimer un Auteur ſans défaut,
La raiſon dit Virgile, & la rime Quinault.

After he had finiſhed his Studies he apply'd himſelf to Poetry, and had ſo ſtrong a Genius for Performances of this kind, that at fifteen Years of Age he wrote very entertaining Comedies. About the ſame time he put himſelf a Clerk to a Barriſter at Law, and made a conſiderable Proficiency in the Law in a ſhort time.

But Poetry having the Aſcendant in his Fancy, and Operas coming into Faſhion in France, Quinault made very good ones, which however had not the ſame Applauſe at firſt which they gain'd afterwards. Some Criticks endeavour'd to bring Lully out of conceit with them; but it is ſaid this celebrated Muſician had too much Senſe and Taſte not to underſtand that it was very difficult to make finer Verſes, more harmonious, and better turn'd to ſet off the Muſick than Quinault's.

The French King, when he had a mind to entertain his Court with Operas, made uſe of none but Quinault's. This Preference from his Majeſty raiſed Quinault's Reputation, and made him generally eſteemed: But when he was dead, and ſeveral Poets of Character could not riſe up to his Pitch, his Fame then improv'd conſiderably. He was reckon'd an extraordinary Lyrick Poet, ſo far at leaſt as the Stage was concerned in that way of writing. He wrote ſeveral things of another kind which were well receiv'd. Among theſe we may reckon the Deſcription of the Seat de Seaux belonging to Mr. Colbert, a ſmall but very ingenious Poem. The Harangue he made when admitted a Member of the French Academy, and two other Speeches which he made to the King upon the Subject of his Conqueſts, are ſufficient Proofs he was no leſs an Orator than a Poet. Towards the End of his Life he was diſpleas'd with himſelf for ſpending his time in writing Operas, and reſolv'd for the future to employ his Muſe upon religious Subjects and Panegyricks to do juſtice to his Prince. His Recantation runs thus;

Je n'ai que trop chanté les jeux & les Amours,
Sur un ton plus Sublime il faut me faire entendre:
Je vous dis adieu, Muſe tendre,
Je vous dis Adieu, pour toujours.

He died November 1688, 53 Years of Age. He is ſaid to die worth a hundred thouſand Crowns, which is not very common to Poets.

His chief Performances are, les Fêtes de l'Amour & de Bacchus, Cadmus & Hermione, Alceſte, Pſyche, le Maſcarade du Carnaval, Theſee, Atys, Iſis, Proſerpine, Rolland, le Temple de la Paix & Armide. * Memoires Hiſtoriq. Journal des Savans, Du 23. Mars 1665. Boileau despreaux, dans la Preface de ſes Oeuvres, & Satyr 2 & 3. Menagiana, Tom. 2.

QUINQUATRIA, Feſtivals kept at Rome in Honour of Pallas: The School Boys play'd during this Solemnity, and made their Maſters a Preſent called Minerval. Trajedies were likewiſe acted and Poets and Oratours played a Prize with their Brains and Lungs, where he that performed beſt was crowned, and had the plate given by the Emperor Domitian. Statius brags of his good Fortune in his Sylvæ.

Lux mihi Romanæ qualis ſub collibus Albæ,
Cum modo Germanas acies, modo Daca ſonantem
Prælia, Palladio tua me manus induit Auro.
* Statius Sylv. 2 ℣. 67.

QUINTINIE (Jean de la,) the Director of all the French Kings Fruit, and Kitchin Gardens. He was born at Poitiers in 1626, and ſtudied in the Jeſuits College in that City. As ſoon as he had gone through his Courſe of Philoſophy, and made ſome progreſs in the Law, he went to Paris in Order to the Bar. Being naturally a good Speaker, he practiſed with Credit, and was much valued by ſome of the moſt conſiderable Magiſtracy. M. Tambonneau, Preſident of the Chamber of Accounts, gave him the Care of his Son's Education: Notwithſtanding he was a Lawyer and a Tutor, his fancy lay moſtly for Agriculture. He read Columella, Varro, Virgil, and all other ancient Authors, who had treated upon this Subject, and what the Moderns had done upon it too, ſo that he had all the Book Part belonging to this Branch of Knowledge. He travelled into Italy with his Pupil, where he ſaw all the fine Gardens, and made a great many curious, and ſerviceable Remarks upon them. And now being throughly furniſhed with the Theory, his next Step was to advance to the practick Part. He made a great many Tryals in M. Tambonneaus's Garden. And here to enquire the Cloſer into Nature's progreſs in the Production of a Root; He planted ſeveral Trees in a Day of the ſame Kind, and afterwards pulled them up one after another Week by Week, to diſcover the firſt Formation, the carrying on, and perfecting of the Roots. By this Method he learned what was not yet diſcovered, that a Tree tranſplanted receives no Nouriſhment excepting by the Roots ſhot out ſince it was tranſplanted; and which are like ſo many Mouths for taking in the nouriſhing Moiſtures of the Earth: And that it receives nothing by the little hairy Roots left to it when removed. From hence we may learn that inſtead of preſerving theſe old little Roots as they did formerly when a Tree was tranſplanted, the better way is to cut them off, becauſe they commonly dry the Tree, and bring Damage inſtead of Relief. Farther, he has diſcovered the true, and infallible Way of cutting a Tree to advantage. Before M. Quintinie, the Gardiners minded little farther in cutting a Tree, than giving it a handſom Shape, and clearing off thoſe Boughs which hindered the View. But he has improved the Buſineſs ſo far as to teach the Art to make a Tree bear, and in thoſe very Places the Planter has a Mind to, and even to make it bear eqally in all the Branches; which nobody ever thought of, or believed poſſible. He maintains, and daily Experience confirms his Remark, that a

Tree

Tree over rich, and left wholly to itſelf, commonly affords nothing but Boughs and Leaves. That the ſtrong bent of ſuch a Tree to work for nothing but it's own Intereſt, muſt be checked, that ſome of the largeſt Boughs which conſume moſt of the Sap, muſt be lopped, and by this Means the Sap will be carried into other Channels, and the other weak, and almoſt deſerted Branches will have nouriſhment brought to them; and by the Way, theſe are the only Branches which bear moſt Fruit. To give a detail of all the Diſcoveries and Improvements he has obliged the World with cannot be done without tranſcribing his excellent Book, entitled Inſtructions for Fruit and Kitchin Gardens. This Book has had the Approbation of all Europe, has been printed more than once in France and Holland, and tranſlated into Engliſh.

The Prince of Condeé, whoſe Fancy was divided between Gardening and War, was extreamly pleaſed with hearing la Quintinie diſcourſe upon this Subject. Charles II. King of England gave him ſeveral Marks of of his Eſteem in the two Voyages he made into this Iſland: He offered him a very conſiderable Penſion to look after his Gardens, but it may be not being willing to live out of his Country, he declined accepting. In theſe two Voyages he made an Acquaintance with a great many of the Engliſh Nobility, with whom he held a Correſpondence by Letters as long as he lived. Theſe Letters of his, always containing ſomething of the improvement of Gardening, were printed at London.

The French King in favour of La Quintinie, encreaſed the Number of the Officers of his Houſe, and made a Director General of his Fruit Gardens, belonging to all his Palaces. As ſoon as La Quintinie had a Patent for this Employment, he improved the old Kitchin Garden at Verſailles, where the fine Fruit, the excellent Pulſe and Salading, which he produced, put the King upon the Thought of making another there which is ſo much admired, by every Body that ſees it. * Perrault, les Hommes illuſtres qui ont paru en France. Tom. II.

* QUIRIACUS, or Kiriacus, for three hundred forty ſix Years in Morery Vol. II. read two hundred ninety two.

QUIRINUS, Biſhop of Siſſeg in Pannonia. A Martyr in the fourth Century, in the Perſecution raiſed by Galerius Maximianus: He was apprehended by the Soldiers A. D. 309, and carried before the Governor Maximus, where he boldly declared himſelf a Chriſtian. Maximus ordered him to be impriſoned and loaded with Irons: In the Night a miraculous Light was ſeen in the Priſon, which ſurpriſed the Jaylor ſo far as to make him turn Chriſtian. Maximus ſent Quirinus to the Governor of Pannonia to be tryed in that higheſt Court. This Biſhop perſiſting in his Confeſſion, was condemned by the Governor and thrown into a River with a Milſtone about his Neck. St. Jerom reckons his Death to the Year 310, but others ſet it a Year or two ſooner. His Feſtival is kept on the fourth of June. Prudent. Hymn.* 7. Ruinart. Acta Martyrum ſincera. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

QUIRINUS, Cyrenius or Cyrinus, an eminent Senator of Rome, was choſen Conſul after having gone through the other Stages of Magiſtracy. Auguſtus gave him the Government of Syria. While Quirinus or Cyrenius was in this Poſt the Emperor ſet forth an Edict for taxing and regiſtring the Names of all his Subjects, with Orders that all Perſons of whatſoever Age, Sex, and Condition, ſhould repair to the Place of their Birth, enter themſelves upon the Roll, and give in a Valuation of their Eſtates to pay a Poll-Tax. Auguſtus his Deſign was to inform himſelf what Numbers there were in his Empire, and how far he might reckon upon his Revenue. Quirinus acquitted himſelf honourably in this Commiſſion; and the fourth Year of entring upon this Regiſter, came to Bethlehem; whither Joſeph the bleſſed Virgin's Husband, who was originally of that Town, and dwelt at Nazareth, repaired and brought his Wife along with him, who was there delivered of our bleſſed Saviour. This taking a liſt of the Subjects was diſturbed by a Sedition, raiſed by Judas Gaulonites, of the Town of Gamala, and by Sadoc a Prieſt of the Sect of the Phariſees: Theſe two declared every where that the meaning of this regiſtring, was only to make them Slaves upon Record, that they ought to own no other Sovereign but God, and that being reſcued from Pharaoh's Bondage, 'twas both their Privilege and their Duty, not to be ſubject to any Mortal. Theſe Incendiaries, being good Speakers, made all thoſe, who delighted in robbing and murther, run to Arms immediately. The Ravage they made and the Miſchief they did in Judæa, can hardly be imagined. If Auguſtus had not ſent a good Army there to ſuppreſs theſe Mutineers, the Fire they had kindled would have laid all in Aſhes, for the Rebellion had already ſpread into Syria. The Inſurrection kept upon it's Feet, and laſted from the 5th or 6th Year of this Regiſtring, till the End of the Reign of Archelaüs, Son of Herod the Great; though it did not always flame out with the ſame Fierceneſs. Theſe Rebels ſcoured the Country ſtill with flying Parties, and had not laid down their Arms, when Archelaüs amongſt other Articles was impeached for countenancing this Sedition: And not being able to juſtify himſelf, was baniſhed into Dauphiné in Gaul. Quirinus and Coponius received Orders to ſell his Palace and his Eſtate, and ſeize his Treaſure. Vitellius who was afterwards Emperor ſucceeded Quirinus in the Government of Syria. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 18. chap. 1 and 5. Simon, Dictionaire de la Bible.

R.

RABACH, Rabat, a large City in Africk, formerly reckoned part of Mauritania Tingitana, and lies now within the Province of Tremecen, Parcel of the Kingdom of Fez, between the City Fez and Tangier, five and twenty Leagues from the firſt, and one and twenty from the latter: It ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Ocean, on the Weſt Side of the Mouth of the River Burregreg, and, as Abdulmalie reports, was built by Jacob Almanſor: Others make Abdulmumen the Founder. This Town has a ſtrong Caſtle waſhed by the Sea on one Side, and by the River on the other; and though it is conſiderably leſs than Morocco, the Buildings are much the ſame. It was built for the Prince's Reſidence in the Summer, and that he might be nearer his Forces which he tranſported into Spain. It was called Rabat, that is to ſay, a Suburb, and was finiſh'd in a ſhort time, notwithſtanding there were large Palaces, very large Moſques, and other ornamental Buildings. The Emperor took ſo much Care to make it fine; that Morocco ſcarcely exceeded it: The Tower of the chief Moſque is like that of the Fort of Morocco, and the Tower of the great Church at Seville. Thus they ſeem to be made by the ſame Architect; though the Staircaſe of the great Moſque of Rabat is larger than that of the other two Towers, and that four Horſes a-breaſt may go up to the top on't: It is ſuppoſed to be the higheſt in all Africk, which is not unlikely, for from the top on't a Ship may be ſeen twenty Leagues diſtant. As ſoon as this Town was built Jacob Almanſor furniſh'd it with all ſorts of Artificers, Tradeſmen, and Scholars, and maintain'd them at his own Charge. He reſided there from the Beginning of April to the End of September. Theſe Advantages drew a great many People from all Parts thither, inſomuch that it became one of the beſt Cities in Barbary: And in regard the Well and River Water were ſpoiled by the Neighbourhood of the Sea, this Prince laid Pipes four Leagues diſtant from the Town, and convey'd freſh Water into the Squares, the Palaces, and the Moſques. As long as Almanſor liv'd the Town increaſed, but after his Death the War between the Almohades and Bemimerimis harraſſed the Town to ſuch a Degree, that the twelfth Part of the Burghers were ſcarce left; the great Aqueduct was quite ſpoiled, and a great many Moſques and Palaces demoliſhed. At preſent there is not above ſix hundred Houſes in it, ſtanding near the Caſtle; all the reſt is nothing but Incloſure and Gardens. The Chaviens are Maſters of all the Country round about, and ſpread as far as the Fields, which lie to the Eaſt of the River where the Paſture Ground is very good. He that commands in the Caſtle for the Emperor of Fez is Governour of the Town. The Caſtle has little Strength, and ſignifies nothing againſt Cannon, becauſe it has no Ramparts to deaden the Balls. * Marmol's Deſcription of the Kingdom of Fez. Tom. 2. lib. 4. cap. 5.

RACINE (John,) one of the moſt celebrated French Poets in the ſeventeenth Century, was Treaſurer of France in the Generality of Moulins, King's Secretary, and one of his Majeſty's Gentlemen. He was born at la Ferte-Milon in the Year 1639, and poſſibly never any Perſon came into the World with a finer Genius for Learning. From his Childhood his Cuſtom was to ſpend his time in old Authors; and being brought up at Port-Royal he us'd to go frequently into the Woods belonging to this Abby, and ſpend whole Days in reading Homer, Sophocles, and Euripides, the Language of theſe Poets being as familiar to him as his own. He made his Tragedy called Thebais at an Age when the reading an old Author was reckoned a diſtinguiſhing Progreſs; he was then but one and twenty Years of Age, and from this time the King gave him a Penſion, which was afterwards almoſt continually increaſing. The famous Peter Corneille was then in the Height of his Reputation: France had never ſeen ſo much Senſe and Sublime upon the Stage before; inſomuch that at firſt Racine was look'd upon as a preſumptuous Youth for venturing to write the ſame manner of Poetry with this great Man, and to graſp at the ſame Applauſe. But being puſh'd by the ſtrength of Genius and Inclination, he never endeavour'd to imitate Corneille, but work'd upon a new Model. Corneille flouriſh'd his Characters up to a Romantic Greatneſs, and drew them with Heightnings above Nature; but withal made 'em look bold, nobly, and well proportion'd; and by theſe extraordinary Flights with judicious Conduct tranſported the Company; and made 'em ſpend all their Fancy and Paſſion in admiring the Nobleneſs of his Thought and Expreſſion, and the Art he had in governing his Muſe, when rais'd to ſo lofty a Pitch. This manner, though ſo very much admired, did not diſcourage Racine from going another way to work: He made it his Buſineſs to draw Nature in her juſt Proportions, to touch the Heart, and make himſelf Maſter of the Paſſions: He raiſed that agreeable Concern which gives People a Share in the Fortune of the Perſons mentioned in the Play: He threw Terror and Pity into the Minds of the Company, which according to Ariſtotle are the proper Paſſions for Tragedy. He forc'd them to weep with Pleaſure, by giving a true and affecting Portrait of Nature, and taught 'em to blame their own Weakneſſes and Paſſions in the Characters repreſented on the Stage: And now the Publick, without giving over admiring the Majeſtick Grandeur of Corneille, began likewiſe to do Juſtice to the natural Beauties and Tenderneſs of the famous Racine. One would hardly believe that a Perſon born with ſo extraordinary a Talent for Poetry could ever have made a fine Speaker in Proſe; but his Genius was unconfin'd, his Elocution brought him off with great Applauſe upon all publick Occaſions; inſomuch that King Lewis XIV. pitch'd upon him to write the Hiſtory of his Life; and if he had liv'd longer he would poſſibly have ſhewn himſelf as great a Maſter in writing Hiſtory, as he had been in his Compoſitions for the Stage.

Beſides the Commendation of Wit, Judgment, and Learning belonging to him, he was likewiſe a Perſon of Probity and Religion: This Diſpoſition made him reform his Pagan Muſe, and employ her upon edifying Subjects. He wrote Hymns in a very entertaining ſublime manner; and in his Tragedies of Eſther and Athalia, he rather exceeded any thing he had done of that kind before. He was admitted a Member in the French Academy 1673, and was Director of that Society when he made a Funeral Panegyrick upon Corneille. Racine dy'd April 22, 1699. His Pagan Plays are nine Tragedies and one Comedy. M. Baillet has drawn a handſom Parallel between Racine and Corneille, and made critical Remarks upon all Racine's Plays. He was buried according to his Deſire at Port-Royal des Champs in the Churchyard at the Feet of Mr. Hamont. His laſt Will and Teſtament contains only this Requeſt in the Words following: "I humbly requeſt "the Lady Abbeſs and the Nuns to grant me the Ho"nour of being buried as above mention'd, though I "confeſs myſelf very unworthy of it, upon the ſcore "of my Misbehaviour and miſpending my Time, and "becauſe of the little uſe I made of the excellent Edu"cation I formerly receiv'd from this Abby, and have "been no better than an unimitating Admirer of thoſe "great Examples of Piety and Penance I obſerv'd "there. But the more I have offended God Almighty, "the more need I have of the Prayers of ſo holy a Society." * Memoires du Tems. M. de Valincour, Diſcours a l'Acad. Baillet ſur les Poetes modernes. Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France, &c. Tom. II.

RADZIOWISKI, (Michael,) Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Gueſna, firſt Prince and Primate of the Kingdom of Poland. He was Son to Jerom Radziowiski, Staroſta of Lomzen, and afterwards Deputy Chancellor of the Kingdom; the Archbiſhop's Mother was a Daughter to the Earl of Tornow, and died in Childbed of him December 1645. He likewiſe loſt his Father at nine Years of Age. Queen Mary-Louiſa of Gonzaga took care of his Education, and ſent him to Paris, where he ſtudied in the College of Harcourt: She likewiſe furniſhed his Pocket for travelling in ſeveral Countries. Marſhal Sobieski, to whom he had the Honour to be related, preferred him to the Biſhoprick of Warmia in 1679, and afterwards made him under Chamberlain of the Kingdom. Four Years forward he procured him a Cardinal's Cap of Pope Innocent XI. This Prince afterwards nominated him to the Archbiſhoprick of Gueſna, and by this Promotion made him the firſt Peer of the Realm. After the Death of Sobieski, who was King John III. the Cardinal Primate convened the Eſtates of the Republick for an Election. And here he did his utmoſt to prevent the Electors from being divided in their Votes: But after all, they were not unanimous in their Choice. It is well known he held on the right Side, and it was not his Fault that the Prince of Conti's Election, which was carried by a Majority, was not owned by the whole Republick. But the Prince of Conti being abſent, and the Elector of Saxony upon the Spot, his Intereſt prevailed: This Prince was crowned without giving the Primate any Share in the Solemnity. However, preferring the repoſe of his Country to any private Conſiderations of his own, he conſented at laſt to recognize King Auguſtus. This Prince having made an Infraction upon ſeveral Articles ſigned at his Coronation, and unadviſedly attacked the King of Sweden in Livonia, drew his Swediſh Majeſty into Poland upon him, who reſolved never to ſheath his Sword, till he had dethroned his Enemy. The Cardinal Primate did what he could to mediate a Peace but to no purpoſe. For things grew rougher and more ruffled. The Court of Rome ſeemed diſſatisfied with the Primate, for bending too much to the King of Sweden's Demands, which was done only for diſpoſing that King to a Peace. The Poles proceeded to a ſecond Election, which fell upon Staniſlaus Earl of Leçſinski. Cardinal Radziowiski withdrew to Dantſwick, where he died October the 13th 1705. in the 60th Year of his Age and with the Reputation of a long headed Man and fit for Buſineſs. Memoires du Tems.*

RAGBIL, a City within the Kingdom of Ganah, in the Country of the Negroes: It ſtands upon a Lake which the Country People call Bahr Alhalou; i. e. the freſh Sea, becauſe the Water is not ſalt like that of the other Lakes in this Country, which are either ſalt or brackiſh. This Town has a very high Mountain on the ſouth Side, which makes the Situation more pleaſant and convenient: They reckon eleven Days Journey of a Caravan from Ragbil to the Town Ganarah to the Weſt. * Edriſſi, in the ſecond Part of his firſt Climate.

RAIMOND, des Martins, a learned Dominican: he he was born in Catalonia, turned Monk at Barcelona, and was a good Orientaliſt, which ſort of learning was very uncommon in his time. He wrote an excellent Book againſt the Moors and the Jews, printed at Paris 1651, with the Title of Pugio Fidei, in which he beats the Jews and Mahometans with their own Weapons. Porchet a Carthuſian made great uſe of it in his Book entituled Le Victoire contre les Juifs; but then he was ſo juſt as to acknowledge his Benefactor. Whereas Petrus Galatinus tranſcribed Porchet and Raimond pretty boldly in his Book, de Arcanis Veritatis Catholicæ, without naming one or the other. Raimond's Book was printed with learned Notes done by M. Voiſin at Paris in the Year 1651, and at Leipſick in 1687. Scaliger took this Raimond for Raimond de Seboade, Author of a Book entituled Theologia naturalis, but he is miſtaken. Voiſin who was a good Hebrician drew his Remarks upon Raimon's Pugio, from the Rabbines. To conclude this Raimond lived pretty far in the thirteenth Century; and thoſe who are deſirous to look into the Perſuaſion of the modern Jews, may be fully informed in his Book. Gallatinus has cited ſome ſpurious Books, and others for very old ones, which are of much later Date, but none of theſe are quoted by Raimond. * R. Simon. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XIII.

RAMA, or Ramah, a Town belonging to the Levites, within the Diviſion of the Tribe of Benjamin, and the Place where the Propheteſs Deborah lived: 'Twas about five Miles diſtant from Jeruſalem; the Ruins of the Walls and Towers are Proof that it has been very conſiderable, particularly when the Chriſtians had it. There are ſtill to be ſeen ſome Remains of two fine Churches which were turned into Moſques when the Turks gained the Country. The Town was retaken by the Chriſtians in the Year 1099. The Steeple of one of theſe Churches was built like a Tower, and at preſent the Turks make uſe of it to call the People to Prayers. It is ſquare and ornamented with four and twenty beautiful Windows; Part of the Abby of the Benedictine Nuns is ſtill ſtanding. The Cordeliers have a little Cell there; where five of their Fraternity live, and are very friendly and ſerviceable to the Chriſtian Merchants and Pilgrims, who travel to the Holy Land. St. Matthew mentions the Mothers Weeping and Lamentation for the loſs of their Infants murthered by Herod. This Town was built upon a Hill, for which Reaſon it was called Rama. * R. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

RAMA, a ſmall Country of Herzegowine, in Dalmatia. It lies to the Weſt of the River Narenta, and round about the River Rama. The principal Towns in it are Riapci, and S. Petro di Rama. It is ſaid Rama makes Part of the King of Hungary's Titles. * Maty, Diction.

RAMATHA, a Town of Paleſtine, in the weſtern Precinct of the Tribe of Ephraim, upon the Frontiers of the Tribe of Dan, and parcel of the Kingdom of Samaria. The Europeans now call it Rama and the Turks Remle and Ramola. 'Tis ten Miles from Joppa to the Eaſt, and thirty from Jeruſalem, but at preſent it is almoſt all in Rubbiſh. It was the Place where Elkanah Samuel's Father lived, and where that Prophet was born and buried. It was divided into the upper and lower Town. The upper was built upon the Top of a Mountain, which opened a Proſpect into a large Country called Ramathaim Zophim: and the lower was ſituate upon a Plain called Amatha, Amathaim or Aramathea, which was the Place where Joſeph of Arimathæa lived. * 1 Samuel chap. 1.; R. Simon Dictionaire de la Bible.

RAMELIES, or Ramilly, a ſmall Village in Brabant near the Head of the Geete, and the Gef, and is remarkable for nothing but a famous Battel fought near this Village, on Whitſunday May 12 in the Year 1706: The two Armies that fought, were the French, Spaniards, and Bavarians on one Side, and the confederate Engliſh, Imperialiſts, Dutch, Danes, Hannoverians, &c. on the other. Here the French being entirely defeated, retired to their own Lines, behind Menin and Courtray, and quitted all Brabant to the Enemy. This Victory gave the Confederates an Opportunity of taking ſeveral other Towns. * Memoires du Tems.

RATS. The Phrygians paid a great Veneration to Rats, according to Clemens Alexandrinus. Polemo, ſays he, reports, " That the Trojans worſhipped Rats which " they called Smintheus, becauſe one time they gnaw- " ed the Bow Strings of their Enemies:" Apollo was called Smintheus, and Strabo mentions a Statue of this pretended Deity, with a Rat at his Feet. Herodotus reports, that Sennacherib King of Aſſyria having conquered Aſia made War upon the Ægyptians, and that Setho King of Ægypt, and Prieſt of Vulcan, not having Forces enough to defend himſelf, and relying upon the Gods, came up to Peluſium and encamped there: And that a vaſt Number of Rats came in the Night into the Enemies Camp, and gnawed their Bow Strings and the Thongs of their Shields; inſomuch that in the Morning, finding their Arms unſerviceable, they were forced to retreat with great Loſs. Herodotus adds that he had ſeen a Statue of King Setho in Vulcan's Temple, holding a Rat in his Hand with this Inſcription; Let him, who looks upon me, ſtand in awe of the Gods. And it may be this was the Reaſon that the Ægyptian Hieroglyphick for Deſtruction, was the Figure of a Rat. * Florus Apollo, Danet.

* RATRAMNUS, or Bertram, a Prieſt and Monk in the Abby of Corbie, living in the ninth Century, and not in the eleventh, as it is miſprinted in Morery Vol. II. It has been diſputed whether the Tract of the Body and Blood of our Saviour in the Euchariſt belonged to Ratramnus, as it was vouched in the firſt Edition printed at Cologne A. D. 1532, by ſome German Proteſtants. A great many Roman Catholicks believing it oppoſed the Doctrine of the Reality, affirmed it a ſpurious Piece. Sixtus Senenſis, Eſpenſæus, and Genebrard, were of this Opi-

Opinion: and afterwards the Council of Treves, ranged it among prohibited Books. Pope Clement VIII. rejected it as an Heretical Tract, and ſo did Bellarmin, Quiroga, Sandoval, and Cardinal Allen. Cardinal Perron did not believe it ſuppoſititious, but was by no Means pleaſed with the Doctrine. M. de Sainte Beuve King's Profeſſor in the Sorbonne, aſſerted the Orthodoxy of this Book 1655. The famous M. de Marca was not of his Sentiment. The Print called the Author Bertram. And at length it was ſufficiently known that Bertram and Ratramnus was the ſame. Archbiſhop Uſher was the firſt that made this Diſcovery; however de Marca pretended, that the Book which goes under Bertram's Name, was written by Johannes Scotus Erigena. In which Opinion he was followed by Hardouin a Jeſuit, and ſome others. But afterwards P. Mabillon having found a Manuſcript in the Abby of Lobes, written in the ninth Century, with this Title. Incipit Liber Ratramni de Corpore & Sanguine Domini; to which Manuſcript a Tract of Predeſtination was annexed, with Ratramnus's Name as the Author: Mabillon likewiſe found an ancient Catalogue of Books in this Abby, made in the Year 1049, where the Tract abovementioned ſtands thus, Ratramni de Corpore & Sanguine Domini L. 1. Ejuſdem de Prædeſtinatione &c. After this Evidence, there is no Room to doubt of the Genuineneſs of the Book. Beſides, Mabillon ſaw another Manuſcript in Germany of the tenth Century, the ſame with that at Lobes. M. Boileau Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Dean of Sens printed this Tract of Ratramnus A. D. 1686: This Edition is reckoned more correct than any of the former, being collated by the Copy Mabillon tranſcribed from the Original at Lobes. Boileau added a French Tranſlation to it, with Notes and a Preface, in which he endeavours to ſhew that Ratramnus or Bertram's Opinion is Orthodox, his Meaning is that it maintains Tranſubſtantiation. * Sigebert, de Script. Eccl. Trithême, in Catal. Script. Illuſt. Du Perron, lib. 1. de Euchariſt. cap. 1. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Hiſt. Cent. IX.

RAVAILLIAC (Francis,) born at Angoulême, killed the French King Henry IV. May 14. 1610. This Prince was going in his Coach to diſcourſe the Duke de Sully, Surentendant of the Finances and great Maſter of the Ordinance. Ravailliac gave him two or three Stabs with a Knife, one of which cut the great Artery which paſſes through the Lungs. He fell dead upon the Duke Epernon, who ſat by his Side, and to whom he was then whiſpering, when this Aſaſſin gave him the firſt Wound. If Ravailliac had put up his Knife, he might have got off in the Hurry and Confuſion of ſuch an Accident. But being perſwaded he had done a meritorious Action, he held it in his Hand when he was ſeized. One of the King's Gentlemen, and his Footmen would immediately have ſtabbed him almoſt in every Pore, had they been at their Liberty. But the Duke Epernon, remembring the miſtake in killing the Monk ſo ſuddenly who murthered King Henry III, forbid any Body to touch him under Pain of Death. He was conveyed to the Hôtel de Retz. But by a negligent Conduct, which looked ſomewhat ſuſpiciouſly, inſtead of keeping this Wretch cloſe in a dark Hole, every Body had the Liberty of converſing with him the two Days he was kept in this Hôtel. And it was particularly obſerved that a Monk coming to him and calling him Friend, bid him have a care not to inform againſt honeſt People. The Parliament brought him to his Tryal, and the firſt Preſident and two or three others of the Bench put ſeveral Queſtions to him. All that can be collected from the Interrogatories now remaining, is, that Ravailliac was an Enthuſiaſt; that hearing Henry IV. was making War upon the Pope, and that he did not concern himſelf about converting the Hugenots; This Miſconduct as Ravailliac reckoned it, made him look upon the King as a Tyrant, and reſolve to kill him. The Sermons that Ravailliac had heard, in which the Preachers for the League juſtifyed James Clements murthering King Henry III, confirm'd him in this villainous Thought, that any private Perſon might take away the King's Life who was the Pope's Enemy. To make War againſt the Pope, ſays Ravailliac to the Court, is to fight againſt God Almighty. Inaſmuch as the Pope is God, and God is the Pope. This unhappy Wretch very ignorant in other Matters, underſtood ſo well to maintain the Tenets of the Jeſuits, and thoſe of the Sorbonne concerned in the League, that it was eaſy to collect that ſome People had taken great Pains to inſtruct him. But whether he had a Mind to oblige a Monk who called him his Friend, or whether that horrible Deſign was his own Invention, he conſtantly declared to the laſt Moment of his Life, that neither any French Man or Foreigner had any ways puſhed him upon deſtroying a Prince who had never done him any Harm living, and whoſe Death could ſignifie nothing to him, though he ſhould not be puniſhed for it. He underwent the Puniſhment the Laws of France appoint for ſuch kind of Villanies, and was executed May 27. 1610. He was about two and thirty Years of Age, and the Son of an Attorny then living. At firſt he followed his Father's Buſineſs and afterwards entered himſelf among the Feuillans, from whence it was not long before he was expelled for his Dotages. Some time after he was taked up for a Murther, of which notwithſtanding he was cleared at his Tryal; and now being enlarged, he followed the Law again, and was caſt in a Suit commenced by him for an Eſtate he had laid claim to. So that now he was reduced ſo low, as to teach poor Peoples Children at Angoulême. The Auſterities of the Cloyſter, the Inconvenience of the Priſon, the Loſing his Cauſe, and the extream Indigence he lay under, ſhattered his Head and made his melancholy Humour more predominant. The intemperate Sallies of the Leaguers, their ſeditious Libels, and the Invectives of their Preachers, had poiſoned his underſtanding a great while ſince, and gave him a ſtrong Averſion to Henry IV. Theſe pernicious Inſtructions made him believe that thoſe who endangered Religion and made War with the Pope might fairly be taken off. And his Head was ſo heated with this perſwaſion, that he could not hear the Name of a Hugenot without falling into a Storm. Thoſe who had concerted to rid themſelves of the King, ſays Mazerai, finding this Fellow fit for the Purpoſe, ſet ſome of their Friends about him to confirm him in his Miſperſwaſion. They got him farther inſtructed by the Doctors, and ſpirited him on by pretended Viſions, and other reſembling Deluſions. There is Proof, continues this Hiſtorian, of their carrying him as far as Naples, where at a meeting in the Viceroy's Palace, there were a great many others who had engaged themſelves in the ſame undertaking; at laſt Ravailliac was brought from Angoulême to Paris two or three times to harden him for the Attempt. * Mazerai Abrégé Chronologique, Hiſtoire de Henry IV. Mercure François 1610. M. le Vaſſor, Hiſtoire de Louis XIII. lib. 1.

* RECHESUIND. For ſix hundred forty nine in Morery Vol. II. read ſix hundred and four, and under Rechiaitois, for four hundred and fifty ſix ibid. read ſix hundred fifty ſix.

* REGALE. For Charles XI. in Morery Vol. II. read Charles IX.

REGIS (Peter Silvain) a Philoſopher born in 1632 at la Salvetat de Blanquefort in the County of Agenois. After having gone through a Courſe of Humanity at Cahors, he ſtudy'd Divinity in that Univerſity, and came to Paris for farther Proficiency; but here he alter'd his Studies, and apply'd himſelf wholly to the Carteſian Philoſophy. He was ſome time Pupil to the famous Rohault: He went to Toulouſe, and there ſet up publick Conferences upon the Subject of the new Philoſophy. He came to Paris in 1680, and held Conferences there for about half a Year. In 1699 he was admitted a Member of the Academy of Sciences, but his ill Health hinder'd him from aſſiſting at the Aſſemblies: He dy'd January, 1707, at the Duke of Roan's: His printed Works are a Syſtem of Philoſophy, comprehending Logick, Metaphyſicks, Phyſicks, and Ethicks, in three Volumes 4^to^, printed at Paris 1690, and at Amſterdam 1691; an Anſwer to Huetius's Book entituled Cenſura Philoſophiæ Carteſianæ; an Anſwer to the critical Reflexions of du Hamel upon the Carteſian Syſtem of Regis's Philoſophy; Diſcourſes againſt P. Malbranche, to ſhew that the apparent Greatneſs of an Object depends wholly upon the Bigneſs of the Image drawn upon the Tunica Retina; he likewiſe oppoſes Malbranche upon ſome metaphyſical Queſtions relating to Ideas; for Inſtance, Whether Pleaſure makes us actually happy? He likewiſe wrote a Book entituled de l'Uſage de la Raiſon, & de la Foi, in which he endeavours to reconcile Faith and Reaſon. The Reader may

may ſee more of the Commendation of Regis in the Hiſtory of the Royal Academy of Sciences for the Year 1707.

REGIUS, (Urban,) a Perſon of Learning in the ſixteenth Century. He was born at Langeenargen upon the Lake of Conſtance; he ſtudy'd at Lindaw, Fribourg, Baſil, and Ingolſtad, at which laſt Place the Emperor Maximilian gave him the Orator and Poet's Crown with his own Hands. Some time after he was made Profeſſor of Rhetorick and Poetry in the Univerſity of this Town; afterwards he apply'd himſelf wholly to the Study of Divinity. His Reading and Reflexions inclined him to Lutheraniſm; but he found himſelf ſomewhat embarraſs'd that Eccius, who had been his Maſter and Benefactor, was engaged in Controverſy with Luther. This Conteſt made him reſolve to retire from Ingolſtad and ſettle at Ausbourg, where he exerted himſelf againſt Popery: Here he ſet up a reformed Church, and ſpread his Opinions into Suabia. He was ſometimes a Zuinglian, but afterwards declared himſelf a Lutheran. Eccius went to ſee him at Ausbourg, and endeavoured to bring him back to the Church of Rome, but without Effect: This occaſion'd a Paper War betwixt them, where Regius is ſaid to maintain his Ground. He ſtay'd at Ausbourg till the Diet held there in 1530. After this time he went to the Duke of Brunſwick, who made him Superintendant of the Churches in the Country of Lunenbourg, and had an extraordinary Value for him. He acquitted himſelf with Reputation in ſeveral Synods, and wrote ſeveral Books. He dy'd at Zell A. D. 1541. His Death was ſuch as he often wiſh'd for, that is, almoſt ſudden. * Bayle, Diction. Critique.

REINECK, a ſmall County in Franconia; it lies between the Dioceſes of Mentz and Wurtzburg, and between the Abby of Fulde and the County of Hannaw. This Earldom or County has had Earls belonging to it by Deſcent, but the Family being now extinct 'tis divided between the Archbiſhop of Mentz, the Biſhop of Wurtzburg, and the Earls of Erpach and Hannaw. Reineck and Lohr are the two principal Towns. * Maty, Diction.

REINSTEIN, an Earldom. It is a ſmall Country in Lower Saxony; it lies between the Principalities of Anhalt, Halberſtat, and the Duchy of Brunſwick. This Country was governed by hereditary Earls, but the Family failing, the Electors of Brandenbourg ſeiz'd it, as holding of the Principality of Halberſtad, they ſeiz'd it all, I ſay, excepting the ſmall Earldom of Blankenberg, which was annex'd for the ſame Reaſon to the Duchy of Brunſwick. * Maty, Diction.

*RELIGIONS in Europe. For Zurick among the Swiſs Popiſh Cantons in Morery Vol. II. read Zug.

REMPHAN, or Rephan, a pretended Deity worſhipped by the Iſraelites, about whom the Learned are pretty much divided. Some pretend it is the Star Venus, which the Ægyptians, Phœnicians, and the Aſſyrians worſhipp'd, Amos 5. 26. Acts 7. 43. Others pretend it is Adonis called Thammuz in Ezekiel 8. 14. Some Authors believe Remphan was a King of Ægypt, who had religious Worſhip paid him after he was dead; and was either taken for the Intelligence of the Planet Saturn, or worſhipped under that Figure. Diodorus Siculus mentions one Remphis, Son of Cephna, a King of Ægypt, who lived ſoon after Jacob went into this Country. He reports this Prince amaſſed a great deal of Wealth, and left four Millions of Talents behind him, which gives ſome Pretence to the Suppoſition, that this is the ſame Pharaoh who by Joſeph's Advice and Conduct made himſelf Maſter of all his Subjects Eſtates, by ſupplying them with Corn in the time of Famine. This King had divine Worſhip paid him after his Death, becauſe he preſerv'd Ægypt by foreſeeing what would happen. He was repreſented under the Figure of a Star; and this is the Star of their God Remphan, mention'd in the Acts. This Planet ſeems to be Saturn, for in an Ægyptian Alphabet, where the Names of the Planets are mark'd, Saturn ſtands thus PHΦAN. * Diodor. Sicul. lib. 1. Hammond upon the Acts. Johannis Braunci, Selecta Sacra, &c.

RENALDINI (Charles,) an Italian born in 1615. He was a Profeſſor at Padua in 1665, and has publiſh'd a Diſcourſe upon Poetry printed in Folio at that Town in 1681, in his firſt Tome of Philoſophy. He ranges his Diſſertations under Method, to give the better Connexion to his Matter. He diſcourſes of Meaſure and Verſification, of Imitation, and miſcarrying in the manner, of the Original of Poetry, and of the Tranſports in this way of writing. From hence he proceeds upon the Intermixture of Fable required in Poetry; of the Qualities of a Poem, the Manners, the Thoughts and Expreſſion; in his laſt Diſſertation he handles the different kinds of Poetry, Tragedy, Comedy, Heroick Poetry, Eclogues, Satyrs, Romances, Elegies, Epigrams, Epitaphs and Panegyricks. * Acta Eruditor. Lipſienſ. An. 1682. Baillet, Jugem. des Sav. ſur les Auteurs de l'Art Poetique.

RENAUDOTIUS (Euſebius,) a Member of the French Academy, and a very learned Perſon in the oriental Languages, and particularly in the religious Cuſtoms of the Eaſtern Chriſtians. He has lately publiſh'd ſome Tracts, in which he endeavours to prove that the Greek Church and other Eaſtern Communions agree with the Latins in their Sentiment concerning the Holy Euchariſt. His firſt Book written in French is entituled, a Defence of the Perpetuity of the Faith, againſt the Calumnies and Miſrepreſentations of a Book entituled, Authentick Monuments of the Religion of the Greeks. This Book of Renaudotius's was printed at Paris in the Year 1709, in Octavo. His ſecond Book is a Collection of ſeveral Tracts of the modern Greeks in Greek and Latin in 4to. His third is a thick Volume in 4to, deſign'd to ſerve for a fourth Tome to the Perpetuity of the Faith of the Catholick Church concerning the Euchariſt, written either by Arnauld or Nicole. Renaudotius's Book makes a particular Enquiry into the Conformity of the Doctrine of the Greek and other Eaſtern Churches with that of the Latin Communion; and here he endeavours to clear up ſeveral Paſſages relating to Authors and Facts cited in the Perpetuity; and to confute what was objected againſt the Teſtimonies produc'd. This Book was printed at Paris in the Year 1711. His next is a fifth ſupplemental Volume to the Perpetuity of the Faith, &c. in which he endeavours to evince, that the Greeks and the other Eaſtern Chriſtians agree with the Roman Catholicks in the Points controverted between the Proteſtants and the Church of Rome; Paris 1713: And ſince he has printed two Quarto's entituled, Diſſertat. de Liturgiarum Orientalium Origine & Authoritate. Et Hiſtoria Patriarcharum Alexandrinorum, Jacobitarum, &c.

* RHADAMANTHUS, King of Lycia. Strabo reports that Rhadamanthus had formerly made very wiſe Laws at the Suggeſtion of Minos King of Crete; and that afterwards from this hint Homer took occaſion to make them Judges of all Mankind in the Shades below: He calls 'em Jupiter's Sons, becauſe to gain Credit to their Laws, they gave out that Jupiter had dictated them. Plato endeavours to explain this Mythology, where he makes Jupiter report, that being tired with the Complaints of erroneous Judgment given in the Courts of Mortals, he reſolv'd to remedy it by concealing the time of Peoples Death, and poſtponing their Trial till after they were dead, and aſſigning 'em Judges in the other World; and that by this Expedient there would be no room for Favour and falſe Witneſs, and that the Biaſs of Relations and Intereſt would be diſabled, and not pervert Juſtice as it does in Peoples Life-times; and that he had given a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer to three of his Sons, to Rhadamanthus for the Aſiaticks, to Æacus for the Europeans, and to Minos who was to pronounce upon difficult Caſes in the laſt Reſort. Thus Plato makes Minos's Bench the ſupreme Court, and puts a golden Scepter into his Hand, whereas the other two have only a Rod. * Strabo, Geograph. Nat. Comes.

RHACOCES, a Mardian and Gardiner, had ſeven Sons, the youngeſt of which call'd Cartomes was a Rake, and did all the Miſchief that lay in his way, eſpecially to the Magi. His Father having done his utmoſt to reclaim him, and the Judges happening to ride the Circuit by his Houſe, he brought Cartomes before them with his Hands tied behind him, and begged they would ſentence him to the Gallows as he deſerv'd. The Judges being ſomewhat ſurpriz'd at his Requeſt, refuſed to take Cognizance of the Matter, but ſent Father and Son to King Artaxerxes. And here Rhacoces made the ſame Requeſt he had done before:

The

The King asked him if he could ſee his Son executed before his Face. He anſwered, he could ſee it without the leaſt Trouble; and that he ſhould be no more diſturbed at ſuch a Spectacle, than by pulling up the Weeds of his Garden which hindered the Growth of the Plants; and that he hoped that when the Infection of his Family was gone, the reſt of his Children would thrive the better. Artaxerxes admiring his Anſwer made him a Judge, ſaying withal, that a Perſon who had ſo great a Regard for Juſtice, as not to pardon the Violation of it in his Son, would be Proof againſt Partiality in all the Cauſes that came before him. The King likewiſe pardoned the Son at the ſame time, but threaten'd him with a ſevere Execution in caſe he relapſed. * Ælian. Hiſtor. Var. lib. 1. cap. 34.

RHEA, Daughter of Heaven and Earth according to Heſiod, or according to Plato of the Ocean and Thetis, Saturn's Wife and Jupiter's Mother: She is likewiſe call'd Aſtarte, Ops, the Mother of the Gods, Cybele. She was particularly worſhipped at Phrygia upon Mount Ida; but in Ægypt the religious Veneration paid to her was much older. Diodorus Siculus makes Iſis and Oſyris her Children by Saturn. Sanchoniathan reports that Saturn married his two Siſters Aſtarte and Rhea. Livy relates the Hiſtory of Rhea's Removal from Peſſinuntis to Rome. * Voſſius de Idololatr. lib. 2. cap. 54. Natalis Comes, &c.

* RHINE. For the famous Bridge over it ſee Julius Cæſar, Morery Vol. I.

RHINTAL, that is to ſay the Valley of the Rhine. It is a Country in Switzerland which lies upon the Rhine to the Weſt, and reaches from the County of Werdenberg to the Lake of Conſtance: Rheineck the Capital and Alſteten are the chief Towns. This Country belongs to the ſeven firſt Cantons, and to that of Appenzel, excepting the Barony of Alt-Sax, which belongs to the Canton of Zurick. * Maty, Diction.

* RICHERIUS (Edmundus,) a Doctor of Divinity of the Sorbonne, was born in October 1559. He was drawn into the Sentiment of the Leaguers, and in one of his Theſes was ſo hardy as to maintain James Clement's killing King Henry III. Notwithſtanding this dangerous Opinion he was otherwiſe a Man of Piety and of a mortify'd Life. Soon after his commencing Doctor he read the Fathers and Councils, and by this means became ſenſible of his Miſperſuaſion: And now his Underſtanding being better inform'd he was heartily ſorry for his Miſtake, and boldly declar'd for the counter Opinion. In the Year 1605 he printed Gerſon's Works, the publiſhing of which were ſome time ſtop'd by the Nuntio Barbarini. Richerius wrote an Apology for Gerſon's Sentiments, which was publiſh'd in Germany. In 1611 he ſtop'd the diſputing upon a Dominican's Theſis, who maintain'd the Pope's Infallibility, and his having an Authority above a Council. Richerius the ſame Year publiſh'd a little Book de Poteſtate Eccleſiaſtica & Politica, to maintain the Principles upon which the Liberties of the Gallican Church and of the Faculty of Paris were founded. This Book made a great deal of Noiſe, and the Nuntio in concert with ſeveral Doctors, mov'd that Richerius might be turn'd out of the Office of Syndic, and that his Book might be condemned by the Faculty of Divinity. The Parliament ſtop'd the Faculty from debating upon this matter, and ordered the Copies of the Book to be carried to the Rolls. Cardinal Perron, Archbiſhop of Sens, delated this Book at an Aſſembly of eight Biſhops of his Province at Paris, and had it cenſur'd there March 9, 1612. Richerius appeal'd from this Sentence to the Parliament, where his Appeal was receiv'd; but there the Matter proceeded no farther. The Archbiſhop of Aix and three Biſhops of his Province likewiſe cenſur'd Richerius's Book, and it met with the ſame Fate at Rome. And now a great many People drew their Pens upon Richerius, who had expreſs Orders not to reply in his own Defence. Richerius after ſome ſtruggle gave way to the Faculty to chuſe a new Syndic, after this he declined coming to the Meetings of the Faculty, liv'd very retired, ſpent his time in writing Books which did not appear till after his Death. However, his Enemies gave him a great deal of Trouble: He was dragg'd out of his Solitude and impriſon'd, and had been ſent to the Pope, if the Parliament, at the Inſtance of the Univerſity had not prevented it. Antonius de Dominis Archbiſhop of Spalato's Books being upon the Point of being cenſured by the Faculty, Richerius was ſolicited to come to the Aſſembly, but he declin'd it. In 1620 he was preſſed to ſign a kind of Recantation of his Book. He ſatisfy'd this Demand ſo far as to make a Declaration in Form; in which he proteſted himſelf ready to ſupport the Propoſitions in his Book, and to explain 'em in a catholick Senſe; and over and above he ſubmitted his Performance to the Judgment of the holy See, and the catholick Church. He gave a ſecond Declaration to the ſame purpoſe, but all this did not ſatisfy the Court of Rome. In 1629 he reprinted his Book de Poteſtate Eccleſiaſtica, &c. with farther Proofs of the Propoſitions he aſſerted, together with the two Declarations he had made: But Cardinal Richelieu oblig'd him to make a third, which he ſign'd in Father Joſeph's Chamber, and which, if Moriſot may be believ'd, was forc'd from him. Richerius dy'd in November 1631. Beſides his Treaties de Poteſtate Eccleſiaſtica, &c. and Gerſon's Apology, his Notes upon the Cenſure of Antonius de Dominis, and three Volumes of the Hiſtory of the general Councils were printed, together with a large Defence of his Principles and Conduct. * Richerius's Works. Memoire du XVII. Siecle.

* RICHMOND, a Town in Surry. For Charles V. Emperor in Morery Vol. II. read Charles IV. Emperor.

RICIUS (Paul,) a converted Jew of Germany, flouriſh'd in the ſixteenth Century. He was Philoſophy Profeſſor at Pavia, where he acquired a great Reputation; inſomuch that the Emperor Maximilian invited him into Germany, and made him his Phyſician in ordinary. He publiſh'd ſeveral Books againſt the Jews, and upon ſome other Subjects; the Titles of ſome of them are as follows, Philoſophia Prophetica ac Thalmudiſtica pro Chriſtiana Veritate tuenda, cum juniori Hebræorum Synagoga Diſputatio. De ſexcentis & tredecim Moſaicæ Sanctionis ſeu Pentateuci edictis. Farrago ex Thalmudæorum codice excerpta, ad petitionem Maximiliani Cæſaris. Iſagoge in Cabaliſtarum, ſeu allegorizantium eruditionem, cum epiſtola contra Stephani Presbyteri Cabalæ Obtrectatoris epiſtolam. De modo orandi in Nomine Tetragrammato. De novem Doctrinarum Ordinibus, & totius Peripatetici dogmatis nexu compendium. Statera Prudentum. Concluſiones quibus Ariſtoteles triplicem Doctrinæ ordinem exercuiſſe, & totius ejus dogmatis nexum dijudicare poteris. He likewiſe, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe times, made a Speech to animate the Germans to make War upon the Turks. He is much commended for his Learning, Candor, and Moderation: Eraſmus gives him a great Character in the laſt Epiſtle of his firſt Book. Amongſt other Adverſaries of his the famous Eckius was one; the Subject of their Diſpute was whether the Sky is animated. Ricius held the Affirmative, but his Proofs were counted Paradoxes. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

* RIEUX. For John XXIV. in Morery Vol. II. read John XXII.

RIM, a Fort in the Kingdom of Nubia, ſituate upon the Frontiers of Ægypt. This Place has been the Cauſe of ſeveral Conteſts between the Nubians and Ægyptians. The latter made themſelves Maſters of it in the Year of the Hegira 345, and by this Advantage prevented the frequent Incurſions of the Nubians. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

RIOGRAND (la Capitanie de,) is a Precinct belonging to the Portugueſe in Braſil; it lies between the Northern and Southern Diviſion of the Coaſt, between the Capitanates of Paraiba and Siara. Natal-los-Reyes is the principal Town. The French were Maſters of this Country; but the Portugueſe drove them out in 1601. * Maty, Diction.

RISEMBERG, a famous Mountain in Sileſia, ſituate between the Duchy of Jawer and Bohemia, near the Town of Hirsberg and Schmiedeberg. This Mountain is the higheſt in all Sileſia. There are Tin, Copper, Vitriol, and Iron Mines in it; and over above ſome Veins of Gold and Silver, beautiful Grenats, Diamonds, Rubies, Amethyſts, Topazes, Agats, and Chryſtal; and a great many Plants very ſerviceable for Medicine. Here are the Springs of Bober, the Upowa, and the Elbe; all which Rivers here are ſcarcely a Yard over. The People who live at the Foot of this Mountain report that the top of it is haunted by an Apparition they call Ribenzal; who all on the ſudden covers it with Clouds, and raiſes frightful Storms. But ſome are of Opinion that the Height of the Mountain which ſtops the Exhalations which the Winds drive thither, may poſſibly be the Occaſion of this Ruffle. * Brecman's Hiſtory of the World.

RITBERG, a Town with a Caſtle. It ſtands in Weſtphalia upon the Embs, four Leagues from Paderborne to the Weſt. Ritberg is the Head of a County of the ſame Name; the County lies to the Weſt of the Biſhoprick of Paderborne, and is about ſix Leagues in length, and two in breadth: It belongs to the Counts of Embdem. * Maty, Diction.

RIVALTA, a Town belonging to the Duchy of Milan: It lies in the Milaneſe Proper, upon the Adda. This Place is famous for a great Victory the French King, Lewis XII. gain'd upon the Venetians. * Maty, Diction.

RIVAULT (David,) call'd likewiſe de Flurance, which was a Lordſhip belonging to the Family. He made a Campaign firſt in Hungary under the Count de Laval: But this Nobleman whom he attended being killed, he returned into France, and apply'd himſelf to the Belles Lettres. He was firſt made Subpræceptor, and afterwards Præceptor to Lewis XIII. He printed ſeveral Tracts, the Titles of ſome of which ſhall be tranſcribed for the Reader. Les Eſtats, eſ quels il eſt diſcource du Prince, du Noble, & du Tiers-Eſtat; conformément a notre Tems. Au grand Henri Roi de France & de Navarre. Par D. R. de Flurance. A Lyon, en 1595. Lettre a Madame la Mareſchalle de Fervagues, contenant un bref diſcours du Voyage en Hongrie de feu Monſieur le Comte de Laval, ſon fils. A Paris 1607. in 12. L'Art d'embellir: Tiré du ſens de ce ſacré paradoxe; La Sageſſe de la Perſonne embellit ſa face; etendu en toute ſorte de beauté, & es moiens de faire que le corps retire en effet ſon embelliſement des belles qualitez de l'ame. Dedic a la Reine. Par le Sieur de Flurance Rivault. Archimedis opera, quæ extant; novis demonſtrationibus illuſtrata, &c. Several famous Writers mention Rivault with Commendation: Amongſt theſe we may reckon Caſaubon, Scaliger, Voſſius, and Erpenius. * Menage, dans ſes Obſervations ſur le Poëſies de Malherbe.

RIVIUS (Euſtachius,) born at Zichen a Town in Brabant: He was a Dominican, and flouriſh'd in the beginning of the ſixteenth Century. He was the firſt Divine who wrote againſt Luther; his two Tracts are, one upon the ſeven Sacraments, and another entituled, a Refutation of the Errors condemn'd by the Faculties in Divinity of Louvain and Cologne.
* Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVI.

RIVIUS (John,) of Louvain, Son of Gerard the Printer: He enter'd himſelf a Monk of the Auguſtinians, and was at laſt Provincial of his Order. He wrote St. Auſtin's Life in four Books, extracted from the Works of this Father and other contemporary Authors. It is an excellent Piece of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. He likewiſe wrote Panegyricks and Poems, had a great deal of Learning and Wit, a beautiful Manner, and died in 1650. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* ROAN. Where it is ſaid that Roan is near the Sea in Morery Vol. II. the Reader may pleaſe to remember that it is ſeven Leagues from Caudebec, where an Arm of the Sea comes up, and brings the Tide to Roan.

* ROBERT, Emperor of the Eaſt in Morery Vol. II. read Emperor of the Weſt.

ROCHECHOUART (Mary Magdalene Gabrielle de.) Abbeſs of Fontevrault. One of the moſt ingenious Perſons in the Age ſhe lived. She was Daughter to Gabriel de Rochechouart, Duke of Mortimar, and Peer of France: All the Advantages of her Sex were plentifully beſtowed upon her. And beſides this Recommendation from her Perſon, ſhe had an inventive, penetrating, and comprehenſive Mind, a ſtrong Memory, and a Genius proper for all Sort of Learning. The Learning of Latin, Greek, Italian and Spaniſh looked like her firſt Diverſions. Thus ſhe qualified herſelf for Converſation with Foreigners, and over and above with Perſons of the beſt Learning; ſhe was no ſtranger either to the old, or new Philoſophy, ſhe had the niceſt Part of School Divinity and the different Opinions of the School Men, explained to her; and it was not long before ſhe was prepared to pronounce upon theſe Points herſelf; for by Reading the Holy Scriptures, and the primitive Fathers, ſhe had the beſt Teſt for the Tryal of Doctrines. As for the Fathers ſhe was ſo well acquainted with them, as to underſtand their Matter and their Manner, the Conteſts they had with Hereticks, their Method, and the Kind of Philoſophy they approved. At her Hours of Recreation ſhe entertained herſelf with reading Heathen Authors. Plato was very much in her Hands. It is frequently this Philoſopher's Way to wrap Truth in Myſtery: But this Lady diſpelled the Clouds, reached into his Maxims, and diſcovered the beautiful Turns of his Thought and Expreſſion, which are miſſed by common Underſtandings. Sometimes when tired with ſerious Studies, ſhe would refreſh herſelf with reading Homer. And notwithſtanding the Phraſeology of this Poet is ſo remote from the French Language, yet ſhe attempted the Tranſlating ſome Books of the Iliads and preſerved in a great Meaſure the Spirit and Force of the Original. Being furniſhed ſo conſiderably with natural and acquired Abilities, ſhe made a great Figure in the Station ſhe made choice of. She was firſt a Nun in the Abby Aux-Bois; and in the Year 1670 ſhe was choſen Abbeſs and Generale of the Order and Abby of Fontevault: And here ſhe managed to extraordinary Commendation. She not only governed well, with reſpect to Sobriety and Religion, but poliſhed the Siſters and gave them Behaviour as well as Regularity. Her Writings were a good Model both for Study and the Pulpit. Her Regulations were drawn up with ſo much Senſe and Exactneſs, and with ſuch a reach of Judgment, that even great Prelates did not think it beneath their Character to recommend them to the Nunneries in their Dioceſs. Her circular Letters written upon the Occaſion of the Death of her Nuns, did great Juſtice to the Memory of the deceaſed, and raiſed the Readers to a contempt of Life. In ſhort; her religious Temper, good Nature, Wit, and Learning put all together, were enough to make one of the greateſt Men of the time ſhe lived in. She died at Fontevrault Auguſt 15 1704. 59 Years of Age. * Memoires de Trevoux Decemre 1704. Abbot Anſelm's Funeral Oration.

ROGATUS, a Donatiſt Biſhop of Africk ſet up for a Head of a new Party in Mauritania Cæſarienſis now called the Kingdom of Algeir: He ſet up a Sect about the Year 394, and from him his followers had the Name of Rogateſts. Their breaking off from the other Donatiſts, made that Party hate them no leſs than they did the Catholicks. In ſhort; they got them perſecuted by Firmus Maurus King of Mauritania. The Biſhop of Cæſaria, who was a Rogatiſt, ſurrendered his Town to this Prince. Rogatus is charged with following Donatus of Carthage his Hetrodoxy, relating to the Inequality of the three Perſons in the Trinity: His Sect laſted ſome time in Africk, and his Succeſſor was Vincentius Victor. * Auguſtin. Epiſt. Du Pin, Hiſtory of the Donatiſts.

ROMANCES: So feigned Hiſtories are called written in Proſe and Verſe: They commonly go upon the Subject of Knight Erranty or Love. They have this Name given them from the Language they were writ in, which was Latin mixed with Old Gauliſh and High Dutch. The French and the Provincials wrote Hiſtory in this Language; and thus the Name Roman was firſt common both to true and fabulous Hiſtory; but afterwards it was peculiar to the latter. And here we are not to ſuppoſe Romances, are the ſame with Poems and Tragedies, where the Ground of the Hiſtory is True, though embelliſhed with fabulous Circumſtances: Neither are we to confound it with Comedies, the deſign of which is not only a bare Recital, but turns upon Action: Neither is it of the ſame Kind with Æſop's Fables, nor even with Hiſtories intermixed with Fiction: For a Romance it ſeems is entirely feigned. The Ægyptians, Arabians, Perſians, Indians, and Syrians are the firſt in this Sort of Compoſitions. From thence they came in Vogue among the Greeks, and from the Greeks to the Romans. The moſt remarkable Authors for Romances in Antiquity, are theſe following; Antonius Diogenes, who liv'd a little while after Alexander the Great, and writ a Romance of the Amours of Dinias and Dercillis; Ariſtides of Miletus is the

the next; he tranſlated the Mileſian Fables into Latin, and lived about the time of Marius and Sylla; Clearcus of Cilicia who wrote the Romantick Hiſtory of Rhodanes and Sinonis; Heliodorus Biſhop of Tricca in the fourth Century wrote the Romance of Theagenes and Chariclea. Nicephorus reports that a Synod perceiving the Danger young People might fall into by reading a Romance made by an Author of that Character, gave Heliodorus the Alternative either to ſuppreſs his Book, or quit his Biſhoprick, and that he choſe the latter Part of the Propoſal. However this Story is ſomewhat queſtionable. But let that be as it will, Heliodorus has ſerved for a Model to Romantick Writers, and 'tis ſaid Theagenes and Chariclea's Marriage has been the general Ground for Compoſitions of this Kind. Under this Head may be reckoned Lucian's Metamorphoſis of a Man into an Aſs, and his feigned Hiſtories; Achilles Tatius wrote the Romantick Amours of Clitophon and Leucippe: Athenagoras, the Author of a Book entituled Perfect Love, is much more Modern: The Hiſtory of Barlaam and Joſaphat written by John Damaſcen, is another mere Romance. To theſe we may joyn Theodorus Prodrumus his Romance; and that of one Euſtathius who was not the Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica. Suidas mentions three Xenophons who wrote Romances. To theſe may be ſubjoyned Parthenius of Nice, who wrote a Book extracted from the Mileſian Fables, and of a ſmutty Complexion. Petronius's Satyr, and Apuleius his golden Aſs, are true Romances, and much of the ſame Strain and Humour with the Mileſian Fables. And this is a liſt of the moſt eminent Romance Writers among the Greeks and Latins. The firſt Hiſtorians of the Northern People ſtuffed their Hiſtory with a great ſhare of Fiction: This Fancy furniſhed the Stories of King Arthur and the Knights of the round Table &c. 'Tis ſaid Turpin Archbiſhop of Rheimes, wrote a Romantick Life of Charles the Great. In the twelfth Century John de Meum wrote the Romance of the Roſe, and afterwards a great many Romances were written in French, as Amadis of Gaul in XXIV. Volumes &c. The Arabians taught the Spaniards to trifle in this Manner. The Italians were the laſt who learnt this Art of Fiction and Folly. Moſt of theſe latter Romances are thrown together without Method. M. d'Urfe was the firſt in the beginning of the ſeventeenth Century, who gave his Aſtræa ſomewhat a better Turn. The grand Cyrus, and the Clelia of Mademoiſelle de Scudery; the Caſſandra and Cleopatra of Calprenede; the Polexander of Gomberville are valued by Readers who fancy ſuch Bagatelles. Don Quixot, that is Cervante a Spaniard, has written an ingenious Romance, and which makes it ſtill better, 'tis a Satyr upon Romances. Guarini amongſt the Italians is famous this Way. As for Romances in general, they commonly do more Miſchief than Good. For beſides miſpending of time, giving an ill Tincture to the Imagination, and ſtuffing the Head with Rubbiſh, they paint good Qualities out of Character, give falſe Images of Life, teach young People to be indiſcreet in Friendſhip and Paſſions, put them in a Way how to cheat their Parents with more Dexterity, and ſteal a Misfortune for their Life-time. Huet. Origines des Romans.*

* ROME. Notwithſtanding Romulus upon the Score of his founding a Monarchy here, is reckoned to build this Town, yet there are ſeveral conſiderable Authorities that there was a Town in Italy called Rome before Romulus was born. Solinus will have it that this City was built upon Mount Eſquilin by Roma the Daughter of Kittim who left her Name upon it. Others make a Daughter of Aſcanius the Foundreſs of Rome. Sabellicus falls in with ſomewhat of Plutarch's Opinion, and will have this City built by Romus Æneas's Son. But Plutarch ſays it was Roma that built it. He tells us that after Æneas had landed at Laurentum, a Trojan Lady called Roma, took an Opportunity when Æneas and his Men were out of the Way, to perſwade the Women to burn their Fleet, that they might not be fatigued any longer with Sailing. And Caius Sempronius will have it that Rome was built by Italus his Daughter.

The Antients upon their Medals repreſented Rome in the Figure of a Goddeſs habited like Pallas with an Air of Youth; as much as to ſay that Rome was always to continue in a freſh undecayed Condition. They put a Helmet upon her Head and a Pike in her Hand, with a Gown that reaches to her Feet; to ſignifiy that ſhe was equally prepared for War or Peace, becauſe ſhe had the Furniture and Habit of both. This Head of Rome is frequently found upon Conſular Medals, and even upon ſome Greeks ones: It is ſometimes joyned to that of the Senate repreſented by an old Man, becauſe the Senate conſiſted of People advanced in Years. There were Temples dedicated to the Goddeſs Rome: And the loweſt flattering Titles were, Roma Victrix, Roma invicta, Roma Æterna, Roma Sacra. Veſpaſian's Medals repreſent her with a Helmet upon her Head lying along the ſeven Hills on which ſhe is built, and the Tyber at her Feet in the Figure of an old Man. In Adrian's Medals ſhe is ſtruck with a Laurel in her left Hand, and a Victory upon a Globe in her right, as an Emblem of her conquering the whole World. The Burgers of Smyrna, were the firſt who complemented Rome with a Temple: This was done in the Conſulſhip of Cato the Elder when Rome was not come to that Pitch of Greatneſs, to which ſhe mounted after the Deſtruction of Carthage, and the Conqueſt of Aſia. * Antiquit. Grec. & Rom. La Science des Medailles &c.

ROMELIA, the Beglerbegly of Romelia. It is the moſt conſiderable in extent and ſtrength of all the great Governments in the Turkiſh Empire. It takes in all Greece, Romania, Bulgaria, and Beſſarabia. Notwithſtanding Conſtantinople lies within the Circuit of this Government, Sophia is reckoned the Capital, and the Beglerbeg reſides there. * Memoires du Tems.

* ROMULUS; for that he reigned 58 Years in Morery Vol. II. read 38.

ROQUEMAURE, a good Town in Lower Languedoc, ſituate upon a ſteep Rock, waſhed by the Rhone, five Leagues from Uzez to the Weſt. Pope Clement V. died in this Place A. D. 1314. * Maty, Diction.

ROSSIGNOL (Antony,) born at Alby in 1590. He applied himſelf particularly to the Mathematicks, and made a great Progreſs in the moſt curious Part of it. By the Bending his Studies this Way, and the Force of his Genius, he attained to the Skill of decyphering all Sorts of ſhort Hand, without ſcarce meeting with one too hard for him. In 1626 he made his firſt Eſſay at the Siege of Realmont in Languedoc, then in the Hands of the French Proteſtants. 'Twas beſieged by the King's Army commanded by the Prince of Condé, and made ſo ſtout a Reſiſtance, that the Prince was ready to raiſe the Siege; when he happenned to intercept a Letter of the beſieged written in Cypkers, which the beſt skilled in the Buſineſs of decyphering could not unriddle. It was given to Roſſignol who decyphered it immediately. The Import was that the beſieged ſent to the reformed at Montauban to acquaint them they wanted Powder, and unleſs they were immediately ſupplied, they muſt ſurrender. When the Prince of Condé ſent this Letter decypher'd to the beſieged, which forced them to deliver up Town the ſame Day. This Matter being related to Cardinal Richelieu, he ordered Roſſignol to come to Court, where he gave ſuch extraordinary Proofs of his Skill this Way, that the Cardinal, notwithſtanding his great Genius kept him from admiring many things, yet he could not help being ſurpriſed at this Man's Performances. Roſſignol did great Service at the Siege of Rochelle, in diſcovering the Enemies Deſign, by decyphering their intercepted Letters. The Cardinal gratified him conſiderably, and King Lewis XIII. recommended him when dying to the Queen, as a Perſon very uſeful to the Government. King Lewis XIV. took particular Notice of him, and gave him a good Penſion during his Life. His Service to the Crown was very extraordinaty; he is ſuppoſed to have diſcovered ſeveral conſpiracies, facilitated the taking many Towns, and hindered others from falling into the Enemies Hands; helped the gaining of Battels, and prevented Defeats by diſcovering the Enemies ſecret Deſigns. * Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France.

ROTA. For Polonian in Morery Vol. II. read Bononian.

ROTTENFELDS, a good Town in Suabia, and the Capital of a Barony of the ſame Name; it ſtands four Leagues from Kempten to the South. The Barony of Rottenfelds belongs to the Houſe of Konigſeck, and lies between the Territories of Auſtria, Ausbourg, Kempten, and Walburg. * Maty, Diction.

ROYAL, Fort-Royal. This Fort is upon the Coaſt of Martinico, one of the Antillæ Iſlands; it ſtands upon the Northern Side of Bay-Royal, where there are ſome Houſes of the French, who are Maſters of this Fort. There is another Fort of the ſame Name upon the Southern Coaſt of Guadaloupa, which likewiſe belongs to the French. * Maty, Diction.

*ROXANA: For Caſſandra put her to Death in Morery Vol. II. read Caſſander.

RUCELLAY (the Abbot,) Nephew to Monſignor Giovanni della Caſa, quitted the Court of Rome upon an Affront, and went to that of France, where his Wit and Prodigality made him taken notice of; I ſay his extravagant Expence; for after Meals he us'd to have Silver gilt Baſons ſet upon his Table fill'd with Eſſences, Perfumes, Gloves, Fans, and even Piſtoles to furniſh Play. His Niceneſs in every thing went to the laſt Exceſs: He drank only Water; but then it muſt be fetched a great Way, and examin'd as it were Drop by Drop: A thing of nothing would make an Impreſſion upon him: The leaſt Heat or the leaſt Cold was felt to Diſadvantage in his Conſtitution: The Fear only of falling ill would make him take his Chamber, and keep his Bed. At laſt Ambition, or rather Revenge, made him rouze a little: And now he ventured to charge himſelf with an Affair which required a good deal of Activity; it was to ſerve Mary de Medicis Queen of France. And now taking leave of his Niceneſs and Whimſies, he rid Poſt Night and Day ill mounted, eat and drank what came next; ſo that People enquired what was become of him, and if they had ſeen him run through all this Fatigue, they would have miſtaken him for another Man in his Shape, or that his Soul had removed into another Body. * De Vigneul-Marville, Melanges d'Hiſtoire, &c. Girard's Life of the Duke d'Eſpernon.

*RUDISTO, in Latin Redæſtum, anciently called Biſanthe, a Town in European Turky. It ſtands in Romania upon the Sea of Marmora; it is a trading populous Town, has a good Haven, and a Biſhoprick ſuffragan to Perintho. Baudrand.*

RUFFI (Anthony,) born at Marſeilles: He was bred to the Law, and had a very vigilant Conſcience, of which the Reader ſhall have an extraordinary Inſtance: A Perſon to whom he was of Council happen'd to loſe his Cauſe; Ruffi charg'd himſelf with Negligence for not taking time enough to examine the matter, and then put the Value of what was loſt at the Tryal into a Prieſt's Hand to return to his Client. He wrote the Hiſtory of Marſeilles, printed firſt in 1642, but which was very much enlarged in a ſecond Edition in 1696. He was made Counſellor of State in 1654, and lived 82 Years. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

RUINART (Thieri,) a Benedictine Monk of the Congregation of St. Maur, was born at Rheims in the Year 1653. He was bred under Mabillon, and work'd with him upon the laſt Volume of the Acts of the Saints of the Order of St. Bennet. He wrote ſeveral Works himſelf; his firſt Performance was, Acta Martyrum Sincera, &c. printed in 1690, 4to. His choice of the Records he made uſe of, the Solidity of his Arguments, the Significancy of his Notes, and eſpecially his learned Preface, in which he confutes Dodwell's Diſſertation de Paucitate Martyrum, are ſufficient Evidence of his great Learning and Judgment. In 1694 he publiſh'd the Hiſtory of the Vandalic Perſecution, written by Victor Vitenſis an African Biſhop, where Ruinart gives a farther Detail of that Perſecution. In 1699 he publiſh'd a new Edition of Gregory Turonenſis's Works: Since that time he wrote a French Tract concerning the Miſſion of St. Maur the Benedictine's Apoſtle in France; in which he maintains that St. Maur, Founder of the Monaſtery of Glanfeuil in Anjou, was St. Bennet's Diſciple. After Mabillon's Death Ruinart publiſh'd his Life in French in the Year 1709. To conclude with him, he was no leſs remarkable for his Life than his Learning. He dy'd in September 1709. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

RUPELMONDE, a Town with an old Caſtle; it is ſituate in Flanders upon the Schelde, over againſt the Mouth of the Rupel, and two Leagues above Antwerp. * Maty, Diction.

RUPPIN (the County of,) a Country within the Marquiſate of Brandenbourg. This Country lies between the Seignury of Pregnitz, and the Duchy of Meckelburg, the Marche Vekerane, and the Middle Marche; 'tis about twelve Leagues in breadth, and ſix in length, and is broken with Lakes and Foreſts. Ruppin the Capital, Wuſterhauff, Lindow, and Rinsberg are the principal Towns. The Elector Joachim I. had this Country fall to him by Eſcheat A. D. 1524, upon the Death of Wichman, Count of Ruppin, who was the laſt of his Family. * Maty, Diction.

RUSTICUS, Elpidius. For was in Eſteem in the fourth Age in Morery Vol. II. read in the fifth Age.

RYER (Andrew,) Lord of the Manner of Malezair, Knight of the Holy Sepulchre, lived in the ſeventeenth Century. He reſided a great while at Conſtantinople for the French King's Service, and was Conſul for the French in Ægypt. He learned Turkiſh and Arabick, made a Turkiſh Grammer, and tranſlated the Alcoran into French, He likewiſe publiſhed a French Verſion of Galiſtan, or the Perſian Empire, written by Sadi, the moſt celebrated Turkiſh and Perſian Poet: This Book has been lately reprinted. * Colomiez, Gallia Oriental. Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

RYSWICK, a Village in Holland with a Caſtle of modern Fortification: It ſtands between the Hague and Delft: That which makes it remarkable, is the Peace concluded here in 1697, between France, Spain, the Court in England, and the united Provinces September 20, and between the Emperor and France October 21, the ſame Year.

RZECZICA, a Town in Lithuania; it is the Capital of a large Territory of the ſame Name, and ſtands upon the Boriſthenes, five and twenty Leagues below the Town Rohaczow. * Maty, Diction.

S.

SABINUS (St.) Biſhop of Aſſiza. A Martyr in the Dioclesian Perſecution: He and his two Deacons Marcellus and Exuperantius, were apprehended by Venuſtianus Governor of Umbria, Marcellus and Exuperantius died upon the Torture. Sabinus refuſing to ſacrifice to Idols was kept cloſe Priſoner, where he cured a Widows Grandſon, who aſſiſted him. Venuſtianus ſtruck with this Miracle, was converted; and himſelf his Wife and his Children baptized. Maximianus Herculeus underſtanding Venuſtianus was turned Chriſtian, immediately diſpatched Lucius a Commander of a Legion to behead him at Aſſiza. Lucius having executed his Commiſſion, cauſed Sabinus to be whipp'd to death. His Feſtival ſtands at the 30th of December. Pope Gregory the Great mentions a Chapel built in Honour of this Saint at Fermo where he order'd his Relicts to be put. He likewiſe mentions a Monaſtery founded in reſpect to his Memory. Gregor. Magn. lib.* 1. Epiſt. 72, 73. and lib. 2. Epiſt. 20. Paul. Diacon. de Geſt. Longobard.

SABINUS (Flavius,) was eldeſt Brother to the Emperor Veſpaſian, and Son to Titus Flavius Sabinus. His Mother Veſpaſia Polla having an intereſt upon the ſcore of her Extraction, brought Sabinus into the Senate or Houſe of Lords, where he acquitted himſelf honourably in the Employments given him. He was Prefect or Governor of Rome under Nero, ſet aſide by Galba, and reſtored by Otho, who left him and his Brother Titianus, Governors of the City, when he marched againſt Vitellius. After this laſt was declared Emperor upon the Death of his Rival, Sabinus made the Troops who remained at Rome, take an Oath to be true to him, and ſtill continued in his Poſt at Rome, during the War between his Brother Veſpaſian and Vitellius. Vitellius's Party growing the ſtrongeſt in this Town, a great many of Veſpaſian's Friends left it. However, Sabinus upon the ſcore of his great Age, did not think himſelf in a Condition to retire. At laſt he came to Articles with Vitellius, whom Veſpaſian had driven to his laſt Inch of Ground; inſomuch that Vitellius promiſed to reſign his Claim to the Empire: But ſoon after breaking his Word and reaſſuming the Government, his Soldiers inveſted and burnt the Capitol, whither Sabinus retreated: And now having ſeized him, they dragged him, loaden with Irons to Vitellius, who endeavoured to preſerve him, but without Effect. They hewed him in Pieces and cut off his Head in Spite of their Emperor, and dragged his Body to the Place of Execution. And thus Sabinus was maſſacred at the very Moment his Brother was become Emperor. He had ſerved the publick five and thirty Years, and managed to commendation in his civil and military Poſts. And in this laſt rugged Juncture he behaved with all the Conduct and Reſolution could be expected. Plutarch, in Vit. Otho. Tacit. Hiſt. lib.* 1. & 2. Dion Caſſius, lib. 67. Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 4.

SABINUS, Deputy Governor of Syria under the Emperor Auguſtus. After the Death of Herod the Great, King of the Jews, and Archelaüs's going to Rome, he deſigned to ſeize the Fort at Jeruſalem, and that Prince's Exchequer. To this Purpoſe he lodged himſelf in the Palace Royal, and commanded the Treaſurer to give an Account of the Caſh: and ordered the Governors of Places under Archelaüs, to reſign their Commiſſions to him. Theſe latter refuſed to obey him, proteſting they would never deliver up their Charge into any Hands, excepting thoſe who gave them their Authority. This Anſwer occaſioned a formidable Sedition, in which a great many valuable People on both Sides loſt their Lives. For the Jews perceiving Sabinus's inſatiable Avarice, met from all Places of the Kingdom at Jeruſalem, under Pretence of keeping the Pentecoſt; but the meaning was to give Check to Sabinus's Injuſtice. In ſhort; coming to Blows with great Numbers the Jews had the worſt of it: And the Romans ſetting Fire to the Doors of the Treaſury, broke in, and plundered it. Sabinus got four hundred Talents for himſelf, and the Officers and Souldiers ſhared the reſt. This provoked the People to that Degree that they run again to Arms, beſieged the Royal Palace, and preſſed Sabinus ſo cloſe, that if he had not immediately ſent for a reinforcement to Varus Governor of Syria, himſelf, and all his Roman Troops, had been cut off. Varus came up immediately with what Men he had drawn together; and the Troops of the neighbouring Princes in Alliance with the Jews and Romans, drew likewiſe to Jeruſalem with a Deſign to correct the party which was in the wrong: But Sabinus who was conſcious of Misbehaviour would not ſtay for Varus's coming, but went off, and made for the Sea Coaſt, for fear of being puniſhed as he deſerved. When the Jews underſtood this Tyrant of a Man was gone, and that Varus was in Sight of the Town, they laid down their Arms, and went to meet him, to juſtify their Conduct and complain of the Inſults and Violences of this Magiſtrate. * Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. lib. 6 cap. 5.

SAINT EVREMOND (Charles de S. Dennys Lord of,) a Perſon of Diſtinction in the ſeventeenth Century, and more celebrated for his Writings, than either for his Extraction, or his Performances in the Field. He was deſcended from a Gentleman's Family in Lower Normandy, and his Mother was Siſter to the Marquis of Rouville. After his firſt Studies under the Jeſuits at Paris, where he learnt a true Taſte for Senſe and good Authors; he made a Campagne at ſixteen Years of Age, and was a Captain of Foot at the firſt Siege of Arras. Afterwards being attached to the famous Lewis de Bourbon Prince of Condé, he ſerved under him at Fribourg and Northlinguen. In this latter Battel he received a Wound which had like to have proved mortal. His Courage gained him the Eſteem of the French Generals, and particularly of the Marſhal Turenne: But his jeſting Humour made him loſe the Prince of Condé's Favour. He afterwards ſerved in Catalonia, and was made a Field Marſhal there. His Ingenuity procured him M. Fouquet's Friendſhip, which proved ſerviceable to his private Affairs. He had likewiſe a good Intereſt with M. de Candale, which diſobliged Cardinal Mazarin, and coſt Saint Evremond three Months Confinement in the Baſtille. The Letter he wrote to M. de Crequy concerning the Pyrenean Treaty, drew the Miniſtry ſo hard upon him, that he was forced to quit the Kingdom. His chief retiring Place was in England, where from the Year 1665 he remained till his Death, which happened in 1703: And notwithſtanding he was ninety two Years of Age, his Judgment, Memory and Health continued good till the Laſt. Saint Evremond had no great Learning, but he made the moſt of what he had read. His way was to ſtudy the Genius and Character of an Author, and load his Memory with no more than what was ſignificant. He wrote with great Eaſe, though his manner looks like Pains and Study. He ſometimes reviewed his Writings, and added or dock'd; but commonly he found that his firſt Aim was the beſt. He skips from one Subject to another, and wrote only for his own Diverſion. It muſt be ſaid he had a beautiful Genius, and wrote with a great ſhare of Senſe and Wit. However, his Style is ſometimes embarraſſed, and frequently blemiſh'd with Affectation. He is ſomewhat too nice in his Periods, and comes over too often with Antitheſes; but then his Thoughts are bold and entertaining, and his Language correct. But his Poetry does by no Means come up to his Proſe. Notwithſtanding he profeſſed the Roman Catholick Religion, he is ſometimes ſo unhappy as to talk more like a Philoſopher, or a Freethinker, than a Chriſtian. However; the Force of his Underſtanding ſeemed ſometimes to revive upon him, and lead him towards better Principles. The beſt Edition of his Works is that printed at London in the Year 1705, where the Reader may ſee an Abridgement of his Life. * Memoires de Trevoux Janvier 1706.

SAINT-LOUIS, an Order of Knighthood, created in France in the Year 1693. This Honour was deſigned by King Lewis XIV for the Officers of his Army.

my. The King is the Sovereign or great Maſter; and under him there are eight great Croſſes, twenty four Commanders, and the reſt are plain Knights. The Marſhals of France, the Admiral, and the General of the Gallies, are Knights of courſe. The reſt to be qualified for this Order, muſt have ſerved in the Field ten Years as Officers, and profeſs the Roman Catholick Religion. There are three hundred thouſand Livres per Annum ſettled upon this Order, which are paid in the following manner; the eight great Croſſes have ſix thouſand Livers each; eight of the Commanders have four thouſand Livres each; and the ſixteen other Commanders three thouſand Livres each; four and twenty of the plain Knights have two thouſand Livres each; four and twenty others have fifteen hundred Livres each; and forty eight others a thouſand Livres each: As to the reſt of the Revenue it goes to the Treaſurer and the other Officers. The Croſs of the Order is enamell'd with Argent, with a Canton of Flower de Luces Or, charged on one Side with a St. Lewis in Gold Armour with a Cloak upon him, a Crown of Lawrel in his right Hand, and in his left a Crown of Thornes, the Field Gules, an azure Border with the following Letters Or, Ludovicus Magnus inſtituit 1693. and on the other Side, a naked flaming Sword, with the Point in a Crown of Lawrel, tied with a white Scarf, the Field likewiſe Gules, and in the Border azure like the other Side, with theſe Letters in Gold, Bellicæ virtutis præmium. The great Croſſes wear their Croſs tied to a large flamed coloured Ribbon, made like a Scarf, and have a Croſs enbroidered with Gold upon their ſtrait Coat and Cloak. The Commanders wear their Ribbons like a Scarf, but have no embroidered Croſs, and the others wear their Croſs at their Stomach with a ſmall Flame coloured Ribbon. The Number of the plain Knights is not limited, but reſts wholly in the King's Pleaſure.

SAINT VALERY, a conſiderable Town in France upon the Northern Coaſt of Normandy, five Leagues from Dieppe to the Weſt. This Town has one of the beſt Havens in Normandy. * Maty, Diction.

SAINTE-BEUVE (James de,) a Pariſian Doctor of the Sorbonne, and King's Divinity Profeſſor, was a Perſon of very great Learning, and reckon'd one of the beſt Caſuiſts of his Time: He dy'd in December 1677, 64 Years of Age. The Tracts he wrote are much valued: He held St. Auſtin's Sentiment concerning Grace and Predeſtination, but without running up to to the Rigours of the Calviniſts. After his Death his Brother printed two Tracts of his, of Confirmation and extreme Unction, and three Tomes of Caſes of Conſcience. His Tracts upon Confirmation were written againſt the famous Daillé Miniſter at Charenton. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. Sainte Beauve held the Doctrine of efficacious Grace, and endeavoured to prove that the five famous Propoſitions ſaid to be maintain'd by Janſenius could not be inferr'd from his Doctrine. * Memoirs Manuſcript.

SAINT-MENEHOULD, in Latin, Fanum Sanctæ Menehildis, a Town with a Citadel, ſituate on the Frontiers of Champagne upon the River Aine, between Châlons and Verdun; 'tis nine Leagues diſtant from the firſt, and as many from the ſecond. It is the Capital of a ſmall Country call'd l'Argonne; it is pleaſantly ſituated upon the ſcore of the Valleys, Meadows, Gardens, and Woods which ſurround it. The Baylywick which belongs to it reaches as far as Rocroy, Mezieres, and Charleville. Sainte Menehoulde diſtinguiſh'd itſelf in the laſt civil War of France by ſtanding firm to the Crown. In 1652 this Town was beſieg'd by the Prince of Condé, and held out againſt twenty thouſand Men; notwithſtanding there was no Gariſon, and the Burghers were only four hundred Men, they made a vigorous Defence for three Weeks; but after having ſuſtain'd three general Aſſaults, and the Town being cloſe preſſed without any Hopes of Relief, they were forc'd to capitulate, and had honourable Conditions. This brave Reſiſtance ruin'd the Prince of Condé's Army, and hinder'd him from farther Succeſs. * Baudrand. Memoires du Tems.

* SALEM, a Town in Palæſtine, where Melchiſedeck was King. Salem ſignifies Peace in Hebrew: It is commonly ſuppos'd that this Town was the ſame which was afterwards call'd Jeruſalem. But 'tis obſerv'd that the Name of Jeruſalem was Jebus, at firſt and not Salem; and St. Jerom is of Opinion that the Town where Melchiſedeck was King was not Jeruſalem. He ſuppoſes that the Place where Melchiſedeck reigned was Salem, nigh Scythopolis in the Country of Sichem, mentioned Geneſis 33, and in St. John's Goſpel cap. 4. St. Jerom, to prove his Aſſertion, takes notice that in his Time the Ruins of Melchiſedeck's Palace was to be ſeen in this Place; and that Abraham's Road to return Home from Dan was not to travel through the Place where Jeruſalem ſtood, but through the Country of Sichem where Salim or Salem was ſituate. Some Authors believe that Salem is the ſame with Shiloh, and others will have it Sichem: However, the Evidence for theſe Opinions is not ſo conſiderable as to diſprove Joſephus and the greateſt Part of the Commentators, who maintain that the Town of Salem where Melchiſedeck reign'd was afterwards call'd Jeruſalem; and that Jeruſalem is likewiſe call'd Salem in the 76th Pſalm, where it is ſaid, at Salem is his Tabernacle, and his Dwelling in Sion. Here the Name of Salem being join'd to that of Sion, makes it clear that it is not taken for Peace, as the Vulgate tranſlates it; but for the proper Name of David's Town call'd Salem, which ſtood cloſe to the Hill Sion. * Du Pin's preliminary Diſſertation on the Bible. See Jeruſalem in Morery Vol. I.

SALLIE, a ſmall Town of Bearn, where there is a Spring of Salt Water, which, though very ſmall, yet twice a Week fills a deep Baſon above forty Foot Diameter, which is likewiſe empty'd for the Inhabitants to make Salt of. Though it rains very much, yet the Rain Water never mixes with the Salt; for the freſh Water ſwims on the top, and the People employ'd to make a Separation throw a new laid Egg into the Baſon, which ſinks through the freſh Water, and ſtops at the Salt. The Rain Water is laved out till the Egg appears bare; afterwards the Salt Water is delivered to the Town's People, who boil it in leaden Veſſels, where the Water evaporates without any farther Trouble, and the Salt lies admirably white at the bottom. And here it is obſerv'd that they can't make Salt in any Veſſels excepting leaden ones. * Memoires Curieux.

SALONA, anciently call'd Amphyſa: It is the Capital of a Precinct; it ſtands within Livadia upon a Hill, with a Citadel upon the top of it. It is nine Leagues from the Town Lepanto to the North Eaſt, and has a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Athens. It is inhabited by Chriſtians and Turks, almoſt in equal Numbers; but the Jews are not permitted to live there. * Maty, Diction.

SALSO, formerly call'd Himera; it is one of the greateſt Rivers in Sicily, it riſes in the Valley di Dæmona, near di Gangi-Nuovo, croſſes the Valleys di Noto where it takes in the River Petraglia, and falls with two Mouths into the Mediterranean, and between theſe two Arms the Town Alicata ſtands. 'Tis ſaid this River runs Salt Water, for which it is called Salſo. * Maty Diction.

SALVADOR (Andrew,) an Italian living in the Popedom of Gregory XV. and Urban VIII. is reckon'd the beſt modern Stage Poet in Italy, his beſt Plays are Medora, Flora, and St. Urſula: But this laſt is reckoned much the beſt: Here Salvador has outdone himſelf, and given the Characters and other Requiſites in the Drama, the utmoſt Heightenings and Delicacy. * Jan. Nic. Erythyr. Pinacoth. 1. c. 53.

SALUTATIONS at Sea, are Civilities and Submiſſions which one Ship pays another, or gives a Fort when ſailed by. This Ceremony is only practis'd upon the Sea; for in Rivers the Boats do not ſalute each other; and upon the Rhine, where the Ground on each Side belongs to thirty different Princes, all the Ceremony is, that the Boats which go up the Stream put by to make way for thoſe who come down and are carried forcibly by the Current. It is not ſuppos'd that the Cuſtom of ſaluting at Sea is prior to the Invention of Guns, neither does Hiſtory mention any thing of it before this Time. Lipſius remarks that Mark Anthony meeting Domitius Ænobardus at Sea, made him ſtrike Sail, and ſtoop the Marks of his Commiſſion; from whence Lipſius would infer that ſtriking Sail was cuſtomary amongſt the Romans. But others will have it that Anthony caſhiered this Commander, and for that Reaſon took away the Enſigns of his Authority, and that his Intention was not to make him pay only a complementing Submiſſion. Saluting at Sea is done by ſteering to Leeward, diſcharging ſome Pieces of Cannon, and ſtriking the Flag. It is a Maxim at Sea that he who returns the Salute always fires fewer Guns than he received; which is done even between the Ships of Princes of equal Dignity. However, the Swedes and the Danes return the Complement without minding how many Guns were fired to 'em; the Swedes Cuſtom is always to give two Guns, and the Danes three. The Salute is never expected to go farther than ſeven Guns; to diſcharge more is reckoned an Exceſs of Civility. Striking Sail is more than Manners, and meer Submiſſion, and here the Salute is not return'd. Merchant Men lower their main Yard, but Men of War only ſtrike their top Sail. All Merchant Men are commonly obliged to pay their Reſpect to a Man of War when they meet 'em; however, the Dutch in a Treaty with France in 1646, inſiſted that when their Merchant Men met with a French Man of War, they ſhould only be obliged to ſtop their Courſe, to give a Boat an Opportunity to go on board them. As to the ſaluting by diſcharging Cannon, which ought to be reciprocal, 'tis obſerv'd that in 1661 Count Brahe, the Swediſh Ambaſſador in England, being upon the Thames when the King was coming down in his Barge, the Ambaſſador, when he came up with his Majeſty, prepared to ſalute him with his Guns; but the King ſent him Word not to do it, becauſe his Majeſty being in a Barge, had no Cannon to return the Salute, and therefore the Swede was order'd only to ſtrike Sail. Saluting by ſtriking the top Sail is a Mark of the deepeſt Submiſſion, becauſe it ſeems to be done by the Prince or the State, whoſe Arms are ſtained upon the Flag; and therefore the French Subjects are forbidden to, bring to or ſtrike the top Sail. Inferior Princes or States ſtrike to a Prince of greater Quality.

The Engliſh pretend to be ſaluted firſt in all Places and by all ſorts of Ships, upon a Pretenſion of their being Sovereign of the Seas: The Venetians claim this Honour within their Gulph, where they expect to be ſaluted firſt, even by the King of Spain's Ships. The Genoeſe claim the ſame Privilege in their Sea; and ſo do the Kings of Denmark in the Baltick; but the Kings of England challenge the Empire of the whole Ocean. However, Queen Elizabeth is ſaid not to mount her Pretenſions thus high, in regard ſhe declared the Sea was free, when the Spaniſh Ambaſſador offer'd Arguments to bar the Engliſh from ſailing to the Weſt-Indies. The Engliſh to prove their Right mention an ancient Medal with this Legend, Quatuor Maria vindico. Charles I King of England, had this Inſcription painted upon the Stern of the Royal Sovereign, with the Figure of King Edgar who firſt uſed it. Cromwell afterwards claim'd the ſame Privilege from this Medal, and King Charles II. kept on the ſame Pretenſion. But here it is obſerv'd that the Engliſh Hiſtorians mention the Occaſion of this Medal's being ſtruck: They report that this King Edgar having about the Year 950 conquer'd the King of Scotland, and ſome other petty Princes within the Dominion of Wales; and by theſe Succeſſes finding himſelf Maſter of the whole Iſland, ſtruck this Medal to ſhew that all the four Sides of his Dominions border'd upon the Sea; which may be affirm'd, ſays the French Supplementer, of any Prince poſſeſs'd of the leaſt Iſlands; but from hence, as he continues, no Conſequence can be drawn for the Sovereignty of the whole Ocean belonging to the terraqueous Globe. * Lipſius, Elect. lib. 1. Cambden's Britann. Memoires Hiſtoriq.

SAMARITANS (the modern.) Theſe People live now at Gaza, at Sichem, at Damaſcus, and other Places in the Levant, where they have their Prieſts deſcended, as they pretend, from Aaron. Their Temple, or rather their Chapel, is upon Mount Gerizim, where they offer their Sacrifices. Joſeph Scaliger apprized of theſe Particulars, wrote to the Samaritans of Ægypt, and to the High-Prieſt of all their Sect, who liv'd at Sichem, for farther Information: They return'd him an Anſwer to the Difficulties propoſed. Their Letter bears Date the 998th Year of the Mahometan Hegyra, which makes the Year of our Lord 1590. But theſe Letters, though preſerved, never came to Scaliger's Hands.

In their firſt Anſwer, written in the Name of the Aſſembly of Iſrael in Ægypt, they gave him to underſtand, that they keep the Paſſover on the 14th Day of the firſt Month on Mount Gerizim, and that their preſent High-Prieſt was Eleazar of the Line of Aaron; afterwards they proceed to the Solution of ſome knotty Queſtions porpoſed by Scaliger: But theſe Reſolutions being made with more Perſpicuity in the Anſwer written in the Name of the High-Prieſt Eleazar, and the Synagogue of Sichem or Napolouſe, I ſhall give the Reader this laſt Relation. The Subſtance of Eleazar's Anſwer to Scaliger is as follows.

1. The Samaritans obſerve the Sabbath with all the Strictneſs commanded in Exodus; none of them go any whither upon this Day, excepting to the Synagogue, where they read the Law, and ſing Pſalms: This Night they lodge by themſelves, and kindle no Fire; whereas the Jews take their Liberty in theſe three Particulars, for they make no Difficulty to walk out of Town, to make Fires, and ſleep with their Wives.

2. The Paſſover is reckon'd their chief Feſtival. They begin the Solemnity at Sun-ſet by ſacrificing according to the Inſtitution preſcribed in Exodus, but then they ſacrifice no where but upon Mount Gerizim, where they read the Law, ſay their Prayers, and receive the High-Prieſt's Benediction.

3. They likewiſe keep their Pentecoſt ſeven Days together: But then they don't agree with the Jews for the beginning this Feſtival; for theſe latter reckon from the Day after the Paſchal Solemnity; whereas the Samaritans count their fifty Days by beginning their Computation the Day after the Sabbath, which falls within the Week of unleavened Bread; and thus the next Day after the ſeventh Sabbath following they begin their Pentecoſtal Solemnity.

4. They keep the Day of Expiation on the tenth of the ſeventh Month: They ſpend the four and twenty Hours in Prayer and Hymns, without eating any thing: For excepting ſucking Children, all the reſt are oblig'd to faſt; whereas the Jews diſpenſe with their Children under ſeven Years old.

5. They keep the Feaſt of Tabernacles upon Mount Gerizim.

6. They never defer Circumciſion beyond the eighth Day; whereas the Jews ſometimes take the Liberty of poſtponing that Ceremony.

7. They take away the Fat of the Sacrifies, and give the Prieſt, the Shoulder, the Cheeks, and the Paunch.

8. They never marry their Nieces as the Jews do; beſides they have but one Wife at a time, whereas the other make no Scruple of Polygamy.

9. Their Reliance reſts wholly upon God, Moſes and Mount Gerizim; and whereas the Jews, ſay they place their Confidence upon others, and elſewhere, we do nothing but what is expreſſly commanded in God Almighty's Law, who made Moſes his Miniſter: The Jews on the other Hand depart from the written Law, to practiſe upon their Anceſtors and Rabbins Traditions.

10. This is the Subſtance drawn by the Order of the High-Prieſt Eleazar by his Secretary Abzeauta Son of Joſeph Harmacus living at Gaza. We are likewiſe to obſerve this High-Prieſt had a Son Phineas, who ſometimes executed his Father's Office: That both of them always liv'd in this Holy Place, where they ſuppoſed God Almighty peculiarly preſent; that thoſe who had any Buſineſs came to them from all Parts, both for Direction of Conſcience, and deciding civil Controverſies and Diſputes.

11. They reckon one hundred and two and twenty High-Prieſts from Aaron to themſelves, whoſe Names are all ſtanding upon their Genealogies, and maintain that the Jews have no Prieſts deſcended from Phineas, and that they ſlander the Samaritans when they call 'em Cutheans: That they are deſcended from the Tribe of of Joſeph the Juſt, by the Branch of Ephraim; that the Samaritan Letters are the ſame that God Almighty gave Moſes for the writing his Law. To this Anſwer the Synagogue of Ægypt adds, that the Characters the Jews make uſe of for writing their Law, are an unbleſs'd Letter invented by Eſdras.

And here it may be obſerv'd, that the Samaritans are no Sadducees, and that the Jews miſreport them upon this Head: The Riſe of the Calumny proceeds only from from the Samaritans rejecting the vain Tradition of the Jews; this is the Reaſon the Jews repreſent the Samaritans, the Sadducees, and the Caraites, under the ſame Diſadvantages of Belief; whereas, to do the Samaritans Juſtice, they keep cloſe to the Moſaick Inſtitution, as Morinus and Peireſchius obſerve. Part of this Relation of the Napolouſe Samaritans is confirm'd by Benjamin's Travels: This Jewiſh Rabbin who liv'd in the twelfth Century reports that in his Time the Synagogue of Sichem or Napolouſe mounted no higher than one hundred Samaritans, that of Cæſarea in Palæſtine had two hundred, that of Aſcalon about three hundred, and that of Damaſcus between three and four hundred: He obſerves farther that their Prieſts, whom they call Aaronites, are deſcended from Aaron, that to preſerve the Luſtre and Length of their Deſcent they never marry out of their Family: That their Prieſts ſacrifice upon Mount Gerizim, where they have an Altar built of the Stone which the Iſraelites ſet up when they firſt paſt the River Jordan: This Rabbin adds, that theſe Samaritans are of the Tribe of Ephraim, and that they have Joſeph's Sepulcher, Jacob's Son mentioned in Geneſis. Laſtly, he takes notice that theſe Samaritans take great care not to touch any dead Body or Grave, and that they bathe and change their Clothes before they go to the Synagogue. And beſides what is obſerv'd by this Benjamin, the modern Samaritans ſhew the Graves of their Prophets lying about the Temple, and particularly the Sepulcher of Eleazar, Ithamar, and Phineas, Aaron's Son and Grandſons; they likewiſe pretend to have Joſhua and Caleb's Tombs: Farther, they have an Inſcription in their Temple, written, as they ſay, by Phineas, Aaron's Grandſon, fifteen Years after the Children of Iſrael came into the promis'd Land. The Jews charge the Samaritans with Idolatry, and that they worſhipped the Figure of a Pidgeon in their Temple; but this is groſs Miſrepreſentation. They are no leſs unjuſt in aſſerting that the Samaritan Alphabet wants three Leters, He, Heth, and Ain; and that in the Beginning of Geneſis inſtead of God created, the Samaritans have put Aſima created, but in both theſe Inſtances Father Simon, from his own View of a Pentateuch in Samaritan Characters, ſhews the Jews have altogether miſreported the matter. 'Tis granted the Samaritans allow none but the Pentateuch for canonical Scripture; 'tis true they have the Hiſtory of Joſhua, and ſome little of the other Hiſtories of the Old Teſtament, but they are different from ours. The Samaritan Pentateuch is the ſame with the Jewiſh, the Character excepted; the Samaritans, ſaith St. Jerom, have the Pentateuch of Moſes written in the ſame Length of Character with that of the Jews, from which it differs nothing, excepting in the Shape of the Characters and Points: The Word Point is Apex in St. Jerom, that is, a little fine Stroke with which the Jews ornament the top of certain Letters in their Books made uſe of for the Synagogue. Beſides the Hebrew Pentateuch in Samaritan Letters, they have likewiſe two Tranſlations, one in Arabick, and the other in Chaldee: Both theſe Verſions are written in Samaritan Letters, and make three Columns with the Original. Laſtly, the Samaritans writing the Text of the Hebrew Pentateuch without Points or Vowels, 'tis hard to know whether their reading brings up the ſame Words all along with that of the Jews, whoſe Rules are now fixt by the Maſſorets.

Father Simon continues, the Samaritans of Napolouſe wrote to ſome learned Doctors in England, whom they called their dear Samaritan Brethren of England. In their Letters they aſſure them they had a High-Prieſt of Phineas's Line, and that the reſt of their Prieſts were Levites by Extraction. In their laſt Letter written in 1676. they acquainted them with the Death of their High-Prieſt, deſiring them at the ſame time to aſſiſt them in their Diſtreſs, to ſend their Offerings to the Holy Mountain Gerizim, to furniſh them with Money, or Materials, to make their ſacerdotal Habits, and to ſend their Preſents and Charity to their Father's Tombs: The learned Morinus, obſerves that their High-Prieſt who dwells at Napolouſe, has Juriſdiction over all the other Samaritans; that he ſends them circular Letters every Year to acquaint them with the time of the Paſſover, and the other Feſtival Solemnities. * Vita Morini Epiſt. 1. & 2. pag. 119. & deinc, Antiquitates Eccleſiæ Orientalis &c. Simonville or P. Simon Supplement. touchant les Samaritains, dans ſa Traduction de Leon De Modene.

SAMEAS, a famous Jewiſh Nobleman. He was at the Meeting of the Nobility held before Hyrcanus againſt Herod Governor of Galilee, then impeached upon ſeveral Capital Articles. When he ſaw this Criminal appear, not in a petitioning manner, but with a haughty Air, and pompous Equipage, as if he intended to ſwagger over the Laws and deſpiſe the Court: Upon his appearing in this manner, Sameas would have had him checked for his Inſolence and ſent to the Scaffold. But finding himſelf ſtand ſingle, and the Votes all running the other Way, for fear of diſpleaſing Hyrcanus, who had a great Regard for Herod; he told the Court, that Herod in Return of having his Life ſaved, would one Day take away their own: And the Event juſtified the Prediction. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 14. cap. 17.

SAMEAS, Son of Eleazar of Saab in Galilee. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf to a great Degree in the Jewiſh War againſt the Romans, and particularly at Jotapat. He threw a maſſy Stone with ſuch a Force againſt the Head of a battering Ram, playing againſt the Walls, that he broke off the Head, and made it tumble. And then with ſurpriſing Bravery jumped down amongſt the Enemy, ſnatched the Rams Head, and carried it to the Foot of the Wall, where for want of Armour he had five Arrows lodged in his Body. But nothing being able to rebate his Courage, he ſprung up the Wall, and ſtayed there in open View, till the Pains of his Wounds made him fall; but then he ſunk with the Head of the Ram; and graſped it with his dying Hands. * Joſeph. de bell. Judaic. lib. 3. cap. 16.

* SAMOID. For the Days and Nights are half a Year long in Morery Vol. II. read almoſt half a Year.

SAMOSKI (John Sarius,) a Polander, who died in 1605. He publiſhed two very learned Books, de Senatu Romano, under his own Name, of which notwithſtanding it is ſuppoſed Sigonius was the Author. Samoski was Deputy or Vice-Chancellor of the Kingdom of Poland. He built a Town which he called by his own Name, and founded a Univerſity there: And to this new Seminary he invited the learned from all Parts, excepting the Jeſuits, whom he would not ſuffer to live there. * Mart. Hanckius Part. 1. de S. R. R. Pag. 263.

SAN-CLEMENTE, a Vulcano; it is one of the Mountains of the Andes. It ſpits Flame, and ſtands in Chili upon the Confine of Magellanica. * Maty, Diction.

SANCHES (Francis,) profeſſed Phyſick at Toulouſe. He was a Portugeſe. His Phyſick Tracts were printed at Toulouſe in 1636. There are likewiſe four Diſcourſes of his upon Philoſophy publiſhed with the others; amongſt which there is one entituled Quod nihil ſcitur, in which he endeavours to ſhew the Defects of Learning, and the Vanity of pretending to Knowledge. His Life is prefixed to his Works. * Bayle, Diction. Edit. 1702.

* SANCHO, the firſt of the Name, King of Navarre &c. Sancho III. his Grandſon ſurnamed the Great, made a Partition of his Kingdoms upon the occaſion following. This Sancho being in an Expedition againſt the Moors, his eldeſt Son Garcias, had a ſtrong Fancy for a Numidian Horſe, which his Father valuing very much, left to the Care of a Servant; This Servant refuſed to ſend Prince Garcias the Horſe, without the Queen's Order. The Queen told her Son ſhe could not gratify him, and deſired him to wait till the King his Father came Home. Upon this the hot-headed impatient young Prince wrote a Letter to his Father in which he charged his Mother with the loſs of her Honour, notwithſtanding her Reputation had always been unblemiſhed: The King being over credulous, gave way to the falſe and unnatural Suggeſtion: And at his Return told the Queen that unleſs ſhe could procure a Champion to defend her Innocence, ſhe muſt dye. When this Alternative was known, Don Ramiro the King's natural Son, declared himſelf ready to maintain the Queen's Honour with his Sword againſt any Perſon whatſoever. But before the Day for the Combat, ſome Perſons of Character for Religion, prevailed with Garcias to confeſs the Calumny, and ask his Mother's Pardon; which he did with the deepeſt Submiſſion, before many Witneſſes; and acknowleged that it was his being refuſed the Horſe, which worked him up to that Pitch of Diſtraction. The Barbarity of this Falſhood affected the King ſo much, that notwithſtanding his Son's Confeſſion, he ſeem'd reſolved either to take his Life, or at leaſt diſinherit him: But at laſt was willing to refer the Matter to the Queen, and put her Sentence in Execution. This Princeſs, who had enough of the Mother in her, ſpared his Life, and over and above, awarded, that upon the ſcore of his being the eldeſt Son, he ſhould ſucceed his Father in the Kingdom of Navarre. The Kingdom of Caſtille, which came to her by deſcent, ſhe diſpoſed of to Ferdinand her ſecond Son after her Husband's Death; though this Ferdinand ſeemed to countenance Garcias in the Practice againſt his Mother. As for the Kingdom of Arragon ſhe deſired it might be ſettled upon Don Ramiro her Champion, becauſe he had diſtinguiſhed himſelf with great Juſtice and Generoſity in her Defence. All theſe Branches of the Queen's Award were punctually executed by the King her Huſband. * Mariana.

SAN CHRISTOVAL de la Laguna, or in one Word Laguna, a Town in the Iſland Teneriffe; it ſtands on the Mountain of the Pico, near a Lake from whence it takes it's Name. It is the Capital of the Canaries, and the Place where the Governor of all theſe Iſlands reſides. * Maty, Diction.

SAN-PHILIPPO FUERTE, is a good Fort belonging to the Portugueſe. It ſtands near the Town Angra in the Iſland Tercera. * Maty, Diction.

SAN-FRANCISCO; Riode San Franciſco, or Parapitinga. It is a great River in Braſil. It riſes in Terra incognita, from whence it runs to the Frontiers of the Capitanata of Pernambuco, and Seregippa, and falls into the Sea of Braſil. * Maty, Diction.

SAN-JUAN de Oro, a Town in Southern America. It ſtands in Peru between the Mountains, thirty five Leagues from the Lake Titicaca to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

SAN-JUAN, an Iſland in the Indian Ocean. It is one of the Philippines, and ſtands to the North of the Iſland Mindanao, from which 'tis parted only by a narrow Channel. It is between five and twenty and thirty Leagues in Length and Breadth. It formerly belonged to the Spaniards, but now they have loſt it. * Maty, Diction.

SAN-MIGUEL, a Town within the Audience of Guatimala in America. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of the Province Guatimala, between the Cities San-Jago and Leon. S. Miguel is a conſiderable Town, has a Governor of it's own, a Convent of Monks and another of Nuns. * Baudrand.

* SANNAZARIUS (James.) The Principal Latin poetical Performances of Sannazarius, are his three Books de partu Virginis; three Books of Elegies; a Lamentation upon the Death of our bleſſed Saviour; three Books of Epigrams and five of Eclogues. Amongſt his Italian Poems we may reckon his Arcadia, and ſeveral Sonnets. His poetical Pieces in both Languages has done himſelf and his Country a great deal of Honour; for in the Opinion of ſome Criticks, he has written up to the Spirit and Correctneſs of Auguſtus's Age, or at leaſt come neareſt to it of any of the Moderns. His Latin Poetry is better than the Italian. His Book de partu Virginis i. e. the bleſſed Virgin gained him the greateſt Reputation. But then his Ornaments are altogether heatheniſh, and ill ſuited to the Solemnity of the Subject. His blending Mythology with the Myſteries of Chriſtianity, looks altogether unbecoming and foreign. The Performance is ſtuffed with Dryades and Nereides: And he makes the bleſſed Virgin read the Sibylline Books inſtead of the Pſalms and Prophets; and in the Room of David, Iſaiah, or ſome other Prophet of the Old Teſtament, he brings in Proteus to predict the Myſtery of the Incarnation. Our Saviour's Name is not ſo much as once mentioned. He calls the bleſſed Virgin the Hope of the Gods. This is the main Blemiſh in this Poem. As to the reſt; the Diction is admirably bright and correct. Some Criticks prefer his Eclogues to his Poem de partu Virginis. His moſt celebrated Italian Piece is his Arcadia. * Paulus Jovius in Vit. Sannazar. Mabillon in Tom. 1. Muſæi Italici. MM. de Port-Roiall, in their Preface to the Italian Grammar. Baillet, Jugem. des ſavans ſur les Poetes modernes

SANT-ADRIANO (Monte di,) a Circle of high Mountains which part the Country of Guipuſcoa, from the reſt of Biſcaye and France. In theſe Mountains eleven Leagues from St. Sebaſtian there is a Paſſage which ſeem'd impracticable cut croſs a Rock. It is fifty Yards long, eight broad, and ten deep. And notwithſtanding there are Houſes on one Side of this hollow; it is a ſhelter for Thieves. * Maty, Diction.

SANT-ANTIOCHO. An Iſland and Dependency of Sardinia. It is very ſtrong near the ſouthern Side, and to the Eaſt of the Iſland San Pietro. It is about twelve Leagues in Circumference. 'Twas anciently called Enoſis and afterwards called Plumbia, becauſe of the Lead Mines. * Baudrand.

SANT-OSPITIO, a Fort with a ſmall Village and a Haven. It ſtands in the County of Nice, a League from the City Nice, and half a League from Villa Franca to the Eaſt; ſome Geographers take the Haven of Sant-Oſpitio for the Portus Anonis of the Ancients. * Baudrand.

SANTA MARINELLA, a Town belonging to the Pope's Dominions. It has a ſmall Haven eleven Leagues from Rome to the Weſt. It is ſuppoſed to be built upon the Ruins of the Old Cæretanorum Navale, and Pyrgi, a ſmall Town of Hetruria, and that the Church called Santa Maria in Purgano preſerved the old Name. * Baudrand.

SANTEUIL (John Baptiſt,) extracted from a conſiderable Family in Paris and bred under the Jeſuits. He made an early Diſcovery of a ſtrong Genius for Poetry. He was a Canon regular in the Abby of St. Victor, but was never ordained Prieſt. He ſpent great Part of his Time in writing Latin Poetry, at which it muſt be ſaid he had a very good Hand. He made a great many publick Inſcriptions, Epigrams and other things, equally beautiful, and full of Spirit. His Church Poetry conſiſts of many fine Hymns made for the Breviaries of Paris and Cluni, and which are printed in a diſtinct Volume. They were well tranſlated in his Life time into French Verſe, and which is pretty difficult, a Line of the original made only a ſingle Verſe in the Tranſlation. Santeuil has ſome Poems foreign to the Subject of Religion. Towards the latter Part of his Life he was embroiled with the Jeſuits, occaſioned by an Epitaph he made, to pay a Reſpect to M. Arnauld's Memory. To ſatisfy his Adverſaries he ſent a Letter in Verſe to Father Jouvency, in which he beſtows a great deal of Commendation on the Society, but without retracting any thing he had written in Reference to Arnauld. But this giving no Satisfaction, they required he ſhould explain himſelf more fully. Upon this; he wrote another Copy of Verſes to P. Jouvency in which he ſeemed to recal the Regard paid to Arnauld's Memory, but it ſeems there was ſome Ambiguity in the Copies: For in the Paper he ſent the Jeſuits, 'twas poſitively affirmed, that Arnauld being Thunder ſtruck from the Vatican, he had no more Value for him.

Ictus illo fulmine
Trabeate Doctor, jam mihi non amplius
Arnalde ſapias.

But in other Copies it runs,

Arnalde ſaperes.

Which makes a conditional Senſe, and means that in Caſe Arnauld had been ſtruck with the Vatican Thunder, he ſhould have no eſteem for him. This Ambiguity diſguſted the Jeſuits; however, Santeuil afterwards procured a Reconciliation, but could not prevent ſome malicious People's publiſhing Libels againſt him. * Memoires du Tems. Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France, dans le 17 Siécle, &c.

* SARAH. It is ſaid Geneſis 20. and 12. that Sarah was Abraham's Siſter, the Daughter of his Father but not of his Mother: Now if theſe Words are litterally interpreted, it muſt be ſaid that Sarah was Terah's Daughter, and by Conſequence Abraham's Siſter though by another Mother. But Joſephus, St. Auſtin, and moſt of the Commentators will have it that ſhe was Daughter to Haran, Abraham's Brother, and by Conſequence his Niece. But the Scripture ſpeaking of Haran's Daughters, mentions only two, Milcah married to Nahor, and Iſcah. Now ſome Commentators pretend that Iſcah and Sarah are the ſame; but the Scripture ſays nothing of it, but mentions Sarah as a different Perſon. When Abraham told the King of Gerar, that ſhe was his Siſter, the Word Siſter may be taken for a near Relation. Thus Lot is called Abraham's Brother, though he was his Nephew. But notwithſtanding this Latitude for the Terms Siſter and Brother, it is not Neceſſary to ſuppoſe Sarah Haran's Daughter; becauſe it is poſſible Terah might have other Children; from one of which Sarah might have been deſcended. She died at a hundred twenty ſeven Years of Age, and not thirty ſeven, as it is miſprinted in Morery Vol. II. * Du Pin, Nouville Diſſert. Critique & Chronol. ſur le Geneſe.

SARABITES, a Name given to certain Monks who followed no ſettled Regulation, but ſtrolled from Town to Town, and lived by their own Fancy: 'Tis ſaid this Word in the Ægyptian Language ſignifies People looſe from Diſcipline. St. Jerom, who calls theſe Monks Remoboth, gives a Deſcription of 'em in his Book de Virginitate. * Du Cange, Gloſſar. Latinit.

* SARACENS. For St. Cyril in Morery Vol. II. read Cyril the Diſciple of Euthymius, who lived in the tenth Century.

* SARDICA. For Philippes in Morery Vol. II. read Philippopoli: And for Conſtance read Conſtantius.

SARRASIN (James,) a Statuary born at Noyon, and extracted from a creditable Family. He went to Paris when a Youth, where he learn'd to draw and make Models: But Sculpture being much ſhort of Perfection in France, he travell'd to Rome, and liv'd there eighteen Years. Cardinal Aldo-Brandini, Nephew to Pope Clement VIII. order'd him to work at Freſcati; here he made an Atlas and a Polyphemus, which ſpout a prodigious Quantity of Water like a Branch: Theſe Figures, though ſurrounded with a great many antique Curioſities, appear beautiful and fine. At his Return from Rome he came through Lyons, where he made a St. John Baptiſt, and a St. Bruno for the Carthuſians, both which are counted Ornaments to the City. When he came to Paris he made Angels of Plaiſter of Paris for the high Altar of St. Nicholas des Champs, a Figure of St. Anne, and a St. Lewis for the Church of N. Dame at Paris. The Marquiſs d'Effiat, Superintendant of the Finances, employ'd him at his Seat at Chilly, where he beautify'd the Chapel and the Gallery of this Caſtle. M. des Noyers, then Director of the King's Buildings, employed him to make thoſe large Figures which ſtand in one of the Domes of the Louvre next the Court. King Lewis XIII. was ſo much pleaſed with him that he allowed him a large Penſion, and order'd him an Apartment in the Galleries of the Louvre. The Queen, Anne of Auſtria, when ſhe was with Child of King Lewis XIV. order'd him to caſt a Silver Angel three Foot and a half high, holding a Child caſt in Gold, repreſenting the Dauphin whom ſhe expected to be born of her: This Grouppe was afterwards carry'd to our Lady's Chapel at Loretto, to perform the Queen's Vow. Sarraſin made two very good Pieces of Work in the Jeſuits Church at Paris; the firſt is two very large Silver Angels flying in the Air, and each of them holding a Silver Heart, in which Lewis XIII's Heart was encloſed; I ſay, theſe Angels appear in the Air, becauſe the ſmall Bars of Iron to which they are faſten'd to the Roof, are quite out of Sight. His other Piece of Sculpture is Henry of Bourbon, Prince of Conde's Tomb, Grandfather to the preſent Prince of Condé. This Mauſoleum is ornamented with four large Figures in Braſs, repreſenting Diligence, Juſtice, Piety, and which is ſomewhat whimſical, a Minerva, to ſignify the Regard he had for military Performances, and the creditable Arts and Sciences. Sarraſin made two very curious Crucifixes, one in the Jeſuits Noviciate Church, and another in St. James's by the Butchery. Amongſt the Curioſities of Sculpture at Verſailles, his Goat with two Children ſucking her are much admir'd. 'Twould be too long to relate every thing Sarraſin has done of this kind; and over and above he was a fine Hiſtory Painter. * Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France, Tom. II.

* SASON. For five Miles in Morery Vol. II. read fifteen Miles.

* SASSUM, in Morery Vol. II. To explain a Paſſage which looks like a Miſtake, ſee Supplement under Gregory Nazianzen.

* SATYRUS, St. Ambroſe's eldeſt Brother, and Son to Ambroſius Præfectus Prætorio, or Lord Lieutenant of Gaul, was born at the latter End of the Reign of Conſtantine the Great. He pleaded at the Bar at Rome with great Reputation; and Symmachus the Governor and chief Juſtice of the City, had a great Value for him. He was afterwards made Governor of a Province, and acquitted himſelf to Satisfaction. When St. Ambroſe was choſen Archbiſhop of Milan, Satyrus made him a Viſit, and undertook the Care of all the temporal Affairs, that his Brother might have nothing but the ſpiritual Part to manage. Satyrus being engaged in the Concerns of their Family, ſet Sail for Africk to demand a Debt of one Proſper. He was wracked in his Voyage, and his Ship bilged upon a Rock. Notwithſtanding he was never baptized he hung the Euchariſt about his Neck, threw himſelf into the Sea and ſwam to Land. He refuſed to be baptized at the Place where he came aſhore, becauſe the Biſhop was a Luciferian. He put to Sea again, and landing at a Place in Africk where there was a catholick Biſhop, got himſelf baptized: And having afterwards received the Money due from Proſper, he went on board, arrived at Rome, and from thence came to Milan; and not long after fell into a Diſtemper which took away the Uſe of his Limbs, and prov'd mortal to him A. D. 379. The Roman Martyrology mentions him at the 17th of September. * Ambroſ. de exceſſu Fratris Satyri. Vit. Ambroſ.

SAVARON (John,) called the Preſident Savaron, was deſcended from a good Family of Clermont in Auvergne; and was Preſident of the Preſidial Court of Clermont. He was choſen by the Province of Auverne to repreſent the third Eſtate at a general Aſſembly of the States held at Paris in the Year 1614, where he harangued with ſo much freedom, and aſſerted the Privileges of the Commons ſo far, that he diſobliged all the Nobleſſe, and was forced to have a Guard to ſecure his Perſon. He is reckon'd one of the learneſt Men of his time, and Bignonius upon the ſecond Chapter of Marculphus's Formulæ, calls him Arvernorum & Præſes & Decus. His Works are, Diſcourſes upon Duelling, upon the Sanctity of King Clouis, of the Sovereignty of Kings; againſt Maſquerading; Notes upon Cornelius Nepos, and upon a Homily of St. Auſtin's de Calendis Januarii. His two principal Performances are the Antiquities of the City of Clermont; afterwards enlarged by Durandus; and a Commentary upon Sidonius Apollinarius Biſhop of Clermont. His Tract concerning the Sovereignty of Kings obliged him to write a Reply to the Cardinals Perron and Baronius, who drew their Pens againſt him under feigned Names. * Durante, Origines de Clermont. Paul Colomiez in his Hiſtorical Miſcellanies of 1675.

SAVOY (Mary of,) Daughter to Charles Amadeus Duke of Savoy and Elizabeth of Bourbon of the Branch of Vendôme, was born at Paris June 21, 1646. In 1666 ſhe was married to Alphonſus VI. King of Portugal, who when his Father King John IV. was living, was looked on incapable of ſucceeding him, upon the ſcore of his being ſeized with the Palſie from his Infancy, which diſabled both his Body and his Mind. His untoward Temper made all the Care taken about his Education miſcarry. The arbitrary Conduct of the Miniſtry, and the Inſolence of his Favourites provoked the great Men to ſuch a Degree, that they call'd for a meeting of the States. Before theſe could come together, the Privy Council wreſted the Government out of Alphonſus's Hands, and confined him in his Palace; and when the States met, they voted his Continuance in that Confinement, and that his Brother Don Pedro ſhould be the Regent. The Queen, who ſince November 1667 was retired to a Convent, upon the ſcore of her ſcrupling the Lawfulneſs of her Marriage, and her Doubt lying on the King's Side: The Caſe being examined by the Chapter of Liſbon, they declared the Queen at liberty to diſpoſe of her ſelf elſewhere: Her Engagement with Alphonſus being void, ſhe got a Diſpenſation, and married Don Pedro; and January 6, 1669, ſhe was brought to Bed of a Daughter, chriſten'd Iſabella Louiſa by the French King. In the latter Part of her Life ſhe gave herſelf wholly to religious religious Exercises: She took great Care of the Education of the Infanta her Daughter; this young Princess understood Portugueſe, Spaniſh, French, Italian, the History of Portugal, Geography, and the Customs of almost all Nations. She was courted by a great many Princes, particularly by the Elector Palatine, but she was carried off by a Disease October 1690. * Memoires du Tems. Le Pere d'Orleans's Life of the Mother and Daughter.

SAURIN (Elias,) Pastor of the Walloon Church at Utrecht, was a Divine of Character. He was born at Usseaux in the Valley of Pragelas, upon the Frontiers of Dauphine in August 1639: His Father Peter Saurin was Minister there: Elias settled at Utrecht in 1671. In 1672, when the French took that Town, Saurin managed with that Discretion, though without relaxing his Principles, that the French Roman Catholicks went frequently to hear him preach. Mr. Jurieu was his great Enemy. A Dutch Synod appointed Saurin to make Remarks upon some of Jurieu's Books, where it was thought this Divine had struck out into Singularities upon very considerable Points: The Remarks were made, and Jurieu disconcerted with them. And now he returned a Charge of gross Heresies on Saurin: The Synod examin'd their respective Accusations, and being desirous to put an end to the Controversy, pronounced the Sentiments of one of them orthodox, and that the others were tolerable: Saurin was not satisfy'd with this Decision; however at another Synod they made both of 'em promise not to write against each other. Saurin thinking his Adversary had not kept his Word, wrote a Book entituled, an Examination of Mr. Jurieu's Divinity, in two Volumes 8vo. In these Tracts M. Saurin has gone to the bottom of several important Questions in Divinity; and as to his manner 'tis lively and entertaining. Jurieu wrote a very rugged and satyrical Reply: M. Saurin believing the following Synod had not gone the whole length of Justice in his behalf, published several other Defences well worth the reading. He likewise publish'd Reflexions upon the Rights and Privileges of Conscience, where he takes a middle Course betwen Jurieu and Bayl's philosophical Commentary, and confutes them both. He wrote likewise a Tract of the Love of God, and another of the Love of our Neighbour. He died upon Easter Sunday A.D. 1703 in the 64th Year of his Age. * Memoires du Tems.

SAUTEL (Peter,) a Jesuit of Valence in Dauphiné and a Latin Poet, was born in the Year 1613, and died in 1662. This Father wrote Annus ſacer Poeticus, i. e. Epigrams upon all the Days and Festivals of the Year, as they stand in the Roman Calendar. This Performance was after his Death printed at Paris in 1665. His Latin is correct, his Expression and Versification entertaining. He likewise wrote another Piece of Poetry entituled, Ludi Poetici, that is, Elegies for Pleasure and Instruction. This Book is written in so beautiful a Manner, that some Criticks pronounce it equal to what Ovid has written of the same Kind * Jean Gallois; Journals des ſavans du 2. jour de Janviere de l'an 1666. & du 22 Fevrier de la même année.

* SAXO, surnamed Grammaticus, upon the Score of his fine Style; He was born in Zeland belonging to the Danes, and was President of the Collegiate Church at Roſchild in Denmark in the twelfth Century. The Archbishop of Lunden sent him to Paris, to bring the Monks of St Genevieve, into Denmark. He wrote the History of the Northern Nations in sixteen Books, carried to the Year 1186. He died in the Year 1204. * Poſſevin, in Appar. Sacr. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Lat. lib. 2. cap. 55.

* SCALIGER, or Julius Cæſar della Scala. Some Authors are so much prepossessed in Favour of Julius Scaliger, that they make no Difficulty to pronounce, that there has not been a better Philosopher since Aristotle; a better Poet since Virgil; nor a better Physician since Hippocrates than this Gentleman. Juſtus Lipſius goes still farther; and after having said that the four greatest Men that have lived in the World are in his Opinion Homer, Hippocrates, Ariſtotle, and Julius Scaliger; after having said this, he adds, that this last exceeded the Species of Mankind, and by saying so, gives him a Preference to the other three. Huetius commends him in lower Strains, but with more probability, where he observes that Julius was Master of almost all the Parts of Learning, notwithstanding he had passed great Part of his Youth in Campagnes, had begun his Studies late, and prosecuted them moderately. After this Remark, he tells us, that Julius seemed to be made on purpose to shew that the Moderns had a Man, equal to any Instance in Antiquity. In short; Julius Scaliger seems to have the strength of Ariſtotle's Genius in every thing he has written; but amongst the rest, his Books upon the Subject of Poetry, de cauſis Linguæ Latinæ, and his Exercitations against Cardan, are three inimitable Pieces; particularly, that upon Poetry is one of the most beautiful, and best finished Performances, that were ever written upon this Subject. He divides it into seven Books; in the first he gives an historical Account of the Original, Progress, Design and Use of Poetry; in the second he discourses upon the Matter of this Art; and in the third concerning the Form; and in the fourth he dilates upon the preliminary requisites to Poetry; in the fifth which he calls a Critick, he draws a Parallel between several Poets, and brings them to the Test; the sixth, which is entituled an Hipercritick, takes in a Comparison of several Poets, beginning with the Moderns, and running up to the Age of Auguſtus; the last Book which he calls Epinomis, is a particular Explanation of some Difficulties, which occurred touching the Rules laid down in the first six Books. In this Work he has discovered, a great deal of Penetration, Judgment, and Learning. In this Branch of Criticism, which depends upon Genius and Judgment, Scaliger seems to exceed even Eraſmus; but then it is observed, that his not being a perfect Master in Greek Poety, made him somewhat unqualified for pronouncing upon Performances in that Language. He seems to be particularly prejudiced against Homer in Favour of Virgil, whom he always prefers.

SCALIGER (Joſeph,) Son to Julius Cæſar in the former Article. The learned have all along compared the two Scaligers, with respect to Poetry. Julius's Poems were printed at Heidelberg in 1621 in a thick Octavo. The Hymns and religious Poems of the first; the Translations in Verse of Sophocles's Ajax, and Lycophron's Caſſandra, by the second, and the Epigrams of both of them are separately printed. But these two great Men, don't stand in the same Class with Respect to Poetry, which they do with Regard to other Matters: And to give them their due, the Principality of Parnaſſus was not so much at their Heart, as that of Verona. To speak freely, neither of them had any great Hand at Poetry. 'Tis possible they might begin with it too late. As to a Comparison between the two Scaligers, it may be said, that Julius had more Wit than Learning, and Joſeph more Learning than Wit. Julius entered late upon his Studies and Joſeph very early: Julius had a very beautiful Style, but Joſeph's was nothing extraordinary. The Son is reckoned a great Linguist, but not a good Divine: Besides; he is observed to have censured some of the Fathers with too much Freedom. * Baillet, Jugement des Savans ſur les Poetes modernes.

SCANDER, a Town with a Fort; it stands in the Kingdom or Imirete in Georgia upon the River Kur, about forty Leagues above Teflis. Some take it for the Old Xaliſca, a Town of Iberia. * Baudrand.

SCAURUS, a Roman General: being in Syria with Pompey was gained by large Promises to assist Ariſtobulus against his Brother Hyrcanus, with whom he was contesting for the Jewiſh Sovereignty and high Priesthood. Scaurus raised the Siege, which Aretas King of Arabia, had formed at Jeruſalem; and obliged that Prince to return to his Town Philadelphia, formerly called Petra. But afterwards finding Ariſtobulus, could not make his Engagement good, Scaurus left him and joyned Hyrcanus. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 14. cap. 4.

SCHAFEI, a famous Iman or Mahometan Doctor born at Gaza in Palæſtine, in the 150 Year of the Hegyra, and is the first who wrote about the municipal Law of the Muſulmans: he wrote a Book upon the Oſſoul, or Grounds of Muſulmaniſm, in which all the civil and canonical Law of the Mahometans is comprehended. There are likewise two other Books extant of this Author's upon the same Subject. His Writings are so much valued amongst the Muſulmans that Saladin founded a College at Grand Caire, where no other Doctrine but Schafei's was allowed to be taught. As to the Mahometan Traditions, 'tis ſaid that Schafei received them from Malek-Ben-Ans, and tranſmitted them to Zohari; for by the Way it is a thing of Moment amongſt the Mahometans, to know the intermediate Conveyances of their Traditions, that ſo they may be ready to run them up to their pretended Prophet. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

SCHAHROKH, Son of the great Tamerlane, ſucceeded his Father in the 807th Year of the Hegira, and maintained a long War againſt Cara Jouſolef a Turkiſh Prince, and his two Sons of the Dynaſty of the Black Sheep: He defeated their Father in three ſet Battels, and dy'd in the 850th Year of the Hegira, in the City Rei, after having reigned forty three Years, and lived ſeventy one. This Prince has a great Character, as well for his Regularity and Juſtice as for his Courage and Qualifications for a great General. The Hiſtory of Schahrokh, written by Abdalrazzak who was his cotemporary, is ſo full of noble Exploits and great Events, that 'tis very difficult to be weary of reading it: It takes in the whole Hiſtory of this Prince's Life and his Children as far as the Year of the Hegira 875. * De Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient.

SCHALAVONIA, a Country in Ducal Pruſſia; it is bounded with Nadravia to the South, with the Gulph of Curiſch-Half to the Weſt, and with Samogitia to the Eaſt and North; the River Niemente, and ſome others run through it; but 'tis thinly inhabited, and unimprov'd; the People are very unpoliſhed and ſeem the Deſcendants of an ancient Moruſſi. The chief Towns are Memel the Capital, Ranguits, Tilſe, and Ruſſe. * Baudrand.

SCHAMALGANI, the Surname of a famous Impoſtor called Mohammed, born in the Village Schamalgan, ſtanding between the Cities Coufah and Baſſorah. This Man ſet up a Sect which went mainly upon the Metempſychoſis; but then he not only held a Tranſmigration of Souls, but a Communication alſo; and, as one may ſay, a Tranſfuſion of one Soul into another: He began to throw off all ſort of divine Worſhip, both lawful and ſuperſtitious, and allowed the moſt abominable Licentiouſneſs: But he was not long connived at, for he was brought to his Tryal and had Judgment to be hanged and burnt, which Sentence was accordingly executed. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

SCHARDIUS (Simon,) born in 1535, and dy'd in 1573. He printed an Idea of a Counſellor of State; a Dictionary of Civil and Canon Law; and four Tomes of the Hiſtory of Germany. His Epitaph will give a more particular Account of him.

Schardius hic Simon poſt funera mœſta quieſcit:
Heu quantum amiſit Saxona terra virum!
Imperii Aſſeſſor, Nemetum dicebat in urbe
Jus, juſtique tenax, eloquiique decus.
Parce tamen lacrymis: Nam quæ monumenta reliquit,
Perpetuo vitam ſunt habitura ſuam.

* Konig. Biblioth.

SCHEHERESUL, or Schiahrazul, a Town in Aſiatick Turky; it ſtands in Diarbeker, upon the Confines of Erak Atzen in Perſia. Schehereſul is the old Arbela, or at leaſt is built upon the Ruins of it: Tho' it is not a large yet it is a handſome Town, and the Capital of the Beglerbeglie of the ſame Name; and which lies beyond the Tigris in the Country anciently called Aſſyria. * Baudrand.

SCHEINER, (Chriſtopher,) a famous Mathematician of Mundelheim in Suabia; 'tis ſaid he was the firſt that obſerved the Maculæ in the Sun at Ingolſtadt in 1611. He publiſhed a Folio in 1630, entituled Roſa Urſina, where he treats of theſe Maculæ, of the Incorruptibility of the Sky, and ſeveral other curious Queſtions of the ſame kind. * Alegambe, pag. 77. Placcus, pag, 56.

SCHELESTRATE (Emanuel,) Under-Library Keeper of the Vatican, was born at Antwerp. He apply'd himſelf from his Youth to the Study of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. He was but 32 Years of Age, when he printed a Latin Diſcourſe at Antwerp in 1678, entituled Antiquitates Eccleſiæ illuſtratæ: The next Year he printed a Tract concerning the State of the ancient African Church under the Primate of Carthage; and in 1681 he printed a Diſſertation upon the Council of Antioch, held when Julius I. was Pope. Scheleſtrate coming to Paris to make an Acquaintance with the Men of Learning there, was call'd off to Rome by Pope Innocent XI. who made him Library Keeper of the Vatican. Here he printed a Diſſertation upon the Decrees of the fourth and fifth Seſſion of the Council of Conſtance. In 1685 he publiſh'd his Book de Diſciplina Arcani, where he aſſerts that the Chriſtians as far as the fifth Century in the Eaſt, and to the ſixth in the Weſt, conceal'd ſome of the Articles of Faith, and the Doctrine of the Sacraments. In 1687 he publiſhed a Tract upon the Subject of Patriarchal and Metropolitical Juriſdiction: He afterwards reviewed his large Work of Eccleſiaſtical Antiquities, and printed the firſt Tome of them at Rome in 1692. He dy'd the ſame Year before the ſecond Tome was printed off, being forty ſix Years of Age. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

SCHENEBERG, a Town with the Title of a Principality. It ſtands in Voighland in Miſnia, at the Edge of a Mountain three Leagues from Zwykaw to the South. * Maty, Diction.

SCHERIF; an Arabian Word, which in the general Import, ſignifies Noble, diſtinguiſhed by Deſcent or Station; 'tis a Title which belongs to thoſe who are deſcended from Mahomet by Fathima his Daughter and Hali his Son in Law. Thoſe of his Family have likewiſe the Addition of Emir and Seid, which ſignifies Prince and Lord: They likewiſe wear a green Tourban, to diſtinguiſh themſelves from other Muſſulmans who wear it white. A great many of theſe Scherifs have been Sovereigns, and founded diſtinct Dynaſties in Africk: The Edriſſites were Scherifs, and the preſent regnant Family at Fez and Morocco, take the Title of Scherif: There has formerly likewiſe been Scherifs at Mecca and Medina, to whom the Sultan, who is Maſter of all Arabia, has left a ſort of Sovereignty, contenting himſelf only with the Title of Protector of the two holy Towns, that is, of Mecca and Medina. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

SCHEVELING, a Village within the Earldom of Holland; it ſtands upon the Sea, ſomewhat more than half a League from the Hague: There is a large brick Cauſeway from this Place to the Hague ſet with Trees on each ſide. Scheveling has been larger than it is at preſent. For in 1574 a hundred and twenty Houſes were ſwallowed up.

SCHIDLOWIETZ, a conſiderable Town upon the ſcore of the Iron and Steel Mines belonging to it; it ſtands within the Palatinate of Sandomir in Poland, at the Head of the River Badon, and eight Leagues above the Town Radon. * Maty, Diction.

SCHIEDAM, a ſmall Town but very populous; it ſtands in South Holland upon the River Schie, about a League from Rotterdam to the Weſt. This Town has a Vote at the meeting of the States of Holland.

SCHLICTINGIUS, (Jonas of Bukowiec,) a Polander, died in 1661, at 65 Years of Age. He maintained Socinus's Tenets: He printed Commentaries upon the Goſpel of St. John, upon the Epiſtles to the Romans, to the Corinthians, to the Hebrews, &c. His Works are inſerted amongſt the Fratres Poloni. * Hornbeck, Tom. 1. Socinian. Refut.

SCHOMER (Juſtus Chriſtopher,) born at Lubec in 1648. After his firſt Studies he travell'd into France and Italy. In 1680 he was made Divinity Profeſſor at Rockſtock. In 1690 he publiſh'd his Book entituled Theologia moralis ſibi conſtans, which is ſo much valued in the Univerſities of Lower Saxony, that 'tis almoſt the only Book for determining in thoſe Schools. The learned at Leipſic ran a Commendation upon it the Year after, in their Acta Eruditorum for the Month June. It contained then but five Chapters, but in 1691 the Author enlarged it to eight. It goes upon the Subject of our Duty to God. Schomer died April 1693, which prevented his finiſhing the Book to the End he deſigned. * Journal des Savans, Decembre 1708, Pag. 480. Edit. de Holl.

SCHOOKIUS (Martin,) born at Utrecht in 1614. He taught Logick and natural Philoſophy at Groningen. His Works are a Diſcourſe upon Turfs; one upon Beer, one upon Peoples having an Averſion to Cheeſe; another upon an Egg and a Pullet; one de Signaturis fœtus: Fabula Hamelenſis: de Figmento Legis Regiæ. * Rævius, Hiſt. Davent. lib. 6. Le Journal des Savans. Tom. 1 & 2.

SCHORUS (Anthony,) born at Hocſtat in Brabant, was one of the beſt Grammarians in the ſixteenth Century. He wrote a Book entituled Theſaurus Ciceronianus; and a Collection of Latin Phraſes, with a Method for teaching the Greek and Latin Languages. He wrote a Comedy acted by his Sholars at Heidelberg, in which Religion was repreſented coming to great Men's Houſes; and that they ſhut the Gate againſt her: This Freedom made the Emperor ſend an Order, to the Elector Palatine Prince Frederick II. to expel Schorus his Dominions. He died at Lauſanne in the Year 1552. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq. 2. Edit. 1702.

SCHOTTUS (Andreas,) born at Antwerp, a Jeſuit and a very great Grecian. He tranſlated Photius's Bibliotheca, and publiſhed ſeveral of the Fathers. He was born in 1552 and died in 1629. He likewiſe wrote the Life of St. Francis Borgia &c. * Alegambe. Biblioth. Societ. Jeſu. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library. Cent. XVII.

SCHTRAUK, a Lutheran Miniſter of Dantzick: He had a good Share of Learning and Elocution, and had worked up a great deal of Credit among the Populace. He concerned himſelf with the Affairs of the Government, blew up a miſunderſtanding between the Magiſtracy and the People, and ſtuffed his Sermons with Invectives againſt the Adminiſtration. The People thus heated to Sedition, were continually calling for new Exemptions and Privileges, and as it were inveſted the Council Board, to make them comply. The Governor of the Town hoping to ſuppreſs the Tumult forbade him the Pulpit; but the Mob made him preach in defiance to Authority: However he began to be apprehenſive of Danger, and think of a Retreat. And having a good Employment offered him at Hambourg, and ſecured with a Paſs given him by Prince Crouy, Governor of Ducal Pruſſia, he ſet forward. But the Elector of Brandenbourg, againſt whom the Doctor had play'd his Satyr, being acquainted with his Journey, ordered him to be ſeized in Pomerania, under pretence of holding Correſpondence with Sweden. 'Tis true, he had a Letter from the Swediſh Ambaſſador at Dantzick, but the Purport of that was no more than a Recommendation of him to ſome Perſons of Quality in Hambourg. The Elector of Brandenbourg made him paſs his time very ill a great while in Priſon, and refuſed to diſcharge him at the Inſtance of the King of Poland: For to ſpeak clearly, Schtrauk had uſed his Electoral Highneſs very coarſely; for one Day after Sermon, this Prince ſending him Word, that he would adviſe him to remember, that the Fort of Pillaw, where Priſoners of State were kept, was not far diſtant from Dantzick. The Doctor bid the Meſſenger tell his Highneſs, that neither was Hell very far from Berlin. But at laſt the Elector's Reſentment going off, he enlarged the Doctor at the requeſt of the Town of Dantzick, who ſent a Perſon of Diſtinction to ſollicit for them. The Burghers of Dantzick made Schtrauk's Return a Holiday; prepared a magnificent Entry for him, ſet up a triumphal Arch, and deſigned to meet him with all the Marks of Welcome and Reſpect: But this Miniſter, growing ſomewhat wiſer by his Confinement, declined this Honour, and came into the Town at the break of Day Incognito. However; they ſtruck a Medal with the Doctor's Figure to preſerve the Memory of his Return. To conclude with him, he altered his Conduct, grew modeſt and inoffenſive, and took his leave of Politicks. * Memoires de Beaujeu.

SCHWALBACH, there are two Towns of this Name within Weſtenwald in Germany. One of them is in the Territories of Naſſaw, upon the Aar, three Leagues above Dietz; the other upon the ſame River three Leagues above the firſt. This laſt for Diſtinction is called Landgin Schwabach. It is remarkable for very good mineral Waters which taſte ſomewhat like Rheniſh. * Maty, Diction.

SCHWANDE, a Town within the Canton of Glaris in Switſerland. It ſtands upon the River Lint, a League above Glaris. Schwande is the Place where the General meeting of the Canton is held every Year. * Maty, Diction.

SCHWEIDNITS, a Town in Sileſia. It ſtands upon the River Weſtritz, ten Leagues from the City Breſlaw to the Weſt. Schweidnits is fortifyd, and the Capital of a Duchy or Principality, which lies between the Territories of Jawer, Breſlaw, Brieg, Monſterberg, and Bohemia. * Maty, Diction.

SCIATI, an Iſland in the Archipelago. 'Tis near Mogneſia in Theſſaly, between the Gulph of Salonichi and that of Armiro. 'Tis about nine Leagues in Circumference. There is nothing conſiderable in it, but a Fort to defend the Inhabitants from Pyrates. * Maty, Diction.

SCIPIO (Q. Metellus Pius,) Son of Naſica, and Father in Law to Pompey, who had married his Daughter, Craſſus's Widow. This Scipio had the Surname of Metellus, upon the Score of his being adopted by Metellus. He retreated into Africk after the Battel at Pharſalia, where he commanded an Army, in Conjunction with Cato and Juba, and renewed the War againſt Julius Cæſar. When his Army was routed, he ſtab'd himſelf: And when ſome of his Men were enquiring what was become of him, he anſwered with the Sword in his Body, Bene ſe habet Imperator, the General is very well. * Comment. Cæſar. Plutarch in Vit. Cæſar.

SCOT (Michael,) a Mathematician of the thirteenth Century, much eſteemed by the Emperor Frederick II. He had the Character of a Magician. 'Tis ſaid he told the Emperor Frederick that he ſhould die at Florence, which Prediction was anſwered in the Event, not at Florence in Tuſcany, but at a Caſtle in Puglia called Fiorenzola; he likewiſe foretold that himſelf ſhould die with the fall of a Stone, which happened accordingly; for being in a Church, a Stone fell from the Roof which gave him a mortal Wound. But notwithſtanding this Blemiſh, which it may be was nothing but the Ignorance of the common People, Pitz and others treat his Memory with Reſpect, and report him a Man of Learning and a great Divine. He wrote a Tract of Phyſiognomy; another upon the Sphere; and the Hiſtory of Animals. * Dante. Canto 20. Pitzeus de Script. Angl. Naudæus, his Apology for great Men, accuſed of being Magicians.

SCUDERY (Magdalen de,) a French Lady remarkable for her Ingenuity in the ſeventeenth Century: She was extracted from a Gentleman's Family originally of Naples, and which had been ſettled in Provence ſeveral hundred Years. Her Father was a military Man, had ſerved with Reputation both at Sea and Land, and was Governor of Havre de Grace: Her Mother was deſcended from the noble Family of Gouſtiméniel-Martel. As ſoon as Magdalen appear'd at Paris, her Fame began to blaze and ſpread: All the Hôtel of Rambouillet, who were the beſt Judges of Merit and Wit, pronounced in this Lady's Favour. But her Family being decay'd, and her Fortune lying wholly in her Underſtanding, ſhe reſolv'd to try if ſhe could write herſelf out of Debt: Her Performances were well receiv'd, though publiſh'd at firſt in her Brother's Name. She wrote Romances and Novels, then much the Mode in France; the Illuſtrious Baſhaw, Clelia, Célinta, Mathilda, and the Walk at Verſailles; 'tis ſaid in theſe Novels, &c. ſhe took care to improve, as well as entertain, and form the Reader to Probity and good Manners. In 1671 ſhe made a fine Diſcourſe upon Glory, which wone the firſt Prize of Eloquence, given by the French Academy. There are a great many ingenious Letters and Copies of Verſes of hers. Her Reputation run high in foreign Countries no leſs than in France. The Prince of Paderborne Biſhop of Munſter, preſented her with his Medal and his Work. Chriſtina Queen of Sweden, ſent her her Picture together with the grant of a Penſion, and wrote frequently to her. The famous Univerſity of Ricovrati at Padua ſent her a Diploma to make her one of their Body, with a very obliging Letter at the ſame time. There was ſcarce any Body in France remarkable for Extraction, Title, Station, Wit, Beauty, Probity, or Merit, but ſhewed an Inclination to make an Acquaintance with Mademoiſelle de Scudery. Cardinal Mazarin left her a Penſion in his Will. And King Lewis XIV at the Inſtance of Madam de Maintenon, ſettled a Penſion of two thouſand Franks upon her, gave her one of his fineſt Medals, and an Audience of a Quarter of an Hour to diſcourſe with her. This Gentlewoman notwithſtanding ſhe lived ninety four Years, had the ſame Judgment, beautiful Imagination, Strength of Mind, continued to the laſt. She left ſome ſhort Prayers for all the Sundays in the Year, and ſome pious Reflexions upon the Pſalms, which Mr. Boſquillon has promiſed ſhall be printed with her Life prefixed. * Journal des Savans, de 1701. Journal 27.

* SECULAR PLAYS, in Latin Ludi Seculares: The Article upon this Head in Morery being ſhort, it may not be improper to enlarge upon it. This Spectacle was one of the greateſt Solemnities at Rome. It has been deſcribed by ſeveral ancient Authors, but their Works being loſt, we ſhould have known little of the chief Ceremonies, if Zozimus, who lived at the latter End of the fourth Century, had not left a brief Recital of them in the ſecond Book of his Hiſtory. What he reports is confirmed and farther explained by the Medals ſtruck for the Secular Plays, eſpecially thoſe of the Emperor Domitian. The Reaſon of their Inſtitution is as follows.

Rome being afflicted with a great Mortality, the ſame Year the Tarquins were expelled, Valerius Publicola, then Conſul begun this Solemnity: 'Twas regulated upon the Directions of the Sibylline Books, and the Deſign was to appeaſe the Gods. This was done in the 245th Year of Rome according to Varro's Computation, which is reckoned the beſt. Theſe Plays or Spectacles where called Secular, becauſe they were to be repeated every Age, that is according to the common Opinion, every hundred Years, but according to the Quindecim Viri, who had the Regulation of religious Ceremonies, the Interval was a hundred and ten. Auguſtus had them kept in the Conſulſhip of Furnius and Silanus, in the Year of Rome 737. Claudius had the Solemnity revived in the 800th Year of Rome, becauſe that was the beginning of the Century. But Domitian taking no Notice of Claudius's Singularity, went more by Auguſtus's precedent, and brought on the Solemnity a hundred and three Years after it had been celebrated by Auguſtus, that is in the 840th Year of Rome.

The Solemnity was opened in the Manner following. In the beginning of Harveſt, the Emperor upon the ſcore of his being High-Prieſt, made a Speech to the People in the Capitol, and exhorted them to guard againſt all Impurity, and put themſelves in a due Diſpoſition for ſo great a Feſtival. Exhortations reſembling theſe were made for other great Holidays, particularly for the Eluſinian Myſteries, where the Ceremonies, as Herodian obſerves, were much like thoſe of the Ludi Seculares. The Emperor ſitting under a State before the Capitol, delivered Fumigations, which were to be diſtributed amongſt the People; they were a Compoſition of Brimſtone and Bitumen. The Quindecim Viri received and diſtributed them, giving the People over and above a Stick called Tæda. This ſtick was lighted, and the Brimſtone and the Bitumen being thrown upon it, every one made the Smoke come round him to purifie his Perſon. The Day of Solemnity being come, they began with a Proceſſion, where the Prieſts of all the Colleges and Fraternities, made part of the Spectacle. The Senate likewiſe and all the Magiſtracy had a Share in the Appearance: The People were dreſſed in white, crowned with Flowers, and each of them had a Branch of Palm-Tree in his Hand. As they walked the Streets, they ſung Verſes made on purpoſe for the Feſtival, and worſhipped the Statues of their Gods, as they paſſed by the Temples, where theſe pretended Deities lay open to view upon Beds of State, which they called Lectiſternia Deorum.

They met in the Temples three Nights together to watch, pray, and ſacrifice; and this they call Pervigilium: And that theſe Night Aſſemblies might be managed without diſorder, the young People of both Sexes had their Fathers and Mothers to inſpect their Behaviour; or elſe ſome Perſon of their Family advanced in Age, who could anſwer for their Conduct: This Care Auguſtus took to ſecure their Sobriety. And in regard this Feſtival was chiefly deſigned to pacifie the Gods below, i. e. Pluto, Proſerpine, Ceres, the Parcæ &c. they offer'd nothing but black Sacrifices, and that in the Night, which was then ſufficiently illuminated with Bonfires and Lamps; particularly they ſacrificed a black Bull to Pluto and a Cow to Proſerpine. The next Day they offered Sacrifices of the ſame Kind to Jupiter and Juno, but they were white ones. This may be learned from a Medal of Domitian's, where this Emperor pours a Bowl of Wine into the Fire upon the Altar. There are two Muſicians likewiſe upon the Medal, one playing upon a Harp, and another upon the Flute: Farther, there is a Man on his Knees holding the Bull, and another knocking him down with a Club. The Victims were brought to the Altar waſhed and dreſſed, with Garlands of Flowers: And when this was done, the Crier ordered prophane and unprepared People to withdraw, and that others ſhould be ſilent, and mind what was doing. After this, the Prieſt, who was the Emperor himſelf, threw a little Meal mixed with Salt upon the Head of the Beaſt to be ſacrificed, pouring afterwards a little Wine, of which he gave a Taſte to the By-ſtanders. Then the Victimarius or Slaughter Man, knocked down the Victim; and ſome other under Officers having cut his Throat, gave the High-Prieſt ſome of his Blood, who ſprinkled it upon the Fire of the Altar. This being done they examined the Inwards of the Beaſts with great Nicety: For from the different Situation and Colour of the Entrails, the Southſayers drew lucky or unlucky Omens, upon which the Romans had a great Reliance: Inſomuch that Julius Cæſar, as Macrobius relates, thought it worth his while to write ſixteen Books upon this Subject. Their next Buſineſs was to burn theſe Entrails, having firſt turned thrice round the Altar, offering this Sacrifice to the God or Goddeſs to whom it was deſigned, which they never did, without invoking at the ſame time all the other Gods; as if they could do nothing for them, except they all acted by Concert. They commonly kept the remainder of the Victim for an Entertainment, which was made after they had diſmiſſed the People with the Word Licet, that is to ſay, you may retire.

The Sacrifices being over, the publick Shews or Spectacles began, which were celebrated particularly as a part of Worſhip to Apollo and Diana. Thus, for the Purpoſe, Comedies were acted in the Playhouſe; and in the Circus there were Foot, Horſe, and Chariot Races: The Athletæ likewiſe diverted the People with Wreſtling and other Exerciſes; and in the Amphitheatre the Gladiators fought ſometimes with each other, and ſometimes with wild Beaſts.

The ſecond Night they repeated their Prayers and Sacrifices to the Parcæ; and here the Victims were a Sheep and a She-Goat, both black.

The next Day the Women, who were not Slaves, went to the Capitol and other Temples, where they ſaid their Prayers to Jupiter and the Gods abovemention'd. Another Part of their Devotion was ſinging of Hymns, to beg Proſperity to the Roman Empire: They prayed likewiſe for private Bleſſings, and particularly for a good Hour: The reſt of the Day was ſpent in publick Rejoycings of the ſame kind with thoſe of the Day before.

The third Night they ſacrificed a Hog to the Earth, which they made one of their chief Goddeſſes, and worſhipped under ſeveral Names: 'Twas thought this Animal was the moſt acceptable Sacrifice that could be offered, becauſe 'tis always looking upon the Ground and rooting it; and becauſe, as they ſay, a Hog had eaten the firſt Corn that was ſowed. This Sacrifice was made upon the Bank of the Tyber, in a Place of Mars's Field call'd Tarentum.

The next Day being the third and laſt for the Ludi Seculares, there were two Choirs of Muſick, the one of Boys, and the other of Girls, both of the beſt Families of the Town, and who had their Fathers and Mothers living; this laſt Circumſtance was always obſerved, that nothing might occur which could refreſh Mourning and Misfortune at a Feſtival where only the Marks of Satisfaction and Pleaſure ſhould be ſeen: There was a Hymn compoſed on purpoſe for the ſecular Diverſions: That ſung in Auguſtus's Reign was made by Horace, and ſtands now at the End of his Epodes.

This laſt Day, in all probability, the Salii, or Mars's Prieſts, performed their myſtick Dance, ſet on foot by Numa, ſecond King of Rome. We ſhould not have known this Dance made a principal Part of the Solemnity had it not been for two Medals, one of Auguſtus's guſtus, and the other of Domitian, ſtruck on Purpoſe for theſe Ludi Seculares, upon which there is the Figure of one of the Salii exactly as ancient Authors uſed to repreſent them; he has a round Cap upon his Head, which runs up in two Points of a Pyramidall Figure; his Coat is party coloured; he has a Wand in his right Hand, and a Shield in his left, with Minerva's Head in the middle of it, for ſhe it ſeems was Domitian's Guardian Goddeſs. The ſame Day the Diverſions in the Circus, &c. above mentioned were repeated. The Feſtival being finiſhed the Emperor gave a Bounty to the Officers who had the Direction of the Ceremonies, and they diſtributed Part of it to the People. The Particulars of this Solemnity were entered upon the publick Records: They were afterwards kept by the Emperor Septimius Severus. * Danet, &c. Antiquit. Rom.

SECUNDUS (Publius Gabinius,) a Roman General under the Emperor Claudius. He defeated the Marſi a German Clan A. D. 41, and recover'd the loſt Eagle remaining in their Hands, which they had taken from the Romans when Varus loſt the Battel againſt them. The Text in Dion. Caſſius where this Victory is reported, is without doubt corrupted; it runs thus, Gabinius having conquered the Moors Μαυρουσίους, recover'd one of the Eagles taken from Varus. Now without doubt the Reading ought to be Μάρσους, as M. Tillemont in his Hiſtory of the Emperors has rightly obſerved, for what had Varus to do with the Moors? This Defeat of the Marſi gave Claudius the Flouriſh of a Triumph, and the Title of Imperator, the ſecond time. Gabinius Secundus likewiſe routed the Cauci, another German Nation; but the preciſe Time when this was done is not certainly known: However this Victory got him the Surname of Caucius. * Dion Caſſius. lib. 60. Suetonius, lib. 5. cap. 25. Goltzius, Theſaur. Rei Antiquar.

*SEGELMESSA. To what is obſerved upon this Article in the Supplement to Morery, may be added, that the Country affords Abundance of Dates; there is likewiſe Corn, Fruit, Mines of Iron, Lead, and Antimony. * Baudrand.

SELINGA, a Town belonging to the Muſcovite, ſituate in Great Tartary, at the Mouth of the River Selenga, where it falls into the Lake Baykal, which is one of the Springs of the Jeniſay. P. Auril tells us that Selinga ſtands upon the Road from Tobolsk to Peking; and M. Witſen in his large Map places it in the middle between theſe two Cities.

SENATE; a Body conſiſting of Perſons of the beſt Conſideration in a State are called Senators, that is to ſay, old Men, becauſe they commonly choſe Perſons advanc'd in Years, upon a Preſumption their Underſtandings were beſt furniſh'd and could ſee fartheſt: For this Reaſon the Greeks called their Senators γερουσία. Thus when the Athenians ſummoned People about publick Affairs, the Summoner gave notice to none but thoſe who were fifty Years old. The Lacedæmonians and Carthaginians admitted none into this Body under ſixty: The Authority of the Roman Senate was very conſiderable as long as the Republick laſted: The Buſineſs of Peace and War was debated there in the firſt Inſtance, and before the People had any notice of the matter; the Reſolution of this Body was thus expreſs'd, Senatus decrevit. The Power of the Senate ſunk very much under the Emperors; for Auguſtus choſe a privy Council out of the Senate, and with whom he diſpatched the moſt conſiderable Affairs of State; Tiberius took the Management out of their Hands by little and little: Nero on the contrary gave out they ſhould retain their ancient Rights and Priviledges; but this, Tacitus tells us, was only a Pretence to cover his Encroachments. All Authors agree that the Roman Senate had a great Share of Authority, but no abſolute Power; it being beyond their Privilege to put their Votes in Execution, as Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus obſerves: Thus theſe Forms of Speech are common in Livy, Senatus decrevit, Populus juſſit: In ſhort, a Tribunus Plebis, though a ſingle Perſon, could ſtop the Execution of the Votes of the whole Houſe; and when the Senate gave Orders to the Conſuls or Prætors, it was with an if they pleaſe, ſi ei ita videtur.

All the principal Magiſtrates had a Right to come to the Senate, but not to vote except they were Senators: Senators Children had likewiſe the ſame Privilege, to make them acquainted betimes with the publick Buſineſs. The Tribunes of the People at firſt uſed to ſtand at the Door to hear the Debates, and oppoſe them in caſe they bore hard upon the Liberties of the People, but afterwards they made their way into the Houſe.

The Conſuls, the Dictators, the Tribunes of the People, and the Governors of Rome in the Conſul's Abſence, had Authority to convene the Senate, which was done in this Form; Quod fauſtum fœlixque ſit, P. Cornel. Coſ. edicit ſic; Senatores, quibuſque in Senatu ſententiam dicere licet, conveniant ad 13 Cal. Jan. The Place and the Day where they were to meet were likewiſe mentioned.

The Senate commonly met three times in a Month, that is to ſay, at the Calends, the Nones, and the Ides; but under Auguſtus, Suetonius reports, they met only upon the Calends and the Ides: This cuſtomary Aſſembly was called Legitimus Senatus, at which all the Members were obliged to appear under a Penalty: But upon extraordinary Occaſions they might meet upon any Day of the Month; and when this happen'd it was called Senatus indictus or edictus. When Occaſion required they might ſit from Morning to Night: the three cuſtomary Places were the Temple of Concord between the great Square and the Capitol, the Gate call'd Porta Capena, and the Temple of Bellona, where they uſed to give Audience to Ambaſſadors before they permitted them to come into the Town. There were likewiſe other Places for the Senate to ſit in, as Curia Hoſtilia, Pompeia, and Julia, which the Augurs conſecrated before the Senate convened there, as Varro and Aulus Gellius report.

The Houſe open'd with a Sacrifice; Auguſtus ſomewhat alter'd this Cuſtom, and order'd that every Senator ſhould ſacrifice with Wine and Incenſe upon the Altar of that God, in whoſe Temple the Senate met; and that this was to be done before he took his Place, and offered at any Buſineſs, as Suetonius informs us. Afterwards all the Senate took an Oath, laying their Hands upon the Altar, and calling the Gods to witneſs that they would ſpeak their Minds ſincerely, and without flattering any Perſon; but notwithſtanding this ſolemn Proteſtation, they ſometimes ſunk to great Servility and Meanneſs, and courted their Emperors at the Expence of Juſtice and Honour. When they were ſworn the Senators took their Place, the Conſul, or he that preſided, propoſed the Heads they were to treat on, whether publick or private, concluding with theſe Words P. Conſcripti, quid fieri placet? My Lords, what do ye think it proper to go upon? The Preſident or Speaker collected their Votes beginning at the beſt diſtinguiſhed, and going on to thoſe of the loweſt and lateſt Quality. But this Order was not always obſerved: They gave their Votes either by Yea's or No's, or only by holding up their Hand, or by walking to thoſe who voted on the ſide they approved: That this was the Cuſtom is plain from a Paſſage of Flavius Vopiſcus, Poſt hæc interrogati plerique Senatores Sententias dixerunt; deinde aliis manus porrigentibus, aliis pedibus in Sententiam euntibus; pleriſq; verbo conſentientibus, conditum eſt Senatûs conſultum. When any Bill had Diverſity of matter in it, they debated each Head by itſelf: When any matter was carried by a Plurality, the Conſul declared the Reſolution of the Houſe in the Form following,

S. C. A.

Theſe three Letters ſignify, Senatus Conſulti Auctoritate, Pridie Kalend. Octobris in Æde Apollinis ſcribendo adfuerunt L. Domitius, Cn. Filius, Ænobarbus, Q. Cecilius, Qu. F. Metellus, Pius Scipio, &c. Quod Marcellus Conſul V. E. (id eſt verba fecit) de Provinciis Conſularibus D. E. R. J. C. (that is to ſay, de ea re ita cenſuerunt) uti L. Paulus, C. Marcellus Coſſ. cum Magiſtratum iniſſent, &c. de Conſularibus Provinciis ad Senatum referrent, &c. and after having declared the matter debated, and the Reſolution of the Houſe, he ſubjoins, Si quis huic Senatuſconſulto interceſſerit, Senatui placere auctoritatem perſcribi, & de ea re ad Senatum Populumque referri: After which if any Member oppoſed the Bill, his Name was put at the bottom of the Act, Huic Senatus conſulto interceſſit talis. Auctoritatem, or Auctoritates perſcribere, is to enter the Names of thoſe upon the Journal, who were for paſſing the Act, and got it enrolled.

The Conſuls at the Beginning of the Republick carried home the Minutes of what was paſſed in the Houſe; but in regard there happened to be frequent Amendments, 'twas reſolved in the Conſulſhip of S. Valerius, and M. Horatius, that the Bills paſſed in the Senate ſhould be lodged in Ceres's Temple, in the Cuſtody of the Ædiles; and afterwards the Cenſors carried them to the Temple of Liberty, and put them in Claſſes or Scritoires, called Tabularia. * Dion. Halicarnaſſ. Sueton. Livy. Vopiſcus in Vit. Aurelian. Antiquit. Græc. & Rom.

* SENATORS, Roman Magiſtrates. This Dignity at preſent is for Life, and at the Pope's Nomination, who can't beſtow it upon a Burgher of Rome: For contrary to the Cuſtom of other Cities, who chuſe the Magiſtracy out of their own Body, a Roman Senator muſt be a Stranger. However, there are three Conſervators of the People made Aſſiſtants to them, and who are commonly Gentlemen of Rome; and whoſe Office anſwers to that of Echevens or Sheriffs. Theſe Conſervators are chang'd every Month. * Du Cange Gloſſar. Latinit.

* SERAPION, Biſhop of Thmuis. For Conſtance in Morery Vol. II. read Conſtantius.

SERENEGAS, a City in the Mogul's Dominions. It ſtands upon the Ganges in the Kingdom of Siba, over againſt that of Pitan. Serenega is commonly taken for the Canagora of Ptolemy, which notwithſtanding ſome Authors will have it the ſame with Canago or Canigigu, a Town in the ſame Country. * Baudrand.

SERENITY: This Title has formerly been uſed by Kings and Biſhops: The Kings of France of the firſt and ſecond Race, when ſpeaking of themſelves, uſed ſometimes to ſay our Serenity: Adalard Biſhop of Clermont and Gauzlin, gave themſelves the ſame Title. At preſent the Pope and the College of Cardinals when they write to the Emperor, Kings, and to the Doge of Venice, they ſalute him with the Title of Sereniſſime Cæſar, or Rex, or Princeps. The Counts d'Avaux and Servien, when they wrote a circular Letter to all the Princes of Germany in 1645, gave them the Title of moſt Serene: The Emperor gives the King of England only the Title of Serenity; though this Prince ſtyles the Emperor his Imperial Majeſty, and all other European Kings are contented with this Abatement of Ceremony, except the French King: The Doge of Venice likewiſe takes the Title of Serenity; the King of Poland ſalutes the Electors of Germany in the ſame Style; but the Emperor, when he writes to the Electors and other Princes of the Empire, gives them no higher Title than Dilectis; but when he treats with them in Perſon he calls the Electors, your Electoral Serenity, and the other Princes of the Empire are mentioned with the Reſpect of Ducal Serenity. The French Plenipotentiaries at Munſter refuſed the Title of Serenity to the Elector of Brandenbourg, becauſe the Term Serenity was no French Word, and becauſe their Maſter gave that Title to no Body.

The Princes of Germany prefer the Title of Serenity to that of Highneſs. However; when the Spaniſh Ambaſſador at Venice in the Year 1603, called the Duke of Mantua his Serenity; this Duke perceiving he treated him with this Language, becauſe he thought it inferior to that of Highneſs, took check at the Salutation, and ſaluted this Ambaſſador with no higher Title than your Lordſhip. * Memoires Curieux.

* SERGIUS. The firſt of that Name. Patriarch of Conſtantinople: For the fourth general Council held in 681. in Morery Vol. II. read the ſixth general Council.

SERPENT (A,) was worſhipped by the old Pagans. They kept them in ruſh or wicker Baskets, which were conſecrated to Bacchus, Ceres, and Proſerpine. St. Epiphanius in his firſt Book of Hereſies, mentions certain Hereticks called Ophitæ, who kept a Serpent in their Temples, in a Box, worſhipped, kiſſed them and fed them with Bread. The Ægyptians kept Snakes in their Temples, particularly in thoſe belonging to Serapis and Iſis. Eſculapius the pretended God of Phyſick, was worſhipped in a large Snake, and Juſtin Martyr who had been a Heathen, reproaches the Pagans for making Serpents myſterious Repreſentations of their Gods. Clemens Alexandrinus obſerves that the Heathens at their Bacchanalia twiſted Snakes about them. * Danet.

SERRAVALLE. A Town belonging to the State of Genoa in Italy. It ſtands upon the Frontiers of the Duchy of Milan three Leagues from Tortona to the South. There is likewiſe another Town of the ſame Name within the Territories of Treviſa, about a League from Ceneda to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

* SERVASSIUS: For the Council of Sardis in Morery Vol. II. read the Council of Sardica.

SFONDRATE (Celeſtin,) a Cardinal extracted from a conſiderable Family in Millan: He was Grandſon to Count Sfondrate, whom Pope Gregory XII made Duke of Montmarcian, General of the Holy Church, and ſent him into France at the Head of a Body of Troops to ſupport the League. Celeſtin Sfondrate took the Habit of a Benedictin, profeſſed the Cannon Law in the Univerſity of Salsbourg, and was afterwards Abbot of St. Gal. Pope Innocent XII. gave him a Cardinal's Cap in December 1695; he died in September 1696, 53 Years of Age. He wrote ſeveral Tracts, viz. Diſputatio Juridica de lege in præſumptione fundata adverſus probabiliſſimum. Regale Sacerdotium Romano Pontifici aſſertum. Gallia vindicata, &c. Theſe two laſt Tracts were written to oppoſe what was decreed by the Clergy of France in their Aſſembly A. D. 1682, with Reſpect to the Regale and the Pope's Authority. He attacked thoſe very warmly who endeavoured to ſupport the Sentiments of the French Clergy: And here Maimbourg was ſtruck at amongſt the reſt. In 1688 he wrote a Tract againſt the Franchiſes within the Ambaſſador's Quarters at Rome; 'tis entituled Legatio Marchionis Lavardini, Romam, ejuſque cum Innocentio XI. Diſſidium, &c. In 1695 he printed a Diſcourſe entituled Innocentia vindicata, &c. where he pretends to prove that Thomas Aquinas has written in favour of the immaculate Conception: But his Book which made moſt Noiſe was that entituled Nodus Prædeſtinationis diſſolutus, which was publiſh'd after his Death againſt the Opinion of ſome of his Friends, Cardinals, and others. This Book no ſooner appeared in France, but it was much talk'd on, upon the ſcore of the Author's Singularities upon the Subject of Grace, original Sin, and the Condition of Children's dying unbaptized. Two French Archbiſhops and three Biſhops of the ſame Nation, joined in a Letter to the Pope againſt this Book; the Letter is dated February 23, 1697. The Pope in his Anſwer of May 6 following, wrote them Word that he would have the Book examined by Divines; but no Sentence has been pronounced upon it. * Memoires Hiſtoriq.

SFORZA (James,) known by the Name of Jacomuzio, was a Peaſant of Cotignola. Happening one Day to ſee a Company of Soldiers paſs by the Village where he lived, he took the Coulter of his Plough, and threw it upon a Tree, with this ſaying, that if it hung upon the Tree, 'twas a Sign of his having a call to be a Souldier; but in Caſe it fell down, he was then to follow the Plough ſtill. The Coulter lodg'd in the Tree, upon which Attendula, for that was his Name, liſted himſelf. He ran through all the military Stages of Diſcipline, and at laſt was a famous Italian Soldier: His firſt Commiſſion gave him only a hundred Men, but afterwards he commanded ſeven thouſand: He ſerved a great while in the Field for Joan II. Queen of Naples, whom Alphonſus of Arragon endeavoured to diſpoſſeſs. Upon the Courſe of the War, he forced King Alphonſus to raiſe the Siege before Naples, recovered a great many Towns which had revolted in the Provinces of Abruzzo and di Lavoro, and being upon the Purſuit of the Enemy, he was drowned croſſing the River Aterno, in the Year 1424. His Son Boſſio Sforza was Earl of Santa Fior, Charles another of his Sons, was an Auguſtinian Monk General of his Order, and Archbiſhop of Milan, and Francis Sforza one of his natural Sons was Duke of Milan. * Paulus Jovius. Scipio Ammirato, Hiſt. de Florence. Ughel, Italia Sacra.

* SIBYLLS, the Greek Verſes reckoned to the Sibylls are divided into eight Books; but all the learned agree that it is a ſpurious Work. It ſeems to have been written at the End of the Reign of Antoninus Pius, or at the beginning of that of Marcus Aurelius, becauſe it mentions Trajan, Adrian, Marcus Aurelius and Lucius; and and theſe two laſt as then living. Some were of Opinion that the Sibyll's Books cited by the Fathers are different from thoſe now extant, and that they were part of the true Sibylline Oracles. But all that can be collected from the old Sibylline Oracles, is that they were ſtuffed with nothing but Pagan Superſtitions, whereas the Oracles cited by the Fathers furniſh clear Predictions of our Saviour, and Goſpel Truths. Thoſe who examin the Predictions of the Sibylls cited by the Fathers, and the Collection in Verſe which now goes under the Sibylls Names, will perceive there is little Difference between them. Voſſius's Account ſeems embarraſſed; for the Sibylline Verſes brought from Greece by Octacilius Craſſus, where Voſſius pretends ſome Jewiſh Prophecies were interſperſed concerning the coming of the Meſſiah, were no leſs Pagan in the matter than the firſt Books of Sibylla Cumæa. Beſides, the Prophecies in this Collection relating to our bleſſed Saviour, are clearer than thoſe of the Jewiſh Prophets; and the Doctrine in the Sibylline Books looks more like the Compoſition of a Chriſtian than a Jew. Our Saviour is openly predicted without Ambiguity or Figure; the Reſurrection, the laſt Judgment, and Hell Fire are likewiſe expreſs'd in plain Terms: And notwithſtanding many of the Fathers quote the Sibylls Books as genuine Records, yet ſome of them have queſtioned their being authentick. Origen, to take off Celſus's Objection who called the Chriſtians Sibyllifts, replies, that there were ſeveral Chriſtians, who refuſed to make uſe of the Authority above mentioned. St. Auſtin owns the Sibylline Oracles Forgeries, and makes no Difficulty to aſſert them the counterfeit Performance of ſome Chriſtian.

As to the manner of Compoſition, the Sibylline Books now extant are writ in a very ill Style; the Author was ſhort in the Greek Language, there are Barbariſms, childiſh Etymologies, which have no Reſemblance with the old Greek Phraſeology, and which by no means anſwer the Solemnity of the Subject, as has been well obſerv'd by Valeſius in his Annotations upon Euſebius's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, by Gerard Voſſius in his Book de Poetis Græcis, and by Tanequil le Fevre in his Lives of the Greek Poets: Thoſe who are deſirous to enquire into the bottom of the matter, with reference to the Sibylls Perſons and Books, may conſult the Authors who have written purpoſely upon this Subject; 1. Onufrius Panvinius, an Auguſtinian of Verona, who wrote in Latin. 2. David Blondel, a Proteſtant of Chalons in Champagne, in French. 3. Eraſmus Schmid, a German of Miſnia, in Latin. 4. Tobias Wagner, a German, living at Tubingen, in Latin. 5. Daniel Claſen, a Lawyer, in Latin. 6. John Chriſtopher Salbach, in High Dutch. 7. John Craſſet, a Jeſuit, in French. 8. Iſaac Voſſius, a Dutchman, and Canon of Windſor, in Latin. 9. Mr. Marck, Profeſſor at Groningen, and now at Leyden, in Latin. * Du Pin, preliminary Diſſertation upon the Bible.

SIERRA, a ſmall Country of New Caſtille in Spain. It lies upon the Frontiers of the Kingdoms of Arragon and Valencia. Cuença is the principal Town in it. * Maty, Diction.

SIERRA, a ſmall Province in Peru; it lies between the Provinces of Los Charchas, Tecumam, and Chaco. There is nothing conſiderable in it except S. Cruz de la Sierra, which is a Spaniſh Colony. * Maty, Diction.

SIGENBERG, Seebgerg, a Town with a famous Abby. It ſtands within the Duchy of Berg in Weſtphalia, upon the River Sige, three Leagues from Bonne to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

SIGILLARIA, a Roman Feſtival kept after the Saturnalia, at which they offered little Figures of Gold, Silver, and other Metals, to Saturn, inſtead of Men which formerly were ſacrificed to him. Hercules ſuppreſs'd this barbarous Cuſtom by interpreting the Oracle in a favourable Senſe. * Danet.

* SIGNET (William:) For Hiſtory Charles VI. in Morery Vol. II. read Hiſtory Charles V.

* SILIUS ITALICUS (Caius,) a Latin Poet: Silius being tired with living, ſtarved himſelf to Death at 75 Years of Age. Before he began his Poem he read Virgil's Æneis, with a Deſign to imitate it, but could never reach any farther than the Verſification, and being unacquainted with the Rules of Poetry he made Polybius and Livy the Patterns for his matter: And for this Reaſon he is call'd Virgil's Ape, and the Tranſcriber of theſe two Hiſtorians. His Punick War is ſo far from being a good Poem, that take it ſtrictly by the Rules of Art, it is not ſo much as a bad one. It has neither Fable, Action, nor Narration, that is to ſay, it has neither the Nature, the Matter, nor the Form of a Poem. He does nothing more than recite Matters of Fact, though he is not without Machines which carry an Air of Poetry and Fable: But then this poetick Furniture is only ornamental, and does not enter the Subſtance of the Poem: Another Defect in his Performance is the modern Date of his Subject, that is to ſay, it is too freſh, and borders too near upon the time in which he liv'd; whereas it ſhould have ran up to the heroick Period, when Mythology looked more probable. However Silius's Performance affords a great many Paſſages of Roman Hiſtory not to be met withal elſewhere. For inſtance, what he relates concerning Xantippus Regulus and Duillius, and ſome other Particularities, relating to the firſt Punick War, which are loſt in Livy: Beſides, Silius's Diction is correct and bright, and is worth the reading, if it was only for that good Quality. * Pliny, lib. 3. Epiſt. 6. Gellius lib. 16. cap. 13. Lilius Giraldus. Voſſius. Baillet, Jugem. des Savans, ſur les Poetes Latins.

SIMEON, Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica, lived in the Beginning of the fifteenth Century, and was a Perſon of Probity and Learning. His principal Performance is a Liturgick Diſcourſe, printed in Goar. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XV.

SIMEON, ſurnamed the Fuller, was Archbiſhop of Seleucia and Cteſiphon, two Cities belonging to the King of Perſia, and about thirty Miles from each other. He liv'd in the Reign of Diocleſian, and was falſly charged with high Treaſon againſt Sapor King of Perſia. This Prince being over credulous laied heavy Taxes upon the Chriſtians, to tempt them to renounce their Religion, and make themſelves eaſy. He put all the Prieſts to Death, demoliſhed the Churches, and ſeized the Eſtates belonging to them. Afterwards he ordered Simeon to be brought to Court as a Traytor, and commanded him to worſhip his Majeſty and the Sun; but the Biſhop declared that ſuch Compliance could not be paid without groſs Idolatry. Upon this Refuſal he was put into Priſon, and afterwards executed with ninety nine other Martyrs, whom he encouraged to ſuffer for their Religion. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ.

SIMON, a very handſom Jew, and of extraordinary Strength. He was employed by Herod the Great in Buſineſs of great Importance. After the Death of this Prince he ſet a Crown upon his own Head, and had the Ceremony and Attendance of a King from moſt of the Commons and Nobility. He ſet out in his Government with robbing, Murder, and burning of Towns: He enter'd Jericho, gutted the Palace Royal, gave the Plunder to his Soldiers, and lay'd it in Aſhes: And in this manner he ſerved all the royal Seats which came in his way. He had gone farther in his Barbarities if Gratus had not hinder'd him: This Roman General cut all his Army in pieces, Simon himſelf was taken in a Défilé, and condemn'd to Death, after having done all that could be expected from a Man of Reſolution. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 17. cap. 12.

SIMON, a Jew, Son of Saul, of the Town of Scythopolis, and deſcended from a noble Family. He had a great deal of Courage and Strength: He held for the Romans, and joined the Jews of Scythopolis: He likewiſe joined the Græcians, who being more numerous than the reſt were Maſters of this Town; and thus he was an Ally againſt thoſe of his own Nation. He was extremely formidable to the Jews, ſally'd when they came near the Town, and killed a great many of them, inſomuch that the Scythopolitans were under no Apprehenſions from the Enemy: However, he was very ill rewarded by them: The Heat of his Conduct made theſe Foreigners ſuſpect him; they were afraid theſe Efforts of Bravery were no better than Stratagem, and that Simon at laſt would join the Beſiegers,, and play them a ſhrewd Turn. This Suſpicion made them tell Simon, and all the other Jews in the Town, that they had Reaſons not to lodge them any longer within the Walls, but that if they deſigned to continue firm in their Intereſt, they ſhould retire into a neighbouring Wood: Simon and the reſt of the Jews accepted this Propoſal, and to take away all Jealouſy marched out of the Town into the Wood, and lived there quietly two Days: But on the third at Night the Greeks ſally'd upon them when they ſuſpected nothing; and when they were almoſt all aſleep, murthered them all, and took their Baggage. Simon ſurpriſed with this barbarous Perfidiouſneſs, had no Power to do any thing but rail at them; and finding himſelf and his Family ready to be maſſacred by theſe falſe Loons, he reſolved to prevent them, though by an extraordinary Expedient: He takes his Father by the Hair and drives his Sword through his Lungs, and diſpatched his Mother the ſame way, who dy'd with Satisfaction: His Wife and Children came next offering their Throats, and had their Paſs into the other World. After he had thus killed all his deareſt Relations, he ſtood upon their dead Bodies, and lifting up his Arm that every one might ſee him, plunged his Sword in his Bowels, and died immediately. * Joſeph. de Bel. Judaic. lib. 2. cap. 34.

SIMON, a Jew, Son of Gioras of the Town of Geraſſa, was a very ill Man: He was the Occaſion of the entire Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, of the demoliſhing of the Temple, and the Ruin of the Jewiſh Nation. When the War broke out between the Jews and the Romans, he drew a Company together of Highwaymen, and Moſs-Troopers like himſelf; the Robberies and Ravage committed by him, made the great Men of Jeruſalem ſend a Detachment againſt him; theſe Troops forced him to retreat to Maſſada with the reſt of the Banditti. Here he continued till the Death of the High-Prieſt Ananus, after which he march'd into Judæa at the Head of an Army of twenty thouſand Men, which was follow'd by another of forty thouſand: And now he carried Fire, Sword and Deſolation along with him: He was ſo hardy as to threaten the Burghers of Jeruſalem and the Zealots with a Siege, unleſs they reſtored him his Wife and Children, who it ſeems had been ſurpriſed in an Ambuſcade. The People of Jeruſalem were ſo far infatuated as to invite him into the Town, to ſet him up againſt John de Giſcala, who had treated the Burghers very ruggedly. Simon enter'd the Town as a great Deliverer, and was received with Acclamations and Reſpect; but he quickly made them change their Note into Lamentation; for at the very firſt his Buſineſs was only to graſp at Power and ſtrengthen his Authority; to this purpoſe he made no Diſtinction betwixt Friends and Enemies, between what was holy and common, but plunder'd the Remainder of what was valuable in the Town. I ſhan't dilate upon the Skirmiſhes between him and John, who were frequently fighting for the Sovereignty. His Barbarity upon the Town's People ſhall likewiſe be paſſed over: I ſhall only obſerve that the Romans had not probably taken Jeruſalem, if Simon had not been there. 'Tis true when the Siege was formed, theſe two Tyrants reſolved to agree ſo far as to reſiſt the common Enemy. Simon with fifteen thouſand Men, commanded by ſixty Officers, poſted himſelf in the upper Town, by the great Wall, as far as the Valley Cedron, and the Hill Acra. And being a ſtrong bold Fellow, he diſtinguiſhed himſelf handſomely upon a great many Occaſions; which however had no better Iſſue than the Deſtruction of his Country. For in ſhort; Jeruſalem was taken and the Temple burnt, and Simon having ſo often refuſed honourable Conditions, offered by Titus the Roman General, could have no expectation of Favour from him; and therefore endeavoured to make his Eſcape through a Paſſage under Ground. To this purpoſe he got Maſons, and Materials, and drawing ſome of his beſt Friends together, they went to Work in a common Shore. But their Proviſions failing before they could make any thing on't, he was forced to give over. And now that the Romans might not diſcover him, he dreſſed himſelf in white with a purple Cloak over the reſt: He came to the Place where the Temple ſtood; the Roman Guards asked him his Name, he deſired he might ſpeak with Terentius Rufus, who was their Commander. This Officer coming to him, and knowing who he was by his own Diſcovery, laid him in Irons, and ſent him in that Equipage to Titus, who reſerved him for his Triumph at Rome. This Wretch appearing with the other Priſoners, as the grand Enemy at this Solemnity, was dragg'd with a Halter about his Neck, ſcourg'd and executed in the great Square where Criminals uſed to ſuffer. * Joſeph. de Bell. Judaic. lib. 7. cap. 18.

SIMON (Richard,) of Dieppe entered himſelf in the Congregation of the Oratory, where he ſtudied Divinity, and the oriental Languages. In 1671 he printed the Works of Gabriel of Philadelphia with Notes. In 1674 he publiſhed a French Tranſlation of Leo de Modena's Book, concerning the Ceremonies of the Jews, with ſome other Tracts. Soon after he tranſlated the Relation of the Jeſuit Dandini's Voyage to Mount Libanus; upon which he afterwards wrote a ſhort Hiſtory of the Belief and Cuſtoms of the Eaſtern Chriſtians. His principal Performance is his Criticiſm upon the Old and New Teſtament, together with ſeveral Diſcourſes written in Defence of that Work: To which we may add his Obſervations upon the New Teſtament. He has likewiſe publiſhed a new French Tranſlation of the New Teſtament, which was cenſured by the Cardinal de Noailles Archbiſhop of Paris; and againſt which the late M. Boſſuet Biſhop of Meaux, has writ ſeveral paſtoral Inſtructions. P. Simon likewiſe wrote ſeveral anonymous Tracts, Letters upon Criticiſm; and a Book entituled a critical Library in four Volumes in 12^mo^, which was ſuppreſs'd by an Order of Council. He died at Dieppe April 11, 1712, 76 Years of Age. He left his Books and Papers to the Library of the Cathedral of Roan. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. and XVIII.

*SIMONIDES, a Lyrick Poet, born at Ceos, an Iſland in the Ægean Sea. We have nothing but ſome Fragments of Simonides's Poems with Fulvius Urſini's Notes. Simonides wrote Odes, Tragedies, Epigrams, Elegies and other ſort of Verſes. This Poet according to Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, was very careful in his Diction, and had a particular Talent in awakening Compaſſion, and in this Circumſtance he is ſaid to exceed Pindar. He had an excellent Memory when very old. 'Tis ſaid he invented the Art of a local Memory, and that he gained the poetick Prize at Syracuſe, the firſt Year of the ſeventy eighth Olympiad, being then eighty Years of Age. Phœnix, General of the Argentines, at his taking the Town of Syracuſe demoliſhed Simonides's Tomb; upon which Callimachus takes an Occaſion to write in Verſe againſt Phœnix; where he brings in Simonides, complaining that this General did not treat him ſo well as Caſtor and Pollux had done, who preſerved him from a Houſe, which was ready to fall upon his Head, as Phædrus reports in his Fables. Simonides was Hiero, the Tyrant of Syracuſe's Favorite, and had the Reputation of a long headed Man, as well as a good Poet. * Suidas. Baillet. Jugem. des Savans ſur les Poetes Modernes.

SINIGAGLIA, Senogaglia, a Town of the Eccleſiaſtical State, ſtanding upon the Extremity of the Duchy of Urbin, between Ancona and Peſaro, ſeven Leagues from each. Sinigaglia, built by the Galli Senones, ſituate in a beautiful Plain, but where the Air is thick and unhealthy, has a Biſhop's See ſuffragan to the Archbiſhoprick of Urbin, and ſome Baſtions, to make the Walls a better Defence. * Maty, Diction.

SINUVA, Sinoë, a City of Cochinchina in Aſia. 'Tis the Capital of the Province Sinuva; and ſtands upon the Gulph of Cochinchina, near the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Tunquin. * Maty, Diction.

* SIRICIUS, a Roman and Biſhop of Rome. We have ſome of his Letters extant; that ſent to the African Biſhops, and which the beſt Criticks believe ſuppoſititious, contains nine Canons of a Synod of fourſcore Biſhops held at Rome in January A. D. 386. Siricius conven'd his Clergy, condemned Jovinian and his Abettors, and gave advice of it in a Letter to the Church of Milan. He ſent another Letter to all the orthodox Biſhops, to exhort them to obſerve the Canons of the Council of Nice, at the Election of Biſhops. There is likewiſe a Letter of this Pope's to Aniſius, Biſhop of Theſſalonica, and to the other Biſhops of Illyricum, where according to the Decree of the Council of Capua, he refers Bonoſus's Caſe to the hearing of the neighbouring Biſhops of his Province. Theſe Letters of Siricius, are the firſt genuine decretal Epiſtles belonging to any Pope. * Iſidore, de vir. illuſt. cap.

cap. 3. Anaſtaſius & Ciaconius, de vit. Pontif. Queſnel, Diſſert. in Leon. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library Cent. IV.

SISYPHUS, of Coos, was Secretary as 'tis preten ed to Teucer, and left Memoirs concerning the Trojan War, which Homer made uſe of. This Author is men tioned in John Malela's Chronicon; tranſcribed by Tzetzes; and in a chronological Manuſcript cited by Allatius. * Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

SITZISTAN, Sigiſtan, Siſtan; one of the moſt eaſtern Provinces of Perſia. 'Tis bounded on the North by the Provinces Sableſtan, and Choraſan; on the Weſt by the Province Kerman; on the South by the Territories of Makeran and Send, and on the Eaſt by the Mogul's Dominions. Sitziſtan is the Capital. This Province is the ſame Country anciently called Drangiana. * Baudrand.

SIUCHEU. There are two Cities of this Name in China. One of them in the Province of Nanking, upon the River Kiang; and having Juriſdiction upon three other great Towns. The other ſtands in the Province Suchuen, and has nine Cities within it's Dependency. This Siuchen is a great trading Town, and is ſituate at the Confluence of the River Kiand and Mahu. * Maty, Diction.

SIWAS (the Beglerbeglie of,) is one of the general or large Governments of Natolia in Aſia. It lies between the Beglerbeglies of Natolia Proper, of Caramania, of Maraſch, of Erzerun, of Trebiſonde, and the Black Sea. It comprehends ſix Sangiacats or Sangiacs Juriſdiction; the Principal Towns of this Beglerbeglie are Sauſtia, Tacat, Amaſia, Simiſa, and Siwas the Capital: This laſt is a conſiderable Town, and ſtands to the Weſt of Sauſtia, from which 'tis diſtant about three and twenty Leagues. The Government or Beglerbeglie of Siwas, takes in a great Part of the modern Amaſia, and the Old Cappadocia. * Baudrand.

SIXTUS DE HEMMINGA, called ſometimes Hemmena, an Author of the ſixteenth Century, born in Weſt Freezland, in the Year 1533. His Father Hector de Hemminga was extracted from an ancient Gentleman's Family, and made a Figure in his Country. Sixtus who was the youngeſt of four Brothers, ſtudied Mathematicks at Louvain; he was quickly ſenſible of the Vanity and falſe Bottom of judicial Aſtrology, and wrote a Book to confute it from Experience and the Reaſon of the thing. He attacked the moſt eminent Aſtrologers of his time, Leowicks, Cardan, and Gauric, and diſproved their Predictions in ſeveral Inſtances: For the purpoſe, he proved theſe Men miſtaken in calculating the Nativities of Pope Paul III. of the Emperor Charles V. of the French Kings Henry II. Francis II. and Charles IX. of the Kings of England Henry VIII. Edward VI. the Queens Mary and Elizabeth, and many other Perſons of Quality. This Book was printed at Antwerp by Plantin, in 1583. three Years before the Authors Death. * Suffridus Petri. Konig. Biblioth. Vetus & Nova.

* SODOM, this City did not ſtand in the Country which afterwards belonged to the Tribe of Dan, as 'tis ſaid in Momery Vol. II. the Place where Sodom ſtood lies on the eaſtern Side of Palæſtine, and bordered on the Tribe of Judah.

*SOISSONS (the Academy of.) The Academy of Soiſſons was ſettled under the Protection of the Cardinal d'Eſtrées, by the King's Letters Patents, dated at the Camp before Dolle June 1674, and regiſtred in the Parliament June 27. 1675. Before this Charter, as far backward as the Year 1650, the firſt Gentlemen who formed this Society, uſed to meet once a Week to report what they had been ſtudying, to mention the Difficulties they had met with, and correct what they had written by joynt Conſent. They were encouraged to theſe Exerciſes by ſeveral of the French Academy, who had an epiſtolary Correſpondence with them, to put them in Mind of forming an academical Body.

The Reputation theſe Meetings gained, made the Marſhal and Duke d'Eſtres, Governor of the Province come to them: And here this Nobleman was ſo well pleaſed, that in 1657 he ſolicited the King to grant them his Letters Patents. His French Majeſty agreed to the requeſt, but it was a great while before it was executed. At laſt the Deſign was made to bear, by the Intereſt of the Cardinal d'Eſtres, and by the regard the French Academy had for the Members at Soiſſon. Thoſe in the French Academy, who moſt promoted this Settlement, were the Gentlemen following, Patru, Pelliſſon, the Abbot Tallemant, Prior of St. Abbin, and Perrault. The late Monſieur Colbert likewiſe took the Pains to get the Patent drawn up, and ſent it to Soiſſons with a very obliging Letter.

The French Academy of Paris did the Members of Soiſſon the Honour to admit them into their publick and private Meetings, asked their Advice upon Queſtions debated, as if they had been part of their own Body. The academick Gentlemen of Soiſſons returned the Civility, with great Acknowledgement and Reſpect, and requeſted thoſe of Paris, when they came to Soiſſons, to preſide in their Congregations.

The Academy of Soiſſons, pays a Regard to the French Academy, in their Medal or Motto: It is a young Eagle, ſoaring to the Sun after an old one, with this Legend, Maternis auſibus audax. This Society has always a Protector from the French Academy, and ſends every Year ſome Performance done by their Body. They have almoſt the ſame Statutes and Cuſtoms with the French Academy: The ſtated Number is twenty. * M. Dehericourt, Hiſtoria Academiæ Sueſſ.

SOLEISEIL (James of,) a Gentleman of the Province of Foreſt Son of Matthew de Soleiſeil, an Officer in the Scotch Gendarmes, was born in the Year 1617. After he had finiſhed his Studies at Lyons under the Jeſuits, he perſued his Fancy for riding the great Horſe, and was a Maſter in that Exerciſe. He wrote a Book, entituled, le Parfaite Marechal, or the compleat Farrier; the deſign of the Book is, to inform the Reader of all the Diſeaſes incident to Horſes, together with the Remedies, and Methods for Cure. He wrote another little Diſcourſe called, le Marechal méthodique, and a Dictionary containing all the Terms in Riding or Horſemanſhip. He likewiſe enlarged and perfected the Duke de Neufcaſtel's Book for the Manége; he left the old Method in managing Horſes, and made uſe of the Duke de Neufcaſtel's, finding it a ſhorter and better Method; for by this Way, all ſorts of Horſes may be brought to the Manége, whereas a great many fine Horſes w'ont ſubmit to the old Method. M. Soleiſeil died ſuddenly in his Academy, January 1680, 63 Years of Age. He had a comprehenſive Genius for Arts and Sciences; underſtood Muſick, and painted handſomely; and had likewiſe the Character of a Man of good Senſe, Probity and Courage. * Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France. Tom. II.

SOLFARINO, a Town in Lombardy, within the Duchy of Mantua, near the Precincts of Breſſe and Verona. Solfarino is a ſmall Principality, and belongs to a Prince of the Houſe of Gonzagua. * Maty, Diction.

SOLFATERRA, the Mount of Allom, in Latin Sulphurius Mons, anciently called Forum Vulcani, Campi Phlegræi. 'Tis a Mountain in the Kingdom of Naples, within the Province of Terra di Lavoro, half a League from Puteoli towards Naples. 'Tis ſurrounded with other Mountains, which come about it like an Amphitheatre. There is a Ditch in it, five hundred Foot long, and a thouſand broad, from whence hot Exhalations are perpetually ſtreaming which are Smoak in the Day time, and Flame in the Night. This Mountain brings a conſiderable Revenue to the Crown, upon the Score of the great Quantity of Sulphur and Alom fetched from thence. All the neighbouring Fields are ſo full of Sulphur, that when the heat of the Sun makes the leaſt Crack in the Ground, the Smoak breaks out. Near theſe Mines of Brimſtone there is a ſmall Lake, the Water of which is black, thick and boiling. * Maty, Diction.

* SOLI, for Dionyſius Africanus in Morery Vol. II. read Diogenes Laërtius.

SOLOCHO (the Iſlands of,) are three ſmall Iſlands ſurrounded with noted Rocks and Quickſands, and were formerly called the great Syrtis, and now go by the Name of the Shallows or Flats of Barbary: They lie in the Gulph Sidra, formerly called the Gulph of Solocho; their old Names are Gæa, Pontia, Mizynos. * Baudrand.

SOLOWKI, an Iſland in the White Sea, between the Province of Corella, and the River Dwina; 'tis eight Miles from the Continent, belongs to the Czar of Muſcovy, and is remarkable for a famous Monaſtery, where Women are forbidden to come under great Penalties. It ſtands three hundred Poliſh Leagues from Moſcow, lies in the ſixty fifth Degree of northern Latitude, and affords great Quantities of Salt. * Guagninus.

SOMMA (Monte di.) To what is ſaid in Morery Vol. II. under the Article Veſuvius, may be ſubjoin'd as follows. In the Year 1685, this Mountain was delivered of a new one, and diſcharged ſo much Flame, that in the Night time it enlighten'd like a Moon twenty Miles round, June 5, 1688, it produc'd an Earthquake, which threw down a great many Houſes at Naples, damaged a great many more, and killed forty People. The Town of Beneventum was laid in Rubbiſh, a thouſand five hundred ſixty ſeven People cruſhed to Death, beſides eight hundred others killed in the neighbouring Villages. The City Caretto was entirely demoliſhed, and four thouſand People loſt in it; at Mirabella five hundred were deſtroyed; at St. Lupo a thouſand; at great St. Lawrence three hundred; at Pietra Roya four hundred, and every Mortal in the Towns of Civitella, little St. Lawrence, and Guardia S. Frimondi. In 1686 this Mountain belched Flame from the 9th of September to the 1ſt of January. In the Year 1694 it ſhot melted Minerals all a-fire, which ſtretched three Miles in length, and throwing ponderous and blazing Pieces of Earth as far as Beneventum, diſtant thirty Miles. 'Tis reported for certain that ſome inquiſitive People, not apprehenſive of Pliny the Elder's Fate, who was ſmother'd in his Curioſity, have found an Expedient of getting to the top of this Mountain; and have then been entertained with the Sight of a Hole about two Miles in Circuit, and as much in Depth; and at the bottom of this Abyſs, there was another leſſer, from which ſo much Smoak and Brimſtone exhaled, that they could not diſcover the bottom. There is another Mountain di Somma, of a great Height within the Duchy Spoleto, between the Towns Spoleto and Terni. * Miſſon, Voyage d'Italie. Maty, Diction. Memoires du tems.

SOMMERSET (Elizabeth,) Ducheſs of Powis, was Siſter to the Duke of Beaufort, and Daughter to Edward Sommerſet, Marquiſs of Worſter, deſcended from John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter, Son of Edward III. King of England. She was educated at her Grandfather the Marquiſs of Worſter's Houſe, who being a very loyal Perſon, and holding out his Caſtle againſt the Parliamentarians, was a Priſoner of State, and dy'd in Confinement in the Year 1646. Upon his Death this Granddaughter was carry'd to Nivelle, and after ſome time was marry'd to William Herbert Duke of Powis, of the noble Family of the Herberts Earls of Pembroke. This Lady about the time of her Marriage ſold her Necklace of Pearl to aſſiſt her Father, then under Sequeſtration, and kept Priſoner by the Parliamentarians. She was a Lady of great Abilities and Courage: One Dangerfield informed againſt her in ſeveral Articles. She was ſummoned before the privy Council upon all Saints Day 1678, without having the leaſt Notice for what Reaſon ſhe was to appear; however; ſhe baffled her Informers ſo much to the Satisfaction of the Board, that ſhe was then diſcharged. She was five Years Priſoner with her Husband in the Tower of London. Afterwards ſhe travelled into France and ſettled at Bourges incognito: When King James II. withdrew into France he made her Governante to his Son the Prince of Wales. She died at S. Germain en Laye, March 21. 1691. This Article is tranſlated in the Terms of the Dutch Edition, licenſed by the States of Holland and Weſt Freezland, and therefore 'tis ſuppoſed will paſs without Exception. * Memoires du Tems.

SONGO, a Country in the Lower Æthiopia. It lies along the Sea of Congo, between the Kingdom of Loango, the Country of Sondo, and that of Bamba, from whence 'tis parted by the Zaire. The Songo was formerly a Province of the Kingdom of Congo; but ſome modern Accounts aſſure us, that the Governor of that Country is now independent. * Maty, Diction.

SONNEBERG, Sonnenberg. It is a Caſtle in Tirol, ſituate upon the River Ill, five Leagues above it's falling into the Rhine. This Caſtle is the Capital of a Country of the ſame Name, and next to that of Tirol and ſtands near the Rhine, over againſt the Canton of Appenzel in Switzerland. It belongs to the Earl of Werdenberg; but Sigiſmond, Archduke of Auſtria, bought it for thirty thouſand Florins in the Year 1463. * Maty, Diction.

* SOPHOCLES, an Athenian Tragick Poet. He refined upon Æſchylus, and carried the Improvements of the Stage to the higheſt Pitch, which made Boileau remark that Æſchylus had laid a Foundation for the Stage, but that Sophocles had ſet on the Superſtructure, and furniſhed the greateſt Part of the Ornament.

Sophocle enfin donnant l'effort à ſon genie,
Accrut encore le pomp, augmenta l'harmonie
Intereſſa le chœur dans toute l'action.
Des vers trop raboteux polit l'expreſſion;
Lui donna chez les Grecs cette hauteur divine,
Ou jamais n'atteignit la foibleſſe Latine.

Tully calls Sophocles a divine Poet, and Virgil mentions him with much the ſame Regard. This Commendation without doubt is given him, upon the Score of his Touching the Paſſions with ſo much Nature and Force, without letting any Perſon do any thing foreign and unſuitable to their Character. He ſuffers no Body to run out into unneceſſary Diſcourſes. He had a peculiar Talent in raiſing Compaſſion, and paints with great Life and Heightenings: His Style is correct, as well as pompous and magnificent; he has more Sublime in him than Euripides. Sophocles deſcribes Men as they ought to be, whereas Euripides repreſents them as they are: For this Reaſon Ariſtotle prefers Sophocles to Euripides, becauſe, as this Philoſopher obſerves, 'tis the Buſineſs of an exact Poet to make People exert in Virtue, and act up to the Stretch of Poſſibility, and this is what Sophocles has done; whereas thoſe who repreſent no farther than common Life, are more Hiſtorians than Poets, which probably may be apply'd to Euripides. The Management of the Chorus in Sophocles exceeds that in Euripides; his Style has the Air and Reſolution of a military Man, as Sophocles himſelf was; for he had been a Lieutenant-General for the Republick of Athens. He makes his Men of Figure ſpeak like Quality and Perſons of Breeding, whereas the Converſation in Euripides's Plays, ſmells ſomewhat of the College. He is much more exact in his Contrivance than Æſchylus, the Fictions of the latter being often ſwell'd to Monſtrouſneſs and Incredibility; whereas Sophocles always takes care to keep within the Bounds of what is probable: The Diſpoſition of his Matter is likewiſe more natural and unembarraſs'd than that of Æſchylus or of Euripides himſelf; notwithſtanding Euripides appeared ſomewhat after him. In fine, Sophocles is Maſter of a great deal of Nature and good Senſe, is judicious in the Choice of his Fables, warm and noble in his Expreſſion; and thus he commands the Paſſions of the Reader or Audience much better than Euripides, though the Tragedies of this latter are, it may be, fuller of Action; more ſententious, and entertain with more extraordinary Incidents. * Ariſtot. Poetic. cap. 15. Virgil. Eclog. 8. Longinus, de Sublimit. Dionyſ. Halicarnaſ. in Opuſc. Crit. Quintilian. Inſtitut. lib. 10. cap. 1. Boileau, Art. Poetique, Chant. 3, &c.

* SOPHIA: The Council of Sardica is reported in Morery Vol. II. to have been one of the greateſt general Councils that ever was held, but this is a Miſtake; for the Council of Chalcedon, to mention no other was much more numerous. Secondly, this Council properly ſpeaking was no General one. Farther, whereas this Council is ſaid to be held in 307, it ſhould have been ſaid 347. Laſtly, whereas it is ſaid the Council of Nice was condemned by the Sardican Council, that is another Miſtake, as the Reader may likewiſe ſee under the Article Sardica in Morery Vol. II.

SOTOVENTO, or the Iſland of Sotovento, i. e the Leeward Iſlands. Theſe Iſlands are thoſe of the Antillæ, which lie along the Coaſt of the Continent in Southern America. The chief of them lie in the following Situation from Eaſt to Weſt; la Marguerita, la Worſuga, l'Urchilla, la Rocca, l'Iſle d'elves, Benayre, Curacao, and Oruba. The Spaniards call them the Iſlands of Sotovento, becauſe they leave them on the Larbord, to the Leeward, when they ſail towards Mexico. * Maty, Diction. Robbe, Geographie.

SOTWEL (Nathaniel,) was living in the Year 1685. He is one of the three Authors who had a Share in the Bibliotheca Scriptorum Societatis Jesu. Peter de Ribadeneira, a Spaniſh Jeſuit, who dy'd in the Year 1611, was the firſt who began this Work. Philip Alegambe, a Jeſuit of Antwerp, who dy'd in 1651, carry'd on Ribadeneira's Deſign to his own Time, and Sotwel has brought it down to ours: Now theſe three not being diſtant from the Times of thoſe Authors, whoſe Writings and Lives they relate, were much leſs liable to Miſtake. Thus Ribadeneira who liv'd in the Beginning of the Jeſuits Society, or at leaſt before the Death of their firſt Writers; Alegambe who flouriſh'd upon the farther Progreſs, and Sotwel who has brought the Hiſtory down to our own Times, have mentioned only Authors cotemporary with themſelves, and with whom they might be very well acquainted, conſidering the cloſe Correſpondence all the Houſes of this Society had with themſelves. They have been very exact not to inſert any Perſon in their Collection, excepting thoſe who were really Jeſuits: They have been ſo ſcrupulous upon this Head, that when any of their Writers happened to quit their Society, they either don't mention them at all, as appears from the Inſtances of Papyrius Maſſonus, Gaſpar Scioppius, Antonius de Dominis, Chriſtian Francken, &c. or at leaſt take no farther notice of them than while they continued with them, and give an Account of none of their Works, excepting thoſe written when they were Members of their Society; as appears from their managing the Life of Francis Macedo, a Portugueſe, who went off from the Jeſuits Order, and turned Carthuſian; of Claude Dauſquey, a Flanderkin, who left the Society to qualify himſelf for a Canon's Preferment at Tournay; and to theſe we may add a great many more Inſtances in France and other Countries. Farther; theſe three Biographers are very exact with reſpect to Chronology: They all along take preciſe notice of the Time when, and the Place where their Authors were born; of the Age when they were profeſſed Jeſuits; of their Employments, and of the moſt conſiderable Actions of their Lives, according to the reſpects of time. Notwithſtanding this Bibliotheca or hiſtorical Collection is well enough written; though it ſtands clear of Affectation and ſuperfluous Ornament, it has undergone the common Fate of Cenſure, no leſs than the Bibliotheques of other religious Orders. A great many Criticks are of Opinion, there runs ſomething of a Vein of Partiality through the whole Performance; and that theſe three Authors diſcover themſelves prepoſſeſſed in Favour of their Society, and that this Byaſs makes 'em draw their Writers always in their beſt Likeneſs, that all this large Volume is ſtuffed with nothing but Panegyrick, and that amongſt ſuch a Multitude of Authors and Books, neither Alegambe nor Sotwel have found ſo much as one bad one; unleſs poſſibly we may except thoſe who have been put into the Inquiſition or Index expurgatorius. Others obſerve that there is ſcarcely a ſingle Writer in all the Bibliotheca, who has not the Character of a Saint beſtow'd upon him: Beſides, Alegambe and Sotwel have ſometimes been miſled by counterfeit Records; upon the Credit of theſe Memoirs, they have branded ſeveral People with Hereſy, who were ſtanch Roman Catholicks. To conclude, Sotwel's Edition is not ſo beautiful and correct as that of Alegambe, printed at Antwerp A. D. 1643. * Nicol. Anton. Biblioth. Hiſp. Alegamb. Biblioth. Societ. Jeſu. Nath. Sotw. Præf. ad Edit. Rom. Biblioth. Soc. Baillet, Jugem. des Sav. ſur les Crit. Hiſt.

SOUMENAT, a Town of India, ſituate in the hundred and ſixth Degree of Longitude, and the ſeventeenth of northern Latitude. This Situation anſwers exactly to the City Viſapour, Capital of the Kingdom of Decan; for the hundred and ſixth Degree of Naſſireddin is the hundred and ſixteenth with modern Geographers. The City Soumenat gives Name to a great Province, conquer'd in the Year 410 of the Hegira by Mahmoud Son of Sebekreghin, firſt Sultan of the Gaznevides, and becauſe this Country was ſtocked with Curioſities, this Prince liv'd a whole Year there, and 'tis ſaid he had a Deſign to make it the Seat of his Empire, which was then the City Cazneu. While Mahmoud dwelt in this Town the Burghers were willing to ſhew him what was moſt remarkable; to this purpoſe they carry'd him to an Indian Temple, in the middle of which they ſhewed him an Idol hanging in the Air: Mahmoud wondering at the Sight, ſome of the moſt knowing Perſons of his Attendance told him this idolatrous Figure was made of Iron, and that the Walls of the Temple being faced with Loadſtone, 'twas very natural to conceive that the Statue being equally attracted on all Sides by the magnetick Virtue of the Walls, ſhould remain thus ſuſpended in the Air. Upon this Mahmoud having ordered the Temple ſhould be demoliſhed, one of the Sides was no ſooner beaten down, but the Idol fell. There was a very rich Gold Mine in the Province of Soumenat: Here this Sultan underſtood that the deep colour'd Rubies, commonly called Carbuncles, of which he was in queſt, were not to be found upon the Indian Continent, but in the Iſland Serandib, call'd Zeilan by the Europeans. The Dutch Supplementer takes notice that the Story of the Idols hanging in the Air does not agree with the Properties of the Loadſtone. * Tavernier's Travails. D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

SOUS ALASCA, a City in Mauritania; the Soil about it is rich, and produces all ſort of good Fruit, and particularly the largeſt ſort of Sugar Canes; 'tis ſaid the Sugar is ſo fine, that one Pound of it is ſufficient to make ten of Syrrup. This Town and the Neighbourhood is famous for making Turky Carpets. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

* SPANHEIM (Ezekiel.) This Gentleman, beſides his celebrated Book de Præſtantia & Uſu Numiſmatum antiquorum, has written Letters to explain ſeveral curious Medals, to Lawrence Beger, privy Counſellor and Antiquary to the King of Pruſſia; another Diſſertation entiuled de Veſta &c. inſerted in the fifth Tome of Grævius's Roman Antiquities; a Volume of Obſervations in Hymnos Callimachi, to illuſtrate the Theology and Mythology of the Pagans: There is likewiſe prefixed to one of the Tomes of the Roman Antiquities, two Latin Exercitations for explaining the famous nineteenth Law of Ulpian, de Statu Hominum, quâ ex Conſtitutione Imperatoris Antonini, qui ſunt in Orbe Romano, Cives Romani ſunt effecti. All his Works were reprinted at London in Folio: This Spanheim dy'd at London November 1710, 82 Years of Age. * Memoires du tems.

SPERLONGA, a Town within the Kingdom of Naples; it ſtands upon the Edge of Terra di Lavoro, between Gaeta and Terracina, three Leagues from each. This Town was built upon the Ruins of the old Amyclæ. * Baudrand.

SPINOSA (John,) a Spaniard, lived in the ſixteenth Century. Don Pedro de Gonzales de Mendoza being made Captain-General in Sicily by the Emperor Charles V. John Spinoſa entered into his Service, and was made his Secretary for writing Letters in Cypher, and State Affairs. When Barbaroſſa's Fleet cruiſed in the Fare of Meſſina, Spinoſa managed with that Dexterity as to croſs this Streight, and convey the Emperor's Orders, and Money for the Soldiers Pay into Sicily. Some time after he ſuppreſſed the Mutiny of the Troops in the Kingdom of Naples. To paſs over the reſt of his Life, which was creditable enough, I ſhall only mention his writing two Books, one in Commendation of Women, entituled Gynæcepænos, printed at Milan A. D. 1580, and another with the Title of Micracanthos, where he inſerts the Actions and remarkable Sentences of great Men. * Serranus's Preface upon Gynæcepænos. Nicholas Antonio. Biblioth. Hiſpan. Bayle, Diction. Crit.

SPIZELIUS, a Lutheran Author living in the latter End of the ſeventeenth Century, publiſhed two pretty large Books, one entituled, Fœlix Literatus, and the other Infœlix Literatus. In the firſt he pretends to ſhew the Failings of Men of Learning, and the Misfortunes which happen to them. 1. By their Irreligion and Scepticiſm. 2. By their Pride. 3. By their Vanity and exceſſive Self-Love. 4. By their Envy and uncreditable Jealouſies. 5. By their Quarrels and Diſputes. 6. By playing their Satyr with Indiſcretion and Injuſtice. 7. By their Ambition and immoderate Deſire of Fame. 8. By their Avarice; and laſtly by their pernicious Curioſities. In his ſecond Book he pretends to ſhew in what inextricable Misfortunes Men of Learning involve themſelves when they ſtudy upon undue Motives, more for themſelves than for God and their Neighbours. * Baillet, Jugem. des Savans ſur les Critiq. Hiſt.

SPURIUS (Mælius,) a Roman Gentleman, who graſped at the Sovereignty. To make his way to royal Dignity, he made uſe of the Opportunity of a ſevere Famine, which diſtreſſed the Romans, in the Conſulſhip of Proculus Gyganius Marcerinus, and Lucius Menenius Lanatus; the Scarcity was ſo preſſing that a great many People threw themſelves into the Tyber out of mere deſpair. Now Spurius, in hopes to make himſelf a King, diſtributed great Quantities of Corn among the People. To put a Stop to his Ambition, the Senate was forced to make Quintus Cincinnatus Dictator, who immediately diſpatched Servilius Hala to bring him before him: But this General perceiving that inſtead of obeying the Summons, he endeavoured to raiſe a Mutiny, run him through, and was not blamed for it by the Senate. * Valerius Maximus.

STADINGS, a Sect of ſeditious People in Germany, who firſt appeared A. D. 1230, and committed a great deal of Ravage, eſpecially againſt the Eccleſiaſticks: 'Tis ſaid they abandoned themſelves to all Sorts of Injuſtice and Licentiouſneſs. They ſpread through the Biſhoprick of Bremen, and came up to the Skirts of Eaſt Freezland and Germany, and as they gathered upon their March, they murthered the Monks and Eccleſiaſticks, plundered the Churches, and did a World of Miſchief. Pope Gregory IX. drew a Cruſade upon them; the Archbiſhop of Bremen, the Duke of Brabant, the Earl of Holland attacked and defeated them in the Year 1234. Six thouſand were killed upon the Spot, and moſt of the reſt were deſtroyed ſome one Way and ſome another: Inſomuch that the ſmall Remainder were converted and returned to their Duty the next Year. * Gothofredus Monachus, in Gloſſar. Du Cang. Albertus Statenſis, ad annum 1234.

STANISLAUS I. King of Poland, was elected at Warſaw, by the principal Nobility of Poland, met under the Protection of Charles XII. King of Sweden: Staniſlaus was choſen in the Room of King Auguſtus Elector of Saxony, who was ſet aſide for breaking the Pacta Conventa: This Election was made July 12. 1704. This Staniſlaus called Leczinski, was Palatine of Poſnania, and General of Great Poland; and then 27 Years of Age. He had been Ambaſſador Extraordinary at Conſtantinople, in the Year 1699. His Father had been High Treaſurer of Poland; and his Mother, ſtill living, was Daughter to the great General Jablonowiski. Staniſlaus's Queen Catherine is one of the richeſt Heireſſes of the Kingdom, and of the Family of Opolinski: They were both crowned at Warſaw October 4. 1705, the King of Sweden being preſent. Theſe Princes Misfortunes obliged them to retire into Turky, where they ſtayed till 1714, and then came into the Duchy of Deux-Ponts. * See Article Charles XII. King of Sweden.

* STARGAID: For Dukes of Cumberland in Morery Vol. II. read Dukes of Curland.

STAROSTY. So ſome Eſtates, Precincts and Juriſdictions in Poland are called, which the Kings of Poland beſtow at Pleaſure provided it is to the Natives. Formerly they made part of the Demeſnes of the Crown; one of theſe Princes, who the Chevalier de Beaujeu believes was Sigiſmond Auguſtus, made a voluntary Grant of theſe Eſtates to ſome Gentlemen, upon Condition they ſhould aſſiſt him, and bear part of the Expence of his military Expeditions. The King only reſerved for himſelf and his Succeſſours, the right of nominating to theſe Baronies, and beſtowing them upon whom he pleaſes; and that during a Vacancy, the Revenue ſhould belong to the publick Exchequer, till the nomination of a new Staroſty. Beſides this, the Staroſties are charged with a Tax or Rent called Quarta, becauſe it makes the fourth Part of the annual Revenue. This Tax or Rent-Charge together with what is levy'd upon Church Eſtates, furniſhes the Arſenals, provides all the Artillery in the Kingdom, and ſubſiſts the Poliſh Horſe, or Gendarmery. This Tax reſembles the Tenths levy'd upon Benefices in France, and the Reſponſions aſſeſſed at Malta, upon the Commanderies of the Knights of that Order. There are two Sorts of Staroſties, one without, and the other with Juriſdiction; the latter has a Court of Juſtice called Grode, here Cauſes are tryed and entered upon the Roll. The Staroſties have Power of trying People for their Lives, though the Proprietors are no more than plain Gentlemen: And for this Reaſon 'tis ſuppoſed that neither Women, nor young Men are capable of holding theſe Staroſties. * Memoires de Chevalier de Beaujeu.

STAROVOLISKI (Simon,) has publiſhed a Century of celebrated Poliſh Writers, and of the famous Orators of Sarmatia; i. e. of the ſame, and neighbouring Country. The firſt part was printed in the Years 1625 and 1627 at Frankfort, Venice, and elſewhere; and the other was printed at Florence A. D. 1628. * Baillet. Jugem. des Sav. ſur les Critiq. Hiſtoriques.

* STERLING, a Town and Country in Scotland &c. Whereas 'tis ſaid in Morery Vol. II. that the pureſt Engliſh Money was firſt coined here, and from thence called Sterling, it is more likely that it took that Name from the Eaſterlings, or Merchants of Eaſt Germany, who were invited into England by King John to refine their Coin.

STEWECHIUS (Godeſchalcus,) of Huſden publiſhed Notes upon Vegetius, Frontinus, Apulcius, Arnobius, and a ſerviceable Tract upon the Particles of the Latin Tongue. Scioppius reports him a Perſon of Probity and Parts, and that he deſerves the Character of a good Critick. His Performance upon Vegetins and Frontinus, is extraordinary. * G. Sciop. de Art. Crit. Poſter. Scaligeran.

STEYAERT (Martin,) made ſo great a Progreſs in the Study of Divinity, that he had the Degree of Doctor in that Faculty given him at Louvain at 28 Years of Age, which was two Years ſooner than the Allowance of the Statutes of that Univerſity. He was charged with quitting the Doctrine of St. Auſtin; that is of the Janſeniſtes, and going over to the Moliniſtes. In 1675 the Faculty of Divinity of Louvain deputed Steyaert to Rome, in Conjunction with P. Lupus, & Van Vianem; and here Steyaert contributed conſiderably in procuring Pope Innocent XI. his Cenſure of the ſixty five Propoſitions of looſe Caſuiſtry. He followed his Study with great Application, and had a prodigious Memory. Beſides Latin, Greek and Hebrew, which he underſtood very well, and Flemiſh which was his Mother Tongue; beſides theſe he ſpoke French, Spaniſh, Italian, High Dutch and Engliſh. He was very well read in ſacred and prophane Hiſtory, in old and new Geography. But the Fathers and other Divines were his principal Buſineſs. He remembered what he had read with that Exactneſs and Punctuality, that towards the End of his Life, he parted with moſt of his Books as unneceſſary Furniture, his Memory being a ſufficient Library. In 1685, after he had ſigned the Formulary of Alexander VIII. he had Preferment in Abundance: He printed ſeveral moral and controverſial Tracts. The Journaliſts of Trevoux who have furniſhed moſt part of this Article, deſcribe him a great Enemy to Novelty, and very zealous for the Thomiſtes Doctrine. He died in 1701. 54 Years of Age.

STRYKIUS (Samuel,) a celebrated German Lawyer, flouriſhing toward the End of the ſeventeenth, and the beginning of the eighteenth Century. He was born in the Marquiſate of Brandenbourg. Frederick William Elector of Brandenbourg made him Law Profeſſor, to read upon the Inſtitutes, Novels, Codes and Pandects; and afterwards he was invited to Court, made Preſident of the Court of Juſtice there, and privy Counſellour. When the King of Pruſſia founded the Univerſity at Hall in 1693, he gave Strykius the Direction of that Society. He died Auguſt 1710: His Works are Commentationes de jure Cenſuum Succeſſionibus ab Inteſtato, Cautelis circa Contractus, ultimas voluntates & juramenta adhibendis, de Conſenſu ſponſalitio, &c. uſu Pandectarum moderno. Notæ ad B. Brunemanni jus Eccleſiaſticum, & Compendium Schuzianum, &c. * Acta Lypſiaca 1711. pag. 130.

SUDA, a good Fort, Parcel of the Iſland of Candia. It belongs to the Venetians, and ſtands in a ſmall Iſland in the Gulph of Suda, about a Mile from the Terra Firma, and four Leagues from Canea to the Eaſt. By the Way the Haven of Suda is one of the beſt in the Mediterranean. * Baudrand.

SUEUR (Euſtache le,) a celebrated French Painter, and one of the Royal Academy for Painting and Sculpture. He was one of Voicet's Eleves, who though a very ry conſiderable Maſter, was exceeded by his Scholar. Le Sueur's firſt Piece was the Life of St. Bruno, painted in the Cloiſter of the Carthuſians of Paris. Another beautiful Piece of Painting is to be ſeen in Notre Dame Church at Paris. Here St. Paul is repreſented preaching at Epheſus, and converting the Heathens, who bring their ill Books to be burnt. He drew a Picture of our Saviour, expiring upon the Croſs, for the Capucins de la Ruë St. Honoré; another of St. Mary Magdalene, and a third of St. Laurences's Martyrdom; theſe are done for the Church of St. Germain de l'Auxerrois; to which we may add ſome Pieces of the Hiſtory of S. Martin, for the Monks of Marmoutier. Towards the latter End of his Life he painted two Pictures of the Hiſtory of S. Gervaſius, and S. Protaſius, in order to have them copied; which they have been, in the Hangings of S. Gervaſius's Church at Paris. Theſe Pictures are ſurpriſingly beautiful: Le Sueur is particularly remarkable for having nothing ſtiff and affected in his Manner. He painted ſometimes according to the Ideas drawn in his own Mind, which were always beautiful and exact, and repreſented things, as many different Ways, as the different Subject required, being not tied down to any ſet Manner of Diſpoſition, Groupping, Drapery, or Colouring, but could perform through all theſe Parts of Painting, as well one Way as another; which is a certain Sign of the ſtrength and extent of his Genius. Thus when he worked upon his invention, he painted from his own Idea, and when he painted from thoſe things he ſaw without him, he worked upon Nature's Model. His nice Taſte made him capable of improving upon the Study of antique Figures and Baſs-Reliefs; and to copy that into his Cloth, which was great, noble, and Majeſtick, without imitating what was dry and hard; and thus from modern Paintings he could borrow what was natural, ſoft, and gracious, without falling into what was faint, and feeble. He died May, in the Year 1665, only 38 Years of Age. * Perrault, les hommes illuſtres qui ont paru en France.

SUIDAS, a Greek Monk of the tenth or eleventh Century in the Reign of the Emperor Alexis Comnenus, wrote a Dictionary, reviſed and publiſhed by Hieronimus Wolfius, Emilius Portus, and ſome others. His Book has ſeveral hiſtorical Paſſages in it not well vouched; ſince Strabo, Stephanus Byzantius, &c. cite one Suidas, it muſt be allowed there have been two Authors of this Name. Stephanus Bizantius cites Suidas; and Suidas of the eleventh Century mentions one Hermolaus, who had abridged this Stephanus's Performance. Suidas's Lexicon is nothing more than an extract from other Dictionaries, the Authors of which he mentions at the beginning of his Books: Into which he has tranſcribed a great many old Annotations upon the tragick and comick Poets. Beſides the Interpretation of Words, his Book takes in the Lives of Princes and Men of learning; and affords ſeveral Pieces of Hiſtory which 'tis difficult to meet with elſewhere. Notwithſtanding he can't be ranged among the Writers of Antiquity; however, he may have the Privilege of ſtanding in that Claſs, becauſe there is nothing in his Lexicon, but what comes from the antients: But then his ſuppreſſing the Names of his old Authors, and wanting Judgment ſometimes, for making his Extracts, is ſomething of a Misfortune. But then by way of mitigation, it muſt be ſaid that the Unevenеſs and different Value of what occurs in his Lexicon, muſt be imputed to the many Additions inſerted after Suidas's Death, as Voſſius has already obſerved. And ſince the Capacities, Principles and Tempers of thoſe who have thrown in theſe ſupplemental Paſſages, are very different and written in different Ages, we are not to wonder, if we meet with a pretty many things ſhort of exactneſs. And thus his Failings with reſpect to Hiſtory or Philology, are not all to be placed to his Account. Poſſevin in his Apparatus has made a Collection of great Part of theſe Improprieties and Miſtakes. The Cambridge Edition of Suidas publiſhed in 1705 by Kuſterus is much the beſt. * Poſſevin, Apparat. Sacr. Tom 2. G. J. Voſſ. Philolog. cap. 5. Phil. Jac. Moſſac. diſſert. Critiq. ad Harpacration. Roſin. in Antiq. Rom. Konig, in Biblioth. Vet. & Nov.

SULPITIUS (Gallus,) a Roman Conſul with Marcellus. Pliny aſſures us he was the firſt of the Romans, who gave phyſiological Reaſons for the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon. Livy in the 14th Book of his Hiſtory tells the Story thus; Sulpitius having the Command of the ſecond Legion, ordered the Soldiers to be drawn up by the Conſul's Permiſſion; and for fear they ſhould collect an unhappy Preſage from the Eclipſe of the Moon which was ready to happen; he told them that the Night following, this Planet would be eclipſed from two a Clock till four, and that they ought not to ſuppoſe it any Omen of ill Luck. The Eclipſe happening accordingly the Soldiers were ſtruck with Admiration at Sulpitius's Knowledge, and looked upon him little leſs than a God. * Plin. Hiſt. Natur. lib. 2. cap. 12. Valerius Maximus, lib. 8. Cap. 11. Quintil. lib. 1. cap. 10.

SUMISCAHAC, Simiſcaſac. A Town in Arabia Deſerta. It ſtands upon the Frontiers of Syria, fifty Leagues from the Town Anna to the Weſt, and fourſcore and ten from Jeruſalem to the Eaſt. This Town is ſuppoſed to be the Old Saba of Arabia deſerta; and ſome fancy that the Magi who came to worſhip our Saviour at Bethlehem, lived here. * Maty, Diction.

SUNAN, a City in China. It is a Town of the third Rank in the Province of Queicheu, and has but one other Town within its Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

SUPARA, a ſmall Town, though the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name: It ſtands upon the weſtern Coaſt of the Iſland Celebes in Aſia. * Maty, Diction.

SUPPER, in Latin Cœna, i. e. in the Greek Language, common, becauſe the Ancients uſed to ſup with Company, whereas they generally dine alone. Supper was their beſt Meal; they had a light Breakfaſt, which was only a Piece of Bread dipped in undiluted Wine: Their ſecond Meal was their Prandium or Dinner: They had ſometimes another Refreſhment which they called Commiſſatio or Commeſſatio, or a Collation which they took between Dinner and Supper. Suetonius mentions theſe four Repaſts in Vitellius's Life. Epulas trifariam ſemper, interdum quadrifariam diſpertiebat; in jentacula & prandia, & cœna commenſationeſque, &c.

Theſe Suppers were differently managed; one of them they called Cœna recta, or a ſet and full Supper, which the Quality of Rome gave their Friends and Dependents, who made them Viſits, or aſſiſted them with their Votes at Elections. Thoſe who had a Mind to avoid the Trouble and Expence of ſuch an Entertainment, gave them Bread and Meat inſtead of a Supper, and this Diſtribution they called Sportula. The Emperor Domitian put down theſe Doles, and reſtor'd the Cœna recta, as Suetonius informs us; Sportulas publicas ſuſtulit, revocatâ cœnarum rectarum conſuetudine.

The Romans likewiſe had a Supper call'd Cœna dapſilis, from the Word Dapes, which ſignifies either a Supper of a great many Diſhes or tid Bits: Another of their Suppers was called Cœna Acroamatica, which was ſeaſoned with Sentences, Jeſts, and Stories to divert the Company: And farther it muſt not be forgotten that they had their Cœna adventitia, intervallata, novendialis, and duodenaria; this laſt was ſo called becauſe the Gueſts were to be only twelve dreſſed like Gods and Goddeſſes. To which we may add their Cœna Pontificalis, which the High-Prieſt made the Day of his Inſtallment.

They ſupped commonly in Summer at four a-Clock in the Afternoon; in Spring and Autumn at three, and in Winter at two: However the Romans and Greeks were not conſtant to the time of Day, but ſupped ſometimes at one Hour, and ſometimes at another. They put on a Habit on purpoſe for the Table, which they called Veſtis cœnatoria, or Pallium cœnatorium; Martial takes notice of it.

The Table on which they eat ſtood in the middle between three Beds; beſides this they had another call'd Abacus, which was a Buffet, on which they ſet the Glaſſes and Deſſert, &c. Varro mentions four ſorts of Tables; one upon which they eat; another called Urnarium, where they ſet the Mugs, Jars, Flaggons, and Baſons; a third called Cylibantium, from the Greek Κύλιξ, which ſignifies a Cup; and a fourth called Cartibulum, where they carved the Meat, which was afterwards terwards handed to the Company by Meſſes: Round about the Beds and the Table there was a ſort of Footſtool or Cricket, upon which the Children ſat, who ſupped with the chief of the Family, as Suetonius obſerves in his Life of the Emperor Claudius, Adhibebat omni cœnæ, & liberos ſuos cum pueris puellisque nobilibus, qui, more veteri, ad fulcra Lectorum ſedentes veſcerentur. They made uſe of no Table Cloth, but had Servants to clean the Table when they took away the firſt Courſe, and were ready to bring another; other Servants ſwept away what fell under the Table; and ſome had large Fans to cool the Company and beat away the Flies; and ſome of the Waiters Buſineſs was to give Meat and Drink; this we may learn from Horace:

His ubi ſublatis, puer albè cinctus, acernam
Gauſape purpureo menſam pertерſit, & alter
Sublegit quodcunque jaceret inutile, quodque
Poſſit conantes offendere.——

They commonly had three Courſes; the firſt Courſe was called Antecœna or Guſtatio, where they ſerved up Mulberries, Eggs, &c. The ſecond Courſe was properly the Supper; and here the beſt Meat they could get was ſet upon the Table; and the third Service was the Deſſert of Sweet-meats and Apples, &c. called Bellaria & Menſa Pomorum: This Suetonius informs us was Auguſtus's Cuſtom; Cœnam ternis ferculis præbebat. Before they began their Supper they drank a Glaſs of Greek Wine: At the Beginning and End of this Repaſt they poured out a little Wine as a Libation to the Gods, and drank in a large Bowl afterwards;

Nec prius aut epulas, aut munera grata Lyæi
Fas cuiquam tetigiſſe fuit, quàm multa precatus
In menſam.... ſacrum libavit honorem.
Silius Italicus.

Virgil mentions theſe Libations at the End of the Entertainment at which Dido regaled Æneas;

Poſtquam prima quies epulis, menſæque remotæ,
Crateras magnas ſtatuunt, & vina coronant.
Hic Regina gravem gemmis auroque poposcit,
Implevitque mero pateram——
——Tum facta ſilentia tectis
Jupiter (hoſpitibus nam te dare jura loquuntur)
Dixit, & in menſa Laticum libavit honorem,
Primaque libato ſummo tenus attigit ore:
Tum Bitiæ dedit increpitans.——
Poſt alii Proceres, &c.

Virgil ſtands thus tranſlated by Dryden,

Now when the Rage of Hunger was appeas'd,
The Meat remov'd, and ev'ry Gueſt was pleas'd,
The golden Bowls with ſparkling Wine are crown'd,
And through the Palace chearful Cries reſound.
A golden Bowl that ſhone with Gems divine,
The Queen commanded to be crown'd with Wine:
Then Silence through the Hall proclaim'd, ſhe ſpoke:
O hoſpitable Jove! we thus invoke,
With ſolemn Rites thy ſacred Name and Power!
The Goblet then ſhe took with Nectar crown'd,
(Sprinkling the firſt Libations on the Ground)
And rais'd it to her Mouth with ſober Grace,
Then ſipping offered to the next in Place.
'Twas Bitias whom ſhe call'd a thirſty Soul,
The Goblet goes round.

* Suetonius, in Vit. Claudii, cap. 32. Horat. Satyr. 8. lib. 2. Virgil. lib. 1. Æneid. ℣. 727.

SURINTENDANT of the Buildings of France. Formerly there were particular Surintendants or Surveyors of the chief Seats belonging to the French Crown. Thus there was one of theſe Surveyors for Fontainebleau, another for Monceaux, another for Paris, and another for Verſailles. The Surveyors of the Buildings of Paris being the moſt conſiderable, in regard of the magnificent Structures, and upon the ſcore of the Town's being the Capital of the Kingdom; for theſe Reaſons the Surintendant of the King's Houſes at Paris had the Quality of general Directors of the Buildings of France; beſides the Care of the Buildings, their Buſineſs reaches to thoſe Arts and Manufactures which contribute to the furniſhing and beautifying the Royal Palaces; as Architecture, Painting, Sculpture, Arras, and other rich Stuffs for Ornament and Furniture. Mr. Colbert annex'd to this Office the ſuperviſing all the Arts and Manufactures of the Kingdom, and had the Title of Surveyor General of the King's Buildings, of the Arts and Manufactures of France. After the Death of Mr. Manſard this Office was ſuppreſs'd, and the King made a Director General of the Buildings and beſtowed the Buſineſs in 1712 upon the Duke d'Antin. * Memoires Hiſtoriques.

SURYNAM; a Fort belonging to the Dutch in Guyana, within Southern America, at the Mouth of the River Surynam, where it falls into the Atlantick Ocean. There is a good Colony of Dutch and French ſettled there, and the Country affords a good deal of Sugar * Maty, Diction.

* SWEDEN: For Guſtavus II. who was choſen King A. D. 1525 in Morery Vol. II. read Guſtavus I. ſurnamed Ericſon.

* SWITSERLAND: Inſtead of Zuinglius began to preach before Luther in Morery Vol. II. read before Calvin.

* SYLBERGIUS (Frederick.) A German, was one of the moſt learned Men of his Age for the Greek Language, and other Parts of Philology. His Greek Grammar is very much valued; and here he works upon Ramus's Model. He had a good Share in compoſing Henry Stevens's Theſaurus Græcæ Linguæ. His Induſtry and indefatigable Diligence, with which he wrote the Lives of a great many Greek Authors both Eccleſiaſtick and Pagan, deſerves great Commendation. Theſe Lives are, that of Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Juſtin Martyr, and Theodoret. * Johan. Gerard. Voſſius Præf. in Clenardi Gramm. Græc. Prim. Scaligeran. pag. 233. Caſaubon, Epiſtol. 48. ad Jac. Bongarl. Sciopp. de Art. Critic. pag. 18.

* SYNESIUS, Biſhop of Ptolemais or Cyrene. Amongſt the Works of this Biſhop there are ten Hymns, in which he has given a Proof that Divinity may be taught, and Piety promoted very practicably in Verſe: And that ſuch a dreſs agrees with the moſt ſublime and affecting Parts of Religion. Syneſius believed God had faſtned the Soul to the Body, by the agreeable Perceptions of the Senſes: And that without ſuch Amuſements, the Mind would have thought itſelf uneaſy, by being tyed to ſuch a ſluggiſh Companion, and ſo much unreſembling her own Nature. Now the moſt innocent Pleaſure, which makes the Soul ſtoop leaſt beneath herſelf, and leaves her moſt at Liberty to mount towards Heaven; this as Syneſius fancies, is the Diverſion furniſhed from Poetry and other Branches of human Learning. * Evagrius. Hiſt. lib. 1. Cap. 15. Johan. Moſcus, Pratum Spirit. cap. 195. Photius, Cod. 26. Baronius. Bellarmin. Godeau. Poſſevin. & Petavius, in Not. ad Syneſ.

TABORITES,

T.

TABORITES, Bohemians of the Sect of John Huſs, who fortify'd a Mountain near Prague, which they called Tabor. They were headed by the famous Ziſca, and were Enemies to the Calixtins, whoſe main Difference from the reſt of the Roman Catholicks was their uſe of the Cup in the holy Euchariſt; the Calixtins made War upon them, and routed 'em in a ſet Battel A. D. 1434. Roxanes, Commander in chief of the Calixtins, was their great Enemy, and endeavoured to deſtroy their Remainder. At laſt Pagebrac King of Bohemia, after having taken Tabor in the Year 1544, finiſhed the Ruin of the Taborites. * Hiſtory of the Huzzites.

* TACFARINAS, a Numidian, and General of an Army againſt the Romans in Africk in the Reign of Tiberius. He firſt ſerved in the Romans auxiliary Troops, and then deſerting, drew a Company of Strollers and Highwaymen together, and ſet up for robbing. He took care to diſcipline his Men, and divided them into Companies under diſtinct Colours: At laſt he had the chief Command of the Muzulains, a powerful Clan near the Deſarts of Africa; and beſides he made an Alliance with the Moors of the Neighbourhood: Theſe laſt were commanded by Mazippa, and form'd a flying Camp, which carry'd Fire, Sword, and Terror through the Country, while Tacfarinas with the beſt of his Troops formed a Camp reſembling that of the Romans, and diſciplined his Men. The Cinithians, another conſiderable Nation went into the ſame Intereſt. Furius Camillus the Proconſul of Africk receiving Advice of theſe Motions, marched againſt the Enemy and routed them; this was done in the 770th Year of Rome, and A. D. 17. Soon after Tacfarinas repeated his ravaging, and beſieged a Caſtle where Decius commanded, and defeated the Garriſon which march'd out to fight in the open Field. Decius performed the Part of a brave and experienc'd General: His loſing an Eye, beſides other Wounds, did not hinder him from charging the Enemy, which he did to the laſt Minute of his Life: But before he was ſlain his Men run for it. The Proconſul Apronius corrected their Cowardice ſeverely, and made one in ten of them ſuffer Death; this Diſcipline had ſuch an Effect, that five hundred of his Men charged Tacfarinas's victorious Troops and routed 'em: After this Tacfarinas declin'd facing the Romans, and put his Men into Quarters: When he was purſued he ſcampered; and when the Romans countermarched he charg'd them in the Rear: But afterwards making a Stand in his Camp, he was forced and beaten; and obliged to retire into the Deſarts; but ſoon after he took the Field. This News being carry'd to Rome, Junius Blæſus, Sejanus's Uncle, was ſent againſt him: This new Proconſul acquitted himſelf very well of his Commiſſion; however, Tacfarinas recruited his Troops to that Degree, that he had the Confidence to ſend his Agents to Tiberius to demand a Country might be aſſigned him, and unleſs this Article was comply'd with, menaced the Government with a long War: The Emperor was ſo affronted at this Inſolence, that he ordered Junius Blæſus to ſeize Tacfarinas at what Expence ſoever. The War held on to the Year of Rome 777, when the Proconſul Dolobella made an End of it. Tacfarinas's Army was routed, and Endeavours were made to ſeize the General; but he choſe rather to loſe his Life fighting, than be made Priſoner by the Proconſul. * Tacit. Annal. lib. 2. & 4.

TAFALLA, anciently Alta Failla, a Town of the Kingdom of Navarre, with an old royal Palace: It ſtands upon the River Cicados, a League above d'Olive. * Baudrand.

TAGAVOST, a Town belonging to the Kingdom of Sus in Barbary, fifteen Leagues from the City Tarudant to the South. * Maty, Diction.

TAGGIA, a good Town belonging to the Republick of Genoa, well known by the fine Muſcat Wine made there: It ſtands about a League from the Coaſt, and three from Oncille to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

TAGLIACOSSO, a Town with the Title of a Duchy. It ſtands in the farther Abruzzo, within the Kingdom of Naples, about three Leagues from the Lake Celano, to the Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

TAIBA, a Town upon the Frontiers of Arabia; 'twas built by the Arabians upon the ſcore of its being well watered, which is no common Convenience in that Country. It was formerly inhabited by rich Arabian Merchants, who accommodated Travellers, who paſſed that Way, in their going to Syria and return from thence. But the Turk making himſelf Maſter of the Frontiers of Arabia, Trade fell off, and the Town was ruined, ſo that at preſent, 'tis reduced to a Village, and ſerves only as a Shelter for Robbers. * Carre's, Travels to the Eaſt Indies.

TAIN, or Thin, a Town in France ſituated in the Province of Dauphiné, upon the Rhone, over againſt Tournon, and two Leagues above Valence; the fine Wine called Hermitage grows near this Town.

TAIPING, there is two Towns of this Name in China; one of them near the Lake Taiping, and the River Kiang, within Nankin, where 'tis the City of the eleventh Claſs, and has two other Towns within its Juriſdiction; the other is the eighth City of the Province of Quangſi, and belongs to the King of Tunquin, and has two and twenty Towns within its Dependency. * Maty, Diction.

TALANDI, a Town of Greece in Livadia. Sir George Wheeler in his Travels, reports it ſituated a League and a half from the Lake Livadia, to the North, and a League from the Gulph of Negropont, over againſt the Iſland Talanda; this Gentleman relates it an epiſcopal See, ſuffragant to Athens, and that there's above five or ſix thouſand Chriſtians, Jews, and Turks in it. He adds it has been much larger, and that the Ruins reach half a League from the Town: He takes it for the Old Opus or Opuns, Capital of the Locriopuntii; but others ſuppoſe it the Old Larimna inferior, a Town of Bœotia.

TAMAYO (Martin,) a Spaniſh Centinel, who ſerved in Germany in the Emperor Charles Vs. Army: This Man in the Year 1546, made himſelf famous by his Bravery, and by a Sedition, which he was very near being the Occaſion of; the Emperors Troops being weaker than thoſe of the Proteſtants, commanded by the Landgrave of Heſſe, was encamped before the Enemy near Ingolſtad. A Rebel of a gigantick Size, who took himſelf for the Hero of the Age, came ſtrutting out every Day between the two Camps, with a Halbert in his Hand, and offered to fight ſingle with the beſt Man in the imperial Army. Charles V. forbid all his Men to undertake the Challenge upon Pain of Death. Not that he thought the Fellow ſo formidable, but he was afraid that in Caſe one of his Soldiers ſhould be worſted, the reſt might be intimidated, and draw ſome unlucky Preſage from the Miſadventure. This Fanfaron came braving the Army every Day, and coming up to the Spaniſh Quarters, reproached them with Cowardice, in very groſs Language. Tamayo who was only a common Soldier, in a Regiment of his Nation, could not bear the Inſolence of this new Goliah. He ſnatched a Halbert from one of his Comrades, and edging along the Entrenchments, attacked the Challenger, and without receiving a Wound, drove his Halbert into his Throat, and laid him a ſprawling; and drawing the vanquiſhed Man's Sword, cut off his Head, and carried it into the Camp. He likewiſe preſented it to his Majeſty, and falling at his Feet begged his Life; the Emperor had no Regard to Tamayo's Bravery; and conſidering nothing, but the ill Conſequences of the Example, ordered him to be ſhot to death. All the chief Officers of the Army interceded for this heroick Man: They ſuggeſted to his Majeſty, that it was not adviſable to ruffle the Soldiers at this Juncture; and eſpecially not the Spaniards, who were the Choice of his Troops, and would be extreamly out of Temper, in Caſe any Contempt ſhould be put upon them; that it was dangerous to uſe Severity as things ſtood, and to puniſh a noble Exploit as if it was a Crime; And that if brave People were treated with ſuch Rigour, the whole Army would grow languid and negligent in their Duty. The Prince of Hungary, the Cardinal Farneſe, the Pope's Legate, the Prince of Piemont, the Duke of Parma, in a Word all thoſe that had Quality enough, either by Birth, Employment, or Reputation, to give them Liberty of Speech, begged the Emperor, though he might drop the Rewarding this brave Man, yet at leaſt to pardon him. The Emperor continued inexorable, and reſolved on the Execution of this unhappy Perſon, who either out of Stomach, or Greatneſs, refuſed to ask Pardon any more, after Sentence of Death was pronounced againſt him. When he was led to the Place of Execution, he carried the Challenger's Head in his Hand, and ſhewing it to his Comrades, put them in Mind, that was the Crime for which he ſuffered. He likewiſe offered them the Sword taken from the Enemy, and deſired them to run him through with it, that no loyal Subject might reproach the Emperor, with revenging the Death of thoſe Hereticks who revolted againſt him. In ſhort; when his Cap was pulled over his Eyes, and the Minute for ſtooting him was come, the Spaniards, to the Number of nine thouſand, broke out into a Mutiny, and threatned the Emperor with the laſt Extremities, unleſs he gave his Pardon to ſo brave a Man. This ſeditious Menacing affected Charles V. who referred the deciding this Affair to his General the Duke of Alva; this Duke as rough humoured as he was, was forced to give Way to Neceſſity and pardon Tamayo, who then quitted the Service, and returned to Spain. * The Hiſtory of the Duke of Alva.

* TANGERMUND: For Gharles X. in Morery Vol. II. read Charles V.

TANIS, or Tanes, a City where the old Kings of Ægypt kept their Court, and where Moſes wrought his Miracles before Pharaoh; 'twas one of the oldeſt Towns in this Country: However, to correct the Vanity of the Ægyptians, who valued themſelves in being the oldeſt Kingdom in the World; to correct this Vanity, I ſay, Moſes obſerves that Hebron was built ſeven Years before. Tanis ſtood upon one of the Mouths of the Nile, a little diſtant from the Sea, in an Iſland likewiſe called Tanis: It has undergone ſeveral Revolutions. The Chriſtians who undertook the Cruſade ſettled a Biſhop's See here under the Archbiſhop of Damieta; 'tis likewiſe a Biſhop's See for the Copti, who call it Thennis. * Baudrand. Le Clerc ſur la Pentateuque. L'Abbé de Commanville Tables Geographiques, &c.

TANNER, or Tannerus (Adam,) a learned Jeſuit born at Inſpruck, at the latter End of the ſixteenth Century. He was at Ratisbonne in 1601, and had a Share in the famous Conference between the Roman Catholick and Proteſtant Divines, where the Dukes of Bavaria and Newbourg were preſent. Tanner printed the Diſpute, which produc'd Anſwers and Replies. However, the Duke of Newbourg (Woolfgang William) it ſeems was convinced on Tanner's Side, and went over to the Church of Rome. Tanner dy'd in 1632, ſixty Years of Age: His Works are, de Verbo Dei ſcripto & non ſcripto, & de Judice Controverſiarum Fidei. De bonis Operibus, &c. De Juſtificatione. Diſputationes Theologicæ in ſummam S. Thomæ, with a Supplement entituled Theologia ſcholaſtica, ſpeculativa, practica: Anatomia Confeſſionis Auguſtanæ: Antichriſtus proſcriptus, &c. * Alegambe, Biblioth Script. Societatis Jeſu.

TANSILLO (Lewis,) born at Nola, and living at Naples in the Popedom of Paul IV. was an Italian Poet of Character. He wrote three Comedies, and ſeveral other things well received in his Country: But no Performance of his made ſo much Noiſe as his Play du Vendangeur, & de la Culture des Jardin des Dames; and his Poem des Larmes de St. Pierre, or St. Peter's Tears. His Vendangeur or Vintager gave him no ſmall Mortification: It ſeems having ſtuffed this Performance with rank Smut, the Court of Inquiſition cenſured not only this Play, but the reſt of his Poems. Tanſillo being convinced his Vintager deſerved to be put into the Index, made his Submiſſion to Pope Paul IV. who reſented ſo far as to order his Name to be ſtruck out of the Cenſure; and thus though the Performance was cenſured the Man was ſpared. And now being brought to a due Recollection, he writ his Poem called St. Peter's Tears, which, notwithſtanding his Death happen'd before it was finiſhed, is the beſt thing which came from his Pen, and is tranſlated into French and Spaniſh. * Girolam. Ghilin. nel Theat. d'Huom. Letter. Part. 1. cart. 159. Nicolo Toppi, nella Biblioth. Napoletan. à carte 197. & 346. Johan. Matth. Toſcan. in Peplo Ital.

TAPHRES, a Town of Taurie Cherſonneſe, at preſent called Preops, and the royal Seat of the Precopenſian Tartars: It ſtands thirty Miles from the Mouth of the Tanais. This City was taken by Trajan; Stephanus de Urbibus calls it Taphré, and reports that the Burghers going upon an Expedition againſt the Thracians, their Slaves made themſelves Maſters of the Town. * Pliny, lib. 4. Stephan. de Urb.

TARACUS, Son of Sabaco, an Æthiopian, who ſeized the Kingdom of Ægypt: He is called Tirhacah, and by Strabo, Theraco: He ſent auxiliary Troops to Hezekiah againſt Sennacherib, as we may learn from Iſaiah and the ſecond Book of Kings. His Father Sabaco, after having conquered Ægypt, left his two Sons there; they were Sevecus and Taracus, who reigned ſucceſſively: Taracus ſucceeded his Brother Sevecus in the the 710th Year before the Incarnation, and reigned 18 Years: After his Death Sabaco returned into Ægypt, kill'd Neco, and reigned there ten Years. * Euſeb. in Chron. African. Syncell. Marſham, Canon. Chronic. M. Du Pin. Bibliotheque univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

TARACHUS (St.) a Martyr of Cilicia, with St. Probus and St. Andronicus. When Dioclesian and Maximian the Emperors raiſed a Perſecution, theſe Saints were brought before Maximus Numerianus, Governor of Pompeiopolis, a Town of Cilicia, who had them conveyed to Tarſus, where he ſat upon them: Tarachus, who was an old Man, and had taken Service was firſt interrogated: He condemned Idolatry in plain Terms, and profeſſed himſelf a Chriſtian: The Governor had him cruelly whipped, and remanded him to Priſon loaded with Irons. His two Companions being ſet to the Bar, made likewiſe a noble Confeſſion of their Faith; the Governor ordered them to be thrown into Dungeons, and then ſent 'em to Mopſueſtia, whither he was going. The three Priſoners were brought here again before him; but not being able to force their Reſolution, he had them carry'd to Anazarba, where they were brought into Court the third time: And when neither threatening nor Torture could make 'em bend and renounce their Religion, he ſentenced 'em to be thrown to wild Beaſts: But when they came into the Amphitheatre, the wild Beaſts would not faſten upon them, upon which the Governor ordered them to be diſpatched by the Gladiators. Their Corps were carried off and buried by the Chriſtians, who afterwards ſet a Feſtival for them to the 11th of October: There was a Church at Conſtantinople built in Honour of their Memory by Narſes the famous General. We have the Acts of their Martyrdom drawn from the publick Regiſters, and which ſeem to be preſerv'd in their original genuineneſs; they have been publiſh'd by Bigotius and Ruinart. * De Tillemont, Memoirs for Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, Tom. 5.

TARANTOLA, or Tarentula, a ſort of Spider ſo called becauſe 'tis bred in the Territory of Tarentum. The Venom which this Animal ſheds by biting produces ſuch ſurprizing and contrary Effects, that one could hardly believe them if they were not atteſted by Proof in abundance. Some of thoſe that are ſtung can't ſleep, and others cannot be awaked: Some are perpetually complaining, and others laugh without Intermiſſion; ſome gnaſh their Teeth and bound with Rage and Fury; others, on the contrary, are perpetually ſinging and dancing: This Poiſon makes ſome vomit, and others fall into violent Sweats; and almoſt all of 'em have a ſtrong Fancy for Colours, but not the ſame; thus red pleaſes one, green entertains another, and a great many of them are delighted with yellow, &c. The particular Quality of this Venom is, that being glutinous, and the Saliva or Spittle of this Spider, it immediately fixes the Imagination upon the Object which entertained the Perſon when ſtung; inſomuch that if a Man then fanſy'd himſelf a King, this pleaſant Whimſy would lodge in his Brain, till the Humour thrown in by the Bite or Sting of the Tarantola is quite diſperſed. Thus this Poiſon, upon the ſcore of its Viſcocity, does not make the Perſon feel any troubleſome Symptom at firſt; but after it has ſlept a long time in the Body, it may be ſometimes at a Year's diſtance, the Parts are attenuated, and rouzed by the Heat of the Sun; and now being, as it were, fledg'd with Motion and Strength, it produces different Effects, according to the Parts of the Body ſeized by it: For inſtance, if this Poiſon ſtops the Nerves near the Brain, the animal Spirits being choaked in their Way to the Organs, lie, as it were, in a Slumber; on the contrary they keep the Perſon always awake, when this Poiſon by its active Quality holds the Channels of the Nerves always open, by which means the animal Spirits are perpetually poſting through them. Farther, by vitiating the Choller this Venom burns the Blood to a Fever; and mixing with the animal Spirits, where the Nerves are inſerted, it pricks and ſpurs the Muſcles, and makes the Patient friſk and dance; which happens moſt commonly when the animal Spirits are ſet a-float by muſical Tunes, which ſuit the Conſtitution of the Patient, and the Quality of the Poiſon; and for this Reaſon it is, that Muſick is the only ſovereign Remedy for this Diſeaſe; for the Patient by dancing vigorouſly to the Tune of the Inſtrument, which they will do, and be exact too in their Movements and Meaſures, though they never learn to dance; this ſtrong Motion, I ſay, draws off the Venom, and makes it exhale in a Sweat; and if it happens that ſomething remains unevacuated, 'tis a ſort of Leaven, which cauſes Returns of the ſame Symptoms at certain Revolutions; and thus ſome People are plagu'd with it forty or fifty Years. * Senguerd's Diſſertation upon the Tarantola. Baglivi upon the ſame Subject.

TARGA, a Town of Zaara in Africk. It is the Capital of the Kingdom of Targa, which is likewiſe called Hayr, and Sagra, or Zagharn. It lies between Biledulgerid and the Country of the Negroes; with the Deſert of Lempta to the Eaſt, and that of Zuenzica to the Weſt; this latter Deſert is not ſo Sandy, and unwatered as thoſe about it. Here are good Wells, and Paſture Ground; there are likewiſe great Quantities of Manna here, which furniſhes Trade. * Maty, Diction.

TARKU, a City of Georgia in Aſia. It is the Capital of the Dagheſtan Tartars: It ſtands upon the Caſpian Sea, between Derbent and Terky, about fifteen Leagues from the firſt and twenty from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

TARQUINIA, a Town and Colony in Tuſcany. It is ſuppoſed this Town was built by Tarchon, one of Æneas's Allies againſt Turnus; but 'tis more likely that it has its Name from the Tarquins, who retired thither after their Expulſion from Rome. Varro. Livy. Strabo. Pliny. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſ.*

TERSIA, a Town which gives the Title of a Principality: It ſtands in the hither Calabria, a Province in the Kingdom of Naples, five Leagues from Caſſano to the South. This Town is ſuppoſed to be the Old Capraſæ, or Capraſis, a ſmall Town of the Brutians. * Baudrand.

* TARSUS. In Morery Vol. II. a Town of Cilicia read Tarteſſus in Spain.

TAUBMAN (Frederick,) a Franconian. He was born in 1565 and died in 1613: He was Poetry and Humanity Profeſſor at Wittemberg eighteen Years. His Notes upon Plautus and Virgil are much valued; It is ſaid that a little before he died, when he was firſt taken ſick, he ſaw one Morning a long Trunck by his Bed, with a Man lying in it like himſelf. At firſt he took it for a Whimſy; but lifting up his Head and examining the Matter, he found his Eye ſight did not deceive him. * J. P. Lotichius, part. 3. B. P. pag. 187. Quenſted. pag. 176. Henn. Witte. in Memor Philoſ. pag. 83. Bart. Adv. 16. 3.

TAURELLUS (Nicholas,) a Philoſopher and Phyſician, born at Montbeliard, November 1547. When the Magiſtrates of Nuremberg founded a Univerſity at Altdorf in the Year 1581, they made him Phyſick Profeſſor there. He managed the Chair with Commendation enough: But being a Perſon of Singularities, he created himſelf Enemies eſpecially amongſt the Clergy: Inſomuch that the Divines at Heidelberg gave him no better Character, than that of a Sceptick. He died at Altdorf in 1606; ſome of his printed Works are, a diagnoſtick Method; Diſcuſſiones Phyſicæ de mundo contra Piccolomineum; Diſcuſſiones Phyſicæ & Metaphyſicæ de Cœlo, adverſus eundem: Alpes cæſæ, or a Book againſt Ceſalpin. de Infiniti continui Sectione. de rerum æternitate. De Vitâ, & Morte. * Melchior Adam, in Vitis Medicorum, pag. 403. Paulus Freherus, in Theatro Virorum Illuſtrium. pag. 1820. Scioppius, in Scaligero Hypobol. fol. 196.

TAUVRY (Daniel,) born in 1669, was Son to Ambroſe Tauvry, who practiſed Phyſick at Laval. His Father taught him the Theory-Part of Phyſick, and the practic too by carrying him to the Hoſpital. However, for farther Improvement he was ſent to Paris at thirteen Years of Age, and two Years forward, the Univerſity of Angers declared him qualified for the Degree of a Doctor in Phyſick. He returned to Paris, and having ſtudied Anatomy three Years, he publiſhed his Book entituled, Anatomie Raiſſonnée. From Anatomy, he proceeded to the ſtudy of Medicines, and wrote his Tracts of the Compoſition of Medicaments at one and twenty Years of Age. Sometime after he was examined by the Faculty of Paris, and had his Doctors Degree. In 1698 his Book entituled Nouvelle Pratique des Maladies aigues &c. or a new way of Practice in acute Diſeaſes, and in all thoſe which are cauſed by the Fermentation of the Humours. His Tract of the Generation and Nouriſhment of the Fœtus, was printed in 1700. He was now a Member of the Academy of Sciences, and had a famous Conference with Mr. Mery about the Circulation of the Blood in the Fœtus, which was the Occaſion of his Writing of his Book laſt mentioned. And having a very conſiderable Adverſary to deal with in this Controverſy, he overſtudied himſelf and died of a Conſumption February 1701. 31 Years of Age; had his Life been longer he would have ſhined in his Profeſſion to an extraordinary Degree. * De Fontenelle, Hiſt. de l'Academie des Sciences, de l'année 1700. pag. 201. Edit de Holl.

* TAXANDRE. For ſided with Maximinus in Morery Vol. II. read with Maximus.

TCILDIR, or Chielder, formerly called Pariedrus, Paryadris Mons, Pariedri Montes. Mountains of Aſia in Great Armenia; they are famous for their extraordinary Height, and particularly becauſe the Rivers Euphrates, Tibris, and Araxes, riſe there. * Baudrand.

TECKELEMBOURG, a Country within the Circle of Weſtphalia. It lies between the Biſhoprick of Munſter, and that of Oſnabrug: It reaches about ſix Leagues from North to South, and three from Weſt to Eaſt. There is nothing conſiderable in it except the Caſtle of Teckelembourg, in Latin Tacelia. * Maty, Diction.

TECOANTEPEQUE, a Town in America within New Spain. It is within the Province of Guaxaca, upon the South Sea, with a good Haven belonging to it. Maty, Diction.

TEDNEST; the Capital of the Province of Hea, in the Kingdom of Morocco. It ſtands upon the River Amana; the Walls are Wood and the Houſes are likewiſe Timber, with earthen Floors, mixed with Plaiſter. In 1514, the King of Protugal took it from Xeriff Mahomet, who had pitched upon this Town as a Place of Defence againſt the Chriſtians of Safi and Azamort. But ſome time afterward this Xeriff recovered the Place, till the Reign of Tafilet, who made himſelf Maſter of the Kingdom of Fez and Morocco. * Marmol, de l'Afrique, lib. 3.

TELESIUS (Bernardin,) extracted from a noble Family at Coſenza, a Town in the Kingdom of Naples. He applied himſelf wholly to the Study of Mathematicks, and particularly to Opticks: And here he made great Diſcoveries, as he did likewiſe in natural Philoſophy, where he frequently went off from Ariſtotle's Principles. He wrote two Books entituled De Principiis rerum naturalium: And ſome other Tracts in Phyſick. He died at about 80 Years of Age at the latter End of the ſixteenth Century. * J. Imperial. in Muſ. Hiſt.

TELLIER (Francis Michael le,) Marquis of Louvois, Miniſter and Secretary of State. He was born at Paris January 18. 1641: In 1668 he was made General Poſt-Maſter, for France and foreign Countries; three Years after he was Chancellor of the Kings Orders, and Secretary of State for foreign Affairs; the Orders of St. Lazarus and our Lady at Mount Carmel were fallen into great Decay; the Knights in Virtue of an Edict set forth in 1672, which confirmed the Union of these two Orders, and Mr. de Nereſtan grand Maſter of the Order of St. Lazarus, having laid down his Commiſſion; things ſtanding thus, the Knights of theſe Orders petitioned the French King, to annex the Office of grand Maſter to the Crown, and to beſtow the Direction of the Order upon Mr. de Louvois, with the Title of great Vicar; this Miniſter being thus impowered in 1673, put the Edict of the foregoing Year in Execution. And now a great Number of Infirmaries and Hoſpitals, which had been diſmember'd from the Order, were re-annex'd to it; theſe he got form'd into five great Priories and ſeveral Commandries, with which the King gratify'd near two hundred Gentlemen, and maimed, or ſuperannuated Officers. The Soldiers whom the War had diſabled from Service, found a comfortable Subſiſtence in the King's Hôtel of Invalids, which was founded and built by the Suggeſtion and Care of the Marquis de Louvois. His Inclination for the Education of the Nobleſſe, prompted him to prevail with his Majeſty to found ſeveral Academies upon the Frontiers of the Kingdom, where a great many young Gentlemen, maintained at the Expence of the Crown, learned the Buſineſs of War. After the Death of Mr. Colbert, which happened in the Year 1683, Louvois was made Surveyor of the Buildings, Arts, and Manufactures of France. The Comprehenſiveneſs of his Genius made him more than equal to this Multiplicity of Employments, which he always went through himſelf; but his extraordinary Capacity appeared particularly in providing for the Campaigns, &c. for after the Management of military Affairs came into his Hands, the Troops were always well furniſhed with Proviſion and Forage; the Artillery and Ornance of which he was Maſter more than once, was better provided for than ever; and the Magazines, erected by his Advice, were furniſhed with a prodigious Quantity of Arms and Ammunition, and kept with the utmoſt Exactneſs. While this Marquis was Miniſter of State, there was no Complaint of Miſcarriage in all the Fortifications; the Plans of the Campaign were drawn to all imaginable Advantage, and the Marches were executed accordingly. Nothing could be better concerted than the Regulations publiſh'd for the Magazines upon the Routes, and for aſſigning the Marches and Quarters; there was always Funds ready for paying the Officers and Centinels, as ſoon as the Money was due. In Buſineſs of this Extent and Conſequence the Marquiſs of Louvois ſpent his time, and exhauſted his Conſtitution; and being thus overloaded a great while, he dy'd ſuddenly at Verſailles, July 16, 1691, being 51 Years of Age. He was buried in the Church of the Capuchins, in Lewis the Great's Square, where he has a Mauſoleum ornamented with very fine Braſs and Marble Figures.

TEMPLE (Diana's.) The firſt Temple built for her at Rome was upon the Mount Aventine, in the Reign of Servius Tullus: At this Prince's Inſtance the Romans and Latins built this pretended Deity a Temple at their joint Expence; they met here every Year, ſacrificed in behalf of both Nations, and compromiſed the Differences which happened between them; and to perpetuate their good Correſpondence they had the Articles of their Alliance cut upon a Pillar of Braſs, with the Names of the Towns comprehended in the Treaty, and of the Commiſſioners who ſigned it. Auguſtus Cæſar built a Temple for Diana in Sicily: He had three Legs engraved upon the Frontiſpiece of this Temple, which were an Emblem of Trinacria or Sicily. * Strabo, lib. 14. Livy, lib. 4. Decad 5.

TEMPLE (Saturn's.) The firſt Temple built for Saturn at Rome, was that by the Capitol, done by Tatius King of the Sabines, after the Peace concluded between himſelf and Romulus: Tullus Hoſtilius built the ſecond, after having thrice triumphed for his having beaten the Sabines, and twice for the ſame Succeſs againſt the Albans: At the Dedication he inſtituted the Saturnalia. His third Temple was dedicated by the Conſuls A. Sempronius Atratinus, and M. Minutius: Others will have it that Tarquinius Superbus built it, and that by Valerius Publicola's Advice, they lodged the publick Treaſure in it, and made it an Exchequer: 'Twas in this Temple where Ambaſſadors were firſt received by the high Treaſurers, who enter'd their Names upon the Regiſter, and furniſh'd their Expence; 'twas here likewiſe that the Minutes of Contracts were recorded, and all other Buſineſs executed by Heads of Families; the Names of all thoſe who were Roman Citizens were enter'd upon Books made of Plates of Ivory. Thoſe who had recovered their Liberty likewiſe hung up their Chains there, and conſecrated them to Saturn, as Martial informs us.

Has cum gemina compede dedicat catenas,
Saturne, tibi Zoilus annulos priores.
* Danet.

TENGEHEU, a well fortify'd Town in China, ſtanding upon the Gulph of Nanking, within the Province of Xantung, where 'tis the fifth in Conſideration. It has ſeven other great Towns under it's Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

TENSIFT, formerly called Fut and Phthuth, a great River in Barbary within the Kingdom of Morocco: It riſes in the Mountain Tenſif, and running between the Provinces of Aſcala and Ducala to the North, and thoſe of Morocco and Hea to the South, and taking in the River Aſifnual, with ſeveral leſſer ones, it falls into the Atlantick Ocean at Azaphia. * Maty, Diction.

TEORREGU, a Country of Africk in Biledulgerid. It is ſituate between the Kingdom of Tripoli, and the Deſart of Berdoa, with the Deſart of Barka to the Eaſt, and the Territory of Fez to the Weſt. The Precinct of Torregu has three walled Towns within it, and ſix and twenty Villages. * Maty, Diction.

TERRANUOVA, formerly called Phaſiana and Phanſina: It is a ſmall Town with a Biſhop's See in the Iſland of Sardinia. It ſtands upon a great Gulph of the ſame Name, ſeventeen Leagues from Caſtel Aragoneſe. * Baudrand.

TERSKOY LEPORI, a Country in Lapland, belonging to the Muſcovite: It ſtretches itſelf to the Eaſt in the Figure of a great Peninſula, between the White Sea and that of Muſcovy, with Moremanskoy Lepori to the Weſt. Jokena, or Lokena, and Warſiga are the two principal Towns, and yet there is not much in 'em. * Maty, Diction.

TESCHEN, Teſſin, a ſmall Town in Sileſia; it ſtands upon the Elza, eleven Leagues from Ratibor to the South. Teſchen is fortify'd with a Citadel, and is the Capital of the Duchy or Principality of Teſchen, which is ſituated near the Head of the Viſtula, between the Principality of Ratibor, Moravia, Hungary, and Poland. * Maty, Diction.

TEWKSBURY. For Prince Edward, only Son to Henry VI. was ſlain in that Battel, in Morery Vol. II. read was taken Priſoner, and ſlain by Richard Duke of Glocester.

TEXEL, an Iſland in the Atlantick Ocean in America. It lies upon the Coaſt of the new Low Countries and New York, between the Iſlands of Lange and Uliland; the Dutch had it, but the Engliſh are Maſters of it at preſent. * Maty, Diction.

TEYN, there are two large Towns of this Name in Bohemia; the one ſtands upon the River Muldaw, two Leagues from Bechin to the Weſt, the other upon the Cadburz, ſeven Leagues from Pilſen to the South. * Baudrand.

TEZA, a City in the Kingdom of Fez; 'tis the Capital of the Province of Chaus, and ſtands upon the River Nocor, about eighteen Leagues from the Town Fez to the Eaſt. Teza is a large Town where the Kings of Fez ſometimes reſide. All the Nobility and People of Condition of the Province, commonly live there; and beſides other ſtately buildings, there is a Moſque bigger than that of Fez, and which is ſaid to be half a Mile in Circumference. Maty, Diction.

TEZUCO, a Town within the Province of Mexico in America. It ſtands upon the eaſtern Side of the Lake of Mexico, ſix Leagues from the City Mexico; 'tis but ſmall, notwithſtanding 'tis the Capital of a large Juriſdiction. When Ferdinando Cortez beſieged Mexico, he made a Canal at Tezuco half a Mile long, for the Convenience of building eighteen Brigantins, which he wanted to carry on the Siege of Mexico; and now the Town of Tezuco had four hundred thouſand Indians employ'd in this Work, forty Days quarter'd upon them, beſides a hundred thouſand Indian Soldiers, diers, in Cortez's Army. But now Tezeuco is only the Shadow of what it was formerly, the Spaniards having deſtroyed almoſt all the Natives in the Neighbourhood of Mexico. * Maty, Diction. The Hiſtory of the Conqueſt of Mexico.

THEAGINES, for Theſſalians in Morery Vol. II. read Athenians.

* THEBALDESCHI (Francis,) for Bartholomy Prignan, Archbiſhop of Paris in Morery Vol. II. read Archbiſhop of Bary.

* THEBES, or Dioſpolis; a Town of Upper Ægypt. Paul Lucas in his Voyage to the Levant, printed at Paris in 1704, gives the following Deſcription of it. After having walked a great while, ſays he, in the Ruins of this old Town, I ſaw the fineſt thing imaginable. I was aſtoniſhed at the ſight of the largeſt and moſt magnificent Building of the World; 'tis a Palace as big as a ſmall Town; there are four Avenues of Pillars, leading to four Porticos. At each Gate between two great Pillars of Porphyry, there are two black Marble Figures of Giants, with each of them a Club in their Hand. The Avenue of Pillars which Leads to each Gate, conſiſts of three Columns triangularly placed for every Pillar, which make fifteen hundred Pillars in all. Upon the Chapiter of every Pillar there is a Sphynx. Every Pillar is ſeventy Foot high, and all of a ſingle Stone; and thus in the four Avenues there muſt be between five and ſix thouſand Pillars, for ſome of them are fallen down. Afterwards he proceeds to a Deſcription of ſome of the Apartments of this vaſt Palace. The Ruins would not ſuffer him to view every thing; however, he made a Shift to get up to the Top of it, from whence he had both the Pleaſure and Mortification of the Proſpect of the Ruins of the greateſt City in the World. Upon the Verge of the Deſart, to the Eaſt, he diſcovered twelve great Pyramids, not at all inferior to that of Grand Cairo; he likewiſe ſaw a great many Buſts, thirty Foot high; this Gentleman likewiſe mentions not a few Palaces ſo far buried in the Ruins, that the Gates were ſunk. He got into ſome of them through the Windows, and came out very diſconſolate to ſee ſo many noble Buildings uninhabited, and Serpents lurking, where Kings uſed to be lodged. * Tacit. lib. 2. Annal. c. 19. Strabo, l. 17. Pliny, l. 5. c. 9, &c. Paul Lucas, Voiage du Levant. See Dioſpolis.

THEODORUS, Biſhop of Perinthus, called Heraclea, a Town of Thrace, was in the Intereſt of Euſebius of Nicomedia. St. Athanaſius ranges him among thoſe, who have been cenſured for Misbehaviour, when Prieſts were afterwards promoted to the Epiſcopal Character by the Arian Faction. Theodorus aſſiſted at the Council of Tyre, and was afterwards one of the Commiſſioners ſent to Mareotis to get Evidence againſt St. Athanaſius. He was likewiſe at the Council of Antioch, and afterwards came to that convened at Sardica, from whence going off with the eaſtern Biſhops, he was depoſed and excommunicated by the weſtern Part of this Synod. He wrote Commentaries upon the Pſalms, upon the Goſpels of St. Matthew and St. John, and upon St. Paul's Epiſtles; in which he makes it his chief Buſineſs to explain the hiſtorical Senſe. There are ſome Fragments of his upon the Goſpels extant in the Catena. Patrum * Athanaſ. Epiſt. ad Solit. Vit. agent. Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. Theodoret. in Dial. Tillemont, Memoires &c. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV.

THEODORUS of Amaſea, born in the Province of Armenia, was a young Soldier at Amaſea when an Edict was publiſh'd againſt the Chriſtians A. D. 306. Theodorus declar'd himſelf a Chriſtian, and being ſeiz'd made a noble Confeſſion of his Faith. As it happen'd he was diſcharged, but being afterwards proſecuted for ſetting Fire to Cybele's Temple, and convicted of the Fact, he was firſt put to the Torture, and then ſentenc'd to the Stake. * Gregor. Nyſſen, vita Theodori. Baillet, Vies des Saints au 9. de Novembre.

THEOTIMUS, a Biſhop of Tomos in Scythia, was at Conſtantinople when St. Epiphanius was there, and being an Origeniſt defended Origen's Writings. He wrote ſome ſhort ſententious Tracts in form of Dialogues. * Hieron, de Script. Eccleſ. Socrat. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 6.

THERAPEUTÆ; ſo Philo Judæus calls thoſe whoſe way of living he deſcribes in his Book de Vita contemplativa: He tells you the chief Buſineſs of theſe Therapeutæ was to contemplate the Deity, that they quitted their Eſtates, Relations, Friends, and Country, to live in ſolitary retired Places; that their chief Reſidence was in the Neighbourhood of Alexandria; that they ſpent their time in Meditation, in Prayer, and in reading the holy Scriptures, and the Writings of their learned Predeceſſors; that they ſung Hymns in their religious Worſhip; that they met every Saturday, which they kept as a great Holiday; that they lived a Life of Frugality and Diſcipline; that their Refreſhments were ſober, and on the lean Side of Temperance; that they ſung Hymns at theſe Entertainments; that at the End of their Meal they had leaven'd Bread and Hyſſop ſprinkled with Salt, in Honor of the Shew Bread Table in the Temple; that the Men and Women were ranged in two Diviſions, and moved ſomewhat in the meaſure of a Dance; that in the Morning, turning their Faces to the Eaſt, they waited the riſing of the Sun, and with their Hands lifted up they begged God Almighty would ſend them a happy Day; that after theſe Devotions they went to their reſpective Seminaries or Cells, and ſpent their time in their cuſtomary Speculations. Now theſe Therapeutæ being mention'd by no Author but Philo, and his Account of them being only general, has made ſucceeding Writers pretty much divided concerning their Religion and Profeſſion. Euſebius perceiving a great Reſemblance between their manner of living and the primitive Chriſtians, reports them Chriſtians; ſeveral of the Fathers, as St. Jerom, St. Epiphanius, Caſſian, Sozomen, go into Euſebius's Sentiment; and ſome have advanced farther, refin'd upon his Conjecture, and fanſy'd theſe Therapeutæ were Monks; Scaliger and Blondel are of Opinion they were Jews, and of the Sect of the Eſſens; Valeſius owns 'em Jews, but denies their being Eſſens. This Opinion has been receiv'd by a great many Criticks; but now lately Dom. Bernard de Mont Faucon, a Benedictin, has reviv'd the old Opinion of the Therapeutæ being Chriſtians; and though he does not affirm them Monks, yet he believes their manner of living was much like that of the old Ægyptian Monks. M. Mont Faucon's Reaſons upon which he founds himſelf falls ſhort of Satisfaction, and ſo are his Anſwers to Valeſius's Conjectures. I ſhall give the Reader a brief Recital of the Grounds he goes upon to prove they were Chriſtians and Monks too. 1. Their throwing up the common Buſineſs of Life, and renouncing the World. 2. The ſpreading their Sect into almoſt all Quarters, and particularly in Ægypt. 3. Their Monaſteries or Seminaries in Ægypt, built in the ſame Places where there was chriſtian Monaſteries in the third Century. 4. Their reading the holy Scriptures. 5. The Subject of their Hymns and the manner of ſinging them. 6. Their Meetings. 7. The Faſhion of their Churches. 8. The Auſterities practis'd by 'em. 9. Their having Prieſts, Deacons, and retired Virgins among them. 10. Their holy Table. 11. Their Morning Devotions with their Faces to the Sun: The Conjectures on the other Side to prove they were no Chriſtians are, 1. Becauſe the Therapeutæ were prior to Chriſtianity, which appears from Philo's reporting their having Books in their Cuſtody, written by the old Doctors of their own Sect. 2. Becauſe the Therapeutæ prayed only twice a Day, whereas the primo-primitive Chriſtians went to their Devotions at nine in the Morning, twelve at Noon, and three in the Afternoon; as we may learn from the Acts of the Apoſtles. 3. That the Cuſtom of Hymns and ſinging does not run up ſo high among the Chriſtians. 4. The Therapeutæ's dancing is altogether foreign from the Practice of the firſt Chriſtians. 5. Philo never calls them Chriſtians, and being a Jew himſelf there is no likelihood of his running a Panegyrick upon Chriſtianity. Thoſe who pretend the Therapeutæ were Eſſens, have only this Proof for their Aſſertion, that amongſt all the Jewiſh Sects, there are none, excepting the Eſſens, which come up to ſo near a Conformity to the Therapeutæ. But in anſwer to this it is objected, that the Beginning of Philo's Book, which comes after that, de Vita activa, where he deſcribes the Eſſens; this Book makes it appear he ſpeaks of another Sect; and if we compare what Philo relates concerning the Therapeutæ's way of living, with Joſephus's Account of the Eſſens, we ſhall find a plain Difference between them: And be-ſides there is no retreating to the Diſtinction of two ſorts of Eſſens, one active, and the other contemplative; for there is nothing in Antiquity to ſupport ſuch a Diſtinction. To decide the Queſtion whether the Therapeutæ were Chriſtians or not, 'twill be neceſſary to premiſe this general Remark, that in order to prove them Chriſtians 'tis not ſufficient to ſhew a Conformity of Practice with the Chriſtians in ſome things; for there have been heathen Philoſophers who have come towards the Reſemblance of the Chriſtians in a great many Inſtances of Practice: This being therefore ſhort of Proof, we muſt look for ſome Characteriſticks in the Therapeutæ peculiar to the Chriſtians, as the Name of Chriſtians, or a Point of Doctrine, which they could not have learn'd unleſs from our Saviour and his Apoſtles, or ſome Practice particular to the chriſtian Religion. Farther, if the Therapeutæ had ſome Cuſtoms uſed among the Chriſtians, they had likewiſe other Uſages practiſed by the Jews; to which we may add, that Philo never calls 'em Chriſtians, though that Name was well known when he wrote: In ſhort, their being thought Chriſtians ſtands only upon Euſebius's Conjecture; the chriſtian Writers who came after him rely only upon his Authority: Photius ſpeaks pretty plainly that he believed them Jews; the firſt Chriſtians had no Monaſteries, nor affected a particular way of living like the Therapeutæ; their keeping the Sabbath, or Saturday; their Veneration for the Number ſeven, and the Force they fanſy'd lodg'd in this Number; their leavened Bread, and their Salt mixed with Hyſſop, in Honour of the Shew Bread Table in the Temple, are Uſages much more ſuited to Judaiſm than Chriſtianity; thus 'tis ſufficiently probable that the Therapeutæ were neither Chriſtians nor Eſſens: What then is this Sect thus particularly deſcribed by Philo, and unmentioned by all other Authors contemporary with him? 'Tis pretty plain theſe Therapeutæ were Jews living in Ægypt, particularly given to Contemplation, upon which Philo runs a Panegyrick, ſwells the Deſcription, and paints beyond the Life, according to his Cuſtom: And this is what comes neareſt Truth in this Queſtion. * Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 6. Hierom. Epiphan. Caſſian. Photius, Biblioth. Scaliger, in Chronic. Blondell, de Sibyllis. Valeſius, Annot. ad Euſeb. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVIII. De Tillemont, Memoires, pour ſervir â l'Hiſt. d'Égliſe. Bernard de Montfaucon, in his Book upon this Subject. Diſſertat. de Du Pin, in his Continuation of the Jewiſh Hiſtory from our Saviour to the preſent time. Lettres anonymes ſur les Therapeutes.

 ſides

THEVENOT (Melchiſedeck,) a celebrated Writer of his Travels. He had ſcarcely gone through his Academical Studies before he had a ſtrong Fancy for travelling; at firſt he ſaw only part of Europe: But then he took care to make an Acquaintance with thoſe, who had been at the fartheſt Part of the old and new World. And to inform himſelf of every remarkable Circumſtance they had met with, forgetting to enquire of nothing relating to the natural Hiſtory of the Country, the Temperature of the Air, the Condition of the Soil, the Mines and Metals, the Spring-Heads and Courſe of the Rivers, the different Kinds of Plants and Animals, the Inclinations and Cuſtoms of the People, their Government, their Commerce and Religion. 'Twas from this Gentleman's Information, and the Memoirs that they put into his Hands, that he wrote his Travels publiſhed about thirty Years ſince; ten Years afterwards he printed a fourth Part, in which he has laid down, among other things, ſome Rules, together with the Invention of an Inſtrument for the better finding out of the Longitude, and the Declination of the Loadſtone. He ſpent his whole Life in collecting ſcarce Books in all Sciences, eſpecially in Philoſophy, Mathematicks, and Hiſtory. When he had the Care of the French King's Library, though it is one of the beſt furniſhed in Europe, he found two thouſand Volumes wanting in it, which he had in his own. Beſides printed Books he bought a great many Manuſcripts in French, Engliſh, Spaniſh, Italian, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Syriak, Arabick, Turkiſh, and Perſick. He read the Manuſcripts of theſe five laſt Languages, underſtood their Propriety, and Elegancy, and engaged one of his Friends to tranſlate ſome of them which were moſt remarkably curious. The Marbles preſented him by Mr. Nointel, at his coming off his Embaſſy at Conſtantinople, upon which there are Baſreliefs, and Inſcriptions of almoſt two thouſand Years Antiquity; theſe, I ſay, may be reckoned among the Curioſities of his Library. He ſpent moſt of his time among his Books without aiming at any Poſt of Figure or Profit. However, he had two honourable Employments: He aſſiſted at a Conclave held after the Death of Pope Innocent X. and was the French King's Envoy at Genoa. He died of a double Tertian October, 1692, in the ſeventy firſt Year of his Age. Journal des Savans Tom. XX. pag. 646.

THIERRI de Niem, a German, Secretary to ſeveral Popes, and afterwards Biſhop of Cambray, wrote the Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes, from the Death of Gregory XI. to the Election of Alexander V. in three Books, to which he added another Book entituled Nemus Unionis, which takes in the Original Inſtruments and Diſcourſes written by both Parties concerning this Schiſm; he likewiſe inſerted an Hiſtorical Account of the Life of Pope John XXIII. in which he gives a Narrative of what paſſed in the Council of Conſtance, till this Pope was depoſed. He alſo wrote a Tract of the Privileges of the Empire, concerning the Inveſtiture of Biſhops and Abbots. This Author's Style is ſomewhat dry and unentertaining; but then it wants neither truth in the Narration, nor Force in the Argument. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XV.

THIERUS (John Baptiſt,) born at Chartres, Batchelor of Divinity, of the Faculty of Paris, and Humanity Profeſſor in that Univerſity. He died in 1693, 60 Years of Age. He affected to write upon Subjects of Singularity, and levelled his Studies in animadverting againſt Abuſes and Criticiſeing upon Authors. Some of his Works ſhall be mentioned; his firſt Diſcourſe printed in Latin in 1660, endeavours to weaken the Force of a Negative Argument; 'tis pointed againſt the famous Launoy; with a Reply to that learned Doctor's Anſwer. In 1673, he wrote a French Tract againſt the Inſcription upon the great Portal of the Cordeliers at Rheims, Deo homini B. Franciſco utrique crucifixo. In 1679 he publiſhed a Tract Concerning Superſtition, and two Years forward another touching incloſing the Nuns. To mention ſome more of his Works, viz. a Tract of Sports and Diverſions; the Hiſtory of Perriwigs; a moral Tract entituled the moſt Subſtantial, and the moſt neglected Part of Devotions; Remarks upon the new Breviary of Cluny, &c. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

THOISSEI, in Latin Toſſiacus, the ſecond Town for Conſideration belonging to the Sovereignty of Dombes: It is ſituated in a fruitful Country, near the River Chalarone, and that of the Saône to the Eaſt. This Town was four times beſieged to no Effect by the Earls and Dukes of Savoy; and being ſtrongly garriſoned, checked the Motions of the Hugenots a great while. But at laſt the Leaguers ſeized it, to hinder the carrying Proviſions up the Saône to Lyons. At the Pacification at Vervins in 1598, the Caſtle, at the Inſtance of the Burghers of Lyons, was demoliſhed. However; the Town is ſtill conſiderable for the Linen Manufacture vented in Spain and other foreign Countries; the Water of the River Charalone is very ſerviceable for making woolen Cloth, Paper and Linen. In 1680 Ann-Mary-Louiſa of Orleans founded a College there, for the whole Principality of Dombes. She ſettled a Principal, with ſeveral other Prieſts formed into a Society, for teaching Grammar, Humanity, Rhetorick, Philoſophy, Mathematicks, and Divinity. Neuvegliſe, Abrégé de l'hiſtoire de la Souveraineté de Dombes.

THOMÆUS (Nicholas Leonicus,) a famous Profeſſor at Padua in the ſixteenth Century. He was a Venetian, and the firſt among the Latins, who explained Ariſtotle in Greek at Padua: He died at this Town in 1535. 75 Years of Age: He wrote ten Dialogues upon curious and conſiderable Subjects, viz. de Divinatione, de nominum inventione, de Ludo talario, de Precibus, de Animarum immortalitate, &c. He likewiſe wrote three Books de varia Hiſtoria. * Bayle, Diction. Critic.

THOMAS DE FOSSE (Peter,) was born at Roan A. D. 1654. He aſſiſted M. M. de Tillemont at Burluguay in writing Church Hiſtory: Afterwards he wrote the Life of Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and his next Work was the Lives of Tertullian and Origen.

Some Years forward he begun a whole Body of the Lives of the Saints; the two firſt Volumes were publiſhed 1685, and another the Year after. This Work is valuable for his judicious Choice of the Matter, and for the Correctneſs and Unction of the Style. He likewiſe wrote an Expoſition upon all the Books of the Old Teſtament, and upon the four Goſpels. * Memoires Hiſtoriques. Couſin, Journal des Savans. Le Clerc, Bibliotheque univerſelle, &c.

THOMASSIN (Lewis,) a Prieſt of the Oratory born at Aix in Provence Auguſt 28 1619: He was extracted from a Family formerly well diſtinguiſhed in the military Profeſſion, and ſince no leſs famous for Eccleſiaſticks and the long Robe. He was bred amongſt the Oratorians, and after having read Lectures of Humanity and Philoſophy in their Congregation, he was made Divinity Profeſſor at Saumur, and brought in the Cuſtom of explaining and proving Points in Divinity from the Scripture, the Fathers, and the Councils. P. Thomaſſin was very indefatigable in his Studies. His Works are an excellent Collection: He wrote with more Eaſe than Elocution both in Latin and French; he was young when the Controverſy of Janſeniſm grew warm, and having not then read St. Auſtin excepting in the Books of Janſenius and his Party, 'tis ſaid he ſlip'd unawares into the Doctrine condemned at Rome under the Name of the five Propoſitions; but as ſoon as he had gone through St. Auſtin's Writings upon this Subject, and found how much Janſenius had miſreported this Father, he made a publick Retractation; and afterwards in his Writings oppoſed Janſeniſm both as to the Queſtion of Fact, and Right. His Works are Diſſertations upon the Councils in Latin; Memoirs upon Grace, ſince enlarged to three Volumes. Dogmata Theologiæ; de Diſciplina Eccleſiaſtica; de Poteſtate Eccleſiaſtica; de Officio Divino; of Feſtivals; of Faſts; of Truth and Lying; of the Unity of the Church; of Communion under both Kinds; of Alms; of Trade, and Uſury. A Dogmatical Tract of the Expedients made uſe of through every Century, for preſerving the Unity of the Church; A Method for ſtudying Philoſophy, prophane Hiſtory and Poetry; an univerſal Hebrew Gloſſary. He died in 1695, in his ſeventy ſeventh Year. * L'Hiſtoire des cinq Propoſitions de Janſenius, imprimée in 12. en 1699. pag. 66. Journal des Savans, Tom. XXIV. Perrault, les hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France.

THREASURE (the publick,) in Latin Ærarium, was the Revenue of the Roman Republick, for furniſhing the Expences through Peace and War, or the civil and military Liſts. The Funds for the War ſettled by Auguſtus Cæſar was called Ærarium militarium, and managed by three Commiſſioners; that part of the Exchequer reſerved for preſſing Occaſions was called Ærarium viceſimarum, or the Branch of the twentieth Penny.

When the Romans were grown ſtrong enough to enlarge their Empire, and ſtretch their Conqueſts to a vaſt Extent, publick Intereſt directed them to diſpoſe abſolutely of the Perſons and Eſtates of thoſe who ſunk in the Conteſt with them. Thus they conveyed all the Gold and Silver, and rich Furniture to Rome, after having diſtributed part of the Booty among the Soldiers. With this Plunder, they ornamented their Triumphs, and then lodged it in the publick Treaſury as a laſting Monument of Victory; they reſerved the Eſtates, and Lands of thoſe they conquered, as Demeſnes to the Roman Republick, and made the Natives no better than Farmers, who were obliged to till the Lands, and pay part of the Iſſues in Rent to their Lords the Romans. Theſe Eſtates for this Reaſon were called Agri vectigales, or Prædia tributaria, & ſtipendiaria. As for the Perſons of the Enemy, thoſe eſpecially who refus'd coming to Articles, and held out to the laſt, they ſold for Slaves. But becauſe the vending ſo many Slaves was ſometimes impracticable, and beſides 'twas by no means for the Benefit of the Republick to unpeople a whole Country, for this Reaſon they frequently gave part of the People their Liberty upon Condition of paying a capitation Tax, an annual Rent, or perſonal Services to the Romans in Acknowledgement of their Sovereignty. This Capitation was aſſeſſed upon all Perſons, without Diſtinction of Sex or Condition; the Males pay'd it from fourteen Years of Age and the Females from twelve, to ſixty five; the Maſters of Families were bound to pay for their Children. The Romans as we may learn, from Pliny, were not diſcharged from paying this Tax, till after Paulus Æmilius had conquer'd Macedonia in the five hundred eighty ſixth Year of Rome. Paulus Æmilius Perſeo Rege Macedonio devicto, &c. ——a quo tempore Populus Romanus tributum pendere deſiit.

This Pole Tax was proportioned to the Revenue of every Perſon; and that the publick might neither loſe nor oppreſs, every four Year all the Perſons within the Empire were regiſtred, and a Valuation of their Eſtates taken by Officers called at firſt Cenſores; and after the Republick was changed to a Monarchy, Cenſitores, Peræquatores, and Inſpectores; becauſe they entered the Names of all the Subjects upon a Regiſter, and took an Account what every one was worth, that they might pay the hundredth Penny every Year in proportion to the Valuation.

From hence we may perceive that the Roman Republick had two ſorts of Tribute or Taxes; one a Pole Tax, and the other a Rent or Quitrent for Eſtate and Land: Cenſus ſive Tributum aliud Prædii, aliud Capitis. They likewiſe paid a Tax for every Head of Cattel, ſomewhat like that called in France, le Pie fourchu.

'Tis not eaſy to make an exact Computation of what theſe three common Taxes, which made the publick Treaſure, amounted to; but 'tis eaſy to conclude this Revenue roſe to an immenſe Sum, becauſe 'twas no leſs than the eighth, or at leaſt the tenth Part of the worth of all thoſe vaſt Provinces, from Hercules's Pillars to the River Euphrates. Several Writers have endeavoured to compute the Sum, but without any Exactneſs.

To this ſettled Revenue we muſt add another fourth, drawn from the Impoſts or Cuſtoms laid upon all ſorts of Proviſions and Commodities; which Cuſtom or Toll was to be paid not only at the Frontiers of the Empire, but at every Sea Port, at the Gates of great Towns and Bridges, Highways and Rivers. This Revenue was not ſo certain as that abovemention'd, but was more or leſs according to the Difference of Places and Commerce; this Cuſtom or Toll moſt commonly amounted to the twentieth Penny, and ſometimes was let down to the fortieth or fiftieth; the leaſt Proportion of all was the hundredth Penny, and the moſt the eighth. Foreign Commodities, which ſerved only for Luxury, Niceneſs, and Figure, were charged with a deeper Cuſtom; Officers and Magiſtrates pay'd nothing for the Proviſions and Goods which were carry'd from one Place to another for their own Uſe.

They had likewiſe another Revenue no leſs conſiderable than the former, which accrued from the Profits of Gold and Silver Mines, and other Metals; to which we may add what came into the Exchequer from the Marſhes and Salt Pits.

From this Recital we may collect in general what were the Funds of the Romans publick Revenue, which was employed to maintain the civil and military Liſts, and anſwer the Exigences of the Government. But the civil Wars having diſturbed the Branches of publick Payments, and exhauſted the Exchequer, and the Commonwealth being ſunk in a Monarchy, this Alteration gave occaſion for a ſupplemental Fund to maintain the Emperor's Court: This turn put Auguſtus upon making a Partition of the Revenues abovementioned, one Share of which he gave the People, and reſerved another for himſelf; thus there were two ſorts of Exchequers, one for the People or the publick, called Ærarium publicum, and the other for the Prince, called Fiſcus: And from hence Authors commonly make a Diſtinction between Ærarium and Fiſcus; tho' others think it no better than a Diſtinction without a Difference, becauſe the Emperor had the Diſpoſal of both Branches; though the Diviſion or Separation of them was kept on foot, to preſerve ſome Remains of ancient Liberty. And now to proceed to the mention of the Method in levying theſe Taxes: At their firſt Conqueſts, and while their Commonwealth ſubſiſted, the Romans ſent a Governor, called a Proconſul, Prætor, or Proprætor, into every Province; the Perſon commiſſioned had this Diſtinction, becauſe he exerciſed the Office, and had the Authority of a Conſul and Prætor throughout the Province. This Magiſtrate had a ſort of Treaſurer in his Train called Quæſtor, who levy'd the publick Money: Theſe two Magiſtrates had a Company of Archers for their Guard, who attended them in the Courts of Juſtice, and levy'd what was aſſeſſed; what was collected was put in Cheſts, and after the Governors and Soldiers were ſubſiſted, and other publick Buſineſs anſwered, the Remainder was ſent to Rome, and lodged in the Exchequer, then kept in Saturn's Temple, and intruſted with a Treaſurer called Præfectus Ærarii; and from hence was iſſued what was neceſſary for the publick Buildings, for exhibiting Spectacles in the Circus and Amphitheatre, for ſubſiſting Fleets and Armies, and entertaining Embaſſadors.

and

This Method of levying Taxes by the Quæſtors or Treaſurers did not always continue. A Cuſtom was at laſt begun to let out the publick Revenues of every Province to Farmers, who commonly took a Leaſe of five Years for a certain Sum, payable every four Months, and for which Payment they gave ſufficient Security. However, this Method made no Alteration in the Governors and Quæſtors of Provinces, who ſtill kept their Poſt, countenanced the Farmers, and took care to ſee the Taxes levy'd; and when any difference happened, they try'd the Cauſe as formerly; 'twas likewiſe part of their Buſineſs to make the Farmers anſwer their Covenants, without any Allowance for Deficiencies, in which caſes the Farmers were to ſtand the Hazard. Theſe Farmers were form'd into Companies, ſome of which had one Branch of the Taxes, and ſome another; ſome farmed the twentieth, ſome the tenth, ſome the eighth, and ſome the hundredth Penny, &c. And thus they are call'd Octavarii, Decimarii, Vigeſimarii, &c.

Theſe Men who farmed the publick Revenues are in Latin Mancipes, Redemptores vectigalium, & Publicani. This laſt Name which was honourable at firſt, as Cicero informs us, grew odious afterwards by the Rigour and Injuſtice of the Perſons employ'd; and for theſe Abuſes Nero had ſuppreſſed the Office, had it not been for the Remonſtrances of the Senate. However, he made theſe Publicans hang up Boards or Plates of Braſs in their Shops, where the rate of every thing taxed was particularly ſpecified.

This Cuſtom of letting the publick Revenues to farm laſted a great while under the Emperors. And thus in their law Books, and eſpecially in the Pandectes there is a Title de publicanis, but after the Seat of the Empire was removed to Conſtantinople, this Method was quite changed for the following; viz. Every Year towards the End of the Summer thoſe who were the prime Miniſters drew up a general State of what was to be levied upon the Subject; and after having divided the Empire into Prætectures or Provinces, and aſſeſſed the Sum every Province was charged with, they diſpatched Commiſſions called Delegationes to the four Lord Lieutenants of the Empire, ſtyled Præfecti Prætorio. Theſe Præfecti had each of them a great many Provinces and likewiſe each Province had a diſtinct Governor.

The Lord Lieutenants having received an Account of the Sum, which was to be levied within their Juriſdiction, ſent diſtinct Commiſſions to each Governor of the Province, and the Governor of the Province ſent the Aſſeſſment to the Magiſtrates of every City and Borough; theſe Magiſtrates they called Decuriones or Aldermen; they were a ſort of Senate or governing Body who took care of the Buſineſs of the Town. Theſe Magiſtrates having received the Order ſpecifying how much was to be levied, were obliged to nominate ſome of their own Body to make an Aſſeſſment of what every one was to pay; for which Reaſon theſe Aſſeſſors were called Peræquatores, or Diſcuſſores. When the Tax was thus adjuſted, the Town-Clark entered it upon a Roll, that every Body might underſtand his Proportion, and pay it to authoriſed Collectors, called Suſceptores; the Money thus raiſed was part of it firſt diſtributed to ſubſiſt the Officers and detray the Expences of the Provinces, and the reſt was ſent to the Treaſury at Rome, and lodg'd in the Cuſtody of the high Treaſurer, called under the firſt Emperors Præfectus Ærarii, and after Conſtantine Comes Sacrarum Largitionum; or elſe it was convey'd to the Prince's private Coffers, and entruſted with a Perſon called Comes rei privatæ, or the privy Purſe.

Theſe were the cuſtomary Methods practiſed in the Roman Empire for levying Capitations and Taxes upon Perſons and Lands in the Conquered Provinces. As for the Impoſts at the Cuſtom-Houſes and Toll-Houſes they were levied at Seaport Towns, and when People brought or carried Commodities into, or out of Towns: And for this they had Farmers on purpoſe, and ſettled Rates * Cicer. Orat. pro Manilio. Sueton. in vit. Veſpaſ. Digeſt. Cod. Theod. Roſinus. Danet.

THURTHUR, a Country with the Title of an Earldom in Upper Hungary. It lies between the Theyſſe and the Berethon, which Rivers bound it on the South, Weſt, and Eaſt. And the County or Earldom of Kalo lies to the North of it. Its Extent is not great, and the Town Thurthur is the Capital * Maty, Diction.

THUS, a Town of Perſia in the Province of Chorazan: Some Geographers take it for the Town anciently called Antiochia Margiana, Alexandria, and Seleucia. * Baudrand.

THYATIRA, a Town of Lydia in Aſia minor, upon the River Hillus; 'twas formerly an epiſcopal See, ſuffragant to the Archbiſhop of Sardis; the Turks call it Akkiſas, that is to ſay, the white or new Caſtle; 'tis at preſent inhabited by about ſix thouſand Turks and a few Chriſtians: It ſtands in a Plain where there are a great many Remains of Antiquity. St. John wrote a Letter to the Biſhop of this Town. * Revelations, chap. 2. Baudrand. Harduin's Notes upon Pliny.

THYRSO, Torſo, the biggeſt River in Sardinia; it riſes in the eaſtern Part of the Iſland, and falls at the weſtern into the Gulph of Oriſtagni, after having run by the Towns Gociana and Solaroſſa. * Maty, Diction.

TIBERIUS (Alexander,) Son of Alexander, Alabarcha of Alexandria, and Nephew to Philo Judæus. He quitted the Jews Religion and turned Heathen, and it may be in Complaiſance to the Roman Emperor, who ſoon after gave him the Government of Judæa, when Cuſpius Fadus left it: He acquitted himſelf honourably in this Poſt. There happened a great Famine at Jeruſalem while he was Governour, which had well nigh ſtarved the whole Country, if Helena, Queen of the Adiabenians, and her Son Izates lately proſelyted to the Jewiſh Religion, had not ſeaſonably ſupply'd the Jews with Corn and Money. Tiberius crucify'd James and Simon, Sons to Judas Galilæus, who when Cyrenius order'd all the People's Names to be entered upon a Regiſter, hurry'd the Jews into an Inſurrection. About this time Tiberius's Father dy'd at Alexandria, and declar'd him his Succeſſor in the Office of Alabarcha: And now he reſigned the Government of Judæa to Cumanus: And here we are to obſerve that from the Death of Alexander the Great the Jews of Alexandria, always enjoy'd equal Privileges with the Greeks, in Conſideration of the Service they had done that Prince in his War with the Ægyptians: But now it ſeems theſe Advantages and Immunities were conteſted; the Buſineſs went thus; the Greeks of Alexandria reſolving to diſpatch Agents to Nero about their own Affairs, ſome Jews grew jealous of the matter; and fanſying this Deputation was concerted againſt their Privileges, they thought it moſt adviſeable to ſend ſome of their own People among them to obſerve their Motions: The Greeks on the other Side were apprehenſive that the Jews went along with them only to lie croſs to their Deſigns; for this Reaſon they bid them retire; but not prevailing by Perſuaſion, they dragged three of them along the Streets as if they intended to burn 'em alive. The other Jews ruffled to ſee their Countrymen thus outraged, pelted the Græcians with Stones, and run directly with Torches in their Hands to ſet the Amphitheatre on fire, where Abundance of People were got together; this had certainly been done, if Tiberius Alexander had not run immediately thither. He entreated them with his cuſtomary good Humour not to fly out into Sedition, which would provoke the Romans to the laſt Degree, might draw fatal Conſequences upon them; and over and above, he promiſed to do them Juſtice: But they were ſo far from Obedience and diſperſing, that they made a Jeſt of what was ſaid, and inſulted him. The Governor, as might eaſily be expected, grew very angry at this Inſolence; and to check the Inſurrection, ordered two Roman Legions, and five thouſand Libyan Troops, then garriſoned in the Town, to charge theſe Mutineers: But all this proved inſufficient to quaſh this Sedition. Tiberius therefore being being forced upon a ſtronger Expedient, ordered all his Troops to march to Delta, to plunder the Jews, to ſet Fire to their Houſes, and put them all to the Sword. Theſe Orders were executed, fifty thouſand Jews were cut off, and the Carnage had gone farther, if Tiberius had not told his Men they had done enough. This happened in the twelfth Year of Nero's Reign; and at the breaking out of the Jewiſh War againſt the Romans. Tiberius's Loyalty, Courage, and other commendable Qualities, made him much valued by the Roman Emperors. And being a Perſon who underſtood military Buſineſs very well, Titus made him a Lieutenant General at the Siege of Jeruſalem. And here Tiberius ſerved him very ſignificantly with his Advice, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf very honourably in Action. * Joſeph. Antiquit. lib. 20. cap. 3. & de Bell. Judaic. lib. 2. cap. 36. & lib. 5. cap. 6.

TICHONIUS, flouriſh'd in the fifth Century in the Reign of Theodoſius the Great, and in that of his Son, and was contemporary with Ruffinus and St. Auguſtin. He was a Donatiſt of Parts, and was reckoned a good Expoſitor of the literal Senſe of the Scriptures. He wrote a Tract where he lays down ſeven Rules for a Commentator. St. Auguſtin has abridg'd this Diſcourſe in his third Book de Doctrina Chriſtiana. Tichonius likewiſe wrote three Books de Bello inteſtino, and a Narrative, in which he cites ſeveral old Councils in Defence of his Party. We have nothing of his extant but his Book de ſeptem Regulis, publiſhed by Schottus, and inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum. * Gennad. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

TIDOR, an Iſland in the eaſtern Ocean; 'tis one of the Molucca's ſituated near the weſtern Extremity of Gilolo, between Ternate and Motier. 'Tis not more than twelve Leagues in Circumference, but affords Abundance of Spice, and eſpecially Cloves. The Dutch have ſome Forts there; however the Country has a King of its own, who is likewiſe Maſter of part of the Iſland Gilolo. The Town Tidor is the Capital, and gives it's Name to the Iſland. * Maty, Diction.

TIENCHEU, a Town within the Province of Quanſi in China. It has four other great Towns under it's Juriſdiction, and belongs to the King of Tunquin. * Baudrand.

TIENLICA, is a Country of the Indian Peninſula on this Side the Ganges; 'tis ſituate upon the eaſtern Side of the Kingdom of Biſnagar, where it confines upon the Kingdom of Golconda. Tienlica takes its Name from the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

TIEPOLI (Bajamond,) Son to a Doge of Venice, formed a Deſign to overturn the Conſtitution, and make himſelf a Monarch: But the Plot being diſcovered, the Republick drew a Body of Troops to Venice, and defeating his Men in St. Mark's Square, ſeiz'd his Perſon, and puniſhed his Accomplices. * Egnatius, lib. 3. cap. 5.

TIGRIS; for it ſeparates Syria from Meſopotamia in Morery Vol. II. read it ſeparates Aſſyria.

TIL (Solomon van,) a famous Divinity Profeſſor at Leyden, was born at Weſop a ſmall Town two Leagues from Amſterdam. He was extracted from an ancient Family, originally of the Duchy of Cleves. He was a voluminous Writer; Some of his Latin Works are Methodus concionandi, & Methodus ſtudendi. Phoſphorus Propheticus, ſeu Moſis & Habacuci Vaticinia, &c. Diſſertatio paradoxa Theologico-Chronologica de anno, menſe, & die nati Chriſti. Malachias illuſtratus, &c. Cui accedit Diſſertatio ſingularis Geopraphico-Theologica, de ſitu Paradiſi Terreſtris. Theologiæ utriuſque compendium, cum naturalis tum revelatæ, una cum appendice de Origine Controverſiarum, &c. He died October 1713. * Memoires Manuſcrit.

TILLEMONT (Lewis-Sebaſtian le Nain de,) a Prieſt born at Paris November 30, 1637. His Father was John le Nain, Maſter of the Court of Requeſt, a very worthy Magiſtrate, of a lively and penetrating Genius, inflexibly juſt, and exemplarily religious. Lewis-Sebaſtian le Nain, commonly known by the Name of M. de Tillemont, was no leſs remarkable for Probity and Religion than the reſt of his Family. He ſpent the whole Courſe of his Life from firſt to laſt in religious Exerciſes. He kept himſelf diſengaged from Intereſt and Ambition, and apply'd himſelf wholly to the writing Church Hiſtory. But this Subject being too extenſive for a ſingle Perſon, eſpecially for one ſo ſcrupulous and exact as himſelf: For this Reaſon he drew his Plan leſs, and confined himſelf to the ſix firſt Centuries; which, though the richeſt, is, it may be, the moſt rugged and ſlippery Ground to go upon. And being ſenſible that Providence in making the Members of the Church ſubject to the ſecular Powers, deſigned the Events of prophane Hiſtory ſhould be interwoven with thoſe of the Church; and that therefore a Church Hiſtorian ought to conform himſelf to this Order, and not undertake to go to the bottom of the one without diſentangling the other. Upon this view he publiſh'd his Hiſtory of the Emperors before his Memoirs for Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. The matter of both theſe learned and large Performances is extracted from original Authors, and oftentimes in their own Terms; their Senſe is always exactly preſerved, ranged in order, and judiciouſly remarked. M. Tillemont's Memoirs have beeen ſerviceable to a great many learned Perſons, who have publiſhed new Editions of St. Cyprian, St. Hilary, St. Ambroſe, St. Auguſtin, St. Paulinus, and a great many others. M. Tillemont's Modeſty was ſuch as to conceal this Circumſtance. He ſerved his Friends very frankly with his Learning, but it was upon condition not to make him any Acknowledgment. Notwithſtanding his great Reading and Judgment he gives his Sentiment with Diſtruſt, and is never dogmatical and deciſive. At laſt being worn up with Study and Mortification, he dy'd January 10, 1698, a little more than ſixty Years of Age. His Memoirs for Church Hiſtory are ſixteen Quarto's, and his Hiſtory of the Emperors ſix. His Hiſtory conſiſts of the Saints Lives, of famous Men, of Emperors, of the Hiſtory of Hereſies, ranged under diſtinct Titles, and interwoven with the Paſſages of old Authors, and ſometimes moderns; and all done with Perſpicuity and Connexion: He has ſubjoin'd critical Notes at the End of every Volume, which are remarkably exact and judicious. He is modeſt in his Expreſſions, faithful in his Citations, reſerved in his Determinations, and makes his Remarks upon reaſonable and ſatisfactory Grounds. His Work is very ſerviceable both for Knowledge and Edification. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* TILLET (John de,) Biſhop of St. Brieu. He had a Brother called Lewis de Tillet, Canon of Angoulême, who entertained Calvin, who had been their Tutor. This Lewis turn'd Calviniſt, went to Geneva, and ſtay'd there ſome time; but afterwards returned into France, and dy'd a Roman Catholick. He wrote the Education of a chriſtian Prince, a Book ſhewing when the French Kings are Majors; a Memoir concerning the Liberties of the Gallican Church; an abridg'd Hiſtory of the Albigenſes; an Epitome of the Hiſtory of the French Kings. The Biſhop's Works are, a Tract concerning the chriſtian Religion; an Anſwer to the Calviniſtical Miniſters; Advice to miſled Gentlemen; a Diſcourſe concerning the Antiquity and Solemnity of the Maſs; a Tract upon the Apoſtles Creed. He likewiſe publiſhed the Apoſtles Canons, and thirteen Councils in Greek, St. Matthew's Goſpel in Hebrew; Lucifer Calaritanus's Works; Pacianus's Exhortation to Repentance, and the Caroline Books. He likewiſe wrote a Chronicle of the French Kings, from Pharamond to Henry IV. and a Book entituled, Inſtances of ſome Popes Conduct and Behaviour, compared with thoſe of heathen Princes. * Thuanus, Hiſt. Poſſevin, in Appar. Biblioth. Sainte-Marthe, in Elog. l. 2. Du Verdier, & la Croix du maine, Biblioth. Franc.

TIMAVO, a River within the Republick of Venice. It has nine Spring-Heads near the Town St. Giovanni, on the Frontiers of Iſtria and Friuli, and falls into the Gulph of Trieſte, between the Town Trieſte and the Mouth of the River Lizonſo. * Baudrand.

TINTORET (James Robuſti,) a famous Painter born at Venice in 1512. His Father was a Dyer, from which Buſineſs his Son had the Name of Tintoret. When a Child, he was perpetually drawing upon the Walls with Charcoal or dye Stuff. His Parents obſerving his Diverſion, reſigned him to his Genius, and put him to Titian. His ſtrong Inclination made him quickly outſtrip thoſe of his Age: And ſoon after he came to his Maſter, his Paintings made every Body wonder. Titian himſelf grew jealous of him, and perceiving by his drawing he would make a great Maſter, he parted with him for fear he might ſomewhat diſſerve his own Reputation. Tintoret, piqued with this Diſcharge, reſolv'd to exert himſelf. However, the Affront he had received did not make him undervalue Titian's Pencil: He ſtill reſolv'd to imitate his Manner, and Deſign from the Statues of the famous Michael Angelo. And that he might not go off from theſe great Maſters, he wrote upon the Walls of his Cloſet the Rule he intended to follow, in theſe Words, Il diſegno di Michel Angelo, il colorito di Titiano: Michael Angelo's drawing, and Titian's colouring. Tintoret ſucceeded in both theſe Parts of Painting. The Strength of his Genius, and his great Application, made him one of the greateſt Painters in Italy: His chief Care was firſt to ſtudy Nature, and then heighten it by Art. He commonly drew from the Life, and was particularly buſy in examining the Poſition of the Muſcles and Nerves in dead Bodies. By this Information he was prepared to place his Figures exactly, and give them proper and entertaining Poſtures. At laſt, Genius, Practice, and Care, made his Reputation run ſo high, that when the Confraternity of St. Roch deſigned to have a Piece of Painting in their Church, they pitch'd upon Tintoret, Paul Veroneſe, Andrew Schiavon, Joſeph Salviati, and Frederick Zucchero, to ſhew each of them their Drawings, that they might chuſe one whom they lik'd beſt. Each of them bringing what they had done, Tintoret finiſhed a large Picture in the time that the reſt had only drawn a Sketch. Thoſe who have ſeen this Painter's Performances at Venice are much ſurprized at the Speed and Niceneſs of his Pencil. He was more afraid of failing in the drawing than in the colouring. Some of his finiſh'd Pieces are two and fifty Foot high in the the Church of la Madona dell' horto, one of which repreſents the golden Calf, and the other the laſt Judgment; that which is called at Venice Miraclo del Servo, which in a Square of twenty Foot repreſents a Miracle wrought by St. Mark upon a Servant, who becauſe contrary to his Maſter's Pleaſure, he had made a Viſit to this Evangeliſt's Relicts, had his Eyes pulled out, and his Legs broke. Another of his fine Pieces is the Aſſumption, the Crucifixion of our Saviour; and ſome other Portraits done for the Confraternity of St. Roch, the Siege of Zara, formed by Mark Juſtiniani, after this Town had renounced the Venetians Government, and received a Garriſon of Lewis King of Hungary; and here we muſt not forget the great Picture thirty Foot high, and teventy four Foot broad: It ſtands at the great Palace in Venice, and was the Admiration of the whole Town. He made Portraits of a great many Princes and Noblemen; and particularly Henry III. King of France ſat to him, at his paſſing through Venice in his Return from Poland. Tintoret dy'd in 1594, 82 Years of Age. * Ridoſi, Vit. de Pittor. Part. I. Pag. 3, &c. Felibien, Entret. des Peintres. Tom. 1.

TIRINUS (James,) a Jeſuit of Antwerp living in the ſixteenth and ſeventeenth Centuries. He wrote a Commentary upon all the Bible: 'Tis an Extract from the beſt of other Commentators. He does not inſiſt upon the explaining every Word, and marking the different Readings; but makes it his Buſineſs to open the true Meaning of the Text according to the received Interpretation of the Fathers and Expoſitors. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

TIROS, originally of the Franche-Comté, who deſerves to be remember'd only for one of the greateſt Eaters of his Age. Mr. de Bonvalot, Abbot of Luxen who would not believe what was reported of him, ſaw him one Day eat up a whole roaſted Sheep in leſs than an Hour, with only a penny Loaf with it. At the ſame time he drank off three Pints of Wine Paris Meaſure. The Abbot had afterwards ſuch an Averſion for his Swallow, that he would never ſee the Face of him. * Goulart en ſes Hiſtoir. Admirab.

TISSAPHERNES, one of the chief Perſian Noblemen in the Reign of Artaxerxes, commanded this Prince's Army, when Cyrus, Artaxerxes's Brother, gave him Battel. The Victory was wholly owing to him by his maintaining the Fight when Artaxerxes was wounded. To reward his Service Artaxerxes made him his Son in Law, and gave him the Government of that Country where Cyrus had commanded before. Tiſſaphernes afterwards happening to loſe a Battel in Aſia minor, againſt Ageſilaus the Lacedemonian General, fell under Artaxerxes's Diſpleaſure, and was ſlain by this Princes's Order at Coloſſe in Phrygia. * Xenophon, Hiſt.

* TITUS, St. Paul's Diſciple. This Apoſtle carried him with him to Jeruſalem, A. D. 51, when the Council was held in this City: And at this time it was that ſome new Jewiſh Converts, would have had him circumciſed, which St. Paul would not ſuffer. Afterwards he attended St. Paul at Epheſus, from whence this Apoſtle ſent him to Corinth A. D. 56, to quiet the Diſturbances occaſioned by the Schiſm in that Church. He ſucceeded to St. Paul's Expectation in his Negotiation, and returned to the Apoſtle who had now ſailed from Troas to Macedonia. He informed him in what Condition he had left the Church at Corinth, and gave him an Account of the Charity collected to be ſent to Jeruſalem. St. Paul diſpatched him back to Corinth, where after ſome ſtay, he kept with him about ſix Years, till St. Paul left Rome A. D. 63, and embarquing for the Levant touched at Crete, and put the Government of the Churches there in Titus's Hands. Some time after St. Paul writ to him to meet him at Nicopolis, and afterward ſent him to Dalmatia. After St. Paul's Death he returned to Crete, and ſpent the reſt of his Days there. He is ſuppoſed to have lived to a great Age. The Latins keep his Feſtival on the fourth of January, and the Greeks the twenty fifth of Auguſt. Acts. Epiſt. to Titus. Euſeb. Hiſt Eccleſ. Hierom. de Script. Eccleſ. Baronius, in Annal. & Martyrol.

TOCAT, formerly called Neo Cæſarea and Hadrianopolis. A Town of Natolia in Aſia; It ſtands in the Province of Amaſia, upon the River Caſalmach, about three and thirty Leagues from the Town Amaſia to the Eaſt. 'Tis a large populous City, and an Archiepiſcopal See. Tavernier reports it the Reſidence of the Baſhaw of Siwas; but others affirm Tocat and Siwas diſtinct Governments. * Maty, Diction.

TOCAYMA, a ſmall Town on the Continent of Southern America. It ſtands in the Kingdom of New Granada at the Confluence of the River Pati and Maudlin, about twenty Leagues from S. Fe de Bogota, to the Weſt. Near this Town, there is the Volcano of Tocayma, which is a Mountain that throws up Flame. * Maty, Diction.

TOINARD (Nicholas,) born at Orleans 1627, and deſcended from one of the beſt Families there. He began with the Study of Languages and Hiſtory, and held it to the End of his Life. He is reckoned one of the beſt Antiquaries of this Age, and was much eſteemed for his Learning and Candor. Notwithſtanding his great Reading and Study he printed very little. He wrote a new Concordance in Greek for the four Evangeliſts; but this Work though done with great Exactneſs and Curioſity, was not publiſhed till a Year after his Death. We have nothing more printed with his Name to it, excepting a little Book, of Latin Annotations upon Lactantius de mortibus perſecutorum, where he handles ſome Chronological Queſtions; and two ſmall Diſſertations upon Medals. However there is a ſmall anonymous French Tract reckoned to him, with Remarks upon the Verſion of the New Teſtament, done by P. Bouhours, and that of Mons, where in a very genteel way he diſcovers a great many Faults in Bouhours Verſion, and diſagrees in ſome Paſſages with that of Mons. However, he never owned theſe Animadverſions, though they are not unworthy his Pen, M. Toinard is ſomewhat blamed for keeping many of his curious Diſcoveries to himſelf. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

TOLNA, a Town in Lower Hungary, Capital of the Earldom of Tolna: It ſtands upon the Danube four Leagues below Colocza. The County of Tolna lies between the Counties of Pilſen, Zigeth, Baraniwar, and the Danube. There is nothing conſiderable in it, except the Capital. * Baudrand.

TOLU, a City in the Province of Cartagena, within Caſtello del Oro, in Southern America: It ſtands twelve Leagues from the Town Carthagena to the South Weſt, and ſix Leagues from the Sea: The Soil produces Plenty of all ſorts of Fruits and Plants which grow in Spain. Particularly it furniſhes the excellent Balſam, called the Balſam of Tolu, which is gotten by making a gaſh in a Tree, which is like a ſmall Pine Tree. The Indians Cleave the Bark, which is thin and tender, and then receive the Liquor, in Spoons made of black Wax, and and put it in Veſſels prepared for that purpoſe. The Balſam is red inclining to a gold Colour. 'Tis ſtrong and ſweet ſcented, and has an agreeable Taſte. Laët Hiſtory of the New World.

TOMMASSI (Joſeph Mary,) eldeſt Son to the Duke of Palma. Notwithſtanding the Advantage of his Birth he retired from the World, and entered into the Order of the Theatins, where he practiſed great Auſterities, and Self-denial; and to do him Juſtice his Learning was no leſs remarkable than his Piety. He underſtood Greek, Hebrew, Chaldee, Philoſophy and Pagan Learning: But his chief Study was the Scriptures and Divinity, and particularly the liturgick part of that Learning. Pope Clement XI. as 'tis ſaid, forced him to accept a Cardinal's Cap, May 18. 1712. And though he lived with this Honour little more than ſix Months, he gave away four thouſand Crowns to the Poor. His Works are as follow; Codices Sacramentorum nongentis annis vetuſtiores. Romæ in 4. 1680. Pſalterium juxta duplicem Editionem Romanam & Gallicanam, cum Canticis, Hymnario, & Orationali. ibid. in 4. 1683. Pſalterium cum Canticis verſibus priſco more diſtinctum, argumentis & orationibus vetuſtis novaque literali explicatione breviſſima dilucidatum, ibid. in 4. 1697. Reſponſorialia & Antiphonaria Romanæ Eccleſiæ a Sancto Gregorio Magno diſpoſita, cum appendice monumentorum veterum & Scholiis; ibid in 4. 1686. Sacrorum Bibliorum Tituli, ſive Capitula ante mille annos in Occidente uſitata; ibid. in 4. 1688 Antiqui Libri Miſſarum Romanæ Eccleſiæ, id eſt Antiphonarius Sancti Gregorii Papæ, Comes ab Alpino commendatus & Capitulare Evangeliorum; ibid. in 4. 1696. Officium Dominicæ Paſſionis feria ſexta Paraſceve majoris hebdomadæ ſecundum ritum Græcorum, nunc primum latinè editum; ibid. in 8. 1695. Indiculus Inſtitutionum Theologicarum veterum Patrum; ibid. in 4. 1702. Inſtitutiones Theologicæ antiquorum Patrum, quæ aperto ſermone exponunt breviter Theologiam, ſive Theoreticam ſive practicam, Tomus primus; ibid. in 8 1702. This Book contains Tertullian's Preſcriptions, Vincentius Lirinenſis his Commonitorium, and two Orations of S. Gregory Nazianzen, upon that Moderation, which ought to be obſerved in Theological Controverſies; the other is that Father's firſt Theological Oration, &c. This Cardinal died December 31. 1712. 63 Years of Age. * Memoires de Trévoux, Février. 1714.

TORNA, or Tornaw, a ſmall Town in Upper Hungary. 'Tis ſix Leagues from Caſſovia to the Weſt, and the Capital of the ſmall Country of Torna, which lies between the Countries of Abanwivar, Gevinar, Gomor, and Barſod. * Maty, Diction.

TORNIEL (Auguſtin,) was born at Novarro in 1543, and was profeſſed a Barnabite at twenty ſix Years of Age. He endeavoured to diſintangle the difficulties in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, from the beginning of the World to the Incarnation, and to digeſt the Work into Annals. He is the firſt who has drawn up this Work into Length, and handled it with Exactneſs. And this not only with reſpect to Hiſtory; but he clears up the Difficulties in Chronology, Geography, Topography. And likewiſe explains the Rites and Cuſtoms, which occur in Hiſtory: Inſomuch that he deſerves the Character of an excellent Commentator upon the Books of the Old Teſtament. His Style is unornamented, but clear, and methodical. Torniel died in 1622. His Work has been printed at Millan, Francfort, and Antwerp. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

TORRE DE MONCORVO, a large Town of Portugal in the Province of Tra-los-Montes. It ſtands at the Confluence of the Rivers Sabor and Douro, eleven Leagues from Samego to the Eaſt. * Baudrand.

TORTUE, the Iſland of Tortue, ſituate between the twentieth and one and twentieth Degree of northern Latitude, upon the Edge of the great Iſland S. Domingo: It is ſo called becauſe the Figure of it reſembles a Tortoiſe. 'Tis about ſixteen Leagues in Circumference, and every way inacceſſible, excepting on the South Side, where there is a Canal which parts it from the Iſland Hiſpaniola, where there is a good Haven both for Depth and Shelter. The Haven is commanded by a good Fort. There is likewiſe a Battery upon the Shore where the Guns are planted againſt the Haven. There is only a ſmall Town call'd la Baſſe Terre, where there are Tradeſmen's Shops and little Alehouſes. Blondell, the French King's Engineer, being at the Antillæ in 1667, went to Tortue, where he ſtruck out a Plan for a new Fort; but his Draught was not well executed. There are ſix Quarters of this Iſland inhabited, viz. Baſſe Terre, Cayone, &c. The Country where 'tis planted, affords all ſorts of Fruits, which are the Growth of the Antillæ, for the Soil is very good. The Hills are all perfect Rock as hard as Marble, and yet Trees grow upon them as big as moſt in Europe. The Roots of theſe Trees lie all bare, and run upon the Rocks, and claſp only in the Hollows and uneven Places. The Wood of the Trees which grow in this manner is very dry; inſomuch that as ſoon as 'tis cut the Sun ſplits it in a great many pieces, and makes it good for nothing but Fuel. The Country produces Tobacco of the beſt Kind. The Sugar-Canes are extraordinary large, and the Juice of them richer, and more homogeneous than elſewhere. There are likewiſe a great many ſort of Trees, and Medicinal Plants, but there is little Game for hunting: for the wild Boars there, were brought from the great Iſland S. Domingo. There are ſome little Birds, Fiſh, and Reptils of very particular Kinds. Amongſt other living Rarities, there are Camelions which change as far as three or four Colours, that is from black to white, and from red to an iron Colour, but then they don't alter to all Variety of Colours, as ſeveral have written, and as 'tis commonly believed. Farther, there is a Tree of a poiſonous Quality grows there, the Leaves reſemble thoſe of a wild Laurel: It bears Apples of a beautiful Colour, and pleaſant Taſte. The poiſon in them is ſo very ſtrong, that when any of them fall into the Sea, they kill the Fiſh that chop at them. Thoſe who come firſt out of Europe, are frequently deſtroy'd by theſe Apples; for the Fruit is tempting both to Sight and Smell, ſo that thoſe that do not know them are apt to venture. If any one ſleeps under this Tree, or handles any of the Branches, he is preſently troubled with red Bliſters which are not eaſily cured. This Iſland is planted with a Colony of French, who have a Governour of that Nation. * Wytfliet, of the Weſt Indies. P. du Tertre, Hiſtoire des Antilles. Oexmelin, Hiſtory of the Adventurers.

TOTAY, a City of India bevond the Ganges. 'Tis the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, and ſtands upon the River Chœor, near the Lake of Chiamay, upon the Frontiers of the Mogul's Dominions * Maty, Diction.

* TOUL; for 659. in Morery Vol. II. read 859.

TOURNEFORT (Joſeph Pittowde,) was born at Aix in Provence, June 1656: His Father was Peter Pittow, Lord of the Mannor of Tournefort; his Mother was Aimere de Fagouë, deſcended from a Gentleman's Family at Paris. He diſcovered from his Childhood a ſtrong Genius for Botany, Anatomy, and Chymiſtry: And therefore, notwithſtanding he was deſigned for Divinity, yet upon his Father's Death he was left to his own Inclinations. He went ſimpling to the Mountains of Dauphiné and Savoy, through Provence, Languedoc, the Alps, and Pyrenæan Mountains. He travelled likewiſe into Portugal, Holland, and England, where he found new Plants, and made an Acquaintance with ſeveral famous Botaniſts. Mr. Herman the celebrated Botanick Profeſſor at Leyden, offered to reſign his Chair to him, but he choſe to ſettle in France, where he was made a Member of the Academy of Sciences. His Works are Elemens de Botanique, ou Méthode pour connoitre les Plantes, printed at the Louvre in three Volumes in 8vo. This Book though well received by moſt of the learned, was attacked in ſome Points by Mr. Ray, the famous Engliſh Botaniſt and natural Philoſopher: To this Gentleman's Exceptions M. Tournefort made a Reply in Latin. The Conteſt was genteely managed on both Sides. In 1698, he publiſhed his Hiſtory of Plants which grow about Paris, with the uſe of them in Phyſick. Another Book may be reckoned to him, or at leaſt part of it. It is entituled Schola Botanicæ ſive Catalogus Plantarum, quæ ab aliquot annis in Horto Regio Pariſienſi Studioſis indigitavit Vir Clariſſimus Joſephus Pitton de Tournefort, Doctor Medicus; ut & Pauli Hermanni Paradiſi Batavi Prodromus, &c. Amſtelodami 1699. One Simon Warton an Engliſh Man, who had ſtudied Botany in the French King's Garden under M. Tournefort tranſlated his his Elemens de Botanique into Latin, with enlargements The Title is Inſtitutiones Rei Herbariæ, three Volumes in 4^to^; the firſt part gives the Name of the Plants, ranged by the Authors Syſtem; and in the other two the Figures of them are all furniſhed with very good Cuts. To this Tranſlation there is prefixed a large Preface, or Introduction to Botany, which contains the Principles of Tournefort's Syſtem, ingeniouſly and ſolidly ſettled, together with a Hiſtory of Botany, and Botaniſts carefully collected, and entertainingly written. His Inclination for Plants, did not check him from enquiring into other Curioſities of Nature, ſuch as Stones with various Figures upon them, Marcaſſites, Petrifications, and Cryſtalliſations, when extraordinary; to which we may add a Collection of Shells of all Kinds. In the Year 1700, he was ordered by the French King to travel into Greece, Aſia, and Africk, not only in queſt of Plants mentioned by ancient Writers, but likewiſe to make Obſervations relating to natural Hiſtory, to old and modern Geography, and likewiſe to remark the Diſpoſitions and Cuſtoms, the Religion, and Trade amongſt thoſe People. Mr. Tournefort in Company with Mr. Gundelſheimer, an excellent German Phyſician, and Mr. Aubriet, a good Painter, went as far as the Frontiers of Perſia, ſimpling and making Obſervations all the Way. He made as little of his Voyage by Sea as poſſible, and travelled out of the common Roads on purpoſe to meet with more Plants. He deſigned to go to Africk, but the Plague being then at Ægypt, he came from Smyrna to France in 1702. The Diſcoveries he had made in the vegetable World, furniſhed matter for his Book entituled Corollarium Inſtitutionum Rei Herbariæ, printed in 1703. At his coming home he practiſed Phyſick again, was Profeſſor in that Faculty, and had the Direction of the French King's Garden as before. He overlaid himſelf with Study, and beſides had the Misfortune of a violent Blow on his Breaſt, which haſtened his Death. He died December 28, 1708. By his laſt Will and Teſtament he left his Cloſet of Curioſities to the King, for the uſe of the learned, and his Botanick Books to the Abbot Bignonius. His Travels were printed at the Louvre in two Volumes 4^to^. The firſt before his Death and his ſecond after. Hiſtoire de l'Academie Royale des Sciences, de l'an 1701. pag. 174. & deinc. Edition de Hollande.

TOURNEMINE, an ancient and illuſtrious Family of Bretagne, which, according to a Tradition in this Province, derives it's Original from a Prince of the Houſe of Anjou, Son of Jeffery Plantagenet Earl of Anjou, and Brother to Henry II. King of England. Francis Tournemine, the Baron of Camſillon, and the fourteenth in Deſcent, ſerved King Henry III. and King Henry IV. with great Fidelity. His Loyalty made him loſe great part of his Eſtate, and amongſt the reſt his Caſtle of Camſillon, which after a long Siege was taken and demoliſhed by the Spaniſh Garriſon of Croiſie. Thus he hazarded himſelf and his Fortune againſt the Leaguers for the Service of King Henry IV. notwithſtanding this Prince was then a Calviniſt, and himſelf a Roman Catholick: This was living by his Father Peter II's Principle, who notwithſtanding his being a French Proteſtant, fought for the Roman Catholick French Kings againſt his Countrymen, tho' of his own Religion. Francis Tournemine dy'd at the Camp of Amiens, whither he had brought the King a Reinforcement of five hundred Gentlemen at his own Charge A. D. 1597. * Argentre, Hiſtoire de Bretagne, &c.

TOURNEMINE (Renatus,) the ſecond of this Name, of the Branch of Coitmur, Baron of Hunaudaye, Knight of the King's Order, and Lieutenant General of his Forces in Bretagne: He made his firſt Campaign in Piemont under the Marſhal Briſſac, and ſerved in the Field through five Reigns, with extraordinary Bravery and Conduct. In the Year 1574, when at the Siege of Luſignan, the Rebels making a Sally, and puſhing the King's Troops as far as the Batteries, he ſtood almoſt ſingle againſt them, broke their Charge, ſaved the Artillery, and drove them back into the Town. Afterwards he was employed to recover the Town of Rochelle to their Duty by ſmooth Applications, after Force had been try'd to no purpoſe: This Negotiation ſucceeded, and was managed with ſuch Dexterity, that the Court rewarded him with the Poſt of Lord Lieutenant of Bretagne. The Reduction of this Province was chiefly owing to his Care and Services. And notwithſtanding all the tempting Propoſals of the Duke of Mercœur and the reſt of the Leaguers, he held firm to the Intereſt of King Henry IV. broke Mercœur's Meaſures, and gave a finiſhing Stroke by the taking of Rennes, which he gained by holding Correſpondence with thoſe within. This great Man, worn up in the Service of the Government, fell ſick at the Camp before Roan, then beſieged by King Henry IV. and dy'd in 1590. * Argentré, Hiſtoire de Bretagne. Du Pas, Hiſtoire Genealogique de Bretagne. Thuanus. Duvila. Mezeray, Titres de la maiſon de Tournemine, &c.

TOURNEUX (Nicholas le,) Prieſt and Prior of Villers, born at Roan A. D. 1640. He was a Perſon of Character for his Learning and exemplary Life. He wrote the Life of our bleſſed Saviour; the beſt Preparation for hearing the Maſs; the Tranſlation of the Roman Breviary into French; chriſtian Inſtruction upon the Sacraments; ſix controverſial Letters, &c. * Memoires Hiſtoriques. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

TOURNON (Charles-Thomas Maillard de,) a Cardinal, extracted from an ancient Family, originally of Savoy. This Family for ſeveral Ages paſt, has produced not a few great Men, who have handſomely diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in their Princes Service, and filled ſome of the higheſt Poſts in the Court, the Field, and the Adminiſtration. Many of them have been Knights of the Annunciada. Peter de Maillard, Earl of Tournon, Governor of Savoy, and General of the Horſe, was made Knight of the Annunciada by Emanuel Phillibert, Duke of Savoy, A. D. 1568. Victor Amadæus Maillard, Marquiſs of Tournon, was the Cardinal's Father, and was likewiſe Knight of the Annunciada, and preferred to ſome of the higheſt Offices in the Court of Savoy. This Nobleman had two Sons, the eldeſt called Fœlix Emanuel, now Captain of the firſt Company of the Duke of Savoy's Guards du Corps, Marſhal and Lieutenant General of his Forces; the ſecond Son Charles Thomas was born at Turin December 21, 1668. Pope Clement XI. conſecrated him Patriarch of Antioch December 5, 1701, and ſent him to China as Legate of the holy See. He arriv'd at Pondeheri in April 1703, and went from thence in 1704, towards China, where he arrived in April 1705. He was fortify'd with an Order from the Pope, not then publiſhed in Europe, againſt the ſuperſtitious Worſhip of the Chineſe, which ſome Miſſionaries have indulged their new Converts. In virtue of this Brief or Decree the Legate publiſh'd a Mandate at Nanquin February 7, 1705, forbidding putting a Picture or Board in their Churches, with this Inſcription, worſhip the Heaven or the Sky: Forbidding likewiſe the religious Worſhips the Chineſe pay to their Anceſtors, to Confucius, and to the Planets. The Cardinal at his Arrival at Pequin was at firſt well received by the Emperor of China. His Eminence ſent for the Biſhop of Conon, apoſtolical Vicar, who having declar'd in writing, and told the Emperor by Word of Mouth, that the Doctrine and Worſhip of the Chineſe was by no means conſiſtent with the chriſtian Religion; upon this Declaration, I ſay, the Biſhop was apprehended, and afterwards baniſhed. The Cardinal Tournon had been ſent away ſome time before. He was conveyed to Macbao, after having left Inſtructions dated January 25, 1707, to regulate the Miſſionaries Conduct, and to teach them what Anſwers they were to make when Queſtions were put to them concerning the Worſhip of the Chineſe. His Eminence being kept Priſoner there in the Jeſuits Houſe by the Emperor of China's Order, dy'd in his Confinement in June 1710. He behaved himſelf to the laſt like a Perſon of Conſcience and Reſolution, neither could any rough Uſage make him bend and relax in his Principles. The Pope made a ſhort Panegyrick upon him in a full Conſiſtory October 14, 1711. * Memoires du tems.

TOURVILLE, or Coſtentin Tourville, an ancient Family within the Precinct of Coſtentin in lower Normandy. William de Coſtentin Knight, Lord of Tournville, lived in the Reign of St. Lewis, and dy'd about the Year 1292. Anne-Hilarion de Coſtentin de Tournville, Marſhal, Vice-Admiral of France, and General of the Marines, Marines, was third Son of Cæſar, Count de Fimes and Tourville: He was made Knight of Malta at four Years of Age, but did not undertake the Vows of that Order. He was bred to the Sea, and in his firſt Services diſtinguiſhed himſelf upon ſeveral Occaſions, eſpecially in a bloody Engagement of one Gally againſt another, where he behaved himſelf with ſuch extraordinary Bravery, that they took the Turkiſh Gally. Afterwards going along with the Chevalier d'Hocquincourt, they took conſiderable Prices, gave chace to ſix Algerines, and forced ſix and thirty Gallies to a ſhameful Retreat near Pont Dauphine in the Iſle of Chio, where theſe Gallies loſt above five hundred Men in a Fight which laſted nine Hours. In 1667, the French King gave Tourville the Command of a Man of War, and from hence forward he was in almoſt all the Sea Fights in which the French engaged. He was ordered to ſail with three Men of War into the Gulph of Venice, where before the Town of Barlett he burnt a Veſſel belonging to Raguſa, which had carry'd Forces to the Enemy; afterwards he cannonaded the Town, and took a Ship of fifty Guns, freighted with Corn and other Proviſions, with which he ſupply'd Meſſina. He likewiſe took more Ships before the Town Brindiſi. At his Return to Meſſina he cannonaded Reggio, whither he ſent in a Veſſel which burnt a Man of War, and fourteen other Veſſels in the Haven. He commanded under the Mareſchal de Vivonne, at the Engagement near Palermo, where nine Spaniſh Men of War were burnt, the Admiral being on board one of them. Tourville's Ship ſailing at the Head of the French Fleet, was the firſt that entered the Haven of Auguſta, where he took the Fort Aroley; upon which the other Forts and Towns ſurrendered. Being Captain of the Duke, and going to touch at Malta for freſh Water, he received Advice that there was ſeventeen Veſſels in the Haven of Souza; upon this he made towards the Port, took a Veſſel and burnt it. After having the Command of a Squadron given him in 1677, he always went along with du Queſne, and in the Sea Fight at the Iſlands of Stromboli he ſailed along with the Fireſhip, which was ſent off to burn de Ruiter. In 1681, being Lieutenant General, he ordered the firſt Galliot her Station to bombard the Town of Algeir in broad Day Light, which had never yet been done excepting in the Night. In 1684 he had a Share in the bombarding of Genoa, and was the firſt who debarked Sword in Hand to attack the Enemy's Retrenchments. In 1688 he forced a Spaniſh Man of War to ſtrike Sail, notwithſtanding the Reſiſtance of the Commander Papeſchin, who was much ſtronger in Guns and Complement. In the Year 1689, having the Command of a Squadron of twenty Men of War, he ſailed through the Streights of Gibraltar to join the reſt of the French Fleet then at Breſt, and executed his Deſign in the Sight of the Enemy. Afterwards having the Command of the whole Fleet he went in queſt of the Enemy, but they happened to ſheer off. At laſt in 1690, the French King made him Vice-Admiral, and General of his Marines, with Orders to hoiſt the Admiral's Flag: With this Commiſſion he gained a Victory againſt the Engliſh and Dutch Fleets in the Chanel, tho' the Enemy had then the Weather gage. 'Tis true, the Engliſh did not ſeem to fight ſo much in earneſt as uſually. In 1692 Tourville was made Marſhal of France, and that Summer had conſiderably the worſt of it at the Engagement near la Hogue, where the Engliſh and Dutch Fleet were almoſt double the Number of the French: However Tourville having no diſcretionary Latitude bore down upon the Enemy, fought them boldly for four Hours, and then ſheer'd off. The burning fourteen of the capital Ships which put in at la Hogue, was a great Blow to the French Fleet, who never ſince recruited their naval Strength to the ſame Condition. This Marſhal dy'd at Paris May 1701, 59 Years of Age. * See P. Anſelme. Hiſtoire des Grands Officiers.

TRACHONITIS, a Country of Palæſtine, near the Lake made by the River Jordan, which are called the Waters of Meros. This Country is bounded with Arabia to the Eaſt, with Mount Lebanon to the North, with the River Jordan and Galilee to the Weſt, and with Iturea to the South: It reaches as far as the Sea of Tiberias. Here formerly the half Tribe of Manaſſeh was ſettled, who had their Diviſion beyond Jordan. 'Tis called Trachonitis becauſe it is a rough hilly Country. * Baudrand.

TRADUCIANS: The Pelagians gave the Orthodox this Name, becauſe they held original Sin ex traduce, or conveyed from the Parents to the Children. Thoſe likewiſe were called Traducians, who believed the Soul was no leſs ex traduce than the Body. * Marius Mercator. Prudentius, in Apotheoſi. Hieron. Epiſt. 61. ad Pammach.

TRAERBACH, a ſmall Town of the Palatinate upon the Rhine. It ſtands upon the Moſelle, over againſt the Fort of Mont-Royal now demoliſhed, and eight Leagues below Treves; 'tis fortify'd, and the Capital of one of the Bailiwicks within the County of Spanheim: The Confederates took it from the French, and kept it till the Peace at Utrecht, when it was reſtored. * Memoires du tems.

TRAHONA, a large Town belonging to the Griſons. It ſtands in the Valteline, near the River Adda, a League from Morbegno to the North. * Maty, Diction.

TRAITORS (the Iſle of,) 'tis an Iſland in the Pacifick Sea to the Eaſt of the Country Quir. Jacob le Maire, a Dutchman, diſcovered it in the Year 1616, and gave it this Name, upon the ſcore of the ill Uſage ſome of his Crew received from the Natives. * Maty, Diction.

TRAMBOWLA, a Town in Upper Podolia upon the River Seret, about twenty Leagues from Caminiac to the North Weſt. Trambowla is fortify'd, and the Seat of a Caſtellany. The Turks ſet down before it in 1675, but were forced to raiſe the Siege. * Maty, Diction.

TRANGABAR, a ſmall Town of the Indian Peninſula, on this Side the Ganges. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of Coromandel, within the Principality of Tanjaor, eight Leagues from Negapatam to the North. Trangabar or Tranquebar has a good Haven, and the Danes who trade there are poſſeſſed of the Fort of Danebourg. * Baudrand.

TRAVEL-MUNDE, is a large Town at the Mouth of the River Travel upon the Baltick. It is within the Duchy of Holſtein. Chevalier Beaujoue compares this Town to Quillebeuf in Normandy, and reports it a Town moſt fit for Seamen. * Memoires de Beaujoue.

TRAYGUERA, a Spaniſh Town in the Kingdom of Valentia. It ſtands upon the Frontiers of Catalonia, upon the River Servol, three Leagues from the Town Peniſcola to the North, and nine from Tortoſa to the Weſt. * Baudrand.

* TREASURE (the publick.) See Threaſure.

TREBIA, a River in Lombardy. It riſes in the State of Genoa, runs by Bobio in the Milaneſe, and falls into the Po, a little above Placentia. The Romans, commanded by the Conſul Sempronius, and entirely routed by Hannibal, took this River, and loſt great Numbers in it. * Maty, Diction. Florus.

TREBISACCI, a Town within the Kingdom of Naples. It ſtands in the hither Calabria, upon the Gulph of Tarentum, about two Leagues from Caſſano to the Eaſt. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the old Viceſimum, a ſmall Town of Lucania. * Baudrand.

TREMOUILLE, a French Family of great Antiquity and conſiderable Alliances. Peter, Lord of Tremouille, ſtands at the Head of the Pedigree. He lived in the Reign of Henry I. King of France, about the middle of the eleventh Century. Claude, the eleventh in Deſcent, Lord of Tremouille, Duke of Thoüars, Peer of France, Prince of Talmond, &c. was born in 1566. He made his firſt Campaign under Francis de Bourbon, Duke of Montpenſier. Afterwards he turned French Proteſtant, and was dangerouſly wounded when the Regiment of Tiercelin was routed. He commanded the King of Navarre's Right Wing at the Battel of Coutraſs, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the Year 1587. This Prince afterwards detached him with the Lord of Châtillon, to reinforce King Henry III. when the Duke of Maine attack'd his Majeſty's Troops quarter'd in the City of Tours. Some time after he attended theſe two Kings at the Siege of Paris, where after King Henry III. was aſſaſſinated, the King of Navarre, who ſucceeded to the Crown, ordered the Duke de la Tremouille to march into Tourain to recover ſome Towns which the Leagners had ſeiz'd. When he had executed his Commiſſion he returned to the King into Normandy, where he aſſiſted at the taking Fort Meulan. He ſignalized himſelf both for Courage and Conduct at the Battel of Ivry, in the Year 1590. Afterwards in Conjunction with Francis Bourbon, Prince of Conty, he had a Share at the ſecond Siege of Paris, where part of the Suburbs was taken. When the Spaniards entered Normandy this Duke marched into that Province, and reinforced the King with five hundred Gentlemen, all his own Vaſſals, and two thouſand Foot raiſed within his Eſtate. The King afterwards ſent him into Poitou with the Prince of Conty, where they routed the Enemy near Mont-Marillon, and took Chauvigny, Saint Savin, le blanc en Berry, and other Places. He was afterwards at the Siege of Roan, and at that of Poitiers, which latter had fallen into the King's Hands, had it not been for the Truce concluded at Surênne. He was likewiſe at the Battel of Fontaine-Françoiſe in 1595. In acknowledgment of his great Services the King made him Peer of France. He dy'd in 1604, 38 Years of Age. * Saint Marthe, Hiſt. Geneal. P. Anſelme, Hiſt. des Grand Officiers.

TREPTOW, or Old Treptow. This Town is much decayed. However 'tis fortify'd with a Citadel; it ſtands in the Duchy of Stetin in Pomerania, upon the River Tollenſch, fifteen Leagues from Stralſund to the South. There is likewiſe a Town called New Treptow in Ducal Pomerania. It ſtands within the Duchy of Pomerania properly ſo called, upon the River Rega, near its falling into the Baltick Sea, three Leagues below the Town Greiffenberg. * Maty, Diction.

TRESEN, a Burrough with a Haven. It ſtands in Sudermania, upon the Baltick ten Leagues from Stockholm to the South Weſt. * Maty, Diction.

TREVOUX, upon the Saône, in Latin Trivorſium, Capital of the Sovereignty of Dombes: It has a Parliament, a Court of Requeſts, and a Collegiate Church. This Town has one of the fineſt Proſpects imaginable: It ſtands three Leagues from Lions, to the Eaſt of the Saône, upon the Sloping of a Hill which ſinks gradually, to the Bank of this River. There is a large Plain on the top of the Hill, where a bloody Battel was fought, between Septimius Severus, and Albinus A. D. 198. Lewis Auguſtus of Bourbon, Sovereign Prince of Dombes, removed his Parliament to Trevoux. A. D. 1696, erected a Court of Requeſt, and built a magnificent Palace for the Tryal of Cauſes. He likewiſe built a fine Printing-Houſe, and ſtruck out a Plan for a large College. Farther there is a Paper Office, a Mint, and a Palace for the Governour in this Town. There likewiſe is a very fine Hoſpital; a Convent for the Monks of the third Order of St. Francis; one for the Carmelites and another for the Urſulins.

TRIANON, a Seat belonging to the French King, near the Caſtle of Verſailles. The Place is not large, but very finely built, and curiouſly faced with party coloured Marble, both on the out, and inſide. * Maty, Diction.

TRIGLAND (James,) a famous Profeſſor of Divinity at Leyden, and a celebrated Jewiſh Antiquary, Son to James Trigland, Paſtor at Amſteraam by Jean Marces a very rich Merchant's Daughter of the ſame Town. James in this Article, died in 1705, 54 Years of Age. He publiſh'd ſeveral Works very well received, viz. De Dodona, de Karæis, Scripturæ Vindiciæ; beſides ſeveral Diſputations or Harangues upon curious and important Subjects; viz. De librorum Apocryphorum appellatione; de Libro Juſtorum; de Corpore Moſis; de Trium Cœleſtium Teſtium apud Johannem authentia; de legitima Fidei propagandæ ratione; de Utilitate Religionis in Republicâ; de Origine & Cauſis Rituum Moſaicorum; de Joſepho Patriarcha in Sacri Bovis Hieroglyphico ab Ægyptiis adorato. 'Twas this Author who made the funeral Oration for Frederick Spanheim. Mr. Marck in Mr. Trigland's funeral Oration.

TRINITY, a Name the ancient Chriſtians made uſe of for expreſſing the three divine Perſons. Notwithſtanding this Article has all along been believed, yet the Feſtival of this Branch of the Chriſtian Belief and Worſhip is not of ſuch early Antiquity. Stephen Biſhop of Liege, A. D. 620, had an Office drawn up, relating to the Myſtery of the Trinity, which made its way by Degrees into ſeveral other Churches. The Maſs of the Trinity was commonly ſaid upon Days which had no particular Office: But Pope Alexander II. would not allow of any particular Day for the Feſtival of the Trinity, notwithſtanding it was ſettled in ſeveral Churches. Alexander III. about the End of the twelfth Century declared that the Church of Rome knew no ſuch Holiday. Photo a Monk of Prom who lived in the ſame Age oppoſed this Cuſtom, and in the thirteenth Century, 'twas vigorouſly attacked. In the mean time the Council of Arles held A. D. 1260. decreed the keeping it in that Province. 'Tis commonly believed the Church of Rome received the Feſtival of the Trinity in the fourteenth Century, in the Pontificate of John XXII. who fixed it to the Sunday after Whitſuntide; but here the Matter of Fact is queſtionable; for in the Year 1405, Petrus de Alliaco, a Cardinal, ſolicited Bennet XIII. to ſettle this Feſtival, and Gerſon reports that in his time the keeping it was newly begun. The Greek Church have no ſet Holiday, for recognizing this Myſtery. They have only an Office for this purpoſe upon Whitſun-Munday. * Baillet. vies des Saints. Hiſt des Fêtes. Mobilles.

TRINITY, or the Trinity Fort; 'tis a ſmall Fortreſs built by the Poles ſome Years ſince in Podolia near Kaminiec, to ſtreighten that Garriſon when it belong'd to the Turk. * Memoires du tems.

TRINQUEMALE, or Trinquenemale, a Town with a Fort upon a Gulph of the ſame Name, on the eaſtern Side of the Iſlands of Ceylon; 'tis the Capital of a Kingdom of the ſame Name, and belongs to the Dutch. * Maty, Diction.

* TRIPOLI DI SORIA: For twenty thouſand Houſes in Morery II. read two thouſand.

* TRIUMPH. For Pompey the Great's having a Triumph at fourteen Years of Age, in Morery Vol. II. read at twenty ſix Years of Age.

TROMP (Cornelius,) was born at Rotterdam September the ninth 1629. He was ſecond Son to Martin Harpert Tromp, the famous Dutch Admiral. He was very early ſtruck with a Fancy for Fame, and thought himſelf obliged to ſtrain to come up to his Father's Reputation. The War the Dutch had with the Pirates upon the Coaſt of Barbary in 1650, was his firſt Opportunity for ſhewing his Courage; for now though but twenty one Years of Age he commanded a Man of War. Two Years after he was made Rear Admiral of Amſterdam, and in 1653 he fought the Engliſh in the Mediterranean, boarded one of their Men of War of forty Guns and took her. In 1665 he was made Vice Admiral of the Admiralty of Amſterdam. And now Charles II. King of England declaring War againſt the Dutch, the two Nations came to a bloody Engagement, and here Tromp behaving himſelf very honourably both with Reſpect to Conduct and Courage, he was made Lieutenant Admiral of Amſterdam, in Auguſt following. And a Month forward, he was choſen Admiral of Holland and Weſt Freezland, in Order to qualify him for the Command of the whole Fleet. The next Year June 11. N. S. there was another rugged Engagement between the Engliſh and Dutch, which laſted three Days, and where the Shock fell hardeſt upon Tromp. After another Engagement Auguſt the 5th the ſame Year, Admiral de Ruiter complained of Tromp's Conduct, upon which the States took away his Commiſſion of Lieutenant Admiral. And thus he lay by for ſix Years. In 1673 being earneſtly ſolicited to reaſſume his Poſt, void by the Death of Leiutenant Admiral Gent, he complied with the Motion. On the ſeventh of June the French and Engliſh Fleets fought the Dutch, where Tromp ſhifted his Ship thrice, and had been loſt, had he not been diſengaged by de Ruiter. On the twenty firſt of Auguſt there was another Engagement, where Tromp behaved himſelf to ſuch a Degree of Commendation, that the States of Holland and Weſt Freezland gave him a Penſion of 4000 Livers by way of Acknowledgment, and a Peace being concluded between the Engliſh and the Dutch, and the King of England deſiring to ſee Tromp, he came to London in January 1675, was honourably received by his Britannick Majeſty, and created a Baron. In the beginning of May the ſame Year the States declared a War againſt Sweden, and joyned the King of Denmark. Tromp had the Command of the Fleet, came up to Copenhagen: And two Days after his coming aſhore, the King of Denmark made him Knight of the Elephant, and ſometime forward created him Count of Sylicsbourg. Towards the End of March 1677, he was with the Prince of Orange at the Action at S. Omers, and May following he ſucceeded de Ruiter in the Poſt of Lieutenant Admiral General of the united Provinces. However being permitted by the States to continue the reſt of the Summer in the King of Denmark's Service, he had a Share, in the laſt Conqueſt that Prince made in the North. The enſuing Peace, and it may be ſome Diſſatisfaction received, made him throw up his Buſineſs at Sea. But in 1691 being preſſed to engage once more in the Publick's Service, he could not refuſe the Offer: But while the Fleet was rigging he fell ſick, and died May 21. 62 Years of Age * See his Life in French printed at the Hague in 1694.

Denmark

TRYPHIODORUS, an Ægyptian living in the Reign of Anaſtaſius, wrote a Greek Poem upon the taking of Troy. This Poet's Performance goes much upon the ſame Argument with that of Quintus Calaber. The Manner and the Faults of both are pretty near the ſame: And Tryphiodorus no leſs than the other aimed at continuing and perfecting Homer's Poem. His Style is ſomewhat darker, more perplexed, and leſs raiſed than that of Quintus Calaber. * Borrichius. Rapin, Reflexions upon Poetry. Baillet, Jugem. des Savans ſur les Poetes.

TSCHIRNAUS (Ernſroy Walter de,) Lord of Kiſlingſwald and Stoltzenberg, was born April 10 1651, at Kiſlingwald in Upper Luſatia: His Father was Chriſtopher Tſchirnaus and his Mother was N—— de Sterling, both of them extracted from an ancient Gentleman's Family. Ernſroy, beſide his firſt Education in his own Country, travelled into Holland, England, France, Italy, Germany, Sicily, and Malta. He had a ſtrong Genius for moſt of the parts of Mathematicks. The French King made him a Member of the Academy of Sciences. He found out the way of making Porcelain full as good as that of China. Till this time Porcelain was thought a Commodity peculiar to China, and that no Clay but that of the Chineſe could make it. But this is a Miſtake, for it is only a particular Way of mixing ſeveral ſorts of Earth which are uſually found in moſt Countries, but the main ſecret lies in adjuſting the due Proportions of each. He ſold the late Duke of Orleans a a burning Glaſs of his own invention, which makes conſiderable Diſcoveries in Dioptricks, and natural Philoſophy. Les Cauſtiques de Mr. Tſchirnaus, are little leſs talked of than the ſpiral Line of Archimedes; the Conchoides of Nicomedes; and the Ciſſioides of Diocles. He wrote likewiſe a Book de Medicina Mentis & Corporis. He died of the Stone in 1708: He behaved himſelf with great Fortitude and Reſignation under this acute Diſeaſe: And his laſt expiring Words were Triumph, Victory. * Hiſtoire de l'Acad. R. des Sciences. 1709. pag. 143. Edit de Hollande.

TULN, a Town in Auſtria upon the River Tuln, a League from the Danube, and about eight above Vienna. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the Old Caſtra Catulina. * Baudrand.

TUNCHUEN, a City within the Province of Fokien, in China. 'Tis famous for the Figure of an Idol, upon a neighbouring Mountain called Fé. 'Tis ſitting croſs Legged, with the Hands in the ſame Poſture upon the Stomack. This Coloſſus of a prodigious Bulk is plainly no Workmanſhip of Art, but a wonderful Production of Nature, which has formed the parts of the Rock into the Shape of Limbs and human Proportions; that when viewed at a Diſtance, it looks like a gigantick Figure. Thus in Sicily near the Town of Palermo, there is a Rock with a Reſemblance of a Cæſar upon it, ſo beautiful finiſhed, that one would take it for the Performance of ſome famous Statuary * Kircher's, China illuſtrata.

* TUNIS. The Kingdom of Tunis has under gone a great many Revolutions. Sinan Baſhaw the Houſe of Cigali, a noble Genoeſe Family, gave a particular Sett of Laws to this Government in 1514: To this Government which had paſſed from the Tyrians to the Romans, from the Romans to the Vandals, from the Vandals to the Greek Empire, from the Greeks to the Arabians, and from theſe to the Spaniards who after a little while loſt it to the Turks. This Sinan abovementioned ſettled a ſtanding Militia of 5000 Turks, divided into 200 Companies or five and twenty each. Theſe Soldiers, provided they behaved well, had an Expectation of riſing to the higheſt Poſt in the Government. He likewiſe ſettled a Divan or Council Board, compoſed of almoſt all military Men, where the Baſhaw, who repreſented the grand Seignor, was preſident; and under him there was an Aga, who was changed every half Year. This Council ſat upon all publick and private Affairs, and gave Judgment with abſolute Authority. He likewiſe made a Bei or high Treaſurer. This Poſt was every ſix Months offered to the beſt purchaſer. He was as it were a receiver General of all the Taxes levied upon the Moors: And in Caſe they refuſed to pay, he commanded a ſufficient Number of Troops to force them. Sinan, after having thrown the Government into this Form, died, and named his Succeſſor, who reigned but a ſhort time. This Succeſſor having but a ſlender Capacity ſunk his Authority and ſuffered the Aga to encroach upon him. And from this time the Baſhaw makes ſcarcely any Figure in the Government, and lives in the Town only to put the Burghers in Mind, that they have formerly reſigned themſelves under the Protection of the Grand Seignior. And now the Aga's being at the Head of the Divan, governed quietly enough for fifteen or ſixteen Years. But the Militia riſing upon them, removed the adminiſtration to one called Califf, who reigned with the Title of Dei or King. He was murthered three Years after his Acceſſion to the Throne, and almoſt all his Succeſſors had the ſame Fate. At laſt the Scepter was wreſted from theſe Princes and the Government transferred upon the Beis or high Treaſurers: One Morat a Renegado of Sardinia was the firſt who governed in this Form. His Family held the Reins almoſt throughout the ſeventeenth Century, but not without Revolutions. The Uncles uſurping upon their Nephews, and the Nephews endeavouring to deſtroy their Uncles. Thus Scidi Morat dethroned by his Uncle Ramadam, Bowſtringed this Uſurper, but at laſt in 1699 was himſelf aſſaſſinated by Ibrahim a Turk who was Captain of his Guards: This Ibrahim put the two Nephews of this unfortunate Prince to death; and at laſt extirpated Morat's whole Family. And 'tis this Man at preſent who governs in Tunis. * Davity, Marmol. Le Pere de la Motte, Trinitaire, Etat du Roiaume de Tunis, &c.

TURBAN, a ſort of Cap worn by the Turks, Perſians, and other Mahometans. The top of that of the Turks is white Linen, but that of the Perſians is red Wool. Sophi King of Perſia, who was of the Sect of Hali, one of the Expoſitors of the Alcoran, choſe this Colour to diſtinguiſh himſelf from the Turks and Arabians, who followed Omar's Doctrine, another famous Interpreter of the Mahometan Law. The Tartars formerly wore a green Tourban, but now it is red like that of the Perſians. The Grand Seignior has three Tufts upon his Tourban ſet with Diamonds and other precious Stones, and the Grand Vizier has two. Some other Officers wear one ſmall and another larger, and others have but one Tuft, and ſome none at all. The Tourban of the Council Board has a particular Shape; the Emirs, or Deſcendents from Mahomet, Tourban is green, for that was the Colour worn by this falſe Prophet. * Sir Paul Ricaut's Hiſtory of the Turkiſh Empire.

TURENNE (St. Ralph of,) Archbiſhop of Bourges, Primate of Aquitaine, and Abbot of Fleury ſur Loire, was Son of Ralph, Count of Turenne and Quercy, by Aigue his Counteſs, Daughter to Aimond Count of Perigord. The Count his Father deſigned him for the Church in his Infancy. He was promoted to the Archbiſhoprick of Bourges A. D. 839. This Prelate went into the Intereſt of Pepin II. King of Aquitaine, againſt Charles the Bald, and was one of the Mediators of the Peace, concluded by theſe two Princes, in his Abby of Fleury A. D. 845. In 855 he crowned Charles, Son of Charles the Bald, King of Aquitaine. In 869 he aſſiſted at the Council held at Savonieres near Toule, where Charles the Bald was preſent; and was nominated by this Council to examine the Complaint preferr'd by this Prince againſt Venillon, Archbiſhop of Sens, and to put an end to that Buſineſs. He was likewiſe at the Council of Toucy in the Year 860. Pope Nicolas I. ſent to him concerning the Character and Authority of the Chorepiſcopi. This Archbiſhop founded ſeveral Abbies bies, begun the Structure of the Cathedral at Bourges, and governed to Commendation. There are some Canons which he made for the Government of his Diocess extant. He dy'd July 21. A. D. 876. upon which Day the Church of Bourges keeps his Holiday. * Mabillon, his Acts of the Saints of the Order of St. Bennet, and Annals of the same Order. Sainte Marthe, Gall. Christ. Sirmondus, his Gallican Councils. Du Chesne, &c.

TURNEISSER, was a good Chymist, and an artificial Solderer of Metals: This Man pretended to transmute Iron into Gold; and to make an Experiment when the Duke of Florence was present, he took half a Nail, which seemed to be all Iron, and dipped it in Oil: Now that Part which was dipped was Gold, both in Colour and upon Trial, as soon as it was taken out. Now a great many People, who had well examined the Nail, and perceiving the Gold and Iron exactly join'd, believed it a real Transmutation; because they thought it impossible to solder them together. But nothing is more feasible, provided the Iron is prepared for the Operation in the manner laid down by Otto Tachenius in his Hippocrates Chymicus, printed at Venice, and from whence this Article is extracted. He tells you this was all Turneisser's Secret, and that the rest was nothing but Trick: For when he thus prepared the Iron, and soldered half a Nail of Gold with half a Nail of Iron, he understood which way to give the Gold such an Iron Colour, that every Body thought the Nail was all Iron, and afterwards putting the Nail into the Fire, and dipping it in Oil to take away the Colour, the Gold which lay hid before came up to View. Whether this Turneisser was the same with one Turneisserus, a Brandenbourg Physician, is uncertain: This Brandenbourg Doctor had a particular Opinion, and held that all Plants had two Sexes. * Monconis Voyages, Tom. 1. pag. 354. Edit. de Holland de 1695.

* TURKS. For Solyman I. that subdued Syria, Arabia, and Ægypt, in Morery Vol. II. read Selimus I.

TUTUCORI, a small Town and Kingdom of the same Name; 'tis in the Indian Peninsula on this side the Ganges, upon the Fishery Coast, seventeen Leagues from the City Madura to the East. * Baudrand.

TWENTE, or Tuvente, a Country in the Province of Overyssel. It lies between the Countries of Salland, the Bishoprick of Munster, and the Counties of Zutphen and Benthem. 'Tis a very marshy Country; Oldenzael, Ootmursum, Delden, and Enschede, are all the chief Towns in it. * Maty, Diction.

TYTON (Maximilian,) Lord of Ognon, Secretary to the French King, and Director General of the Arsenals or Magazines of Arms through the Kingdom of France: He was the first who suggested to his most Christian Majesty the settling these Magazines, that there might be always a Stock of Arms ready for publick Occasions, and that the Troops might all be armed in the same manner. He began this Project in 1666, with the Royal Magazine of the Bastille in Paris, from whence the Court dispatched Orders to the other Magazines in the Kingdom. The Sieur Tyton went on with this Direction to his Death, which happened in January 1712. * Memoires du Tems.

TZETZES (John,) a Greek Poet living in the latter end of the twelfth Century. His miscellaneous History, of which there are thirteen Chiliads, is written in a sort of loose Numbers, called popular Verses, but they are not Iambicks, as several have fansy'd. Tzetzes's Style is not without a Tincture of Conceit, and he has no small Mixture of languid and insignificant Stuff in his Performance: His Greek Epigrams are printed at Basil, with some Compositions of Heraclides Ponticus. John Tzetzes was a better Grammarian and Critick than a Poet. He has written very good Scholia upon Hesiod. * Nicol. Gerbel. Præfat. in Tzetz. Hist. Polit. Olaus Borrichius Dissert. de Poet. Græc. Baillet, Jugemens des Savans, sur les Poetes.

TZETZES (Isaac,) Brother to him in the preceding Article, wrote Notes upon Lycophron's Poem called Alexandra or Cassandra. His Commentaries furnish a great many serviceable Remarks for the clearing up History and Mythology, and help to disentangle a great many perplexed Passages in other Authors. There are likewise important Difficulties in the Greek Tongue, and several Maxims in Philosophy, explain'd to Satisfaction. * Arnold. Arlen. Peraxyl. Epist. ad Lycophr. Gerbel. Præfat. in Hist. Joan.

VAILLANT,

U.

VAILLANT (Germain de Gueſlis,) born at Orleans, Abbot of Painpont, his Latin Name is Germanus Valens Guellius Pimpontius. Vaillant took a new Method in his Commentary upon Virgil; for in inſtead of making Scholia or Notes like other Commentators, he compared the Greek and Latin Poets carefully together, and from thence endeavoured to clear up the darkeſt and moſt difficult Paſſages in this Poet; and to give him his due, he had very good luck with his Fancy. His Style is a little too cloſe and ſparing, which poſſibly makes him ſomewhat dark; but then this ſmall Fault is much overbalanced by a great many fine judicious Thoughts furniſhed by him. Sainte-Marthe. Du Sauſſay, Annales d'Orleans. G. Sciopp. de Art. crit. pag. 12.

VALBELLE, a Precinct in Provence in the Neighbourhood of Melne, gave it's Name to the Family of Valbelle. This noble Family is deſcended from the old Counts of Marſeille: Coſmus II. of Valbelle, Lord of Beaumelles, Captain of a hundred Men at Arms, and of one of the King's Gallies, did conſiderable publick Service. When the French Fleet fought the Spaniſh near Genoa Auguſt 15, 1638, this Valbelle, then ſeventy Years of Age, having received twelve Wounds, and not being able to ſtand, bade his Men tie him to the Maſt of his Gally, and there he gave Orders with great Reſolution and Conduct, and occaſion'd the taking of ſeveral of the Enemy's Gallies. He was buried at Genoa, and had a magnificent Funeral from that Republick.

VALBELLE (John Baptiſt de,) Knight of Malta, Son of Coſmus II. was Captain of a hundred Men at Arms very young, and afterwards Captain of a Gally, &c. During the Queen Mother's Regency he behaved himſelf with great Loyalty, and raiſed ſome Troops for the King's Service: He likewiſe rigged out ſeveral Ships at his own Charge againſt the Spaniards and Turks. In 1655 he defended himſelf in a ſingle Ship againſt four Engliſh Men of War, who ordered him to ſtrike: He unmaſted two of the Enemy in the Diſpute, and at laſt obtained honourable Conditions; to be conveyed with his Men and Guns into ſome French Port. In 1669 he commanded a Squadron for the Relief of Candia, and afterwards another upon the Coaſt of Tunis and Algeir. In 1672 and 73 the Engliſh and French being Allies againſt the Dutch, he diſtinguiſhed himſelf remarkably in all the Sea Engagements. In 1674 he commanded ſix Men of War and four Fireſhips, and convey'd a Reinforcement into Meſſina: Upon his landing he took the Caſtle of Salvador, and drove the Spaniſh Troops out of all their Ports. In 1675 he ſailed with more Troops for Meſſina, and ruſhed into the Haven, maugre the Reſiſtance of the Spaniſh Gallies and Men of War. The ſame Year he open'd the Duke of Vivonne's Paſſage thither, who brought freſh Succours; he cleared the way for this Duke by making a vigorous Sally upon the Enemy's Troops, who, having a conſiderable Superiority, fanſy'd they could have hinder'd Vivonne's landing. In 1676, in an Engagement, where the French fought the Spaniſh and the Dutch, Valbelle commanded the Vantguard's Squadron, after the Death of Almeras, who was killed in the Beginning of the Action; and Admiral de Ruiter, who received his Death's Wound from Valbelle's Ship, declared that the Perſon he fought againſt deſerved to command. In 1679 the Corſaires of Tripoli failing in their Articles to the French King, this Officer was ordered to make them give Satisfaction: He anſwered his Commiſſion, forced them to beg Pardon, and reſtore a great many Chriſtian Slaves. At his Return from this Expedition, and having been nominated by Pope Innocent XI. Great-Croſs of the Order of Malta, he fell ſick, and dy'd in the Year 1681 * Peireſc, Notes Genealogiques. Archives de l'Evêche de Marſeille. Sainte-Marthe, Gallia Chriſtiana. Tom. 2. pag. 640. Gaufredi, Hiſtoire de Provence. Liv. 4. pag. 208. Liv. 10. pag. 419, &c.

VALDIVIA, a Town in Southern America. It ſtands in Chili, at the Mouth of the River Chabin, where the Haven is good. Valdivia took its Name from one of the Governors of Chili, who putting the Natives to the Torture to make them work in the Gold Mines, provoked them to an Inſurrection: In ſhort, this Governor was routed and taken Priſoner; and, as ſome Authors affirm, was killed by pouring melted Gold into his Mouth, telling him they would now give him enough of that Metal he was ſo barbarouſly fond of. * Maty, Diction.

VALENTINUS, an Hereſiarch: He fanſy'd a Genealogy of Æons, out of which he made his divine Pleroma. Under this Pleroma he ranged the Demiurgus, and the Angels who governed the World: Theſe Æons he fanſy'd Male and Female, and ranged them under ſeveral Claſſes. The firſt is Proarchos or Propator, that is to ſay, the firſt Principle, which he call'd Bythos, that is to ſay, Profundity; and to this Bythos he ranged Sige, that is to ſay, Silence; from whence Nous or Underſtanding was propagated, who had Aletheia, that is, Truth for her Siſter; Nous and Aletheia had Iſſue Logos and Zoe, that is, the Word and Life; and theſe two were the Parents of Anthropos and Eccleſia, Man and the Church: Theſe were the firſt eight Æons which produced the reſt to the Number of thirty, which made the whole Pleroma. Sophia, the laſt of theſe Æons, produced Achamoth or Enthymeſis, that is to ſay, Thought and Invention, on the outſide of the Pleroma, and within the Pleroma Chriſt and the Holy Spirit: All theſe Æons contributed to the Production of Soter or the Saviour. Acamon, according to him, made the World out of three different Subſtances, material, animal, and ſpiritual. The Demiurgus created all material Subſtances: Valentinus held that the Savionr within the Pleroma deſcended upon Chriſt in his Baptiſm in the Shape of a Dove. Valentinus diſtinguiſhed three ſorts of Men, ſpiritual, material, and animal; the firſt, according to him, were to be immortal let them live never ſo wickedly; the ſecond ſunk inevitably to Annihilation, notwithſtanding all their Virtues; and as for the animal Men they were lodged in a Place of Refreſhment, provided they lived well, and annihilated if guilty of much Misbehaviour. His Diſciples, called Valentinians, held his Syſteem of the Æons, but ſome of them with ſome Variation. They drew ſcandalous Inferences from their Principles with reference to Practice, gave themſelves up to all ſorts of Licentiouſneſs, and affirm'd there was no Obligation to ſuffer Martyrdom. Some of them declared againſt Baptiſm, and others adminiſter'd it in a particular and prophane manner. * Irenæus, de Hæreſ. Tertull. adv. Valentinianos. Theodoret, lib. 1. Hær. Fab. Epiphan. Hær. 31. Euſeb. &c.

VALERIAN (St.) Biſhop of Aquileia in the fourth Century: He ſucceeded Fortunatianus, an Arian Biſhop, A. D. 355. He cleared his Dioceſs of Arianiſm. He preſided at the Council of Aquileia A. D. 381. and the next Year aſſiſted at a Council of Rome, held under Pope Damaſus. He is ſuppoſed to die in the Year 389, and was ſucceeded by Chromatius. The Martyrology ſets his Feſtival to the 27th of November. * Hieron. in Chronic. Epiſt. 42, 43. Acta Concilii Aquilienſis. Theodoret, lib. 5. cap. 8. & 9.

VALERIAN, an African Biſhop of the fifth Century, and made a Martyr by the Vandals. Upon his refuſing to deliver the Books and Church Furniture to Genſericus's Officers, he was expelled the City of Benza where he was Biſhop, and all People forbidden to entertain him. And thus he was forced to lie upon the Road, and was ſtarved to Death. * Victor Vitenſis. Hiſt. Perſecut. Vandalic. lib. 1. cap. 4.

VALESIUS (Adrian.) Charles Valeſius's Father deſcended from a Gentleman's Family in Lower Normandy, ſent him to the College of Clermont for his firſt Education, when the Jeſuits taught there. When he had finiſhed his Claſſes he apply'd himſelf to the reading of the beſt Latin and Greek Poets, Orators and Hiſtorians; and was directed in his Progreſs by Sirmondus, Petavius, Bignonius, Rigaltius, Puteanus, &c. He made the Hiſtory of France his principal Study, and ſpent a great many Years in queſt of the beſt Manuſcripts and Prints. The great Pains he took upon this Subject, and his excellent Latin Style qualify'd him throughly for this Undertaking.

In 1646, he printed the firſt Tome, in which he has cleared up the moſt obſcure Parts of the French Hiſtory, traced the Old French to their Original, and given a Detail of their Exploits, from the Reign of the Emperor Valerian to the Death of the Elder Clotaire. And here he works upon good Grounds: He aſſerts nothing without Authority, prefers the ancients to the Moderns, and the greater Number to the leſs. When the Text of his Authors, appears corrupted by the Ignorance of the Tranſcribers, he takes care to reſtore it, when no better Copies are to be found, by probable Conjectures, founded in Geography or Chronology. He ranges every Event under the time and Place where and when it happened, to ſettle the Periods of time, and the Conſulſhips the better. To make this firſt Tome more intelligible, he has prefixed a Chronological Table of the Actions done by the French, from the Reign of Valerian, to the twenty fifth Year of Juſtinian's Empire, together with an Account of the Provinces and Cities in Gaul.

In 1658, he printed his ſecond and third Tome. The ſecond takes in the Occurrences which happened from the Death of Clotair the elder, to the Reign of the younger. To give a full Recital of what was Material within this Interval, he read Gregory of Tours, very carefully, and compared du Cheſne's Edition with ſeveral Manuſcripts; and where the Author miſtakes in his Chronology, and doth not bring Truth and time together, he makes no Scruple to diſſent from him. He gives ſeveral Inſtances in his Preface of ſuch Chronological Miſtakes. He conſulted the Manuſcripts of Fredeggrius, and the Annals of Mets. At the End of the third Tome, which reaches from the Reign of Clotaire the younger, till Childeric was depoſed, he ſubjoins a Diſſertation de Baſilicis. This Diſſertation was anſwered by Launoi, to which Valeſius replied, and added by way of Appendix an hiſtorical Tract of the old Churches in Paris. And this Year, which was 1660, he was made Hiſtoriographer to the French King.

In 1675, he publiſhed his Notitia Galliæ, a very valuable Performance: In peruſing the Authors, who concerned themſelves with any part of the Hiſtory of France, he was nicely careful to obſerve what they delivered concerning the Country, the Mountains, Foreſts, Rivers, Iſlands, Havens, Cities, Monaſteries, Biſhopricks, with their Foundation and Extent of Dioceſs: And from Collections upon theſe Heads he wrote his Notitia, in an Alphabetical Order, and here he advances nothing, but what is atteſted by the beſt Records of Antiquity. The Preface gives an Account of what the beſt Latin and Greek Geographers and Hiſtorians have reported, concerning the Situation of Gaul. The Diviſion of the Provinces, and the Alterations, which happened there upon the Progreſs of time. He diſcovered the Spuriouſneſs of a Fragment of Petronius, found at Traw in Dalmatia. He died in July 1692. * Journals des Savans, Tom. 20. pag. 503.

VALID, (firſt of that Name, a Caliph of the Family of the Ommiades, was Son to Abdalmalek, and ſucceeded his Father in the 186th Year of the Hegira. The Arabians made greater Conqueſts in his Reign than under any Caliph. For during his Government, which was but nine Years and a half, Spain, Sardinia, the Iſlands of Majorca and Minorca, with part of Gallia, Narbonnenſis, were conquer'd by the Saracens. The great Province of Mavaralnaher, or Tranſoxan, with Turqueſtan, were made Proſelytes to the Alcoran, and a conſiderable Part of India, on this Side the Ganges, was brought under Tribute. This Caliph rebuilt the Moſche at Medina, where Mahomet and the firſt Caliphs are buried, much larger and more magnificent than it was before: He likewiſe built the great Moſche at Damaſcus, and join'd the ſtately Church of St. John Baptiſt to it. This Church the Greek Emperors had richly ornamented for ſeveral Ages, but this Caliph forced the Chriſtians to ſell it him. * D'Herbelot, Biblioth. Orient.

VALONA, a City in Greece. It ſtands upon the Coaſt of Epirus, over againſt the Mouth of the Gulph of Venice. 'Tis an Archiepiſcopal See, and fortify'd with a Citadel. It has a very large Haven, called the Gulph of Valona, formerly Onoeus Sinus; the Entrance is ſecured by two Forts. At fifteen Leagues Diſtant from Valona, there is a Mountain with a Spring in it, which throws out great Quantities of of Pitch. * Maty, Diction.

VANDALE (Anthony,) born at Harlem in 1638, and died there in 1708. His Genius lay moſtly for Languages, but his Parents took him off from Books, and put him to a Trade which he followed ſome time. But at about thirty Years of Age he turned Scholar again, ſtudied Phyſick, and ſometimes preached amongſt the Mennonites in Holland. He has printed two Diſſertations upon the heathen Oracles, which he pretends were no better than Juggle and Prieſtcraft. But theſe Diſcourſes, have been fully anſwered by one Baltus a French Man. He has written a Tract concerning the Origin and Progreſs of Idolatry, and a Diſſertation upon real and pretended Prophecy. A Diſcourſe upon Ariſtæas's Hiſtory of the Septuagint, together with an hiſtorical Diſcourſe of Baptiſms, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian; a Diſſertation upon Sanchoniathon; and Diſſertations upon old Marbles. He was a Perſon that had dipt pretty much into Antiquity, but his Style, was negligent and immethodical; and his reaſoning often inconcluſive. * Le Clerc, Bibliotheque choiſie, Tom. 17. pag. 308.

VARILLAS (Anthony,) Hiſtoriographer of France, was born at Gueret in Upper Marche and extracted from a reputable Family. The Puteani put him into the French King's Library, which ſuggeſted the Thought of his Writing the Hiſtory of France, which he executed in ſome Meaſure afterwards. He wrote the Hiſtory of Lewis XI. of Charles VIII. of Lewis XII. of Francis I. of Henry II. of Charles IX. and of Henry III. The Hiſtory of Hereſie; the Anecdotes of Florence; the Politicks of the Houſe of Auſtria; and ſeveral other Works printed in twenty one Volumes in 4to. He died June 1696, 72 Years of Age. This Author is none of the beſt Vouchers, as Dr. Burnet has ſufficiently ſhewn in his Conteſts with him. * Memoires du Tems.

VARIN (John,) born at Liege, Son to Peter Varin, Sieur de Blanchard. He was Page to the Count de Rochefort, Sovereign Prince of the Empire. His Genius lay ſtrongly for drawing, and when he could ſpare any leiſure from riding the great Horſe, fencing, dancing, and leaping, he uſed to ſpend it this way. He likewiſe underſtood Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving, and invented ſeveral ſerviceable Tools for ſtriking Medals. Lewis XIII. King of France being informed of his Talent, ſent for him to Paris, gave him Letters of Naturalization, and employed him in coining, and Medals; and ſoon after he was Director General of the Mints in France. He made the French Academy a Seal for their Society; 'twas only the Effigies of Cardinal Richelieu, but reckoned, for the Life and Beauty of it, a Maſter Piece of this Kind. He engraved the Stamps for the Money coined in Lewis XIII. reign, and in that of the Minority of Lewis XIV. He ſtruck all the Medals of Lewis XIII. of the Queen Mother Ann of Auſtria, of King Lewis XIV. after his being a Major, particularly the Medals ſtruck at his Coronation, and others upon ſeveral remarkable Events in that Reign. He likewiſe engraved the Medals of the Duke of Orleans; of the Prince of Condé, of Cardinal Mazarin, of the Queen of Sweden, of Mr. Colbert, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, all admirably done, and ſtanding in Cloſets as Curioſities. He made a Buſt of the late King of France, which ſeems to rival ſome of the fineſt Performances of Antiquity, though it was the firſt thing he did in Marble. He afterwards made a marble Figure of this Prince, between ſeven and eight Foot high, which is ſurpriſingly beautiful. He made a braſs Buſt of the aforeſaid King, not at all inferior to what he had performed before. Mr. de Menars Preſident au Mortier has a golden Buſt of Cardinal Richelieu, weighing 55 Louis d'or done by Varin, and valued as one of the fineſt Curioſities of this Sort. Varin beſides the Poſts abovementioned, was Secretary of State, Privy Councellor, and Surveyor of his Majeſties buildings. He died at Paris Auguſt 1672, 68 Years of Age. * Perrault, Hommes illuſtres, qui ont paru en France, Tom. 2.

VARIORUM (The) of Holland. The Editions of the Claſſicks printed in Holland, with Notes and extracts tracts of ſeveral Criticks (which for this Reaſon are called variorum) have been well received, rather upon the Score of the Title, and beautiful impreſſion, than for the Significancy of the Notes in them. Theſe Extracts are oftentimes injudiciouſly made; and inſtead of ſcimming the beſt from other Commentators, they have only inſerted literal Remarks, different Readings, and other reſembling Trifles: So that a great part of theſe Extracts are unſerviceable to the Reader, excepting where the whole Remarks of the Criticks and Commentators are tranſcribed. And there is even Reaſon to fear, that theſe epitomizing Extracts, may at length occaſion the Loſs of the original Books, and that inſtead of the entire Remarks of Lipſius, Caſaubon, and other Commentators, nothing but the imperfect Abridgements may remain: This has already happened to Servius's Commentaries upon Virgil, and to other excellent Pieces of Antiquity; for inſtance, to the Hiſtories of Trogus Pompeius, Livy, Dion Caſſius, Nicholas Damaſcenus, Polybius, and to ſeveral Old Roman Lawyers, where the Extracts and Abridgements have occaſioned the Loſs of the Originals. The greateſt part of thoſe who wrote the Variorum, have miſſed their way for want of Judgment: And thus out of many good Commentaries, they have oftentimes made one but indifferent. But then out of theſe Men of Rapſody, we are to except Thyſius, Gronovius the Father, Schildius, and particularly the famous Grævius. Their Pen ſtrikes always with Judgment, and their extracted Notes are ſignificant. Amongſt thoſe who have ſucceeded leaſt, we may reckon Cornelius Schrevelius; he commonly overlooks the beſt Diverſion, and flies at ſmall Game. * Journal des Savans du 8 Fevrier, 1667. Ant. Borremanſius, c. 7. Variar Lection. Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres de Mai, 1684.

VASCONCELLOS (Michael,) a Portugueſe. Secretary of State to Margaret of Savoy, Ducheſs of Mantua, and Regent of Portugal; this Miniſter was Independent of his Miſtreſs in Effect. He received his Orders from Count Olivarés, firſt Miniſter of Philip IV. King of Spain. Vaſconcellos's Head was admirably turned for State Affairs; He never tired upon Buſineſs, and had a fertile Invention in contriving Ways, and means to get Money from the Subject: As for the reſt of his Qualities, he ſeemed to have no Senſe of Compaſſion, and was harſh even to Cruelty. He grew vaſtly rich in his Poſt, ſcrupuled no Expedients to aggrandize his Circumſtances, and put part of the Money in his Pocket, which he levied for the King of Spain. But the principle Nobility of Portugal, having concerted an Enterpriſe, for bringing the Duke of Braganza to the Throne, put an End to Vaſconcellos's Proſperity. The Day for executing this great Deſign was December the firſt, 1640. And now the Perſons concerned in this Attempt, ſeized the Palace, and ruſhed into Vaſconcellos's Apartment. They did not find him at firſt, but after they had ſearched a great while, an old Woman, who was threatned with Death unleſs ſhe diſcovered him, made a Sign that he lay hid in a Scritoire, which ſtood out of Sight within a Wall, where they found him covered over with Papers. Don Rodrigo Saa, Lord Chamberlain, diſcharged a Piſtol at him; and afterwards being ſeveral times ſtabbed, the Lords in the Plot threw him out of a Window, and cried out, the Tyrant is dead; God ſave Liberty, and Don John King of Portugal. The Populace who run to the Palace, gave loud Expreſſions of Satisfaction for what was done, run furiouſly upon the dead Body, and cut it in Pieces. * Hiſt. du Conjuration de Portugal.

VATHEK, Billah. Ninth Caliph of the Family of the Abbaſſides, and Son to Motâſſen. His Mother Carathis was a Grecian. He ſucceeded his Father in the 220th Year of the Hegira he was very firm to the Sect of the Motazales, and gave great Countenance to to the Deſcendants of Hali. He perſecuted thoſe, who refuſed to declare the Alcoran was created; for it ſeems whether it was or not, was a Queſtion in that time. He loved Books, and was a kind Patron to Men of Learning. He had a great deal of Bounty and Compaſſion in his Temper, and took care that there ſhould not be ſo much as one Begger in his Dominions; inſomuch that during his whole Reign, there was not ſo much as one indigent asker, ſeen either at Mecca or Medina. He had too much Reliance on Aſtrology, and ſome of the chief Pretenders to this imaginary Science, having calculated his Nativity, promiſed him fifty Years of Life. But within ten Days of this Prediction, he died of a Dropſy in the 232nd Year of the Hegira, and the 36th Year of his Age. His Brother Motavakkêl ſucceeded him. * Khondemir.

VAVASSOR (Francis,) a Jeſuit born at Paray, in the Dioceſs of Autun A. D. 1605. After a conſiderable Progreſs in Learning, he was invited to the College of Paris, to read Lectures upon the Scripture, which Employment he managed to Commendation, and died in the beginning of the Year 1683. No Perſon of his time underſtood the Beauties of the Latin Tongue, nor ſpoke it with more Correctneſs and Elegancy than himſelf. He was a Man of a ſtrong Genius and had a nice diſtinguiſhing Judgment in Criticiſm. But he is ſaid to have been ſomewhat ſatyrical in his Remarks. His Works are a Commentary upon Job, with a Paraphraſe in Verſe upon this Book, where he has cut off the Digreſſions, and unſerviceable Notes, which too often ſwell the Commentaries upon the Bible; four Books of the Morals of Jeſus Chriſt; a Diſſertation upon the Beauty of Jeſus Chriſt; Cornelius Janſenius ſuſpected; a Letter to one of his Friends concerning Janſeniſm; two Volumes of Harangues. Remarks upon the Latin Tongue, and a Collection of Poems. All his Works were reprinted in Folio in Holland in the Year 1709. * Biblioth. Script. Societ. Jeſu. Journal des Savans 8 Fevrier 1683.

VAUBAN. See Le Preſtre (Sebaſtian.)

UBEDA. A Spaniſh Town in Andaluſia. 'Tis two Leagues from Baëza, to the Eaſt. This Town is conſiderably large, populous and fortifyed with a Citadel built upon an Eminence. About a League from this Town upon the River Guadalquiver, there is a Village called Ubeda la Veia, or Puente d'Ubeda, which is the ſame with the Old Betulæ * Baudrand

VECCHIETTI (Jerom,) a Florentine, flouriſh'd in in the Beginning of the ſeventeenth Century. He was a very good Linguiſt, Mathematician, and Chronologer. He made two Voyages into Ægypt by Clement VIII's Order. He wrote a very conſiderable Work in Chronology, divided into eight Books, and printed at Auſbourg in 1623. But having advanced ſome Notions in it, then not commonly maintained, and particularly having aſſerted, that our Saviour did not make uſe of unleavened Bread at the Inſtitution of the holy Euchariſt, his Book was ordered to be burnt by the Congregation of Cardinals who preſided in the Inquiſition; and over and above he was ſent to Priſon, where he continued during Life, and died at almoſt 80 Years of Age. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

VECTURIUS, a Lockſmith, was elected Emperor after the Death of Victorinus, Lollianus, and Poſthumius. He reigned but three Days at the moſt, as Trebellius Pollio informs us; Una die factus eſt Imperator; alia viſus eſt imperare, tertia interemptus eſt. * Trebellius Pollio, de triginta Tyrannis. cap. 18.

VEERE, or Camp-wer, a ſmall Town of the United Provinces. It ſtands in the Iſland Walcheren in Zeland, a League from Middlebourg to the North-Eaſt. 'Tis fortify'd and has a good Haven, and belonged to the Prince of Orange. * Maty, Diction.

VEISSELMUND, or Mund, a Fort in Poland; it ſtands in Royal Pruſſia, at the Mouth of the Viſtula below Dantzic; the Haven of which Town is ſecured by this Fort. * Maty, Diction.

VELEZ, a City of the Province of Errif, within the Kingdom of Fez: It ſtands upon the Mediterranean is fortify'd with a good Caſtle, and has two noble Palaces for the Governor: Thirty ſmall Ships may ride in the Haven, and the Mountains with which 'tis ſurrounded are planted with Oaks, Cedars, and Cork Trees; the Country affords no Grain but Barley. Velez is the neareſt Haven to Fez. Don Pedro of Navarre, the King of Spain's Admiral, arriving there in 1508; and cruiſing along the Coaſt of Barbary, to clear the Sea of Pirates, to prevent their taking Shelter in this Haven, reſolved to build a Fort, upon a Rock over againſt it, and at about half a Mile's diſtance from the Town. This Rock, which he called Pegnon de Velez, is ſo ſteep on all Sides, that there is no getting up to it, excepting by one ſtrait Paſſage, which a ſingle Perſon cannot climb without difficulty. Don Pedro built a ſtrong Tower upon the top of it, and planted ſix large Cannon. This Fort was betrayed to the Moors in 1522, but Don Garcias of Toledo retook it in 1564, and from this time it has continued in the King of Spain's Hands, who keeps a good Garriſon there well furniſh'd with Artillery and Ammunition. * Marmol. de l'Afrique, lib. 4.

* VENCESLAUS, Duke of Bohemia in the tenth Century, was Son of Euratiſlaus Duke of Bohemia, by Drahomira of Luczko, and Grandſon of Borivorus, the firſt Chriſtian Duke of Bohemia. Euratiſlaus was a Chriſtian, and Drahomira his Ducheſs was a Heathen: They had two Sons, Venceſlaus and Boleſlaus; Ludmilla their Grandmother who was a Chriſtian, took Boleſlaus into her Family, carried him to Prague, and provided carefully for his Education. When Euratiſlaus died, his Ducheſs Drahomira ſeized the Government, and ſuppreſs'd the Exerciſe of the Chriſtian Religion in Bohemia, Venceſlaus, by his Grandmother's Advice, prevailed with the States to declare him Duke of Bohemia; however to prevent Miſunderſtanding between the two Brothers, they agreed upon a Partition of the Country, the Province above the Elbe falling to Boleſlaus's Share, and from that time forward was called Boleſlavia. Drahomira went along with Boleſlaus; and Venceſlaus, by the Direction of his Grandmother Ludmilla, reſtored the Chriſtian Religion: But Drahomira got this Lady aſſaſſinated, and procured Venceſlaus a great many Enemies, and amongſt the reſt Ladiſlaus Prince of Gurim, who invaded Venceſlaus's Dominions with an Army, but the Difference was taken up juſt before they were coming to a Battel. To conclude, Drahomira and Boleſlaus invited Venceſlaus to an Entertainment, where this latter was aſſaſſinated by his Brother A. D. 929. Venceſlaus thus murder'd ſtands in the Liſt of the Martyrs, and his Feſtival is reckoned to the 8th of September. * Dubravius, lib. 4. & 5. Bohem. Hiſt. Æneas Sylv. Hiſt. Bohem. Balbin. Miſcellan. Bohem. Decad. 1. lib. 4. Baillet, Vies des Saints.

VENCHEU, a City in Chekiang, a Province of China. It has a good trading Haven, and is the eleventh Rate Town in the Province. There are five Towns within its Dependency. * Maty, Diction.

VENERIUS (St.) Biſhop of Milan in the fourth Century, was ordained Deacon by St. Ambroſe, and ſucceeded Simplician in the See of Milan, A. D. 400. He held a cloſe Correſpondence with the chief Biſhops of his Time. Pope Anaſtaſius ſent him a Letter to acquaint him with the Cenſure paſſed upon the Tranſlation of Origen's Books by Ruffinus. The African Biſhops wrote to Venerius and Pope Anaſtaſius to aſſiſt them in the Revival of Diſcipline. To this purpoſe Venerius ſent them his Deacon Paulinus with Inſtructions. This Biſhop likewiſe with Pope Innocent I. endeavoured the reſtoring St. Chryſoſtom. He dy'd May 4. A. D. 409. * Paulin. in Vit. Ambroſii. Hieron. contra Rufin. l. 2. Chryſoſtom, Epiſtol. ad Venerium.

VENTA, a famous Caſtle, ſeven or eight Leagues from Toledo in Spain: 'Tis the Place where the Moors formerly confined a hundred Chriſtian young Women, in the Reign of Mauregatus King of Leon: Some of the Succeſſors likewiſe of this Prince pay'd the Moors a Tax of a hundred ſingle Women, fifty of which were to be Gentlewomen, and the reſt of lower Condition. After the Moors were expelled Spain, Zirizeo Cardinal, Archbiſhop of Toledo, purchaſed this Caſtle with the Appurtenances A. D. 1573, and founded a Convent there for a hundred Maids, who were obliged to prove their Family had been Chriſtians beyond the Memory of Man: Fifty of theſe likewiſe were to be Gentlewomen, and the other of inferior Deſcent. Afterwards this Number of Virgins were removed to Toledo, with an Augmentation of their Revenues. They are to be placed there at ſeven Years old. Thoſe who are diſpoſed to be Nuns continue there; and the reſt, who prefer Marriage, have Leave to go out. Theſe latter have a thouſand Crowns at leaſt for their Portion pay'd by the Convent, which is very wealthy. The Eſtate belonging to it reaches five Leagues: And beſides, they have the Cognizance of Cauſes in a great many Towns and Villages within the Neighbourhood. At the Entrance and going out of the Foreſt of Venta, the Hiſtory of this Foundation is cut upon a large Stone. As to the Tribute of the hundred Chriſtian Women pay'd to the Moors, 'tis mentioned in the Hiſtory of Spain. * M. Berrault, Journal du Voyage d'Eſpagne.

* VENUS, the Goddeſs of Love, Daughter of Jupiter and Dione; or as others will have it, Daughter of Cœlus, and born of the Froth of the Sea. Tully makes four Venus's; the firſt had Cœlus for her Father; the ſecond born of the Froth of the Sea, and Cupid's Mother: the third Daughter to Jupiter and Dione, who married Vulcan, and had Anteros by Mars; the fourth born at Tyre, the ſame with Aſtarte, and who marry'd Adonis. The firſt and fourth of theſe are plainly the Venus of Aſſyria, ſtyled Urania; and the Worſhip of this pretended Deity came out of Aſſyria or Babylon into Syria, where ſhe was called Aſtarte. Sanchoniathon reports her the Daughter of Cœlus, the Wife of Saturn, and Mother of the ſeven Daughters called Titanides. This Urania had a very old Temple at Aſcalon in Phœnicia: Tis mentioned by Herodotus. She was likewiſe worſhipped in Arabia and Perſia. The ſecond and third Venus is that mentioned by the Greek Poets, and was particularly worſhipped in the Iſle of Cyprus, where ſhe had a magnificent Temple richly endowed at Paphos. Some will have it that ſhe came thither from Phœnicia, which gave Occaſion to the mythological Story of her being born of the Sea. The Venus worſhipped at Cæſarea, was likewiſe the Phœnician Venus, as Pauſanias, and Heſychius will have it. There was a Temple of Venus Libitina at Rome. The Poets deſcribe her Chariot drawn by Swans and Pigeons. She has ſeveral Epithets beſtowed upon her, and amongſt the reſt, that of Erycina, from the Temple Æneas built for her upon the Mountain Erix. * Herodot. Cicer. de nat deor. l. 3. Virgil. l. 2. Æneid. Pauſan. Plutarch. &c.

VERBIEST (Ferninand,) a flemiſh Jeſuit, and a Miſſionary to China in the ſeventeenth Century. He made his way into this Kingdom upon the Score of his being a great Mathematician. This learned Qualification brought him into Favour with the Emperour Cambi, who made him preſident of the mathematick Society, and valued him to that Degree that he refuſed him nothing. P. Verbieſt made uſe of his intereſt for the Service of Religion, and procured a Licence from this Prince to preach Chriſtianity by himſelf and his Aſſiſtants throughout the Kingdom. The Emperour ſpent three or four Hours every Day in his Cloſet with him, where he was entertained with Diſcourſes upon ſeveral parts of Learning, and particularly upon the Subject of Mathematicks. This Converſation Verbieſt improved to religious Purpoſes, and endeavoured to draw the Emperour towards a Regard for the Chriſtian Faith, and in Order to this he explained ſome part of the Creed to him. At laſt the Emperour ſtruck with the Force of Truth, declared his Belief of the Unity of the Deity, confeſſing withal that the Religions practiſed in the Empire were all loaded with Superſtition, that the Idols were nothing, and that he foreſaw Chriſtianity would one Day riſe upon their Ruin. However the Emperour did not change his own Religion. Pere Verbieſt died in the beginning of the Year 1688, much regretted by this Prince, who ſent him his own Phyſicians, and after his Death wrote a ſhort Panegyrick with his own Hand to be laid upon the Hearſe of the deceaſed: And gave two hundred Crowns in Gold, and ſeveral Pieces of Silk, towards furniſhing the Expence of his Funeral, which was magnificent, and performed with all the uſual Ceremonies of the Church. There was a Croſs carried before the Company, which conſiſted of all the Chriſtians in Pekin, who with Torches in their Hands walked through the Middle of that Town; the Emperor's Father in Law, repreſenting his Majeſty, and another great Lord going along with them. * Le Pere le Compte, Mem. de la Chine lan 1696. T. I. 2. let.

VERGNE (Peter Treſtand de la,) deſcended from an ancient Gentleman's Family in Languedoc, was born in 1618. His Parents being French Proteſtants he continued in that Perſuaſion his firſt twenty Years, when one of his Uncles prevailed with him to turn Roman Catholick. He proved a zealous Miſſionary, and brought over a great many People to his own Communion. He wrote a Book entituled, L'Examen General, &c. or a general Enquiry into all States and Conditions, ditions, and of the Sins which People are tempted to commit in them This Book was deſigned for Inſtruction to Confeſſors and Penitents; and being well receiv'd, he afterwards added another Volume relating to Merchants and Tradeſmen, which was printed under the borrowed Name of le Sieur de S. Germain: He was drowned croſſing a River April 1684. He was buried in the Chapel of the Caſtle of Terargues, in the Sevennes. His Character may be learned from the following Epitaph.

Expectat hic donec veniat immutatio ſua
V. Petrus de la Vergne Treſſan Presbyter,
Homo miſſus à Deo.
Ut in eo Clerici & Laici, Milites & Togati, Puſilli & Magni, ſexus uterque, nulla non ætas, genus omne hominum, in arcta via, quæ ducit ad vitam, Ductorem haberent non cæcum, nec conſuentem pulvillos ſub omni cubito manus, utque eſſent complures ſancti in Domo Cæſaris.
Quo nemo flagrantiùs juſtitiam eſuriit & ſitiit;
Nemo altiùs à Chriſto didicit, quia mitis eſt, & humiliscorde.
Nemo meliùs Evangelicum illud implevit, gratis accepiſtis, gratis date:
Nemo fœliciùs Apoſtolicum curſum cucurrit pertranſiens
Benefaciendo & ubique ſuadens de regno Dei.
Debuerat vir Apoſtolicus, nec modicæ fidei, ſuper
Aquas ambulare. Ita pater: Sed aliter
Placitum fuit ante te, in torrente obire maluiſti
De torrente voluptatis ſuæ mox potandum.
Aſcetæ optimo Hieronymo ſuo
Maria Felicia de Budos
M. de Portes, Famula Chriſti
Ann. MDCLXXXIV.
Quando ſublatus eſt; poſt factum planctum magnum, Poſuit.

VERHEYEN (Philip,) Doctor of Phyſick, and King's Profeſſor of Anatomy and Surgery at Louvain. His Father was a Labourer in a Village of the Country of Waes. He followed his Father's Buſineſs till two and twenty Years of Age; when the Parſon of the Pariſh finding him a Man of promiſing Parts, entered him in Latin about half a Year, and then procured him a Maintenance in Trinity College in Louvain. He made an extraordinary Progreſs in Humanity, Philoſophy, Anatomy, &c. and managed the Chair with great Reputation. He died 1710, 62 Years of Age. His anatomical Performance was received with great Applauſe, tranſlated into High Dutch and French, and read upon in ſome Italian Univerſities: There was a ſecond Edition of it in Latin printed in 1710. His next Work is entituled an anatomical Supplement, or the ſecond Book of the Anatomy of humane Bodies: A Diſcourſe upon Fevers: An Abridgment of Theory and Practice: The means to preſerve Health. * See the Abridgment of his Life prefixed to his Anatomy. Edit. 1710.

VERT (Claude de,) a Monk of the Clunic's Order, was born October 1645, and dy'd in May 1708. He apply'd himſelf moſtly to Liturgical Studies. He printed two Volumes upon this Subject, entituled, Plain, literal, and hiſtorical Explications of the Ceremonies of the Church: Upon which Head two other Volumes were printed after his Death. He had a Share in the Breviary of Cluni, and wrote Notes upon it. He wrote a Letter to M. Jurieu concerning the Ceremonies of the Maſs: he likewiſe tranſlated St. Bennet's Rule, with Notes, and a Diſſertation concerning the meaning of the Terms Miſſa and Communio, mentioned in St. Bennet's Rule. And laſtly, he had a Share in the Diſpute between P. Mabillon and the Abbot de la Trappe, whether Monks ought to apply themſelves to Study or not; and upon this Occaſion he has explained the ſeventy eighth Chapter of St. Bennet's Rule, under the borrowed Name of Fryer Columban. * Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII.

* VESPRIM: For retaken by the Emperor. An. 1565. in Morery Vol. II. read 1665.

UGLITZ, a City of Muſcovy. It ſtands in the Duchy of Roſtow, confining upon the Duchy of Jeroſlaw, within which ſome Geographers place it. Uglitz is particularly famous for Demetrius's Misfortune, Son to the Czar, John Baſilius. This young Prince being but nine Years of Age was aſſaſſinated at this Town by the Order of his Brother in Law Boris: After this Murder two counterfeited Demetrius's appeared, who revenged the Death of the young Prince, which cauſed great Diſturbances in Muſcovy. * Maty, Diction.

UGONUS (Matthias,) Biſhop of Famaguſta in Cyprus, flouriſhed in the Beginning of the ſixteenth Century. There is a Tract of his concerning patriarchal Dignity, written by way of Dialogue, and printed at Breſſe in the Year 1507. But his principal Performance is a Book concerning Councils, called Synodia Ugonia, printed at Venice in 1565. 'Tis one of the moſt exact and complete Works of this kind, which appeared in the ſixteenth Century.

VIATICUM: The Fathers and Councils gave this Name to Baptiſm, the holy Euchariſt, and Penance, which was adminiſter'd to dying Perſons, to give 'em a better Aſſurance of their Salvation. Baptiſm relates to the Catechumens; and in this Senſe St. Gregory, St. Baſil, Balſamon, and other Greek Authors, call it Ἐφόδιον. The Euchariſt was given to thoſe in full Communion; and often to Penitents who had receiv'd Abſolution; and ſometimes thoſe who had no Opportunity of receiving Abſolution had the holy Euchariſt ſent to them, as appears from the Caſe of Serapion, reported by Euſebius. Laſtly, Penance or Abſolution went under this Name, with reſpect to thoſe who were under Diſcipline, and not reconciled till the Point of Death. The Queſtion is, whether the Viaticum, mentioned in the thirteenth Canon of the Council of Nice, where 'tis decreed, that when any Perſon is near Death, he ought not to be deprived of the laſt and moſt neceſſary Viaticum; the Queſtion is, I ſay, whether this Term Viaticum means the Euchariſt or Abſolution: But 'tis plain by the Canon we are to underſtand it of Abſolution: For the Fathers of the Council declare that the Oblation, i. e. the Euchariſt, muſt not be adminiſter'd to Penitents, till after they have been examined by the Biſhop. The Council of Ancyra, Canon the ſeventh, lays down the ſame Rule, and ſo do the Councils of Carthage II. Can. 4. That of Gironne, Can. 9. and a great many others. Innocent I. in his Epiſtle to Exſuperius, reports, with reſpect to thoſe who have lived licentiouſly ſince their Baptiſm, that the Diſcipline of the Church was different. The primitive Biſhops, when the Church was under a State of Perſecution, uſed to put ſuch diſorderly Perſons under Penance, and refuſe them the Communion; but after the Emperors turned Chriſtians, and the Church was in an unperſecuted State, the Cuſtom was to grant Communion to all thoſe who deſired it at the Point of Death; but then in this Place we are not to underſtand the Euchariſt by the Word Communion: Pope Innocent means only Abſolution, which he tells us was deny'd dying Perſons by the Novatians; and the Reaſon he aſſigns why Communion was granted, makes it apparent he meant Abſolution by this Term; for he affirms, 'twas only given to reſcue the dying Perſons from Damnation. In the latter Ages not only Abſolution, but the holy Euchariſt was likewiſe granted all Penitents when paſt Hopes of living, provided they were in a Condition to receive it; excepting thoſe who were condemned for ſome capital Crime; theſe for a long time were barred the Benefit even of Abſolution both in France and other Churches; where no earlier than the Reign of Charles VI. at Gerſon's Remonſtrance, ſuch Malefactors were permitted to receive Abſolution; but then the Practice of refuſing 'em the holy Euchariſt ſtill continues in France, though allowed in the other Roman Catholick Churches. When Perſons are dying the Euchariſt is given them though they are not faſting, ſometimes in a particular Form, and this they call communicating with the Viaticum. * Morinus, de Pœnitentia, Albaſpinæus, Obſervat. Eccleſ. Rituals, &c.

VIC (Æneas,) a learned Antiquary of Parma in Italy, had from his Youth a ſtrong Inclination to this ſort of Learning, and ſpent twelve Years in Italy and elſewhere, in queſt of Medals, which he drew and engraved himſelf. His firſt Performance, printed at Venice A. D. 1555, is a genealogical Table of the twelve Cæſars, where he relates the Years of their Reign, and their Intermarriages with Remarks. Afterwards he wrote three and twenty Books of Roman Medals; and got the Effigies of the Ladies of the Cæſars Family engraved, beginning with Marcia, Julius Cæſar's Grandmother, and ending with Domitia, Domitian's Empreſs.

This Book was tranſlated out of Italian into Latin by Noel le Comte, and printed at Venice in the Year 1558. * Mart. Hank. de Roman. Rerum Scriptor.

VICARS, of the Empire. There are two of them viz the Elector Palatine, or the Elector of Bavaria (for this Privilege is conteſted between them) and the Elector of Saxony. The Vicariat of Bavaria or Palatine, reaches through Suavia, Franconia, Bavaria, and all the Countries through which the Rhine paſſes; or to ſpeak more properly, through all that part of Germany, which reaches from the Head of the Rhine and the Danube, as far as the low Countries, taking in all that, over and above, which holds of the Empire in Italy, Savoy, and Burgundy. The Extent of the Vicariat or Vicars Juriſdiction in Saxony, takes place in the Provinces where the Saxon Law is obſerved; that is in the Duchies of Brunſwick and Lunenbourg, of Pomerania, Meckelbourg, and Bremen. &c. and through all the other Countries within the Circles of Upper and Lower Saxony, notwithſtanding the Saxon Law is not the Meaſure of Right in ſeveral of thoſe Places. Theſe Vicars Exerciſe their Authority ſeparately within the Provinces of their Juriſdiction, excepting in the imperial Chamber of Spire where the Names of both the Vicars are enterd upon the Records, becauſe Juſtice is there adminiſter'd in the Name of all the States of the Empire. Their chief Buſineſs is to nominate to benefices, and in Caſes of Vacancy, to preſent qualifyed Perſons to the Chapters of Cathedral and collegiate Churches and Abbies. This Privilege in Germany is called the Right of the Regale. Theſe Imperial Vicars receive the Revenues of the Emperour's Demeſns, and diſpoſe of them for publick Buſineſs. They receive Fealty and Homage from the Vaſſals of the Empire, and give Inveſtiture or Poſſeſſion, excepting Principalities, and other great Eſtates; The Inveſtiture of which is preſerved for the Emperour who at his coming to the Crown confirmes all the Vicars have done during the Interregnum: And here thoſe who have done Homage to the Vicars are to repeat it to the Emperour. We are to obſerve that the Vicars perform their Functions in the Emperour's abſence or after his Death during the Interregnum. This is their Authority, I ſay, in Caſe there is no King of the Romans; for this Prince is perpetual Vicar General of the Empire. The two Vicars of the Empire do all the Buſineſs of the old Count Palatines, who adminiſtered Juſtice through the Empire in the Emperour's Name.

The five ſecular Electors have likewiſe their Vicars, for executing great Offices belonging to the imperial Crown, which are, the chief Cupbearer, the Lord high Steward, the Lord Marſhal, the Lord Chamberlain, and the Lord high Treaſurer of the Empire. All theſe five Vicars are hereditary Officers, and execute their Office in the Abſence of thoſe they repreſent, that is, in the Abſence of the King of Bohemia, the Elector of Bavaria, the Elector of Saxony, the Elector of Brandenbourg, and the Elector Palatine. But the Function of the Lord Marſhal's Vicar has a much greater Compaſs than that of the others: For as the Elector of Saxony, in Virtue of his being great Marſhal always regulates the Circumſtances relating to Apartments, Precedency, and other Ceremonies at imperial and electoral Aſſemblies, at Elections, Coronations, and in the Emperour's Progreſs or Journies; ſo the Vicar in his Abſence takes care of all theſe Matters. And lately ſince there is a ninth Electorate erected in Favour of the Houſe of Hannover there is likewiſe a New Office ſettled for this new Elector. Heiſs. Hiſtoire de l'Empire. Du Cange. Gloſſar. Latinitatis. Memoires du Tems.

* VICTOR II, ſucceeded Leo IX. in the See of Rome. The beginning of his Pontificate was dangerous and diſturbed: It is ſaid that a Subdeacon would have poyſoned him in the conſecrated Wine: That the Villany was miraculouſly diſcovered: For after the Pope had conſecrated, he could not lift up the Chalice; and that the Deacon who had thrown poiſon into the Wine was immediately poſſeſſed. This Pope held a Council at Florence, where he depoſed ſeveral Symoniacal Biſhops. He diſpatched Hildebrand into France as Legate, where he held ſeveral Councils. This Pope was ſucceeded by Stephen X. * Baronius, in Annal. Leo a Oſtiens. Sigebert, &c.

* VICTOR III. A Cardinal Prieſt, ſucceeded Gregory VII. May 24. A. D. 1086. He was deſcended from a noble Family at Beneventum, and had ſpent all his time in the Monaſtery of Mont-Caſſin, where he was Abbot when choſen into the Papal Chair. He refuſed the Dignity at firſt: And thus the See continued void almoſt a Year. In the mean time the Antipope Guibert ſeiz'd part of the Church of Rome, and endeavoured to get himſelf owned a legitimate Succeſſour. To prevent his Uſurpation, the Cardinals, and Biſhops, who had recogniſed Gregory, coming to Rome at Eaſter A. D. 1086, repeated their Requeſt to Deſiderius (for that was this Victor's Name) to accept the Popedom. And to prevent their being diſappointed, they took him by Force, carried him to St. Lucia's Church, and proclaimed him Pope under the Name of Victor III, but he ſtill refuſing the Promotion, withdrew to Mount Caſſin, and lived privately. At laſt he gave way to be conveyed to Rome by the Princes of Salernum & Capua, who put him in Poſſeſſion of the Holy See. However, his Title was conteſted by Guibert, and his Faction. In ſhort, his Competitor forced him to give way, and retire to his Monaſtery. From whence he came out in Auguſt following and held a Council at Beneventum, where he excommunicated Guibert and his adherents. While this Council was held, Victor fell ſick, returned immediately to Mont-Caſſin, and died there September 16. 1087. He wrote ſome Dialogues, Epiſtles &c. * Petrus Diaconus, de Vir. Illuſt. Benedic. Leo Oſtienſis. Otho Friſinghenſis. Ciaconius. Baronius. Poſſevin. &c.

VICTOR-AMEDÆUS II. Duke of Savoy, was born May 14. 1666, and ſucceeded His Father Charles-Emmanuel II. A. D. 1675. His Mother Mary-Jean-Babtiſt, of Savoy-Nemours being Regent. This Princeſs projected a Match between the Duke her Son, and her Niece the Infanta of Portugal. Daughter to Don Petro, Prince Regent. The Articles were ſigned May 14. 1679. And to make the Buſineſs practicable, the Eſtates of Portugal repealed a fundamental Law, made at Lamego A. D. 1145, by Virtue of which 'twas prohibited to marry Heireſſes out of the Kingdom, or engage them with foreign Husbands, under the Penalty of loſing their patrimonial Eſtates. The Pope granted a Diſpenſation, and on the 25th of March 1681 the Contract was publiſhed at Lisbon by Proxy. The next Year the Portugueſe Fleet ſailed to Nice, to take the Duke on Board and convey him to Portugal; but ill Health being pretended, his Highneſs ſtayed at Home. In ſhort; this matrimonial Engagement was broken, and the 10th of April 1684, he married Ann-Mary of Orleans youngeſt Daughter of Philip of France Duke of Orleans; her Mother being Henrietta Ann, Daughter of Charles I. King of Great Britan. This Duke of Savoy in 1686 with the Aſſiſtance of ſome French Troops drove the Vaudois out of the Valleys of Luzerne, Angrone &c, but at the ſame time he engaged himſelf with the French King's Enemies, and ſigned the League at Augsburg. In 1687 he went to the Carnaval at Venice, where with the Duke of Bavaria and ſeveral other Princes, he concerted Meaſures for executing the League. His firſt Step was the recalling of the Vaudois. And June the fourth in 1690, he declared himſelf openly againſt France: But it was not long before he loſt all Savoy; and Auguſt the 19th following, M. de Catinat, afterwards Marſhal of France, routed him at the Battel of Staffard. His Highneſs retired to Turin, and ſtayed there while the French took Saluce, Savillan, and Suſa from him; and in the Year 1691, he loſt Villa-Franca, Nice, and Montmelian. In 1692 he marched into Dauphiné took Gap and Ambrun; where he ſuffered the Calviniſt Miniſters to preach publickly. But he was quickly forced to quit this Province, where all the Booty he carried off, was only the Bells belonging to the two Towns abovementioned. The next Year 1693, he ſat down before St. Bridget's Fort near Pigneroll, and took it a Fortnight after the opening of the Trenches; but then he was obliged to march into the Plain of Marſall, then overrun by the French: And here October 4 he was defeated by Marſhal Catinat, with the loſs of between 8 and 9 thouſand Men killed, and two thouſand taken priſoners. In 1694, he blocked up Caſal, which the next Year the French King ſurrendered to the Duke of Mantua, having firſt razed all the Fortifications.

At laſt the Duke of Savoy ſomewhat tired with ill luck, concluded a Peace with France Auguſt. 30 1696. By Virtue of this Treaty, the French King reſtored him Villa-Franca, Nice, Suſa, Montmelian, and Pigneroll, which was demoliſhed and, the Works not to be repaired by an Article of the Treaty. Another Article was, that the Duke of Burgundy, afterwards Dauphin, ſhould marry the Princeſs Mary-Adelaida the Duke's eldeſt Daughter, as ſoon as marriageable, and that in the meantime ſhe ſhould be educated in France. This Princeſs was immediately conveyed thither, and upon the 7th of December 1697, the Duke of Burgundy married her. Charles II. King of Spain dying in 1700, the Duke of Anjou having the Crown left him by the late King's laſt Will and Teſtament, and that diſpoſition being agreed to by the States of Spain; the Duke of Savoy owned this Prince lawful King of Spain; and entered into a Treaty with the two Crowns of France and Spain, who made him Generaliſſimo of their Army in Italy. In Conſequence of this Treaty, Philip V. King of Spain, married Mary-Loüiſa-Gabrielle, the Duke of Savoy's ſecond Daughter. This Nuptial Ceremony paſſed by proxy at Turin September 11; 1701. The Duke of Savoy, was now obliged to keep in the French Intereſt againſt the Emperour and the reſt of the Confederacy. But the French King ſuſpecting his Conſtancy, and ſeizing ſome of his Troops, he went off to the Emperor and engaged againſt France and Spain. Upon this hoſtile Turn, the French made themſelves Maſters of all Savoy, of Montmelian which was demoliſhed, of the City and County of Nice, and of almoſt all the Towns in Piemont, excepting Turin the Capital, which was both beſieged and defended with equal Vigour; till Prince Eugéne marched with his Army out of Germany, and croſſing a great part of Italy attacked the French at Turin; broke through their Retrenchments, gave them an entire Defeat, raiſed the Siege, and in Conſequence of this Advantage, drove the French and Spaniſh clear out of Italy. To conclude; by the Peace at Utrecht, the Duke of Savoy had not only all his Dominions yielded to him, but was likewiſe declared King of Sicily, which Title he has ſince reſigned to the Emperour, and is now King of Sardinia. * Memoires du Tems.

* VICTORIUS MARIANUS, wrote a new Paſcal Cycle: It begins A. D. 28, and ends A. D. 559, and thus it contains five hundred thirty two Years. There are eight Columns in it. The fourth Council of Orleans, held in 541, decreed, that all the Biſhops within the Provinces of which that Council conſiſted, ſhould make uſe of this Cycle for ſettling Eaſter Day. * Gennad. in Catal. c. 48. Iſidor, Orig. lib. 6, cap. 17. Baronius. Poſſevin. &c.

VICTRICIUS (St.) Archbiſhop of Roan, was born in Gaul, in the Reign of the Emperour Conſtantine the Great, about the Year 330. He was a Soldier by Profeſſion, but deſir'd a Diſcharge, that he might ſpend more of his time in religious Exerciſes. The Commander of the Legion, and the General of the Army, were much diſpleaſed with the Motion, and ſentenced him to loſe his Head. But the Executioner being miraculouſly ſtruck blind as Paulinus reports, could not do his Office. He was ſent to the Emperour, who not only pardoned him, but commended his Reſolution. After having ſpent ſome time in Retirement, he was choſen Archbiſhop of Roan in the Year 385. He took a great deal of Pains in propagating Chriſtianity, not only in his Diocеſs, but amongſt the Morini, and Nervii that is in Artois in Flanders, and in Hainault. Being charged with Heterodoxy, he took a Journey to Rome, to juſtify himſelf, A. D. 403, the Emperor Honorius being then there. Having given Satisfaction he returned to Roan, and conſulted Pope Innocent I. about ſeveral Points of Diſcipline. Innocent ſent him a Collection of Canons practiſed in the Church of Rome, and a Letter in Anſwer to his Queſtions of Diſcipline. 'Tis not certainly known what Year he died, but he is honourably remembered on the 17th of Auguſt: He was an Acquaintance of St. Martius of Tours. * Paulinus, Epiſt. 18. & 37. Innocent I. Epiſt. ad Victric. Sulpit. Sever. Dial 3. La Pommerai, vie des Archev. de Roven. Baillet, Vies des Saints, VIDDIN, or Bidin. A Town in Europæan Turky. Some Maps place it in Bulgaria, and ſome in Servia. It ſtands upon the Danube, fifty five, or ſixty Leagues below Belgrade. 'Tis fortify'd, and the Reſidence of a Sangiac, and an Archbiſhop. * Maty, Diction.

VIENNE, conſiſting of two parts, one called Old Vienne and the other called Caſtle Vienne. It belongs to the Duke of Lorain, and ſtands within the Duchy of Bar, upon the River Ayſen, near Champaigne, two Leagues below St. Menehoud. Vienne is ſuppoſed to be the Old Auxenna. * Baudrand.

* VIGILIUS: This Vigilius was not Biſhop of Trent but Tapſus, a City of the Byzacene Province in Africk, as appears from the Title of a Book againſt Eutyches in an old Manuſcript. His Name likewiſe ſtands in the Notitia, or Liſt of the African Biſhops, drawn up in the time of the Perſecution raiſed by Hunnericus: In this Liſt he is called Biſhop of Tapſus, and ſtands the laſt upon the Roll of the Byzacene Province. Theodulphus aſſures us farther, that this Vigilius was an African Biſhop. Thoſe who ſuppoſe the eleven Books of the Trinity, written by way of Dialogue, and which go under St. Athanaſius's Name, belong to this Vigilius of Tapſus, are not ill founded in their Conjecture. This Work ſtands in an old Manuſcript, with the Tracts of this Biſhop againſt Neſtorius and Eutyches. However, P. Bernard de Montfaucon is of Opinion, that the latter is only a Tranſlation of St. Athanaſius. Vigilius Tapſenſis is likewiſe the Author of a pretended Conference between St. Athanaſius and Arius, held before the Judge Probus. Vigilius cites this Conference in his Tract againſt Eutyches. He likewiſe wrote a Diſcourſe againſt an Arian called Varimadus, and another againſt Felician an Arian, which goes under St. Auguſtin's Name. The five Books againſt Eutyches have always been printed with Vigilius Tapſenſis's Name to them. P. Queſnel, who reckons the Athanaſian Creed to Vigilius Tapſenſis, gives probable, but not demonſtrative Reaſons for his Opinion. * Baronius in annal. Bellarmin, de Script. Eccleſ. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. IV. & V.

VIGO, a Spaniſh Town, with a large commodious Haven, upon the Atlantick Ocean. 'Tis ſituate in Galicia, between Bayonne, Tuy, and Ponte Vedra, four or five Leagues from each. The Misfortune the Count de Chateaurenauld met with here may be ſeen in the Life of Lewis XIV. * Maty, Diction. Memoires du tems.

VILLA HERMOSA, a ſmall Town in Spain, within the Kingdom of Valencia. 'Tis near the River Millas, fifteen Leagues from Valencia to the North. Villa Hermoſa gives the Title of a Duchy, and is the Capital of the Country of Millarez, * Maty, Diction.

VILLA-JOYSA, or Villa-Loyſa, a Town of Spain in the Kingdom of Valencia. It ſtands upon the Coaſt, five Leagues from Alicant to the North. * Baudrand.

VILLA NUEVA DELLA SERENA, a Town within Eſtremadura in Spain; it ſtands upon the Northern Bank of the River Guadiana, three Leagues below Medelina. * Maty, Diction.

VILLA RICCA, an American Town in Chili. It ſtands in the Imperial Quarter near the Andes, about forty Leagues from Valdivia to the Eaſt. There is a Vulcano of the ſame Name near this Town. * Baudrand.

VILLA VITIOSA, a Town with a ſtately Palace belonging to the King of Portugal. It ſtands in the Province Alenteio, nine Leagues from Evora to the Eaſt. Maty, Diction.

VILLACH, a ſmall German Town in Upper Carinthia; it ſtands at the Confluence of the Drave and the Geyl, ſix Leagues above Clagenfurt. Villach is the Capital of a Country which belongs to the Biſhop of Bamberg. There is a Citadel and a Palace, where the Governor, who repreſents the Biſhop, reſides. 'Tis ſuppoſed that Villach is the old Teurnia, or Tiburnia. * Baudrand.

VILLALPANDUS (John Baptiſt,) a Jeſuit of Corduba. He wrote a Commentary upon the Prophet Ezekiel, printed at Rome in three Volumes Folio. 'Tis one of the moſt learned Performances that was ever written upon the Prophets. His Deſcription of the City and Temple of Jeruſalem is reckoned a Maſterpiece. * Alegamb. Sotwel, Biblioth. Societ. Jeſu. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. XVII. Villalpandus died in the Year 1608.

VILLARS ( ) un Bel Eſprit, of the ſeventeenth Century, known by the Name of the Abbot of Villars. He is the Author of a ſmall Book, entituled le Comte de Gabalis, which has the Reputation of being handſomely written. The five Converſations, of which it conſiſts, are as, M. de Vigneul-Morville aſſures us in his Miſcellanies of Hiſtory and Learning, only the Reſult of ſome Conferences which this Abbot had with ſome Men of Wit and Gayety like himſelf. When this Book appeared firſt, no great Notice was taken of it; but at laſt 'twas thought it might have dangerous Conſequences; upon which the Abbot was forbidden preaching, and the Book cenſured. It is not certainly known whether the Author was in jeſt or in earneſt; the ſecond Volume, which he promiſed to publiſh, might poſſibly have decided this Queſtion. But ſoon after the unfortunate Abbot had his Throat cut by ſome Ruffians, on the Road from Paris to Lyons. 'Tis ſuſpected by ſome, that the main Deſign of this Author was to ridicule Religion. M. Bayle, in his critical Dictionary, informs us in the Article Borri, that this Borri was ſuppoſed to write a Book, entituled la Chiave del Cabinetto del Cavaliere Gioſeppe Franceſco Borri Milaneſe. That this Book contains ten Letters, of which the two firſt dated at Copenhagen A. D. 1666, are the ſame in Subſtance with the Compte de Gabalis, publiſhed by the Abbot Villars in 1670. And here Bayle leaves the curious to examine which of theſe two Performances ought to paſs for the Original. This Abbot likewiſe wrote a Book entituled, of Delicacy, where he defends the Entretiens d'Ariſte & d'Eugene, written by P. Bouhours. * Memoires du tems.

le

VINDEMIALIS. There were ſeveral African Biſhops of this Name during the Perſecution raiſed by the Vandals in the fifth Century; amongſt the reſt there was one who was baniſhed by Hunnericus with other Prelates into the Iſland of Corſica, and ſentenc'd to cut Timber for building of Ships. He died under rough Uſage and Indigence. Beſides this there was another Vindemialis of Capſa, who ſuffer'd Martyrdom in Africk, ſome time after the Baniſhment of the other. This Prelate, with Eugenius Biſhop of Carthage, oppoſed the Arians, and diſproved their Heterodoxy, not only by Diſcourſes, but by Miracles. 'Tis ſaid that Cyrillus an Arian, who called himſelf Patriarch of Africk, had a Mind to produce a Countermiracle. For this purpoſe he gave a poor Fellow fifty Gold Crowns to pretend himſelf blind; and that when Cyrillus paſſed through the great Square, the poor Man ſhould lie there, and beg a Cure of him, and that he ſhould declare his Sight reſtored, when Cyrillus pronounced this Sentence, viz. To ſhew that the Faith we profeſs is True, your Sight is now reſtored you. But the Event was quite Contrary to what was concerted; for this counterfeit blind Man immediately found himſelf really blind, and was forced to own the Impoſture, and apply for Cure to the catholick Biſhops. Vindemialis and Longinus layed their Hands upon him, while Eugenius ſigned him with the Croſs upon his Eyes. This Application recovered his Sight. Hunnericus provoked with this Superiority on the catholick Side, put Vindemialis and Longinus to the Torture, and afterwards beheaded them. * Victor Vitenſis. lib. 3. Ruinart. Hiſt. Vandal. Baillet, au 2 de Mai.

VITELLI (Chiappin,) Marquiſs of Cetenia, Field Marſhal to the Duke of Alva, when he was Governor of the Low Countries. Bitelli was a brave Officer, and had done Coſmo, Great Duke of Florence, good Service; his military Qualifications being more than ordinary, made Philip II. King of Spain, deſire him to command his Forces under the Duke of Alva. He did great Service in Flanders, and died when Requeſcenius ſucceeded the Duke in the Government of the Low Countries. He was ſo prodigiouſly fat, that he was forced to have his Belly bound in with a Scarf, when he walked: And being a great Eater, and ſuppoſed to be a Sceptick, the Flanderkin Proteſtants made him the following Epitaph:

O Deus Omnipotens, craſſi miſerere Vitelli,
Quem mors præveniens non ſinit eſſe bovem.
Corpus in Italia eſt, tenet inteſtina Brabantus;
Aſt animam nemo. Cur? Quia non habuit.

'Tis ſaid that by uſing over much Vinegar with his Meat, he became ſo lean, that his Skin might ſerve for a Cloak to wrap about him. * Du Maurier, in the Life of William Prince of Orange.

VITRE, in Latin Vitræum, Vitraicum, Vitruviacum, and Victoriacum, a City in Upper Bretagne, within the Dioceſs of Renns, upon the Confines of Maine and Anjou: It ſtands upon the Deſcent of two Hills, the River Villaine runs between them: 'Tis a Town of great Antiquity, and was built, as 'tis ſaid, by one Vitruvius a Trojan. The Chriſtian Religion, A. D. 70. was received here, St. Clair, Biſhop of Nantes, being the Miſſionary. This Town was formerly the Apannage or Portion of the younger Brothers of the Duke of Bretagne: 'Tis the firſt and moſt conſiderable of the nine ancient Baronies of the Province being divided into ſeven diſtinct Courts of Juſtice, which have ſeveral Marquiſates, Viſcomties, and other titled Eſtates, with near a hundred Pariſhes within it's Juriſdiction. 'Tis upon the ſcore of this Barony that the Lords of the Houſe of Tremouille, to whom it belongs, have a Right of preſiding at an Aſſembly of the Eſtates of the Province, which frequently meet in this Town, becauſe of the commodious Situation. Amongſt many other fine Churches, there is a collegiate one call'd Magdalene's, built A. D. 1209. by Andrew Baron of Vitrê. The Town has three Pariſhes, four Monaſteries, and three Nunneries. On the outſide of the Town there is a fine Park to walk in. Vitré has frequently ſuffer'd by the Wars between the Dukes of Bretagne and the Barons of Vitré. In 1589 the Duke of Mercœur, Governor of Bretagne, and Head of the League againſt King Henry III. beſieged it in Perſon with ten thouſand choice Men, and was forced to raiſe the Siege, * D'Argentré & Pierre le Baut, Hiſt. de Bretagne. Chron. de Vitré, &c.

VIVEMTIOL, Archbiſhop of Lyons in the fifth and ſixth Centuries, He held a friendly Correſpondence with Avitus Alcimus Biſhop of Vienne, and with his Brother Apollinarius, Biſhop of Valence. He aſſiſted at the Council Eſpaone A. D. 517, and convened a Dioceſan Synod, where Stephen, Treaſurer to Sigiſmond, King of the Burgundians, was cenſured for an inceſtuous Marriage. The Exerciſes of Diſcipline upon this Man; drew Baniſhment on Viventiol. He has a Holiday upon the twelfth of July. * Avitus, Epiſt. 17, 52, 58, & 64. Baillet, Vies des Saintes.

* VIVIANI (Vincenzio.) Beſides what is mentioned of him in the Engliſh Supplement to Morery, he publiſhed his Book entituled Enodatio Problematum univerſis Geometris propoſitorum a Cl. Claudio Comiers 1677. La Struttura, & Quadratura eſatta d. l'intorno, e delle parti d'un nuovo Cielo ammirabile, ed uno degli antichi, delle Volte regolari degli Architetti. He likewiſe publiſhed a poſthumous Tract of Proportions, done by Galilæus, to explain the 5th Book of Euclid, which ſeems ſomewhat perplexed upon this Subject: 'Tis entituled, Quinto Libro degli Elementi d'Euclide, overo Scienza Univerſale delle Proporzioni, ſpiegata colla dottrina del Galileo, 1674. He died September 1703, above 81 Years of Age, and gave good Proof of a pious Diſpoſition, which I mention becauſe ſome People miſtook him for a Perſon of ſlender Principles. * Hiſtoire de l'Academie Royale des Sciences, for the Year 1703. Monconis, Voyages. Part 1. Greg. Læti. Italia regnante.

ULIELAND, or Flieland, an Iſland belonging to Holland. It is ſituate by the Zuyder-Zee, with the Iſle of Schelling to the North, and that of the Texel to the South; 'tis a great Road or Rendezvous for the Fleets which go to the Northern or Baltick Seas. * Maty, Diction.

ULIELAND, a ſmall Iſland in Northern America: It lies upon the Coaſt of New England, and belongs to the Engliſh. But it takes it's Name from the Dutch, who formerly held it. * Maty, Diction.

VOLCANOS: So the Mountains are called which diſcharge Flame. They are ſo called from Vulcan, the pretended God of Fire. The Reader ſhall have a Liſt of the chief Volcanos in the four Quarters of the World.

Volcanos in Europe.

In Sicily, Mount Ætna, or Mount Gibel.

In the Iſle of Stromboly near Sicily, the Mountain Stromboli.

In the Kingdom of Naples, Mount Veſuvius.

In Iſtelande, Mount Hecla.

In Muſcovy, the Mount of Jeniſcey, with three others, confining upon the Country of the Tingoeſes.

In Aſia.

In Natolia, the Mount of Gorante, formerly called Chimæra.

In the Iſland of Sumatra, in India, Mount Balaluano.

In the Moluccas, the Mountain of Gumanapi, in a ſmall Iſland near Banda, which the French call la Grenade de Banda.

The Mount Ternate, in the Iſland of the ſame Name.

Mount Tola, in one of the Iſlands of Maura near Gilolo.

In the Philippins, Mount Majongo, in the Iſland of Lucon.

The Vulcano of Tandaia, in an Iſland of the ſame Name.

In Japan, Mount Jerchu, in the Iſle of Niphon.

The Vulcano in the Iſland of Fire, near Xicoco.

Mount Sine Parama, in the Iſle of Niphon, near Meaco.

In Africk.

Mount Benigua Zeval, in the Kingdom of Fez in Barbary.

In the Azores, the Vulcano of Fayal, in the Iſland of the ſame Name.

Pictenerif, in the Iſland of Tenerif.

In the Iſle of Bourbon, the Red Mountain.

In the Iſland of St. Croſs, the Vulcano of St. Croſs.

In New Guinea in Aſia, the Mount of Vulcan's Iſland, with three others which ſhoot Flame.

In America.

In the Kingdom of Chili, a Volcano without a Name; the Volcano of Antoco; the Volcano of Auton, the Volcano of Chillan; the Volcano of Chuanauca; the Volcano of Copiapo; the Volcano of Coquimbo; the Volcano of Huape; the Volcano of Ligua; the Volcanos of Quechucabi; of St. Clement of Villarica; of Peterou; the Volcano of Notuco; the Volcano of Oſorno.

In Peru, the Volcano of Arequipa, the Volcanos of Coca, of Malpa, and of Pinta.

In Popaian, the Volcano de los Coconucos; the Volcano de los Paſſos; the Volcano of Quimbaia.

In New Spain, the Volcano of Guatimala; the Volcano of Mombacho; the Volcano of Nicaragua; the Volcano of Popochampeque; the Volcano of San-Salvador.

In the new Kingdom of Granada; the Volcano of Tocaymo; the Volcano of Vilez. * Baudrand.

VOORN, an Iſland belonging to the United Provinces. It lies in South Holland at the Mouth of the Maeſe. The Brill is the chief Town. This Iſland, with thoſe of Goerée and Overflackee which lie near it, is what they call Voornland, and was formerly Parcel of Zeland. * Maty, Diction.

UR, a City in Chaldæa, the native Country of Terah, and of his Son Abraham. Ur is Fire in Hebrew, which Signification gave occaſion to an old Jewiſh Tradition, that the Chaldæans threw Abraham and his Brother Haran into the Fire, becauſe they would not worſhip their pretended Gods; that Haran wanting Faith was burnt to Death; but that Abraham was reſcu'd by a Miracle. St. Jerom mentions this Jewiſh Tradition, to which the Rabbins have tacked a great many other Circumſtances; but 'tis plain by the Text in Geneſis that Ur is the Name of a Chaldæan Town. Ammianus Marcellinus informs us that there was a Town call'd Ur in Meſopotamia, which ſtood upon the Road from the Tigris to Niſibis. Eupolemus in his Hiſtory of the Jews, cited by Euſebius, reports, that Part of Babylon called Camarina, is likewiſe called Uriah; and Pliny mentions the Town Ur upon the Euphrates. The firſt of theſe three Places is moſt probably the City of Ur mention'd in the Scripture. * Geneſ. Chap. 11. and 15, Bochart, in Phaleg.

URBANUS, was deputed by the Catholicks, with Theodorus and Menædamus, to the Emperor Valens then at Nicomedia; their Buſineſs was to complain of the Arians: The Emperor ſent them all there back in a Veſſel without Ballaſt; and when ſhe was out at Sea, the Sailors ſet her on fire, and ſlipt into the Boat. And thus theſe three Commiſſioners, who were forced to keep the Ship, loſt their Lives for their Orthodoxy A. D. 370. The Greek Church fixes their Feſtival on the 18th of May, and the Latins to the 5th of September. * Socrat. Hiſt. lib. 4. cap. 16. Sozomen, lib. 6. cap. 14. Theodoret, lib. 4. cap. 24.

URN, a Veſſel uſed by the ancients for ſeveral Purpoſes. Sometimes they put the Names of thoſe that were to fight at the publick Spectacles in them, and drew them out by way of Lots; ſometimes they threw their Votes into them at Elections of Magiſtrates; and ſometimes the Judges threw their written Opinion into Urns, which was done to collect the Majority of the Bench; and laſtly Urns were made uſe of to receive the Aſhes of the Dead after their Bodies were burnt. The Ancients ſet theſe Urns ſometimes under Tomb Stones, and ſometimes they kept 'em in their Houſes: The Emperor Trajan ordered his Aſhes to be lodged in a golden Urn; and which was placed upon that noble Column which is ſtill to be ſeen at Rome. King Demetrius's Urn was likewiſe Gold, and the Roman General Marcellus, who took Syracuſe, had one of Silver. Spartian relates, that the Emperor Severus's Aſhes were carried to Rome in a golden Urn: But Dion. Caſſius who is more to be credited, ſays his Urn was only Marble; and Herodian affirms it Alabaſter.

Varro ordered his Aſhes to be put in an earthern Urn, with Leaves of Myrtle, Olive, and Poplar; this Pliny calls the Pythagorean Faſhion, becauſe it was the moſt plain and ordinary. The earthen Urns for ordinary People were commonly larger, becauſe leſs Care was taken to burn their Bodies down to Aſhes, and therefore the Bones, which were but half conſumed, took up more room; or elſe becauſe one Urn frequently ſerved for the Aſhes of a whole Family, at leaſt for thoſe of the Husband and Wife, as we may learn from the firſt Verſe of an old Inſcription;

Urna brevis geminum quamvis tenet iſta cadaver.

As to the Shape of Urns, thoſe of Earth were pretty near the Figure of our common Pots, excepting that they were higher and narrower in the Neck: A great many of them ſhoot to the Narrowneſs of a Point in the Foot; ſome of them have Handles, and ſome have none. They are made without Ornament and emboſſing, excepting ſome few which have humane, or other animal Figures, upon them: But thoſe which are caſt in Braſs and other Metals, and made for Perſons of Diſtinction, have moſt of them ſomething of Sculpture and Baſrelief round about, as appears from ſeveral Authors and Medals.

In Ægypt there are ſome earthen Urns ornamented with Hieroglyphicks, and filled with Mummy, which is very particular, becauſe the Ægyptians uſed to embalm the whole Corps, neither were the Urns big enough to receive them.

Amongſt the great Number of Urns found at Rome, ſome are round, ſome ſquare, ſome great, ſome ſmall, ſome quite plain, others emboſſed; ſome have Epitaphs upon them, others have only the Name of the Perſons they belonged to: and ſome have only theſe two Letters, D. M. Diis manibus, that is, to the Ghoſts of Perſons departed; and ſometimes there was only the Name of the Potter that made them ſcratched upon the Handle, or on the bottom.

The Ancients had ways to preſerve Urns, and to hinder the Aſhes from mingling with other Earth. To this purpoſe they commonly placed the Urn upon the little ſquare Pillars on which their Epitaph was cut. They ſometimes lodged them in Coffins made of Free-ſtone or Marble, as we may learn from the following Verſes;

Te lapis obteſtor, leviter ſuper oſſa quieſce;
Et noſtro cineri ne gravis eſſe velis.

Farther, People of Quality had Vaults where they lodg'd their Anceſtors Aſhes. There was one of this kind found at Nimes; the Pavement of the Vault was inlayed, and the Wall full of Niches, where Glaſs Urns gilded were ſet round, and filled with Aſhes.

At Præneſte, a City in Italy, they uſed to make uſe of Urns to caſt Lots, as 'tis hinted by Horace in this half Verſe.

Divinâ mota anus Urnâ.

'Twas a ſort of Divination practiſed in the following manner: They threw abundance of Letters into an Urn, and then ſhaked it. When theſe Letters were well ſhuffled they turned them out, and the Words which happened to be made out of them as they lay, was the thing they were to depend on, and as it were the oracular Reſolution. When Tully lived this ſort of Divination was out of Credit, and none but little People minded it. * Cicer. de Divinat. Herodian. Dion. Caſſius. Plutarch. Danet.

USENBERG (the Barony of) is a ſmall Country within the Circle of Suabia, lying between the Marquiſate of Hochberg, the Barony of Malberg, and the Rhine. This Country had formerly independent Lords, but now it belongs to the Houſe of Auſtria, and the principal Places in it are Kentſingen and Endingen. * Maty, Diction.

*USHER: For King James preferred him A. D. 1626. in Morery Vol. II. read 1625.

USORA, a Country in European Turky. It lies in Boſnia, Arki le Turk is the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

USOUS, Brother to Hypſuranius a Tyrian, who happening to fall out with his Brother, made him a Boat of a Tree made hollow, and put to Sea: Tibullus ſeems to make him the firſt Adventurer upon the Salt Water.

Prima ratem ventis credere docta Tyros.

The Phœnician Prieſts reckoned 2300 Years from this time. But they were miſtaken in their Chronology, for Tyre was not built many Years before the Deſtruction of Troy. According to Joſephus, Tyre was no more than 240 Years older than the Temple of Jeruſalem. * Sanchoniathon, apud Euſeb. Præpar. Evangel. lib. 1. Tibul. lib. 1. Eleg. 7. Marſham, Can. Chron. Du Pin, Biblioth. Univerſ. des Hiſt. Prof.

UTRECHT: For paſſing over his Right to Charles V. An. 1327. in Morery Vol. II. read 1527.

UTZBERG, a Town with a Bailywick of the ſame Name: It lies between the Landgraviat of Darmſtad, and the Counties of Hannover and Erpach, and belongs to the Palatinate of the Rhine. * Maty, Diction.

UTZNACH, a Town with a Bailywick. It lies within the Country of Gaſteren in Switzerland, between the Cantons of Switz and Glaris, to which it belongs in common. * Maty, Diction.

VUCHEU, a City in China. It ſtands upon the River Lienſam, in the Province Kianſi, where 'tis the ſeventh in Conſideration. It has five great Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

VYZA BILZIER, a Town in European Turky. It ſtands in Romania, eight and twenty Leagues from Conſtantinople to the Weſt. 'Tis an Archbiſhop's See, and the Reſidence of a Singiac. * Maty, Diction.

W.

WACKTENDONCK. A ſmall Town in Spaniſh Guelderland. 'Tis fortifyed with Works and a Caſtle, and ſtands upon the River Niers, two Leagues from the Town Gelders to the South. * Maty, Diction.

WADDING (Luke,) an Iriſh Franciſcan Monk who lived at Rome and died there A. D. 1655. He wrote the Bibliotheque or Hiſtory of the Authors of his Order. Henry Willot gained ſome Reputation by his Book of the Franciſcan Writers, printed at Liege A. D. 1591. But his Credit was quite eclipſed by Luke Wadding's Bibliotheque printed at Rome A. D. 1650 together, though diſtinctly, with his eight Volumes of the Annals of his Order. This Work was very well received upon the ſcore of Wadding's Character for Capacity and good Faith. But ſome things having eſcaped his Enquiry, P. Francis Harold has undertaken to correct Wadding's Bibliotheque and Annals, which latter he has likewiſe abridged. * Nicolas Antonio, Præf. Biblioth. Hiſpan. Baillet, Jugem. des Sçavans ſur les Bibliothecaires.

WAES (The Country of) a ſmall Territory in Spaniſh Flanders. It lies between the Seigneurie of Dendermonde, and the Country of the four Offices. The Towns of St. Nicolas and Rupelmunde are the chief Places. * Maty, Diction.

WAGENSEIL (John Chriſtopher,) a very learned Perſon in the ſeventeenth Century. He was Profeſſor of Law, Hiſtory, and the oriental Languages at Altorf, in Switzerland. He died in 1705, 72 Years of Age. He has publiſhed ſeveral Works very much valued. Amongſt the reſt a learned Commentary upon a Book of the Talmud. A Diſſertation upon Geneſis, 49. ℣ 10, and ſome other rabinnical Tracts. * Acta Lipſiac. Konig. Biblioth.

WAGRIA, a Country of Holſatia, in Lower Saxony. It lies between the Baltick Sea, Holſatia Proper, Stormaria, and the Duchies of Lawemberg, and Mecklembourg. This Country which is but ten Leagues in length, and of the ſame Extent in breadth, is divided between three Sovereigns; the King of Denmark, the Duke of Holſtein Gottorp, and the Biſhop of Lubeck. The principal Towns are Lubeck, an imperial City, Oldeſſo, Oldenberg, Ploen, Segeberg, Eutyn, and Travemunde. * Maty, Diction.

WALLIS (John,) one of the greateſt Mathematicians of his time. He was mathematick Profeſſor at Oxford, and managed the Chair with great Reputation. He was likewiſe a Member of the Royal Society in London. He died at Oxford October 28, 1703, 87 Years of Age. His Works ſeparately printed were afterwards collected and printed in three Volumes Folio. Athen. Oxon. Acta Lipſiaca, ad An.* 1704.

WALLIUS (Jacobus,) a Flemiſh Jeſuit born at Courtray A. D. 1599, and dying in 1680, was a famous Latin Poet: His Poems are collected into one Volume, and divided into nine Books; viz: Two Books of Heroic Poetry; one in Hexameter Verſes by way of Paraphraſe upon Horace; two Books of Elegies, one entituled the Olive Tree of Peace, which likewiſe conſiſts of Elegies, and three Books of Odes. They are all printed at Antwerp. * Baillet, Jugem. des Sçavans ſur les Poetes Modernes.

WANGEN. A Town within the Circle of Suabia in Germany. 'Tis a ſmall Imperial Town, famous for Linen Manufacturies. 'Tis ſituate within the Territory of Algow, upon the River Arg, four Leagues from the Town Lindaw to the North. Wangen is ſuppoſed to be the Old Vemania, or Vimania, a Town of Vindelicia. * Baudrand.

WARNMUND. A Fort within the Duchy of Meckelbourg in Lower Saxony. 'Tis ſituate in the Seigneurie of Roſtoc at the Mouth of the Warnow, where that River falls into the Baltick. This Fort belongs to the Swedes, and is conſiderable upon the Score of the Duties paid for all goods which go to Roſtock or come from thence. * Maty, Diction.

*WARNER (John. For the Cathedral of Rocheſter in the Supplement to Morery, read the Biſhop's Houſe in Bromly.

WASBOURG (Richard,) born at St. Michael in Lorain, living in the Middle of the ſixteenth Century. He wrote two Tomes of Antiquities of the Upper Belgium, under the Biſhop's of Verdune, and here according to the Order of time, he gives an Account of the Reigns of the Emperors and Kings of France, and England, and of the Dukes of Lorain and Bar. This Work is reputed excellent in its Kind. Hiſtoire de l'Univerſité de Paris.*

WAST (St) Biſhop or Arras, was born at Toul in Lorain. Clovis King of France, having gained the Battel of Tolbiac againſt the Germans, countermarched through Arras, where St. Waſt begun to inſtruct him in the Chriſtian Faith. After this Preparatory Inſtruction, this holy Prelate attended the King to Rheims, where St. Remigius informed the King farther to full Satisfaction, and then baptized him. The Queen Clotilda being apprehenſive her Husband might fall after his Converſion into the Arian Hereſy, requeſted St. Waſt to inſtruct him in the conſubſtantial Belief, which he happily accompliſhed. This Prelate after having governed the See of Arras eight and twenty Years departed this Life February 6. A. D. 540. * Albinus Flaccus, in vit. ejus. The Martyrologies. Des Rozieres, Stemmata T. 2. Liliaſeu flores Gallicæ Sanctæ, c. 1.

WEIDNERUS (Paul,) a Jew and Phyſician in the ſixteenth Century, was invited from Udina a City in Italy to practice Phyſick in Carinthia. He lived there ſix Years and received a conſiderable Penſion from the publick. During this time, he began to doubt the Truth of his Religion, which brought him to make a Compariſon between the Old and New Teſtament, and to examine the Rabbines Expoſitions: And being convinced by this Enquiry, that Jeſus Chriſt is the Meſſiah, he reſolved to declare himſelf a Chriſtian. However, conſidering the Danger of ſuch a Profeſſion, he concealed his Sentiments for about a Year, for fear of his Countrymen. But at laſt the Intereſt of the other World overbalancing all Conſiderations, he removed to Vienna, and was there publickly baptized with his Wife, and four Children, in the Year 1558. He was choſen Hebrew Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Vienna, and publiſhed a Diſcourſe concerning the Motives to his Converſion. * Bayle, Diction. Critiq.

WENSUSSEL, a Country in Denmark. 'Tis a ſmall Peninſula in the northern Extremity of Jutland. 'Tis bounded on the South with the eaſtern part of the Canal of Alborg; the Channel of Denmark is its eaſtern Boundary; and the German Sea lies to the North and Weſt. The chief Towns in it are Wenſuſſel, Hyering, and Cape of Scagen. * Maty, Diction.

WERDENBERG, a ſmall Town, but the Capital of a Country of the ſame Name. It ſtands in Switzerland, near the weſtern Bank of the Rhine, three Leagues below the Town Sargans. Werbenberg with its Country belongs to the Canton of Glaris. * Maty, Diction.

WEREN, or Trevuren, a Town with a Palace in it belonging to the old Dukes of Brabant. It gives a Title to a Viſcount, and is ſituated between Bruſſells and Louvain, two Leagues from the firſt, and three from the latter, * Maty, Diction.

WERMELANDE. A Province of Weſtrogothia in Sweden. 'Tis bounded with Dalecarlia to the North; with Weſtmania and Nericia to the Eaſt; with the Lake Wenar and Dalia to the South; and with the Mountains of Norway to the Weſt. This Province ſtretches about forty Leagues from Weſt to Eaſt, and twenty from North to South; but then it is a great part of it Lakes and Moraſſes, ſlenderly planted and little improved. Carelſtat and Philipſtat are the two chief Towns in it. * Baudrand.

WERTHEIM, a ſmall Town with a ſtrong Caſtle. It ſtands in Franconia at the Confluence of the Tauber and the Maine, and is the Capital of a ſmall County of the ſame Name, and which belongs to the Earls of Loevenſtein. It lies between the County of Caſſel, and the Territories of Wurtzburg, and Mentz, and is about five Leagues ſquare. * Maty, Diction.

WESTERBERG. A ſmall Town with a ſtrong Caſtle. It is the Capital of a ſmall County of the ſame Name: 'Tis ſituated in the Weſterwald, between the Electorate of Treves, and the Principalities of Naſſaw-Sigen and Naſſaw-Hademir. This Country belongs to the Earl of the Houſe of Runkel, of the Branch of Linange. * Maty, Diction.

WESTERWALDT, is parcel of Weteravia generally taken. 'Tis bounded on the Weſt by the Rhine, on the North by the River Sige; which parts it from the Duchies of Berg and Weſtphalia; on the Eaſt by Upper Heſſia, and on the South by the Lohn, which parts it from Weteravia Proper. The Territory of Weſterwald takes in ſome part belonging to the Archbiſhopricks of Cologne and Treves, and likewiſe the Counties of Iſembourg, of Sein, of Weyd, of Sigen, of Dillenbourg, of Beilſtein, and the Printipality of Hademar. * Maty, Diction.

WESTMANIA, a Province in Sweedland Proper. It is ſituated between the Provinces Sudermania, Geſtricia, Nericia, and Uplande. This Province is about thirty Leagues long, and eighteen Leagues broad. The Soil is but indifferent, but there are a great many Copper and Iron Mines in it. The principal Towns are Aroſio and Arboga. * Baudrand.

WETSTEIN (John Rodolph,) a Doctor and Divinity Profeſſor at Baſil in Swizerland, was born A. D. 1647, and was a very learned Man. In 1673 he publiſhed Origen's Dialogue againſt the Marcioniſts, with that Father's Exhortation to martyrdom, and his Letter to Africanus concerning the Hiſtory of Suſanna. He printed three Speeches by way of Apology for the clear Dealing of the Swiſſes, againſt a Libel entituled, la Suiſſe démaſquée, or the Swiſs unmaſqued. Two Harangues upon Baniſhment, and Conſolatory Arguments againſt that Misfortune; and nine Diſcourſes concerning the Pronunciation of the Greek Tongue. He died in 1711. * See his funeral Oration written by Mr. Iſelius, Divinity Profeſſor at Baſil.

WETTIN, A Town with a County of the ſame Name. It ſtands within the Circle of Leipſick in Miſnia upon the River Sala, on the Frontiers of the County of Mansfeld, and the Principality of Anhalt. The old Counts of Wetting deſcended from the famous Wittekind, Duke or King of the Saxons, ſtand at the Head of the Family of the Marquiſſes of Miſnia, now Dukes of Saxony. * Maty, Diction.

WICELIUS (George,) a learned Divine of the ſixteenth Century, was born at Fulda in 1501. He was firſt a Monk, but turned Lutheran when thirty Years of Age. Juſtus Jonas was one of his warmeſt Antagoniſts; but Luther wrote in his Defence, and covered him from Proſecution for his being charged with Practiſes againſt the State. He afterwards went back to the Church of Rome, where for ſome time he was but coldly received, and had no more preferment than a ſingle Pariſh. But at laſt the Emperours Ferdinand and Maximilian brought him to their Council Board. Wicelius was a Reconciler, notwithſtanding his Return to the Church of Rome, and would gladly have ſeen a great many Practices of that Communion ſet aſide, for procuring a Coalition with the reſt of Chriſtendom. The famous Caſſander had the ſame healing Temper. Maſius, the Cordelier, Ferus, and the Biſhop Julius Pflug, who was for the Interim, were Wicelius's particular Friends. Now his Mind may be ſomewhat collected from his Acquaintance, but much better from his Writings entituled, Via Regia, Methodus Concordiæ, &c. He wrote Abundance of Books moſt of them in High Dutch; which have been tranſlated into Latin, and run through a great many Impreſſions. * Faſciculus rerum expetendarum.

WIED. A ſmall County within the Territory of Weſterwaldt, in Germany. It is of ſmall Extent, and has only two Towns of Conſideration. They are the Old and the New Wied; the firſt ſtands upon a River of the ſame Name and the other upon the Rhine. * Baudrand.

WIELKILUKI, a City within the Duchy of Reſchow in Muſcovy. It is well fortifyed and ſtands upon a Hill, near the River Lowat, about forty two Leagues from Reſchow to the Weſt, and thirty from Novogrod Weliki to the South. * Baudrand.

WIENNERWALD, that is to ſay, the Foreſt of Vienna. 'Tis the ſouthern part of Lower Auſtria. The Danube parts it from Manhartzberg, which is the Northern Diviſion. The River Ens likewiſe parts moſt of it from Upper Auſtria; 'tis bounded on the South with Stiria; and on the Eaſt by Lower Hungary. This Country is divided into Low Wiennerwald, upon the Frontiers of Hungary, and Upper Wiennewald, confining upon Upper Auſtria. Within the firſt Diviſion there lies Vienna the Capital of Auſtria, Newſtat, Newbourg, Baden, and Bruck; and within the latter there is Tula, Traſmuar, and S. Polten. This Country is part of the Old Noricum, formerly called Deſerta Boiorum. * Baudrand.

WIFLISBOURGERGOW, that is to ſay the Territory of Avenches. 'Tis one of the four Quarters of Switzerland. It lies between the River Aar, the Lake of Geneva, and the Mount of Jura. It takes in the Country of Vaud, the County of Neufchâtel; the ſmall Republick of Bienne, the Canton of Fribourg, and that part of the Canton of Berne which lies South of the River Aar. Avenches was formerly the Capital. The Towns Bern, Fribourg, Lauſane, Neufchâtel, &c. are now within this Diviſion. * Maty, Diction.

WILLIS (Thomas,) a famous Engliſh Phyſician in the ſeventeenth Century, and of the Univerſity of Oxford where he commenced Doctor. He practiſed Phyſick at London with great Reputation from 1667, to 1676, when he died. He is likewiſe an Author of Character in his Faculty, and wrote de Fermentatione, de Febribus, de urinis, de cerebro, de morbis convulſivis, de affectionibus Hyſtericis, & Hypocondriaſis, de Scorbuto, de animâ brutorum, &c. * Athen. Oxon. Journal des Savans, 20 Juliet 1676. Memoires du Tems.

WIMPTEN. Formerly Cornelia, a Town within the Circle of Suabia in Germany. It ſtands upon the Necker, three Leagues above Hailbron. Wimpten though not large, is very Populous: 'Tis an Imperial free Town, and the Magiſtrates are Proteſtants. * Maty, Diction.

* WIT (John de,) Penſioner of Holland, a Stateſman of great Abilities, was Son of Jacob de Wit, Burger Maſter of Dort, who was ſent Priſoner to the Caſtle of Louveſtein, with five others for adviſing the diſbanding part of the Troops of the Republick of Holland, to leſſen the vaſt Expences of their Pay: This Advice was direct Oppoſition to William II. Prince of Orange, who was of Opinion, that they ought to keep on all their Forces for the Security of the Government. John de Wit's Mother was Ann Van de Corput, deſcended from a noble Family in Brabant. He was born September 25 A. D. 1625. He ſtudied Law, Politicks, Mathematicks, and other Sciences. He wrote a Treaty of Curve Lines, publiſhed by Francis Schooten. After he had commenced Doctor of Law, he ſpent ſome Years in travel, and upon his return Home, was made Penſioner of Dort, and afterwards of Holland, and Weſtfreezland, and Keeper of the great Seal. He had very difficult Junctures to manage in. The War with England, which was not always Fortunate to the Dutch, put him upon the Stretch, and gave him full Buſineſs; He was much admired for his expeditious recruiting the Fleet almoſt ruined by the Engliſh, and his putting himſelf on board the Fleet with ſome other Deputies of the States, in order to retrieve the falſe Steps which had been taken, and to reform the former Diſorders. In the mean time the ill Condition of the United Provinces, made a great many People deſirous of a Stadholder, and though William III. Prince of Orange was then a Child, yet warm endeavours were made to put him into this Poſt. John de Wit exerted himſelf in oppoſition to this Motion, being of Opinion that ſuch a Promotion might be unſerviceable to the Liberties of his Country; and 'tis poſſible the rough Uſage his Father received from this young Prince's Father, might ſtick in his memory. To give a Detail of the Life of this Magiſtrate, 'twould be neceſſary to tranſcribe the whole Hiſtory of Holland; for while he was Penſioner, he had the whole Direction of the Helm. But here it muſt not be forgotten, that whether it was to gratify Cromwell, of whom the States were afraid; or whether the Enemies of the Houſe of Orange puſhed the ſetting aſide the young Prince William, a publick Reſolution paſſed, by Virtue of which this Prince was for ever excluded all the Offices of Juriſdiction and Command which his Anceſtors held in the Republick. People did not forbear charging the Penſioner ſioner with this Act of the States, and it can't well be doubted his having a ſhare in it. This extraordinary Zeal to exclude the young Prince, and the Misfortunes which happened to the Dutch in 1672, occaſioned the Ruin of this great Stateſman. The putting the Prince of Orange in the Station of his Anceſtors was thought neceſſary to reſtore the Republick, which was now upon the Verge of Deſtruction. Thus this Prince had all the Poſts poſſeſſed by his Father, and with ſomething of Enlargement in Authority. All the Misfortune which fell upon the United Provinces, were laid upon the Penſioner de Wit, and ſome People carry'd the Impeachment ſo far, as to charge him with holding Correſpondence with the Enemy, which by diſintereſted Perſons was looked on as notorious Calumny. For the reſt ſee the Supplement to Morery: Beſides, there is a particular Narrative of this matter, printed in the Year 1709.

WITEBSKO, a City in the Duchy of Lithuania, Capital of a Palatinate of the ſame Name, ſtanding at the Confluence of the Rivers Witebska and Dwina, thirty Leagues above Poloczko. Witebsko ſtands ſurrounded as it were with Moraſſes, which makes it difficult to come at; and beſides 'tis fortify'd with Works and a Citadel; the Muſcovites have beſieged it ſeveral times, but to no purpoſe. All the Maps place the Palatinate of Witebsko partly to the North, and partly to the South of the Dwina, and bound it on the Weſt with the Palatinate of Poloczco; on the South with the Palatinates Minsk and Mſciſlaw; and on the two other Sides with Muſcovy. But Baudrand and Audifred, who follow Starovolski, bound this Palatinate on the North with the Dwina, ſtretching it to the Weſt as far as Samogitia, and to the South up to Mohilow, and then divide it into three Precincts, which bear the Name of their Capitals. 1. The Caſtellany of Witebskow. 2. The Caſtellany of Braſlow. 3. The Territory of Mohilow. * Baudrand.

WITSHIUS (Herman,) Doctor in Divinity, and Profeſſor in this Faculty, firſt at Franecker, then at Utrecht, and laſtly at Leyden, has the Reputation of a very learned and judicious Divine. He was born at Enckhuyſen, a Town in North Holland A. D. 1626. His Father was Nicholas Wits, a Magiſtrate of that Town; and his Mother was Jean, Daughter to Herman Gerard, a Paſtor at Enckhuyſen. He underſtood Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriack, and Arabick. He died October, A. D. 1708. His Works are, Oeconomia Fœderum Dei cum Hominibus; Exercitationes ſacræ in Orationem Dominicam; Ægyptiaca & Decaphylon, cum Diatriba de Legione Fulminatrice Chriſtianorum; Miſcellaneorum ſacrorum Libri duo. * See Witſhius's Funeral Oration done by Mr. Marck, Divinity and Eccleſiaſtical Profeſſor at Leyden.

WITTICHIUS (Chriſtopher,) Doctor in Divinity, and Profeſſor in that Faculty, firſt at Duysburg, then at Nimeguen, and laſtly at Leyden, was a learned Perſon of great Reputation. He was born in 1625. at Brieg, a Town in Lower Sileſia; and died A. D. 1687. His Works are, a Book entituled Conſenſus Veritatis; Theologia pacifica; Anti-Spinoſa; Commentarius de Deo & ejus Attributis. * See his Funeral Oration done by Jacobus Gronovius. Konig. Biblioth. Memoires du tems.

WITTOW, a Peninſula; 'tis the Northern Slip of the Iſle of Rugen in Pomerania. The Town Wick is the principal Place in it. * Maty, Diction.

WIZNA, a City within the Province of Mazovia in Poland; there is a Caſtellany belonging to it: It ſtands upon the River Narew within the Palatinate of Czersko, and confines upon the Palatinate of Bielsk. * Baudrand.

WLODZIMIERS, a ſmall Town of Red Raſſia in Poland. It ſtands within the Palatinate of Belz, upon the River Bug, between Luſuc and Chelm, about twenty Leagues from each. Wlodzimiers is the Capital of a Caſtellany. * Maty, Diction.

WOLKOVISCA, a City of Poland in Lithuania. It is the Seat of a Caſtellany, and ſtands upon the River Roſs in the Palatinate of Novogodeck, and twenty Leagues from the Town Novogodec to the Weſt. * Baudrand.

WOLLIN, formerly Julinum, a ſmall Town in Royal Pomerania; 'tis the Capital of the Iſle Wollin. Wollin, the only conſiderable Town in this Iſland, ſtands near the River Groſſe-Haff, upon the River Diwenow, four Leagues from the Baltick Sea, and three from the Town Camin: It was built upon the Ruins of the old Julinum, and was a Biſhop's See, afterwards removed to Camin. * Baudrand.

WOLODIMER (the Duchy of,) a Province of Muſcovy; this Duchy lies between thoſe of Niſi-Novogorod, Suſdal, Rezan, and the Morduan Tartars. Wolodimer is one of the ſmalleſt Provinces in the Muſcovite Dominions: But the Soil is ſo rich, that with a very little tilling it produces thirty Grains of Wheat for one; and the Woods are ſo ſtocked with Swarms of Bees, that very few Trees are unfurniſhed with them. The Capital of this Duchy is of the ſame Name: It ſtands upon the River Cleſma, between the Cities Niſi-Novogorod and Moſcow, thirty Leagues from the firſt, and forty from the latter. Wolodimer was the Capital of Muſcovy before Moſcow. 'Tis fortify'd with a Caſtle, but the Walls are Timber. * Maty, Diction.

WORCUM: There are two Towns of this Name in the United Provinces; one in Weſtfreezland upon the Zuyderzee, between Staveren and Harlingen; the other in South Holland, over againſt the Town of Gorcum. This latter Worcum is fortify'd. * Maty, Diction.

X.

XALAPPA, a ſmall Town within the Audience of Mexico in America; 'tis ſituate in the Province of Tlaſcala, about twenty Leagues from Vera-Crux to the Weſt. This Town has a Biſhop's See, erected A. D. 1634. And notwithſtanding this Biſhoprick is no more than the third part of Los Angeles, out of which Dioceſs it was taken, 'tis endowed with 10000 Ducats per annum. * Thomas Gage.

XAMO, a Deſart in Great Tartary. Mr. Witſen in his Map ſays 'tis now called Gobée, and places it to the Weſt of the River Houmk, and the Wall of China: According to this Geographer the Town Shirogalgoe, Uquechin, and Sibren, which belonged to the Chineſe, lie within this Deſart. Mr. Witſen makes Lop and Xamo two diſtinct Deſarts, which the common Maps make the ſame.

XAOCHEU, a City in China; 'tis the ſecond rate Town of the Province of Quantung, and has five Cities within it's Juriſdiction: It ſtands upon the Confluence of two Rivers, twenty Leagues from the City Quancu to the North. * Maty, Diction.

XARAYES (the Lake of the.) 'Tis a very great Lake in Southern America, and lies between the Provinces of Chaco and Paraguay. The River Paraguay comes out of it, and the Lake takes it's Name from the Xarayes, a Clan planted on the Northern Side of it. * Baudrand.

XINCHEU, a City in China; 'tis the twelfth for Bigneſs and Value within the Province of Huquang, and has five other great Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Baudrand.

XUCHAR, a great River in Spain: It riſes in New Caſtille, runs by Cuença, continues it's Courſe through the Kingdom of Valencia, takes in the Cabriel, and falls into the Gulph of Valencia, at the Town Cullera. * Baudrand.

XUICHEU, a Town in China; 'tis the tenth for Value within the Province of Xiangſi, and has but two Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

XUNCKIN, a City in China; it ſtands near the River Kiang, within the Province Suchuen: 'Tis a third Rate, and has nine other Cities under it's Juriſdiction. * Baudrand.

XUNNING, a City in China: 'Tis large, and ſtands near the Mountains within the Province of Junnan. * Baudrand.

XUNT, a City in China; 'tis the fifth for Conſideration within the Province of Peking, and has eight other Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Maty, Diction.

XUTHUS. Son of Hellen, and Grandſon to Deucalion, came from Phthiotis to Athens, in the Reign of Pandion, married Creuſa this King's Daughter, and adopted her Son Io, ſhe had by Apollo, from whom the Greeks fanſy the Ionians are deſcended. * Herodot.

Y.

YAMARITO, a Kingdom in the Iſle of Niphon. It lies within the Precinct of Jetſengo; the ſmall Town Jamarito, and Meaco, formerly the Capital of Japan, ſtands in this Territory. * Maty, Diction.

YANCHEU, a City of China: It ſtands upon the River Kiang, in the Province of Nanking, ſeventeen Leagues from the City Nanking to the Eaſt. Yancheu is a large City, has a great deal of Trade, is the ſeventh Rate in the Province, and has nine other Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Baudrand.

YAVOROUF, a City of Poland in the Palatinate of Ruſſia, ſeven Leagues from Leopol. 'Tis conſiderably improved ſince King John Sobieski choſe it for his uſual Reſidence. There is a Staroſty belonging to it of twenty thouſand Livres per annum, which the Republick of Poland ſettled upon this Prince and his Family to the third Generation. The Town, like moſt of the other Cities in Poland, is incloſed with a Rampart of Earth, covered with a Parapet of Boards, without either Ditch or Outworks. However, 'tis ſufficiently ſtrong againſt the Tartars. Beſides this Rampart there is a Canal about a League in Compaſs, which covers almoſt half the Town; 'tis one of the fineſt and beſt ſtocked with Fiſh in Poliſh Ruſſia; the Caſtle is only Timber, but large and convenient, with two Courts parted by a Wall of Sods; 'tis ſtrengthned with Baſtions and a wet Ditch. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

YENCHEU, a City in China: It ſtands in the Province of Xantung near the Province of Nankin; 'tis large well built and populous: It ſtands in the third Rank for Conſideration; and has ſeventeen Towns within it's Juriſdiction. * Baudrand.

YERACH-AGEMI, Hierak-Agemi, Airiak-Atzen, Erak-Atzen, a Province of the Kingdom of Perſia; 'tis bounded on the Weſt by Arzerum, a Turkiſh Province; on the North it confines upon Adirbeitzan, or as it is ſometimes written, Adirbeian, upon the Provinces of of Kilan and Tabareſtan; on the Eaſt 'tis bounded with the Province Khoraſan, and with part of the Province of Kherman; and on the South with the Territories of Fars and Chuſiſtan. This Province has no conſiderable River in it; however, 'tis one of the beſt Provinces in all Perſia, with reſpect to Extent, the Temperature of the Air, the Goodneſs of the Soil, and the Number of Cities. The principal Towns are Iſpahan, the Capital of Perſia, Teſt, Kaſchan, Kom, Rhey, Casbin, Soltanie, Hamadan, Kulpajan, &c. * Baudrand.

*YEKACH-ARABI, or Chaldar; 'tis a Province belonging to the Turk in Aſia; 'tis almoſt incloſed between the Euphrates and the Tigris, ſtretching from Diarbeck Proper, or Meſopotamia, as far as the Perſian Gulph, between Arabia deſerta, which lies to the Weſt, and partly to the South, and the Province of Chuſiſtan or Suſiana, from which the Tigris parts it, to the Eaſt. This Country is divided into two Beglerbeglies, that of Bagdat, and the other of Balſora, the Capitals: The other conſiderable Towns are Waſſiti, Kufa, Medain, and Quorna. Yerach Arabi is much the ſame with the old Chaldæa or Babylonia, the moſt famous Country in the World. 'Tis ſuppoſed that God made Adam in this Country, and that Paradiſe lay within it. The Plain of Shinar, mentioned in Geneſis, was part of this Country, and where, after the Flood, the Tower of Babel was built. 'Twas in this Province that Nimrod built Babylon, the chief, and it may be, the firſt Poſt-diluvian City, and the Capital of the firſt Monarchy: And in fine, this was the Patriarch Abraham's Country. The principal Towns were Babylon, Ur, or Urchoa, Cteſiphon, Barſita, Seleucia, Teredon, of which there is none but the laſt remaining, which is now called Balſora. * Baudrand.

YESD, or Jeſſed, a City in Perſia. It ſtands in the Province Yerach-Agemi, about forty Leagues from Iſpahan to the Eaſt. This Town is famous for making of Carpets, which are reckoned the fineſt in the World. There are ſome Remains of old Idolatry in the Neighbourhood, and where the People worſhip the Fire. Some Writers take this Town for the old Hecatompolis, the Capital of Parthia, which others ſuppoſe to be the ſame with Iſpahan. * Baudrand.

YGUALADA, a conſiderable Town of Spain in Catalonia. It ſtands upon the River Noya, twelve Leagues from Barcelona to the North Weſt. This Town is ſuppoſed to be the old Anabis, or probably the old Ergavia. * Baudrand.

YVON (Peter,) of Montauban in Languedoc, where John Labadie was Paſtor of a French Proteſtant Church. Yvon followed him into Holland, and dwelt at Middleborough when Labadie was Miniſter there. When this latter was expelled that Church he withdrew into Weſtfreezland, whither Mr. Yvon went after him. After Labadie's Death he was the Head of the Labadiſts, and ſettled at Wiewert in Weſtfreezland, belonging to the Family of Sommelſdyck: He preached there to a ſmall Congregation, and was afterwards Lord of the Place, by marrying one of the Daughters of the Sommelſdyck Family, to whom the Eſtate was fallen: He has not been dead many Years. His moſt conſiderable Works are, Impietas convicta à Petro Yvone, Paſtore Eccleſiæ reformatæ, quæ ex Mundo retractæ Wiweræ in Friſia nunc colligitur, Tractatibus duobus; in quorum priori Exiſtentia Dei, ut omnium veritatum prima & certiſſima, clarè ſtabilitur; in ſecundo Scriptura ſacra defenditur, impio Libro Spinoſæ, cui Titulus Tractatus Theologico-Politicus, integrè refutato. Amſterdam, 1681. * Memoires du tems.

Z.

* ZACHARIA. One of the twelve ſmall Prophets, Son of Barachias. He begins his Prophecy at the ſecond Year of Darius Hyſtaſpes, and continued it to the fourth Year of that Prince's Reign. He is not the ſame with Zacharias Son of Barachias, who was Contemporary with Iſaiah, which Zacharias by King Joaſh's Order was killed between the Temple and the Altar. The Prophet Zacharia exhorts the Jews to rebuild the Temple, precautions them againſt Idolatry, and the Misbehaviour of their Fore-fathers. He aſſures them of God Almighty's Protections foretells the Calamities which would happen to other Nations, and the happineſs of good People at the coming of the Meſſiah.

* ZACHARIAS. St. John Babtiſt's Father. Some of the Fathers and particularly Peter of Alexandria are of Opinion that Herod put this Zacharias to death, and that he was the Son of Barachias, whom the Jews killed between the Temple, and the Altar; that is to ſay between that part of the Temple, into which none but the Prieſts entered, and the Altar for burnt Offerings. This Opinion was common in the Greek Church, and followed by St. Baſil, by St. Gregory Nyſſen, by St. Cyril of Alexandria, and by Theodoret. But St. Jerom rejects it, and believes it has no better than Apochryphal Authorities to ſupport it: This Father ſuppoſes that Zacharias mentioned by our Saviour was the Son of Jehoiada, whom King Joaſh ordered to be killed in the Temple. And to diſentangle the Difficulty, that this Zacharias's Father was not called Barachias, St. Jerom obſerves, that in the Nazaren's Goſpel Zacharias mentioned by our Saviour is called Jehoiada. * Hieronym lib. 4. Commentar. in cap. 23. Matth. Epiphan. Hæreſ. 26. Theodoret, lib. 4. Hiſt. cap. 7.

ZACHARIAS, Son of Baruch, a Jew of illuſtrious Extraction, but ſtill more nobly diſtinguiſhed for his Probity, for his great Intereſt, and Zeal for his Country. His great Wealth was the Occaſion of his Ruin. Being deeply affected with the Misbehaviour of the Factions, and particularly of the Zealots in Jeruſalem, he reſolved to form a Party to oppoſe their Tyranny, and Profanation of the Temple. Theſe Wretches percieving that as long as this Nobleman lived, they could not be abſolute Maſters, charged him with holding Correſpondence with the Romans, apprehended him, put him in priſon, and proſecuted him before the Sanhedrim, or Bench of ſeventy Judges. But not being able to make good their Charge, he was acquitted by this Court. But theſe arbitrary Zealots, reſolving to have his Blood, ſeized and murthered him in the Middle of the Temple. * Joſeph. de bell. Judaic. lib. 4. cap. 19.

ZAFFE-RAMINIS, People in the Iſland of Madegaſcar, who practiſed the Mahometan Religion. They are commonly called Whites, to diſtinguiſh them from the Negroes who are Natives of the Country. Their fabulous Hiſtory relates that Ramini, Mahomet's Son in Law was ſent by God Almighty to that Side of the Red Sea Shore near Mecca; that here he met with Mahomet, who married him to one of his Daughters that by this Woman he had Iſſue Prince Rahouvoude, who had two Sons Rahadz, and Racoub; who putting to Sea landed on the eaſtern Coaſt of Madagaſcar, and ſettled in that Iſland. * Flaccourt's Hiſtory of Madagaſcar.

ZAGAROLO, a Town within St. Peter's Patrimomony in Italy. It gives Title to a Duke, and ſtands in Campania di Roma, ſix or ſeven Leagues from Rome to the Eaſt. * Maty, Diction.

ZAGORA, a Country of European Turky. 'Tis ſituate in Romania, upon the Frontiers of Bulgaria. Zagora, otherwiſe called Devalto is the Capital.

ZAHARA, a Town of Spain in Andaluſia. It ſtands near the Kingdom of Granada, and the head of River Guadaletta, fifteen Leagues from Seville to the South Eaſt. This Town is very ſtrong upon the Score of its being ſituate upon a ſteep Rock, and the Defence of a good Citadel. * Baudrand.

ZAHASPA, A City of great Tartary. It ſtands in the Province of Mawaralnahar, at the Mouth of the River Gihum, where it falls into the Caſpian Sea. * Maty, Diction.

ZAKROCHIM, or Zakrozim, a City in Poland upon the River Bug, five Leagues from Warſaw. 'Tis one of the moſt conſiderable in the Palatinate of Maſcovy, upon the Score of a ſmall Diet held there. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

ZAMORA, a City of the Province of Quito in Peru, ninety Leagues from the Town Quito to the South Eaſt. It ſtands in a Country very rich with Gold Mines. There have been Pieces of an extraordinary Bigneſs dug there; one of which weighing eight Pounds of good Gold, was preſented to Philip II. King of Spain. The Town is finely built, the Churches are ſtately Structures, and the King's Treaſurer lives there. * De Laet, Hiſtory of the New World.

ZANHAGA, a large Country within the Province of Zaara in Africk. It ſtretches a great way from Eaſt to Weſt, along the River Cavalos from the Kingdom of Zuenziga to the Atlantick Ocean, having the Province of Teſſet to the North, and the Kingdoms of Gualata and Tombut to the South. Some Geographers mention a Capital of the ſame Name. But the Maps take notice of none but the Town Tegaſſa. * Baudrand.

ZAPOROGES, that part of the Coſſacks which continued firm to the Crown of Poland, when the reſt of that Nation revolted. The Poles called them Zaporos. Thoſe who remained true to the Republick of Poland, with drew into the Iſlands at the Mouth of the Boriſthenes, under the command of a General of their Clan nominated by the King of Poland. They furniſh a Body of very good Foot upon Occaſion. The Places where they dwell are in a manner inacceſſable, which makes their conſtant firmneſs to the Republick of Poland more to be valued. They are rough and unpoliſhed, but not barbarous and cruel: And though they have but little breeding, they are ſtout in the true Notion of Bravery. Their Cloaths are ſheep Skins, and their Diet Milk and Sallets. The Boriſthenes having Cataracts no leſs than the Nile, that is to ſay, violent falls of the Current from ſteep Rocks, the Zaporoges who paſs down this River to the Black Sea, carry their boats upon their Shoulders, when they come to theſe unmanageable Places, and put them in the Water again, when paſſed the Caſcades. And thus they uſed to go pyrating through all the Boſphorus, as far as the Suburbs of Conſtantinople; which made the Turks frequently complain of them to the Republick of Poland: But lately they have provided a ſtronger Remedy than Remonſtrances and force the Poles to complain in their Turn. For the Turks have ſtopped the Zaporoges's Paſſage by making themſelves Maſters of two Forts at the Mouth of the Boriſthenes, and building two others in the middle of the Stream over againſt the old ones. * Memoires du Chevalier de Beaujeu.

ZARATE (Auguſtin de,) a Spaniſh Author, who wrote the Hiſtory of the Diſcovery and Conqueſt of Peru in his own Language. It has been twice printed, once at Antwerp in 1555, and afterwards at Seville in 1577. Theſe two Editions don't agree in every thing. 'Tis thought the firſt is preferable to the ſecond, becauſe ſuperviſed by the Author. 'Twas tranſlated into French and printed at Amſterdam in 1700. Auguſtin de Zarate was in the Year 1543 ordered by Charles V. and his Council for the Indies, to go to Peru to be high Treaſurer there; to pay the King's Officers, and to receive the Cuſtoms and Duties payable to his Majeſty from this Country. He embarqued upon the Fleet, which carried Blaſco Nugnez Vela, who went Vice Roy of Peru. Upon his Arrival in this new World, he found things ſo embroiled by the diſagreeing of the Spaniards who had conquered it, that he reſolved to write the moſt material Occurrences. And ſometime afterwards, having reviewed what he had written, he found it ſhort of his deſign; and that to make himſelf rigthly underſtood, 'twould be Neceſſary to begin higher, and trace matters cloſer to their Original. And thus from one Step to another another he wrote up to the Diſcovery of the Country. His Circumſtances would not give him leave to finiſh the Performance while he ſtayed at Peru. He had like to have loſt his Life for beginning it there: For Gonzales Pizarro, Field Marſhal, threaten'd to kill any Body that ſhould attempt the writing what he had done, becauſe he knew they could ſay nothing to his Advantage. Zarate therefore was forced to hold his Hand; all that he could do being only to collect Memoirs for a Hiſtory, which he afterwards drew out to a juſt length, when he found himſelf in a Place of Security. He preſented his Hiſtory in Manuſcript to Philip II. King of Spain, who approved it, and ordered it to be printed. Zarate dedicated it to this Prince who was then in England, and not King of Spain. The Epiſtle dedicatory was dated at Antwerp March 30, 1555; and 'tis from this Epiſtle, and the Preface prefixed to the French Edition, that moſt of this Article is taken.

ZARNAN, a City in Upper Poland: It ſtands in the Palatinate of Sendomir, between the Towns Sendomir and Sirad, about thirty five Leagues from the firſt, and thirty from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

ZARPANE, or Rota, which the Spaniards call St. Ann's Iſle, is one of the Ladrones; 'tis fifteen Leagues in Circumference, lies in the fourteenth Degree of Northern Latitude, ſeven Leagues from the Iſle Guahan, and thirteen from the Iſle Aguiguan. * Charles le Gobien, Hiſtoire des Iſles Marianes.

ZARICHOST, a City in Upper Poland; 'tis the Seat of a Caſtellany, and ſtands upon the Viſtula, within the Palatinate of Sendomir, five Leagues from the City Sendomir to the North. * Maty, Diction.

ZBOROW, a ſmall Town in Poland of Red Ruſſia. It ſtands within the Palatinate of of Lemberg, between the Towns Lemberg and Zbaras, five and twenty Leagues from the firſt, and ten from the latter. Zborow is famous for the Defeat John Caſimir, King of Poland, received there A. D. 1647. This Prince having drawn ſome Troops together there, to diſengage his Army beſieged at Zbaras by the revolting Coſſacks, and by the Cham of the Leſſer Tartary, was attacked by part of the Enemy's Troops, and having loſt no ſmall Number of his Men, and ſeeing the reſt beſieged, he was forced for diſentangling himſelf to grant the Coſſacks a very advantagious Peace, and to revive the Penſions the Poles uſed formerly to pay to the Cham of Tartary. * The Hiſtory of Poland.

ZEGZARD (the County of,) a Country in Lower Hungary. This County lies between the Counties of of Pilſen, of Alba Regalis, of Sighet, and Tolna. Dombo is the Capital. * Maty, Diction.

ZEILA, a Town upon the Coaſt of Ajan in Æthiopia; 'tis fortify'd and ſtands upon the Confines of the Kingdom of Adel, about thirty Leagues from the Streights of Babelmandel to the South. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the old Avalites, a Town of Trogloditis in Æthiopia. * Baudrand.

ZELANDIA (the Fort:) 'Twas built by the Dutch near the City Taon in the Iſland of Formoſa, which lies between the Coaſt of China and the Iſland of Luçon: The Chineſe made themſelves Maſters of it in 1661. * Maty, Diction.

* ZEPHYRINUS (Pope:) For Severus's being Father in Law to Plautian in Morery Vol. II. read he was Father in Law to Caracalla.

* ZEUGITANE: For the Gypſies being driven out of Spain and Brabant by Ferdinand V. in Morery Vol. II. read by Charles V. Emperor, and King of Spain.

ZIDEN, Sidde, Giodda, a Town of Arabia the Happy. It ſtands within the Principality of Zibith, at the Mouth of the River Chaiba, where it falls into the Red Sea, eighteen or twenty Leagues from Mecca to the South Weſt. * Baudrand.

* ZOILUS, a Rhetorician and Critick living in the Reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, two hundred and ſeventy Years before the Incarnation. He was not born at Epheſus but at Amphipolis, a City of Thrace, now called Amboli by the Turks. He attempted the raiſing his Reputation by ſpying Faults in Homer, Plato, and Iſocrates. He valued himſelf upon being called Homeromaſtix, or a Scourge for Homer, and repeated the Verſes he had written againſt that famous Poet to Ptolemy, who was ſo angry at it, that when Zoilus begged a Bounty of that Prince he made him this Anſwer, that ſince Homer, who had been dead a thouſand Years, had maintained a great many thouſand People, Zoilus, who pretended to have more Wit than Homer, ought to work his Brain for his Subſiſtence. 'Tis from this Man that thoſe who are over ſevere and injudicious in Criticiſm are called Zoilus's. Authors ſpeak differently about his Death; ſome report Ptolemy crucify'd him; others report him ſtoned, and ſome will have him burnt alive at Smyrna. * Ælian: Var. Hiſt. lib. 11. Vitruvius, in Præf. lib. 7. Ovid. de Remed. Amor. lib. 1. Voſſius, de Hiſt. Græc. lib. 1. cap. 16.

ZOLDO, a Town belonging to the Republick of Venice: It ſtands in the Territory of Belluna, five Leagues from Belluna to the North Weſt, ſurrounded with Mountains. Thereare very good Iron Mines about it. * Maty, Diction.

ZOLKIEWSKI (Staniſlaus,) a Poliſh Nobleman, and Grandfather by the Mother's Side to John Sobieski III. King of Poland. Zolkiewski gained a conſiderable Battel againſt the Muſcovites in 1610, in the Reign of Ladiſlaus IV. being then only Palatine of Kiovia, and Lieutenant General. Afterwards, when promoted to the Station of Lord Chancellor, and Crown General, he had the chief Command of the Poliſh Army ſeveral times. The laſt time of his being General was in the Valley of Lopuczna; where he made a Retreat, as much celebrated in Poland, as that of Xenophon's was through the Perſian Dominions, with only ten thouſand Greeks; but Zolkiewski marching back to bring off a Regiment which the other Generals had forgotten to diſengage, was charged ſo vigorouſly by the Tartars, that before his Men could come up and join him, he was laid dead upon the Corpſe of three or four of the braveſt of the Enemy, whom he had killed with his own Hand. That he died thus honourably appears by a Latin Inſcription cut upon his Mauſolæum, ſet up in the Field where he died. He lies buried in the Church of Zolkiew, on the left Side of the great Altar, with this Inſcription, Exoriare aliquis noſtris ex oſſibus ultor.

* Anecdotes de Pologne.

* ZOZIMUS (Pope,) Celeſtius, a Diſciple of Pelagius, who had been condemned at a Synod at Carthage, held A. D. 412, made his Appeal from that Council to the See of Rome: He came to Rome in the Beginning of Zozimus's Popedom, hoping to prepoſſeſs this Biſhop in his Favour by lodging the final Iſſue of the Cauſe in his Hands. Zozimus convened a Synod in St. Clement's Church, to examine the Articles of Impeachment drawn up againſt Celeſtius. He brought Celeſtius to a Confeſſion of Faith, by which he renounced the Heterodoxies which Heros and Lazarus had charged him with. Zozimus informing himſelf of the Character of the Proſecutors, found them, as he ſays, two Biſhops uncanonically conſecrated, expelled their Biſhopricks, and excommunicated. However, his Holineſs was not ſo hardy as to abſolve Celeſtius without writing to the African Biſhops; but then by his manner of writing 'tis plain he had a very good Opinion of him. Some time after he received a Letter from Prailus Biſhop of Jeruſalem, in Juſtification of Pelagius and Celeſtius; upon this Teſtimonial he wrote a ſecond Letter to the African Biſhops, in which he pronounces Pelagius and Celeſtius innocent and acquitted. The African Biſhops diſguſted with Zozimus's Partiality, wrote back to undeceive him. The Pope coming a little off his Prepoſſeſſion, ſummoned Celeſtius to appear before him, and renounce the Errors charged upon him in plainer and more deciſive Terms: But Celeſtius was ſo far from making his Appearance, that he run away out of Rome. Upon this Zozimus confirmed the Sentence given againſt Pelagius and Celeſtius by his Predeceſſor Pope Innocent, and wrote a Letter to the African Biſhops to acquaint 'em with what he had done. Zozimus had ſomething of another Diſpute with the Biſhops of Gaul, occaſioned by a Conteſt between the Churches of Arles and Vienne, touching the metropolitical Juriſdiction upon the Provinces of Vienne and Narbonne. He gave the Cauſe in favour Patroclus Biſhop of Arles, and, together with metropolitical Juriſdiction, aſſigned him particular Privileges. Laſtly, he had a third third Conteſt with the African Biſhops concerning an Appeal made to him by Apiarius a Prieſt: This Appeal he pretended was good againſt the African Biſhops Claim for judging Prieſts and Biſhops too in the laſt Reſort. But notwithſtanding this Pope's Pretenſions, the African Biſhops inſiſted on their right, and refuſed to yield. He died December 26, A. D. 418. There are thirteen Epiſtles of this Pope's extant. * Epiſtolæ Zozimi. Auguſtin. contra duas Epiſtolas Pelagian. lib. 2. cap. 3. De Peccato originali, lib. 1. cap. 17. In Julian. lib. 6. cap. 4. Epiſtol. 44. & 209. Marius Mercator, in Commonitor. Anaſtaſ. in Zozim. Du Pin, New Eccleſ. Library, Cent. V.

ZUCALA, formerly called Iſthmus Tauricus. 'Tis an Iſthmus which joins Crim Tartary to Nagayan Tartary, which are both parcel of the Leſſer Tartary. This Iſthmus lies between the Lake of Seſcan and the Gulph of Nigropoli, which makes part of the Black Sea. Zucala is but half a League broad; the Town Precop, which is a Place of ſtrength, ſtands in it. * Baudrand.

* ZUINGLIUS (Ulrick,) was born at Wildehauſen in the County of Toggenbourg in Switzerland, January 1487. He was ſent to Baſil, for his firſt Education, and from thence to Berne, where he learned Greek and Hebrew under Henry Lupulus. He ſtudied Philoſophy at Vienna, and Divinity at Baſil, in which Faculty he he commenced Doctor A. D. 1505. He began to preach with Reputation in 1506, and was choſen Rector of Glaris, in the chief Town of the Canton of Glaris, where he continued till 1516. About this time 'tis ſaid he had a Conference with Cardinal Matthew, Biſhop of Sion, touching the Abuſes he conceived had crept into the Church, and concerning the Expedients to reform them. Soon after he was invited to Zurich to preach and take care of the chief Pariſh in that Town. Here he began to ſtrike out into Doctrines then reckoned Singularities, and to recommend Luther's Books. And now one Sumpſon a Cordelier of Milan, was ſent by the Pope to publiſh Indulgences at Zurich. Zuinglius imitating Luther's Zeal, declaimed warmly againſt this Preacher, and the indulgences he ſet forth. Hugo Biſhop of Conſtance believing he only ſpent himſelf againſt Abuſes, encouraged him to go on: But Zuinglius not ſtopping at this Point continued preaching, not only againſt Indulgences, but likewiſe againſt the Interceſſion and Invocation of the Saints, againſt the Sacrifice of the Maſs, the Laws of the Church, Vows, the Celibacy of Prieſts, and Abſtinence from eating Fleſh, and all this without altering any thing in the Service, or form of Worſhip. After having preached this Doctrine at Zurich about four Years and prepared his Audience, he prevailed with the Senate of Zurich to convene a Meeting January 29 A. D. 1523: The Buſineſs was to have a Conference with the Commiſſioners of the Biſhop of Conſtance, and other Eccleſiaſticks. Faber and Zuinglius diſputed there before Judges nominated by the Senate. After this Conference an Edict was ſet forth to ſuppreſs part of the Worſhip and Ceremonies of the Church. Soon after Images in Churches were broken, and at laſt the Maſs was aboliſhed. Notwithſtanding Zuinglius and Luther agreed in ſome Points, yet they differed upon other very material Heads; for Luther lay'd all the Streſs of Piety and Virtue upon Grace; whereas Zuinglius in Conformity to the Pelagians, gave all the Force to free Will, actuated only by the Powers of Nature; Inſomuch that he is reported to believe that Cato, Socrates, Scipio, Seneca; even Hercules, and Theſeus, and other Heroes, and honeſt Heathens got to Heaven by the Strength of their Probity, and good Practice. Luther always owned the real or corporal Preſence of our Saviour in the holy Euchariſt, though he held at the ſame time that the Subſtance of Bread and Wine remained. But Zuinglius maintained that nothing but the Bread and Wine was received, which he affirmed ſignifyed and repreſented our Saviour's Body, to which the Communicants were ſpiritually united by Faith. And in regard the Roman Catholicks, and particularly the Dominicans oppoſed this Doctrine, the Senate of Zurich endeavoured to convene a general Aſſembly A. D. 1523 to debate this Controverſy. The Biſhop of Conſtance, of whoſe Dioceſs Zurich was part, ſent John Faber his Vicar General thither, to forbid their Proceedings: But Zuinglius's Party overnumbring the other, 'twas carried by a Majority, that his Doctrine ſhould be received through the whole Canton of Zurich. And ſoon after Images were knocked to Pieces, the Altars were overturned, and all the Ceremonies of the Roman Church diſcharged. The Biſhops of Baſil of Conſtance, and Lauſanne, procured the Meeting of a general Aſſembly of all the Cantons at Baſil, where John Oecolampadius, repreſented Zuinglius, who refuſed to appear there. Here Zuinglianiſm was condemned by a ſolemn Decree drawn up in the Name of the whole Nation: But the Canton of Bern refuſed ſubmiſſion, and called another Aſſembly in 1528. The greateſt part of the Roman Catholicks declined coming thither, becauſe, as they affirmed, the matter was already decided; and thus Zuinglius having a Superiority of Numbers, got his Doctrine paſſed which ſoon after was received by the Canton of Baſil. And now the Cantons of Zurich, Schafhouſe, Berne, and Baſil, entered into a Confederacy, and treated their Neighbours ſomewhat ruggedly to bring them into their Party. But the five Cantons of Lucerne, and Zug, of Uri, Underwald, and Schwits continuing Roman Catholicks, made an Incurſion upon the Territories of the other Confederates; theſe mutual Hoſtilities drew on a main Battel A. D. 1531, which proved very unfortunate to thoſe of the Zurich Alliance. In ſhort their Army was routed and cut in Pieces, and Zuinglius himſelf fighting reſolutely at the Head of a Battalion was killed upon the Spot. The Roman Catholicks followed their Blow, and worſted the Enemy very much in four or five Battels: After which a Peace was concluded upon Terms that each Party might have the free Exerciſe of their Religion. Afterwards the four Zuinglian Cantons, going into an Alliance with the Genevians, turned Calviniſts. * Florimond de Raimond, lib. 2. de Orig. Hær. cap. 8, & lib. 3. cap. 3. Spondan. in Annal. Melchior Adam, in vit. Theol Germ. Maimbourg, Hiſt. du Calviniſm.

ZUYLICHEM (Chriſtian Huygens de,) Son to Conſtantine, Lord of Zuylichem, and Secretary and Councellor to the Princes of Orange: Chriſtian Huygens, one of the moſt celebrated Mathematicians in the ſeventeenth Century, was born at the Hague. He ſtudied the Law, under the famous Vinnius, who dedicated his Commentary upon Juſtinian's Inſtitutes to this Huygens and his elder Brother Conſtantine. Afterwards Chriſtian applied himſelf moſtly to the Study of Geometry, and in the Year 1651 publiſhed his firſt Work in this Science, entituled, Theoremata de Quadratura Hyperboles, Ellipſis, & Circuli, &c. He continued to make a great Progreſs in this Learning, and in 1654 printed his Book de Circuli Magnitudine inventa. In 1657 he printed a Treatiſe in Flemiſh, in which he calculates the Chances, which may be expected in Play which depends upon Hazard, to which he annexed Schoten's Exercitations. Schoten, who had been his Maſter, tranſlated this Book into Latin, to ſhew the Serviceableneſs of Algebra. In 1658 he publiſhed his Deſcription for the making a Pendulum. Here he explained the Springs and Peculiarities of this new Automaton, to ſhew 'twas quite different from the Aſtronomer's Pendulum invented by Galilæus. In 1659 Mr Huygens publiſhed his Syſtem of the Planet Saturn, called Syſtema Saturninum, &c. The learned are very ſenſible of the noble Diſcoveries he has made in this Work. His Fame procured him an Invitation to Paris where he was preſented with a large Penſion, and choſen a Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences. He dedicated his geometrical Demonſtrations of the Motion of Pendulums to to King Lewis XIV. intituled Horologium Oſcillatorium, ſive de motu pendulorum ad Horologia aptato Demonſtrationes Geometricæ, in folio. After the Death of Mr. Colbert, that great Incourager of learned Men, he returned to Holland, where he ſpent the reſt of his time in curious and uſeful Reſearches. In 1690 he publiſhed his Diſcourſe upon Light. He worked with great Application to find out the Longitude, and pointed out the Manner how to make Clocks meaſure the Longitude. His Coſmotheoros was printing when he died, and publiſhed afterwards with other poſtumous Works. He made an admirable and very plain Machine, in which the true Motion and Situation of the Planets is repreſented according to the Syſtem of Copernicus. He died at the Hague July 1695, 66 Years of Age. * De Bauval's Hiſtory of the Works of the learned, August 1695, Pag. 542. Memoires du Tems.

ZURICHGOW, 'twas formerly one of the Helvetian Territories: It took its Name from the Tigurini, or Zurichers who dwelt in it, and comprehended that part of Switzerland, which lies between the Rhine, the Limmat, and that part of Mount-Jura which reaches from the Confluence of the Limmat and the Aar, as far as the Rhine. * Baudrand.

ZYPE, was formerly a large Morasse in North Holland, lying to the North of the Town Alemaar. The Dutch having drained it, 'tis now good Pasture Ground. * Maty, Diction.

ZYTOMIERS, a City in Polish Russia. It stands in the Upper Volhinia, near the River Ciecierief, between the Towns of Lusuc and Kiovia, sixty five Leagues from the first, and thirty six from the latter. * Maty, Diction.

FINIS.

FR MVSEVM
BRITANNICVM